Newspaper Enterprise Assn. When the proud owners of a new home show you through the rooms and around the grounds, they often say, almost apologetically, "Of course, there are so many things we have to do to the place - but we can't do them all at once."

But that is really the fun of owning a home of your own. There are always things to be done, changes to be made, mistakes to be realized and corrected.

Houses have to grow and change just as people do. A house that started out "perfect" with every stick of furniture just right and every shrub in exactly the ideal location wouldn't really be much of a challenge.

You can't improve on perfection. If your house suited you exactly "as-is," it wouldn't give you much to think about or to plan for or to wait for.

So don't feel apologetic because the patio that is going to be "right here" some day may not take shape for some time, or because the furniture you are making-do with isn't what you intend to have some day.

You may change every one of those ideas before your house is ever complete. Or you may eventually do all you plan, and a whole lot more.

The important thing is: the house is yours - to grow along with your family, to keep pace with the lives you are leading,

> New Aerial Supply Concept

WASHINGTON (ANF)-The Precision Drop Glider, a new concept in the aerial delivery of supplies, has been successfully tested at Yuma, Arizona, by the U.S. Army Transportation Research Command, Fort year-old girl has been strangled, Eustis, Virginia. Using the flexible wing conor as they question people at the drop glider is designed to delarge quantities of supplies into areas of limited space. Priority cargo such as ammunition, food, medicine, etc., can be delivered by an aircraft without actually flying over the nagging matter of conscience

The paraglider wing, fabricated of extremely lightweight. flexible, plastic-coated material, is folded into a compact package similar to a parachute pack and attached to a cargo container. As the container is ejected, a static line attached to the aircraft begins a sequence of operations to deploy the glider, which carries the cargo container to earth. high degree of reliability was achieved in more than 130 ons flown at Army's Yuma Test Station, Yuma, Arizona. system is ultimately designed to deliver cargoes as heavy as 5,000 pounds.
