Mate Wounded by Self-Inflicted Shots

By RAY RODGERS

A family fight which started last weekend ended today in the shooting death of a 32-year-old Pampa housewife and the mother of eight children. Her husband was transferred from Highland General Hospital to Amarillo for emergency brain surgery.

Sheriff's officers said the man, Albert Fay (Ab) Branscum, 35, apparently shot his wife in the head with a .22 automatic pistol and then turned the gun on himself. Hospital attendants said Branscum has two bullets lodged in his brain and is listed near death.

The shooting took place about 9 a.m. at the couple's modest home located at 1242 Farley, just outside the Pampa city limits.

A neighbor, Mrs. Frank Holman, who lives across the street, told officers she saw the couple drive up to their house and walk inside.

"Seconds later," she said, "I saw Mrs. Branscum stumble out of the house, her face splattered with blood. She grabbed onto the front porch and then fell into the yard. About that time, I heard a gunshot come from inside the house and phoned police."

When officers arrived, Mrs. Branscum was lying dead in a pool of blood in the front yard, about one foot from the cement porch. Branscum was found lying in a pool of blood, in the kitchen.

The .22 pistol was next to Branscum's body. Sheriff Rufe Jordan said he theorized that as soon as the couple entered the back door of the house, Branscum grabbed the gun and fired point blank into the face of his wife, striking her in the right eye. He then fired two more times, striking her at the base of the skull and near the left collar bone.

Jordan said she then apparently staggered to the telephone and attempted to phone. The receiver was off the hook when officers arrived. From there, she stumbled into the living room and then walked back into the kitchen and fell out the back door. She struggled along side the couple's '58 model station wagon to the front of the house. She then staggered to the front porch, clutched a porch banister, and then fell dead in the yard.

Branscum apparently shot himself standing near the kitchen sink of the four room wood frame house.

He was employed by the J. T. Richardson-Trucking Company, located on Price Rd. Richardson told officers Branscum worked until 3 a.m. today when he left for home.

Neighbors said the couple had been having domestic trouble for the past several days and thought they had been separated since the weekend. A relative said that he had threatened his wife earlier this week following a domestic argument.

The Branscums' eight children, ranging in age from 1 to 13, were staying with relatives this morning when the shooting occurred.

Officers found another pistol located beneath the seat of the station wagon with the cylinder missing.

A neighbor said Mrs. Branscum had removed the cylinder, which housed the bullets of the revolver, this morning and told her oldest child to take it to a neighbors, apparently fearing her husband would carry out the earlier threat.

Branscum was rushed by Duenkel Carmichael Ambulance to Highland General about 9:10. He was transferred to Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo about 11:15 to undergo emergency brain surgery.

US Views Plan For Attaches To 'Save Face'

MOSCOW (UPI)—The United States is considering a plan that would "save face" for three American military attaches accused as spies by the Soviet Union, informed sources said today.

The plan would have the three officers stop off briefly in Moscow on their way back from a trip to Tokyo, then leave a short time later.

The sources said the move also would serve to soften adverse Western publicity about the incident and avert possible damage to efforts to improve East-West relations.

There was no confirmation or comment from the U.S. Embassy about the reported "face-saving" move.

Soviet sources said the Russians themselves indicated they are willing to forget the espionage charges they brought against the three Americans and a British colleague. The Soviets had hinted that they might expel the four if they returned. But Western observers said they doubted the Kremlin would take such action at this time. The observers said they felt the Russians want to maintain good relations with the West.

The three American officers are due here by air Friday from New Delhi after completing a trouble-ridden, trans-Siberian train journey to Japan.

The United States and Britain have accused the Russians of violating diplomatic immunity to search the officers and seize notebooks, photographs and cameras in their Khabarovsk hotel room Sept. 28-29.

The Soviet Union has countered this charge by claiming—and publishing some purported evidence—the officers were really engaged in espionage on orders from the Pentagon.

The Kremlin wants to forget the trans-Siberian railroad "espionage" incident, a semi-official Soviet source said today.

Five-Year-Old 'Heard' Slain Brother Crying

LONGVIEW, Tex. (UPI)—Five-year-old Rex Crowder Jr. knew where his little brother was. He kept telling police he heard him crying.

But five-year-olds generally aren't very important people around the house when a kidnap search is going on.

Rex was right though. Because he was, Rex's mother was in a hospital room today charged with murdering her baby son.

Rex's little brother, 22-month-old Ricky Dell, disappeared Sunday night. His mother, Mrs. Rex Crowder, 25, told police the toddler was taken from her car when she stopped to buy stationery to write to her husband, an airman stationed in the Philippines.

She said there was "a blue car, about a 1952 model," parked next to hers that was gone when she returned, and may have been driven by the kidnaper.

FBI Joined Hunt
The FBI joined the hunt, and hundreds of city police, sheriff's deputies and volunteers combed the city and its outskirts for days hunting for clues.

Mrs. Crowder made a tearful radio broadcast. "Bring back my son unharmed," she implored the kidnaper. "and I will not press charges."

"All I want is my baby back," she said. Sunday night, Monday and Tuesday passed. The only clues were some telephoned tips to police. All were checked out and found false.

But little Rex Jr. kept telling police he knew where Ricky was, said Asst. Police Chief Robert Tutt. He was near "a red sign outside of town."

So Detective Lt. Earl Claxton took Rex Jr. and his mother for a ride, to look at hills—Rex had mentioned a hill. But the little boy said they were not the right hills—"it was a long curving road."

That gave Claxton an idea. He headed for a stretch of Highway 281 north of Longview. The red signs—stop signs—Rex had mentioned were on an incline going up the side of a hill.

The mother, the little boy and the detective got out of the car. "O my God! My baby! My baby!" screamed Mrs. Crowder.

She dashed over to the crumpled little body on the soft, sandy soil.

Ricky was dead. Authorities said he had apparently died of exposure about 14 hours earlier. He was wearing only a T-shirt, diaper and sandals. The temperature dropped into the 40s in this area the past few nights as a cold front moved through.

Police immediately theorized that Rex knew where the body was because he had seen his mother throw Ricky—still alive—down into the gully. "All indications point to that," said an investigator for the district attorney's office.

Mrs. Crowder collapsed, apparently insensible, and was taken off to Good Shepherd Hospital, and locked in a room with bars on the window as murder with malice charges were filed against her.

Mrs. Crowder, it was learned, had a history of mental disorder. She reported Rex Jr. kidnapped some time ago, but he was found 8 hours later, and nothing further was done.

Airman Lt. Rex Crowder Sr., the dead boy's father, was headed home from Clark Field in the Philippines on emergency leave. The Crowder family last lived at Great Falls Mont. when Crowder was stationed there.

Dr. Joe Donaldson, Pampa physician, has been named chairman of the Gray County branch of Texas for Goldwater. Texas for Goldwater is a non-partisan organization affiliated with the National Citizens for Goldwater - Miller organization. State co-chairman of Texas for Goldwater are Hardy Hollers of Austin and William Robert Smith of San Antonio, both attorneys.

Hollers ran against Lyndon Johnson for Congress in 1946. Smith was state chairman of the Democrats for Eisenhower in 1946 and of Democrats for Nixon in 1960.

Motorists have been parking free for the next two months on certain meters in the downtown area. The test period is nearing an end and recommendations of the merchants will be discussed tomorrow.

Recommendations are known to include a number of time changes for meters and the activating of many meters now on the "free" list.

Other business will include further consideration of two applications for franchises covering installation of coaxial cable television service in Pampa.

The meeting at 8:30 a.m. tomorrow takes the place of this week's regular Tuesday meeting which was postponed because of the attendance of city officials at the annual Municipal League convention in Dallas.

U.S. Beatle Fans Found in London

LONDON (UPI)—Two teenagers from Cleveland, Ohio, who came to England three weeks ago so they could be near the Beatles, are going home today, U.S. Embassy spokesman announced.

The girls, Martha Schendell and Janice Hawkins, both 16, were picked up by London police Wednesday night. Scotland Yard officials said they were "none the wiser" for the experience.

They spent the night at a hotel here, and were taken to a police station this morning. They were picked up there by an embassy limousine, which presumably was to take them to the airport.

"The girls have money and will be leaving under their own steam," the embassy spokesman said. "Of course, we will try to see that they get to the airport and onto the plane."

They have done nothing wrong. They are not really being "sent back."

RICKY DELL CROWDER body found

DEATH SCENE — This ghastly omen of death, a skull and crossbones, was found at the scene of the slaying of a Pampa housewife today. On the blood-splattered floor is the telephone Mrs. Glenna Branscum, 32, was thought to be using before her death at her home, 1242 Farley, about 9 a.m. Her husband, Albert Branscum, 35, who police say killed his wife, is near death with self-inflicted wounds.

Textbook Panel OK'd for Pampa

A local textbook examining committee of 15 members was approved today by the Pampa School Board.

The committee's chief decisions this year will be on selection of arithmetic study books in the first six elementary grades and biology textbooks in the high school 10th grade.

The elementary grade arithmetic books will be concerned with a new approach to teaching methods.

There already is controversy over the biology textbooks. Three high school textbooks being considered on the state level have been accused of teaching "godless evolution." They have become the center of a controversy known as the "monkey war."

A hearing is scheduled next Wednesday before the state education agency's textbook committee. Both sides are expected at that time to present their arguments.

The anti-evolution forces say the three textbooks take too strong a stand and present evolution as a known fact, not just a theory that may or may not be true.

The local textbook committee will make its selections of all books from a list of five in each category selected by the state committee.

Pampa school officials will receive eight sets of all books submitted so that they may be checked by the local committee and any citizen who may be interested.

The local committee will go into a study of all books submitted in January and will make recommendations to the school board in March. All books must get final approval of the board.

After ratification is given by the board to the local textbook committee's recommendations, to the textbook division of the Texas Education Agency.

Girl Scouting Builds Strength, Character

By MILDRED FOWLER Executive Director

There is a word used by the natives in Africa: IPESI. This word, interpreted, means "Why?" Each letter stands for one of the principles in Girl Scouting and these basic principles will never change:

I for INSPIRATION
P for POSSIBILITIES
E for EXAMPLE
S for SERVICE
I for IDEALS

Following the suggestion of IPESI, Girl Scouting is known through living, and is so much a part of a girl's life that people recognize the Girl Scout spirit and say, "Why of course. She is a Girl Scout."

If you've ever bought a cookie or a calendar from a Girl Scout, you've helped your own or your neighbor's children grow into the kind of woman you'd like them to become. But the major support for administration (See GIRL SCOUTS, Page 13)

The Laetrile Story

By JIM DEAN and FRANK MARTINEZ

Copyright 1964 — Freedom Newspapers, Inc.

Medical scientists who call themselves Beardians claim the mystery of cancer has been solved. For more than a decade they have besieged the fortress of orthodox medicine to have their ideas tested. And, after years of frustration, they finally are getting a hearing.

They are hopeful their evidence will be studied this month by an independent committee in Quebec, Canada. According to Andrew R. L. McNaughton, president of The McNaughton Foundation in Montreal, headquarters for the international research, the minister of health of the province of Quebec "has undertaken to set up such a committee."

The Beardians say they are confident the ruling of this committee will bring about a large-scale controlled test in Quebec hospitals. Such a test, they say, will bring official recognition that man's most dreaded killer has been conquered. Cancer will be controlled and prevented.

What brought all this about? Upon what "magic" do the Beardians place mankind's hopes for vanquishing history's most brutal disease?

This is the incredibly puzzling story of Laetrile. It is the equally incredible story of a quiet revolution by physicians and scientists who have dared to venture beyond the established perimeter of orthodoxy.

It is, to the layman, puzzling and bewildering because professional men of highest scientific rank abound on opposite sides in the Laetrile battle.

Those who support Laetrile say they have used it and that it has saved lives, given additional months of life to bodies irretrievably damaged, and given even these the peace of painless death.

Those who oppose it say they never have used it. They say the claims of the proponents are not supported by acceptable scientific evidence.

Laetrile is a registered trade name for amygdalin, a substance extracted from apricot pits. The powers claimed for this substance were discovered in the early 1940s by Ernst T. Krebs Jr., a San Francisco biochemist, and by his father, a medical doctor. A contributor to this discovery was Charles Gurchot, former Assistant Professor of Pharmacology at the University of California Medical School.

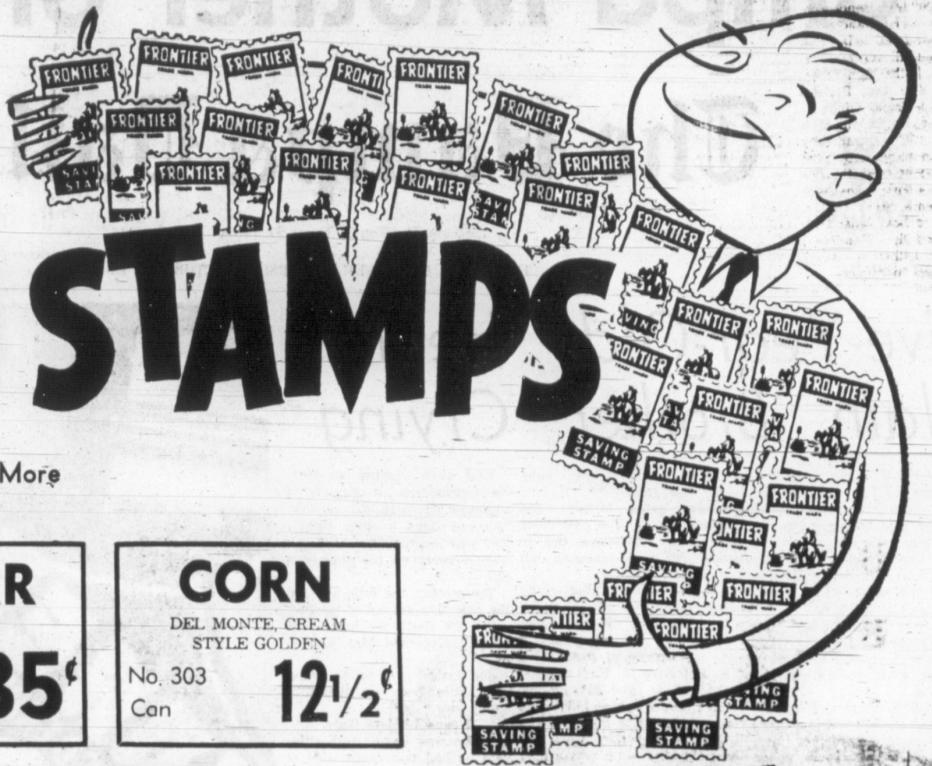

There is no scientific argument about the safety of Laetrile injected into the veins of human beings. Even its critics concede it is completely harmless and produces no side effects.

Its proponents insist it kills cancer cells. The opponents say it is worthless.

The proponents include scientists and physicians in the United States, Canada, Mexico, Italy, Japan, Great Britain, Belgium and the Philippines.

Opponents are factions within The American Cancer Society, The American Medical Association and agencies of the government of the United States. (See CANCER, Page 18)

WASHINGTON (UPI)—American servicemen are contributing up to 15 suggestions a week on "how to win the war" in South Viet Nam. At least two ideas already have been put into practice. The suggestions by U.S. soldiers, sailors and airmen generally don't deal with high military strategy for conducting the war against the Communist guerrillas. Instead, they are the "nuts and bolts" kind of ideas that servicemen believe could be used to improve equipment or military practices. The suggestions are being sent to the U.S. Military Assistance Command in South Viet Nam and come from servicemen stationed in that country as well as from those assigned elsewhere. The campaign was launched by "The Observer," the command's troop newspaper, after an order for more emphasis on new ideas was issued July 15. One proposal already put into effect called for protective cupolas for machine gunners on the M-113 armored personnel carrier. Also adopted was a plan for using bugles and police-type whistles for signaling in the jungle. Several hundred bugles and several thousand inexpensive whistles were shipped to South Viet Nam.

Added Yule Service Set by Post Office

Longer post office window hours, expanded delivery services and large-scale extension of the ZIP-coded parcel post speedup are planned for Christmas. Postmaster General John A. Gronouski has advised the local Postmaster, O. K. Gaylor, Gronouski outlined to the Pampa postal head, three major new steps he has taken for the best Christmas mail service the Postal Service has ever had:

1. Expanded post office window hours Dec. 5 to 26 as deemed necessary by the local postmaster.
 2. A six-day week Dec. 7-31 for parcel post deliveries, instead of a five-day week.
 3. Completion by Nov. 1 of Phase II of ZIP Code parcel handling at about 130 more "sectional center" post offices (strategically located mail massing points), providing faster delivery up to 24 hours or more for parcels with ZIP Code.
- In Phase I and II, approximately 75 offices with receipts of $5 million annually and above activated faster ZIP Code sorting and dispatch by Sept. 1. The 130 in Phase III includes offices with receipts of $1 to $5 million. In addition, many other sectional centers will have similar expanded services.

Britons Explode Over Charges in Profumo Scandal

LONDON (UPI) — The British Labor party exploded in anger Wednesday over a charge some of its leaders may have been just as guilty of adultery as Conservatives involved in the Profumo sex scandal.

Labor demanded that Prime Minister Sir Alec Douglas-Home repudiate the accusations made by Quinton Hogg, the Conservative minister for science and education.

The Profumo scandal which rocked the Conservative government last year was dragged into the open just one week before the Oct. 15 elections when a heckler yelled "What about Profumo?" while Hogg was addressing a rally in Plymouth Tuesday night.

"Profumo!" roared Hogg. "I would say just one thing. If you can tell me there are no adulterers on the front bench (the leaders) of the Labor party, you can talk about Profumo. If you can't tell me that, you had better keep your mouths shut."

Missing Courier Turns Up in Jail

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI)—A Pentagon courier with top secret clearance, reported missing in Washington, was held in the Wake County, N.C. jail Wednesday on a public drunkenness charge.

Officials said no documents had been stolen, however, and said there was no immediate reason to think security was involved.

The courier was identified as Staff Sgt. Robert L. Johnson of Las Vegas, Nev. He had been working since last May in the Army courier transfer service at the Defense Department.

Personnel in that office distribute classified documents "in bulk," normally without knowledge of the contents, officials said.

Johnson failed to report for duty late Tuesday. One unverified report was that he had been located in Raleigh, N.C.

SURGERY SCHEDULED
MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (UPI)—Former President Joao Goulart of Brazil will undergo gall bladder surgery possibly next week, it was reported here Wednesday. Goulart has been living in exile in Montevideo since his overthrow by a military coup earlier this year.

Hollywood

Television Gains Matriarch in Gladys Cooper

By Vernon Scott
HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Television gained a matriarch this season in Gladys Cooper, the 75-year-old character actress who plays den mother to Charles Boyer, David Niven and Gig Young in a new series.

As staunchly British as the Union Jack, Miss Cooper welcomes the harsh hours and tribulations of a weekly show.

"I love it," says she. "Sometimes it's a bit of a strain but I manage to keep pace with no trouble at all. I'm not like some of the young people who grumble at everything."

Miss Cooper saves her grumbling for the fact that she is now called an "iron woman," instead of "super woman," which friends once used to describe her capacity for work.

"I think 'super woman' was more attractive," she said. "And thank God I'm healthy. I don't drink or smoke too much. I do both, but not to extreme."

The fragile grand dame was ensconced at a table in the Cock and Bull restaurant on the Sunset Strip, a hangout for Hollywood's British colony. She wore a shapeless white hat and sleeveless cotton dress, which revealed a deep sun tan.

"I go swimming two or three times a day — either in my swimming pool or in the ocean," she continued. "It keeps me fit. I swim all year 'round. Even when it's cold and raining."

She studied the English paraphernalia on the walls of the restaurant with obvious satisfaction: "I'm a resident alien. Never have become an American citizen. I came here for six weeks 26 years ago and I've been here most of the time since."

She still thinks of England as home. She has, as a matter of fact, a home at Henley on Thames, where the famed Henley regatta is held.

Both her daughters are grown and married to actors. Daughter Joan is the wife of Robert Morley and Sally is the spouse of Robert Hardy. Whenever time permits Miss Cooper flies to England to see them both.

Study Near End On Rivers in US

PIERRE, S.D. (UPI)—A study team is nearing the final phase of a 20-month examination of 12 U.S. rivers that may lead to preserving certain streams in their natural state for scenic and recreational use, the regional director of the bureau of outdoor recreation said in Pierre Wednesday.

W. W. Dressell of Denver described the "wild rivers study" at a meeting of the Missouri Basin Interagency.

He said the national wild rivers study team will submit its report to the secretaries of the Interior and Agriculture about the first of the year. Those two departments established the team in May, 1963.

Among the 12 rivers are the Rio Grande in northern New Mexico, the Upper Green in Wyoming, the Flathead in Montana, the St. Croix and Namekagon in Minnesota and Wisconsin and the Upper Missouri in Montana.

Nuclear Symposium Set at WT

CANYON (Spl) — West Texas State University, in cooperation with the Southwestern Public Service Company and the Texas Atomic Energy Research Foundation, will hold a one-day nuclear science symposium for outstanding area high school science and mathematics students at Canyon Saturday.

The symposium will start at 9 a.m. in the Student Union Building on the university campus.

The symposium is a part of the educational program of the Texas Atomic Energy Research Foundation, of which Southwestern Public Service Company is a charter member. Prior to this year, the foundation held a three-day symposium at the University of Texas each spring, which only a small group of students could attend.

Pampa High School science teacher Mrs. Elaine Ledbetter will take some 65 Pampa students to the symposium and five students from Lefors will accompany Paul Walden of the Lefors High School science department.

"We have been limited in the number of outstanding science and mathematics students from our area who could attend the three-day session at Austin, so we decided, in cooperation with West Texas State University, to bring the same quality of speakers to this area in order that more students could be exposed to the possibilities of research and science as careers following the completion of their education," A. R. Watson, president and general manager of Southwestern Public Service Company, said.

The symposium program will be highlighted by five lectures on the various aspects of nuclear physics and research in nuclear fusion. The Texas Atomic Research Foundation program is the largest privately financed research effort on nuclear fusion in the world.

The symposium participants will include Dr. H. C. Thomas, chairman of the physics department, Texas Technological College; Ralph Tuckfield, experimental physicist, General Atomic Division, General Dynamics Corporation with which the Texas Atomic Energy Research Foundation is associated in the nuclear fusion research program; Dr. A. A. Kraus Jr., project director in physical sciences, West Texas State University; Dr. R. E. Walnerd, associate dean of engineering, Texas A & M, and Dr. John Bradford, Dean of Engineering, Texas Tech.

The students and lecturers participating in the symposium will be the guests of Southwestern Public Service Company for lunch.

Dr. Emmitt Smith of West Texas State University is the coordinator of the program. Cliff Mlinar, Panhandle division manager for Southwestern Public Service Company, will preside at the sessions and introduce the speakers.

REALLY COOL FASHIONS—Race driver Paul Goldsmith, right, and Chuck Blanchard check the latest in fashion for safety and driver comfort: an air-conditioned driving suit. Actually, it will be the same type worn by the astronauts who will ride the Apollo rocket to the moon. The conditioning effect is achieved by running cold water through a net of tubing.

Actress Interview Switches to Okra

By DICK WEST
WASHINGTON (UPI) — It's strange the way things work out sometimes. I went out to interview Phyllis Diller and wound up with a story about okra.

Any resemblance between Miss Diller and a pod of okra is, of course, largely coincidental. Miss Diller herself says that she has a figure that resembles a cluster of doorknobs — none the same size.

I will accept her description although in my opinion she more closely resembles an unmade Army cot.

Anyway, Miss Diller, who has been coming on big in show business lately, invited a few newsmen to lunch at the Shoreham Hotel where she is giving nightly lectures on the trials of being married to a man who opens-bottle tops with his only tooth.

Usual Chit Chat

We talked about the usual things: How Miss Diller got rid of ants in the kitchen by moving the sugar bowl to the living room, ect. Then she happened to mention that she was going to visit an international food show currently in progress here.

I asked if I could go along and it was there that I found my new life's work — okra.

It was Tom Buchanan, co-founder of the newly formed Okra Institute of America, who fired me with this missionary zeal.

Buchanan has dedicated himself to improving the image of okra and to winning converts among the great okrophobic public. Toward that end, he has rented a booth at the food show and opened a $1,000 okra recipe contest.

"Okra is widely unappreciated and misunderstood in this country," Buchanan said. "About 75 per cent of the people who stop by this booth have never tasted okra. Most cookbooks have only one okra recipe."

"Rotten Shame" "That's a fowdown, dirty, rotten shame," I said.

"Okra originated in Africa," Buchanan continued. "During the great famine of 1860, the people would have starved without okra."

"That's wonderful," I said, choking with emotion. "Okra has no bugs or blight!" Buchanan said. "You need never worry about insecticide poisoning with okra. It pickles beautifully and you can eat it raw in salads. There are only 30 calories in eight stalks."

"We expect to bring out an okra cookbook showing at least 250 ways to prepare it. Our aim is to put okra on the dinner table of America once a week."

"Good show," I said. "Is there anything I can do to help?"

"Ditch Phyllis Diller and join our okra crusade," Buchanan said. So I did.

EXOTIC SIGHT

HOUSTON (UPI) — Sheriff's Deputy Edward C. Kimberly presented an exotic sight with a peacock on his head as he clipped along a Houston freeway in rush hour traffic Tuesday.

Kimberly was delivering the peacock to a friend, but the bird got out of an untied sack and perched on top of the deputy's head.

Motorists goggled as Kimberly wove through traffic, until he got to the parking lane for an emergency stop.

JUVENILE DRIVER

HAVERHILL, England (UPI) — A nine-year-old boy playing hooky from school started a car with his penknife and drove it along a road until a storekeeper stopped it as the boy tried to negotiate a curve. The boy was put under police probation officer for three years.

Pampa Garden Club Presented Tips for Winter

Pampa Garden Club met in the home of Mrs. Milo Carlson, 2211 Charles at 9:15 a.m. Oct. 5. Assisting with hostess duties was Mrs. E. W. Hogan.

Mrs. Lee Moore opened the meeting by leading the group in the club collect. Minutes of the past meeting were read by Mrs. Owen Gee, secretary.

Mrs. Carlson conducted the business session at which time plans were made to host the Senior Citizen's Center on Oct. 22. The hospitality committee, consisting of Mrs. W. E. Hinton, W. M. Purviance and W. R. Campbell will be in charge of the arrangements.

Announcement was made concerning the district zone meeting to be held in Perryton Nov. 4.

Mrs. Ira Carlton gave horticulture tips for gardens this month, suggesting that bulbs for spring be planted now and all house plants be moved indoors at this time. Roses should also be ordered now for fall planting.

Mrs. Thelma Bray gave a report on the park committee's plans and asked that the club contribute to "Operating Windak" a city project.

Mrs. H. H. Boynton, program chairman, presented the history of the iris, the club flower.

A program on "Preparing the Garden for Winter" was presented by Mrs. A. J. Mitchell. Mrs. W. R. Parrish.

Salad Supper Plans Set by RNA Lodge

Royal Neighbors of America Lodge met Tuesday in Carpenter's Hall for a regular business meeting.

Oracle Mrs. O. G. Smith presided over the meeting at which plans were made for a salad supper for families and guests to be held at 6:30 p.m. Oct. 20 in Carpenter's Hall.

Plans were also discussed for the Rally of RNA to be held Oct. 16 and 17 in Davis Hotel of Borger. Registration for the rally will start at 9:30 a.m. Nine members attended the meeting.

Next meeting for RNA is slated for Oct. 20 in Carpenter's Hall.

Velvet Touch

You may think that cotton and velvet don't mix. But in late summer, you'll find that you can add a dressy touch to dark, transitional cottons if you wear them with a velvet hat.

Members attending were Mrs. Fred Cary, Joe Shelton, Lee Harrah, John Sweeney, E. W. Hogan, S. J. Mitchell, Melvin Bailey, Lee Moore, V. N. Osborn, Floyd Watson, W. L. Waggoner, R. E. Warren Jr., W. C. Hinton, Joe Beaver, Ira Carlton, Thelma Bray, Owen Gee, H. H. Boynton, Carlos Grissom, and one guest, Mrs. W. R. Parrish.

RUTH MILLETT

Asked to comment on his wife's successful career, a husband was recently quoted as saying, "When I married her I didn't expect her to become a housewife."

Only a man could have made such a statement. But how does he think he and the couple's children have managed without a "housewife" in the family?

True, a wife with a career can often hire others to do most of the physical work around the house, and to look after the children when they are small. But the home and the husband and the children still depend to a great extent on the wife's being a housewife as well as a career woman.

It's the housewife - side of a career woman which chooses a home for a family, decides how it shall be furnished, sets up a housekeeping routine (even though someone else does the actual housework), works out the family's social life, plans out schedules for the children, plans all the details of entertaining, is the family purchasing agent.

Whatever her setup, any woman with a husband, a home, and children is at least a part-time housewife. For a man to assume because he is reconciled to his wife's having a career he there-by frees her from the roll of housewife is pretty naive.

I've known a lot of career women who were both wives and mothers, and the highly successful ones often delegate all or most of the household chores to someone else.

But they're still housewives - planning, overseeing and directing all that goes on in their homes. And most of them never reach the place where they never, never lift a hand around the house.

The day she marries, a woman no matter what other career she intends to pursue, also becomes a housewife simply because home and family are still a woman's responsibility.

Dear Abby....

A Crush Is a Crush, Love Means Much More

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have loved a boy for a year now and all he ever says to me is, "Hi." I know if I could get him alone and into a conversation with me I could get him to love me, too, but so far I have not had the chance. Is there any way I can get this boy to love me? I love him so much I cry myself to sleep at night.

IN LOVE

DEAR IN LOVE: I don't know how old you are, but if you are 12 or over you need more help than I can give you in a letter. "Love" is sure. Love is mature. Love is sharing. Love is caring. Love is giving. Love is mutual. You have a "crush" on this boy, which is natural enough for a young girl. But call a crush a crush, Honey, and save that very special word, "love," for the deep and serious relationship it deserves.

DEAR ABBY: I have a very good friend who has a very bad habit. She will invite you over and then spend all her time doing her housework right in your face. I feel so foolish trying to talk to her, while she is too busy to look at me or listen to what I have to say. She gives me grunts for answers and nods her head once in a while. Today I followed her around while she washed down her walls, and when she was finished she started in on her ironing. Do you think she needs to be taught some manners or is a guest expecting too much to want her hostess to sit down and act like a hostess? We have been close friends for 22 years.

FEELING FOOLISH DEAR FEELING: Perhaps because you've been "close" friends for 22 years, she doesn't consider you a "guest" or herself a "hostess." But if she feels "close" enough to ignore you, you should feel "close" enough to tell her please to light somewhere and be better company.

DEAR ABBY: I would like your opinion of these so-called "open house" showers where a general invitation is run in the local newspaper, and announced over the radio. Lately many bridal showers, and even baby showers, are given this way by family and close relatives. The newspaper ad reads, "Everyone who wishes to attend this shower is welcome. It begins at 8 PM and no other invitations will be sent. Come one. Come all!" (I am enclosing a clipping in case you think I am making this all up.) In discussing this kind of invitation with a relative of a bride, I said there was nothing personal about an invitation of this kind, and I saw no point in attending. I was told that I didn't have to attend unless I wanted to, but it would be nice if I sent a gift.

SHOCKED IN-WINNEBAGO, Minn. DEAR SHOCKED: Move over, I, who considered myself shock-proof by now, admit that I, too, am shocked.

CONFIDENTIAL TO CHUCK AT AMHERST: There's always room at the top. But not for the guy who waits for the elevator. Get going!

Fur's within the reach of the college and young career girl as well as her more affluent sisters, says one New York resident. Alfred Cohen, with the resident buying firm of Kirby Block, says that the 1964 crop of campus-cue furs is the best he's seen in his half a century in the field.

"Any girl with a lot of fashion sense and not too much dollars and cents can select a fashionable fur to fit her personality, purse and purpose," said Cohen. "And the price need not go much over $200."

Girl Scouts

 ering the Girl Scouting program to the 616 girls and 151 adults in Pampa comes from our contributions to the United Fund. With out the support here would be no Girl Scouting available to the girls and to those who are growing up and looking forward to the time when they, too, may be seven years old and become a Girl Scout.

Of course - she's a Girl Scout; not only because she wears a uniform, her troop meeting and belong to an organization of other girls her age and with her interests, but because in Girl Scouting each girl is important for what she is rather than for who she is. Each girl gets a chance to explore her own talents; to test her mettle in her own age group. She learns to take responsibility and to live an active citizen in a girl-led democracy. Her camp teaches her to live happily at doors in her own resources. Girl Scouts are partners with adults, their leaders who guide rather than dictate. Her membership is voluntary since the entire organization is directed by volunteers.

Girl Scouts are happy people because they are happy people; it growing up is hard thing to do. It always has been. Remember?

Brownie Scouts who are seven and eight years old want to explore the world beyond their own block, or the hills beyond their father's pasture. Brownie Scouts get to go places, visit and learn about things in their community. Brownie Scouts learn and talk about and then act into action ideas of how to be courteous and helpful with children smaller than they are; how to care for their own pets; how to grow vegetables and flowers in a garden lot; how to sew on a button and fold their country's flag and conduct a proper ceremony. Brownie Scouts learn the importance of religion according to the teachings of her faith, and how to get along with other children in group experience, and new games and games.

Still in the "between" years is not how one of the younger is, the Cadette Scout, 12 through 14 years of age, is given opportunity to experiment many directions.

Cadette Girl Scouts not only like toys for distribution to their fortunate children; they collect clothing and wash iron and ship it to children in missions. Girl Scouts are often called upon by inexperienced troop leaders to assist in changing sorts and program files to "little" girls. They have learned not only the "what" but the "why" of living in a complex world. Inspiration and abilities they have added experience and service in their daily lives.

At the girl from fifteen through seventeen, the world is opening up - it opening up, as does for the Senior Girl Scout. These girls are relying less and less on adult guidance and more and more on their own judgment. The Senior Girl Scout is in scouting the thrill of being trusted with a big job, and the joy of doing it well. And what do the adult leaders give - and gain? Here's one received from a former scout to her leader: "We come to you equipped with usual eyes, noses and ears that you gave them discernment. We had been vaguely aware of the world around us - you brought it into focus made us at home in it. In you stirred my mind and in those many years ago, gave me precious gifts to carry with me wherever I may go."

Parents, clergymen, and others, too, support Girl Scouting because they know it complements the work of home, church, synagogue and school. The same reasons, patriotic and fraternal organizations generous in sharing their talents and facilities and giving places with Girl Scout posts. For, with Juliette Gordon Low, the founder of Girl Scouting in the United States they believe.

Editor Says We're Losing War in Viet Nam

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A city editor of the Philadelphia Bulletin, at the annual conference of United Press International Editors and Publishers today said that "we are losing the war in Viet Nam."

The warning was sounded by Burton A. Chardak, assistant editor of the Philadelphia Bulletin, at the annual conference of United Press International Editors and Publishers today.

Homeowners Warned About Fire Hazards

AUSTIN (Sp) — The Texas Safety Association today urged homeowners to observe National Fire Prevention Week this week by getting rid of fire traps around the house.

"Your life may depend on the way you keep house — inside and out," J. O. Musick, TSA general manager, said.

"Last year, 8,100 persons in the United States died as a result of fire. Of this number, 6,500 persons were killed as a result of fires in the home."

The Texas fire fatality toll was 537 persons — 444 of these deaths were attributed to home fires.

Further stressing the need for taking fire prevention measures in the home, the safety director pointed out there are about 100,000 residential fires each year in the nation. In addition to the loss of life and human suffering caused by such fires, they cost the nation about $400,000,000 a year.

Musick suggested homeowners discard old newspapers, magazines, boxes, clothing and other useless items. Storing such things under stairways, in closets or garages creates fire hazards.

"Daily household trash should be kept in covered metal cans away from heat, and it should be disposed of frequently," he continued.

ports by traveling editors on world trouble-spots they have visited during the past few months. Harry Burnham, managing editor of the St. Paul (Minn.) Dispatch, presided as panel chairman. Other participants were Miles H. Wolff of the Greensboro (N.C.) news; John Strohmer of the Bethlehem (Pa.) Globe-Times; and Otto Zausmer of the Boston Globe.

On the final day of the two-day meeting at the Statler-Hilton hotel, the editors and publishers also heard an address by Democratic vice-presidential nominee Hubert H. Humphrey, joined in a panel discussion on reporting and attended a concluding banquet. Their wives were guests of cabinet wives at a White House reception.

"If there are some things you must keep, store them safely. Put dust mops and cleaning materials in a well-ventilated, fire-safe storage unit. Keep flammable liquids in approved safety containers, away from the reach of children and store paints and oil cleaners in tightly capped metal cans, away from heat."

Musick reminded homeowners to use all flammable liquids outside or in well-ventilated areas. Never smoke while using flammables and "remember, dry cleaning is extremely dangerous and not worth the risk you take."

"Cleaning up outside areas also is important. Be sure trash is kept picked up and disposed of frequently. Never allow it to accumulate around buildings. Trash around dry grass and close to buildings will tempt and spread fire," he said.

Musick added that keeping cooking equipment and electrical appliances in good-working condition is a part of good housekeeping, and further protection against home fires.

He advised homeowners to check portable heaters, furnaces and chimneys for fire safety. Keep portable heaters away from doors, stairs or other fire exits and keep clear of combustibles such as curtains, furniture and clothes.

Zausmer saw hope for better days on the Mediterranean island of Cyprus, torn by civil war and between Greek and Turkish inhabitants.

He said Greek Prime Minister Georges Papandreu, strongly backed by young King Constantine, had "laid down the law" to Archbishop Makarios, president of Cyprus to quit flirting with Russia and permit a reasonable settlement of the conflict.

"This might open the door to a real solution for the suffering island," Zausmer said.

Wolff gave a country-by-country report on the situation in Latin America. In Brazil, he said, the new government systematically had weeded out Communists and Communist sympathizers and had begun to plug loopholes in tax laws. But "the answers to basic social and economic problems have not been found," he said.

He found Argentina's economy on the upgrade but said the government of Dr. Arturo W. Illia still faced "rough sledding."

Wolff predicted that the Communist government in British Guiana probably will fall in the November elections and said that if Premier Cheddi Jagan "resists the electorate's repudiation, this may bring British intervention again."

Strohmer said the new nations of Africa were "eager to learn from us and about us" but "We have done little to help."

"Communists Are Pressing In contrast, our Communist counterparts are boring in," he said. He said the Soviet news agency, Tass, was providing free service (with liberal dashes of Communist propaganda) to the newspapers in Kenya and Ghana.

Strohmer said African newspapers had a severe shortage of qualified journalists, and were not persuaded that "objectivity is a virtue" or that the other party's side should be reported.

But he reminded his colleagues that "American newspapers started under cruder and more adverse conditions."

He suggested that "our hard-won experiences of a free press could have a real impact in Africa" if American newsmen could find a way to share them with their counterparts in Africa.

The afternoon panel discussion was on "Massive Reporting: is it Really Necessary?" Participating were Robert G. Shand, executive editor, New York Daily News; Arthur R. Bertelson, managing editor, St. Louis Post-Dispatch; John C. Quinn, managing editor, Providence (R.I.) Bulletin; Eugene Patterson, editor, Atlanta Constitution, and Alfred Friendly, managing editor, Washington Post.

Lyle C. Wilson, UPI vice president and Washington manager, retired, was guest speaker at the final banquet.

The Laetrile Story

The forces opposing Laetrile report they have had no first-hand experience in testing it on human beings. But there is the weighty opinion that predominates in the world of medicine in America.

This opinion derives chiefly from a 1953 evaluation of the drug by the Cancer Commission of the California Medical Association. The report was published, unsigned, in California Medicine, the official publication of the CMA, dated April, 1953.

It was written by Dr. Ian MacDonald, a Los Angeles surgeon, and Dr. L. Henry Garland, a San Francisco radiologist. Dr. MacDonald was chairman and Dr. Garland secretary of the Cancer Commission. Members for the nine-man commission were selected by Dr. MacDonald. The commission included five surgeons, two radiologists, a professor of a state medical school, and a pathologist.

The 1953 evaluation was based on reports concerning 44 patients treated with Laetrile. The commission members did not examine the patients, but studied the reports of physicians who said they had used Laetrile and had achieved some effective results.

The conclusion of the commission was that "No satisfactory evidence has been produced to indicate any significant cytotoxic effect of Laetrile on the cancer cell." This basically is the case against Laetrile although two subsequent reports also termed it ineffective.

In 1960, the National Cancer Institute in Bethesda, Md., reported it had tested Laetrile on mice with transplanted tumors with negative results, and in 1963, the California State Health Department issued a report upholding the 1953 report and recommending that use of Laetrile be banned under provisions of a law enacted by the 1959 Legislature creating a Cancer Advisory Council.

Although the official voice of medicine agreed there were no harmful side-effects from the use of Laetrile, the state health department concluded that use of Laetrile to the exclusion of accepted therapy (surgery and radiation) "might well be dangerous."

The state report was issued May 20, 1963.

On June 26 and 28, 1963, public hearings were held in Los Angeles and in San Francisco on a proposed regulation to ban the use of Laetrile in California.

On Sept. 20, 1963 in Los Angeles, the State Board of Public Health adopted the regulation which became effective Nov. 1, 1963.

Laetrile no longer could be used by physicians in California.

The Food and Drug Administration in Washington described as incomplete a new drug application, stating the proponents had not furnished satisfactory proof of its safety and effectiveness.

And The American Cancer Society, by far the most active foe of Laetrile, joined the opposition. It places Laetrile in the category of "unproven methods of cancer treatments," and continues to circulate literature denouncing it.

Although it says it spends more than $30 million annually for cancer research, The American Cancer Society says it has never provided funds for research of Laetrile or the scientific thesis on which it is based. It admits to no first-hand experience with the use of the drug on human beings.

The forces against Laetrile are the most powerful voices in medicine, and they insist the drug is worthless.

But Laetrile refuses to die. Banned in the United States, Laetrile continues to be used in foreign countries, and medical reports continue to claim positive effective benefit to cancer patients.

There are at least 26 medical papers, written by physicians who use it, testifying that Laetrile is safe and effective in the treatment of cancer in human beings.

The most recent was published in October, 1963, in the Asian Medical Journal by Dr. Shigeaki Sakai of Tokyo, Japan, who reported on 19 cases of advanced cancer treated with Laetrile.

In his conclusion he said: "Administered to cancer patients, Laetrile has proved to be quite free of any harmful side effects, and I firmly believe that no known anti-cancer drug could make a cancerous patient improve faster than Laetrile. My research has indicated conclusively that Laetrile effectively controls cancer wherever it is located."

While the weight of numbers and authority most certainly rests against Laetrile, considerable professional prestige supports it.

Its most renowned proponent is Prof. Joseph H. Main, M.D., of the University of Louvain, Belgium, where he is director of the Institute of Cancer. He is president emeritus of the International League Against Cancer which conducts the International Cancer Congress every four years.

When Laetrile was rebuffed in the United States, the revolution shifted its headquarters to Montreal, Canada, where its leader is Andrew R. L. McNaughton, a son of Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, a commander of the Canadian Armed Forces during World War II, and former president of the National Research Council of Canada.

Andrew McNaughton, 48, is founder and president of The McNaughton Foundation, a non-profit research organization supported largely by his personal resources. Medical research consultant for the foundation is Prof. N. R. Bouziane, M.D., Ph.D., director of Research Laboratory, St. Jeanne d'Arc Hospital, Montreal; and professor of physiological chemistry, University of Montreal.

Besides Bouziane, the Scientific Advisory Board of the foundation includes Krebs Jr. and E. T. Krebs Sr., M.D., of San Francisco; Charles Gurbot, Ph.D., of San Francisco, former instructor in biochemistry at Cornell University Medical School, former assistant professor of pharmacology, University of California Medical School — Key to the Riddle of Cancer." Dr. Gurbot has been engaged in cancer research since 1931.

Other scientific advisers are Edward H. Spicer, president of Spicer-Gerhart Pharmaceutical Co., of Sunland, Calif.; Paul L. Rivard, M.D., of St. Joseph Hospital, Latuque Quebec; P. Bergeoff-Gillow, M.D., former pathologist in cancer research Columbia University, New York, and Sen. D. A. Croll, former minister of Labor and Welfare for the government of Ontario, Canada.

Laetrile, then, has the personalities, prestige and position to match those of its opposition, but it cannot match the power.

The Laetrile proponents, for the most part, have chosen to press their revolution in the scientific arena, submitting scientific papers through "proper channels" and avoiding other publicity.

But the revolution has reached the lay public through patients who say they owe their lives to Laetrile and are determined to "bring the message to the public."

An example is the "International Association of Cancer Victims and Friends," founded by Mrs. Donald Hoffman of San Diego, Calif. Mrs. Hoffman, a former school teacher, says she was a "hopeless" victim of cancer and that Laetrile saved her life after surgery and radiation had failed.

The story of Laetrile also reached the public through a book "Laetrile: Control For Cancer" by New York author Glenn D. Kittler, published in April, 1963. The book was quickly condemned by the opponents, but curiosity has been aroused, and it is obvious that the revolution which began quietly in the minds of a few scientists has reached the people. The Pampa Daily News A Waifful Newspaper EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

The Pampa News is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. Only when man is free to control himself and all he produces, can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

The Laetrile Story

On the front page of today's paper—the News is presenting the first part of its series, "The Laetrile Story." This series by two staff members of Freedom Newspapers is the culmination of months of study and investigation of this substance which may or may not be the answer to cancer.

We make no claims for Laetrile as helpful in the treatment of cancer. We are not scientists or physicians. We are interested in the freedom of individuals, whether they are doctors, scientists, or patients, to choose for themselves. Our investigation has convinced us that freedom is restricted.

This story is an example of the ultimate result of regimentation and controls, as opposed to individual free action. Make no mistake about it, doctors in the United States, as in most nations, are unmercifully controlled and regimented, mostly through their own negligence. They have failed to defend themselves against the erosion of their freedom.

It is schizophrenic; one part is the dedicated physician, concerned only with his responsibility to his patient. He works hard to make sick people well. He has spent many years learning his profession. He has earned the respect of his patients and of the general public.

The saddest result is that medicine's political self has inflicted its better half with the deadly virus of socialism, the ultimate manifestation of which will be complete governmental control.

The Laetrile story will show plainly that the organized body of medicine has allied against Laetrile to prevent independent research. Quite obviously those opposed to Laetrile do not believe it to be effective. This is a rightful position, and no one can deny this privilege to disagree.

But the story will show just as plainly that there are those who do believe it to be helpful. Do they not also have the right to pursue their viewpoint? Political medicine says "No."

The result is that Laetrile has gone to a more favorable climate, and the latest development indicates that one of the most cruel paradoxes of our time is to take place — medicine in a socialized state is reportedly ready to give this Product of an American individualist its first controlled test.

And if Laetrile ultimately is recognized as an effective weapon to control cancer, the victory most likely will serve to defeat what freedom American medicine still enjoys. For this would surely be pounced upon by opportunistic politicians who would seek to claim the dedicated physician side of medicine because it has failed to provide adequately for the public welfare.

And if Laetrile fails the test? This will prove only that the hoped-for deliverance from cancer death is yet to come. But it just might alert America's doctors to the danger of the cancer that is destroying free medicine.

The News does not ask its readers to accept Laetrile. We ask each reader to read the entire series carefully and decide for himself whether there is valid cause to believe this product — or any product — should be prohibited from the market without investigation.

A Look Ahead? The economy of France is moving along pretty well these days, and the government has set up a balanced budget and announced a tax cut. But if it isn't one darned thing, it's another, and the social security system over there is faced with bankruptcy.

The French system is older than ours — founded in 1928 — and faced with the same political pressures. That is, nobody likes the increased taxes they require, but everyone wants liberalized benefits.

Now, the Labor Minister, Gilbert Grandval, says: "The financial breaking point is near. The solution cannot be found in the framework of the present system."

The French system has come unstuck on its medical care feature. Despite the fact that every French worker pays 6 per cent of his earnings into the fund and every French employer pays in a whopping 18 per cent of his payroll, there just isn't enough money to cover the benefits.

Now it is admitted that the

Cuban Backdown

Stories that it was the United States that surrendered to Khrushchev in October, 1962, by giving a guarantee against an attempt to topple the Soviet regime in Cuba, have been persistently denied. Such an agreement by the United States would clearly violate the Monroe Doctrine and flout the solemn OAS treaties by which the United States has pledged itself not to tolerate Soviet ideology or power in this hemisphere.

Nevertheless, evidence continues to turn up to indicate that there is some foundation for these persistent stories. Bernard Collier, of the New York Herald Tribune, recently made known an interview he had with Dictator Castro this summer. Here are excerpts from that interview as published in "The Cuban Patriot" of Miami, Florida:

COLLIER: Let's talk about the missile crisis. No matter what Cuba's intentions are now or in the future, it will be very difficult to forget that Cuba nearly brought on a nuclear world war.

CASTRO: "The missiles were very logical, to us. We were running the danger of a conventional war or a world war then. For us, the missiles reduced the danger of a conventional war. You see, for us the dangers of a conventional war and a world war were the same: the destruction of Cuba — total destruction."

COLLIER: You mean your regime.

CASTRO: "Either way, total destruction. The conventional war was most dangerous for us. We would be destroyed alone."

COLLIER: Are there still long range missiles in Cuba?

CASTRO: "I have always refused to answer that. I think the government of the US is well informed on that situation."

COLLIER: You must have realized that the missiles would provoke just such a crisis when the missiles came in.

CASTRO: "We thought it would provoke a crisis, yes. I think that the Soviets also knew it would provoke a crisis. From our point of view we considered it correct to run that risk. You see since the crisis things have become a little more defined. I think the US realizes the consequences of conventional warfare with us will be more serious now. There have been compromises."

COLLIER: What kind of compromises? Formal, signed documents?

CASTRO: "Yes, Yes. Formal agreements. Between the US and the USSR and Cuba and the USSR. Essentially, I think, what is in the compromises is known to the world. There is to be no invasion of Cuba by the US. That is formal. It is binding on the US government under any president, any government. And Russia agreed to defend the revolution. The crisis made all this clear."

COLLIER: The crisis came close to finishing off everybody, did it not?

CASTRO: "We thought it already was going to happen. When we issued the order to shoot down any plane — that was the same day we brought down the U-2 — a war situation already existed. We thought that was it."

COLLIER: You mean you did not know what was going to happen with the missiles? If they were going to be shot? The Soviets took action without consulting you?

CASTRO: "We didn't control the missiles. They were under the control of the USSR. So they had the right to take the decision. But in spite of that we had very close contact over everything. But most of it was done in coded messages. They took time to translate. Things happened very fast. Faster than the decoders. On those parts that concerned us we were informed. We gave our consent. When Khrushchev proposed that there be no invasion of Cuba, Kennedy said yes. We knew about the compromise. And it cannot be legally violated, by anyone, including Barry Goldwater. Well, maybe not — Goldwater."

Should not the President of the United States forcefully deny this if it is not true? And should not the correspondence between the late President and Khrushchev in the Cuban crisis be revealed for all to see? This is veiled for all to see? This is a major issue for the American people and they are entitled to know where we stand with respect to a Soviet base at our doorstep.

Pull Up A Chair

By Frank J. Markey

You can rent anything these days. The latest gimmick in the rental business occurred in Dallas, Texas, where a clothing merchant boosted sales by leasing suits to male customers. The fellow who wants to be well-dressed, can rent a $110 suit for $12.50 a month and at the end of six months can buy the suit for another $12.50 bargain. This is an idea that will spread around the country.

Today's smile: At a college gabfest one bright-eyed sophomore disclosed her idea of the perfect husband: "The man I marry must shine in company, be able to tell jokes, be musical, sing, dance, and stay home nights. One of her pals piped up: "You don't want a husband, you want a TV set."

Just to show you how our space program is growing apace, what is now Cape Kennedy in Florida started out a few years back as a 15,000-acre tract. They've just acquired an additional 87,000 acres and plan to spend $1.7 billion in the next three years fitting it up with buildings, roads, lawns, and other things. It's estimated that the working force will reach 47,000 skilled and unskilled workers by 1965, with an annual payroll of $225 million as compared with $138 million just two years ago. All of which proves you can't pinch pennies if you're shooting for the moon.

Thoughts while shaving: We never heard of the tiny kingdom of Nepal, high up in the far-off Himalayas, until we saw it a few years ago in a Lowell Thomas Cinerama movie. Today we learned it has been linked to the outside world by a 26-mile all-steel tramway, financed by Uncle Sam, which took four years to build. The next step now will be to get an American tourist agency to plug vacations there. Back in 1906, when banks in other cities refused to finance a corporation that had acquired a number of small auto manufacturing companies, some Boston capitalists took a chance with their own money and never had cause for regret. The corporation was General Motors. Pigs that are to be made into Smithfield hams are required by law to be "peanut-fed hogs raised in the peanut belt of Virginia and North Carolina." We always associate Thanksgiving with the Pilgrim Fathers of the Plymouth Colony, but it was a woman journalist, Sarah Hale, editor of the famed "Godey's Lady's Book," who is responsible for establishing it on a national basis. She asked four Presidents to set aside a Day of Thanksgiving as a national holiday, but Fillmore, Pierce and Buchanan turned her down. Lincoln accepted her idea in 1863 and proclaimed the November festival. We call something that pursues a man relentlessly his "nemesis," because in Greek mythology "Nemesis" was an avenging goddess who saw to it that persons were punished for their mis-

Cannel At Bay

By Ward Cannel

When Is Pure Not Fresh? HALEDON, N. J. (NEA) — SUPERHIGHWAYS and plainly marked exits being what they are, we took a wrong turn and then another and, at length, decided to follow a lady in a Cadillac.

This is a trick we have learned from many years of getting lost. While it may not take you to exactly where you want to go, at least you get the comfort of knowing you are going someplace.

And so, after passing through a considerable area of smoky industry and then several miles of relentless housing development, we came at last to a traffic jam at a tiny little park.

Here the lady cut her ignition, emerged from her car carrying two racks of empty milk bottles, and hurried into the park where several dozen people with bottles were waiting their turn at a water fountain.

And as we always keep a drinking cup in the glove compartment, we cut our ignition and hurried after her. There could be only one reason why these folks had come to the park with bottles when the whole sooty, crowded, busy area fairly shrieked indoor plumbing. They had discovered the fountain of youth.

If so, we were prepared to wait in line all night as it has always been our ambition to see John Barrymore play "Hamlet" in 1923.

Unhappily, it was nothing of the sort. It was only fresh water diverted from a nearby stream. And for some reason we did not quite get, that seemed to be the whole attraction.

It had been our understanding that the village well went out with Dante Gabriel Rossetti and was only used nowadays for special effects in Sophia Loren movies. So we inquired further.

"Because it don't taste like pure water," a man said. "It ain't been purified after a lot of other people used it."

"And it doesn't foam if you shake it," a woman said.

"You see," another man said, "it's not scientific water from the city. It's fresh water. You get it? It's water."

deeds. Besides, the Greek word for remorse is "nemesis." . . . Nearly 8 million cords of pulpwood are harvested annually in Canada and the United States for newsprint so you may have your daily newspaper. . . . The Turlock (Calif.) DAILY JOURNAL reported: "Doctor's examined his broken arm and performed minor surgery on both feet!" Preventative medicine no doubt! They wanted to keep him off his feet so he wouldn't break his other arm.

Country Editor speaking: "Any American housewife will admit the greatest labor-saving device she has is her husband."

Wit and Whimsy

A man was charged with shooting a number of pigeons, on the property of a farmer. Counsel for the defense tried to frighten the farmer.

Counsel — Now, are you prepared to swear that this man shot your pigeons?

Farmer — I didn't say he shot 'em, I said I suspected him of doing it.

Counsel — Ah! Now we're coming to it.

Farmer — Well, first, I caught him on my land with a gun. Secondly, I heard a gun go off and saw some pigeons fall. Thirdly, I found four of my pigeons in his pocket, and I don't think the birds flew there and committed suicide.

A farmer and his wife went to town to buy a new clock. Dealer — Here, is something very attractive in the way of clocks. At each hour a bird comes out from the top and sings, "Cuckoo!" For instance, I turn the hand to three o'clock and the bird comes out and sings, "Cuckoo!" three times.

Farmer — Don't that beat all! Mother, let's have one. Wife — No, no! That sort of clock might do for folks that have got lots of time, but it'd take me half the forenoon everyday to take care of that bird.

Women take such pains to buy a pretty slip, and look frustrated when it shows.

"No," we said. "They ought to give out cards to residents," she said to nobody in particular. "They ought to give out cards and have somebody stationed here to check your card."

We agreed wholeheartedly. And having many more important things to do, we hurried back to the car. There was, we thought, very little profit in watching ladies in Cadillacs filling milk bottles with water when there were much more pressing matters to worry about, such as the campaign in Viet Nam and the dreadful facts publishers are putting in children's textbooks.

These are things you can do something about, especially in an election year. But drinking water, as we see it, is God's problem and not Caesar's, as it has to do with the population explosion and the industrial expansion needed to keep up with it. A politician would have to be an idiot to come out against babies and progress.

And anyhow, we were not particularly thirsty.

A Time For Reason

Nothing is more important than that the American people arrive at political decisions on the basis of facts rather than emotions. To be sure, an election in this country invariably involves a certain amount of hoopla. But the trappings of a campaign and the personality of a candidate — the elements of showmanship — should be definitely subordinated to the principles of the men seeking public office.

In New York State the Senate campaign between Robert F. Kennedy and incumbent Sen. Kenneth Keating has taken an unfortunate turn. The managers of Mr. Kennedy's campaign seem to be aiming at a power drive based on pure emotionalism. Mr. Kennedy apparently is encouraged not to debate the issues but to act as might one of the Beatles.

This is a matter for New Yorkers to settle, of course. But the country has to be concerned if hysteria gets into national politics. And it has to be recognized that a hysterical election can be found in our national life today. There is the oft-repeated cry of "human rights," for example, when a piece of legislation comes up for consideration. The cry is used to divert public attention from the real character of a bill. An effort is made, under the circumstances, to sell the legislation on the basis of an emotional appeal rather than logical analysis. If the "liberal" legislation of our time were subjected to close logical scrutiny, it usually could be established that what is involved are a loss of property or personal rights, which, in turn, in fact means a loss of human rights. After all, what are more basic human rights than the rights involving one's property or one's freedom of association?

In a republic that is presented as a mass democracy having no built-in restraints, efforts always are under way to stampede the people into some particular form of action. This is as old as the history of republican governments. In ancient Rome, for example, Cataline, the arch-conspirator who promoted the street demonstrations of that day, endeavored to stampede the crowds into overturning the considered judgment of the Roman Senate.

Today, we have in the White House a power for organizing stampedes that never before existed in this country. Under recent management, the White House has specialized in obtaining consent through the use of a giant engine of publicity. If there is a tropical storm or other natural disaster, the man in charge in Washington runs off to be photographed in the area so as to stir the emotion of thankfulness, and thereby gain votes. The basic effort is to pull at the heartstrings of the people to manipulate them like the psychologist Pavlov's little dog who learned to come for dinner when a bell was rung. The aim, in short, is to make the American people respond to the conditioned reflex, to make them subject to emotional appeals rather than to the appeals of reason.

But republican government — our system of freedom — cannot continue to operate if the people become robots under the influence of emotionalism. The world today is full of difficult choices and dangerous situations. America is the greatest nation on earth, bearing the heaviest responsibility for deterring communism. It cannot carry out its responsibility in this respect, it cannot function effectively as a nation, if demagoguery is to be the rule within, if emotionalism is to be the chief characteristic of the nation.

In times past, Americans were known as a hard-headed, common sense people who gave domestic and world issues a cold eye. They were known as the supremely practical people, and from this practicality arose the prosperity and well being of the nation. But if this country is to be drenched with sentimentalism, whether for drones within or greedy dependents in such lands as Ghana or India, then we have slim chance of surviving. If a minority of 10 per cent of the people can grossly disturb and confuse 90 per cent of the people, then that is a form of discrimination that this nation cannot live with. The tail cannot be allowed to wag the dog in the United States, but that is what has been happening.

A presidential election is a time for the American people

Question Box

(We invite questions on economics and the proper functions of government which will not injure anyone.)

QUESTION: "What is a good way of knowing who is worthy of one's confidence?"

ANSWER: Since one of the most important means to a successful life is knowing who is worthy of confidence, one cannot be too careful in arriving at a way of determining whether a man is worthy of one's confidence.

Since the most important questions are ethical questions, it is important to know what person is worthy of confidence as to what is right and wrong and what will promote the general welfare on this earth.

Of course no one can answer all questions, but a man who is worthy of confidence should have a standard of right and be able and willing to answer all your questions, or anyone else's questions, without evasion or contradiction on what he is advocating or believes in. If this man has a double standard of right, you will find that he contradicts himself or by evading when the right question is asked.

Those who have double standards are past masters in evasion. They will not answer direct questions but instead will constantly change the subject. You must keep them to the subject and insist they answer. Even a question whether a man has stopped murdering people can be answered by simply saying, "No, I have not stopped because I cannot stop something I have not been doing."

A man worthy of confidence should have logical, rational reasons for his convictions and be able to answer all questions on these convictions without evasion or contradiction. Then you could put confidence in that man.

to consider what is happening to their nation and what may happen in the future if a hurtful trend is not reversed. This great republic has taken a dangerous detour in the last three and one-half years. It has traveled downhill at an alarming rate. It is time to change direction before disaster results.

matter of fact

Coal is not a true mineral. It is an organic compound of many types formed from the remains of living trees, shrubs and plants that flourished millions of years ago during periods of uniformly mild and moist climate. Some coals were deposited 400 million years ago during the Silurian period, but most were formed during the Mississippian and Pennsylvanian geological eras about 250 million years ago.

Southwest to Provide Close Vote

By PRESTON MCGRAW
DALLAS (UPI)—Memo from Albuquerque: If the prognosticators know what they're talking about, massive Bernalillo County will back President Lyndon B. Johnson Nov. 3. Ditto the outback area of New Mexico.

Memo from Dallas: Sen. Barry M. Goldwater is making hay in Texas, but the Johnson grass roots (no pun intended) have no strong hold.

Memo from Oklahoma City: LBJ all the way.

Memo from Phoenix: Purely on observation, it probably is Goldwater running ahead in his home state—but the Democrats could close the gap.

In short, there appears to be one horse race and three Democratic shoo-ins for the tops of the tickets in the Southwest.

Bernalillo County is Albuquerque, which has 110,000 registered voters in a state of one million residents. The outback area is "little Texas"—eastern New Mexico with five population centers. A month ago, eastern New Mexico was Goldwater country. But Johnson is emerging as the big vote puller.

Has Racial Issues
In Texas, Goldwater has stumbled hard and will continue to do so. This undoubtedly is winning him votes. Johnson does have a Texas problem.

For instance, precincts 132 and 63 of the Poly-Glen Garden area of southeast Fort Worth. Negroes have moved into white neighborhoods.

This, said the Fort Worth Press, is "causing more than a little concern... among... white voters."

"Any white 'backlash,' though, appears to have failed thus far to counter Johnson's popularity in his home state.

The Sooners of Oklahoma would sooner have Johnson. This was so when the campaign started. It remains more so, apparently, as it goes into the climactic weeks.

Whether Johnson can pull the state Democratic ticket with him is something else again. The big race in Oklahoma is between Republican Bud Wilkinson and Democrat Fred Harris for the U.S. Senate. Harris is a popular, state legislator from Lawton. Wilkinson is a byword in every Oklahoma home because of his background as coach of the mighty O-U football team.

Polls Favor Both
Arizona, of course, is Goldwater's home state. Each race on keeps coming up with polls showing its man ahead in the presidential race.

It has been a tight fight. Goldwater seems, on the basis of the campaign now, to be ahead. Democrats are hoping Johnson will visit the state to campaign.

Gov. Paul Fannin, a Goldwater main running for Goldwater's Senate seat and Richard Kleindienst, a Goldwaterite seeing Fannin's empty chair, are powerful Republicans themselves. Fannin especially is a hot-vote-getter.

Ed Mechem, a former governor, is in a close one with Democratic Rep. Joe M. Montoya for the Senate.

It is shaping up this way: Mechem powerful in eastern New Mexico; he and Montoya battling for the edge in Albuquerque.

Democrats figure Johnson will pull Montoya in with him. Republicans disagree. But there is GOP fear that Goldwater could

But Roy Elson, with the prestige of Democratic Sen. Carl Hayden behind him, is undoubtedly running a strong race against Fannin.

Sam Goddard, Democratic contender for governor, is carrying on a far more effective campaign than he did in losing to Fannin in the gubernatorial race two years ago.

Depends On Ticket
In both Oklahoma and Arizona, a lot depends on the other members of the Republican ticket as far as Goldwater is concerned.

Johnson's prestige is needed for the rest of the Democratic votes in New Mexico and Texas.

In New Mexico, Republican Ed Mechem, a former governor, is in a close one with Democratic Rep. Joe M. Montoya for the Senate.

It is shaping up this way: Mechem powerful in eastern New Mexico; he and Montoya battling for the edge in Albuquerque.

Democrats figure Johnson will pull Montoya in with him. Republicans disagree. But there is GOP fear that Goldwater could pull Mechem down with him, assuming a Goldwater loss. Johnson wants incumbent liberal Sen. Ralph Yarborough to win in Texas over popular young Republican George Bush. And he wants Yarborough to win smashing.

From the looks of it now, Yarborough will win. Just how smashing is something else again. Bush has been gaining strength. With help from his pretty wife, a native of Rye, N.Y., the Connecticut-born Bush has been running strong.

Texas Gov. John B. Connally stands alone. Republican Jack Crichton is running hard against him but his cause seems hopeless.

Catholics Urge Rewriting on Role of Layman in Church

VATICAN CITY (UPI)—The Ecumenical Council Wednesday urged a major rewriting of a proposed document on the role by the layman in the day-to-day life of the Roman Catholic Church.

The council gave overwhelming approval to a decision to debate the document which treats with the layman for the first time in the history of the church. But speaker after speaker led by Joseph Elmer Cardinal Ritter of St. Louis criticized the document as written. Cardinal Ritter said it was "too clerical, too verbose, too abstract, rather patronizing and too juridical."

Bishop Remige de Roo of Victoria, B.C., said the document

"is a real disappointment for the laity." One council source said nearly 100 bishops have asked to speak on the document "and most of them feel a bout the same as those who spoke today."

Bishop Franciskus Hengsbach of Essen, Germany, reporting to the council in behalf of the commission that prepared the document, admitted that it was a "middle of the road presentation."

He said the commission hoped that the council itself would provide a doctrine and basis of fact for an increasing role of the layman in the day-to-day life of the church.
