NEGRO SENTENCED TO DEATH FOR SLAYING

OLTON, Lamb county, April 10. (AP)—A jury in 64th district court this afternoon condemned LeRoy Kelly, 32-year-old negro, to die in the electric chair for the murder of Sheriff P. A. Loyd of Lamb county at Littlefield last March 20.

Less than one hour's deliberation was required to reject the negro's mercy plea that he was so drunk when the shots were fired that he recalled nothing of the occurrence. That plea, voiced by Kelly himself from the witness stand this morning, was offered as his sole hope that his punishment might be fixed at life imprisonment, rather than death.

The verdict was received without demonstration, and without display of emotion by the negro. Sheriff Tom Abel of Lubbock and other officers left immediately for Lubbock county jail with him where the negro will continue in safe keeping. Kelly will be returned, however, to Olton court Monday by the direction of Judge C. D. Russell to hear a motion for a new trial to be presented in behalf of the condemned man by his attorneys, E. A. Bills of Littlefield and J. A. Gowdy of Olton, who were appointed by the court.

government planes soared over the battlefield in ebullient daylight but apparently found their targets in the dusk. Watchers from vantage points within the city, just across the river to the east of the fiercest fighting, saw clouds of smoke curl up from trees on Aquila hill, indicating where the explosives struck. A few seconds later, huge clouds rose from the insurgents' positions in University City. The dust-laden clouds were so dense at first that fires seemed to have started. Rebel anti-aircraft quickly cut the sally forth, however, thin wisps of smoke showing where tracer bullets sought range of the squadron. The air fleet hastily wheeled back in safety over the city. A steady stream of government shells poured onto the hill. To the south, government machine guns spat angrily at the fringe of the cemetery. Garibatas stood like a silent sentinel in the middle with only an occasional shell landing on its wooded slopes. Its fall to the government would force the insurgents to evacuate the entire Casa de Campo—"Argonne" of Spain and retire from the University City section. Three thousand insurgent soldiers, apparently trapped in University city, clung grimly to their positions despite withering government fire.

department of the plant went to work and departed through picket lines today, unmolested save for pickets' boos and cries of "scab" and "rat." With no effort made to open the factory itself, the strikers agreed to permit operations at the parts plant, from which automobile parts are shipped for repair purposes through Canada. Dozens of pickets, all wearing heavy overcoats and mufflers, marched in circles around each of the 29 gates to the plant. A chorus of boos went up from the picket line outside this parts department when three express trucks, loaded with crates and paper boxes, drove up to the gate. The pickets stopped them. Immediately Thompson, a d Mayor Alex Hall mounted a truck standing nearby. Crowd Cheers Mayor The mayor reassured a growing crowd that "no Mounties" would come to Oshawa "unless we say so." The crowd cheered. Soon after the strike started, Hepburn called several hundred of the famous Canadian Royal Mounted police to Toronto, to be on hand in case of trouble here. The thrifty way to travel First-class

1937 Ford V-8 owners pay less for their cars, pay less to run them, and travel first class all the time!

Basic reason is the V-8 engine. Eight cylinders give smoother performance. V-type construction is the most modern on land, sea, or in the air, and permits a much more compact power-plant. Space saved under the hood means more room in the body, and more comfort.

This year's V-8 engine is offered in two sizes, 85 horsepower for top-notch performance. 60 horsepower for rock-bottom economy. The latter, available in five body types, makes possible the lowest Ford prices in years and the greatest gasoline mileage in Ford history.

To this choice of V-8 engine sizes, add the other Ford first-class features—Center-Poise Ride, Easy-Action Safety Brakes, all-steel body, advanced design—and you'll realize why the Ford V-8 is the quality car in the low-price field.

Norris' Words in Voting Against War 20 Years Ago Ring Strangely Prophetic

By RODNEY DUTCHER
Pampa Daily NEWS Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, April 9 — Senator George Norris of Nebraska is not one to look back. He has not in 1937 found him looking ahead toward his grandiose plans for TVA-type development of every major river reserve of the country. Lots of people think Norris is a little crazy on power and flood-control development. Perhaps he is.

But if Norris cared to look backward instead of forward, he would see himself in other early April days of 20 years ago when he was thought even crazier. And yet after 20 years any unbalance he might have revealed then looks a little like the fine frenzy of a prophet.

Norris is the only man in the Senate who sat there 20 years ago and took his political (perhaps even his physical) life in his hands to vote against the declaration of war on Germany.

The Congressional Record pages of April 4, 1917, are crinkly with age now, but they are worth re-reading in the light of an anniversary that finds the United States again struggling to insure neutrality in any wars that may be brewing in Europe.

"Time to Pause"
Twenty years ago, speaking before the Senate on Wilson's proposal for war, Norris said:
"Before taking this momentous step, and while standing on the brink of this terrible vortex, we ought to pause and calmly and judiciously consider the terrible consequences of the step we are about to take."

"To my mind, what we ought to have maintained from the beginning was the strictest neutrality. If we had done this, I do not now believe we would have been on the verge of war at the present time. . . ."

"No close student of recent history will deny that both Great Britain and Germany have, on numerous occasions since the beginning of the war, flagrantly violated in the most serious manner the rights of neutral vessels and neutral nations under existing international law as recognized up to the beginning of this war by the civilized world."

"The only difference is that in the case of Germany we have persisted in our protest, while in the case of England we have submitted. . . ."

"We have loaned many hundreds of millions of dollars to the allies in this controversy. . . it has been instrumental in bringing about a public sentiment in favor of our country taking a course that would make every bond worth 100 cents on the dollar. . . the greatest propaganda the world has ever seen. . . ."

Norris cited a Wall Street broker's customer-letter that said Canada and Japan were at war and were more prosperous than ever before.

"To whom does war bring prosperity?" he cried.

"War brings no prosperity to the great mass of common and patriotic citizens. It increases the cost of living to those who toil."

"We are taking a step today that is fraught with untold danger. We are going into war on the command of gold. . . ."

"And even if we do not cross the Atlantic and go into the trenches, we are going to pile up a debt that the tolling masses that shall come many generations after us will have to pay. . . ."

"I know that I am powerless to stop it. I know that this war madness has taken possession of the financial and political powers of the country. . . I would be willing to surrender up my life if I could cause this awful cup to pass. . . ."

"I charge no man with a wrong motive, but it seems to me that this war craze has robbed us of our judgment. I feel that we are about to put the dollar sign on the American flag. . . ."

"I have heard with rejoicing of the overthrow of the Czar of Russia. . . . I hope and pray that a similar revolution may take place in Germany, and that on the ruins of military despotism may be established a German republic, when the Great German people may work out their world destiny. The working out of that problem is not an American problem. . . ."

"We are now the greatest neutral nation."

"Upon the passage of this resolution we will have joined Europe in the great catastrophe and taken America into entanglements that will not end with this war, but will live and bring their evil influences upon many generations yet unborn."

"I do not think that it was necessary to go to war with either of them (Great Britain or Germany). I think we had the power in our hands by which we could have avoided trouble with both of them and let them fight out their own battles."

It was all said so long ago, and yet in a world preparing frenziedly for another war, it has a strangely familiar sound.

STRENGTH OF SALVATION ARMY IS SIMPLICITY, SAYS CAPTAIN

(Editor's note: This is one of a series of articles written by Captain Herman Lambrecht on the subject, "What is the Salvation Army?" Capt. Lambrecht is head of the local chapter.)

By Capt. Herman Lambrecht
The strength of Salvation Army religion is in its simplicity. Its doctrine is a militant form of fundamentalism, adhering unquestionably to the precepts and promises of the Bible, without theological hair-splitting and with forms, rites or ceremonies of any kind. It isn't concerned with the fact that the human mind finds it difficult to accept some of the vital tenets of Scripture, nor does it attempt to explain these apparent mysteries in human terms. It holds that if a man will search the Scriptures diligently, and put into practice in all sincerity as much as he can understand, he will find little trouble in taking the rest for granted. It readily admits that a mind which cannot account for the source of such a commonplace blessing as the electric light which illuminates the room need not attempt to grasp the infinite power and capacity of the Deity. It argues convincingly enough that the best proof of the Divine truth and power of the Scripture is to be found in the personal transformations they have wrought in millions of cases in which human remedies and philosophies have been ineffectual.

The religious work centers in the local corps, which is "The Army designation for the individual congregation or church organization. The work is organized in the military manner, and military terminology is used throughout. The corps building, or hall, is known as the "citadel"; the pastor is an "officer"; and the members are "soldiers"; and the sphere of activity is the "field" and the member becomes formally attached by signing the "articles of war" and being publicly enrolled, which indicates that from then on he is to engage in actual warfare against sin, poverty and distress. The reason for the military form of organization is that it is the one certain way of getting things done quickly and efficiently. It keeps up the mood of emergency, and makes it less easy for the work to fall into a lifeless and unprogressive routine.

The standard of service laid down by the rules and regulations of The Army set a definite program open-air and inside services. The officer in charge is required to carry out this program. The open-air meeting is the practical method of carrying out the original and fundamental purpose of the organization: to take the gospel to those who need it. Many types of inside services are held, sometimes in hired auditoriums or theatres, but the basis of the continuous evangelistic campaign is to be found in the corps services on the streets and in the halls, held during the week as well as on Sundays.

While each member of the organization is expected to take an active part in the program of the local corps and wear the official uniform and cannot be classed as an active member unless he does this willingly and cheerfully, the commissioned officer at the head of the local corps is the only member of the aggregation who is compensated in any way for his work.

Although The Army meets a distinct need in the religious life of the community it co-operates in every helpful way with the churches of all denominations and is always ready to participate in any concerted movement for the advancement of the general cause of religion.

"For a very long number of years I have come into close, personal, and official contact with The Salvation Army. I am familiar with its splendid work. I believe that no similar organization is more worthy of private and public support than The Salvation Army."—Hon. Herbert H. Lehman, Governor of the State of New York.

How a Bank Meets Its Expenses

—that are incurred in rendering services and in furnishing necessary supplies.

To render banking services and to furnish checkbooks, deposit slips and passbooks costs money. A well-managed bank ordinarily covers a large part of the cost of rendering such services to its depositors by employing their free balances in good loans and investments. This bank gives its depositors full benefit of this principle by conducting its business with maximum efficiency to keep its operating costs low. On small, or highly active accounts, which otherwise would not pay their way, a service fee is charged in accordance with sound banking principles. These principles will be fully explained by our officers on request.

Stone Cabins Grace Palo Duro State Park

Native stone cabins like the one shown in the upper picture are being built in Palo Duro State Park, overlooking the vast Palo Duro Canyon. They are double unit cabins, each complete with a bed, a kitchen, toilet facilities and furnished with natural, hand-made cedar furniture. The lower picture shows a cabin interior.

Three cabins have been completed in the canyon rim, near El Coronado Lodge, and work is to start soon on two more. Building the cabins is part of the program to attract tourists and vacationists to the 15,000-acre canyon park. These new units, the recently completed entrance gate, and the gate control station are new buildings visitors are invited to inspect Sunday as guests of the State Park Board. Admission to the park will be free. The party is in celebration of the fourth birthday of the CCC, which has furnished labor for the park development work.

TRAILER ADVENTURE

By Nard Jones NEA Service, Inc.

Chapter XVI Never would Martha Brittain be able to remember clearly the night and day following her discovery that Speddon had gone north without Betty Hayes—the night and day which took her from the California border to Portland, that busy metropolis of northern Oregon.

She knew that she must have slept, but at what spot along the crazy coast of Northern California or southern Oregon she did not remember. Sometimes, long afterward, she recalled bits of scenery—the ocean breaking in a rim of white far below the highway. Or a tall rock jutting from the sand. Or a stretch of shaggy-barked pines stretching over rolling yellow grass. Sometimes she would recall the names of towns or remember vaguely inquiring her way. She remembered, too, having a sandwich and coffee in a small, smoky restaurant. But it was all as in a dream—and the rest was blank.

Afterward she knew that if it hadn't been for the shock of the news at the border she wouldn't have gone on north at all. Cool and sober judgment had made her stay on, since the traffic officer seemed so certain that Betty had not proceeded with Speddon into the north. But oftentimes Providence steps in to take a hand, to make mortal retributions. Betty was to believe that this must have been the case during those bleak 48 hours after she left the California border, those hours when she seemed to have driven on blindly, without consciousness and without reason.

But she would never forget the moment which brought her into grim reality—a moment of surprise that struck her like a dash of icy water. It was a slim white sign-post which she slowed down to read, her mind struggling from its fog. At first the word connoted nothing, and then she took it in its meaning. Even then she could not believe it, was inclined to think it the roadside trick of some itinerant wag. She stopped at a roadside stand a little farther on and asked the freckled little shopkeeper how far it was to Portland.

"About 14 miles, lady. Just keep on going the way you are." Then she knew that the sign had been right. She had driven—somehow—more than 200 miles across a western state, and yet she remembered no more than a handful of scattered moments from it! While the freckled urchin gaped curiously, Martha sat silently in the coupe trying to remember, trying to collect her shattered bearings.

The words of the California state trooper officer drifted back to her. "I looked in the record book and found Speddon's name and his license number. He was okayed through and nobody was with him." Nobody was with him. That was what had paralyzed her reason. It struck her suddenly that Betty was dead—and then mercifully all reason had grown dim. She had functioned like an automaton, Martha remembered stories of soldiers in the Great War, of how when death was all about them, and their eyes were seeing frightful things, they went on without knowing or caring—because though God in His wisdom were protecting them in that awful hour from something which might drive them into an insanity worse than death.

But now as she sat there, slowly reclaiming her grip upon reality, she saw that the officer's words might really be the first ray of sun that had pierced since the moment she had escaped, or Speddon had let her go before crossing the border. In that happy event, her first move would be to get in touch with Martha. With a star Martha realized that, according to Sloss' itinerary, she should have made several stops before reaching Portland. But now the best she could do was to go on to Portland and wait for Betty's message there.

Filled with a renewed hope, she turned to the child in the little fruit stand. "Thanks so much..." She held out a shining quarter, and, pop-eyed, the urchin grabbed it, stammering his own thanks profusely.

Consulting Sloss' itinerary book, Martha read, "Rose City Trailer Haven, Portland, Oregon." Sliding the little book back into the pocket of the coupe, she shoved into gear and was off for Portland.

BULLISH. Credit departments of New York's leading banks say that the business picture is encouraging. The constructive factors are far more numerous than those regarded as disturbing. While it is true that the labor situation has resulted in substantial losses of corporate revenue in some spots, all is well.

Because of dissension in the industry itself, efforts to place an embargo on steel scrap exports may fail. Senators who have agreed to sponsor the legislation will do so only when the industry clearly states what it wants. Should the industry fail to come to an agreement, no steel scrap export embargo bill can be expected.

NECESSARY. Informed investment circles have been quietly adding to their holdings of railroad equipment manufacturing equities. Here's the inside: Transportation officials privately estimate that railroads will spend $275,000,000 this year for new equipment and modernization of old rolling stock.

ESTIMATES. Based on anticipated railroad buying a brokerage firm lists the following 1937 per share estimates of the leading equipment and accessory companies: American Locomotive, $5.50; Baldwin Locomotive, $2; Lima Locomotive, $6; American Car & Foundry, $6; General American Transportation, $4.50; Pressed Steel Car, $2.50; Pullman, $6; American Brake Shoe, $3.75; American Steel Foundries, $5; New York Air Brake, $6; Superheater, $3.50; Symington-Gould, $1.75; and Westinghouse Air Brake, $3.50 a share.

SWITCHING. Brokerage firms report little public interest in public utility securities. This despite the fact that these issues are regarded as being in a strong technical position because of the sharp average price decline. Possible adverse governmental legislation and interference account for the lack of interest.

WAITING. While average steel mill activity is running high an important branch of the industry has been lagging. Letting of construction steel—since the turn of the year—have been runnings more than 20 per cent under the like period of 1936.

Q. When was the school for the deaf and dumb opened in Austin? A. It was opened in rented buildings in South Austin, Jan. 2, 1857, with I. Van Nostrand of New York as principal and with three pupils enrolled, an appropriation of $10,000 having been made Aug. 20, 1856 for renting the buildings and getting the school in operation.

Q. Where, when and by whom was the "Dolores" colony located and what became of it? A. On Los Moras Creek, 12 miles above its junction with the Rio Grande, some 25 or 30 miles from the present town of Eagle Pass. Dr. J. C. Beale, an Englishman, headed the party of 59, who reached there March 16, 1834. Because of crop failures, the colony was gradually abandoned, and the remaining eleven men and women and three children started for the coast to return to England. On April 2, 1836 they were attacked by Indians, the men and an infant child were killed, and the others taken into captivity.

Q. What led immediately to the strife that resulted in the expulsion of the Cherokees from Texas? A. The Texas Senate, in December, 1836, repudiated the treaty made by its commissioners on the ground that they had exceeded their authority and, in 1838, Texas began locating grants in the Cherokee country in disregard of the rights of the Indians, who resorted to raids to punish these overt acts.

Q. Who was Juan Cortina and how was he regarded by Texans? A. He was a Mexican general in command at Matamoras, of which town he was also mayor, and from 1850 to 1875 Texans thought him responsible for the many murders and thefts of cattle both in Texas and Mexico. His men grew bolder in marauding expeditions between the Nueces and Rio Grande until, in the 1870's they were shipping many shiploads of stolen Texas cattle to Cuba, through the Mexican port of Bagdad.

BOTH SIDES BUSY PULLING WIRES IN COURT STRUGGLE

BY RODNEY DUTCHER, The Daily News Washington Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—The way this Supreme Court battle is being fought out, especially with respect to propaganda, bears many resemblances to the election campaign of last summer and fall.

The administration political machine and the Democratic publicity machine under Charlie Michelson, are functioning for the President much as they did then. The national committee staff has been skeletonized and operates, of course, on a much smaller scale.

The publicity machine, with Michelson at its head and Eddie Roddan and Farmer Murphy at his side, publicizes the cause under the name of "Public Information Committee." The personnel and the Farley organization work in co-operation with the local and county Democratic organizations, the Young Democrats and similar groups.

Also, that valuable campaign auxiliary, Labor's Non-Partisan League, sends to its key members every two or three days a new issue of the "Supreme Court Calendar," which analyzes court opinions affecting labor, takes shots at opponents of the Roosevelt plan, and supplies material for labor speakers.

Republicans Keep Muzz. Officially, the Republicans are keeping out of the fight. No propaganda issues from their national headquarters here, and their 19 Senators and 89 Congressmen, all solidly against the Roosevelt plan, have kept mum on the theory it would be a mistake to enable the President to present the case as a partisan issue.

Actually, anyone with political sense must know that Chairman John D. M. Hamilton and his few but capable aides have been busy behind the scenes recently.

One Republican local organization mailed circulars urging citizens to "write to the following men"—then named 29 "undecided" Democratic Senators and George W. Nebeker, independent, and Henrik Shipstead, Minnesota Farmer-Laborite.

Ask For Contributions. The big source of opposition propaganda—aside from the Wheeler-Burke-Van Nuy's unit, which organizes witnesses before the judiciary committee and the radio programs, with Secretary Ben Stern in Van Nuy's office serving as a sort of clearing house—is Frank E. Gannett's National Committee to Uphold Constitutional Government.

Other Groups in Fight. Various other groups are issuing propaganda and urgently appealing for funds to fight the plan. Among them the American Coalition of Patriotic Civic and Fraternal Societies, whose president, John B. Trevor, has long fought for immigration restriction; the American Coalition of New York's "Save the Supreme Court committee"; and the late Richard P. Hotson's Constitutional Democracy Association, with a board of retired admirals, generals and other officers and various classes of membership costing up to $1,000 for "founders."

Two Husbands—Three Divorces

It was the third divorce for Fanny Todd Mitchell, above, but she obtained it in Reno from her first husband, Leon Leonidoff. The playwright divorced Leonidoff in 1932 and married Seymour Woliner, wealthy Peoria, Ill., resident, the next day. She divorced Woliner the next year and then remarried Leonidoff. Now, Miss Mitchell has divorced Leonidoff again.

Where Eight Died In Mountain Peak Crash

A mass of charred, tangled wreckage on a snowy, almost inaccessible hillside, this was all that was left of the huge airliner which crashed and killed its eight occupants last Saturday. This picture gives an idea of the terrain around Baldy peak, near McNary, Ariz., and shows how part of the ship escaped the flames while the fuselage burned, six of the bodies being charred beyond recognition.

Mrs. Schneider Remembers Early Days In This Section

By LULA MAE FARLEY One of the most interesting of the pioneer group who blazed the way for modern homes and comfortable living on the plains of the Texas Panhandle is Mrs. Alex Schneider, Sr., of Pampa. When interviewed in her apartment at the Schneider hotel Mrs. Schneider had just finished assisting with the details of a Kiwanis luncheon.

thing we had. They even took my little girl's doll and my boy's candy. The soldiers came along and went after the Indians. They brought them back and made them give everything back to me. But I allowed them to keep some of the food."

Go To Switzerland "My brother had been managing my husband's brewery and when he died, we went back to Kentucky. The children went to school there. Then we went to Switzerland after a few years to see Mr. Schneider's mother. We stayed there for several years, and the children were educated in Switzerland. My son Alex was the first to want to go back to the United States. Then we all wanted to. So we came over on a French boat and went to our old place in Kentucky.

From 1924 to 1936 more than 10,000,000 people visited Lenin's tomb in Moscow's Red Square.

SHIP CANAL ENGINEERS READY IF CONGRESS CHANGES ITS MIND

OCALA, Fla. (AP)—Army engineers are ready any time to begin again the gigantic task of cutting a ship canal across Florida should Congress side with Major General Edward M. Markham, chief of engineers, instead of the war department's board of army engineers.

Markham maintains the canal should be completed even though he now believes it will cost some $34,000,000 more than the original estimate of $163,000,000. The board declares the project is unjustified economically. Their conflicting reports are being studied by the House rivers and harbors committee.

Started in 1935 Engineers on the job have maintained a skeleton force ever since the original allotment of $5,400,000, which congress refused to add to, ran out in August, 1936. To show for the sum are a cut 10 to 20 miles long, averaging 30 feet in depth, a construction headquarters at Camp Roosevelt, and the foundations of the first bridge at Santos—all near here. More than 13,000,000 cubic yards of earth were removed.
