Typhoon Ida Hits In Philippines

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) —Typhoon Ida shrieked across the northern Philippine islands today with winds up to 150 miles an hour and dumped torrential rains on Manila and the rich tobacco provinces to the north.

No casualties were reported in the first hours.

Most communications circuits were knocked out in northern Luzon, the major island in the Archipelago.

Ida was the second typhoon to bludgeon the Manila region this summer. Last June, Typhoon Winnie killed more than 100 persons and caused damage estimated at $30 to $40 million.

Gin-Gait, Rum-Lip or Bulge Betray Habits

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Ever wonder how the wife can tell when you've been tipping on the sly?

According to one psychiatrist, you may be giving yourself away by gin gait, rum-lip or beer bulge.

Dr. E. Y. Williams, head of the neuro-psychiatry department at Howard University, told of these and other symptoms peculiar to particular types of booze in a report presented at meetings of the National Medical Association this week.

Gin gait, according to Williams, is a tendency to lift the legs high "as though walking on cotton." Rum drinkers can be spotted by a reddening of the lower lip or their squinting eyes. And beer drinkers have a tendency to gain weight, often resulting in the familiar "beer belly."

Williams also found that different beverages often have mental symptoms of their own. He said his study of 500 alcoholics indicated that heavy drinkers of gin tend to hold on to their marriages, while wine drinkers have a high divorce and separation rate.

Large amounts of whiskey do the most physical damage to the body of any form of alcohol, Williams said. Beer cuts the appetite and whets the thirst.

Williams said the study's results should help physicians treat alcoholics according to their favorite drink.

"In general, wine affects the brain and so does gin," he said.

"Whiskey hits you in the gut and beer affects the liver. Rum is a mystery—we don't know just what to expect."

Williams' paper, however, conceded there was one flaw in this approach.

"Because so many patients (in his study) drank everything and anything that contained alcohol, the task in many instances became extremely complicated," the paper said.

Bus Driver Turns Out too Rich and Also too Poor

SOUTHEND, England (UPI) —Stanley Bird is both too rich and too poor.

The local council turned down an application by Bird, a 34-year-old bus driver, for a mortgage on a new house on the ground that his $32 per week salary would not cover payments. It refused to take into account that he earned considerably more through overtime.

Thus stymied, Bird applied to be given a low-rent house in a public housing development. But the council took his overtime earnings into account this time and ruled he earned too much to qualify.

"It doesn't make sense," Bird said.

CAPITAL SPENDING

Future Post Office Big Feature at Fair

Visitors to the New York World's Fair from Pampa have a unique opportunity to see a post office of the future, Postmaster O. K. Gaylor said.

A carefully chosen group of 80 employees from New York area post offices man the facility which handles all the Fair's mail and some from the Flushing, New York, area. The outside mail is used to keep the highly mechanized devices operating at "full tilt."

The post office handles approximately 250,000 pieces of mail each day.

Postcards to friends and relatives back home are a big item. About 30,000 are mailed from the Fair each day. One third of these are addressed to persons overseas.

Foreign visitors have no trouble understanding U.S. postal operations. The facility has staff members who speak 20 languages.

Gaylor notes that residents of Pampa who attend the Fair and wish to try out their foreign language ability can either talk with the multi-lingual window clerks or listen to a tape recorded presentation in the post office lobby which features individual earphones for those who speak Japanese, French, German, Italian and Spanish.

New equipment on hand includes an experimental Pitney-Bowes Centrifed which spins envelopes rapidly around a wheel-like mechanism and places them upright on their longer side. They then move into a machine which cancels stamps and postmarks envelopes at a rate of 500 letters a minute.

Letters are sorted to go all over the world by machines which position the mail so that the addresses are visible to an operator who sits in front of a keyboard similar to that on a typewriter. By pressing the correct buttons, 100 letters a minute are automatically directed to bins for 50 different destinations.

A larger device, the Burroughs sorter, drops letters and cards into 131 different bins at a rate of 58 letters per minute for each of the twelve operators.

The work area is surrounded by a ramp and gallery for visitors which is open from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m., seven days a week. Tape recorded vignettes explain the action on the work floor and describe the operations of each machine.

Outside the building, mail boxes from 21 countries serve as background for the red, white and blue box of the United States.

A prototype stainless steel mail box being tested as an eventual replacement for the standard box used for the past 40 years is located at one of the Fair's busiest intersections.

Gaylor suggests that Pampa area visitors to the Fair express their comments on the new box by dropping a note addressed to the "Superintendent, World's Fair Post Office" through the modernistic mail slot. Postage is not necessary. If they wish, visitors may discuss their reactions with clerks at the post office building.

Pioneer's Portrait Sought by Committee

PANHANDLE (Spl) — The Carson County Historical Committee is trying to locate a portrait of Samuel Price Carson to be framed and placed in the Carson County court house.

They are asking the help of everyone in locating a picture of the man for whom Carson County was named.

Many persons have long believed that the county was named for Kit Carson but according to information in the Handbook on Texas, prepared by the Texas State Historical Committee, the county was named for Samuel P. Carson, born in North Carolina, lived much of his life in Texas and died in Arkansas.

Known for their rich shrimp grounds, giant tortoises and iguanas, the Galapagos Islands belong to Ecuador.

Foreign News Commentary

By HENRY SHAPIRO
MOSCOW (UPI) — The Russians last week were making much of the anniversary of the tri-power Moscow nuclear test ban treaty which when signed a year ago was hailed as a turning point in the history of the cold war.

A year later Moscow still considers the agreement a "turning point" although it has not lived up to the most optimistic expectations voiced that August day in the Kremlin when Dean Rusk, Britain's Alec Douglas-Home and Nikita S. Khrushchev clinked champagne glasses in its honor.

The Soviet premier has hailed the treaty as an important step toward the relaxation of international tensions. Similar sentiments have been officially expressed in Washington and London.

"There is no geiger counter," Izvestia said, "which could accurately register the cleansing of the air from the miasma of cold war."

"But it was the first international agreement," the government paper added, "which to some degree put the brakes on the armaments race."

Diplomats here agree with the Soviet assessment that had the limited nuclear agreement not been concluded there might have been no "definite improvement in the international situation" as Izvestia put it.

In its wake followed modest unilateral reductions of the defense budgets of the United States and the reunion, agreements to ban nuclear missiles in orbit and cutbacks in the production of fissionable materials.

And now the Russians are reported to be making new soundings for the extension of the nuclear tests ban agreement to include underground tests.

Aside from the obvious universal benefits of the test ban agreement, to the Russian man in the street it has had an even more important result — the slow but steady normalization of American-Soviet relations.

Whenever Americans and Russians get together, officially or privately, the Russians never fail to point to the test ban agreement as the source and the first step toward an understanding with the United States.

But in all their talks lately, including the recent one between Premier Khrushchev and banker David Rockefeller, the Russians have expressed concern that the forthcoming American presidential election may arrest the process of normalization of relations.

Doctors Report On Case Study Of Wife-Beating

CHICAGO (UPI) — A wife beater's wife will endure beatings for years even though a wife beater is usually a shy, ineffectual and henpecked husband, three doctors reported Friday.

The doctors, writing in the current American Medical Association's Archives of General Psychiatry, said a study of 62 wife beater cases showed the wives had been beaten periodically for 12 to 20 years before going to court.

The cases studied came from predominantly middle-class suburban families, the report said. The doctors said the wives' typical reasons for action emphasized the increasing age and strength of the oldest child—generally a boy.

"He is growing old enough now for his father's behavior to affect him," or "he is big enough now to really hurt his father," were typical reasons for action, the report.

Rogers to Talk At Panhandle

PANHANDLE (Sp) — Congressman Walter Rogers of the 18th District of Texas will be the speaker at the annual Fall Festival, Aug. 29.

Although he will have been in attendance at the National Democratic Convention, earlier in the week, he will come to Panhandle in time to ride in the parade on Saturday morning.

A barbecue will be served at noon. Following the barbecue the 589th U.S. Air Force Band from Amarillo Air Force Base will give a concert. This will be followed by the Congressman's speech. The band will also participate in the parade.

UIL Setting Up Fitness Program

FORT WORTH (UPI)—New rules of the University Interscholastic League are aimed at cutting down heat injuries in pre-season workouts, Rhea Williams, league director, said here Wednesday.

Williams, here for the Texas High School Coaches Association clinic, said three of the league's seven football classifications will not be covered by the rules. They apply to Classes AAAA and B and the six and eight-man division. The other divisions, which included 498 of the league's 944 schools, voted them down.

The rules say the schools must have a conditioning period of no-pads, no-contact workouts at the start of training Aug. 28. The 145 Class AAAA schools must have three days of conditioning; the rest, seven.

Another rule change new this year will let ninth grade students in Class AAAA participate in spring football practice with the high school they will attend the next semester.

Mystery Man, Cleve Williams Slated for Fight

HOUSTON (UPI)—Cleveland (Big Cat) Williams, the busiest heavyweight in the game, will fight a New Yorker with a high rating early in September, his manager said Thursday.

Hugh Benbow said that opponent's name would be learned when promoters announce the bout, but he said he is someone who has, at one time, been ranked higher than Williams.

Top O' Texas Wildlife

By STARKEY WHITEHORN

September 1 marks the opening date of the mourning dove season and October 30 marks the closing date in the north zone. The shooting hours will be from noon until sunset, with a daily bag of 12 and a possession limit of 24. Observations from the central part of the Panhandle indicate that the supply is considerably lower than in the past few years. The north zone consists of more than half the north part of the state.

Most, if not all, of the game wardens in the Panhandle and many other parts of the state began their fall roadside brood counts on quail the other day. They each conducted a survey on a pre-arranged twenty-mile route through typical quail terrain.

Doves Noted

My tally sheet registered zero for quail seen, but there were 15 mourning doves noted. That is less than a dove per mile. A few years ago, in the Spring Creek area, I counted more than a dove per minute observed as they were flying upstream, crossing the county road.

Doves are highly migratory and they are not always found in the same areas each year. However, they are usually found in areas containing ample amounts of food. Where there is plentiful food they are a bit more choosy of their haunts.

Last year the birds were also in short supply in many areas, while on some ranches they were found by the scores. Considering the fact that they are so highly mobile, it isn't a fair conclusion to estimate the trend in numbers by one or two surveys in one county alone. When all the figures come in from the other bird counters throughout the Panhandle, a better overall estimate should be in the offing.

One Legal Weapon

The only legal weapon for taking doves is the shotgun. This gun must be plugged to a three shell capacity. There is no open season on public roads. Shooting from a motor vehicle is also prohibited by law. A hunting license for those from 17 to 65 is required when hunting outside the county of their residence.

If the mourning dove season opened after the nesting season were completely over, then there would be practically no birds here by that time. There will be some birds still nesting after the first of September, but the peak of the nesting will be over.

These birds usually lay two eggs in a flimsily constructed nest. The young will leave the nest at 11 days for about the first time, and a few days later are off for good. Then the parent birds will build again and start over again within a few days after the young have departed. This procedure is repeated through the summer months. Mourning doves have been observed nesting eleven months of the year in this state. However, in the central and northern parts the nesting activities are more curtailed by weather than in the southern parts.

Amistad Dam

The biggest fishing hole of them all, and possibly the best, is bidding for attention at Parks and Wildlife Department headquarters.

It's the enormous Amistad Reservoir now being fashioned from the Rio Grande, Pecos and Devils Rivers just upriver from Del Rio on the Mexican border.

This reservoir, one of the largest water impoundments in the world, will create a fresh-water habitat supreme, according to Larry Campbell, department aquatic biologist, stationed at San Angelo.

Certainly there will be room for many fish in an area already famed for its catfish. The reservoir will extend 120 miles upstream on the Rio Grande, twenty and seventeen miles respectively up the tributary Devils and Pecos Rivers. Overall capacity will approximate 6,000,000 acre feet. By comparison, mighty Lake Texoma has only 1,730,000 acre feet.

Plenty of Fish
Departmental scientists, already shrinking the $100,000,000 project to terms of providing a mess of fish for the folk come completion date in 1968, envision a natural reproduction area capable of meeting the expected tremendous angling pressure.

Biologist Campbell emphasized that both the Devils and Pecos Rivers are permanently flowing, spring-fed streams; unsurpassed as blue catfish areas and will have vastly expanded water space.

Probing possibilities for the future, Campbell noted in his latest report to headquarters: "The preliminary (management program) plans being considered are to establish a high population of desirable-size largemouth bass in this clear water area (of Lake Walk and Devils Lake) which would serve as a brood stock for the huge new impoundment and also improve fishing prior to inundation, while the more turbid Rio Grande and Pecos stream areas would stock Amistad with flathead, blue and channel catfish."

Campbell is hopeful that the joint management program to be eventually worked out with the Mexican government will be judged strictly from the recreational dollar viewpoint. Spelling it out, he said: "We hope to proceed on the basis that catfish now being commercially harvested and sold for twenty cents a pound will be worth $1 a pound in terms of recreation."

Distances are Texas-size all the way. The dam will be six and one-half miles long and the widest stretch of water approximately five miles. And if you drop your fishing rig, false teeth or what have you overboard, just skip it because water depths will run up to 200 feet.

Sputnik I Launched Lindgren

By SANDY PADWE

NEW YORK (NEA) — It started when the Russians launched Sputnik I and then each year it grew and grew until Gerry Lindgren felt he had to do something.

"I was tired of reading and hearing how lazy Americans were," the Spokane, Wash., distance runner said. "It was giving us a bad name, so I thought if I accomplished something by running, someone else might do the same."

"Running gave me something to conquer and I hoped that by doing this other people would notice and reach higher and do better in their own lives."

As the youngster completed his explanation, silence enveloped the table where he was sitting, and three people just stared at this 18-year-old boy who had just graduated from high school.

His coach, one Tracy Walters of Rogers High School in Spokane, peered through horn-rimmed glasses and smiled understandingly at the others. He is responsible for Gerry Lindgren and he is proud of him.

He also has trained him so well that an Olympic gold medal is a very strong possibility in the 5,000 meter run. If Lindgren wins, it will be the first gold medal in a distance event — other than the steeplechase — since 1908.

"Gerry came to me as a sophomore interested in cross country," Walters said. "After getting to know him, it was obvious he was exceptional."

"We didn't just talk about track. We discussed other things like the problems in life and I found how concerned he was with everything."

"One day he came up to me and said, 'Coach, the young people have to start working harder. With our system of government we have so much opportunity to give and help other people and if we don't start working soon, we'll blow the chance.'"

"That is the way he is and this is his basis for running. Is he a prodigy? Well, I don't know. If a prodigy has courage, heart, determination and a gift, he is."

"He has a tremendous desire to work and a wonderful competitive spirit. He never worries about how he will perform or who he will go against. He just runs."

"When he first started, we analyzed the styles and training methods of the great distance runners in terms of Gerry's personality and physique."

"He runs in the hills like Snell, runs in the sand like Elliott, runs to the point of exhaustion like Zatopek."

All this time, Lindgren sat quietly, without expression while he was dissected, analyzed and interpreted by those at the table.

Just glancing at him, it is hard to believe he is one of the prime reasons for America's rapid improvement in the distance races, because he appears nervous and a bit emaciated at 5-6, 115 pounds.

"I don't have a special diet," he answered when someone asked about his strength. "It is just a matter of proper training."

"The hardest time I had was when I first started. Getting into shape was terrible. I can still remember the physical pain. But now when I feel pain I just think back and then I tell myself how tired I'm really NOT."

For the first time, he was smiling as he talked and it took a moment to fully understand what he said, but it made sense. In fact, it explained a lot more about his personality and the determination he has.

Banfield Surgery To Hurt Oilers

HOUSTON (UPI)—The Houston Oilers' all-star cornerback, Tony Banfield, was sidelined Saturday for at least six weeks because of knee surgery.

Banfield underwent surgery Friday for the second time on the knee and will not rejoin the club until perhaps the Oilers' second game Sept. 19 in Houston, trainer Bobby Brown said.

When the Oilers play Boston at Boston Sunday, Mark Johnson is scheduled to start at left cornerback. Rookies Pete Jacquess and Benny Nelson will alternate at the other cornerback.

Richeys Made Impression On European Tennis Fans

By SANDY PADWE

NEW YORK (NEA)—George Richey says his children, Cliff and Nancy, are intense.

The British might describe them differently. So would the French and Italians.

The reason is simple. Cliff and Nancy Richey, from Dallas, Tex., are different, but in amateur tennis this immediately makes one suspect.

They also are very talented, with 21-year-old Nancy ranked third among U.S. women and 17-year-old Cliff ranked first among U.S. juniors.

This spring they toured Europe together, and while they didn't win any major titles, they made vivid impressions everywhere, especially in England.

It seemed that Cliff was constantly battling officials and sister Nancy was always around to give him encouragement and backing.

"I don't know which time you're talking about," was Nancy's candid reply when asked about one of Cliff's encounters.

"But don't believe everything. The British have a way of blowing things out of proportion. Whenever they went this spring, it usually was together and neither missed the other's matches unless there was a scheduling conflict."

"There's no telling just how good Cliff will be," Nancy said. "He's probably the best 17-year-old who has ever played, and he's improving very rapidly."

"I can't even give him trouble any more," she continued half jokingly and half seriously. "Until he was about 14 I beat him regularly but now he overpowers me. One day, though, I won a set from him and it made him so mad he made me play another set and was boiling because I won three points."

That is a good description of the confident and somewhat cocky Master Richey, who started to swing a tennis racket when he was three and a half years old.

Their father, the tennis professional at Brook Hollow Golf Club in Dallas, was his teacher and even before Cliff became a teen-ager, the elder Mr. Richey knew he had an outstanding pupil.

Cliff's performance this year has proved his father correct because he owns victories over most of the world's top amateurs, including current U. S. singles champion Rafael Osuna.

"He's still 18 months away from being a mature tennis player," the elder Richey said. "By that time he should be ready to be a consistent winner."

Nancy, meanwhile, has been winning consistently for the last three years, with 1964 her best ever.

She recently won the U. S. clay courts title and took the deciding match for the United

Carol Sorenson Prepares For Place on Curtis Team

By Brenda Warner Rottzell

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — If Carol Sorenson doesn't get a berth on this year's United States Curtis Cup team, it won't be for lack of preparation in the game she loves.

She's been playing golf since her pro father put a sawed-off club in her hands when she was six, and she chose to attend Arizona State University at Tempe primarily because there "people can play golf all the year around."

The petite, freckled blonde assessed her chances of being named to the Curtis Cup team of top women amateurs who'll face a similar British team at the Royal Portcawl Golf Club in Great Britain Sept. 11-12 and "hoped" they're good.

"If you look at all the other amateurs, I've probably got the best record of anyone the last three years," Miss Sorenson said. "In the long run I don't think anyone has been up close as many times in as many major tournaments."

In national competition, she has the 1964 Trans-Mississippi and 1962 Western Open and National Collegiate titles to her credit. She competed in the Western the last four years, gaining the quarter-finals of the 1964 competition.

The Janesville, Wis., native won the Wisconsin women's title four times, in 1959, 1960, 1962 and 1963. This year's state tournament conflicted with the Western.

What catches the observer's eye, aside from Miss Sorenson's attractiveness, is the age at which she won her titles. Only 21 now, she won her first state women's title at 16 and was 19 when she won the Western and National Collegiate championships.

"I think I was about six when I started playing," she said. "Dad sawed off a couple clubs to begin with and I got a set of junior clubs when I was nine. I was 13 when I got my first set of regulation custom-made clubs."

Miss Sorenson said she definitely will not follow in her father's footsteps and turn pro. "I just like the game for the fun of it," she said decisively. "I never plan to make a living doing it."

Giardello's Opponent Undecided

By BILL McCORMICK

NEW YORK (NEA) — A faltering ring champion is like a sick sheep strayed from the flock — tempting bait to the wolves of the boxing world.

The pack is yelping at the heels of Joey Giardello, the 34-year-old veteran of 16 gruelling years in the ring, who holds the middleweight title.

Convinced that Joey is ready to be pounced upon and eaten alive, the predators have been stalking Giardello since he won the title from Dick Tiger last December.

The pack went in full cry when the New York State Athletic Commission decreed that Joey must sign up by Aug. 10 to defend his laurels against "Joey Archer or a suitable opponent."

The New Jersey promotional group which staged Giardello's bout with Tiger and holds a contract for the champion's first defense apparently entered into an agreement with Jose Torres, ranked seventh, to fight Joey.

Giardello, who made it the hard way, scotched that one, saying: "He hasn't earned a shot. I had to fight everybody for 15 years to get a chance. Let him do the same."

An unidentified group is supposed to be working hand in glove with the city fathers of Las Vegas, Nev., to bring a Giardello-Ruben (Hurricane) Carter title bout to that desert oasis, but nobody can find out much about this project.

Joey Archer, ranked as second contender, just ahead of Carter, has posted a $2,500 bond with the New York Commission to certify his serious intentions.

Giardello acknowledges a moral obligation to give the first chance at his title to the man he took it away from, Dick Tiger.

Odd Pets Find Homes in Pampa

Pampa veterinarians are becoming accustomed to receiving queries on care and handling of pets ranging from A to Z — alligators to zany monkeys.

An array of oddball animals rivaling many zoos can be found leading sheltered, pampered lives in homes of Pampa residents who have taken a fancy to the unusual.

The odd animals also display odd traits. Pampa's alligator, for example, eats only a marble-size cube of hamburger each week and capers with a bullfrog for companionship. A talking Raven named Sambo likes to shout "Hey, Maud," and drinks Coke from the bottle.

A mynah bird, when asked if he wants to go fishing, replies clearly, "No, I want to play golf, play golf." The zany one, a squirrel monkey, is still in a wild state, but being tamed. He runs amok when let out of his cage and feeds on bananas, raisins, cookies, rice and apples.

And then of course, there's Stinky, the skunk.

STINKY — Eleven-year-old Donna Beard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Beard, 1152 N. Starkweather, holds her pet skunk Stinky in the top right picture. The frisky six week old skunk was given to the Beards by a friend and it keeps the family collie at a safe distance.

MYNAH BIRD — Mrs. John Mobley, 2314 Alcock, waits for her Greater Hill mynah bird to speak in the right center picture. The two year old bird is called Bob and was originally brought to Pampa to sell at the Aquarium but Mrs. Mobley became attached to the bird and keeps Bob as her pet.

"HEY MAUD" — A 15-year-

ALLIGATOR CLARENCE

— Six-year-old Chuck Hatcher, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hatcher, 816 N. Christy, holds his favorite animal which is tagged Clarence, in the top left picture. The alligator is three years old and since alligators grow slowly can be kept safely for a number of years. Clarence and a giant bullfrog are kept in an aquarium in Chuck's room.

TOO FRISKY — Jim Terrell,

Dear Abby....

Son's Thoughts About Father's Obligations

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I can't get that Father's Day column out of my mind. This is for the mother who sent you her 19-year-old son's letter in which he said, "If I turn out to be a father like my dad, I wish somebody would shoot me."

Only when your son has sons of his own will he appreciate what his father has done for him. I assume your son is not paying his own way through college. Few sons do.

I had the same type of father. He never played ball with me. Never talked with me, man-to-man. He never took me on trips, either. But he worked every day. And he paid the bills. And he put food on the table and clothes on my back, and shoes on my feet. And he quietly did without himself.

I used to feel resentment, too. But now I have sons of my own, and realize that there are many ways of showing love. And my father loved me no less for his inability to show it. One day that son will live to eat his words.

OLDER AND WISER

DEAR ABBY: The letter on Father's Day from the boy who was disappointed in his father bothered me. Considering the thousands of boys who have had to grow up without fathers, I think this young man is lucky to have had even a part-time father. At least he's made a home for his family and has paid the bills. If the boy fears his younger brother will suffer from the absence of a father's love and guidance, why doesn't he spend more time being the older brother? Older brothers are usually adored and looked up to by the younger ones.

I have four sons, from 9 to 16. Their father has been in the state mental hospital since the oldest boy was eight years old, so it is almost as though they had no father at all. His mind is gone and he will be there the rest of his life. Yet the boys keep busy, help each other, help me, and I have never once heard any of them complain about how tough it is to be without a father.

MOTHER OF FOUR

DEAR ABBY: I read the letter from the college son to his mother, criticizing his father. The boy sounded like an over-protected, spoiled, sniveling brat, just looking for points against probably a hard-working, long suffering, devoted, introverted father. Who sent this kid to college? My husband is a quiet man, and our three sons adore him in a quiet way. They feel no necessity to drool over one another. One son is a newspaper man and the other two are engineers, and they all married wonderful girls. The boys turned out to be the kind fathers brag about, but my husband never bragged. My husband never took the boys hunting or fishing. In the summer he either was going to college (he is a school teacher) or working to supplement our income. He never wrote any of them a letter in his life. Yet they loved and respected each other and enjoyed a fine relationship. What we need today is more strong silent men who quietly rule their homes. Then no son will hope to be shot if he isn't taken fishing or to Disneyland. Honestly!

WICHITA WIFE

DEAR ABBY: Apropos the letter from the college boy who condemned his father for not being a "good" father:

I am willing to bet that if you were to ask one hundred successful, reasonably well-adjusted family men if their fathers ever played ball with them, took them on trips, or sat down and talked "man-to-man" with them, ninety-five would have to say no.

Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Ware are the bride's parents. Parents of the bridegroom are Mrs. Glenna Miller and Joe Johnson, Muncie, Ind.

The bride's sister, Mrs. Charles Hebard, attended as matron of honor. Mrs. Arvil Ware, Lawton, Okla., was bridesmatron and bridesmaids were Miss Barbara Hager and Miss Margaret Powell. Kay Hebard, niece of the bride, was flower girl.

Serving the bridegroom as best man was Charles Hebard. Groomsman were Arvil Ware, Kenneth Ware and Butch Ware, all brothers of the bride. Mark Kirk and Donald Webber seated the wedding guests and Richard Williams was ringbearer.

Upon their return from a wedding trip to Oklahoma, the couple will make their home in Amarillo where the bridegroom is stationed with the U. S. Air Force.

Parisienne Sub-Deb Glamour Girl Model Hits Top in Haute Couture

By ALINE MOSBY PARIS (UPI) — Paris is on a youth kick with its fashion models.

A beautiful French high school girl, all of 14 years old, joined the older mannequins in slinking through the salon of designer Antonio Castillo to show his fall and winter collection.

The sub-deb glamour girl, Christine Eustraiades, is a Parisienne of Greek ancestry. With her exotic sloe eyes, adult figure and long, brown hair twisted into a chignon in back, she could pass for 19 or 20.

Twice a day this girl, barely out of pinafores, models the luxurious, expensive creations of the Spanish-born designer, Castillo. But the rest of her time she studies her school lessons in a pullover sweater and skirt like any other teen-ager.

Christine's astonishing arrival on the fashion scene apparently has two reasons.

First of all, Castillo has been specializing in designing for mature women but now, Christine said, "He has made an extremely young collection and wanted a young model."

In fact, many Paris creators are whipping up younger and younger designs so that there's little difference between what a 22-year-old and a woman of 50 wears.

Also, some salons are pulling away from highly-stylized mature fashion models. Grown-ups still are in vogue at Pierre Balmain's salon because he dresses the wealthy and aristocratic of the world. One Balmain model is a frankly 46.

But some other houses have hired a sprinkling of girls under 20 this year. These include Christian Dior, Yves St. Laurent and Nina Ricci, where designer Gerard Pipart makes downright "little girl" designs.

As designer Jacques Griffe said, "There aren't any more 'mannequins'—only young and pretty girls. For the most part they do not have any particular training any more, but let themselves be natural."

The majority of models still range between 22 and 35. And as one said, "I say I'm 23 but I'm really 30."

Young Christine took no modeling lessons—"I just watch how the other girls at Castillo walk," she said.

Area Girl Scouts Convene at Kiowa

"Fun, learning, adventure — 52 weeks a year" is a theme with a meaning when you're a Girl Scout. Camping, of course, has been synonymous with Girl Scouting and summertime since the first Girl Scouts, ankle length skirts notwithstanding, learned to rough it at the first Girl Scout camp, Camp Lowlands, near Savannah, Ga., in 1912.

More than 100 area Girl Scouts will arrive at Camp Kiowa near Canadian on Aug. 9, the opening of Quivira Council's established camp and troop encampment.

Celia Fowler, council camping co-ordinator, has announced that Barbara Goodnight of Denton will direct the established camp and Mrs. Vaden Fowler of Borger will direct the troop encampment. Twenty four staff members will supervise the two camps.

Nature in recreation will be emphasized in the camp programs. A. S. Jackson, biologist in the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, and Mrs. Clifford Drake of Phillips will act as consultants in this field. Other activities offered to those attending troop encampment are: outdoor games, crafts, and cooking, hiking, swimming instruction and practice, singdowns, archery and council fires. Participating troops will leave Camp Kiowa Saturday, Aug. 15.

Activities included in the established camp program include: camp craft, arts and crafts, firebuilding, cooking, campfires, ceremonies, water safety, swimming, conservation, archery, riflery, hiking, sing-downs and folk games. Established camp will conclude Aug. 20.

Thirty-six Girl Scouts from Pampa are registered for Quivira's established camp. Troop 2 led by Mrs. James P. Brumley, Mrs. J. B. Maguire Jr., and Mrs. Richard Stowers will attend the troop encampment.

In the United States today there are 639 Girl Scout established camps, and more than 200,000 girls spend at least two weeks a year roughing it. Approximately 300,000 Girl Scouts attend day camp annually and over 600,000 go troop camping each year for periods ranging from one night to one or more weeks.

RUTH MILLETT

Newspaper Enterprise Assn. "Columns like yours seem to attract only the women who want to cry the blues. Don't you ever print letters from wives who are happily married?" a reader writes.

I sometimes receive letters from wives who are completely contented with their lot. But I don't publish them because women don't really like to hear or read about other women with no problems.

Did you ever sit at a bridge table with three women who were airing their grievances against their husbands or wondering out loud how to live through junior's latest "stage" and then have the fourth woman say with finality that she wouldn't know about such things since big Joe was always so considerate and Joe Jr. had never given her a moment's trouble?

How did the other three women react? They were obviously annoyed by so much perfection, weren't they?

Furthermore, each one probably said to herself: "That's HER story. Who does she think she's kidding?"

Prince Charming Should Do Research Before Searching for His Cinderella

NEW YORK (UPI) — A modern Prince Charming trying to trace his Cinderella with a glass slipper had better do some market research before stepping out.

If the slipper he has in hand happens to be an "A" in width, he's better off starting his search in Texas, Kansas, Nebraska or any midwestern state where most women rarely have feet wider than a "B."

If the slipper is very wide, meanwhile, he's best advised to start in Minnesota, where the shoes that really fit come in great length and breadth. The vast regional difference in feet and shoe size preferences has been collected for many years by Dunn and McCarthy Inc., who claim their Enna Jetticks were the original pioneers in width-sizing.

The firm maintains that it makes more sizes per style than any other shoe company in the nation. Consequently, its records show in great detail how the feet of fashion vary from state to state.

Paul Flynn, product manager of the firm, has been keeping America's shoe sizes for 38 years. He said one shoe may come in as many as 112 sizes and widths from "AAAA" to "EEE."

During the last several years, the most diverse call for size ranges comes from California. Flynn said that's probably because persons from all over the nation have moved to California, bringing with them their own special ethnic characteristics.

On the other hand, the east is notorious for wide widths, going to "C," "D," and "E." Feet have been changing slowly but surely over the past few generations. Flynn said women's feet have grown a full size in the past 20 years. They are getting narrower as they get longer. Size 7 is today's average size.

Probably no public figure has helped the fashion acceptance of the woman with long feet more than Mrs. John F. Kennedy.

When it was reported that she wore size 10, women everywhere who were afraid to admit they wore even a size 8 breathed a sigh of relief and no longer felt they had to whisper their size to the salesman.

Flynn said the status symbol today is having a narrow width, not in having either a small or large size.

The Doctor Says:

By WAYNE G. BRANDSTADT
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.
Fainting is not as common as it was 60 to 70 years ago. This is partly because it has gone out of fashion and partly because women wear less constricting clothes and keep themselves physically more fit.

When you see someone faint nowadays it is more often a husky male who, in a misguided effort to be brave, ignores such warning signs as lightheadedness, nausea or sudden dizziness.

Simple fainting never occurs in a person who is lying down and rarely in a person who is sitting. When consciousness is lost in these positions it is due to some serious injury associated with severe blood loss, extreme pain or damage to an internal organ.

These conditions require emergency treatment by a doctor whereas simple fainting is a temporary condition that is harmless unless the victim falls and strikes his head. When a person faints and assumes a horizontal position there is usually a prompt return of consciousness without any special treatment.

The cause of simple fainting is failure of sufficient blood to reach the brain. It may be triggered by such things as the sight of blood, the prick of a hypodermic needle, or standing motionless as soldiers are frequently required to do. Standing on a hot day or in a warm stuffy room. A long-distance runner may faint from exhaustion or a person may faint on hearing of a death in the family.

One of the commonest causes of fainting is getting up out of bed suddenly, especially after a long illness or when in a weakened condition. The modern practice of getting up a day or two after an operation has done much to prevent this type of fainting.

The most important item of treatment is to lie down at the first hint of lightheadedness even if you are in a public place. It doesn't look nearly as silly to lie down on the sidewalk as it does to fall and have to have stitches taken. And if you must stand still for a long time you

'Flirt Curl' Industry's Newest Addition to Fall, Winter Hairstyles

NEW YORK (UPI) — The "flirt curl" is the hairdressing industry's newest addition to fall and winter hairstyles.

The curl is a lock of a woman's hair saved over from a new haircut, perfumed with her favorite scent and tied with a small ribbon bow.

"Wear the curl at the center of the neckline at the back of your head, or wherever," said the National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association.

"Then, give it to your favorite beau to wear in his lapel. He's pinned."

The hair fashion committee of the association said many curls should not be given away, however. In short, hair for the new season will be shorter than in many years and with a "softness of curl and wave."

Wave lines are layered and have a decided feeling of roundness, said the association. Hair is cut in curves, disc-like, with full ends at the sides and through the crown area. Finger waves of yesteryear are back, but with molded "S" curves. For day, ears will be covered. For evening, ears usually are exposed.

Bridal Business Hits Billions

NEW YORK (UPI) — The bride's business is billion dollar business.

The bridal market now accounts for $5.161 billion or 16.5 per cent of the total retail sales, reports "Modern Bride" magazine.

The publication says the $5 billion plus total is exclusive of the cost of such items as transportation and lodging for wedding guests, food and beverages served in connection with engagement and wedding entertainments, invitations, announcements of the engagement and wedding, housing, cars, insurance, bank loans and miscellaneous honeymoon expenses such as camera, film, and decorative items for the first home. Nor does it include purchases by friends and relatives which add substantially to the overall total.

The magazine said there were 1,651 million weddings in 1963; in 1964, 1.7 million are anticipated; by 1970, the market will have grown to an estimated 2.110 million marriages. The average bride represents about $3,000 in retail spending, said the publication.

Dining Room Improves Children's Table Manners

When the family eats three meals a day off a counter in a combined kitchen-family room, table manners become something less than desirable.

Under such conditions there is small chance for training the younger members of the family in basic table manners.

This is one reason why thinking parents are coming back to the idea of a more formal dining room for the home. This doesn't mean that every meal necessarily must be eaten in the dining room, but it does mean that dinner is generally served here, as well as meals when there are guests.

The dining room need not be elaborate, but it should have definitive boundaries, and it can open off the kitchen. One way to achieve character and distinction in such a room is to use inexpensive wood paneling. The walls can be paneled in one of the lighter, more cheerful softwoods like Douglas fir or West Coast hemlock.

No Such Thing as Free Medical Care

Where did some people ever get the idea that the government ought to be handling the field of medicine? Actually, the idea is very old.

Everyone wants to be healthy and everyone wants to be looked after if he becomes ill. And in the dim and distant past, poverty was such a common experience for about 95 per cent of all the people, that the only ones financially capable of hiring a physician were politicians beginning with the kings and barons.

This is only one of the mistakes we have made in the past which rise to confront us now. Possibly this is the root of the general superstition that government is needed if we are to have an expanding economy. Politicians were at one time the only man of means, and they obtained their wealth through the looting process. So it would be natural, if we didn't know better, to suppose that the looting process is still the best way to get hold of wealth.

Since the days of the Industrial Revolution, industry and business have been blazing new trails, showing that men can be wealthy if they abandon looting as a process. But still the old myth of governmental dependence hangs on.

Getting back to the question of government (socialized) medicine, Germany pioneered by setting up a program of social security with certain health features as early as 1885. It laid the groundwork for the Franco-Prussian war and national poverty. Our own Social Security program, which is now being considered as a vehicle for the introduction of federal medical care, was copied from the German system.

As early as 1917, Lenin gave to the Russian people his idea of how a cradle-to-the-grave program of medicine would be handled by the state. But he was only following Marx's teachings in detail.

In France, social insurance was introduced in 1928 and France has never recovered from it. It was an aftermath of the first World War wherein hundreds of thousands of Frenchmen learned to depend on the army for their medical treatment. It should come as no surprise to anyone who has served in the military that the army employs centralized and social-

LBJ Fades Norman Thomas

President Johnson, in an address of greeting to leaders of various organizations of so-called "senior citizens" who met in the White House last January 15, said:

"We are going to try to take all of the money we think is unnecessarily being spent and take it from the 'haves' and give it to the 'have nots' that need it so much."

This statement, at the time, was written off in many quarters as just another aphorism to reassure the medicare proponents that the Administration would go all-out for health insurance tied in with social security - so that the "haves" (who didn't need or want regimented medical and hospital services) would be paying for the "have nots."

But anyone who has given any thought to the President's "war on poverty" bill is sadder and wiser today - and ready to accept an earlier LBJ statement quoted by Robert Spivack in the N.Y. Herald Tribune of last December 1: "You say I am not a liberal. Let me tell you I am more liberal than a Eleanor Roosevelt, and I will prove it to you. Franklin D. Roosevelt was my hero-he gave me my start."

And, if that is not proof enough, there is the very recent praise of our President by Normalized medicine in its treatment of the troops. It cannot be otherwise any military organization.

Britain adopted full socialized medicine in 1948. The taxpayers pay for it, of course, and there have been many complaints about it. However, neither Britain nor any other country would be able to pay the full burden of a total socialized medical program and the U. S. taxpayers have been corralled to help bail out our British brothers and cousins as well as other nationals who have gone the same route. The trouble is, of course that if America adopts socialized medicine at home, there isn't a nation on earth that could or would bail us out.

Now the principal problem with socialized medicine is that it destroys the physician-patient relationship. The doctor is no longer considered a personal expert of extraordinary capacity who is hired by the patient. Instead, he is viewed as the servant of all, and a minion of the state. He will treat those the state directs him to treat. A patient who wants his services may not be able to get him, if the state assigns another physician who is "just as good."

The harm done to the practice of medicine is enormous, and most sensitive physicians are aware of it, although they often do not see just how the evil begins in such things as community "free" clinics, mass therapy, mass inoculation, and so on. The physician is all too often victim of his own lack of economic training and understanding. He forgets that he is a businessman and remembers only that he is to service "society." Actually, he is only to serve his patients, if he is to retain his professional ability to deal wisely and well on an individual basis.

But patients, too, are not really aided by socialized medicine although they are always led to believe that they can, through this practice, get something for nothing. The fact is there is no such thing. Someone will always pay for everything and it won't be the government for the government has nothing it hasn't first taken away from others.

So the patient will end paying out a great deal of money in support of other people and he will end receiving mediocre and indifferent care when the time comes for him to receive some of what he has already spent.

man Thomas, standard-bearer of the Socialist Party, and its quadrennial Presidential candidate as far back as memory serves. In his encomium, Mr. Thomas made it plain, we thought, that since LBJ expects to run this year, he, himself, may now take it easy - secure in the realization that the banner of Socialism is in strong hands.

For the purposes of the measure now before Congress, "poverty" (which had been generally regarded as a condition threatening starvation) is the parous state of a citizen with a cash income of no more than $3,000 a year - who would then be eligible to economic salvation through "programs" this Robin Hood legislation would provide.

Among those who are puzzled over this $3,000 figure is South Carolina's Democratic Senator Strom Thurmond who points out that: "More than a million members of the US armed services make less than this amount," and that if $3,000 a year is poverty, "it seems contradictory that in 1963 the Government collected $3.54 billion in personal income taxes from the 4.1 million Americans having incomes of less than $1,500."

Something is rotten in Denmark? No, in Washington. And you ain't heard nothing yet!

CAPITOL EYE:

Isolation Is 'Must' for Immigrants

BY BRUCE BLOSSAT
Washington Correspondent
CHICAGO (NEA) — Important elements of the white backlash seem not to be well understood. Inquiries in this great urban melting pot bring them into sharper focus. It is nearly impossible to exaggerate the significance that immigrant ethnic groups, among whom the backlash is strong, attach to owning a home free and clear in a solid, stable neighborhood.

Home ownership is not sought as a status symbol in the shallow social sense we employ today. To the immigrant Pole, Italian, German or other European, it is a mark of economic independence equated with the achievement of personal freedom.

It is the dream unfulfilled in Europe but realized in America. Months before these current researches were undertaken, this reporter was closeted with a well-known government official. Through we were entirely alone, at one point he leaned forward and almost whispered: "My wife's father is an immigrant European. Coming to have his home in this country was the great step for him, the proof of his freedom. Because he sees the Negro as a threat to this, he is strongly against the trend of events."

In the big industrial cities, the Polish or Italian's family home is truly its castle. Misleading plain exteriors often conceal costly interior improvements. Sons marry, and the newlyweds live with parents until they can find a home within a few doors or blocks of the family place.

Nothing is more stunning to these people than to look up and see "outsiders" moving into the neighborhood.

Nor are their frowns reserved for Negroes alone. Ethnic groups in U.S. cities are notoriously clannish. Charles Percy, GOP nominee for governor of Illinois, was astonished to learn that Chicago has 78 separate German language organizations.

Says a University of Chicago political scientist: "These people don't understand what integration is all about. To many, if not most, segregation is a way of life. They like to live unto themselves, apart not only from Negroes but from all others."

In fact, while each national minority puts Negroes at the low end of the scale as most lacking in education and good habits, the so-called Appalachian whites are placed next lowest.

These folk fleeing from poverty of the Middle Atlantic and Southern highlands, pour into Chicago steadily. The minorities take alarm when they hear horror stories about poor whites ripping out moldings and other house fittings to burn as firewood.

It is fear of these things that leads these nationality groups to resist the encroachment of the poorer city dwellers, including hill country whites, Negroes, Puerto Ricans and Mexicans.

The minorities loudly oppose urban renewal, not as a people worried over the growth of federal power, but as homeowners who see slum clearance scattering Negroes and others in a wide arc and leading them to push into better and more stable areas.

Sociologists used to hail close-knit ethnic groups as contributing heavily to stability and order in our cities. Today these societies loom as fortresses trying to guard against a rising tide of Negro and other "outsiders." Obviously the same fortresses were erected originally with good purpose. The question now is how to cope with them in an age which sees a fairly shapeless mass of urban Negroes making a tremendous push toward higher levels.

'Soft Loans' With 'Hidden' Grants in Aid Budget Will Cost Taxpayers $500 Million

PAUL SCOTT

WASHINGTON — There is a "hidden grant" of approximately $1 billion in the $3.5 billion foreign aid budget President Johnson is high - pressuring through Congress. That is, instead of this foreign aid program, now under embattled consideration in the Senate, costing American taxpayers $3.5 billion, the amount actually is in the neighborhood of $4.5 billion.

This huge "hidden" burden on taxpayers comes about as follows: Around half of the proposed $2.5 billion economic aid part of the foreign aid budget will be dispensed in the form of "soft loans" to "undeveloped" countries. "Soft loans" are the kind that private banks and government lending agencies, such as the World Bank and Export-Import Bank, won't touch. Most of them probably won't be repaid. Also, in many instances, the "undeveloped" countries turn out to be those in financial straits and thus poor risks.

These loans are for 40 years at a 4% of one percent "service charge" interest rate, plus a moratorium on the principal for the first 10 years.

Last year, more than $1.067 billion in such loans was granted by the Development Loan Fund of the foreign aid agency. This was about one-half of the economic foreign aid budget. Fiscal experts estimate that the "hidden" cost of these loans to American taxpayers over their 40 years duration will be $600 million.

That's the difference between the 4% of one percent "service charge" interest rate on these loans and what it cost the U. S. government to borrow the money to make these "soft" loans most of which there is serious doubt will ever be repaid.

In other words, the taxpayers face a whopping loss in two ways — going and coming. IRONIC DOUBLE STANDARD — In an effort to at least plug part of this drain-hole, Senator Ernest Gruening, D-Alaska, a forefront leader in the fight to slash some $500 million from the President's budget, is vigorously pressing an amendment requiring that the interest rate on these loans "be the same amount that it costs the U. S. to borrow the money."

This is calculated at around 4 percent.

Gruening's challenging proposal has bipartisan support from influential members of the Foreign Relations Committee — Senators Karl Mundt, R-S. D., Frank Lautner, D-Ore., Wayne Morse, D-Ore., Allen Ellender, D-La. They are waging an uphill battle with heavy odds against them.

For Gruening, this struggle has a bitter personal aspect because he has been striving vainly to get a 4% of one percent interest rate on government loans to Alaskan businessmen and others who sustained tens of millions of dollars in losses in the recent devastating earthquake. But the Small Business Administration is adamantly refusing to go lower than 3 percent.

Under the law, SBA has the authority to charge any interest rate up to 3 percent. On loans to disaster-stricken native Americans in Alaska, this government agency is demanding the maximum interest allowed by the law.

But the foreign aid agency, as Gruening irately points out, is requiring foreigners to pay only 4% of one percent, plus a 10-year moratorium on the principal.

"Low interest rates are not necessary and are unimportant when they concern Alaska businessmen, stricken by one of the greatest natural disasters to befall any state," said Gruening. "But when they concern foreign borrowers, low interest rates become the be-all and end-all of the entire foreign aid program, and we are warned that the program will fail unless the interest rate is kept at 4% of one percent per year."

"This is called having one's cake and eating it, too." PHONY ARGUMENTS—Chief among administration arguments in defense of the low "development" loan interest rate is that "undeveloped" borrowing countries lack the "hard" currency to pay higher rates.

Illustrating the falsity of this contention, Gruening cited the following instance: "Last December, a $250,000 loan was made to the government of Tanganyika for a commodity trading center. Interest on this loan at 4% of one percent amounts to $1,875. A 4 percent interest per annum, the charge would be $10,000. The difference is $8,125. The government of Tanganyika could raise this additional sum merely by cutting down on the import of only two Cadillacs a year."

Similarly, Gruening blasted as unfounded the contention that these loans are not made to private industries. In a detailed compilation of all these loans last year, he produced official evidence showing that many went to private banks, factories and other enterprises.

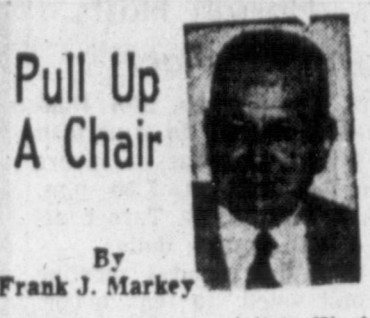

This compilation also disclosed that foremost among the "undeveloped" countries granted large amounts of these 4% of one percent interest loans were: Argentina ..... $74,400,000 Turkey ..... 38,350,000 Egypt ..... 36,300,000 Chile ..... 35,000,000 Brazil ..... 33,900,000 Liberia ..... 31,300,000 Colombia ..... 23,500,000 Bolivia ..... 18,900,000 Costa Rica ..... 17,000,000

A number of these low interest "development" loans actually were for budget support; that is to offset balance-of-payments and other deficits incurred by the borrowing countries.

In other words, the U. S., with its own budget running in the red in the billions, is lading out tens of millions to balance the budgets of other countries.

That's the giant "hidden grant" in the foreign aid program. On the basis of its estimated $800 million cost to American taxpayers last year, this secret burden in the pending foreign aid measure is calculated at around $1 billion.

"FOREIGN AID FLASHES" — In 1963, 35 countries were granted low interest "development" loans. Largest beneficiary was India with $414,150,000. Pakistan second with $169,450,000. . . . Since 1947, the U. S. has poured more than $4 billion in foreign aid into Turkey — largely a state monopoly economy. Of this amount, $1.6 billion was in economic aid, the remainder in military aid. . . . The U. S. is continuing to grant so-called "supporting assistance" to Yemen — which is little more than a satellite of Egyptian dictator Gamal Nasser.

Pull Up A Chair
During a recent visit to Washington we saw a group of Basques thrilling an appreciative audience with their native dances in the rotunda of the Old Senate Office Building. The Oinkari, meaning "fast of feet," dancers had appeared at the New York World's Fair the day before. The Basques come from the Pyrenees, the mountains between Spain and France. Their origin is shrouded in mystery with scholars attributing their ancestry to such ancient peoples as the Berbers and the original inhabitants of the lost continent of Atlantis. While watching them we learned Idaho has the largest Basque colony in North America.

He advocates multiple answers, involving the resources of the individual, the community, the state and the central Government, to complex questions. If anything deserves to be called simplistic it is the hope of salvation through-out State power.

Along the same line it is charged that Mr. Goldwater and his supporters long for some vague pastoral past that is gone forever. Well, perhaps some of them do, but it seems to us that to contend a Federal solution to every problem is not the only or necessarily the best solution is more forward than backward looking. After all, the growing authority of the States has failed miserably to deal with some of the nation's most glaring problems.

All in all, it is a remarkable phenomenon. This unreasoning fear and hatred of the Goldwater outlook. For 30 years the underlying political issue in the nation has been the role of the Government in the life of the citizen. Now that it has finally been brought to the fore, open for public scrutiny and debate, the proponents of unlimited Government can only scream.

It may be that such people will gradually calm down and subject the Goldwater thesis to the discussion it should be given. In the meantime it reflects poorly on their intellectual credentials that they forego reason and resort to argument by denunciation.

Answer to Previous Puzzle

The Nation's Press

ARGUMENT WITHOUT REASON

(The Wall Street Journal)
One of the more depressing developments in the wake of the Republican convention is the extremely — low intellectual level of the arguments used by those opposed to Senator Goldwater's views.

There is in fact hardly any attempt at all to argue, or to examine the Senator's political philosophy and try to understand what it is. Instead of debate the nation is treated to denunciation and vilification.

Among other purported sins, Mr. Goldwater is chastized for allegedly endorsing extremism, although his one reference to the matter in his acceptance speech is constantly taken out of context. He himself says it was not meant to apply to so-called extremist groups as such.

In addition, the readers of a prominent Eastern newspaper are advised that the Goldwater nomination is a disaster for the nation. His foreign policy, it is claimed, is unthinking and his domestic policy is unbelievable.

Now it is one thing to disagree with the Senator's foreign policy approach — for our part, we would not go along with all of it as it has been presented so far — and quite another to castigate it without presenting any reasoned arguments against it. Whatever else it may be, unthinking it is not. It proceeds from firm opposition to communism, and its specifics are designed to implement that policy.

Similarly with domestic issues. It seems some of Mr. Goldwater's critics must have skipped or forgotten their philosophy courses; at any rate they exhibit a painful unawareness of the intellectual basis of his opinions.

As it happens, these opinions stem from a particular view of man, what he calls in rather humanistic terms the whole man. The dignity and fullest possible development of the individual takes precedence over the role of government, and it is the perfectly respectable philosophical position which makes him a foe of the strong drive toward Federal domination that has characterized the past three decades.

Here again a reasoned argument can be made that the day of the individual is gone and that we have no choice but to resign ourselves to Federal collectivism. But hardly any of the Senator's critics is making the argument or otherwise challenging his proposals on their merits.

Instead they say he offers a "simplistic" — the word is becoming fashionable in some quarters — answer to complex questions. The exact reverse is the truth. He advocates multiple answers, involving the resources of the individual, the community, the state and the central Government, to complex questions. If anything deserves to be called simplistic it is the hope of salvation through-out State power.

Along the same line it is charged that Mr. Goldwater and his supporters long for some vague pastoral past that is gone forever. Well, perhaps some of them do, but it seems to us that to contend a Federal solution to every problem is not the only or necessarily the best solution is more forward than backward looking. Agriculturally Speaking

By Foster Whaley, Gray County Agent. A number of surrounding counties have made application for and received approval to graze and hay soil bank and diverted acre land.

We have had a number of calls asking about this program for this county. Our emergency drought committee has requested that Gray County be designated as such.

If approved on the state level it would mean a person having land in the Soil Bank could graze or hay this Soil Bank land. They would have to give up a portion of their annual payment. Not all the details has been received at the A. S. C. office, which administers the program.

Generally speaking one-half of the annual Soil Bank check would have to be given up for having privileges. From $1.00 to $1.50 per acre per month would be forfeited for grazing privileges. For more information, contact our office or Evelyn Mason, A.S.C. office manager. In checking with Evelyn Mason, 25 Gray County farmers have 9372 acres. 48 of these farms are in the McLean vicinity representing 7050 acres. There are only five farms in the Laketon vicinity with 423 acres. There are two farms in the Grand Prairie Community with 152 acres. Ten farms in the Pampa vicinity are in the Soil Bank program, representing 1728 acres.

If approved on the state level the same privileges would be granted to graze diverted acres of the wheat and feed grain program.

It is very doubtful that it would be profitable to anyone to forego receiving payments on diverted acres because most of the land is being summer fallowed.

Aug. 14th is the date all 4-H record books are due in our office. These records will be judged Aug. 17 and are due in the District by August 21. Every 4-H member should submit a record book in one of the awards programs.

On Aug. 21 the Gray County 4-H picnic will be held at Lake McLellan. A barbecue will be served and a program is to be presented by several of the Gray County 4-H members. Make plans to attend this picnic and bring the entire family.

PROPER RANGE USE — The pasture on the left has been properly grazed. There is enough leaf surface to produce plant food for livestock production and to maintain the grass plant. The pasture on the right is over grazed. Most of the water that falls on this pasture will run off into the draws.

County SCD News

By VAN MILLS

Grass is the most important plant grown on the earth. Yet, it is the most abused and given less attention than any other agricultural plant or product. To carry out a sound range conservation plan the following basic knowledge is essential on how grazing and mowing effects grass plants and their production of proteins, carbohydrates and fats.

When a grass seed is planted there is enough food stored in the seed to sprout the seed and start the green plant growth. The plant from this point on must produce it's own food to survive and reproduce its self.

How Grass Makes It's Own Food

Plant food is manufactured in the leaves and not, as many people suppose drawn from the roots of the soil. The roots carry phosphorous, nitrogen, potash, calcium, water and other minerals to the leaves. The leaves take in carbon, hydrogen and oxygen from the air. From the above raw materials protein, fats and carbohydrates are produced in the leaves with the aid of energy received from the sun light.

One of the most important things to remember about the above manufacturing process is that carbon, hydrogen and oxygen from the air and water make up 95 per cent of the solid material of the plant. Minerals from the soil make up the other 5 per cent of the plant.

Perennial grasses store food in their roots in late summer or early fall. This process starts at the time of seed formation and continues until plant goes dormant. 70 to 75 per cent of the stored food is used to start new growth in the spring and to help keep the plant growing vigorously during the growing season. If the plant is continually grazed close so that very little food is stored, the plant will not produce much the following year.

When all of the leaves and stems are grazed or mowed off, the plant becomes a food user instead of a factory. Since proteins, carbohydrates and fats are manufactured in the leaves there must be adequate growth left above the ground if the plant is to be very productive. When the growth above the ground is removed the plant takes stored food from the roots to produce new leaves and stems. This causes a delay in forage production. Continuous defoliation kills or stunts the plant.

Research shows that many grasses will not reach their maximum vigor and growth when more than half their leaf surface is removed by frequent grazing or mowing. This close grazing or mowing causes a reduction of the root system because the roots live off of food manufactured in the leaves. The more roots you have the more water and minerals that can be brought to the leaves to manufacture food with. Since 95 per cent of the plant material comes from the air the more leaf surface you have the more proteins, fats and carbohydrates that can be produced.

What is Considered Proper Range Use?

The "take half and leave half" idea is considered proper use of most grass plants. When half of the grass is left we will not only have a healthy plant, but will have enough growth left on the ground to hold the water where it falls.
