91 FAMILIES ARE 'ADOPTED'

INDIVIDUALS URGED TO PROVIDE CHEER FOR NEEDY

Christmas baskets will be taken to at least 91 families on Christmas eve, for yesterday that number of families was removed from a list of more than 180 which will spend a bleak and dreary Christmas unless local groups or individuals share with them.

The Good Fellow plan of distributing Christmas cheer, sponsored locally by the American Legion, proved popular yesterday at the city hall where the Good Fellow group maintains a desk and a list of names of persons and families.

The First Baptist church took 42 names off the list, the J. C. D. club, 12 names. Numerous individuals "adopted" families for the Christmas season.

A question frequently asked at the desk is "what and how much shall I put in the basket?" Of course, it was said, that depends upon the giver.

First Reports To Be Made at Nine Tomorrow

Pampa's Supplementary Relief Fund was in full swing today with 60 workers scouring the city with upwards of 1,000 prospect cards in the campaign to raise $5,000 to supplement federal relief during the winter months.

The drive got off to its start yesterday afternoon and first reports on amounts collected are to be made at a meeting of fund solicitors to be held at 9 a. m. tomorrow at the Chamber of Commerce rooms at City Hall.

Jake Garman, general chairman of the fund financial drive committee, issued an appeal to all workers to attend the meeting tomorrow morning and to be prepared at that time to make a report on pledges made.

"At this time," Mr. Garman stated today, "we will be able to get a definite idea of the drive's progress, and to release figures on the amounts raised in the first two days of the campaign."

ARMED DRIVE TO RESCUE KAI SHEK ORDERED

JAPAN CONSIDERS HOW INCIDENT COULD CAUSE WAR

(By The Associated Press.) SHANGHAI, Dec. 16.—An army to rescue Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek if alive and avenge him if dead was reported unofficially to have been voted today by the executive yuan (governing committee) of the Chinese government at Nanking.

The report came from Chinese sources considered authoritative. The goal of the punitive expedition was stated to be Sianfu, Shensi province, the stronghold of Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang, who kidnapped the generalissimo, China's most powerful individual, last week.

Official sources have been unable to state whether Chiang is alive or dead and there were rumors a punitive expedition might result in his execution if he still lives.

Certain Chinese sources interpreted the report of the decision for a punitive campaign as indicating the belief of government officials that further efforts to negotiate in the present chaotic situation are hopeless.

HUNT EXTENDS OVER UTAH'S HILLY WILDS

SEVEN PERSONS LOST IN MISSING AIRLINER

SALT LAKE CITY, Dec. 16 (AP)—Fog and rain in which an airliner vanished with seven persons, grounded most searching planes today and hampered groups on foot and horseback in Utah's mountain wilds.

Poor visibility halted a well-organized air hunt and officials of Western Air Express, operator of the 10-passenger transport ungrounded from in more than 30 hours, placed chief reliance in ground crews.

Hundreds of volunteers—CCC enrollees, sheriff's deputies, ranchers and mountain vigilantes—scattered in a systematic hunt along the precipitous slopes of 12,000-foot Mt. Timpanogos, 25 miles southeast of Salt Lake City.

Somewhere on that monarch of the Wasatch range, anxious searchers feared the lost liner may have crashed yesterday with its occupants, a score of persons reported, hearing a plane in distress, in the rain and mud before Tuesday dawn.

BRITAIN CARRIES ON

The most noteworthy thing about the supposedly world-shaking abdication of the King-Emperor, at a critical moment in British and world history, was the way the British people behaved.

Edward was immensely popular. The situation was full of danger. Britain and the "dominions beyond the sea" are "democratic," even more than many nations calling themselves republics.

The lower classes of England, a majority of the voters, were obviously for Edward and resentful of what looked like an attempt to "smuggle the King off the throne over a week-end."

Then suddenly a political miracle happened, as many a time before in England's history. The "governing class" tightened their ranks. The labor party and other popular groups relaxed their opposition.

Suddenly one king was out of office and another in, the tension relaxed and life was resumed as usual. Kings may come and go, but the Empire stands.

USEFULNESS IN CITIZENS

Another alien seeking American citizenship recently has failed to receive it because he was opposed to bearing arms. The judge rebuked him sternly, saying those who refuse to bear arms "are of no use in this country."

"Your citizenship is denied once and for all time," he added. "If you aren't willing to bear arms, we don't want you."

That is pretty hard on a lot of conscientious objectors who remained respected citizens during the World War. It also places military service far above other essential and patriotic services to country.

Many Americans agree with the judge. There are others who disapprove such decisions. The latter feel that if war actually came, the problem of the objectors could be met somehow by setting them to work at other important tasks.

Perhaps opinion on this point will not be clarified and settled until the people who are opposed to bearing arms solve the war question by making it unnecessary for anybody to bear arms.

DAILY WASHINGTON LETTER

By Rodney Dutcher

WASHINGTON.—One of the big news stories of 1937 will concern a national conference in Washington of important groups and individuals favoring a constitutional amendment or some other check on the U. S. Supreme Court.

The gathering will have the unpublicized approval of President Roosevelt. Its purpose will be to sift and discuss the innumerable and widely varying proposals for some curb on the court's unrestrained power to invalidate national and state legislation.

No date has been set for the conference and no chairman selected, pending return to Washington of certain outstanding senators and representatives who are expected to play conspicuous roles.

Efforts will be made to persuade Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska, progressive sponsor of the last constitutional amendment and former chairman of the Senate Judiciary committee, to accept the chairmanship.

Outstanding lawyers, high New Deal officials, governors, constitutional experts, and deans of law schools will be among the delegates. Although the assembly will have a liberal tinge, many conservatives will be invited and it is hoped to get representation from all shades of opinion.

The American Federation of Labor, the Committee for Industrial Organization, and the American Farm Bureau Federation are fairly certain to be represented.

Senator Henry F. Ashurst of Arizona may also be conspicuous. He is chairman of the Senate Judiciary committee and probably will hold hearings on his own and other congressional proposals for a constitutional amendment.

So widely do proposals for an amendment or other measure vary that those actively promoting the conference—which is likely to be held in January or February—privately express belief that Roosevelt himself must come to the support of any formula which is to receive relatively united backing and have a good chance of passing Congress.

It is generally agreed that Roosevelt has worked out no formula and that he may be guided by the deliberations of this conference.

The only possible thing that might block the holding of the conference fairly soon would be Roosevelt's decision that it should be postponed.

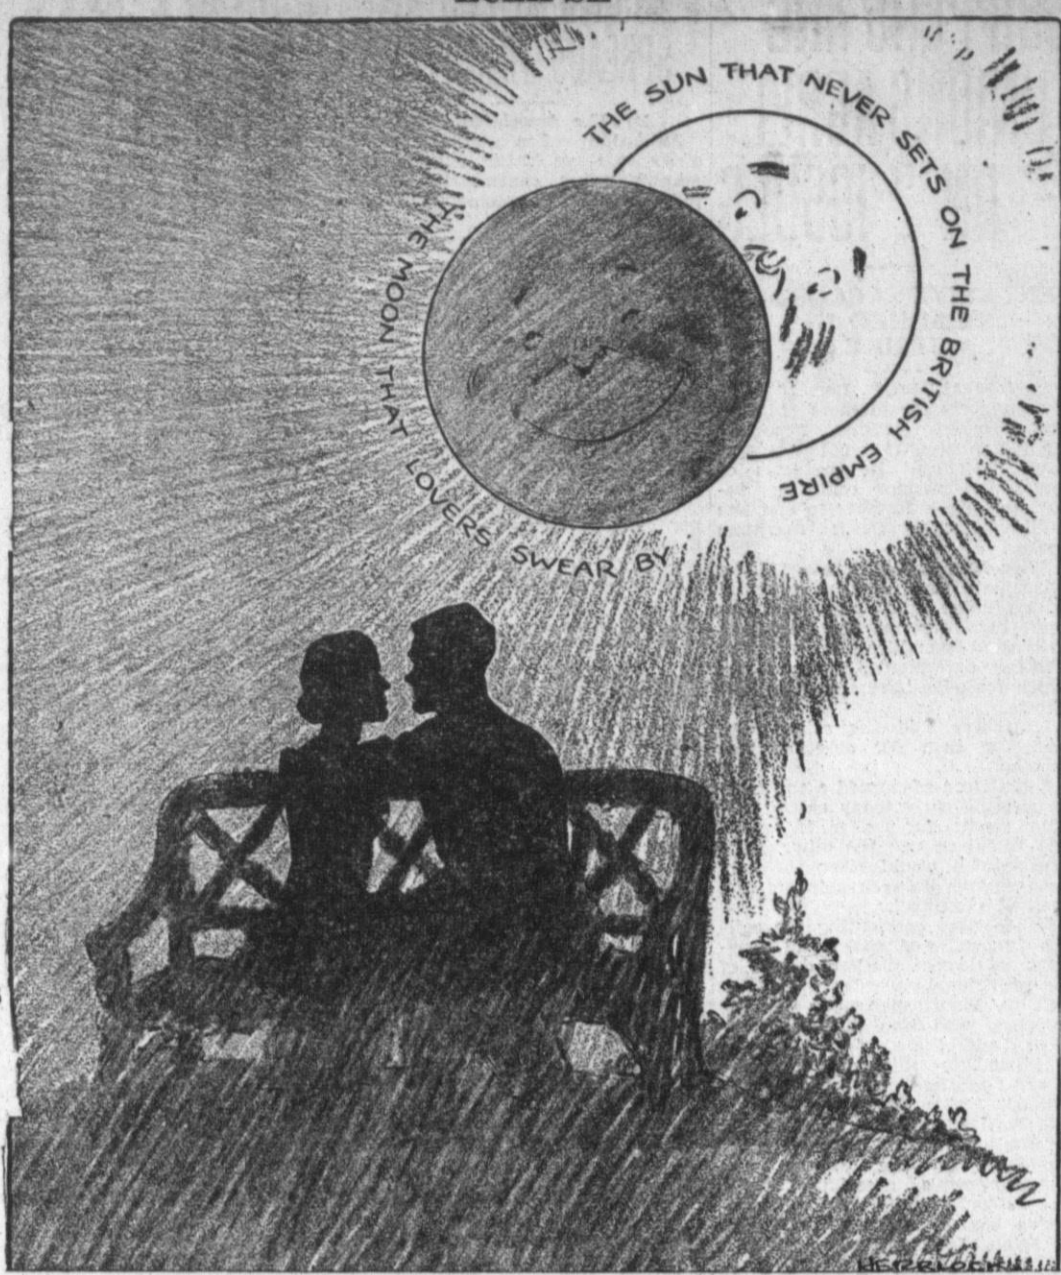

John L. Lewis of the Mine Workers and certain other leaders of the insurgent Committee for Industrial Organization were secretly disappointed by the recent convention of the American Federation of Labor in Tampa—disappointed because the federation didn't expel their unions from its ranks.

That would have cleared the air, they felt, putting the A. F. of L. in the position of having busted itself wide open and creating a new national labor federation such as most C. I. O. leaders really seek.

And the only reason the craft union leaders who run the federation didn't expel the C. I. O. unions was their realization that expulsion was what Lewis and his friends really wanted.

Hugh Johnson seems to think he invented the NRA scheme, but Judge K. M. Landis started the first one and Will Hays the second.

ECLIPSE

MAN ABOUT MANHATTAN

NEW YORK.—The manager of a Broadway musical show tells of circulating a questionnaire among the mademoiselles of the chorus in order to obtain data for ballyhoo purposes.

was coming, and after my dance have taken me to the prison, and in the morning my sorrowful mother came and carried the bad child to home. The newspapers written about that and I was so ashamed, but always said I directly show to everybody I'll be an artist and nothing to do with me. And after any years happened, and my mother is happy, too.

Name: "Tullah." Sex: "Female." Age: "Really 24 but 22 for the newspapers."

What is your ambition: "My only ambition is to play one great Egyptian film about the life of the famous Queen Nefretete (her statue is in the Berlin Neuseum museum) and everybody say I'm incarnation because I've the same the head, the same body, the same looking like she, and I've the only desire to play her interesting, nice, sentimental life in film. I must do it and I'll sure for when it's the now plus ultra my dreams."

How did you decide on show business as a career: "I was always talented to show business directly bound. Never learned dancing. I arranged the dances what I do and my sister learned from me. The fact after 2 years since I'm dancer I'm engaged in French Casino New York proves I'm really talented and can have hopes in future."

Relate any interesting experiences you have had in private life: "I was in the bus talking Hungarian with my sister and one good looking man spoke to us in our language, and in any minutes asked me to marry, but I refused him because one German is waiting in Berlin already and in 4 years marry me. When I was 16, school girl. I was a fugitive from home to one other town to dance in theater, and I had there already great success 3 days when policeman

HOW'S YOUR HEALTH

SERA, VACCINES, ETC. II By serum is meant the liquid portion of an animal's or of a human being's blood. By immune serum is meant serum containing disease-resisting agents.

Immunum sera may be derived from animals or human beings who have experienced certain diseases. Immune sera are today employed in the treatment of such diseases as diphtheria, measles, scarlet fever, tetanus, pneumonia, anthrax, botulism, etc., and also in the treatment of poisonous snake bites.

Immune sera usually prove effective in those diseases in which the primary damage is effected not by the germ itself, but by the poison which it produces. Vaccines, on the other hand, are chiefly employed in those diseases which are due to the direct action of the germs themselves on the tissues of the body immediately to their location.

Of course, this distinction between the ways in which germs affect the body is more or less arbitrary and relative, for in a measure all germs produce toxic substances. On the other hand, the difference may be quite marked for, as may be seen in the instance of the botulinous germ, the micro-organism itself may be swallowed with relative impunity while its toxins even when ingested in minute quantities can cause rapid death.

AROUND HOLLYWOOD

HOLLYWOOD.—Doris Dudley thinks she looked like a "very badly bred horse" in her first screen appearance. She told about it one afternoon after a two-hour homeward dash, by motor from Palm Springs to keep an appointment. (There are some players, you know, who will regard their absence in Palm Springs as sufficient reason for telling horn-blowing Gabriel to wait.)

the talk of her resemblance to Katharine Hepburn by appearing in a picture with that star.

"I adore Kate," she said, "but it never helps to have people think you're just a copy of some other actress."

She thought if she played Hepburn's daughter in "A Woman Rebels" and people saw the two of them together they'd see how different they were, really. But no—

"They made me up to look like Hepburn, with the result I didn't resemble her and I didn't resemble myself—I just looked like that horse I told you about."

And that was why 19-year-old Doris, daughter of New York dramatic critic Bide Dudley, gave up her $1,500 a week contract (very unusual for a movie newcomer) to go on her own in pictures. She's an independence-craver, and perish the thought (she can become very indignant about this) that her father's position helped to pave the way. She is determined, furiously, on her own. So let her brother Bronson, 17, and her mother, who she said proudly, "who is really going places in the theater."

She is very proud of having a "home of her own," and it is an interesting menage—and manager. She has three servants, and her pets include several mutt dogs, a Chihuahua, a blooded Dalmatian (a gift from Doris to Margaret Sullivan, who Doris kept it) and a lion cub which (Doris will take oath of this) sleeps in her bedroom.

"I'm crazy about animals, can't resist 'em, but then they always grow up and I have to give them away. The lion is getting teeth and will have to go soon," she said ruefully. "I had a skunk once, deodorized, but none of my friends would have it as a gift."

"I've a great fondness for riding and swimming, astrologers, fortune tellers, and a keen desire to live down "all the foolish, impulsive things I've done in my life."

The Wrong Murderer

CHAPTER 47 STRANGE MEETING

Everything was quite quiet except for an occasional puff of wind rattling the windows and an occasional board creaking. Elsa shivered slightly. The creepy atmosphere of that house affected her nerves; she had an uneasy foreboding that something dreadful was going to happen.

Seconds passed; they seemed to drag like hours. She wished the night's work was over and everything settled satisfactorily.

Very faintly from the distance she heard a church clock strike eleven, the hour of the appointment. But Mahony's note had said he might be late; she would probably have to wait some time yet. She wished he would hurry up and come; she dreaded the interview with him, and wanted to get it over.

A slight sound somewhere outside the house caught her attention—the sound of footsteps. She caught her breath sharply in mingled fear and anticipation. Mahony was last. With nerves strained and tense she waited for him to enter the room.

Light footsteps mounted the front doorsteps and crossed the hall. Elsa stood rooted, waiting; surely those footsteps were not Mahony's. The door of the room opened and Ruth Fraser entered.

For a long second the two girls stood looking at one another. Then Ruth spoke.

"Where's Terence?" she asked. "I . . . I don't know," said Elsa. "He's not here yet."

Faced by Ruth's accusing glance she felt oddly guilty. Certainly the plan she had formed was intended to help Mahony, but would Ruth see that? She felt that she must justify her own action, make Ruth see that she was acting for the best.

"What do you want to see Terence for?" asked Ruth. "Is this another trap you've set for him?"

"No," answered Elsa. "At least . . . not exactly a trap. I . . . I want to help him, to get him out of the country."

Ruth frowned slightly. "How do you mean—not exactly a trap?" she demanded. "Is it a trap, or isn't it? Are you betraying Terence again?"

"That stung Elsa slightly. "I'm not betraying him," she answered hotly. "I want to help him, even if I have to do it against his will. Call it a trap if you like, but this is what I'm doing."

With that she blurted out the whole plan which Lawson and she had conceived. Ruth listened; her face grew paler, but she made no comment until Elsa had finished. Then she spoke, and her voice was curiously flat and colorless.

"I believe you meant well," she said. "But you've betrayed Terence to his enemies. Lawson doesn't want to help you send Terence abroad. He wants to kill Terence, as he killed your uncle."

Her voice broke suddenly. "Oh, Elsa, why couldn't you have left us alone," she burst out, "were quite happy without anybody's help. And now . . ."

There was sheer tragedy in her tone; her face was deathly and her dark eyes were stricken. Elsa stepped forward quickly and took her hand. "Ruth—don't speak like that. It isn't true," she cried. "Mr. Lawson didn't kill my uncle; I can't think where you got hold of such an idea. He wants to help Terence; he does really. Believe me, Ruth, everything is going to come out all right; I promise you it will."

"Very affecting," said a voice from the doorway. "But, unfortunately, not quite accurate."

The two girls turned. Lawson was standing in the doorway of the room. He was smiling, and at the sight of his smile Elsa's sudden dread doubt invaded Elsa's heart.

"This is indeed a pleasure," he went on suavely. "I'd no idea that I was to meet Miss Fraser this evening. I believe you were talking about me a moment ago, Miss Fraser."

Ruth faced him defiantly. "I was telling Elsa that it was you who killed her uncle," she said bluntly. "And it was you."

"Oh, yes, I killed him all right," admitted Lawson lightly. "Unluckily, owing to our young friend Mahony's interference, my plans for kidnaping Miss Little went somewhat astray, and my plans for holding you, Miss Fraser, were also rather interfered. However, those small mistakes can easily be rectified tonight. And I don't think our friend Mahony will be in a position to trouble me much longer."

He stood there, a picture of triumphant malice, smiling at the two girls. Elsa drew away from him, staring at him with utter horror in her eyes.

"It . . . it was you who killed my uncle?" she gasped in an unbelieving tone.

Lawson laughed. He was enjoying this situation, savoring every second of it.

"It was I," he admitted boastfully. "And as Miss Fraser has remarked, I have every intention of killing Mahony tonight. This place is entirely surrounded by my men, and Mahony is coming out here alone. I'm really afraid that there's nothing you can do about it."

There was a pause during which nobody spoke. Then footsteps were heard approaching the front door. Mahony was arriving to keep his appointment.

"There was a tense, dramatic moment of waiting as the footsteps crossed the hall. The door of the room opened and Mahony appeared in the doorway. Then Lawson spoke quickly.

"Come in," he said. "But don't start any funny business, because if you do it will be rather unfortunate for these two girls."

He got that out quickly, because the last thing he wanted was a fight between Mahony and himself in that room. Mahony, however, showed no inclination to fight. His hand was in the side pocket of his coat, but that was merely a precaution. If Lawson started anything, he did not want to be taken by surprise.

He advanced quite calmly and casually into the room; his expression was serene and unperturbed. "Sorry I'm a bit late," he said to Elsa, and then to Ruth: "Hallo Ruth, what are you doing here? I didn't know you'd been invited to the party."

"I wasn't invited. I found out you were coming and so I came too," answered Ruth.

She paused. She couldn't understand his manner at all. He had been so surprised at seeing Lawson there.

"Terence—don't you understand that it's a trap?" she burst out. "They've got the place surrounded by men, and they want to kill you."

"Oh yes, I knew it was a trap all right. That was why I came," answered Mahony.

"It wasn't a trap—not really," put in Elsa desperately. "I . . . I didn't mean it to be a trap. I wanted to help you. He . . . he tricked me."

"That's all right," Miss Little, said Mahony. "You thought it was all part of a film in which you were playing the leading part, but you didn't realize that Lawson was the director. Is that right?"

Smiling, he turned towards Lawson.

"Well, and what now?" he asked. "What's in the big scene for tonight?"

Lawson also was puzzled by Mahony's manner. It made him feel uneasy. He did not understand how Mahony could be so cool and unperturbed. Didn't the fellow realize his danger? Or was he trying to bluff his way out of it?

"The big scene on the programme for tonight is that you get what's coming to you," he snarled. "You're finished, Mahony—finished. I've got you where I want you at last. This place is entirely surrounded by my men. I advise you to submit quietly. If anything happens to me, or if any of my men get hurt, these two girls will pay for it; every blow you strike will be a blow struck at them."

Mahony looked at him with a goodly smile. "I don't intend to let my pistol interest. He took out his cigarette case and lit a cigarette casually.

"You're a clever fellow, Lawson," he remarked dispassionately. "Also, unfortunately, you're about the biggest swine unhung. And hanging, really, would be much too good for you. Which is a pity, because I have an idea that hanging within the precincts of some jail is most likely to be your end."

"Whatever my end is going to be, you won't live to see it," retorted Lawson viciously. "I've wasted enough time talking to you. Now I'm going to show what happens to people like you when they come up against me."

CLARK GABLE REFUSES TO SELL OLD 'WRECK'

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 16 (AP)—The delapidated automobile that Carole Lombard gave Clark Gable as a "valentine" is "not for sale at any price," Gable told salesmen and souvenir hunters today. Specifically, he refused $1,000 for the ancient chariot. "I've become attached to it," Gable explained. The car came to him from Miss Lombard last Valentine's day. It was very old and in a state of disintegration. But the actress had painted large red hearts and rosy cupid on the white hood and chassis, and Gable treasures it now. As a matter of fact, he spurned his larger automobile recently, and escorted Miss Lombard to a glittering premiere in the old wreck. Souvenir hunters have sought to buy it, and salesmen made attractive trade-in offers on new cars. But Gable won't sell. "I'm very sentimental," he grinned.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning! . . . The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sick and the world looks pink. Laxatives are only makeshifts. A more bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Hermon, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Stubbornly refuse anything else. 5c.

WAR? Steel trade insiders say that European countries are in our market for shell rounds. It is an unfinished steel product which is used for the manufacture of projectiles. This far—it is said—the specifications received are identical with orders placed by Charles M. Schwab when he returned from Europe in 1914 with a British government order to the exploding tune of $80,000,000. To substantiate the "war order" there is evidence that European mills are withholding steel wire output. South American countries always took their requirements from Europe. Now they are flooding American markets with their demands. Orders are coming in so fast that prices have been increased $6 to $7 a ton over the past three weeks. Steel wire is used for barbed wire purposes.

HEADACHE. The Tennessee Valley Authority's research department has a new fertilizer. According to reports the product is just a plain miracle. What is it? Triple superphosphate! That's the name. It's made from phosphate rock. It grows anything anywhere. Costs of production are low. The process? Large quantities of cheap electricity are required—volt after volt—to fire electric furnaces which produce high test phosphoric acid. The dope is that Triple superphosphate is a plant food extraordinary. As a result of the discovery fertilizer manufacturers have a severe headache.

NEW. Baltimore & Ohio Railroad has turned to business getting in a most unique way. When the Standard Oil people wanted to educate the Chinese to use their product, oil lamps were distributed. When Gillette wanted the public to use his blades he distributed razors in which only his blades would fit. Now Baltimore & Ohio is doing something along those sales lines. The carrier is expanding its "agricultural department" which sends out specially equipped cars to test the soil located in the territory the road serves. It teaches farmers how to use lime and fertilizer to increase growth. Result: Lime and fertilizer freight come into the territory and increased crop shipments go out. This new plan is working rather nicely.

REASON. Speculative interests are mystified by the spurt in market value of the Electric Power & Light equities. They can't understand why other utility issues didn't follow along. There's a reason. The company is

OIL FLOW IS AT NEW HIGH

DEMAND FOR GASOLINE IS INCREASING IN MID-CONTINENT

TULSA, Okla., Dec. 16 (AP)—In the face of a daily crude oil production unparalleled in the history of the industry, leaders in the oil business carried on cheerfully today and insisted everything was rosy.

The daily production of 3,119,500 barrels computed by the American Petroleum Institute for the week ending December 12 was a new all-time high, a situation which at this time in previous years would have brought urgent pleas for immediate curtailment.

However, oilmen were prone to dismiss the production figure as something to be expected. The sustained heavy demand for refined products, particularly gasoline, had some quarters gasping.

There has been no sign of a seasonal letup, said one authority. "Sometimes I just wonder where all the gasoline we are making is going. The retailers ask for more and more and we've got to keep running to supply them."

"I believe firmly that today there is less than 18 days supply of gasoline in storage in the mid-continent. The demand comes out of the great Midwest which uses up 80 per cent of the refined products of this area. Gasoline actually is scarce."

Technicians pointed out the week's flow was traceable to the five per cent increase allowable by the state regulating bodies in Oklahoma, Kansas and Texas. Many producers let their wells run to fulfill their allowances early in the month.

Investigation of Archbishop Looms

LONDON, Dec. 16 (AP)—Under a deluge of letters from constituents protesting the Archbishop of Canterbury's censure of former King Edward, members of the house of commons delved today into the affairs of the British Broadcasting company.

The BBC, government-controlled radio monopoly in England, broadcast the address Sunday by the head of England's church, rebuking the departed monarch for his desire to marry Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson as a violation of "Christian principles of marriage."

The commons examined internal conditions of the BBC and it was believed a general debate would provide an opportunity for members who might want to question whether the primate's address had prior cabinet endorsement.
