Right-to-Work Laws Just Protect Workers

By ED DELANEY

The state legislature of Wyoming, perhaps with the idea of stimulating its economic development in the immediate future, adopted a "right to work" law. Nineteen other states have such laws. One does not usually classify Wyoming among the highly industralized states, but many millions of dollars have been invested there in the past two or three years. Its coal production ranks fourth among states of this union, and Wyoming's known coal reserves perhaps exceed that of any other state. Undoubtedly the law makers there hoped to create a political climate that would attract investment and industries. One way to achieve that end, is to make certain that dictatorial labor bosses will not be able to order work stoppages because of some petty grievance fancied or otherwise. Whatever were the compelling reasons for Wyoming to adopt a right-to-work measure, it does indicate a nation-wide awareness of our people for the need of laws to curb the monopolistic power which is the exclusive privilege of organized labor, to the great cost and inconvenience of the For the most part the American people have not been fully informed regarding the singular and exclusive privileges that are enjoyed and abused by labor unions. The cost to the public is millions of dollars annually. For example, labor unions are classified as non-profit organizations. They are immune from taxation and from injunctions by federal courts. Under our postal laws certain non-profit organizations may mail their printed material at 50 per cent of the regular third-class postage rates. Taking advantage of that privilege, union publications, mounting to tens of millions are posted by the unions annually at the expense of the American taxpayers. A very large percentage of this deluge of mail is nothing but blatant political propaganda. It is partisan politics, having nothing whatever to do with collective bargaining or any other so-called welfare program of the unions. By contrast, many other worthy non-profit organizations, such as commerce, or a business men's organization that restricts itself to informative and educational programs, are denied any such preferential postal privilege.

The union bosses may expend any amount of their corporate funds to further the fortunes of a particular political party, or candidate and make no report to the election officials as to the amount of their expenditures. Corporations and individuals who contribute any sizable sums for the support of some party, candidate or proposition on the ballot, are obliged to report it.

are members of a union, may wish to support a certain political candidate or measure that is on the ballot. But their money, which they are forced to pay into the union treasury, is used to defeat the person or the proposition they favor. Any protest they might make could, and in reported instances, has, cost the member his job. If an employer or the management of a plant or business used such tactics to force an employe into voting for the candidate favored by the employer, he could and would be subject to the penalties of the law. Not so the labor unions. The American citizen feels he has an inalienable right to support the political party or candidate of ms choice and not be compelled to contribute toward a party or proposition to which he is opposed.

When and if more of our states enact laws that will curb politically favored labor unions, we will be moving nearer to national sanity and national solvency. Right - to - work laws, contrary to a misconception by some, do not outlaw union activities. They merely protect the worker in his freedom of choice - whether to join a union or not. No imperious union official can demand the dismissal of an employe who declines to pay tribute to the union as a condition of holding his job, or a strike being called at the plant. If this nation is to remain "the land of the free" everyone is entitled to freedom of choice.

Doctor's The Man To Ask About Specific Medicines By DR. WAYNE BRANDSTADT 0-In your answer to a question

Q-What is the cause of retinitis? Is there a cure?

A-Retinitis is an inflammation of the retina which lines the back of the inner surface of the eyeball. This surface transmits visual images to the brain. Retinitis usually causes a decrease in the range and acuteness of vision. There are a variety of causes which include nephritis (kidney disease), diabetes, leukemia, arteriosclerosis with high blood pressure, and exposure of the retina to the direct rays of the sun. Treatment of the underlying cause is of prime importance. It is generally necessary to protect the eyes from light, by using smoked glasses and eyedrops that contract the pupils.

There is a special kind of reretinitis called pigmentary degeneration of the retina. In this hereditary condition the sight is very poor at -night and the range of condition is progressive. Although many kinds of treatment have been tried, all have proved disappointing.

Q-I am a housewife, 64. I bruise very easily. The bruises look terrible, although they do not hurt. What would cause this? Is there any remedy?

A-In a younger person this is often caused by a deficiency of vitamin C. This could be true in your case, but as we grow older other causes must also be considered. For example: as the skin becomes less elastic, if the capillaries are damaged by being bumped, blood oozes out more readily than in a younger person. This is apparently more common in women than in men, and sometimes the bump that causes the damage is so slight that the person is totally unaware of it until the bruise appears beneath the

Q-A friend of mine claims that her alfalfa tea has life - giving properties. Is there any food value in alfalfa?

A-Faith is a wonderful thing, and alfalfa is a wonderful food for some domestic animals. Like' many other plants, it contains some vitamins and very few calories. Cabbage, cauliflower, and soybeans are better sources of the vitamin K found in alfalfa.

Some people are just crazy about alfalfa tea and it is in no way injurious to drink it, but I would be very skeptical of any claims that it can provide great special benefits. The same goes for the so-called health foods that contain alfalfa as one of their ingredients.

()-I am a 66 - year - old man. About a year ago I had a cancer removed from my bladder. Since then my doctor has been giving me female hormone shots. Is this a recognized method of treatment? How long should it be continued? Does it have any bad effects?

A-This is a recognized means of preventing the early return or spread of cancer of the bladder. Your doctor will adjust the dosage so that there will be no undesirable side effects of any importance. This treatment should be continued indefinitely.

Please send your questions and comments to Dr. Wayne G. Brand stadt, M.D., in care of this paper. While Dr. Brandstadt cannot asswer individual letters, he will and swer letters of general interest to future columns.
