Chamber Of Commerce Blasts JFK's Tax Slash

Move Ordered As Aid In Talks For Nuclear Treaty With Russians

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Chamber of Commerce of the United States Saturday criticized President Kennedy's tax cut program as unsound and out of balance.

Chamber President Ladd Plumley said the program proposes excessive reduction in the low income tax brackets for individuals and defers major cuts for corporations until later years.

"The benefits in the middle and upper brackets are largely illusory," he told a press conference. "We do not believe the program will accomplish its stated objective to 'step up the growth and vigor of our national economy.'"

The chamber represents thousands of businessmen. Earlier this week members attending a chamber national public affairs conference endorsed the President's $13 billion-plus program.

Highlight of the program is an average 18 per cent cut for all taxpayers over a three-year span. Corporation taxes would be reduced gradually. In both cases, however, there are recapture provisions, some of which are anathema to big business.

The chamber's opposition underscored the problems which administration forces confront this year in attempting to steer the program through a skeptical congress.

Plumley's comments were the first adverse reaction from the Chamber. Speaking for the chamber board of directors, he confined his comment to broad criticisms, rather than going into specific tax areas.

He said the administration had proposed a disproportionate and expensive cut in the lower brackets without making comparable cuts in the upper brackets and in corporate tax rates.

The entire thrust of the program, he said, "proceeds on the assumption that all our economy needs is more consumer spending. This has been the fallacy and weakness of the tax concept that spawned the existing punitive rate structures."

He indicated the chamber would oppose the program and press for its own plan calling for an immediate across-the-board reduction in individual rates of $6 billion for corporations.

Plumley said the chamber does not like Kennedy's proposal to trim corporate rates in three stages from 52 per cent to 50 then to 47 per cent.

"We are concerned that the third stage of the rocket might never go off," he said.

The chamber advocates a one stage cut from 52 to 47 per cent.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Kennedy Saturday ordered a temporary halt to U.S. underground atomic testing in Nevada to create a more favorable atmosphere for current negotiations with the Russians on a nuclear test ban treaty.

The chief executive stressed, however, that his directive to the Atomic Energy Commission was not a long-term moratorium such as the Russians violated with a long series of atmospheric tests in the fall of 1961.

"We are maintaining the capability, and readiness to resume our test program at any time," his statement said. "We have no intention of again accepting an indefinite moratorium on testing, and if it is clear we cannot achieve a workable agreement, we will act accordingly."

The President said the Nevada tests would be postponed while U.S., Russian and British representatives continue exploratory treaty negotiations.

More Talks Set

Four days of talks ended here Friday. Another round was scheduled to resume in New York Tuesday. A full-fledged nuclear test ban conference is slated to reopen Feb. 12 in Geneva where years of previous negotiations proved futile.

Cautious hope that progress might be in sight was stirred recently by disclosure of a series of letters between Kennedy and Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev on the dangers of the nuclear arms race.

Khrushchev offered for the first time to allow two or three international inspections a year on Soviet soil to check against cheating underground explosions. Seismic boxes would be used. But Kennedy has insisted on an earlier U.S. demand for at least eight to 10 annual inspections.

The President's statement, read at the White House by press secretary Pierre Salinger, said: "During the present discussions in Washington and New York on the nuclear test ban treaty among the Soviet Union, the United Kingdom and the United States, I have asked the Atomic Energy Commission to postpone its shots in Nevada."

Dock Walkout Ends As Others Deadlock

By United Press International

East Coast docks were humming again but other major strikes remained deadlocked Saturday at the end of a week of costly labor disputes across the nation.

New York's Mayor Robert Wagner hoped continuous negotiating sessions in city hall would end the city's 50-day-old newspaper strike. Negotiators weren't even talking Saturday in Cleveland's nine-week newspaper shutdown and prospects were dim for a quick wind-up of Philadelphia's 12-day transit tieup.

The longshoremen's strike came to an end as longshoremen returned to work on ships along the Atlantic and Gulf coasts. Local issues had held up settlement of the dispute along waterfronts from North Carolina to Alabama, but announcement of agreement was made Saturday.

Dock Workers Return

Dockworkers streamed back to work at New York, New Orleans and New Jersey piers and other gulf ports workers were scheduled to be back on the job Sunday morning.

The dock strike had lasted five weeks, idled more than 100,000 workers and an estimated 600 ships, and caused economic losses in the neighborhood of $400 million. The big break came Friday when the International Longshoremen's Association (ILA) ordered its 75,000 members back to work.

The New York Coast Guard reported traffic in and out of the nation's largest city was unusually heavy as the longshoremen went back to work. The Coast Guard expected the bustling activity to continue for at least a week as shippers tried to catch up.

Labor disputes elsewhere included:

Newspapers—All nine New York newspapers and eight of the 10 unions involved were represented as Mayor Wagner began his attempt to lift the city's marathon news blackout. The mayor said he would keep both sides talking until a settlement is reached and warned the bargainers they had a responsibility to the general public as well as their own organizations.

The Printers Union, which had called the strike, and the New York Publishers Association were still holding to previous positions

Texas Red Cross Secretaries Pick Pampa For 1964

Pampa has been awarded the 1964 convention of the Texas Red Cross Executive Secretaries, it was announced Saturday by Mrs. Libby Shotwell of the Pampa Red Cross chapter.

Mrs. Shotwell had just returned from the 1963 state conference held Wednesday, Thursday and Friday in Dallas, where she put in Pampa's bid for next year's conference.

The three-day 1964 meet will be held in Coronado Inn during the third week of January. Mrs. Shotwell stated.

The local chapter executive secretary said she had the support of Mrs. E. R. Stewart of Dalhart, Mrs. Frank Cox of Perryton, Mrs. To Danbridge Cox of Dumas and Robert Blackburn of Amarillo, who represented their Red Cross chapters at the Dallas meeting.

Mrs. Shotwell said this year's meeting was one of the most interesting and best-attended secretaries' conference ever held in Texas.

Highlights of the meeting included addresses by Hal Lewis, managing editor of the Dallas Times Herald, who spoke on "Public Information" as related to the Red Cross.

Dick Gallagher of water of the continued need of Food Safety and First Aid services of the Red Cross.

Other speakers included Beryl M. Phares, Dallas County nursing director; Mrs. Leota Deaton of Fort Worth, who headed a panel on Volunteer Services, which included Mrs. Shotwell of Pampa, Mrs. Stewart of Dalhart, and Mrs. Laverne Chasteen of Temple.

Other speakers who touched on various phases of Red Cross work were Marshall Moore, field director of the VA regional office in Dallas; Mrs. Bonnie McAfee, of the national Red Cross staff in St. Louis; Giles Boone and Dale Milford of Dallas, and John Greenwood, assistant director from the national staff in St. Louis, who outlined the new trend in fund raising. Reds Warn Japs About U.S. Subs

TOKYO (UPI)—A Moscow radio broadcast beamed to Japan warned Saturday that peace in Southeast Asia and the Far East would be threatened if Japan allows U.S. nuclear submarines to visit Japanese ports.

The recent American request to allow nuclear submarines not carrying Polaris missiles to put into Japanese ports already has started a heated debate in parliament.

Prime Minister Hayato Ikeda said Saturday he had agreed "in principle" to allow the submarines to anchor in Japanese ports but said he would ask for American authorities to give more detailed reports.

Moscow radio said "it is wrong for one to consider that for American nuclear submarines to call in Japan ports is the problem for (only) one nation. It would be a very serious problem that would affect the interests of the people of Southeast Asia and the Far East."

Astronaut Glenn Gets Moonshot Assignment

HOUSTON (UPI)—Lt. Col. John Glenn, the first American astronaut to orbit the earth, was assigned Saturday to pioneer the supreme effort in the U.S. space program—the moonshot.

A spokesman for the Manned Spacecraft center announced new assignments for the original seven astronauts and nine new astronauts. He specified that assignment of an astronaut to a project does not imply that he will pilot the spacecraft involved.

So Glenn will not necessarily pilot the first spacecraft rocketed toward the moon in the Apollo project. Lt. Cmdr. Scott Carpenter will pioneer the lunar excursion module of the moonshot project.

The lunar excursion module plan is a project to fly a big spacecraft to the vicinity of the moon and explore the moon with a small spacecraft that takes off from the big one.

Maj. Virgil Grissom was assigned to the project Gemini 10, rendezvous in space between two spacecraft as a prelude to the moonshot.

Maj. Gordon Cooper Jr. is the pilot who will undertake 16-22 orbits of the earth in a shot tentatively set for April 2. Cmdr. Alan B. Shepard Jr., the first astronaut to make a flight, though it was suborbital, will be Cooper's backup man.

Grissom made the second sub-orbital flight. The next flight was Glenn's orbit last Feb. 20. Cmdr. Walter M. Shirra, who made three orbits, will specialize in overall operations and training in the new assignments.

Crews for the spacecraft involved in the various projects after the 16-22 orbit flight will be selected before each flight.

There were seven original Mercury astronauts. The seventh is Maj. Donald K. Slayton. Because of a heart murmur, he was named last September as coordinator for astronaut activities for the manned space center. He will maintain overall supervision of astronaut duties.

Nurses Licensing Law Need Cited

AUSTIN (UPI)—Current nursing laws in Texas do not adequately protect patients, a spokesman for the Texas Graduate Nursing Association said Saturday.

Representatives of the association told United Press International the state needs mandatory licensing laws so that registered nurses (RNs) can carry out the functions for which they were trained.

Mrs. Dolores M. Alford (RN), a legislative research official of the association, said RN's have to carry out many non-nursing functions while less qualified personnel perform important nursing functions.

Plans Outlined To Raise Funds For Nursing Home

Plans for the community wide campaign to raise funds for a Pampa Community Nursing Home were outlined Saturday morning by Larry Lidstrom, campaign director.

He was introduced by Atty. Arthur M. Teed, president of the Top O' Texas Foundation, sponsors of the project, at a meeting held at Coronado Inn.

The campaign will be in two phases, Lidstrom said. The first will be conducted by a 60-member executive committee, headed by a chairman and two vice-chairmen. The goal for this group will be $180,000 for contributions in denominations of $500 and up.

The second phase will consist of 200 volunteer members, 100 men and 100 women, whose efforts will be to work with the executive committee during March in soliciting contributions under $500 with a goal of $120,000.

The campaign's total goal is $300,000 for a 50-bed convalescent nursing care home to be constructed on a site already owned by the Foundation.

Contributions will be payable over a three-year period, either on a monthly, quarterly or semi-annual basis.

The next meeting for organization of the 60 member executive committee will be held at 4 p.m. Tuesday at the newly-opened campaign headquarters, 117 W. Kingsmill. Each of the 23 present Executive Committee members have been asked to bring two potential new members with them to this second organizational meeting.

Mrs. Marjorie Ludeman will be office manager of the campaign headquarters which were set up last Thursday. The office will be open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. The phone number is MO 4-8809.

Bucket Brigade Drive Postponed

Cold weather again forced postponement of the March of Dimes Bucket Brigade Drive Saturday in downtown Pampa.

Travis Lively Jr., chairman of the combined civic club groups sponsoring the event, said plans remain the same for carrying out the street solicitation next Saturday.

Cold To Hang On Through Tonight

Pampa's maximum temperature today is expected to be 23 to 26 above zero. Shortly before last midnight the thermometer at Amarillo said the mercury would drop to around zero to 4 below early this morning.

He added that the cold would continue through tonight with a slight warming trend likely tomorrow.

Donovan Arrives In Havana To Ask Americans' Release

HAVANA (UPI)—New York lawyer James B. Donovan flew unannounced into Havana Saturday amid reports he will attempt to bargain with the Castro government for the release of a score of Americans jailed here.

Donovan, who negotiated the release of the Bay of Pigs invasion prisoners, flew in as the lone passenger on a chartered Pan American World Airways DC3 executive cabin cruiser. No one met him at the airport, but he was conducted to the official lounge by customs officials and soon was picked up by Maj. Rene Vallejo.

Mansfield Seeks Rules Fight End

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield appealed anew Saturday for an early end to the Senate's deadlocked rules change fight "so we can get on with the nation's business."

The Montana Democrat said he felt there was a "reasonable chance" for a showdown next week in the two weeks old stalemate which has virtually stalled all other Senate activity.

"Unless this thing is decided one way or the other, the nation's business will be at a standstill," Mansfield told UPI.

The fight centers around efforts by pro-civil rights liberals to modify the Senate's current anti-filibuster rule which requires a two-thirds majority of senators present and voting to cut off debate. They want it changed so that a simple majority (51 senators) or three-fifths (60) could end a filibuster.

The tightly-knit southern bloc, with help from non-Southerners from smaller states, has so far staved off any action.

East German Border Guards Getting 'Dear Klaus' Notes

BERLIN (UPI) — East German border guards are complaining they are getting "Dear Klaus" letters from their girls back home.
 They say that while they have been watching the Berlin wall to prevent the escape of refugees, Heidi and the other girls are forgetting them and turning to civilians.
 This gripe has been voiced by soldiers the world over.
 But East German Communists take the gripe very seriously because the morale of their border guards is low anyway and desertion to the West are so frequent that they patrol the border in pairs.
 When Communists face a problem they hold a forum. That is what they did in the case of Sgt. Klaus Schmitter of the 1st Border Brigade who left an army hospital only to be told that Heidi had "found another."
 Jutta Lorenz approved of Heidi's conduct. She told the forum "Heidi obviously found someone she liked better than Klaus. A girl doesn't have to bind herself to one man. We have equal rights."
 It served Klaus right, said Gisela Dietrich.
 "Boys act just the same," she said. "True love, such as it portrayed in novels and films does not exist. I would have done anything for my boy friend and he jilted me. From now on I won't trust any body."
 Inge Rochlitz criticized Heidi but knew of no solution. "You can't look up a girl," she said. "They are egoistic, think only about going out on dates and dancing. If their boy friend goes in the army they look for another."
 "All the girls are like Heidi. It didn't suit her that I was in the army. She didn't want to be alone and so she jilted me."
 The forum, attended by border soldiers and girl workers, was held in East Berlin's state-run Bergmann Borsig factory. A report on it was printed in the women's magazine "Fuer Dich" (For You) entitled "Dispute About Heidi."
 A bitter Klaus told the forum that girls do not like the border guards who shoot at refugees, something the Communists know too well.
 "Most girls don't have any character any more," he said. "They are egoistic, think only about going out on dates and dancing. If their boy friend goes

Connally's Major Platform Planks All Have Sponsors In Legislature

AUSTIN (UPI) — All but the minor planks Gov. John Connally used to build his legislative platform have sponsors in one or both houses of the 58th Legislature.

When Connally told the legislature what he wants in new laws over the next two years, he stressed education, industry, tourism and bureaucratic reform. Looking over the major proposals, a survey by United Press International shows the following sponsors of bills touching on the issues Connally singled out:

Connally wants enabling legislation for the constitutional amendment Texans approved last year, letting the water development board acquire water storage space in federal reservoirs. Rep. Eligio de la Garza of McAllen and Sen. George Parkhouse of Dallas have bills that would give the board that authorization.

Governor Says Action Needed On Three Issues

By WILLIAM E. DONNELLY
SAN ANTONIO (UPI) — Gov. John B. Connally told the Texas Press Association Saturday that Texas needs urgent action on three vital issues — attracting tourists, stimulating industrial development and improving the quality of higher education.

Connally spoke at lunch before about 200 members of the TPA, an organization of daily and weekly newspapers holding its 16th annual midwinter convention. The convention began Friday.

It ended Saturday night with the annual banquet, at which Don Reid of the Huntsville Item presented the TPA's "Texan of the Year" award to Dan (Boss) Blocker. Blocker is a leading character in the television series "Bonanza."

JFK Aide Speaks

Other speakers in day sessions Saturday were Maj. Gen. Chester V. Clifton, military aide to President Kennedy, and Leonard Passmore, former first assistant state attorney general. Passmore spoke on libel.

Connally said the legislature is already moving rapidly on the issues of increasing tourism, attracting industry and improving the quality of higher education.

He said the state needs legislation on other issues. One is slant hole oil well drilling. Others are reforms, sales tax inequities and the streamlining of state agencies, such as the game commission and the parks board.

Kennedy

Nevada test shots in advance. Saturday a spokesman declined to say if any had been planned for the immediate future.

The Atomic Energy Commission, however, has announced more than 50 underground tests at Nevada in its current series. Three were of intermediate range force — between 20,000 and a million tons of TNT. The others have been below that strength. There also was one low-yield above ground test.

Soviet Tests

The last announced Soviet tests, came over the recent Christmas period.

Kennedy's conditional moratorium was a grim reminder of how Khrushchev began above-ground testing in September, 1961, in violation of a 34-month voluntary moratorium between the United States, Britain and the Soviet Union.

He gave no advance notice and obviously had been preparing for the tests months in advance while "negotiating" at Geneva.

In that series, the Soviets fired off approximately 50 atmospheric blasts, including a climactic monster shot on Oct. 30, which was believed to have exceeded 50 megatons (50 million tons of TNT) in power.

That test, which followed a boastful pronouncement by Khrushchev that the Russians were capable of triggering a 100-megaton bomb, stirred a wave of world protest.

Missing Truck, Car Recovered

The Pampa Police Department found a pickup truck early Saturday afternoon at the intersection of Price Road and Gwendolyn St. after it had been reported missing from Berger.

The vehicle, belonging to H. B. Zachrey of Berger, was taken from the Sanford dam project Wednesday.

Ray Fillman, 1425 E. Francis, reported his car missing shortly after midnight Friday, and then found it, in the same spot where it was taken, about 10 hours later.

The car, parked at the Coronado Inn, was stolen sometime between 3-11 p.m. Friday.

The owner checked at 8:30 Saturday morning at the place where it was reported missing and the car was still gone. Around 9:30 a.m., the owner checked again and the car was back in the same parking lot.

Cold Weather Causing Food Prices To Climb

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The cost of living registered its sharpest monthly dip in four years in December, mainly because of lower food prices. But cold weather is expected to send food costs up again this month.

This was reported yesterday by Robert J. Myers, deputy commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics. He said the December drop of two tenths of one per cent was the greatest monthly decline since 1958 in the department's consumer price index.

Myers said the December decline was twice as sharp as the usual drop for the month. This trimmed the price index to 105.8 per cent of the 1957-59 average, both for December and for the year as a whole.

The commissioner said the hard freezes, particularly in the South and the Southwest, were expected to cause a "substantial jump" in food prices during January.

He indicated this meant the overall cost of living probably would rise about two-tenths of one per cent, or back to the November level of 106 per cent.

The overall price index last month was three-tenths of one per cent below the all-time high reached last September. The food price section, at 103.5, was 1.2 per cent below the September peak but 1.5 per cent higher than in December 1961.

Should A Doctor 'Step Back And Let God Take Over' In Incurable Cases?

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

"Please, doctor, don't keep him alive any longer. Just take out those tubes and let him die."

That plea from the relative of a hopelessly ill patient is not unfamiliar to members of the medical profession. Whenever it is made, it confronts a physician with an agonizing moral dilemma.

What is a doctor's duty toward a patient who is slowly dying of untreatable cancer or some other disease from which there is no hope of recovery?

He could take positive steps to bring about death, and thus release the patient from suffering. This is called euthanasia or "mercy killing" and it has some advocates, both in and out of the medical profession. But the overwhelming majority of physicians are strongly opposed to medical murder, however "merciful" it might appear in a particular case. And in this stand they are supported by moral theologians, who condemn euthanasia as a blasphemous usurpation of God's prerogatives.

At Great Cost
The obvious alternative is to keep the patient alive as long as possible. Most physicians feel instinctively that this is what they ought to do. And modern medical science has made it possible for them to maintain a spark of life in a dying person for days, weeks and sometimes months.

It is done, however, at great cost. And not the least of the cost is the prolongation of suffering, both for the patient and for his loved ones.

In recent years, many doctors and religious leaders who adamantly reject euthanasia have come around to the conviction that indefinite, artificial prolongation of life is not much better from a moral viewpoint.

At an American Medical Association symposium on medical ethics a few months ago, Dr. Edward H. Rynearson of the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn., argued eloquently that there comes a time in the handling of terminal cancer cases when the only humane thing for a doctor to do is to "step back and let God take over."

These are weighty arguments. But there still are many physicians who cannot bring themselves to let a human life expire so long as there is any medical means of forestalling death. And there are religious leaders who applaud their instincts.

"I have seen enough 'dying' people recover to understand why a physician would be unwilling to write off any patient," says the Rt. Rev. William F. Creighton, Episcopal bishop of Washington.

"I agree that it is hard to see any merciful purpose in maintaining a spark of life in some far-gone cases. But I don't think we should ask doctors to play God."

Dr. Granger Westberg, a Lutheran clergyman — physician who serves on both the theological and medical faculties of the University of Chicago, also upholds the hopeless patient's "right to die." And he points out that cancer victims are not the only persons for whom death may be a merciful release.

At a recent medical meeting in Minneapolis, he said it is a disservice to keep very old and infirm people alive "just for the sake of becoming vegetables."

"Not Humane"
In an address before the International Congress of Catholic Doctors in London, Dr. Frank Ayd Jr., a Baltimore physician, contended that it is "neither scientific nor humane" to stretch out the dying process with artificial means once it has clearly become inevitable.

"Only when there is a reasonable hope of sustaining life for several weeks or months during which time the patient is comfortable should we exert every effort to delay death," he said.

"Otherwise, life preserving treatment ceases to be a gift, and becomes instead a scientific weapon for the prolongation of agony."

These are weighty arguments. But there still are many physicians who cannot bring themselves to let a human life expire so long as there is any medical means of forestalling death. And there are religious leaders who applaud their instincts.

U.S. Facing Grave Decisions Ahead In An Uneasy, Complicated World

(Great Decisions)
By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

In the complicated and uneasy world of 1963, the United States faces grave decisions on subjects as far ranging as world peace, the future of the Alliance for Progress, and depth of the split between the Soviet Union and Red China.

In an attempt to bring these problems to the greatest possible public attention, United Press International has called on its correspondents around the globe for an authoritative series of reports on these crisis areas.

The dispatches are tied in with an annual project of the non-partisan Foreign Policy Association which has set them forth as the "great decisions 1963."

The studies divide the Great Decisions of 1963 into eight questions.

Last year, more than 100 daily newspapers throughout the United States, plus scores of educational and commercial TV and radio stations associated themselves with the project. Subjects for discussion this year are:

—Common Market: Blueprint for a New Europe?
—Red China and the U.S.S.R.: How Firm an Alliance?
—Algeria: What Future?
—Spain: End of the Franco Era?

—India: Is Democracy Working?
—Laos and Viet Nam: South-east Asia in Danger?
—Alliance for Progress: New Deal for the Americas?
—Peace: What Problems and Prospects?

A forword to the study notes that such a program and such discussions would be impossible in the Soviet Union where professional propagandists dictate the party line to newspapers, magazines, film and theatrical producers, radio and TV stations, educators and trade union centers.

In its study of the European Common Market, formally called the European Economic Community, the program notes that there also are clouds on the horizon. One of them involves British hopes of joining the Common Market. Two questions are involved:

"One is whether Britain will be willing to agree to any sort of political union. A second issue is whether France really wants Britain in the Common Market at all. If Britain does enter, then France's dreams of leadership may well prove impossible to realize. De Gaulle may suspect that Britain, with its special ties to Washington, will be a 'Trojan horse' of U.S. influence in the European union."

Cotton Council Prexy Believes Subsidies Can Be Eliminated

By PRESTON MCGRAW DALLAS (UPI)—The president of the National Cotton Council believes that American cotton growers, through research to lower production costs, can in time free themselves from the need of government subsidy.

NCC President Burris C. Jackson, Hillsboro, does not believe cotton farmers, with production costs what they now are, could immediately spurn government subsidy. If they did, he said, they would all go bankrupt. Jackson was interviewed at the Beltwide Cotton Production-Mechanization Conference in Dallas.

He comes as close as anybody to being a general authority on all of cotton's problems. Jackson helped organize the NCC 25 years ago and has been on its board every year since.

Grows Cotton Himself
He is chairman of the American Cotton Congress and chairman of the Statewide Cotton Committee of Texas. He raises cotton in two counties, gins cotton and buys cotton. His father was a cotton man before him.

Jackson opposes the subsidy and accompanying acreage controls that have been in effect since the depression of the early 1930s.

He would like to see the present subsidy law changed immediately as US cotton mills—which use nine million bales of cotton a year—can get the same price break on the American raw cotton as foreign mills and compete more successfully with synthetics. "There is no guarantee that these (subsidy) programs will last forever," Jackson said. "In fact, there is considerable talk in Congress of abolishing subsidies."

Lower Production Costs
"Therefore, the cotton industry, if it is smart, will start preparing for the day when there are no more subsidies. The best preparation is to lower the cost of production."

"The industry believes we can lower the cost of production 10 cents a pound or more with an all-out research program and if this is accomplished the industry can stand on its own two feet and be independent of subsidy."

Jackson believes that control of the boll weevil, cotton's worst insect enemy, would lower production costs 5-6 cents a pound. A new boll weevil laboratory at Starkville, Miss., has indicated that complete weevil control is possible.

Method Explained
Scientists at the laboratory have successfully tested a program in which male boll weevils are sterilized with atomic radiation. Mating with fertile female weevils, they break the reproduction cycle.

What cotton needs immediately, according to Jackson, is new legislation.

"...What cotton needs most of all is to be allowed to meet its prior competition," he said. "The only way this can be accomplished is by new cotton legislation."

Washington Window

By LYLE C. WILSON WASHINGTON (UPI)—To promote government economy is the noble purpose of a couple of bills just introduced in the U. S. House of Representatives.

No crystal ball is needed to foresee what happens next. What happens next is: Nothing!

Chairman Clarence Cannon, D-Mo., of the House Appropriations Committee and Rep. Bruce Alger, R-Tex., introduced the bills. Both seek to amend the revenue act to take the painkiller out of tax paying. Their method is to reduce or eliminate withholding of wages by employers in behalf of the Internal Revenue Service. By statute, employers must withhold at least 18 per cent of an employee's wages and pay the withheld sum to the government. Employes never see this tax money.

Unseen Income
Since they never see it, they tend to forget they are paying it. They come to believe, in time, that they do not pay it at all.

Take-home pay is what these dopey citizens understand to be their real wage. Their real wage is at least 18 per cent greater, but is paid to the government instead of the wage earner.

This dulls the pain of taxpaying. It tends to restrain voters from the kind of rebellion against government spending that might be expected if the taxpayers were aware of the real tax bite.

Alger proposes that the withholding system be repealed altogether. Cannon wants to reduce withholding from 18 per cent to 4 1/2 per cent. Cannon's is the more realistic approach because it appears to be impossible to repeal withholding. But, it is equally unlikely that the Congress would make the cut as proposed by Cannon.

Their bills have gone to the House Ways and Means Committee. Predictably, they will die there as have similar bills before them. Alger is a member of Ways and Means. It is possible that he could persuade Chairman Wilbur Mills, D-Ark., to permit hearings on his bill. But that is unlikely.

Mills' committee will be wrestling with the Kennedy tax bill through most of this session.

Too Much Opposition
President Kennedy would be against it. The Treasury would be against it. There is no majority in Congress for it.

There hasn't been a majority of any kind for economy in Washington for more than 30 years. Cannon told the House last week that withholding was a painkiller.

"The people would demand that we practice some restraint (in spending)," Cannon said. "If they were but harshly aware of what they are paying Uncle Sam each month or week in income taxes. The withholding system is painless. It caters to the illusion that money in Washington is free for the asking. Revision of the system would be in the public interest. The people would demand an accounting if they had to draw a check or money order and mail it to Washington."

Cannon probably is right about that. But the politicians never will abandon withholding. It is their gravy train. It helps them to buy the voters' good will and votes with the voters' own money. It is an evil system.

Pair Borrows $10,000, Parlays It Into $100,000 Night Club

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The success story of Bob Cavallo and Frank Weis reads like vintage Horatio Alger.

Young, ambitious, and broke a year ago, they borrowed $10,000 and parlayed it into one of the most popular night clubs in the nation's capital, The Shadows.

Cavallo, 23, and Weis, 22, credit their success to a shrewd choice of entertainment—folk singing.

"We were looking for something the town didn't have. We thought folksinging was something we could capitalize on," Weis told UPI.

"Washington has always been known as a square town," Cavallo added. "But with the number of college students here, we did not believe a hep place would fail."

Worth $100,000
Their confidence paid off. Today the club is worth an estimated $100,000.

The partners met here in 1958 at Georgetown University where Bob studied government and Frank majored in economics. Together they promoted several ventures, including an intercollegiate jazz festival.

In April, 1961, the dream that became The Shadows was born.

They quit Georgetown to devote themselves to their business.

At first they considered opening a rathskeller or a Greenwich Village-type bar. Then they settled on folk music.

"We didn't know to what extent we could go with folksinging," Weis said. "We didn't know if it would be a sideline or a feature."

An Immediate Hit
The Shadows was an instant hit with the college crowd from nearby Georgetown University.

"We started it as a beer joint with $5-a-night folksingers," Cavallo said. "As people showed more interest in folksinging, we started bringing in more entertainment and charged a small cover. When that happened, we really got successful."

The club outgrew its home in less than a year and the Friday before last Christmas The Shadows moved into quarters twice as big.

"Our idea is to make The Shadows as well-known as the Hungry i or the Blue Angel," Cavallo said. "We want it to become known as a place where new talent on the way up is played."

How About Spending Cut?

We wish it were possible to come out with a great big cheer for President Kennedy's tax-cutting proposal.

We can certainly find a lot of things to praise about the tax cut as submitted by the President.

Mr. Kennedy seems to be reversing the Harvard "economists" among his advisers by suggesting a tax reduction that should increase the investment potential of the whole country.

Politically, too, this program should have a lot of appeal, with personal income taxes to be dropped from the present 20-91 per cent range to a new range of 14-65 per cent, and with the top corporate income tax reduced from 52 to 47 per cent.

But what about expenditures? Mr. Kennedy says he will hold expenditures for fiscal 1963-64 below the current year, except for defense, space and fixed-interest charges on the national debt.

In the face of an expected deficit of $8 billion this year, it is impossible to see how the next year's deficit can be smaller, what with reduced income from taxes.

And then Mr. Kennedy comes right back and proposes new government spending projects. He would put up more money he doesn't have for aid to schools, help for unemployed youths, aid to local mass transit, a domestic "peace corps," expanded recreation programs, more for hospitals and medical schools and more for "mental health."

This appears to be where Mr. Kennedy's training in the London School in Economics comes in. The Keynesians of that school don't seem to see that a person or a nation can't forever go on spending more than is taken in.

With the expenditures mounting and the income reduced, the only solution for an individual is to go broke. Nations can delay the final accounting by inflation, by issuing more paper money which reduces the value of every dollar in savings, insurance and other fixed-income investments.

If Mr. Kennedy — and the few cool heads in Congress — would recognize this and start a systematic reduction of expenditures, the United States economy could start a recovery that would once again place this nation at the top of the heap.

26 Keys To All Wisdom

In the mail on the Governor's desk when he returned to it after New Year's was a letter from Watson Washburn, New York attorney, one-time athletic star and currently president of the Reading Reform Foundation.

"One of the greatest gifts that you could offer the children in your State in the New Year," he said, "is to assure them that you will take steps to restore the alphabet as the basis of elementary reading instruction."

Concerned with the illiteracy that the modernistic "look-say" method of learning words by "configuration" (their shape, rather than their phonetic content) has imposed on a whole generation of more of American youth, Mr. Washburn urged the Governor to review reading instruction methods and "restore to the children their inherent right to a proper start in reading, writing and spelling, based on the alphabet."

He also requested that the Foundation, whose work is assisted by a national advisory council of 180 leading educators, authors and civic leaders and expedited by active, well-informed chairmen in 31 states and the District of Columbia, be given the opportunity of discussing the reading crisis and how to cure it.

On the optimistic side, Mr. Washburn noted that some states and the District of Columbia had already taken corrective action, and that the recent and realistic report of the New York State Education Department revealed the need of reform. Election of Dr. Max Rafferty on a back-to-phonetic platform as California's Superintendent of Public Instruction assures vigorous action in that state.

"In Arizona," he says, "three-fourths of the schools now use a phonetic system; and in Florida, Hawaii, Illinois, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Virginia and Wisconsin, some localities have adopted the same approach."

In his year-end progress report to the Foundation, Mr. Washburn said: "Introduction of primitive pictography (such as archeologists found in King Tut's 3,000-year-old tomb) was the longest step backward ever made in American education, and its abolition will mark the greatest advance in our time."

We hope a lot of governors agree.

The American Way

TAXES!

By Willis E. Stone

Taxes have become the primary issue in America. Unfortunately, too many of those in power have latched onto the tax issue as a political vehicle for their advantage. They promote the "popular" idea of a tax cut rather than seek solutions to the underlying causes.

It is essential that the American people understand the cause of taxes, and apply the proper solutions.

Politicians tell us that the years since World War II have been the most abundant in our history. Actually, inflation has given us more dollars; but purchasing power has gone down and taxes have gone up at a rate that defeats real abundance.

Political Blindfold

The political confiscation of our private incomes to support endless bureaucratic extravaganzas has bankrupted our people. These wild spending efforts have been justified in the name of "defense," but it has been the non-defense spending that has skyrocketed.

The national debt has reached astronomical figures, while unfunded liabilities (not figured in the debt) have grown out of proportion. Total obligations upon us now exceed one trillion dollars!

This, of course, is the cause of our present resentment against taxes. Our resources have been dissipated under the pretense of taking care of us. We seem to be following Lenin's forecast that we "would spend ourselves into bankruptcy."

In spite of this, our politicians propose to cut taxes and increase spending, hastening that eventual bankruptcy.

The increased spending is mostly for further encroachment upon taxpaying enterprise.

Appeasement

The tax cuts, meanwhile, are mainly to appease public resentment. At first, income taxes were to be cut $11 billion in January, 1963. Then it was postponed to July, 1963 — and the "cut" reduced to $8 billion. Now there are rumors there will be a tax raise instead of a cut.

Meanwhile, behind the camouflage, wage taxes were raised one per cent on January 1, 1963.

So — despite all of the "Alice in Wonderland" proposals and pronouncements — we're still trying with the symptoms rather than the disease. Taxes are merely the product of political spending, and until we cut the spending we can't possibly reduce the ultimate necessity for the taxes.

For instance, taxes have paid the cost of having federal agencies take over 40 per cent of the land area and 20 per cent of the industrial capacity of the nation. In fact, over half the total federal revenue is consumed each year to finance these fabulous political empires. It's no wonder that politicians have no intention of solving our problems by reducing their holds upon us.

Real Remedy

By simply removing these unauthorized federal agencies from direct competition with private enterprise, the cost of government would be cut in half. That would actually eliminate the need for federal personal income taxes.

This obvious solution has, of course, been carefully ignored by our political leaders.

The Liberty Amendment has been designed to accomplish this balance, restoring our sacred constitutional protections to private property and removing the need for the income tax.

Question Box

We invite questions on economics and the proper functions of government which will not injure anyone.

Question: "Can a man who believes in taxes really believe and consistently defend private property?"

The answer to that is that he cannot. It is no wonder we are losing our belief in private property. And, of course, private property includes more than houses and automobiles and food and clothing and radios and televisions. It includes man's ownership of himself, his ideas, his conscience, his right to sell his services to the world's highest bidder, and buy from the lowest seller, and the right to own all he produces on a free market basis without any special privileges from the government.

If that is the proper interpretation of private property, then it would seem that those who believe in initiated — force to collect taxes would find it pretty hard to defend his position, rationally, there must be something evil about it, something harmful that will harm others. And, of course, all evil will not stand the light of examination.

Allen-Scott Report

Closely Guarded $1,000 Dinner Paying Guest List Long on Defense Contractors, Lobbyists, Builders

ROBERT ALLEN

PAUL SCOTT

WASHINGTON — The list of paying guests to that $1,000-a-plate Kennedy Administration dinner is thickly studded with big defense contractors, lobbyists for foreign governments, and builders of the huge office complexes the government is erecting all over the capital.

These giant corporations and lobbyists, with immense interests in government business, constitute the largest single group of contributors to this fund-raising affair, that poured some $306,000 into Democratic National Committee coffers.

The full list of paying guests is a closely-guarded secret. Only the top managers of the dinner have seen the list. It is so carefully guarded that an embarrassing snafu resulted in the seating of the guests, among them Cabinet members, congressional leaders, and other prominent officials.

But the following significant details can be revealed: — High officers of Crumman Aircraft and General Dynamics, which recently got a Defense Department contract to build this country's next fighter — interceptor, the F-111A, that will cost taxpayers hundreds of millions of dollars, bought at least 10 of the $1,000-a-plate tickets — one table.

— Other defense contractors who were large ticket buyers are officers of United Aircraft, Harvey Aluminum and International Telephone & Telegraph Company.

— Charles Patrick Clark, Washington attorney who represents Spain and previously various other countries, purchased five tickets.

— Other well-known foreign lobbyists, representing countries with sugar interests, who were ticket buyers are former Senate Democratic Leader Scott Lucas, Ill., former Representative Charles Brown, Mo., and Donald Dawson, White House assistant to President Truman.

— A number of so-called small businesses that recently received loans from the Small Business Administration, Democratic Treasurer Richard Maguire, who also what happened.

While the paying guests dined, he and Johnson wandered around the tables shaking hands and exchanging greetings. Then they joined the First Lady, Mrs. Johnson and their personal guests in a private dining room.

The menu of the $1,000-a-plate dinner was exactly the same the hotel served in its own dining room at $4.25.

The arrangements for the dinner called for two types of hostesses — "seated" and "floating." When Maguire was asked to explain these mysterious designations he replied, "The seated hostesses are those who paid; the floating hostesses are those who didn't."

THE BIG SHOT — While Democratic National Committee moguls are happily totting up the $1 million or so the second anniversary celebration produced, its nominal chairman Bedford Wynne is still insisting he knows nothing about the $1,000-a-plate charge.

The wealthy co-owner of the Dallas Cowboys of the National Football League asserts the glittering dinner was strictly his own party. He invited all the guests, and footed the bill. It's a remarkable story, but the amiable Texan is doggedly sticking to it.

He did that in an encounter with Washington newsmen, who sharply grilled him about the affair.

"Just what is the basis for asking people to this dinner?" one reporter asked Wynne. "Those who worked hardest for the Democratic party," he replied. "Who decides that?"

"I'm doing the inviting," dodged Wynne. "Are you inviting guests regardless of whether they pay $1,000 or not?"

"I don't know anything about paying $1,000," claimed Wynne. "This is a dinner I am giving for the President and Vice President and their wives. All those who are coming will be my guests."

"Then how do you explain the widespread selling of tickets at $1,000 a plate? There is no secret about that. We can give you the names of many who have been asked to pay that. In fact, you were at a meeting several weeks ago when Joseph Adams, former vice chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Board, denounced the plan to charge $1,000 a plate as 'plain immoral.'"

"This is my dinner," insisted Wynne, "and those who are attending will be my guests."

"And you are footing the bill?"

"That's right," asserted Wynne. "I'm the host."

Nominally, the Texan presided at both the dinner and the gala, but he was virtually unnoticed.

LEFT-OVERS — More than $50,000 of $100-a-seat gala tickets were bought by Post-Office officials. Apparently that Department funded the list of government ticket buyers.

Working closely with Democratic Treasurer Maguire in arranging the dinner and gala was George O'Gorman, former Assistant Postmaster General and now a member of the White House staff. There he is an assistant to President Kennedy.

Communist Europe Is Moscow's Goal

By ED DELANEY

Karl Marx wrote in The New York Tribune, 1854, that Russian policy with its traditional artfulness and deceptions, easily misleads the Europeans. Russia capitalizes on the fear of the people in Europe, but when challenged and confronted with irresistible force they accept the next best. Their aims, however, remain unchanged.

While we reject much that Karl Marx wrote, those words of more than a century ago apply aptly to communist Russia of today. We observed that in the withdrawal of nuclear weapons from Cuba — assuming they were withdrawn — when the United States threw a blockade around that island, it then became evident that we did not fear the growth of the Russian bear. Then we paid communist Castro the highest ransom ever paid in history to effect the release of some 1100 prisoners.

Khrushchev may well construe that as a precedent, when he and his cohorts begin mapping their next move to regain the prestige he lost when forced out of Cuba. Berlin is his "Cuba." It is completely surrounded by Red territory. Soviet tanks move at will in that communist zone.

That they may attempt a blockade of Berlin as we did to prevent Soviet arms being delivered to Cuba, would not be surprising. Khrushchev might demand a "ransom" of some kind — a concession as a condition for lifting the blockade. He is meeting with the East German communist poobahs in East Berlin, the middle of this month. One of his often repeated demands is recognition of the illegal regime that is established there, masquerading under the name of the German Democratic Republic — being neither democratic nor a republic.

For the attainment of Moscow's aims in Europe, the armed forces of the three western powers must leave Berlin. The aim of Khrushchev is to destroy the German Federal Republic's constitutional, free government. For years, through various methods of subversion, agitation, edition, espionage and sabotage, Moscow has sought to extend the communist system prevailing in the Soviet zone, over the whole of Germany. East Berlin has been the nerve center for their operations. Co-operating with Moscow in East Berlin are the intelligence agents and espionage apparatus of the Poles, Czechs, Hungarians, Rumanians and Bulgarians. One may well imagine that Yugoslavia is also working closely with the Soviet for that objective — the abolishment of the German Federal Republic, since Tito has recently been so cordially and royally treated in Moscow.

The chief objective of all these communist operatives is to penetrate public bodies, to infiltrate both government and industrial concerns in West Germany, to steal military, political and economic secrets. They attempt acts of terror and sabotage to create confusion and unrest. From the first of September 1951 to the end of December 1960, 19,943 persons were apprehended by the West German authorities who confessed to having been engaged in espionage activities for the East German communists.

Attempts are made to blackmail residents of East Berlin. They may be accused of some "alleged" crime. Then they are told that they will escape prosecution if they will undertake some assignment for the communist intelligence service. Prostitutes and sex deviates are given assignments to get certain ones in West Germany into a compromising situation, then compel them to work for the East German espionage center, or be exposed, Burglaries, murders and abductions have been done on instructions from the communist nerve center in East Berlin. Forged and faked identity papers are made by prison printers in the Soviet zone — even Western driving licenses are duplicated. The co-existence coterie in Washington and at the United Nations temple of hypocrisy in New York, would have us accept Khrushchev's proposal for pooling of Berlin by U.N. forces. Then that city would become a citadel of communist conspiracy, surpassing even the fountainhead of the cult in Moscow. Khrushchev is mindful of the saying — whoever holds Berlin, holds Germany. And whoever holds Germany, controls Europe. A communist Europe is Moscow's goal.

POLITICAL MIND

Point Of View Changes After Election To Office

By GEORGE BOARDMAN, Ph. D.

Two years ago I talked for a few minutes with a young man, the owner of a retail business endeavor. I was most favorably impressed with his comments on taxes and the high cost of government. Today he is a member of the city council and was elected to be mayor by the councilmen. He and the council have exactly doubled the minimum rates for water supplied by the city. When the city took over the water company just about three years ago, politicians involved promised the voters more water, better service and faster expansion for greatly less cost which has now been doubted, while the service is frequently and inefficiently interrupted.

The mayor is quite irate with the irate citizens and has presumed to adopt a most dictatorial attitude towards the citizenry. His most important conversational contribution to the situation tells the people that neither the mayor or the city council receive payment for their services. Why did a man engaged in private enterprise who bemoaned the cost of government and confiscatory taxation become a party to increasing the cost of one aspect of city government by 100 per cent?

Whether he admits it to himself or not, he has now become a ruler. He believes he knows what is best for the city and the people and will insist upon indulging his inclinations for benevolent tyranny regardless of the cost. He espoused a meeting, at which the citizens would be free to express their opinions after legislation to increase the water rates had been passed. When those who attended the meeting expressed strong disapproval, he explained that the rates would increase on the 1st of January whether they liked it or not. A more experienced politician might have worded it differently, but the result would have remained unchanged.

Here is another bit of evidence to add to the pile which proves that the evils of politics will not be cured by political action and the evidence mounts, day by day. If a citizen had voiced a prejudiced opinion of how the merchant would react to political power, in line with his performance to date, the merchant now politician would have wared indignantly even if he didn't punch a few noses.

When a candidate for public office achieves his goal, he becomes infected with the idea of a majority of his fellow-men and women selecting him to be their leader, the political entity responsible for their welfare and their well-being. Consciously or otherwise, he feels the power of the mob behind him — the evil thing which is mob or majority rule, a thing which is equally evil as long as it is RULE. Those who elected him are also immediately afraid of him, after they have turned over their own rightful responsibilities, to the ruler. This increases his sense of power. The only segment of the population which is neither afraid or otherwise enslaved by the political office holder, had no interest in the winner or any of the other candidates.

From a purely personal point of view even though we do not live in his city, we enjoyed talking with the merchant now ruler before he acquired political power. We would have welcomed him at the door of our small apartment. Today he, as are all other office holders, elected and appointed, is persona non grata, personally and socially. Additionally, we believe the acquired political power will affect his private enterprise dealings with his customers, so we will deal with his competitors.

Political power grows in direct relation to the number of voters who believe the politicians will take or steal from others for their benefit. A secondary class fawns upon office holders because of a fear which motivates their actions. A relatively few misguided persons seem to believe an office holder acquires an aura of majesty and omnipotence when he accepts public office.

Nothing could accomplish so much as a startling lack of an audience at every political meeting and at every meeting where an office holder is scheduled to appear as a guest speaker. Good luck and good health to you, in Freedom.

Stuart And Mejias Give Bosox Lift

MOST VALUABLE — Eddie Bressoud, named the most valuable player with the Boston Red Sox last season, admits he will be playing under more pressure this year. The shortstop is giving batting tips to students at Los Altos, Calif., High School, where he is physical instructor during the off-season. Johnny Pesky, manager, named him Bosox captain.

By JOHNNY PESKY
Boston Red Sox Manager
As told to HARRY GRAYSON

Let me start by saying that a generous owner like Tom Yawkey is entitled to something much better than an eighth-place finish in a 10-club wheel.

So are the loyal Boston fans. I hope I have learned to manage in the minors and most certainly am aiming to move an improved Red Sox club forward, say into a fight with the Twins, Angels and White Sox for third place behind the Yankees and Tigers, which I consider the two strongest outfits in the American League.

I'm going to make two predictions. One is that Carl Yastrzemski will develop into a big ballplayer in center field. The other is that Lou Clinton will continue busting the baseball as he did the last part of the 1962 season. I also expect Earl Wilson and Bill Monbouquette to become major league pitching stars.

Naturally I will know more about the Red Sox after spring training, but the fans may look for a highly aggressive team, making full use of what speed it has and the hit and run.

The addition of Dick Stuart and Roman Mejias gives us the right-hand power the lack of which has kept the Red Sox in the second division the past four years.

The acquisition of Dick Williams and Felix Mantilla strengthens our bench.

I am fully aware of Stuart's reputation as a poor infielder at first base, but remind his detractors that the big guy didn't hurt the Pirates there. And infield defense will be considerably more than adequate now that Eddie Bressoud and Chuck Schilling have had a year as a double play combination.

With Stuart taking some of the burden off Frank Malzone in the batting order, I feel that our outstanding bowlegged third baseman will have an even better year than he did in 1962.

Our outfield of Mejias, Yastrzemski and Clinton will be backed up by fleet Gary Geiger and Pete Jernigan, the latter a 21-year-old right-hand hitter who was sidelined by a broken ankle last season after having jumped from D baseball, in which he hit .382, to Triple A. He batted well above .300 in the Florida Instructional League.

We have three solid pitching starters in Monbouquette, Gene Conley and Wilson, who won 42 games between them in 1962, supported by Dick Radatz, the most effective relief pitcher in the league, and a bull pen improved by the landing of Jack Lamabe.

We need a left-hand starter, who could come from Arnold Earley, Chet Nichols and newcomers Bill Spanswick and Wilbur Wood.

Special attention will be given youngsters Dave Morehead and Stew MacDonald, whom I had in Seattle last year. Morehead looks like the best after pitching well in the Florida Instructional League, where he was named to the All-Star.

We have two experienced catchers who bat from opposite sides of the plate, Bob Tillman and Russ Nixon. The third catcher could be Archie Skeen, who was batting considerably above .300 for Seattle until he broke his hand.

One thing is for sure — the Red Sox' so-called country club days are finished.

I know that even the players want it that way.

Baseball Strike Zone From Knee To Shoulder

NEW YORK (UPI)—Baseball's playing rules committee reacted to a perennial complaint of the pitchers Saturday and voted unanimously to expand the batted strike zone.

In a surprise move that followed a 2½-hour meeting, the 10-man committee redefined the rule governing the strike zone to read:

"The strike zone is that space over home plate which is between the top of the batter's shoulders and his knees when he assumes his natural stance. The umpire shall determine the strike zone according to the batter's usual stance when he swings at a pitch."

In the past, the strike zone was defined as that area between the batter's armpits and the top of his knees.

Cal Hubbard, supervisor of umpires for the American League, said this change "could make a difference of 10 to 12 inches in the strike zone."

"The change was inspired by persistent complaints from the pitchers, managers and the press

Coffin Sinks Birdie To Win Golf Meet

BELLEAIR, Fla. (UPI)—Bruce Coffin of Marblehead, Mass., dropped in a 20-foot birdie putt on the 19th hole to win the 29th American Seniors Golf championship Saturday.

The 63-year-old Coffin, a retired CBS television network vice president and director, beat former champion Jack Russell, of Clearwater, in the pressure packed final match which saw the lead see-saw back and forth.

It was only the second defeat for the 57-year-old Russell in 13 matches in American Seniors play. Both losses came at the hands of Coffin. He knocked Russell out of the tourney last year in the quarterfinals as Russell tried to defend his 1961 title.

The title was the first for Coffin who finished as runner-up in 1959. The birdie putt was the second in two days on extra holes for Coffin. Friday he beat George Haggarty of Detroit with a 60-foot birdie putt on the second extra hole.

Russell went two-up when he won the fifth and six holes, but Coffin tied it on eight and nine and went one-up on the tenth. Russell tied it on 13 only to have Coffin take the 14th.

Russell again tied the match on 16 and went ahead on 17. But with the pressure on, Coffin took the 18th hole to tie the match when Russell missed a 14-foot putt a temp.

Coffin was on the green in two on the extra hole while Russell's second shot left him just off the front of the green. He chipped in close to the pin on his third shot, setting the stage for Coffin's winning putt.

Player Trades, Rules Changes Expected At NFL Meeting

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — National Football League club owners start their annual winter meeting here Tuesday and it's a good bet they'll devote much discussion — in secret — to the gambling menace that threatens their sport.

The gambling problem, currently being investigated by commissioner Pete Rozelle, is not actually on the agenda of the three-day sessions.

But the nature of the menace makes it inevitable that the owners will give serious consideration to strong measures aimed at discouraging players and even fellow-owners from (1. associating with hoddum-type characters, and 2.) betting on games in any form.

Rozelle said Saturday he has not yet completed his investigation of the cases that have come up and he will have no statement to issue during the Miami Beach meetings.

The news here thus will revolve around player trades expected to be made, some proposed rules changes and other forms of fouline business.

Of the two most important proposed rules changes, one would discourage the feigning of injuries to stop the clock late in a game, and the other would prevent a safety from being scored as a result of a penalty, as happened twice during the 1962 season.

Under the first proposal, the clock would not be stopped when an injured player is being removed from the game during the last two minutes, even if that team already has used up its limit of time-outs.

Twice last season a team on defense was awarded a two-point safety because its opponent incurred an offensive penalty, in the end zone. In one of these cases, the safety represented the margin of the Pittsburgh Steelers' 40-38 victory over the Dallas Cowboys. Owners will vote on a proposal to mark off such penalties from the line of scrimmage instead of the spot of infraction.

A proposal to raise the player limit from 36 to 38 again will be considered, and failing to achieve that, some owners will stump for an injured reserve list similar to baseball's. These measures are designed to cushion the effects of injuries incurred by clubs during the expanded schedules.

The player limit was raised to 38 in 1960 when Dallas joined the league but was restored to 36 the following season. A move to put it back to 38 was defeated at last year's meeting.

An injured reserve list would permit clubs to remove injured players from their roster without the existing requirement of obtaining waivers from all other teams in the league. In such a case, the injured man would count on a club's roster, and a replacement could be brought up to keep the team at full strength.

Outdoors In Texas

By WILLIAM CLAYTON United Press International

Outdoor spokesmen have as much at stake in this session of the Texas legislature as any other interest group — and perhaps more, considering the number of general-application outdoors bills in legislative hoppers.

In the first approximately 400 bills to be filed in House and Senate this past week, around 30 are of general interest to the hunt-and-fish types.

The proposed Game and Fish Commission merger with the Parks Board occupies a place high on the issues, because of Gov. John Connally's insistence on that action as one key to the "new day of progress for Texas." The issue is not a new one. But in the past, it has never been so close to acceptance both by the legislature and the sportsmen.

The merger, discussed at length at the annual meeting of Sportsmen's Clubs of Texas, Inc., a week ago, is far from the only important game and fish issue lawmakers will consider. If anything characterizes the lawmakers' offerings along that line so far, it is that they are bills affecting a large segment of sportsmen.

Local bills, which may appear with increasing regularity later in the session, are almost totally lacking so far.

House Bill 6 by Rep. Rayford Price, Frankston, and Bills 74 by Rep. Ronald Bridges, Corpus Christi, and 97 by Rep. Menton Murray, Harlingen, would set up Padre Island national seashore. The bills differ in technicalities that may arouse local controversies. Generally, however, the Price bill and the companion bill in the Senate by George Parkhouse, Dallas, embody some of the feelings of land commissioner Jerry Sadler, who wants stronger control by the state over the deal.

The merger bill is by Rep. James Cotten, Weatherford. No such bill has been sponsored in the Senate so far.

Harvesters Rally Past Palo Duro, 67-51

Third Period Surge Wins 8th District 3-AAAA Tilt

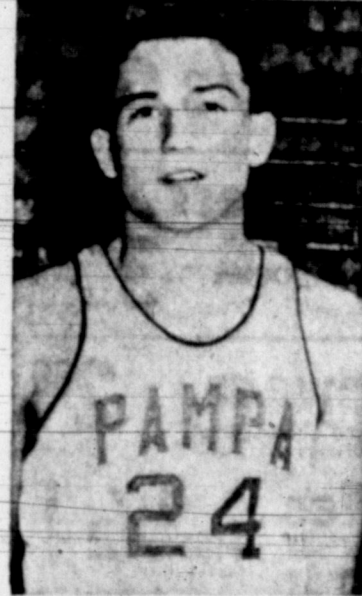

By LEE WHITE
Daily News Sports Editor

Pampa's Harvesters trailed Palo Duro most of the way for nearly three quarters before bucketing three straight baskets in 30 seconds to rally past the Dons, 67-51, Friday night in Harvester Field-house.

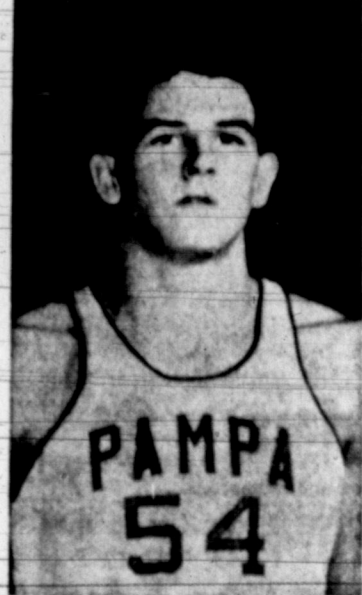

Pampa, coming alive in the closing seconds of the third quarter, pounded Palo Duro in the fourth quarter to post the eighth Dist. 3-AAAA win against no losses this year.

23-1 Season Mark
The Harvesters, 23-1 for the season, held on to a two-game district lead with the victory besides running the Pampa winning skein to 18 straight.

In another Dist. 3-AAAA fracas Friday night, Plainview sneaked by Borger, 64-62, in the battle of the Bulldogs. Sophomore Ronnie Peret, 6-8 center, tipped in the winning field goal for the only points made in the overtime period.

In a doubleheader played Thursday night in Lubbock's Coliseum, Monterey edged Amarillo, 48-46, to move into second place in the district standings while Lubbock smothered Tascosa, 84-60.

Both teams started off slow in the Pampa-Palo Duro fracas with the score tied three times and the lead changed hands six times in the first quarter.

Balch Scores
Forward Gordon Balch kept the Harvesters alive in the first quarter with three field goals while all five starting Dons were busy swishing baskets, giving the underdog visitors a 14-12 margin at the end of the initial period of play.

Wayne Kreis, leading scorer in the district, threatened to get the Pampa scoring machine rolling in the opening minutes of the second period as he tallied two quick field goals and set up Randy Matson for another basket.

The Harvesters started moving away from the Dons, 23-18, before Palo Duro countered with its own scoring surge that caught and passed the Pampans at the end of the first half, 28-24.

The Dons hit 12 of 25 field goal attempts the first half for 48 per cent while Pampa made 10 of 25 field goal shots for 40 per cent. Pampa cashed in on four of four free throws while Palo Duro made four of five attempted.

Behind At Half
Trailing 24-28 at the start of the second-half, Pampa once again momentarily caught fire as Balch, Gary Sikes, and Kreis lined-up Pampa field goals in the opening minute to catch Palo Duro, 30-30.

Keith Swanson turned in a three-point play to give Pampa the lead once again. Swanson snake-dribbled through the Dons and hit his delayed jump shot and was fouled. Swanson made the charity toss, putting Pampa ahead, 33-30.

Mike Echols, high-point scorer in the fracas for Palo Duro, swished two field goals to tie the score 34-34.

Matson for Pampa and Palo Duro's David Ellis traded baskets as both teams struggled to pull away, making the score 36 all.

Matson tallied a charity toss, but Henry Hawley and Doug Hendrick countered with field goals, giving Palo Duro a 40-37 lead.

Kreis hit on a jump shot and Sikes added two free throws moving Pampa ahead, 41-40. Swanson hit a free throw before Pampa was tied again, 42-42.

Shockers Upend Palo Duro "B"

Pampa's Shockers bucketed 24 points in the first quarter to soar past the Palo Duro "B" team, 74-43, in revenging an earlier season loss.

The Shockers, 3-5 in district play and 16-7 for the season, unleashed a full court press on the visitors Friday night in Harvester Field-house that payed dividends.

The victory revenged a 43-40 loss handed the Shockers in the first conference game for both teams.

With the Shockers rallying for 24 points in the first quarter, the visitors managed only seven points.

Kenny Hebert tallied 30 points in the victory, scoring 19 in the first half, to pace all scorers. Hebert left the game with five minutes left.

The visitors gained ground in the second quarter, pulling within 13 points of the Shockers with the score 35-22.

The Shockers turned in a 21-point third quarter while holding the visitors to seven points, padding the Pampa lead to 27 points, 56-29.

The biggest lead of the game came with three minutes left in the game as Kerry Roper hit two free throws, making the score 72-30 and giving Pampa a 33-point margin.

Students Give Cheer As Their Team Takes Over

Pampa Owns Big Lead In Dist. 3-AAAA Race

Pampa's two-game lead becomes harder to overcome with each game as the district race has passed the half-way point with the Harvesters undefeated.

Monterey, 6-2, the defending champions of Dist. 3-AAAA, is resting in second place in the race. The Plainsmen lost the district opener, 51-34, to Amarillo, but have rebounded to down every team in the district save Pampa. Monterey, losing to the Harvesters, 56-48, beat the Sandies last Thursday night.

Three teams are tied in the scamp for third place as the teams in the race become more scattered out with each week. Amarillo, Lubbock, and Plainview all own 5-3 conference marks.

The last three teams — Palo Duro, Borger, and Tascosa—are staging a real battle to keep from finishing at the bottom of the district race. All three teams own 1-7 district marks.

In a doubleheader played in Lubbock Thursday night, Amarillo's chances of winning the district race suffered another setback as Monterey edged the Sandies to have the second place spot by themselves. Amarillo and Monterey were tied for second going into the fracas with 5-2 conference records.

In the other part of the doubleheader, Lubbock wrecked Tascosa, 84-60.

Plainview sneaked by Borger Friday night, 64-62, in overtime. The Plainview Bulldogs, leading the district race with Pampa at the end of the second week, both with 4-0 records, dropped three games in a row almost killing their chances.

Pampa's win over Palo Duro Friday night makes the Harvesters hard to catch in the district race. With only six games left, Pampa owns a two-game margin and has already defined every team in the district once and Palo Duro twice. The Harvesters would have to be upset three times in the remaining six games to lose the district crown.

In games slated for Tuesday, Pampa travels to Tascosa; Lubbock hosts Plainview; Monterey hosts Borger; and Amarillo and Palo Duro play in Amarillo.

According to the first games,

Pampa should have little trouble with Tascosa, but the other three games could be close.

Borger, although tied for last place, has shown more improvement than any other team and could give Monterey a run for it in their tussle. Also, the result of the Plainview-Lubbock game might well be different from the 61-60 victory posted by the Bulldogs in their first encounter. Amarillo is expected to handle Palo Duro, but the Dons have played some good basketball this season.

Pampa, the top offensive team in the district, has two players in the top five scorers in the district. Wayne Kreis leads the district with a 19.8 average while Keith Swanson is fourth with a 15.6 average.

Thinks Kennedy Didn't Go Far Enough On 'Deeducks'

By DICK WEST
WASHINGTON (UPI) — By and large, tax deductions fall into two categories. They are classed either as "equitable relief," which includes the deductions I am entitled to, or as "loopholes," which are the deductions granted to someone else. President Kennedy's tax message this week contained some of each. His proposals for equitable relief were not, however, as extensive as they could have been. I regret that the President did not embrace a bill introduced by Rep. Frank J. Becker, R-N.Y., to provide a deduction for transportation to and from work. "In view of the fact that many types of exemptions are allowed to different people, why not for transportation?" Becker asked. "I don't know to whom he was directing the question, but my answer would be "Why not, indeed?"

Vaughn Meader's Tour Halted By Order Of Court
SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Vaughn Meader, who sold four million records which satirized the Kennedy family, has been restrained by a U.S. district judge from going on a nationwide tour. Judge Stanley Weigel issued a temporary restraining order requested by a San Francisco night club which said Meader is refusing to fulfill a $750-a-week contract requiring a month's appearances beginning Monday. The contract between Meader and "the hungry i" was signed last Sept. 26. Since then, Meader has become famous with his "First Family" album. The order would keep Meader from making any appearances except on television, or at "the hungry i" until a hearing on Feb. 4.

If such a deduction would cause too sharp a drop in revenue, then perhaps Becker's proposal could be modified to apply only to those who drive to and from work. For that matter, I wouldn't object if it were restricted to newspapermen who drive to and from work. Or make it just those whose last names begin with "W." There are a number of other ways that the President's program could, in my view, be improved. Areas in which tax reforms are needed include: — A tax write-off to cover the cost of repairing small ice crushing machines that children have used for cracking pecans. — A hair oil depletion allowance. This would permit men with depleting hair to deduct 27½ per cent of the cost of scalp lotions. Its purpose would be to encourage exploration for new anti-baldness preparations. — A home entertainment expense deduction. This would permit couples who entertain in their homes to deduct the cost of new comedy records so that their guests won't have to keep listening to "The First Family" album. — A broadcasting folk song tax. This would require radio stations to pay a tax equal to 200 per cent of the retail price of the record each time they play a folk song over the air. — Sick pay. This would double the income tax rate for comedians who get paid for telling sick jokes. — A television program repeat tax. Repeated programs would be taxed an amount equal to the cost of the original production. I am not certain what the economic effect of these tax reforms would be, but if they accomplished the desired purpose they certainly would bring a lot of relief.

Coffee Break... ...with d. e. w.

FIRST WEEK BACK on the "old soc desk" after a brief absence and must say that it is nice to be back. Happy to find that our concentration powers hadn't become too rusty from non-usage during our four-month vacation. We are still able to immediately spot brides-to-be, from the many other person-types, who come to the newspaper office. It's not so much the sparkle in their eyes, the sparkle on their third finger left-hand, nor the square manila picture envelope they usually carry, it's more that brides-to-be have a little difficulty maneuvering their own Special Cloud Nine through the push and pull doors of the editorial department. Have a cup of coffee already for our weekly coffee break together? Well, so do we. Let's sip and chat a while.

SUSIE JACOBSON was a surprised little girl when she walked into the Pampa Youth and Community Center last Saturday evening and found it filled with a group of friends she had made during her Lee Junior High and sophomore class days. "Goodbye, Susie" was the reluctant reason for the party dreamed up by Pam Ludeman, Glennette Dawkins, Pat Masterson, Cheryl Dosier, Carla Matson, Annette Eddy, Nancy Newlin, Pat Ludeman, Judy Butler, and Mary Lou Redus. It was a surprise party that really worked! Which proves that teenagers can, too, keep secrets. Despite the fact that it was a farewell party, it was a gay one with dancing from 7:30 p.m. until 11:30 p.m. with music provided by The Coronados. Susie and her parents, Sam and Blanche Jacobson, left Sunday to make their home in Tulsa, Okla., where her dad will be associated with the Zales Jewelry Co. as he was while they resided here. The evening of farewells ended on a humorous note, with Susie's dad, with orchestral accompaniment sang "Please Don't Talk About Me When I'm Gone." In addition to the Jacobsons, there were some other moms and dads around... the W. C. Newlins... Mrs. Glen Dawkins... the Don Eddys and Mrs. Price Dosier Jr.

The most agreeable thing in life is worthy accomplishment. — Edgar Howe.

WHILE WE'RE ON the subject of surprise parties, it was a week of surprises for Barbara Turnbo, too. She and her husband, Nate, had accepted a foursome dinner-bridge date with Bob and Evelyn Allison on Evergreen to celebrate Barbara's birthday. But when they walked into the Allison living room, they found it was a twelvetime dinner-bridge party. Singing "Surprise Happy Birthday," on and off-key, were Phyllis and Jack Curtis... Jim and Madeline Hamilton of Borger... Pat and Charlie Norton... Bill and Nina Thienes... Ray and Doris Wilson. There was a birthday cake served, too, after an Italian dinner, with red roses and a single red birthday candle. There was another birthday cake waiting at the Turnbo home, the order for which had been wired to Clay and Emily Coston from Barbara's mother and sister in California. Who says women don't enjoy birthdays especially when they are as much fun as this one was. Must remember to get Evelyn's recipe for the Lasagne... it was delicious!

WE LEARNED of a lovely thing this week. Friends who knew Jean Metz well, and whose lives she had touched in her gentle and humorous manner, are starting a Memorial Book Fund for her. Jean's husband, Al, and sons, Stephen and Jimmy, knowing her love of books, are deeply touched by this gesture of remembrance. The Memorial Fund will be used to purchase a book or books for Jean's hometown library in Chickasha, Okla. Grace Alleman at Lovett Memorial Library, who was a close friend of Jean's, is the one who told us about it. Anyone who would like to contribute to the fund may contact her.

There is no happiness except in the realization that we have accomplished something. — Henry Ford

A NUPTIAL NOTE of interest about a former Pampan is the wedding of Dorothy Taylor, who formerly lived here and S. R. Walker. They repeated wedding vows on January 12 in the library of the Crescent Park Baptist Church in Odessa. Following a wedding reception in the Holiday Inn and a wedding trip to New Mexico, they are back home now at 3114 Blossom Lane in Odessa. Heard that Mrs. William H. Perry, 2139 Dogwood Lane and Mrs. Bill Roots, 501 Linda Drive, drove to Canyon earlier this month and were initiated into Delta Zeta, a social sorority, in a ceremony that took place in the Joseph A. Hill Memorial Chapel on campus. Both were formerly affiliated with the Theta Upsilon Sorority, while Jean was a student at Akron University in Akron, Ohio and Diane was a student at Westminster College in Pennsylvania. With the recent merger of Theta Upsilon and Delta Zeta, they were eligible for membership in Delta Zeta. Makes it a smaller world, indeed, when gals from Ohio and Pennsylvania meet in the Top O' Texas for sorority initiation.

PAMPANS IN PROFILE: Lorene Locke downtown this week wearing a most attractive red chiffon headscarf, daintily scalloped around the edges, blowing back from her face just enough to reveal a lovely pair of plum-shaped pearl earrings... John Callarman crossing the street towards City Hall against the chilling, whipping winds; head buried in overcoat collar and hands thrust deep in pockets... Beth Carr talking about the Pampa Junior High Talent Show, which Floyd Sackett and Homer Krueger are directing... it's always as hilarious and entertaining as enthusiastic teenagers can make it... Fidelia Yoder braving cold temperatures to bring in a story and picture about her piano recital this afternoon in the Presbyterian Church educational building... Kay Schuneman, sitting in the First National Bank Lobby, selling Poll Tax Receipts... which reminds us, there are only four days left to purchase same... Ophelia Morris telling a friend how much Civic Culture Club members enjoyed getting to know Luisa Prieto of Spain better, when she was a guest of their club this week. Luisa, who is a vivacious brunette, is the American Field Service Student, who is making her home with the W. A. Morgans on Evergreen this year, while she attends Pampa High School.

HERE IN THE Top O' Texas, we don't exactly go in for black tie and tails, jewels and fur-type functions often. We're the more casual, down-to-earth type; still Robert Merrill's appearance here tomorrow night in the Pampa Junior High auditorium will call for best bib and tucker attire. The Metropolitan Opera Star's appearance will be Pampa Community Concert Association's third offering in their four-concert series this season. And it should be a gala evening when eight o'clock curtain time rolls around. We've run out or sips and chat. d.e.w.

Zachry-Meaker Repeat Vows In Church Rites

Wedding vows of Miss Sylvia Dianne Zachry and Meradith Travis Meaker were solemnized in a double-ring candlelight service performed on Saturday evening at seven o'clock in the First Baptist Church with Dr. E. Douglas Carver, pastor, officiating.

Miss Zachry is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. L. J. Zachry, 1310 Williston. Mr. Meaker's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Purl Meaker, 2209 N. Russell.

Tree candelabras entwined with golden salal foliage formed the background with arrangements of white chrysanthemums centered with pyramid candelabras alternating along the choir rail. White Grecian pedestal urns filled with white chrysanthemums completed the altar decorations.

The bridal path was lighted by candelabras and gold foliage along the row of pews.

BRIDE

Miss Zachry was given in marriage by her father, who lifted her bridal veil, kissed her and repeated the "her mother and I" avowal.

The bride wore a formal gown of peau de soie designed with a fitted bodice of Alencon lace accented with a Sabrina neckline accented with seed pearls and long, petal point sleeves of re-embroidered Alencon lace. The bell-shaped skirt of peau de soie swept to a back fullness and terminated with a chapel train of re-embroidered Alencon lace scalloped around the hemline. A large butterfly bow was fashioned at the back waistline with wide streamers drawn to each side front applied with Alencon lace flowers re-embroidered with pearls.

The bride's veil of tiered imported English Illusion with hand-rolled edges draped from a pillbox of matching peau de soie re-embroidered with pearls. A peau-de-soie rose centered the pillbox with petals cascading over the edges.

She carried a cascade arrangement of white orchids and stephanotis showered with white satin ribbon atop a satin and lace-covered Bible. Her only jewelry was a single strand of pearls, a gift of the bridegroom.

As the bride came down the aisle and approached the altar, she handed her mother a single, long-stemmed white rose. After vows were repeated and the couple left the altar, the bride paused and gave the bridegroom's mother a single, long-stemmed white rose.

In carrying out bridal tradition, the bride carried a six-pence in her shoe, which had been given her by her uncle, J. F. Brandenburg of Duncanville.

ATTENDANTS

Mrs. Curtis Beard of Brownfield attended as matron of honor. Miss Carmelia Hogan was maid of honor. Serving as bridesmaids were Mrs. Carter-Williams of Canyon, Mrs. Don Campbell of Claude and Miss Cile Gordon.

Miss Jones Feted At Bride's Party

Miss Billie Jean Jones, bride-elect of Carlos Garner Schoenhals, was honored with a surprise bridal shower on Friday evening in the home of Mrs. James B. Sellers, 1718 Hamilton.

Miss Jones' chosen colors of brown and gold were carried out in the decorations. The refreshments table was appointed in silver and crystal with a white damask cloth. An arrangement of bronze mums in a gold urn centered the gift table.

Guests were Meses. Gordon Rutledge, H. B. Taylor, Lonnie Kenney, Brooks Hubbard, Max Nickl, Joan Dingman and George Jones, mother of the honoree; Misses Nancy Higginbotham, Virginia Jones and Macie Batson.

Taylor-Walker Say Vows In Odessa

Wedding vows of Mrs. Dorothy Taylor of Odessa, former Pampan, and S. R. Walker, also of Odessa, were repeated on Jan. 12 in the library of the Crescent Park Baptist Church with the Rev. Keith Bailey, assistant pastor, officiating.

Mrs. Walker is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Decker, 608 Doucette. Mr. Walker is the son of Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Walker of DeLeon.

For her wedding, Mrs. Walker chose a gold and off-white satin two-piece dress with gold accessories and a corsage of pink carnations.

Mrs. Lloyd Everett, as matron of honor, wore a two-piece blue wool knit suit. Bob Euckert served the bridegroom as best man.

The couple, wedding guests and attendants were entertained with a wedding dinner in the Holiday Inn following the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Walker are at home at 3114 Blossom Lane in Odessa after a wedding trip to New Mexico.

Mr. Walker is employed at Portland Cement Co. in Odessa.

Spring Coats Designed With Skinny Silhouette

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
United Press International
NEW YORK (UPI) — The nation's trend-setting designers lean to a skinny coat silhouette for spring.

The coats with thin lines end the hold Omar the tentmaker had on the garment district. The Omar coats — self-contained pup tents — featured folds and more folds, fore and aft.

The skinny coats, featured in collections during the New York couture group's 40th fashion press week, in progress, were supplemented by drawing coats, belted coats — and even a summer mink.

The summer mink isn't mink at all — just as all that glitters usually isn't gold in the garment district. The summer mink's chiffon — done up in a way to be just as eye-catching as mink.

Marks of the skinny coat: patch pockets, brass buttons, big buttons, skinny sleeves and little roll collars.

Fabrics ranged from smooth to nubby wools. In between were the evening coats made of satin, lace and even drapery material. Highlights of collections: —Gothe advanced the costume. Favored was the seam-shaped waistlength jacket with arched sleeves to the elbow, chaste cut without collar or closing above a gently shaped triangular skirt. The costumes frequently were deceptively simple in appearance, for beneath the jacket was a contrasting bodice and lining of a hang-over top of jewel-embroidered chiffon or lace. The Gothe coat and dress costume most often combined the straight but easy coat of solid silk with printed dress and lining for colorful contrast. News for evening in this collection: the cocoon stole, a narrow wrap of chiffon fastened at the neckline that narrowly encased the figure.

—Junior Sophisticates showed the silver coat, designed on the shirt theme. This was mated to a matching flower-printed dress. Other suit and costume jackets were straight and longer. Sweaters in the collection were lengthened into topcoats or elongated jackets. One sample: a long navy ambanknit cardigan and tunic pullover set shown over a white knife-pleated dress. The collection also re-endorsed the easy-fitting empire and long torso silhouettes and the A-line look. This, shown in daytime coats as well as a number of dresses, started with a narrowed shoulder line and ended in a gored, gently flared hem. A spiral skimmer-cocktail dress of black crepe was finished with a row of runching around its gored hem. One A-line coat, shown in linen and in mohair wool, was double-breasted with twin rows of buttons set to accentuate the triangular shape.

—Lannah Troy introduced a batch of floaty silk marquisette ballgowns, some with bodices elaborately embroidered with blossoms and crystal and sequin beads. The show-stopper in this collection: A shimmer of pale flower-printed silk chiffon, veiling a shaft of iridescent sequins. Many of the Troy daytime and cocktail dresses were cut on the bias, assuring a subtle and simple fit. The shift, revived in this collection, was presented in silk linen and barbacane versions.

—Harvey Berin made news in color, fabrics and cuts. He showed a lot of unbelted silhouettes. The main silhouette in this collection hugged the figure, however. A South American influence detected in this collection included fringes of dangling beads on scarves, sombreros. The scarves and sombreros were shown with black chiffon and black crepe dresses. Many of his costumes were perfectly the "business" type until jackets came off. The sedate jackets covered the bodice, alluringly cut, of a dress secured at the top with shoe string straps.

Miss Norma Jean Dillman

Mr. and Mrs. George E. Dillman, south of the city, announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Norma Jean, to William E. Homer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Homer of Groom. Wedding vows will be solemnized on April 20 at seven o'clock in St. Vincent dePaul Catholic Church.

AFS Student Guest At Civic Culture Meeting

"We Seek New Friends" was the program topic presented to Civic Culture Club members at a meeting held Tuesday afternoon in the home of Mrs. A. C. Houchin, 1542 Williston.

Mrs. Standley Brandt, program chairman, introduced Mrs. H. H. Hahn, who gave a brief resume of the American Field Service organization.

"Mrs. Aubrey Steele is president of the local chapter of AFS," Mrs. Hahn stated. "The chapter requests that we bring two students to Pampa again next year. The success of the AFS program in Pampa is a result of the combined efforts of the community and school, Men's Service Clubs, Women's Clubs, church groups, and the high school students, who have provided funds through talent shows."

is employed by Pan - American Petroleum Corp.

Mr. Meaker was graduated from Pampa High School and is engaged in wheat farming southwest of White Deer.

Among the pre-nuptial courtesies extended the bride were a luncheon given by Miss Carol Tripplehorn in the Pampa Country Club, a tea given by Mrs. R. F. Gordon, Mrs. P. O. Gaut and Miss Sibyl Turner in Mrs. Gordon's home, 1317 Mary Ellen; and a miscellaneous shower given in the home of Mrs. E. W. Hogan with Mmes. Floyd Crow, Oscar Westbrook, Paul Crossman Jr., Lee Moore, Harold Baer, Ronald Merrill, Guss Greene, Park Brown, Denver Allen, Milo Carlson, Willard Miller and W. B. Franklin as assisting hostesses. Mr. and Mrs. Meaker were hosts for the rehearsal dinner given Friday evening in the Courthouse Cafe. A Bride's Brunch was given Saturday morning at 10:30 in the home of Mrs. Ann Heskew, 1120 N. Somerville, for the wedding attendants, members of the houseparty and out-of-town guests.

Upon their return from New Mexico, the couple will make their home at 507 N. Wells.

For the first time, saddle soap comes in colors. It comes in black, brown and clear in an easy-open can.

"The Pampa Chapter is now accepting applications from prospective host families, who will be interviewed by Mr. and Mrs. Gene Fatheree, but the selection is made in the New York office of AFS," she said.

In other remarks relating to the AFS program, Mrs. Hahn said, "The chapter member in charge of finance is Aubrey Steele; Miss Virginia Vaughn is school advisor and Gordon Bayless is student advisor. Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Maguire are in charge of publicity; Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Massa are project members."

"Related to the American Field Service is the American Abroad program by means of which American students can go abroad for the summer or winter program. Howard Graham, Pampa High School teacher, is the American Abroad co-ordinator."

Mrs. Hahn introduced Miss Luisa Prieto of Madrid Spain, who is the AFS student spending the winter here in the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Morgan, 1938 Evergreen.

Miss Prieto gave an interesting description of her native home, "Madrid is a city of two and one-half million people with many old historic buildings as well as many modern buildings. Many of their schools are private," she said.

"Even though our customs are different from yours, I prefer some of yours and am enjoying every minute of my time here."

Miss Prieto, who speaks English fluently having studied in London, England, conducted a question and answer period following her talk. Mrs. F. R. Grantham was welcomed as a new member and Mrs. H. S. Alexander, Mrs. Hahn and Mrs. E. E. Atkinson as guests. Thirteen members were present.

Dear Abby... Silver Lining In Marriage For Money?

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am married to a man who is twice my age. He was an old bachelor when I married him. He doesn't want me to work (I can type) because we don't need the money. My life is boring. He doesn't want children because they make him "nervous." I came from a poor family and was blinded by the assurance of financial security and an easy life. But now I'm sorry I married him. He is very good to me and gives me all the material things I want, but I'm not happy. When he passes on, he'll leave everything to me. Would I be a fool to walk out now?

spare the details. When she realizes that her husband cannot be permitted to behave in his present manner, you'll have peace and privacy. But not until.

DEAR ABBY: We are parents of a very active 11-year-old boy who is the leader of his neighborhood gang. We are proud of his qualities of leadership, but he wants too much freedom too soon.

OLD MAN'S DARLING
DEAR DARLING: Although you married for the wrong reasons you can still have a reasonably happy and useful life. Get into volunteer work. Work with children and underprivileged people. Perhaps when you see women your age who were so "blinded" by love they married men who gave them lives of hard work, poverty and more children than they can feed, you'll appreciate your lot and a man who is good to you. I don't recommend marrying for money, but since you did — look for the silver lining.

We have a full half-acre lot behind our house where our son and his gang have always played. Now he is trying to persuade us to let him build a tree house in a wooded area three blocks from our home. We don't like this idea, Abby. Are we being overly protective? None of the other mothers is in favor of the tree house either. What do you think?

SMALL TOWN MOTHER
DEAR MOTHER: Tree houses are for the birds. You need not apologize for refusing to let an 11-year-old boy have a tree house in a wooded area three blocks from home. Stick to your decision.

DEAR ABBY: I am 15 and the oldest of five children. When I was 12 our Daddy died and a year later Mamma married again. Abby, there is something wrong with this man. There are things I can't even tell my mother about. Our house is like a jail. He goes through everyone's drawers and listens in on all phone calls. He acts like a peeping Tom. He walks into all the rooms of the house without knocking even if the door is closed. (No locks, he took them all off.) In order to get some privacy while taking a bath I put a chair in front of the door and he got so mad he took the door off by the hinges. If something isn't done about him, I am going to run away.

DEAR ABBY: I plan to be married this summer and have a question no one seems able to answer for me. I have heard a lot about "wedding bells" but have never heard them rung at a wedding. If there are such things when are they rung, and who rings them? Thank you.

BRIDE-TO-BE
DEAR BRIDE: Wedding bells are the church bells! And if your church has church bells, the person whose job it is to ring the bells can ring them when wedding guests enter the church and while they depart after the ceremony.

What's on your mind? For a personal reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Abby, Box 3365, Beverly Hills, Calif.

Art In American Form Topic At El Progresso

El Progresso Club elected new officers for the 1963-64 club year at a meeting held Tuesday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Jess Clay, 2007 Christine.

To be installed at the May meeting are Mmes. Charles Lanehart, president; V. J. Drew, vice president; Bernard Johnson, secretary; Veri Hagaman, treasurer; H. Vera, reporter and Grundy Morrison, parliamentarian.

The afternoon's program on "American Art" was presented by Mrs. Morrison and Mrs. Johnson. Mrs. Morrison gave sketches of the personality and life of Anna Mary Robertson, who was better known as "Grandma Moses," taken from the book, "My Life's History."

In reviewing Grandma Moses' life, Mrs. Morrison said, "She left home when she was 12 years old to do housework for other people. She married Thomas Moses, a hired hand at one of the places where she lived and worked. Their married life was spent on the farm."

"She was known by all to be a genius, alert and vigorous, loved beauty and friendship, but always overlooked hardships as her philosophy was, 'they were just bound to come.'"

"Grandma Moses had painted very little before her husband died in 1927," Mrs. Morrison continued. "Just before his death, he interested her in painting, where in the past he had thought it foolish. Her first real 'break' came when an art collector from New York saw some of her work and started buying everything she could get painted. This was in 1940, when she became famous for her individual type of painting."

In concluding remarks, Mrs. Morrison stated, "She always vowed that life was what we made it. She always made hers a happy one with a lot of activity. Many people believe that her disposition and philosophy of life enabled her to live to the ripe old age of 101, which was her age at the time of her death in 1961."

Mrs. Johnson chose "Indian Art" for her discussion. She stated, "Their art started of necessity as they had to make their own vessels, weave their own cloth, make their own baskets and decorate the ceremonial rooms of the pueblos."

Mrs. Johnson commented on the lives of two Indian sisters, who are artists living today. "One is Legoria, who still makes pottery as it was originally made; still going to the old pueblo beds for the clay as her grandmothers did before her; to another place for the sand and still another for the paint. Many Indian women still speak to the earth and ask permission while digging the clay and occasionally leave offerings. They believe it has feelings and that man must live on kindly terms with it."

"Legoria has won many awards for her fine pottery and still markets it in the typical Indian style and still dresses in her native costumes."

"Her sister, Pablita Velarde," Mrs. Johnson continued, "is more modern and when you run into her in Albuquerque, where she lives, you would think her no different from the average housewife. She does 'earth' paintings for which she goes out and finds her own rocks and earth, grinds them up, mixes them with water and glue and using her own trade secret, thus, begins to paint."

Mrs. Johnson displayed an attractive picture of this type, which Pablita had done. "Her paintings, because of their use of symbolism, have often been referred to as modern, but they come from the most ancient culture on the North American continent; the every day life and legends of the Indians."

Club members attending were Mmes. Helen Vera, Grundy Morrison, John Gill, Tom Perkins, Carlton Nance, Bernard Johnson, D. V. Burton, Harold Wright, V. J. Drew, Glen Radcliff, Charles Lanehart, and Elmer Fisher.

Hunger For CREDIT !!!

By MRS. MURIEL LAWRENCE

Dear Mrs. Lawrence: My mother, lives part of the year with my brother, part with me. Recently when she returned from my brother's, she insisted that she had given me a pair of brass candlesticks I bought at a church sale last summer. I told her the truth. Now an aunt tells me she is writing to everyone in the family saying that I am trying to put her out of the home she furnished for me. I have been supporting myself since I was 20, and furnished my home myself. But my mother always does this to me.

ANSWER: You can't change your mother's living arrangements, can you? And you certainly can't change her. So, if you want change in this situation, the only place to make it is in yourself.

You will have to change your view of your mother.

She is not the strong, loving, self-assured creature of your imagination. Instead, she is a pitiful, self-scoring human being so suspicious of her value to others that she must grab all the credit that belongs to you.

Your resentment at her behavior is due to your failure to see this credit-hunger in her.

We are only hurt by such greediness in a parent because our view of her still endows her with supreme concern for us. We are still children needing to believe that mother's love is perfectly trustworthy. So when she seeks to belittle us in order to make herself appear powerful and generous, we are hurt and resentful. The contradiction between what we believe she ought to be and what she is injects hate into our relationship.

But if we can see her as she is, our resentful confusion begins to dissolve. We begin to feed the pitiful hunger for credit just as we would give food to a starving person. Though we must refuse to agree that she gave us the brass candlesticks we gave ourselves, we say, "However, I owe you my beautiful sofa—pillows, mother. How kind you were to make them for me." We learn to supply her with credit for something she HAS done every time we have to remove the credit for what she hasn't done.

But we can't feed her hunger unless we know she's hungry. So long as she remains mommy, the supreme giver of our childhood, such knowledge cannot become clear to us.

New Scent Combines Chic And Femininity

The search for the right perfume for YOU can be an exciting adventure.

You've read that certain perfumes were created for the girl who is daintily feminine, others for the chic sophisticate or for the outdoor type — and so on.

Yet when you get right down to it, choosing a scent is purely a matter of instinct. You're perfectly safe in ignoring the conventional rules and selecting a fragrance simply because you like it.

One new scent created by a leading Paris couturiere seems to combine all the ingredients a woman could want in her perfume. It's designed for the girl who wants to be chic and feminine at the same time. It even gets its name from a French word for someone who is willfully but charmingly persistent.

Unlike many other perfumes, it is said to be equally wearable in summer and winter and as perfect with tweedy daytime clothes as with the most elegant ball gown.

To get the most from any fragrance you choose, apply it to the pulse spots (temples, throat, inside of wrists and elbows).

Use it every single day and not just on special occasions. It's the most feminine accessory you can own.

This girl protects the color of her hair by using a clear hair spray designed especially for blondes.

Resort Knits Are Glamorous 'N Chic

NEW YORK (NEA) — The girl who plans a midwinter vacation in the tropics will find cotton knit playtime separates and suit ensembles ideal holiday companions. Gaily colored hooded boating jackets, tennis-inspired pull-overs, trim three-part suit costumes and sleeveless knit sheaths will provide a carefree wardrobe that will give you around-the-clock chic with little or no care.

If the hang tag says your knit will not wrinkle, it won't wrinkle. And if washing instructions are given, they can be followed with complete assurance.

Designed to span the seasons with the greatest of ease, knit fashions have become the mainstay of nearly every woman's wardrobe. And even the girl who won't be spending a winter holiday in the sun will find much to please her among the cruise and resort knits.

She can make the transition from winter to spring in separates that have a suit look. The color palette includes chalky pinks and blues and warm yellows which will bring brightness into a dreary winter day, and they'll slip into spring as though they'd been blended just for the season. And among the resort play clothes, she will find enough to give her a head start on her summer casuals.

Singer Merrill Arrives Tonight

Robert Merrill, Metropolitan Opera star, is scheduled to arrive in Pampa tonight. He will be presented in a concert at 8 p.m. tomorrow in the Pampa Junior High School Auditorium under sponsorship of the Pampa Community Concert Association.

Admittance to the performance will be by membership ticket only and no extra seats are available, concert association officials said today.

Merrill, who was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., actually wanted to become a baseball player. But his mother lured him into music by the simple process of taking him, at 14, to the Metropolitan Opera House to see and hear Verdi's "Il Trovatore." From then on, Merrill found music even more fascinating than baseball.

He started taking lessons with Samuel Mergolis, who is still his voice teacher. He helped pay for his music lessons by working in his father's shoe store and later pitching for a semi-pro ball team in Brooklyn.

Then, as a teen-ager, he worked at Catskill Mountain hotel resorts as singer and straight man to the comedians like Jan Murray, Danny Kaye, Red Skelton, and The Three Stooges.

The big thrill came in 1945 when he won the Metropolitan Opera Auditions of the Air, and made his debut at the "Met," was awarded an RCA Victor contract, and became a regular soloist on the RCA Victor Show on the NBC radio network.

The following year, Toscanini selected him to sing the role of Germont in the NBC Symphony presentation of "La Traviata," and later the Maestro's last operatic performance of "The Masked Ball."

Since then, Merrill has played the top theatres, the best TV and radio network shows, appeared in several movies, recorded many singles and albums for RCA Victor, performed in the finest hotels and cafes. He is one of the few baritones who moves easily from the concert and opera to the pop field.

'Sam' Comes Into Her Own

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—For a something more to Miss Moore girl whose first big role was a faceless lady named "Sam," Mary Tyler Moore has done quite well. "I was on that show for 13 weeks and it was one of my better breaks," said Miss Moore who was willing to settle for facial anonymity.

Actress Needed Credits "I was delighted for the part because I had very few credits at the time, only a few commercials and a big part. But after I left 'Diamond,' casting directors started using me in roles because they felt it would be a coup to show the real 'Sam's' face."

She appeared in that whodunit for only 13 weeks, but even though casting directors never saw her face they were intrigued by the quality of the young lady's voice and other attributes.

Although Mary's face was kept out of camera range, "Diamond" lensmen always managed to shoot her legs, back, hands and two fleeting glances of her eyes and lips. That was enough to convince video brass that there must be the show's original format called for comedy only in the characters of Van Dyke, Morey Amsterdam and Rose Marie. Mary was supposed to be an element of reality in the midst of three clowns.

That's comparable to moderating an East-West summit meeting. You can get completely unnoticed.

Here's One Actress Who Is Not Looking For Stardom

By JOSEPH FINNIGAN
HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Blonde Virginia Grey is one of those rare movie actresses who doesn't want a place in Hollywood's sometimes perilous galaxy of stars.

"I'm not a star and I'm glad," said Miss Grey who was born in Hollywood near the original Mack Sennett studio where her father was a director for such stars as Mabel Normand, Ben Turpin and Harold Lloyd.

It's unusual for an actress to deprecate star billing and especially so for one like Miss Grey, who has been in pictures for many years.

She has worked with top performers and is personally friendly with many of them. At one time her name was romantically linked with the late Clark Gable.

But despite her friendships with stars she insists they are limited in their choice of parts, hence frustrated in a dramatic profession.

Stars Are Limited
"Stars are limited," she said. "Because of prestige they can't take every role they want. Even if a lesser part is better they can't take it. I can go in any direction I want and that's gratifying."

"I'm glad for that because I have to work and a star can't work in this business. There's nobody picking up the tab for me. I just pray to God that I can go on to the goal I started towards. That's character acting."

Miss Grey, one of Hollywood's most attractive ladies, never married. She lives the life of a bachelor girl in the Hollywood suburb of Encino.

During a career in which she started as a child actress as "Little Eva" in the movie "Uncle Tom's Cabin," she has appeared in scores of pictures including such diverse films as "Flame of the Barbary Coast" and "Sweet Rosie O'Grady."

Virginia prides herself not on any false star status but in the satisfaction that she can play a variety of roles from the hard bitten woman to more respectable types.

"On one day's television schedule I appeared in four shows," she said recounting a diversity of roles. "I was a nun, killer, housewife and a streetwalker. It was a compliment to me that I could get such a variety of parts in different shows."

In contrast to such diversity, Virginia says, a star's professional reputation is sometimes mythical.

Image Is Shattered
"The star image is shattered," she said. "This town is responsible for it. They dissected the body and let everybody see it. It's a wide open book. The star himself was exposed and they were shown washing dishes. People used to think stardom was unobtainable when there was all that aura. Now the people know they're not and they don't like it."

Virginia suggested that talent in Hollywood has taken second place behind the cost of putting on a show.

"That's why they're goofing up on so many shows now," she said. "They buy somebody cheap and if they don't get talent they feel that no money has been lost."

The nearest description to stardom that Virginia finds acceptable to her talent is the costar billing she recently got as a lady circus agent in "Black Zoo."

"I'm not against costar billing," she said. "The minute I drop that billing producers won't think I'm worth the salt."

Feed Supply Dwindles Under Winter Blasts

COLLEGE STATION (UPI)—The banging of feed room doors and the popping of hay bales in Texas have increased with each succeeding blast of arctic air. The third cold wave since mid-January roared across Texas last week and again caused stockmen to go deeper into their winter feed supplies.

The latest blast moved in almost before water systems had been put back in operation and before thick ice had done much thawing on stock ponds. The major farm and ranch activities continue to be livestock feeding and care and keeping water available, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service reported.

Losses from the last weekend's low temperatures had not been fully determined before warnings went out to brace for still another. Small grain growth has been stopped by the repeated cold blasts and freeze damage has been reported from many areas but the total extent will not be known until the plans have a chance to come out, the service said. From 10 to 15 per cent damage to flax was reported for the mid-counties in South Central Texas and low temperatures and a lack of moisture are causing the removal of cattle from wheat pastures in the Panhandle.

Damage to vegetables and citrus in far South Texas was listed as minor. Winter vegetables continued to move in volume from the area. Cauliflower was hard hit in the San Antonio area and heavy damage was also noted to early strawberry plantings in that same area.

Moisture is short in the Panhandle, is getting short in the South Plains area and far West and South Texas continued to be very dry. From Central Texas east and north moisture conditions are adequate to surplus in some counties.

It is a sure bet, farmers and ranchmen would like to see a spell of weather more to their liking. They still have much outdoor work to do in preparation for spring crops.

TWO MARINES KILLED

HOLLY RIDGE, N.C. (UPI)—Two Marines emerged without injury from their overturned compact car Wednesday on U.S. 17. They were fatally struck by a third car as they stood beside the wreckage.

The victims, stationed at Camp Lejeune, were identified as Eugene Valunas, 21, Torrington, Conn., and Robert White Jr., 22, Gaffney, S.C.

MERMAID TRIO—With most of Europe still treating its chillblained toes, these three misses enjoy sun and surf on Mondello beach at Palermo, Sicily.

Atlantic Plans To Expand Its Market Process

PHILADELPHIA (Sp) — The Atlantic Refining Company, one of the nation's leading producers of natural gas, will "substantially expand" its direct marketing of liquefied petroleum gas and natural gasoline in a move to capture a larger share of the market for these products, it was announced today.

Atlantic has opened five sales offices in the Southwest and Midwest for marketing of the two products, and has long-range plans to expand sales into the 17 Eastern states where it has long sold gasoline and other petroleum products, according to Arthur B. Hersberger, vice president and general manager of marketing of Atlantic. In addition, the company is already shipping LP-gas through two finished product pipelines, in one of which a subsidiary company has purchased an interest. The two lines supply 12 states in the mid-continent and southeast areas of the United States. Also, Hersberger added, Atlantic is adding a number of new 20,000 and 30,000 gallon cars to its railway tank car fleet.

The LP-gas and natural gasoline production comes from 36 natural gasoline plants in Texas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Mississippi, Wyoming, Arkansas, Kansas and New Mexico, and from nine underground storage locations in six states. The plants are wholly or jointly owned and, where Atlantic holds the largest share, Atlantic usually serves as the plant operator.

New Drilling Mud Firm Formed By Company Merger

HOUSTON — IMC Drilling Mud, a new national-wide oil well drilling mud company with headquarters in Houston, was formed last Thursday.

The new company will be a division of International Minerals & Chemical Corporation, 54-year old mining and manufacturing company which has been a basic supplier of barite and bentonite, essential raw materials of drilling mud.

IMC Drilling Mud was formed through consolidation of three of the country's largest independent drilling mud companies, which had been acquired by International Minerals & Chemical Corporation last year and had been operated as independent subsidiaries. The three are Alamo Lumber Company, San Antonio, Texas; May Brothers, Inc., Lafayette, La.; and Mud Control Laboratories, Oklahoma City, Okla.

C. P. Loucks was named general manager and chief executive officer of the new company, with headquarters at 3801 Kirby Drive. Loucks formerly was general production manager of the parent company's Industrial Minerals Division.

Foreign Commentary

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

Among British political opinion and London newspapers alike the reaction to the death of Labor party leader Hugh Gaitskell seemed unanimous.

Said the Conservative Sunday Telegraph:

"It is a measure of Mr. Gaitskell's stature that his death has reduced the whole future of British politics to speculation."

The Sunday Express said that never before in modern British political history had the loss of a single leader dealt such a blow to a major party.

For Gaitskell was not only the helmsman of his party, he was also in many ways the designer of its present mould.

He had modified the party's program of nationalization for British industry, he had over come leftwing demands for ban-the-bomb and unilateral disarmament, and by sheer persistence led his party to the point where public opinion polls gave it 44.5 per cent of the vote and labeled him Britain's next prime minister.

Victor over Bevan

He had described himself as a poor hater, yet he was able to take on the flamboyant Nye Bevan, a better hater than most, and defeat him in 1955 for the party leadership.

A quiet man, he could be goaded to anger.

In Glasgow, followers of the Committee for Nuclear Disarmament attempted to disrupt a party rally which Gaitskell was addressing.

Snapped Gaitskell:

"Go and see what it is like to deal with Soviet police and Soviet tanks like the Hungarian people."

Gaitskell came from a middle class family, the son of a civil servant. He never walked in a picket line, yet early decided that "my future belongs to the working class."

He became a don at London University, and in the Labor landslide of 1945 began a meteoric rise in government. All of this without flash or color, but as an intellectual.

Successor on Spot

The party platform was Gaitskell's own. Whether British voters will accept his successor as the creator's image or only as a poor-carbon copy still must be determined.

Among possible successors there are two immediately outstanding. One is deputy leader George Brown, a likeable trade unionist who took over in Gaitskell's illness. The other is Harold Wilson, a brilliant man distrusted by some for his ambition.

It is not only over the Labor party that Gaitskell's figure still looms large. For the Conservatives of Prime Minister Harold Macmillan a break in Labor unity could mean a reprieve. For the upcoming Liberals of Jo Grimmond, it might mean a chance for fusion with Labor and an earlier chance than expected to participate in government.

Oil Industry Lawyer Hits Supreme Court's Recent Pricing Decision

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The gaping legal holes left by the Supreme Court last week in its Sun Oil Co. "good faith" pricing decision have come under fire from an astute oil industry lawyer.

General counsel Donald C. O'Hara of the National Petroleum Refiners Association, said in a report to NFRA members that the ruling had raised serious questions whether the Robinson-Patman Anti-Price Discrimination Act "is serving its purpose in petroleum marketing."

in litigation for more than six years. Yet today our lawyers cannot tell you when you can grant a discount to a dealer."

O'Hara gave a chronology of the Sun case and why he said marketers are still confused. He said that in 1954 the FTC said such price discounts were lawful. In 1955 it reversed itself "under pressure from a Senate committee" (a Kefauver anti-monopoly subcommittee which was pushing anti-good faith legislation) and held that such discounts were unlawful.

The court held unanimously, but with some reservations, that Sun violated the act in 1955 by granting a Jacksonville, Fla., filling station lessee a discount to meet price war competition without giving the same concession to other Sun dealers in the same areas.

Sun, a refiner-supplier only, argued the discount was lawful because it was given in "good faith" to meet competition. But the court countered that Sun itself was not in business at the retail level and hence the competition was the dealer's competition, not Sun's.

Held Same Position

It maintained the same position in upholding a trial examiner's findings in 1959. In 1961 the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals at New Orleans ruled for Sun that the discounts were lawful to meet "realities of the marketing place." But last week the Supreme Court ruled they were illegal.

The NPRA's lawyer said a rehearing was bound to raise a host of new questions. For example, he said, Justice Arthur J. Goldberg who wrote the Supreme Court opinion, said: "So long as the price-cutter does not receive a price 'break' from his own supplier, his lawful reductions in price are presumably a function of his own superior merit and efficiency."

Robinson-Patman was enacted 15 years ago as an amendment to the Clayton Anti-Trust Act. It was intended to protect small, independent merchants, such as filling station operators, from supplier-buyer pricing deals which froze them out of competition.

In the Sun case the court said in effect that had Sun's dealer competition been a refiner-supplier like Sun, Sun would have been on solid legal ground under a previous good faith decision. But it said Sun had failed to bring out "his distinction, and two justices — Potter Stewart and John M. Harlan — suggested Sun reopen its case before the Federal Trade Commission which filed the original discrimination charge.

Should Protect Independent

"Furthermore," he continued, "the basic intent of Robinson-Patman was to protect the independent merchant. Yet in the Sun case we have an independent-lessee dealer who was being driven out of business in competition with a large retail chain (Super Test, which has 65 stations)."

To Reopen Case

Sun President Robert Dunlop, still as much at sea as most industry marketers on what is or is not good faith competition, said this would be done.

"The FTC had no comment and said it would let the case take its natural course.

"The really unfortunate feature of the decision," O'Hara said, "is that it does not settle anything. Neither the oil industry nor the public has benefitted from price wars which have upset oil markets in the past year, and many would welcome a decision which would bring stability to those markets. The Robinson-Patman Act has now been law for 25 years and the Sun case alone has been

Five Oil, 14 Gas Wells Completed By Wildcaters

AUSTIN (UPI) — Wildcaters completed five oil and 14 gas wells during the week, bringing their 1963 totals to 22 oil and 49 gas wells, the Texas Railroad Commission said Saturday.

To date last year, wildcaters had completed 23 oil and 106 gas wells.

Wildcat oil finds were two in the Midland district and one each in the Houston, San Angelo and Wichita Falls districts.

Gas finds were eight in the Corpus Christi district, two in the Refugio district and one each in the Houston, Abilene, Midland and Pampa districts.

Regular drillers completed 203 oil and 56 gas wells for the week, raising their year's total to 683 oil and 177 gas wells. Last year to date they had 710 oil and 251 gas wells.

The average calendar day allowable increased 3,692 barrels to 2,741,705. A total of 7,654 fields were reported.

Slaughtering and meat packing is the most important industry of Illinois.

Royalty Owners Set To Carry Fight On Shell

ATLANTA, Tex. (Sp) — Preparing to carry on the battle with Shell Oil Company and other operators over levying processing and amortization costs against royalty owners in the condensate-rich Bryans Mill gas field, directors of the royalty owners association will meet Jan. 29 in Longview.

Call for the meeting at the Hotel Longview at 6 p.m. on that date was made by Ivan Dorsett of Atlanta, vice president of the Bryans Mill Royalty Owners Association, in the absence of its president, A. Y. Lewis, of Tyler.

Breaking the long honored practice of paying the royalty owner one-eighth of production clear of all operating charges, Shell, chief operator in the field and of the processing plant, has charged royalty owners not only their proportionate part of operating costs but also for depreciation of the production and processing facilities and for interest on invested capital without granting them a portion of ownership.

Shell's practice has touched off bitter opposition and controversy among royalty owners and stirred interest throughout the country, Dorsett said.

Directors of the Longview meeting, he added, will review the work of their executive committee toward solution of the matter and engineering and legal studies which have been made of the royalty owners' position.

Cancer Society Activities Are Reviewed At Breakfast

A breakfast meeting of the American Cancer Society was held at the Coronado Inn Wednesday morning. Clark W. Murff, Amarillo, new field representative for District 3-North, spoke briefly on ACS activities in this area. Each member and guest was introduced and a resume of their activities in the society was given by Mrs. Jack P. Foster, president.

Mrs. Homer D. Johnson, education chairman, was in charge of the program. A preview of the film-strip, "To Smoke or Not to Smoke" was shown by Joe Page, correlating with the increase of lung cancer. It is a statistical fact, Page said, that the increase of lung cancer in both men and women is parallel to the increase of the incidence of smoking. Of cancer deaths, lung cancer is number one among men and with the increase of smoking among women it is becoming number one for them also, it was stated.
