IN WATERGATE AFFAIR

Richardson Says Nixon Innocent Of 'Complicity'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Elliott L. Richardson said today that despite his resignation as attorney general over differences with President Nixon on Watergate, he believes Nixon has been fully truthful in denying complicity in the scandals.

But Richardson and William D. Ruckelshaus, who resigned the same night as Richardson after both refused to fire Archibald Cox as special Watergate prosecutor, urged Nixon to make a full disclosure of any material bearing on the affair.

Richardson was asked in an interview on the NBC-TV Today Show if he felt Nixon had told the "whole truth" in his repeated denials of any knowledge until last spring that high-ranking aids had been involved in the Watergate cover-up.

"Everything I know supports the conclusion that he has," Richardson said. "I've found him personally convincing on this... In my very first meeting with him on the subject of my nomination as attorney general, he was at pains himself to assure me that he had not had any direct knowledge of these things or any part in them... and he was very emphatic in saying in effect that I not believe that or I shouldn't take the job."

Richardson said that Nixon had demonstrated that a "crisis of confidence" exists, however, and said: "The most important thing he can do is demonstrate through cooperation with the office of the special prosecutor... that he really does intend to make sure that all facts bearing on the things, any of the issues, or allegations, have been made available."

Richardson said the new prosecutor, Leon Jaworski, must be provided any presidential materials relevant to the case "so that any leads to criminal conduct can be followed up."

Ruckelshaus said on the CBS-TV Morning News program that the public interest now outweighs any questions about compromising the presidential doctrine of executive privilege with respect to White House documents.

"I think one of the wisest course the White House could take is disclosure—full disclosure—of all documents bearing on the case," he said.

Ruckelshaus was even more emphatic on this in an interview with a group of reporters Thursday: "The public interest today is tied up with the President's ability to inspire the confidence of the people. I don't see how he can do that without turning over all documents relevant to the case."

The President said on national television Wednesday night that he was confident he could reassure Americans in the months ahead that he had not violated the trust of his office, and White House officials have indicated consideration is being given to several possible ways to do this.

The Senate Watergate committee wants to arrange some type of meeting of at least a delegation of members with Nixon to question him. Its chief counsel, Samuel Dash, and the minority counsel, Fred D. Thompson, hoped to get together with White House lawyers shortly to discuss this.

Presidential aides have given no indication that Nixon would agree to such a session.

The Watergate committee suggested an informal meeting, with no suggestion that Nixon be under oath.

Richardson recommended that the President, as a gesture to restore public confidence, volunteer to submit to questioning under oath.

Richardson said "concrete steps have to be taken" to restore confidence in the Presidency—not only that "information be made available wherever it is pertinent to the investigation, but for the President to find some way where a responsible and informed group can ask him questions in depth...."

"For him to voluntarily submit to taking an oath and answering under oath would help."

Cold Air Lingers In Area

Lead-in skies still cast a pall over the Panhandle area this morning as fog and drizzle kept the previously forecast sun from making its appearance.

The chilly weather slipped southward into the state, but the cool weather was expected to linger on in the area throughout the most of the day, becoming partly cloudy and warmer Saturday. Or so the forecast reads.

Tomorrow's high is forecast to reach into the middle 70s after an overnight low near 40.

A trace of moisture had been recorded this morning from the fog and drizzle which has hit the vicinity throughout most of the week.

Thursday's high inched up to 52, while the overnight low dipped down to 39 this morning.

Elsewhere across the state and nation in UPI reports:

Chilly weather, slipping south toward the Texas coast faster than expected, and a breeze kept the southern half of Texas from being covered by fog again today.

Nearly all of the state was foggy almost half of Thursday and forecasters had expected that the southern part of the state would be foggy today.

Lower temperatures failed, however, to clear clouds out of Texas. Clouds covered the state except for the area west of the Pecos and part of North Central Texas directly below the Oklahoma border.

Fog and drizzle covered the area west of Corpus Christi, Abilene and Childress.

Clouds may partly clear out to Central Texas but more clouds probably will come into the North Central Texas area, making all of the state cloudy except the area west of the Pecos tonight.

Fog and intermittent light drizzle was expected in the West Texas area east of the Pecos through Saturday. South Central and Southeast Texas also has a chance of showers.

Overnight, far West Texas in clear weather had had the state's lowest temperatures — 30 degrees at El Paso and 32 degrees at Marfa.

Generally, forecasters expected a cool, damp weekend. Freezing temperatures and scattered snow dominated the northern half of the country today.

A heavy snow warning continued in effect today for parts of western New York state as cold air off Lakes Erie and Ontario triggered snow squalls. The National Weather Service said accumulations of up to six inches of snow was likely by noon.

There was scattered snow in the Great Lakes and Central Appalachians as well as in the Northern Rockies and Pacific Northwest. Fair skies prevailed over North Dakota, but temperatures plunged below zero.

Eight inches of snow was reported on the ground at Sault St. Marie, Mich. Rain mixed with snow fell in parts of West Virginia, and rain was scattered along the Atlantic Coast.

Fair skies continued in the Southwest, while a complex storm system was approaching the Oregon coast. The storm spread rain into western Oregon and extreme northwest California early today. Gale warnings were issued from Point Arena on the northern California coast northward.

Wind gusts to 63 miles per hour were reported early today along the southern Oregon coast.

Hunt Given Minimum Sentencing By Sirica

WASHINGTON (UPI) — E. Howard Hunt was given a minimum sentence of 2½ years in prison and five other original Watergate defendants were assessed lesser terms today by Judge John J. Sirica for their roles in the break-in at Democratic national headquarters.

James W. McCord, like Hunt one of the leaders of the burglary, drew a one to five year sentence, the same Miami area men. Hunt's maximum sentence was eight years, plus a fine of $10,000.

Since the three Miamians have been behind bars nearly 11 months, their sentences may expire in time for their release before Christmas.

Bernard L. Barker, a fourth member of what their lawyers referred to as the Miami area "soldiers," received a sentence of 18 months minimum and six years at the most, apparently because he recruited the other three.

Sirica said it was his intention that McCord spent at least a year in jail. McCord, unlike the others, has been free on bond for the past year.

Two months after his conviction, he wrote Sirica that he wanted to tell what he knew of the Watergate break-in on June 17, 1972, and the subsequent cover-up.

Minimum sentences of one to four years were given Frank A. Sturgis, Virgilio R. Gonzalez and Eugenio R. Martinez.

The Miami area men and Hunt pleaded guilty early in the January trial. McCord and G. Gordon Liddy, like Hunt a former White House employe, were convicted.

Liddy received heavy, final sentences from Sirica. Liddy who has refused to talk, was given a minimum term of 6 years, 8 months and fined $40,000.

He was given an additional sentence of 8 to 18 months for refusing to testify before a federal grand jury. He also faces contempt of Congress charges.

Hunt's lawyer, Sydney Sachs, told Sirica that Hunt's health is deteriorating and that forcing him to spend any more time in jail might "do further harm to him."

Both Sachs and lawyers for the other defendants pleaded with Sirica for leniency, saying all believed they had been part of a legitimate government operation.

"If it was a crime, it was a crime of patriotism," Sachs said.

Hunt, the last of the six to be sentenced, was pale as he stood before Sirica.

McCord's lawyer, Bernard Finsterwald, pleaded for leniency, saying McCord "alone came forward and did so when pressed by your honor to tell all."

McCord said in a brief statement before Sirica that he and Liddy were "deceived" into believing the Watergate operation was legal.

"I know the President had authority to authorize such operations," McCord said. On the other hand, he admitted, "my part in the Watergate was an error and wrong."

Maria Elena N. Moffett, Barker's daughter, told reporters after the sentencing that it was "totally unjust that Hunt gets 30 months and a pawn like my father gets 18 months."

"Of course he (Hunt) has a lot to exchange with the prosecutors and my father had nothing," she said. "Of course, with what he (Hunt) is going to give them, they're going to get Mitchell, Magruder, and ultimately the President of the United States."

She was referring to former Attorney General John N. Mitchell, who became head of the Committee to Re-elect the President, and Jeb Magruder, President Nixon's deputy campaign manager.

Magruder has pleaded guilty to one Watergate cover-up charge. Mitchell, along with former Commerce Secretary Maurice Stans, is under indictment in New York on charges of obtaining an illegal campaign contribution from financier Robert Vesco.

Barker and his three recruits, described by their lawyer as "soldiers" who thought they were on a patriotic mission, have been in jail since their conviction and that time will be credited to their sentences.

McCord told reporters after the 90-minute court session that his sentence "could have been worse" but said he had been admonished by the court not to make any further statement.

Teachers Attending Congress District Convention Ponders Requests

Teachers from the Pampa Independent School District joined over 5,000 other educators in Amarillo today for the annual convention of the Texas State Teachers Association, District XVI.

Students received a holiday from classes because of the meeting.

Mrs. Helen Warner, second grade teacher at Pampa's Stephen F. Austin School, is the president of District XVI and presided at the convention held in the Amarillo Civic Center Coliseum.

The theme of the convention this year is "A United Commitment To Youth." Dr. Gerald Fisher, superintendent of schools in Hot Springs, Ark., was the featured speaker in this morning's general session.

The Pampa High Concert Choir, under the direction of John Woickowski, and the PHS Stage Band, directed by Jeff Doughten, provided music for the general session.

Following the meeting this morning, teachers attended sectional meetings dealing with the various disciplines at meeting places in Amarillo.

Fifteen members of the Gray-Roberts County unit of District XVI attended the district's House of Delegates meeting last night at Amarillo High School.

The report from the House of Delegates was delivered to the teachers at the general session this morning.

The Austin Elementary Choir, under the direction of Mrs. Ruby Gunn, provided entertainment for the House of Delegates meeting.

Mrs. Warner is only the third teacher from Pampa to serve as president of District XVI, TSTA.

Others from Pampa who served as District XVI president were L.J. (Jack) Edmondson in 1960 and W.B. Weathered in 1941.

FOR PEACE PLAN

Egypt And Israel Debate Proposals

By United Press International. Egypt said today it shot down two Israeli warplanes near the Suez Canal and Cairo and Tel Aviv argued over a key point of the compromise Middle East peace plan worked out by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

The Israeli military command said Egyptian surface-to-air missiles downed one Israeli reconnaissance plane near the Suez Canal, the first plane reported shot down by Egypt since the Oct. 22 Middle East cease-fire. The command said two crewmen parachuted over Egyptian territory.

An Egyptian military communiqué said two Israeli Phantom jets tried to "raid our positions west of the canal." It said two pilots were captured. The eruption of fighting followed by only one day optimistic reports that the compromise peace plan worked out during Kissinger's five-nation Middle East tour had been accepted by Israel and Egypt and would cement the cease-fire.

U.S. officials maintained Thursday night that both Cairo and Tel Aviv would announce their formal approval of peace plan later today.

The officials also said that Kissinger's 14-hour stay in Saudi Arabia failed to convince King Faisal, leader of the Arab oil boycott, to resume petroleum shipments to the United States.

Cabinet Accepts Plan. Government sources in Tel Aviv said the Israeli cabinet accepted a five-point peace blueprint of the agreement at a special session Thursday.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congressional machinery has begun to move swiftly on President Nixon's call for new legislative authority to deal with the energy crisis.

Following up the President's announcement of his fuel-saving program to the nation Wednesday and a presidential message to Congress Thursday, members of the Senate Interior Committee were meeting today to edit a bill into form for a vote.

Chairman Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., said he hoped to complete "markup" of the bill today. He expected the only big fight would be from some senators, chiefly from oil-producing states, to get a clause in the bill taking federal controls off natural gas prices at the point of production.

"Our target is to get the bill to the floor of the Senate Tuesday for debate and a vote," Jackson told UPI after a nonstop 11-hour hearing Thursday.

The bill will be an combination of the President's proposals and Jackson's views in a bill he introduced Oct. 18.

One decision Jackson made Thursday was to make the bill's language stronger on bringing the nation to the brink of gasoline rationing to consumers. Nixon regarded that as a last resort, but Jackson considers it inevitable.

Nixon and Jackson are agreed on the main points of the legislation to authorize the President to cut down on use of energy in the private and government sectors, order a national highway speed limit, force power plants to stop converting from coal to oil, and ease air quality rules so that high-pollution fuels can be used until the emergency passes.

Nixon said in his message to Congress: "It is my hope that rationing of energy products will never be required, but if circumstances dictate there should be no impediment to swift action."

RESEARCHERS SAY

Property Taxes Unfair Levying

AUSTIN (UPI) — Researchers said today Texas' property taxes — the predominant source for the state's counties, cities, school districts and other political subdivisions — is the least fair of all major tax levies used here.

The Texas Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations issued a 110-page report detailing inequities of the present system of assessing taxes supposedly on the value of property.

"The tax imposed by the state constitution and statutes cannot be equitably levied and collected," the report states.

Statistics on polls of the public in general and tax experts indicated both groups rank property taxes least fair in both groups as more than triple the number who selected other levies such as income or sales taxes.

The report was prepared under a cooperative agreement between the State Advisory Commission and the Texas Research League, a nonprofit, privately financed research organization.

The property tax, the report states, "is riddled with examples of inequities and illegal administration."

Tax Authority. The researchers noted that there are 3,336 local jurisdictions in Texas — 254 counties, 961 municipalities, 1,174 school districts and 927 special districts — and that nearly all of them have authority to levy taxes.

"Administration (of their tax levies) is divided among 1,500 local tax offices, many of them too small to afford an adequate staff," according to the report. Researchers said what staff the tax offices do have usually "lack professional competence for the tasks assigned to them."

"Every survey of tax offices reveals an astonishing number which do not have even the most rudimentary tools of property tax administration — up to date tax maps, valuation manuals, appraisal records, etc.," the report says.

"But the basic problem is the fact that the property tax as prescribed by the property tax constitution and the statutes of Texas cannot be equitably administered."

Cannot Produce. "Even the best assessment offices in Texas cannot produce a tax roll that meets the test of legality under the constitution."

FOR 8 MURDERS

Kemper Found Guilty By Jury

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (UPI) — A superior court jury Thursday found Edmund E. Kemper III, a hulking, 6-foot-9, 280-pounder, guilty of eight counts of first-degree murder in the slayings of eight women, including his mother.

Kemper, who was to be sentenced today, had turned himself in and pleaded insanity. He is exempt from a death penalty law that will not go into effect until next year.

Judge Harry E. Brauer told the jury. "If I seem a bit excited, I had some fear you might possibly have arrived at a different verdict." He said he agreed with the decision reached after almost six hours of deliberation.

Kemper, who murdered his maternal grandparents at age 15 and was institutionalized but later released as cured, testified that he had a recurring fantasy of killing women, eating their bodies and talking to their severed heads.

Symposium On Arthritis Set For Area Physicians

A panel of four physicians will conduct a symposium on arthritis, to be held at the Midland Country Club, Midland, on Saturday, Nov. 10, from 8:30 a.m. until 4 p.m. Announcements of the symposium have been sent to all area physicians.

The symposium for area physicians will be held in conjunction with the annual meeting of the West Texas Chapter of the Arthritis Foundation. Genevieve Henderson, Gray County chairman, and Mr. and Mrs. J.G. Morrison of Pampa will be in attendance.

Panel physicians will be Dr. Bruce Bartholomew, associate professor of medicine, Texas Tech University of Medicine, Lubbock, and specialist in rheumatology; Dr. J. Steven Strong, rheumatologist from Tucson, Ariz.; director of the Pima County Hospital Arthritis Clinic; Dr. Lester Wolcott, professor and chairman, Department of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation and Department of Family Practice, Texas Tech; and Dr. Kenneth Scholz, orthopedic surgeon, Lubbock, associate clinical professor at Texas Tech.

Subjects to be discussed by the doctors are "The Course and General Treatment of Rheumatoid Arthritis," "Arthropathetic Conditions Involving the Hip," "Evaluation of Gait of Patients with Arthritis and Use of Corrective Appliances," "Immunosuppressive Treatment of Rheumatoid Arthritis and Experience with Cyclophosphamide. Indications for such treatment and common complications thereof," and "Recent Advances in Arthritis Surgery, Particularly of the Ankle."

The public is invited to hear two rheumatologists speak on the latest in the treatment of arthritis and the rheumatic diseases at 1 p.m. Saturday at the Midland Country Club. Those wishing to attend this program do not need to make reservations. Mrs. Henderson said.

Dr. Strong will discuss the latest developments in the treatment of these diseases, particularly the use of the new immunosuppressive drugs. Dr. Strong and Dr. Bartholomew have conducted research in the use of these drugs at the University of Colorado Medical Center in Denver. Dr. Bartholomew will speak on the plans for the program of research in the rheumatic diseases and the new department of rheumatology at Texas Tech University School of Medicine.

The Altrusa Club of Pampa has supported the Arthritis Foundation for three years and are currently conducting a mail campaign to raise $2,000 in this area to be used in research and mailing of literature to arthritics. Anyone wishing to make a donation should mail it to P.O. Box 1915 in Pampa.

Massacre Suspects Arrested

STOCKTON, Calif. (UPI) — San Joaquin County sheriff's deputies adopted extra security measures today for the arraignment of two suspects in the massacre of nine persons in the dream home of a country grocer.

Willie L. Steelman, 28, an admitted heroin user, ex-mental patient and parolee, and Douglas E. Gretzler, 22, New York City, were to be escorted here under heavy guard from the county jail in nearby French Camp to be charged in Municipal Court.

They were captured Thursday in Sacramento, 30 miles north of this Central Valley farm community, and booked into the jail on nine counts of murder. Authorities said Steelman and Gretzler might also be linked to a double slaying and the disappearance of two others in Arizona.

Gretzler was arrested in a downtown hotel by Sacramento police armed with shotguns. A short time later officers hurled tear gas into an apartment, forcing Steelman from the room where he was holed up with a girlfriend.

Police said that weapons, which might have been used in the slayings in the small town of Victor near here Wednesday, also were found in the hotel.

The victims in the slaying were the grocer, Walter Parkin, 33, his wife, their two children and five friends. The bodies of the two Parkin children were found in a bed in the Parkin home.

Survivors include three sons, Joe Buckland, Liberal, Kan.; Bill Buckland, Sacramento, Calif.; and Bill Kengle, Houston; a sister, Mrs. Eugene Chase, Emporia; five grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Cattle Theft Under Study

Gray County Sheriff's officers are investigating the theft of 13 head of cattle early Thursday from a stock trailer parked five miles southwest of Pampa.

The trailer, belonging to Johnny Hines, 1821 Charles, contained a number of mixed cattle, all branded with a circle (9) on the right shoulder.

Deputy D. L. Day of the sheriff's department said the 13 stolen cattle, young steers weighing around 335 pounds, were apparently loaded into a trailer pulled behind a pickup truck.

The sheriff's department is also investigating the theft of about 38 pounds of mercury from five oilfield meter houses in the county.

Day said the theft of the mercury occurred last weekend. He said the thefts were similar to others which occurred in the county about five years ago.

The mercury is valued at $10 a pound.

Investment Chatter

NEW YORK (UPI) — "Compared with September's sharp rally, stocks did not give a very inspired performance during October despite some splendid earnings gains," says Moody's Investors Service, Inc. The firm attributes the October market pattern to "moves by some investors to nail down their profits." It says profits results will remain unchanged in 1974, but many stocks still offer attractive values to the buyer.

As the economy shows signs of slowing sooner than expected, "a more bearish forecast is not yet a necessity, but it's tougher to be a bull on business and profits than it was a few months ago," according to First National City Bank. Among the hard evidence of a slowdown, real national production rose at only 3 per cent during the spring and summer, an actual decline has occurred in the volume of goods purchases, and the sharp dip in the money stock late in October. "The Fed could set the growth of the nominal money stock on the right course... only to be frustrated by an inflationary erosion of real cash balances," it adds.

The September-October rally was characterized by a lack of dynamism, miserable breadth, and a lack of follow-through by the Dow Jones Industrials suggesting "a last gasp blow-off," says Lynch, Jones & Ryan. "Timing could dictate a major low to be reached no earlier than the second quarter of 1974, somewhere in the area of 700 in the Dow Jones Industrials," the firm continues. This decline will include across-the-board deterioration with glamours taking the hardest beating and secondary issues exhibiting marked vulnerability, it adds.

PEANUT PROBLEMS

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Use of improper or poorly adjusted equipment cost Texas peanut growers $1.5 million in damaged peanuts last year.

James S. Denton, area economist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, said the faulty equipment causes split kernels, loose shelled kernels and foreign material in the peanuts, lowering their grade.

Dr. Jones Gets TMA Honors

AUSTIN — Dr. W. Calvin Jones of Pampa has been honored by the Texas Medical Association, having been voted into honorary membership by his colleagues during the Association's fall House of Delegates session.

To be eligible for honorary membership, a physician must have been a member for at least 40 years or have contributed notably to the advancement of ethical medicine.

Dr. Jones was among 22 Texas physicians in the 11,850-member TMA elected to honorary status.

TAKING THE BICENTENNIAL TO THE PEOPLE

Freedom Train to ride U.S. main line

By Helen Hennessy
NEA Women's Editor

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Ross E. Rowland, Jr., is a genuine patriot with faith in his country, be times good or bad. He is also one of the four men in history who has been named lifetime member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers (the others are Harry Truman, J. Edgar Hoover and Johnny Cash). Here you find a man who would naturally be named President of the American Freedom Train Foundation. This nonprofit, nonpolitical group plans an exposition which will bring the Bicentennial celebration to Americans all across the country.

We don't have to come to it. It will come to us. The American Freedom Train in celebration of the 200th birthday of our nation will depart in April 1975, powered by a restored vintage steam engine and it will visit every state during its historic journey carrying a panorama of Americana — artifacts, recordings, literature, slides in 25 cars — admission free.

Rowland's love of steam engines and trains caused him to organize part of the "Proud Trip to Promontory" an exhibit held in Utah to commemorate the driving of the Transcontinental Railroad Golden Spike. To work on the Freedom Train he has taken a three-year leave of absence from his Wall Street commodities firm.

Team Rowland with Daniel Schneider, Executive Director of the American Freedom Train Foundation, who netted Julie and David Eisenhower to become honorary chairmen of the Board of Trustees and is helping the American people to enjoy the chance of seeing their past at no cost to them, and it's hard to believe the response won't be fantastic. Whatever we feel, contentment or disillusion, in our present we're a patriotic and a proud lot. And we'll come in droves to see the history that made us that way.

"We're crazy enough," said

Dan Schneider and Ross E. Rowland, Jr., Executive Director and President of the American Freedom Train Foundation go over the concept of how the American Freedom Train will look when it takes to the road.

Rowland, the steam engine buff, "to put together a non-commercial, apolitical vehicle. "We're taking basic treasures of America back to the people via the train. Why are we doing it that way?"

"We feel that we are citizens of the one country that to date has been by far the most successful example of democracy in the recorded history of mankind. We are proud of America and we feel our 200th birthday deserves a celebration that all Americans can enjoy."

Schneider said, "As to date none of the planned events we know of for the Bicentennial are noncommercial. And we felt that this should not be the way to celebrate our 200th birthday."

"So we have taken leave minutes' drive of 90 per cent of the American people; and railroads in general had so much to do with our history that the steam engine is a natural part of our industrial growth over the years."

Among the extensive memorabilia on board will be the Declaration of Independence and the Gettysburg Address.

"We're not right wing. We're not left," Rowland said. "I want this train to become part of our national heritage and we're going straight down the main line to America's heart. The train starts from St. Augustine, Florida, the first settlement in what is now the United States of America. The U.S. Marines will guard the artifacts."

Rowland isn't unused to the word president. In his 33 years he has served as president or partner in such firms as Floor Broker Associates, Andco, Inc. and L.J. Cohen & Co. — all commodity brokerage organizations. But the "president" he likes best to be (and is) is president of Hi Iron Co., Inc., a railroad company which has restored to service and operates mainline steam locomotives for the enjoyment of the many steam "buffs" in the United States.

MEDICAL VISIT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Barbara Anderson, one-time regular cast member of the "Ironside" series, will play a guest role in "Medical Center" which stars Chad Everett.

The Lighter Side

By DICK WEST
WASHINGTON (UPI) — During the past few days a number of influential columnists, senators and editorial writers have called on President Nixon to resign.

I could do the popular thing and join the clamor, but that is not my style.

My policy is to shun what is merely expedient and face up to grave national problems in a hard-nosed, pragmatic manner. I am therefore calling on the President to take a leave of absence.

You will, I'm sure, immediately recognize the advantages of the latter course. But I'll point them out anyway. Otherwise, this column would only be five paragraphs long and I would have to find another topic to write about.

For one thing, a leave of absence would not conflict with Nixon's natural reluctance to give up the powers and perquisites of the presidency by aborting his second term. To the contrary.

Must Have Been Times
There must have been many times during the past few months when Nixon longed for a sabbatical.

"Gee, Pat," he probably mused, "wouldn't it be nice if we could go off somewhere and get away from it all for a while?"

"If you're trying to talk me into spending another weekend at Camp David, forget it!"

"No, no. I'm thinking about faraway places with strange sounding names. We could see the pyramids along the Nile, watch the sunset on a tropic isle, see the market place in old Algiers, bring back photographs and souvenirs, fly the ocean in a silver plane, see the jungle when it's wet with rain. Just the three of us, all by ourselves alone."

"Sounds wonderful, Dick. But couldn't Bebe stay home this time?"

During his leave, the President could forget about the troubles that have been piling up around him. And while he was gone, the country could pull itself back together.

Vice President-designate Jerry Ford, sitting in for Nixon, could give the Watergate prosecutors a free hand without getting involved in the constitutional questions that have impeded the investigation.

Once the Senate committee had finished its hearings and the grand jury had no more indictments impending, the President could move back into the White House and pick up the reins of government without having a cloud hanging over his administration.

Or, if need be, he could wait until the statute of limitations had expired. Whichever came first.

Class reunions will be held Saturday morning. The afternoon program will begin at 2 p.m. in the high school auditorium, with the Groom High School Band presenting an opening concert.

Guest speaker will be Dr. Lloyd I. Watkins, president of West Texas State University at Canyon.

Master of ceremonies will be R.W. Standerfer, superintendent of White Deer schools, with invocation by Father Matt of St. Theresa's Catholic Church at Panhandle.

A memorial service will be led by Ralph Randel, with Sheryl Sherwood presenting a tribute to pioneers.

Following the program at 4 p.m. there will be a tea in the War Memorial Bldg., hosted by Carson County Federated Clubs.

A barbecue with all the trimmings will be from 5 to 7:30 p.m. in the Carson County Agriculture Bldg. Admission charge is a minimum donation of $3 to the Museum Support Campaign.

Postal Preferential Mail Processing Unit Planned

AMARILLO — Congressman Bob Price reported today that a recent check by his office shows the new Postal Preferential Mail Processing Unit construction project for Amarillo is on schedule. The building is slated for a 22-acre site already acquired near 28th Ave. and Osage Dr.

An architectural design contract was awarded Sept. 13 by the Postal Service and calls for completion of plans by April 1. Construction bids will be expedited upon acceptance of the design and the Postal Service expects completion of the structure by the end of 1975.

"This new postal facility will replace a 20-year-old corrugated iron quonset-type building now in use as the Postal Service's Central Distribution Unit in Amarillo and Sectional Center Facility rendering mail service to the more than 80 post offices in the Texas Panhandle," Price said.

"This old building is being leased at a cost of more than $65,000 a year. The new building will take over this work and also serve as a vital transportation and distribution hub handling bulk mail to and from points in the Panhandle as well as points as far north as Liberal, Kan., and as far east as Oklahoma City."

"This new highly-mechanized facility is important to efficient processing of increasing mail loads due to area growth," Price said. "Early completion is important to all the Texas Panhandle."

Police Call Off Search

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — State police have called off the search for a Texas machinist sucked from the cabin of a National Airlines DC10 during a flight from Houston to Las Vegas.

"As far as we're concerned, we've done all we can do," Police Chief Martin Vigil said. "Unless they come up with some information or physical evidence that would prompt a continuation of the search, we're going to phase it out little by little."

G. F. Gardner, 45, of Beaumont, Tex., was sitting next to a window that was broken by flying debris from one of the jetliner's engines that exploded during the Saturday night flight. The cabin depressurized and Gardner, although strapped to his seat, was pulled from the plane.

Vigil said the decision to end the search was discussed by "all parties concerned and all agreed that we had done more than enough to locate this body."

Widow's computer dates leave her still lonely

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: If you use my letter, please don't use my name. I already feel like a first class fool. I am a 58-year-old widow who signed up with a computer dating service four months ago.

I was interviewed in person and said I liked classical music and theater, and only wanted a presentable escort. I paid them $398, and they guaranteed me two dates a month with a man supposedly selected by computer whose interests would match mine.

None of the characters they came up with were even presentable. All impressed me as men who were looking for a meal ticket. Some were insulting.

After four months without one suitable date, I asked this company for a $200 refund. They turned me down. I saw my lawyer, who said I was an idiot for having gone for a deal like this in the first place.

I could sue them, but I don't want to publicize my foolishness. I ask you, are all these mating and dating services just out to take people? And where does a respectable woman go to meet a decent man? BEEN HAD

DEAR BEEN: I've had both bad and good reports on computer dating and mating services. [Mostly bad, which is not surprising since people write to me about their bad breaks—not their good.] I agree with your lawyer. Respectable women meet decent men thru mutual friends, or in decent places like volunteer organizations, church groups, and adult education classes.

DEAR ABBY: I am 17 years old and am still a virgin. This guy I'll call Randy asked me to go all the way with him. I told him I was saving myself for marriage, and he said I was foolish because no guy wants a virgin anymore. Is that true?

Randy signed up for the Navy for four years and he is leaving soon. Do you think a girl should get that serious with a guy before he goes into the Navy? He probably just wants somebody to write to, but I am afraid to get involved with him knowing he'll be tied up with the Navy for so long.

Please tell me what to do as I am all mixed up. IN DOUBT

DEAR IN DOUBT: Slow up, young lady, or you will be in TROUBLE. Plenty of guys want their brides to be virgins so don't let Randy say a bill of goods. He sounds like an immature, irresponsible kid you would do well to stay away from.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 30-year-old woman whose mother tells her she is "blockheaded and stubborn" because she refuses to try to make friends with a large dog that attacked her two years ago.

Being attacked by this dog was a traumatic experience for me. I can still remember the bleeding teeth marks on my wrist, and the large scar on my leg which took a year to heal.

My mother claims that this dog is friendly to anyone who isn't afraid of him, so I should pet him thru the fence to make friends with him, and act like I am not afraid of him. I claim that under the circumstances it is normal for me to be afraid, and even foolish to be otherwise.

This dog was trained as a watchdog. Am I being stubborn? J. W.

DEAR J. W.: Yes. But intelligently so. They say, every dog is entitled to one bite. And that dog has had his.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

For Abby's new booklet, "What Teen-Agers Want to Know," send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 122 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Cal. 90212.

Area Woman Awarded State Fair Ribbons

Mrs. Alma Thornburg of White Deer, was notified recently that nine of the ten items entered for her in the State Fair by her daughter, Mrs. Ernestine Williams of San Angelo, were on display and took ribbons at the State Fair of Texas in Dallas in October.

Among the items displayed were her "Cathedral Window," a bedspread which placed second. Taking a third place was a pillowcase with crocheted edging. Completing items displayed in the "Over 70 Years Old" category were Honorable Mentions on four other items: a quilt, "Road to Jericho," a crocheted chair and sofa set, a needlepoint bird picture and an embroidered crewel, "Lilies."

In the "Under 70 Years Old" category, she had three honorable mentions. They were a crewel embroidered piece, "Iris," an embroidered place mat, and another needlepoint bird picture. Mrs. Thornburg is 78 years old.

Mrs. Williams, herself, took 19 ribbons. Among these in the Ceramic Division, she took a first and three second places. In the Creative Hobbies Division, she took a third and three Honorable Mentions. In Designer Craftman Division, Original Work, she took two third places. In the Afghan Division, her honors were a third place on her large afghan, "Texas." She also had three Honorable Mentions on three other afghans. In the Hand-Painted China Division, Intermediate Section, she took a first, a second and three Honorable Mentions.

Mrs. Williams will be remembered for her outstanding accomplishments in 4-H in Carson County as a youngster.

Mrs. Thornburg and Mrs. Williams are the mother and sister of Leroy Thornburg of Pampa.

Snuggle Into Cardigan

Long line, gently hip-hugging cardigan in bulky knit boasts a special cable stitch neckline. It's easy to work.

By Judy Love

It's warm up time all over the country — always good news for knitters. This year a hand knit sweater is more than a fashion must. It's downright patriotic to wear sweater and outdone the thermostat to save fuel.

So I've searched the sweater scene for you and have particularly good knitting news for those who wear a size 12 to 16. This cardigan neckline, button front sweater is longer, leaner and sharper than any others I've reviewed in this size range.

A kind of bulky knit, fanny hugging cardigan style, you'll wear it warmly and smartly, over pants, skirts and dresses.

Sleeves are set into shaped shoulders, two jumbo pockets emphasize the low line front closing. And you'll really like the look of the easy cable stitch cardigan edging.

Start this beautiful bulky now and you'll have it worked in time to be a really special gift, too.

You'll need 11 to 13 skeins of Fleisher or Bear Brand Four Seasons Yarn, to be worked on Size 11 and 9 needles.

Instructions are clear, easy-to-follow and fast to work.

For directions for sizes 12 to 16, send 50 cents to Stitches 'n' Time, c/o this newspaper, Radio City Station, Box 503, New York, N.Y. 10019. Ask for leaflet S382, and include your name, address and zip code.

KNIT KNACKS

Dear Judy Love: I have a teen-age son who is just wild about V-neck sweaters. Unfortunately, the one I just made turned out to be a mild disaster. The V didn't look like a V. Where did I go wrong? C.L., N.Y.C.

Dear C.L.: The V-neck sweater is really one of the great classics of all time. Getting a perfect V will be quite easy if you follow this guide. To get an even finish start with a row of loosely worked single crochet around the edge of the neck. With a knitting needle, pick up the neck stitches, insert needle through the back loop of a crochet stitch. The ribbing should be worked as usual. With this sure-fire method, you'll want to make V-neck sweaters for the whole family. — Happy Knitting, Judy Love.

Your Horoscope

By Jeanne Dixon

SATURDAY, NOV. 10

Your birthday today: Coincides with a full moon at 9:27 AM Eastern Standard Time. Your coming year promises a sweeping revelation of the depth and intensity of your feelings. The outworkings of your personal relationships affect all areas of your life, and major choices are made naturally. Business and career questions rise to challenge, and you meet them without special help or advantage. Today's natives usually select a specific vocational specialty and concentrate on mastery within it.

Aries [March 21 - April 19]: If you can take an extra break now, do so, early or late. Family or social pressures ease off a bit, particularly if you will leave people to their own devices.

Taurus [April 20 - May 20]: If you find you've enlisted in too vigorous a schedule, see what you can do to reduce your share despite any injury to your pride. Your diplomacy is useful in what promises to be a confusing situation.

Gemini [May 21 - June 20]: Get out of the rut of business; seek expression of your social urges; invest time in your favorite hobby. Your focus should be on long-standing interests rather than new inventions.

Cancer [June 21 - July 22]: A time for your serenity in the face of what seems to be much demand on your time and attention from others. Rushing any matter to conclusion would not serve your best interests: temperize and offer no guarantees.

Leo [July 23 - Aug. 22]: Personal and professional obligations conflict, and it's an interesting puzzle to resolve today's mixed agenda. Find something for everybody, and set a little time aside for presentation.

Virgo [Aug. 23 - Sept. 22]: Deliberate calm helps you collect yourself and get your bearings. You'll be better off with a second look before reacting to present incidents. Postpone long journeys.

Libra [Sept. 23 - Oct. 22]: Other people's resources come into your hands for improvement or safekeeping, or perhaps merely for evaluation. It is difficult to make clear estimates unless you've done your research approach.

Scorpio [Oct. 23 - Nov. 21]: Bring pending matters to a point of simplification; close negotiations where you can. Make plans for a fresh direction this coming week, new goals, perhaps, or a different approach.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22 - Dec. 21]: Quite likely you have something to take care of you'd rather not do. Do whatever it is neatly and get finished, or take the consequences without complaint.

Capricorn [Dec. 22 - Jan. 19]: Take time out for a review of what you have, what you have done, and where you can go. The idea that suggests itself may be something readily useful this coming week.

Aquarius [Jan. 20 - Feb. 18]: You can't easily hold out against the tide of current events. Make sensible adjustments where you can, explanations where you must, but stop struggling for personal control of details.

Pisces [Feb. 19 - March 20]: Be prepared to cope with further echoes of past episodes; leave bygones be bygones as nearly as you can. Haste and neglect are to be avoided, at all costs.

The bidding has been:

West North East South
Pass 1 4 Pass 1 4
Pass 4 4 Pass 3 4
You, South, hold:
A 2 7 5 A Q J 8 7 A K J 6 5
What do you do now?
A — Bid six spades. Your partner is showing good spades. You expect to lose a heart trick and at worst the spade slam will depend on a finesse.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Instead of bidding one spade your partner has raised you to two diamonds. What do you do now?

THE "FLYING" SLEIGH
NEW YORK (UPI) — By 1809, Washington Irving was describing Santa as a jolly Dutch citizen looking very much like Father Knickerbocker. But the famed novelist began to wonder how Santa, on a horse, could get to all the nation's rapidly-increasing homes on Christmas Eve.

So Irving invented the familiar reindeer-drawn sleigh. And that's how Santa, a century before the Wright Brothers and their flying machine, zoomed off into the skies.

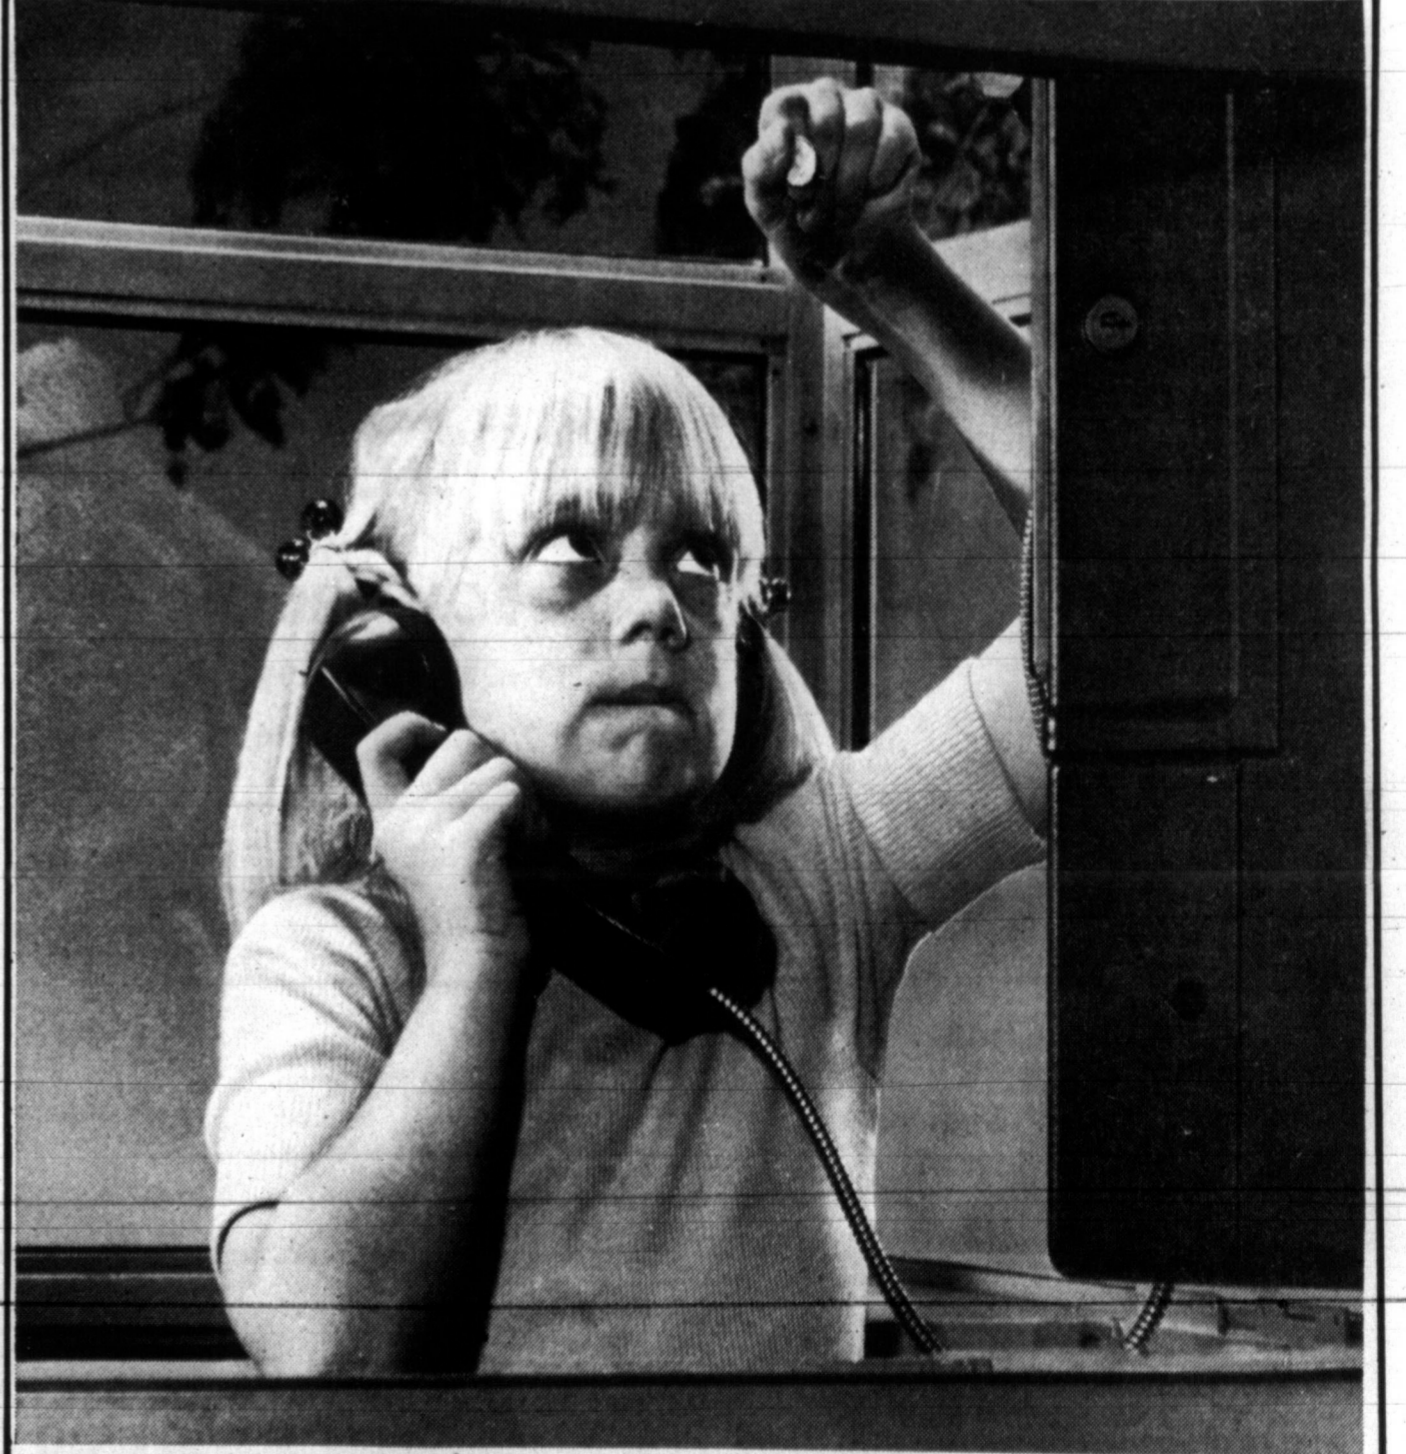

No series of articles on deception by declarers would be complete without the inclusion of a little gem played by England's Terence Reese.

Reese ducked the first club. He didn't like the lead and hoped that West would shift, but West continued the suit which Reese won with the club ace. It isn't hard to see the correct continuation by declarer. He must play two rounds of trumps and then lead diamonds. If the player with the high trump holds three or more, declarer will be able to discard his last club on the last diamond. You can also see that East holds three spades and two diamonds and that this play is not going to work.

It worked for Terence. He played the ace and king of trumps and ran diamonds but he found a way to persuade East not to ruff the third one. It wasn't really difficult. He cashed his ace of diamonds, led a diamond to dummy's king and continued with the jack. It appeared to East that West was holding the queen so East discarded. Now Terence went back to dummy with the ace of hearts, got the club discard he needed and

Thoughts

But if anyone keeps looking steadily into God's law for free men, he will not only remember it but he will do what it says, and God will greatly bless him in everything he does. Anyone who says he is a Christian but doesn't control his sharp tongue is just fooling himself, and his religion isn't worth much. The Christian who is pure and without fault, from God the Father's point of view, is the one who takes care of orphans and widows, and who remains true to the Lord—not soiled and dirtied by his contacts with the world. James 1:25-27

Nazarene Church Schedules Revival

A revival will begin Tuesday night, Nov. 13 at the First Church of the Nazarene, 500 N. West St. in Pampa. Evangelist Rev. Albert Neuschwanger of Fort Worth, and Elder in the Church of the Nazarene who is devoting full time to the work of evangelism will be featured.

Mr. Neuschwanger began his ministry in 1934 soon after his graduation from Breese College, Hutchinson, Kans. He held pastorates in some of our larger churches, including Northside Church of the Nazarene, Nampa, Id.; First Church of the Nazarene, Pueblo, Colo.; and First Church of the Nazarene, Bartlesville, Okla.

In addition to his preaching ministry, Mr. Neuschwanger was active in youth work, having served as District NYPs President for seven years. He also served as District Church School Chairman for 15 years. His ministry has been in demand for camp meetings and revivals throughout the denomination.

Mr. Neuschwanger gives us the gist of his consecration when he says: "I am compelled by the Holy Ghost to give my life to the great task of soul winning. This is my whole life and the consuming passion of my soul."

Rev. Albert Neuschwanger

The public is invited to hear his timely messages for this fast-moving generation.

Services begin each evening at 7:30 p.m. weekdays, and 10:45 a.m. and 7 p.m. Sunday.

Miracle In Munich Scheduled Sunday

The color and sound film "Miracle in Munich", filmed in Munich, Germany, will be shown Sunday night, at 7 p.m. in the Bible Church of Pampa, 2401 Alcock.

This film portrays the work of some 50 students of Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, who were recruited to go to Germany to minister to the world athletes, at the 1972 Olympics.

The Moody Institute of Science films, "Sermons from Science" were shown, with narration in six different languages. The local background and old world scenery is most striking.

Also, the response to the Gospel message of these outstanding young people, all of whom paid their own way there is gratifying. The film is narrated by the new president of Moody, Dr. George M. Sweeney.

Rev. H.A. Somerville, retired pastor from Amarillo, is temporarily acting as Pastor of the Bible Church of Pampa, until the arrival of the new Pastor, Rev. Richard J. Ogden, from Steamboat Springs, Colo., later this month.

Everyone, especially young people, are invited to the showing of this amazing film, which will be shown but once in Pampa. There will be no admission charge.

Jehovah's Witnesses Plan For Convention

The governing body of Jehovah's Witnesses has officially announced the selection of Amarillo as the site for their 2-day area convention in December, it was made known by Richard L. Fetter, minister of the local congregation. It will be held in Stephen F. Austin Junior High School Dec. 1 and 2.

"Amarillo has served as host city for Witnesses conventions several times in recent years. The last such convention in this area was held in Pampa, May 5 and 6, where 1544 gathered," said Fetter.

The convention being planned is not a revival, but is a Bible educational program supported by delegates from 23 congregations in the Panhandle of Texas and Western Oklahoma forming Texas Circuit No. 10, the sponsor of the series of meetings.

Visitors are always welcome at all the sessions.

Convention organizers have worked closely for the past few months with city and school officials to make provision for the more than 1500 expected for the December event.

Fetter was in Amarillo Nov. 5 where he participated in an organizational meeting in connection with his appointment to the convention administrative body as Food Service head.

Directing the session, circuit overseer Robert A. McCarrall discussed plans for the event and outlined arrangements for 20 service departments used to provide essential needs for the delegates.

Fetter's administrative position for this convention includes responsibility to provide refreshments and meals for 1500 plus delegates.

An uneasy alliance versus Uncle Sam

There are always church-state skirmishes going on in the United States. Sometimes it is a conservative group that has a major complaint against government views or court rulings. Other dramas are acted out in real life between liberal churchmen and their alarm or anger concerning some presidential policy or congressional study. It may be a school prayer ruling, an abortion law, amnesty, aid to parochial schools, whatever. But rarely do you see a combined conservative-liberal front taking on the forces of government (or its agencies) as in these recent cases.

Billy Hargis and the National Council of Churches: for more than a dozen years Hargis has been the sworn enemy of the World and National Council of Churches. Real punching, real pushing and shoving, with bruises prove it. Yet, for nearly a year, the National Council has chosen to join Hargis and his organization in combat with the Internal Revenue Service. Seems that the IRS does not appreciate the social/political comments of the Hargis team, hence their nonprofit tax deductible status is in jeopardy.

Religious groups are allowed just so much noise-making in Washington and IRS wants to maintain decent boundaries. The NCC has a history for social pronouncements and a keen interest in the lobbying scene around the District of Columbia. Results: strong support for freedom of speech, even Hargis-style which grates the established churches.

Carl McIntire/United Church of Christ, United Presbyterian Church is the most unlikely partnership that has ever faced the Federal Communications Commission. In the November editorial of A.D. (published jointly by the denominations named) the opinion is expressed that the revoking of the license of the McIntire radio station, WXUR, was quite legal, but may be a serious infringement of freedom of speech. And people in pulpits and editorial offices are pretty touchy when this danger pops up.

McIntire has been the enemy ever since he was kicked out of the Presbyterian church in 1936. Notes A.D., "he has attacked virtually all the causes which the major churches have supported and has carried his protests to distasteful extremes... We reject his teaching and methods, but we affirm his right to be heard".

That must have a large gulp for some Christians to take. McIntire and his followers have brought more grief to more Christian groups than almost anyone you can name in this century. His operations have been heavily funded and generously supported — by a small but vociferous clutch of splinter-group Christians. In Korea, Christians have yet to heal the rupture that his lieutenants have plotted.

Yet, A.D. argues, better a mean brawl than no brawl at all. "We have faith in the Christian Church... the Church will not be permanently injured or disabled by his attacks. More than Mr. McIntire's slander and reactionary views, we fear government control of media. So we feel constrained to say, Let Carl McIntire speak."

Quiet Day Wednesday

St. Matthews Episcopal Church, 727 W. Browning, will conduct its fifth annual Quiet Day on Wednesday, Nov. 14, at the church.

Rev. Robert Hibbs of St. Peter's Episcopal Church in Borger will direct the activities for the local observance.

The day will begin at 9:30 a.m. with the first address slated for 10:30 a.m. Lunch will be after the second address, scheduled for 11:30 a.m. Dialogue will begin at 1 p.m. The activity should end about 2:30 p.m.

All interested persons are invited to participate in the day, based on Luke 17:21, "... for behold, the kingdom of God is within you."

The observance, much of it involving periods of quiet meditation, is intended to allow the participants to strive to obtain a nearness to God in the tranquility of the silence.

Those who attend the session are asked to bring a sack lunch. The annual observance began locally in 1969, with Rev. Sam Hulse, former pastor, officiating for the activity.

Other directors have included Rev. John T. Ryan, a monk from Holy Cross at Grapevine, 1970; Ada Foster, Lubbock, 1971, and Bishop Willis Henton, formerly of Amarillo now of Lubbock, in 1972.

Fellowship Meeting Tomorrow

The Pampa chapter of Full Gospel Businessmen Fellowship is having an open meeting Saturday. Chapter president Melvin Clark urges you to bring the entire family to this non-denominational meeting.

The speaker will be Wendell Stewart of Midland, who is a 32-year Texas employe. Mr. Stewart is active in the Methodist Lay Witness Mission and spends his weekends working for the Lord wherever he is called.

Wendell Stewart

The meeting will be at Stephen F. Austin School at 7:30 p.m. Special music will be provided by Elmo Hudgins.

"I am only one, but I am one; I can't do everything, but I can do something; What I can do, that I ought to do; And what I ought to do, that, by the grace of God, I shall do."

The Weekly Message Of Inspiration

First Methodist Church

DR. LLOYD V. HAMILTON
Pastor

For scriptural thought let us look at Mark 10:35-40, "And James and John, the sons of Zebedee, came forward to him, and said to him, 'Teacher, we want you to do for us whatever we ask of you.' and he said to them, 'What do you want me to do for you?' And they said to him, 'Grant us to sit, one at your right hand and one at your left, in your glory.' But Jesus said to them, 'You do not know what you are asking. Are you able to drink the cup that I drink, or to be baptized with the baptism with which I am baptized?' And they said to him, 'We are able,' and Jesus said to them, 'The cup that I drink you will drink; and with the baptism with which I am baptized, you will be baptized; but to sit at my right hand or at my left is not mine to grant, but it is for those for whom it has been prepared.'"

Before our country came unglued and people seemed to have respect for one another, there was a cartoon in the paper that impressed me. It was a fake photograph of a man in a voting booth, standing about ten feet tall. Underneath the cartoon were these words, "Politicians may debate the issues endlessly but ultimately it is the citizen who makes the decision. When he is in the voting booth, he is ten feet tall."

Perhaps the biggest sin facing most of us is the little respect we have for ourselves and for one another. I have to think about the Master of men who gave men a great dignity. How do you think Peter and Andrew must have felt when he said, "Follow me, and I'll make you fishers of men?" How do you think common, ordinary folk felt when he said, "You are salt of the earth", or "you are the light of the world"?

I think Jesus understood James and John with their desire, one to sit on the right hand, one to sit on the left. He didn't even condemn them for it. What he actually said to them was, something like this, "So you want to be important. You want to surpass others and be great among men. Alright, you should. To be my disciples, you must, but be sure it is real greatness you are after. A greatness that is worthy of God. If you want to excel, excel in goodness, if you want to be first among men, be first in moral excellency.

If I can read the gospels correctly, Jesus spent much of his time teaching plain, ordinary folk that they were highly important. Much more important than they realized. I think he was saying to the people of his day that it was a sin to be content with being nobody. He told those who chose to follow him, "Except your righteousness exceeds that of the scribes and the pharisees, you are not good enough for God's kingdom."

A few years ago I talked to a very brilliant young father who had a little more than his fair share of difficulty and I think he could be honest with me when he looked me straight in the eye and said in familiar terms, "Lloyd, the problem with me is that I don't believe in anything." Could this be our big problem? That we don't believe in God, we don't believe in one another, we don't believe in ourselves, we doubt that we are designed to be sons of the Almighty God.

Every one of us ought to realize that we are potential sons of God and as such we ought to try to live like it.

The Pampa Daily News
A Watchful Newspaper

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Our Capsule Policy

The Pampa News is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. Only when man is free to control himself and all he produces can he develop to his utmost capability.

The News believes each and every person would get more satisfaction in the long run if he were permitted to spend what he earns on a volunteer basis rather than having part of it distributed involuntarily.

View From Slope Of The Pacific

OLYMPIA, WASH. (NEA) — Two progressive Republicans, Govs. Daniel Evans of Washington and Tom McCall of Oregon, believe President Nixon waited far too long to try convincingly to turn back the adverse tide running against him in the nation.

They agreed, in successive interviews, that the momentum of his Watergate-related difficulties will now keep Mr. Nixon steadily overwhelmed and distracted, even if he avoids impeachment.

Said McCall in Salem:

"The Presidency's been emancipated. And I don't think he can make it well again... I can't understand, either, how he thought he could take care of the vice presidential thing (Spiro Agnew's resignation) by putting in a Humpty Dumpty like (Rep. Gerald) Ford."

Both governors, members of a dwindling band of 19 GOP state chief executives which not long ago totaled 32, revealed that White House liaison aide Kenneth Cole telephoned them to give them advance notice of important presidential moves like the naming of Ford, the release to the courts of the controversial White House Watergate tapes, the decision to fire Special Prosecutor Archibald Cox. But the governors' judgment is not sought.

They are in accord with many other presidential critics in laying the burden of miscalculation upon the president and most key advisers. Evans feels especially strongly that Mr. Nixon seems handicapped by a "peculiar lack of foresight."

If there are any truly seasoned political helpers in the White House, and veteran former lawmaker Melvin Laird may qualify as such, they clearly do not prevail with the President at decision time. Added McCall: "He simply doesn't understand the country's reactions. He hasn't grasped things at all. He's out of touch."

At least as it affects their states, both Evans and McCall give the lie to the contention of top White House sources that the President, notwithstanding Watergate, is pursuing government as usual.

Evans, presently chairman of the National Governors' Conference which will hold its 1974 meeting in Seattle next June, is particularly incensed at postponement of scheduled meetings with White House people on proposed city-county state assistance which might be contained in the President's fiscal 1975 budget now being put together.

McCall supports Evans' view that the President and his men are not attending to essential business.

The Oregon governor argued that it is this, as well as Mr. Nixon's long period of agonizing and temporizing over the highly visible Watergate issue, which has caused a steady wasting away of the President's credibility both as a man and as an effectively performing chief executive.

What Mr. Nixon has done, as McCall sees it (and Evans would agree), is to blow his priceless capital assets in the Watergate ordeal of 1973. Nothing so vividly expresses these governors' frustration as did McCall's anguished cry when he heard the tapes would be released:

"Why in God's name didn't he do it months ago?"

Though they speak from the Pacific slope far from the main 1973 battle scene, Evans and McCall possess high credentials as vigorous, outspoken governors and politicians. They are calling for something better in states at once special yet typical of the nation's urgent difficulties.

Presidential 'Pyramids'

If Watergate has accomplished nothing else of positive benefit, it has inspired a fresh look at the American presidency, and how it grows.

One of the latest books to put the White House under the microscope is "The Presidency in Flux," (Columbia University Press) by George Reedy, the late President Lyndon B. Johnson's press secretary.

In one section of the book, Reedy examines a phenomenon most other observers have ignored — the proliferation of presidential libraries in recent years which, according to Reedy, "has taken on megalomaniac overtones."

Libraries have been established to house the works and papers of Presidents Harry Truman, Herbert Hoover, Dwight Eisenhower, Franklin Roosevelt, Lyndon Johnson and others.

The most pretentious edifice to date is that honoring Reedy's old boss, LBJ, on the campus of the University of Texas in Austin. A move to create a library to house the documents (and tapes?) of President Nixon has been stalled by the Watergate scandal.

In an article taken from his book and published in the current Intellectual Digest, Reedy suggests that rather helping historians, such repositories may actually confound their problems.

"I doubt seriously," he says, "that the libraries reflect a genuine concern for future generations and the problems they face. They smack more the Egyptian pharaohs who sought immortality through the erection of stone pyramids."

Reedy explains the trend of contemporary presidents to establish presidential libraries as an attempt by the chief executives to have posterity think well of them. When a man achieves the White House, he says, "there is nothing more that the people can grant him."

Thereafter, he says, it is only a matter of time until constituencies fade in his sight. The larger question becomes the reaction of history to his administration rather than the reaction of voters.

"I suggest there is something unhealthy," says Reedy, "about a form of government in which a man who is faced with day-to-day problems of government devotes so much energy to his image in the future."

He adds, in words that deserve to be struck in bronze and affixed above the door of the Oval Office:

"The reaction of history — especially history that has yet to be written — is a poor guide to public policy."

A Thought For Tourists

Most Americans have a yen to travel abroad. One of the favorite tours is Palestine. En route to Jerusalem they like to spend a few dollars in Cairo. And if they have the means, they often journey to Damascus to see the streets that the Apostle Paul trod. In short, they tend not to be respecters of desert boundary lines, but spread Yankee banknotes in the vicinities of both Arabs and Jews.

Neither bombs nor bullets are a total deterrent. Indeed, for some the prospect of war serves as an enticement. For they suppose the assembling of nations on the borders of embattled Israel is the fulfillment of divine prophecy that heralds the hour when true believers will take off like rockets to an eternal destination beyond the clouds. To this view, what better launching pad than the Palestinian sands where the cosmic drama is scheduled to unfold! In theological terms, this climatic event is termed the Rapture.

Of course, if that is what individuals choose to do, who can quarrel with it? And, as a matter of fact, those who so profess may rightly have read the signs. Still, there is a possibility that the hoped-for celestial departure will not take place precisely at the time wished, but at some later time. In that case, a further possibility persists that several hundred pilgrims — perhaps thousands — will be trapped on terra firma between infuriated partisans. Some pilgrims may be killed, some may be taken hostage, some may become the victims of terrorist outrage. Thus a domestic outcry will ensue from kith and kin that the U.S. Government should intervene in the belligerent zone to provide an alternate means of transportation from it.

If the intervention could be limited to transportation of American citizens from the points of danger, the risk would be minimal. But if the rescue were to involve dispatch of U.S. Marines or larger forces, the individual choices that a few pilgrims made for themselves would then involve all their fellow countrymen.

May we dare to suggest at this not very early date, that those who travel in combat areas — by the rules of reason and self-responsibility — do so at their own peril in accordance with their own private judgment.

Let him travel who will, but without guaranty, either explicit or implied. He is free to go, he is equally free to consider the potential consequences.

BERRY'S WORLD

"I was impeached as president of my class last year. Don't worry, it's not so bad!"

Ray Cromley
After the war: seeing Europe with new eyes

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The Arab- Israeli war is going to set off a reassessment of both U.S. military weapons and political-military alliances.

The effectiveness of the relatively cheap Soviet-supplied missiles against Israeli planes and tanks in early October has been noted here with considerable concern. The missiles are capable of destroying many times their cost in planes and armor.

The analysis of this war's battles will take some time to complete, of course, but it could result in major modifications of some ground and air tactics, especially as applied in open desert areas and of some types of plane and tank construction. New problems of plane survivability in the face of missile concentrations had already come up in Vietnam during the bombing of the North in the closing months of the war.

For one thing, it seems likely that even greater emphasis is going to be given to attacks on enemy missile sites to permit planes to operate freely. Moreover, the already-considerable role of non-nuclear missiles may be strengthened. In any event, a good deal of added research on ground-to-ground and ground-to-air missiles is in order.

The lack of cooperation among our West European allies during the Middle East crisis has been reported. But what must be made clear is that private concern here is much greater than indicated by public remarks at the State Department and Pentagon. For this sideline — sitting and, in some cases, opposition, by Western Europe followed years of noncooperation during the Vietnam war.

The question here is whether the Europeans would come to America's aid in any world crisis which affected this country's security deeply, but did not directly involve Europe. Are our treaties with Europe one-way streets? Are we committed to the defense of Europe, while Western Europe is not bound to the defense of the United States?

Of course Vietnam and the Middle East Wars have not been the true tests. But some here think they could be barometers — or straws in the wind.

These U.S. policymakers cannot forget that this country twice went to the aid of Europe at great cost in lives and money, that this country provided billions for the rehabilitation of Western Europe and that when the United States in recent years has needed help and moral support to hold up the sagging dollar, to handle the sticky war in Indochina and to patch things together in the Middle East, West Europe has erected trade barriers highly detrimental to American exports, has been uncooperative and sometimes openly hostile to our efforts in Indochina and has, in some instances, closed airports to U.S. shipments to Israel.

There is the realization here, of course, that if the West

Your Health
Jogger's Pressure Is Fluctuating

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am writing you concerning my husband. He is 36 years old and has always been active in sports, particularly basketball. About six months ago he weighed 205. He started a jogging program and jogged two miles every day. In about five months he lost 20 pounds. He felt great and went to the doctor. While there, the doctor discovered he had high blood pressure: At that time it was 170 over 100. After taking pills, it came down to 150 over 90. He was told to lose more weight and forget the jogging. The jogging does not even tire him. Do you agree he should reduce it? If he does, he will have trouble losing weight, and most likely will gain some. Why is jogging harmful?

DEAR READER — It is probably a good idea to take several blood pressure readings over several different days before deciding what an elevated reading means in an apparently healthy young man. If it is persistently elevated, then most doctors would agree that it should be treated.

One of the best treatments in such cases is to get rid of any excess fat that can be eliminated. I'd also suggest limiting salt.

Exercise tends to cause the blood pressure to rise during the exercise effort. Your husband's doctor is concerned that the pressure may be too high as a combined result of the effort of jogging and his basic elevated pressure at rest. If he gets his weight down and his pressure is normal he may not object to your husband returning to sensible jogging. By that I mean a slow trot and not an effort to set any time marks. Men are bad about competing. They love to run faster than the next guy or, if nothing else, faster than they did a week ago or a month ago. That is what causes the trouble. A very slow comfortable jog is less likely to be harmful.

I agree that the jogging is important to help control weight, but it seems to be out of the question for the moment. Perhaps I could suggest a compromise. A good two-mile walk a day will help your husband. And, if he has the time, a three-mile walk each day would be better. If he can walk three miles a day it will really help in his weight control program and he will be in shape to resume jogging when his weight is down and his blood pressure low enough to satisfy his doctor.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have been hearing so much about coffee and heart attacks of late. What about the decaffeinated coffees?

DEAR READER — For the vast number of people decaffeinated products are fine. There is an occasional person who has digestive problems and cannot tolerate the flavor oils of any type of coffee. But, for the most part, I think using a decaffeinated product offers many benefits, not only for the heart, but for other medical problems, particularly "burning in the pit of the stomach."

U.S. Axing NATO Funds For Nonsupport in Mideast War
By Robert S. Allen

WASHINGTON — Our pusillanimous European allies asked for it and they're going to get it — where it hurts!

It's now virtually certain that Congress will decisively vote a big cutback of the 229,000 U.S. troops in Europe, and also wield the ax on other costly military commitments there.

By crassly pussyfooting during the tense Middle East crisis, the allies accomplished what critics of NATO have been unable to do.

In the past few years, repeated efforts have been made in Congress to slash NATO spending. The Senate has several times voted to reduce U.S. forces in Europe, only to be stopped by the House refusing to go along. Last month, such an amendment was written into the multi-billion-dollar military procurement bill, but was deleted in the secret House-Senate conference deliberations.

But since the grim Middle East crisis, there has been a sweeping change in congressional sentiment.

Resentment at the European allies' gross refusal to support the U.S. in the sinister showdown with Russia, in resupplying Israel with desperately needed arms and munitions, is now so widespread and supercharged that retaliatory measures against NATO are certain.

Already a bluntly significant portent of that has been enacted.

The House conferees on the military procurement authorization bill accepted without challenge the amendment sponsored by Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., requiring that the NATO allies, in effect, match this country's huge expenditures for the defense of Europe.

Previously, Jackson's Senate-approved amendment would have had little chance. But the House conferees agreed to it without argument — because of the seething anger at the pussyfooting allies.

Plain Talk

Sen. Jackson minced no words in the closed-door deliberations of the conference committee.

Citing this country's stupendous expenditure of more than $25 billion in outright military grants to the NATO allies, the veteran legislative leader maintained it is high time the European countries "assume their fair share of these costs."

"The most pressing problem before the alliance," he said, "is the disproportionate burden the United States is bearing for the defense of Europe. The balance-of-payments deficit arising from the deployment of U.S. troops has contributed to the weakness of the dollar, itself a source of monetary instability and associated problems in the Western community."

"Under my amendment, the President is directed to seek agreements to offset completely any balance-of-payments deficit incurred as a result of the deployment of U.S. forces in Europe. If such agreements have not been concluded at the end of this fiscal year, then our troops there will be reduced by a percentage equal to the balance-of-payments shortfall. For example: if only 75 per cent of the deficit is offset, our forces will be reduced by 25 per cent; if the deficit is offset by 90 per cent, our forces will be reduced by 10 per cent."

Also required by Jackson's groundbreaking amendment are considerable increases in the allies' "budgetary contribution" for the construction and maintenance of NATO facilities and installations — now largely paid by the U.S.

Basis of Jackson's $25 billion figure of outright U.S. military grants to the NATO allies since 1950 is the following:

- For the 14 European allies as a whole — $14,279 billion.
- In addition, France — $4,153 billion; Italy — $2,290 billion; Belgium — $1,237 billion; Britain — $1,034 billion; West Germany — $990,806,000; Spain — $604,589,000; Turkey — $2,975 billion; Greece — $1,581 billion.
- In addition to these immense outlays, this year's still-pending foreign aid authorization bill contains the following military assistance items: Turkey — $85.5 million; Greece — $1.65 million; Spain — $3,026 million; Portugal — $323,000.

Turkey, Greece and Spain, although leading beneficiaries of U.S. military assistance grants, were notoriously uncooperative on the airlift to resupply Israel with weapons.

These three countries flatly refused not only to allow the U.S. to use air and naval bases, but even to overfly them enroute to Israel.

At the same time, Turkey gave the Soviets over-flight permission to rush weapons to the Arabs. Actually, this isn't the first time Turkey has copped out on the U.S. in a pinch. It has run for cover several times when it deemed that best in its own national interests.

It's a universal evil, a blinding scar on my profession. The architect and engineer dealing in public works provides the front money for the aspiring politician.

—Charles Colbert, former dean of the Columbia University School of Architecture, on the practice of kickbacks.

Money means nothing to (President Nixon.) I don't think he has ever signed a check himself.

—Charles (Bebe) Rebozo, defending his handling of a $100,000 contribution to the Nixon campaign from Howard Hughes.

Verily, when the day of judgment comes, we shall not be asked what we have read, but what we have done. — Thomas a Kempis, German theologian.

Television In Review

By RICK DUBROW
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — CBS-TV Wednesday announced the upcoming cancellation of two of its weekly half-hour comedy series, "Calucci's Dept." and "Roll Out," both of which bowed in this fall.

"Calucci's Dept.," which deals with a state unemployment office, has been a disaster in the ratings.

And "Roll Out," set in World War II and focusing on two black drivers in the famous army truck unit called the Red Ball Express, hasn't done much better.

CBS-TV, the perennial ratings leader among the networks, and a cool, efficient organization that acts swiftly, already has announced that another freshman entry, "The New Perry Mason" series, will be replaced at midseason.

Some Excellent Reviews
The star of "Calucci's Dept.," James Coco, who plays the head of the unemployment office, has received some excellent reviews for his performance in the series. And he is indeed a fine actor.

But a chief problem of the show, noticeable immediately in its premiere, has been its somewhat split personality—genuine humor and comedy paths on the one hand, and common television farce on the other.

It's possible the low-level farce element resulted in part from the fact that the series airs early in the evening, a time at which some video programs gear themselves to have some appeal to youngsters in the viewing audience.

However, solid shows like CBS-TV's "All In The Family" and "Maude" are also early evening entries, and don't make any particular concessions to children who tune in. So if "Calucci's Dept." did concern itself with the youngsters in the audience, it was a mistake. At any rate, the level of farce undermined the program's real potential.

A More Definite Reason
A more definite reason for the demise of "Calucci's Dept." is the fact that it also is up against the head-on competition of one of television's hottest series, NBC-TV's "Sanford and Son." But, of course, "Sanford and Son," like any video hit, can be given a run for its money by the right kind of competition.

"Roll Out" was put together by the creators of another CBS-TV comedy series, "Mash," which is a success and also has a wartime setting—the Korean War. Some television observers, in fact, have described "Roll Out" as attempting to be a black "Mash." But the fact is simply that the material of "Mash" is much sharper overall.

Driving Drinkers
Peter the Great tried to encourage sobriety among 18th-century Russians by insisting that men jailed for drunkenness had to wear a "medal for hard drinking" around their necks all the time they were incarcerated. The medal weighed 18 pounds.

From Boats to Broncs

A Different Kind Of Ship

Article and photos by Tom Thompson, JOC YOKOSUKA (CNFJ)—While the destroyer USS Gurke (DD-783) plunges through the Pacific this month, two of her sailors are west of Tokyo aboard the rolling, twisting backs of bucking horses.

For the past two weeks, Gurkemen Ron Ford and Gary Jenkins have been "rodeoing" with the Casey Tibbs Wild West Show at Summer Land near Yokota Air Station.

It's a life every sailor with cowboy blood might enjoy: plenty of bucking broncs, street brawls, pretty girls, and all the yakitori a strapping six-footer in cowboy boots can eat.

The duo managed to sign on with the Tibbs outfit through a willing commanding officer and the cooperation of the U.S. Embassy in Tokyo. On "no cost" Temporary Assigned Duty orders to the Navy Air Transportation Coordinating Office at Yokota, Ford and Jenkins expect to be with the show until the middle of September.

Born and raised in Texas, both Navymen are no strangers to horses, claiming to have been in the saddle "before we could walk." They carry boots, hats and spurs aboard the Gurke, where Ford is a machinery repairman and Jenkins is a hull technician third class.

While their main interest is in riding, Ford and Jenkins help with the work that goes into blending people, horses, steer and buffalo into a team, putting on a show seven days a week. The work includes everything from being "the good guys or the bad guys" in a street shoot-out to leading a pony straddled by a wide-eyed Japanese child.

The show may not be Texas, but for Ford and Jenkins, it's the best of the West in the Far East.

Ron Ford

BACK IN THE SADDLE, ALMOST. Ron Ford appears to be skyward bound, but recovered to make a successful ten-second ride.

Gary Jenkins

EVERYBODY LOVES A COWBOY. At least the girl above seems impressed, although in the street fight below Gurkemen Jenkins finds more punch behind another cowboy's admiration.

The Woman's View

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor
NEW YORK (UPI) — The subject today is one which concerns every woman—sometimes to a degree beyond which it should.

The subject: Breast cancer. As a Gallup Poll report released Thursday by the American Cancer Society (ACS) puts it, "Breast cancer is so much a major medical concern of American women that most grossly overestimate its prevalence."

The poll, first of its kind, states that, "Undoubtedly, a major reason for this saliency of concern ... is the fact that 77 per cent of all women (surveyed) know someone personally who has had breast cancer and 41 per cent know three or more."

The Gallup study prepared for the ACS was released today during the society's 60th annual meeting at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel. Dr. Irving Crespi, vice president of the Gallup organization, summarized the significant data.

At the same time, Dr. Arthur G. James, ACS president, and Dr. Frank Rauscher, director of the National Cancer Institute, announced nine new breast cancer demonstration projects to be opened in various parts of the country, bringing to 20 the number of efforts toward earlier detection of the disease.

The ACS is in no way downgrading the danger from breast cancer. It is the No. 1 form of the disease affecting women. The society estimates there will be 90,000 new cases and 33,000 deaths in 1974.

But, the ACS reminds, the rate of cure in early diagnosis is 85 to 90 per cent. It drops to a 45 to 50 per cent survival rate when the cancer has moved into the lymph areas.

The 10-page Gallup study—formally titled "Women's Attitudes Regarding Breast Cancer"—resulted from a national sampling of 1,007 women 18 years and older, each interviewed personally for an average of an hour. Prior to the individual talks, a series of tape-recorded group discussions was held as a means of developing the formal questionnaire.

Said the report, "If optimism about survival and progress in diagnosis ... can be effectively linked to a realistic understanding about incidence, this could help motivate women to schedule breast examinations more frequently than they have up to now."

Forty per cent did not realize that increasing age makes for an increasing chance of developing breast cancer.

The report concluded also that half of the adult female population does not have annual breast examinations by a physician and although 77 per cent of all women have heard of breast self-examination, almost three out of 10 have never practiced it. And a minority has not done self-examination on the recommended monthly basis.

The ACS reminds any woman not aware of the self-examination technique that she can get free information from her local cancer society.

The Almanac

By United Press International
Today is Friday, Nov. 9, the 313th day of 1973 with 52 to follow.

The moon is approaching its full phase.

The morning star is Saturn. The evening stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars and Jupiter. Those born on this date are under the sign of Scorpio.

American actress Marie Dressler "Tugboat Annie" was born Nov. 9, 1873.

On this day in history: In 1872, fire broke out in a Boston warehouse. By the next day, 800 buildings had been destroyed with damage estimated at $75 million.

In 1933, President Franklin D. Roosevelt set up the Civil Works Administration as an emergency agency to provide jobs for the unemployed. In 1953, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that major league baseball did not come within the scope of the federal antitrust laws.

In 1965, a massive power failure blacked out New York City and parts of five New England states for two to 13 hours.

A thought for the day: American writer O. Henry said, "What a woman wants is what you're out of. She wants more of a thing when it is scarce."

'NO MORE WORK' Nixon's Defense Head Says He Wasn't Fired

AUSTIN (UPI)—Charles Alan Wright, the University of Texas law professor who headed President Nixon's defense team in the Watergate tapes case, said he has not been fired. He did say he is no longer taking an active role in White House affairs.

Richard M. Nixon was elected by California to the U.S. House of Representatives in 1946 and 1948.

LIFE'S HIS PIZZA Shakey shakes off retirement

By Dick Kleiner

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — When a man has $4 million and holds the dish-breaking record in Greek tavernas, he must look around for new worlds to conquer. And that's basically why Shakey Johnson dressed himself up in a red-and-white striped sports jacket, white trousers and shoes, a red-and-white bow tie and a tan derby with a red dart sticking out the back.

Shakey Johnson: "I'm basically a clown."

Shakey sold out his half-interest in his chain of pizza parlors six years ago, for $4 million. He and Ed Plummer had started the chain with one parlor in Sacramento and $1,700 between them in 1954. Now he's back, dolled up like an awning, to be the firm's new image, a kind of heavy-on-the-cheese Col. Sanders.

Retirement didn't particularly agree with him. He'd been too active all his life. Besides, this new assignment agrees with him, temperamentally.

"I'm basically a clown," he says. "I've always done clownish things." Once, touring Greece, he heard that Jackie and Ari Onassis had set the Greek dish-breaking record, by enthusiastically smashing 30,000 drachma (about $1,000) worth of dishes in a restaurant. He decided to challenge the record, and succeeded in doubling it. (Supposedly it is illegal to break dishes and glasses while dancing in Greek tavernas these days.)

Now he's an actor, working in Shakey's commercials. You'll soon be seeing his face all over. Already there have been offers for him to do some straight acting. "I'd like to try it once," he says, "like I once broke the Greek dish-smashing record just so I could say I did it."

A younger millionaire is Jeff Franklin, 28, who heads up American Talent International, a booking and talent agency and packaging firm, mostly in music.

As you might expect, he views entertainment strictly in dollars and cents.

For example, he currently is exploring the possibility of more adult-oriented entertainment. It isn't out of any do-good-urge but strictly because he thinks there's a market there.

"What is there for people over 24 to do?" he asks. "They can't sit home every night with a TV set and a can of beer. There are no nightclubs to speak of. The ones there are are too expensive. There are maybe four or five good movies a year."

He's trying to fill that void with concerts for adults — not rock — with good performers who would appeal to the old folks (over 24). He also thinks the big bands will be coming back, but in a different way. Big bands tour now but just with the leader and a rhythm section and one or two key sidemen. The rest of the band usually is picked up in whatever town they play.

Oysters Cause New Epidemic Of Hepatitis

HOUSTON (UPI)—A hepatitis epidemic spread by an infected shipment of Louisiana oysters has hit 100 persons and health officials said the liver disease may infect as many as 1,000.

"The problem is that Houston is a visitor city," said Dr. Robert MacLean, director of the communicable disease office in the city health department.

"Many of the people who ate contaminated oysters in Houston have returned home. We're talking about a potential of as many as 1,000 people who may have eaten the contaminated oysters."

MacLean said his office had received telephone calls from physicians as far away as Idaho and New York whose patients had contracted the disease after eating raw oysters in Houston.

"It appears those affected ate the oysters the last 10 days of September," he said. "Hepatitis has an incubation period that may be as long as 50 days."

James E. Anderson of the Federal Food and Drug Administration regional office in Dallas said a FDA investigation traced the contaminated oysters to a Louisiana oyster house that shipped the delicacies to both Houston and a small Georgia community where another 13 persons came down with the disease.

Bailes replied between chews: "It's about the only time I can eat, playing traffic cop with this bunch of thieves."

1040 U.S. Individual Taxpayers Ask IRS

This column of questions and answers on federal tax matters is provided by the local office of the U.S. Internal Revenue Service and is published as a public service to taxpayers. The column answers questions most frequently asked by taxpayers.

Q. I'm a teacher. I'm required to get a master's degree in education to hold on to my job. Are my education expenses, including tuition, tax-deductible?

A. Yes. If you meet the minimum educational requirements for qualification in your employment, and if your employer requires you to obtain further education to retain your present salary, status, or employment, you may deduct expenses for the least education that will meet the minimum requirements if they are for a business purpose. For more details, see IRS Publication 508, "Tax Information on Education Expenses." It's available free from your local IRS office.

Q. Can an individual taxpayer ever deduct legal expenses?

A. Yes. Legal expenses that are a necessary factor in producing taxable income are normally deductible. For example, you may incur legal expenses that are deductible because you need legal assistance directly related to your employment, whether in performing your duties or in litigating to keep your job; or you may require legal help to collect alimony. Since alimony is included in taxable income, you may deduct your legal cost as an expense necessary to produce such income.

Q. This fall, my son went away to school. Because he no longer lives with me, will I lose him as a dependent?

A. No. In general, a dependent relative does not have to live with you or be a member of your household for you to claim him as a dependent. However, you must meet the other dependency tests, including furnishing more than one half of the dependent's total support. Since your son qualifies as a student, the gross income test, which generally restricts gross income of a dependent over age 18 to less than $750, does not apply.

Youth Finds Fuel Rationing Concept Hard

By United Press International
George Tetrick is only 17 and can't remember World War II gasoline rationing. To him the need for fuel is nearly as great as the need to breathe.

"Wow," was the Louisville-area high school senior reaction to President Nixon's energy proposals when he was questioned in a UPI man-in-the-street survey. "It surrounds us in everything we do and everywhere we go."

"I can't imagine being without such things as gasoline, electricity and oil for that matter. It's almost like giving up breathing."

Charles Light, 64, a retired pharmacist in Crofton, Md., said "I think it's a good program and I think the President has a good grasp on it. I will follow it. But I doubt if many people will voluntarily follow it. There are lots of dedicated Nixon haters who may just disobey it for spite."

One who followed the letter, but not the spirit, of Nixon's plea was a customs agent in Miami where temperatures have been in the 70s. "I listened to the President's speech and did my best to comply," he said. "So I turned my air conditioner on full force to bring the room down to 88 degrees."

"It is something to start thinking about," Robert Noland of Columbus, Ohio, said. "The way food prices are, it seems to be a warning to people about using gas when they don't need to. He is a good President."

Student Hunts For Energy Crisis Answer

By MICHAEL O. WESTER
LUBBOCK, Tex. (UPI) — Everyone wants to play in the thermonuclear fusion control game; but, as yet, no one knows how to score.

Searching for an answer to the energy crisis is anyone's game. But with the progress being made by a Texas Tech University graduate student, all might some day be playing by his ground rules.

In his quest for an abundant, clean, safe power resource, Marshall M. Molen has built a powerful carbon dioxide laser with which he has made three contributions toward solving the energy crisis problem.

Molen, who expects to receive his doctor's degree next month after 2½ years of research, wants to continue his studies — even after graduation.

"There may be political dissonance in the world, but when it comes to looking for an answer to the energy crisis it's anyone's game," Molen said. "Cooperation is the rule in the search for a way to control thermonuclear fusion. Big powers and little powers, industry and universities — all are looking for answers."

From Greenville, Tex.
Molen, from Greenville, Tex., feels his experiments are important.

"They are only a part of thousands of ideas which are being tested and studied so that maybe by the year 2000 a thermonuclear reactor can become reality," he said.

Until man can control fusion for his purposes, the only result he can see from fusion is the light of the sun, the stars and the explosive hydrogen bomb.

Molen beams a CO-2 laser through plasma (ionized gas) to heat it. This is important because fusion depends on fast heating of plasma to temperatures of about 100 million degrees, he says.

Molen has found he can use the laser to heat the plasma fast and uniformly.

"Theoretically there has been sea water as the basic fuel and controlled fusion of hydrogen atoms for power.

a question of whether the refraction of the laser as it enters the plasma — or the deflection of the beam as it passes through material less dense than air — would diminish its ability to heat the plasma," he said.

Produces More Heat
On the contrary, Molen has found he can use the refraction of the beam to advantage and produce more heat.

In addition, Molen said he can increase the heating of the plasma, doubling the heat by a coupled cavity heating technique — using mirrors to bounce the beam back and forth through the plasma.

"The CO-2 laser I've constructed is more than six feet long," he said. "The beam is invisible because it is infrared light. It is so strong that when it is focused the air breaks down into small fire balls."

The laser sometimes uses as much as 75,000 bolts in a system designed and built by Molen and other Texas Tech students.

When all the pieces fit, sea water could provide the basic fuel and the controlled fusion of hydrogen atoms the power, according to Molen.

WORRY CLINIC

By
George W. Crane, Ph.D., M.D.

Louise had two suitors. But married the one who made her feel more important. He was an extrovert. But many extroverted girls crave the bossing that an introvert offers them. This explains why talkative wives often pick quiet but dominant husbands!

CASE Y-565: Louise G., aged 27, faced a crucial marriage problem.

"Dr. Crane," she began, "I was given a big 'rush' by two very attractive men."

"One was a chemist and making a good salary as head of his own firm."

"The other was a salesman and also earning a good income."

"Both men were fun to be with and of the same religion as I am."

"But I finally decided to marry the salesman."

"Dr. Crane, do you know why?"

"When I shook my head, she continued:

"Well, the salesman always seemed to be cheerful and a good talker."

"The engineer was a little inclined to be bossy and sometimes would hardly say a word, especially if he were angry."

"For then he'd pout or sulk for a while."

"The salesman, however, might be tired, but he would always turn on a show of enthusiasm."

"And I felt more important when I was dating the salesman."

"For he'd ask my opinions and lean on me for advice."

"Now that we are married, I also find that he relies on me to look after him, and that inflates my ego, too."

"For he never hangs up his clothes but tosses them over a chair at night or drapes his necktie over a doorknob."

"Dr. Crane, is this characteristic of salesmen vs. chemists?"

VS.
EXTROVERT

Yes, the usual introvert tends to be more self-sufficient.

He doesn't wish to be dependent on others and feels uncomfortable at being under obligation to anybody.

Biblical Abraham showed this introverted trait when he refused to accept any reward for rescuing a captive king from the enemy.

Read Genesis, Chapter 14, to see this typical introverted attitude, for therein Abraham said:

"I will not take from a thread even to a shoelatchet, and I will not take anything that is mine, lest thou shouldst say, I have made Abram rich."

Contrast Abraham with the Prodigal Son, who represents the usual extrovert.

If your first two children are of the same sex and close together in age, the oldest usually tends to be like Abraham and the younger like the Prodigal Son!

For the 2nd child mixes well with people, is a talker and wheedles favors or money from his associates.

He takes naturally to sales work, for he is not as timid about ringing doorbells and meeting strangers.

But he is also less likely to pay attention to details, so he may be a star salesman but lacking ability to balance his check book.

The oldest child (introvert) thus may deflate a girl's wish to feel important, by his very independence and bossy attitude.

The extrovert (2nd child) leans on his wife and makes her feel essential because in childhood he was accustomed to having his older brother look after him.

In marriage, therefore, he relies on his wife to nursemaid him, get his clothes pressed and laundered, and handle the check book.

Introverts cherish grudges much longer than extroverts and stick to their goals through thick and thin.

Extroverts shrug off goals if the going gets tough, for they figure, "What's the use? I'll compromise on something else."

Send for my booklet "Vocational Guidance," including the Introvert - Extrovert Test, enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents. They are fun for parties, too!

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of The Worry Clinic, Hopkins Bldg., Moline, Indiana 47124. Enclose a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents in covering and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)
