Energy Crisis Making Its Effect Across Country

By United Press International
The hard facts of the energy crisis were brought home to Los Angeles commuters Monday with the announcement that fuel supplies are so short some daily bus service will be cut back and Sunday service will be canceled starting this weekend.
If not, and if the federal government does not issue an exemption from the monthly fuel allocation, said a spokesman for the Rapid Transit District, there will no diesel fuel at all for the last four days of this month, stranding the system's 600,000 daily riders or forcing them to use automobiles.
John A. Love, the President's energy advisor, Monday said the fuel shortage was a "potentially chaotic" situation, adding, "If we continue to waste, to throw away, there will simply not be enough to go around for the necessary uses insofar as the economy is concerned."

A survey by the California Highway Patrol showed that many freeway drivers are voluntarily slowing down to conserve gasoline, a spokesman said. In other states, however, authorities took action to make lower speed limits official.
In Phoenix, Ariz., a spokesman for Greyhound Bus Lines said the new 50-mile-an-hour limit on some New York and New Jersey highways is having a "disastrous effect" on bus service. Buses use fuel most efficiently at 60 m.p.h., she said, and the slowdown is making it "impossible to be sure of connections."
Law Gives Authority
Maryland Gov. Marvin Mandel Monday signed into law a bill giving him sweeping authority to cope with the energy shortage, including suspension of anti-pollution standards.
An exception to the trend was Arkansas, where Maurice Smith, chairman of the state Highway Commission, said the interstate speed limit would stay at 75 miles an hour, the highest in the nation, unless Congress decides otherwise.

He said it would be too dangerous to lower the limit to 50 because it couldn't be enforced and the people slowing down would be endangered by those drivers who refused to slow down.
"And the information I get is that it is not going to save all that much gasoline," Smith said.
In other developments:
—State employees in Michigan said they fielded hundreds of "hotline" telephone calls Monday from people who could not find heating fuel.
—The superintendent of schools in Buffalo, N.Y., said classes may have to be canceled starting Friday if more heating oil cannot be found.
—The Environmental Protection Agency approved a Massachusetts plan that permits the use of high-sulfur content oil for heating and industry. The Consolidated Edison utility in New York asked the Public Service Commission for permission to do the same.

Extension Proposed
—The president of the Iowa State Education Association proposed extending the school day and operating on a four-day week to conserve energy. He said a suggestion to extend the Christmas vacation period and make up for it in the summer would hurt agriculture and businesses which rely on students for summer help.
—Qantas Airlines said three of its seven flights a week to San Francisco would terminate in Honolulu starting Nov. 20. This and other measures would mean a 30 per cent saving on fuel, a spokesman said.
—Robert Roache, the owner of an Indianapolis fireplace store, said the demand is increasing, and most people buying homes want two or three. Robert Griggs, who sells firewood, said his orders have increased by one third. A dealer in house insulation said the demand is so high "we can't get the insulation fast enough."

—Residents of Block Island, R.I., decided to return to Daylight Saving Time in an effort to save energy. "I'm sure the rest of the country is going to catch up with us in a very few days," said Herbert Whitman, president of the town council.
—Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., said the Navy had committed "an enormous waste of fuel" in flying 564 midshipmen and 75 band members to New Orleans for last Saturday's Navy-Tulane football game.
—Lawrence Hannare of Warren, Mass. bought a woodburning stove recently "to save a little fuel." But the stove overheated Sunday and set his house on fire, causing $4,000 worth of damage.

FOR RED DEER EFFLUENT City Okays Chlorination Project At Water Plant

By TEX DeWEESE
Approval to spend an estimated $14,000 for the cost of equipping the city sewage treatment plant to chlorinate effluent emptying into Red Deer Creek was given by Pampa city commissioners at their meeting today in City Hall.
Consultant engineer Gene Barber of the Merriman & Barber engineering firm told city officials construction should be completed by the end of November.

The action was taken to temporarily comply with an order of the Texas Water Quality Board to bring the plant up to state standards pending the outcome of Pampa's application for a federal grant to help cover costs of the changes. Cost of the plant modification is expected to run approximately $550,000.

Under the temporary chlorination plan, City Manager Mack Wofford said the estimated cost in addition to the equipment installation would be around $12,000 to $14,000 a year for chlorine.
In other business today:
Bids were opened on approximately $200,000 worth of city equipment to be purchased from federal revenue sharing funds.
The items included a dozen trucks of various sizes, station wagon, four-door sedan, fire truck, refuse packer bodies, sewerator tractor with loader and backhoe and a motor grader.
Authorization was given to purchase $200,000 in investments from the Special Revenue Bond Fund by the Governmental Trust Fund and improving drainage on Kentucky Ave. near Highland General Hospital to tie in with the hospital board's proposed plans for a 100-car parking lot east of the hospital. Commissioners asked the city manager and his staff to give further study to the project which would cost the city from $35,000 to $40,000.

October bills incurred by the city were approved for payment in the amount of $58,366.03.

transfer of same to the General Fund. Mayor R.D. Wilkerson explained the action as "taking money from one pocket and putting it into another."
The Amarillo firm of Kidder & Peabody was authorized to make an effort to purchase 1970 general obligation bonds outstanding in the amount of $800,000 against the M.K. Brown Memorial Auditorium.
Commissioners heard a report on the possibility of

KISSINGER SAYS U.S. And China Need Friendship

PEKING (UPI)—Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger told Chou En-lai and other Chinese leaders tonight that "friendship with China is one constant factor of American foreign policy" in the future, no matter who is in the White House.
Completing his sixth visit to Peking during which he held 11 hours of talks with Chou and Mao Tse-tung on improving Sino-American relations, Kissinger said the talks were "far-sighted and extensive."
While he said a formal communique that he and Chou drafted for release after he leaves Peking Wednesday would not say so, Kissinger told a lavish farewell banquet for him by Chou in the Great Hall of the People.

"The progress we have made in our relationship will continue in years ahead whatever happens in the future and whatever the administration (in Washington)... No matter what happens in the United States in the future, friendship with China is one constant factor of American foreign policy."
U.S. officials accompanying Kissinger on his trip were asked whether Kissinger, in his toast to Chou and his other hosts, was referring to Watergate and its possible effects on the future of the Nixon administration.
One high-ranking official replied that what Kissinger meant was that the United States has "a bipartisan foreign policy not tied to any administration—a policy carried out by both parties."
Kissinger said that the communique to be released Wednesday while he is flying to

Complaint Filed On Night Spot

A resident of S. Russell St. appeared before city commissioners today and filed a complaint against a night spot in the 400-block of S. Russell.
He told commissioners residents could not sleep because of the loud noises emanating from the establishment and said patrons of the place littered the street with beer cans and bottles.
The man told members of the commission protests were to be filed when the license renewal for the night spot comes up later this month.
He was advised the city also would check into the complaint.

Senate Gives Approval To Pipeline Legislation

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Senate gave final congressional approval today to legislation clearing the way for construction of a 789-mile pipeline to a vast oil field on Alaska's frozen North Slope.
The vote was 80 to 5.
Legislation granting a right-of-way across government lands for the project was sent to President Nixon along with a warning by Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., against a veto.
"I shall be sorely disappointed and will say to the President that if the bill is vetoed I don't know when we're going to get it (the pipeline)," Jackson said shortly before the Senate overwhelmingly approved the measure.
The bill, rushed through after being passed by the House Monday, is expected to be signed by Nixon in spite of an amendment the administration opposes on an unrelated matter.
Envisioned as a carrier of 2 million barrels of oil daily from beneath the frozen tundra near Prudhoe Bay, the $3.6 billion pipeline is expected ultimately to be capable of supplying 12 per cent of current U.S. oil needs.
But it will be 1977, at the earliest, that the first oil can start flowing, according to officials of the Alyeska Pipeline Co.
The bill grants a right-of-way across federal lands for the 789-mile pipeline. Passed by a 361-14 vote Monday in the House, it contains a Senate amendment granting the Federal Trade Commission broad new powers to fight deceptive business practices.
The pipeline will carry the oil to the ice-free port of Valdez for transfer to tankers that will deliver it to West Coast refineries.
The Senate Interior Committee approved a bill Monday giving the President emergency powers to reduce-outdoor lighting, lower highway speeds, suspend some clean-air requirements and ration scarce fuel, including gasoline.
Mansfield said he expected the Senate to begin debating the bill Wednesday. Passage has been predicted Thursday before senators begin a 10-day vacation. "We're not Johnny-come-lately in the energy field despite what the President said," Mansfield said, referring to criticism by Nixon of congressional inaction on some energy bills.
Mansfield said that only because of prodding by Congress "at long last, a little late (the administration) come up and give us a program—quite late."
Presidential adviser Melvin R. Laird suggested today that special taxes be levied on all kinds of energy sources as a means of keeping the public from using too much energy.

Administration sources have said they are studying the possibility of a surtax on gasoline, but Laird said all kinds of energy should be taxed.
Russell E. Train, administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, warned the quality of the environment should not be forgotten entirely in the rush to solve energy problems.
Congress was moving quickly to meet the crisis. In other action on Capitol Hill Monday:
—The House approved, 361-14, the 789-mile trans-Alaska pipeline, to bring oil from huge untapped resources on Alaska's northern coast. It will cost $4 billion over four years and had been sharply opposed by environmentalists worried about damage to the Arctic tundra.
—The Senate Commerce Committee was editing another bill President Nixon wanted—to make Daylight Saving Time permanent so Americans will spend more waking hours in daylight, thus saving electricity.
Committee Acts on Bill
The Senate committee acted on the emergency powers bill less than a week after President Nixon appealed for it in an address to the nation. Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., expects a floor vote this week.
The bill does not expressly call for gasoline rationing, but it would require the President to impose rationing of "scarce fuel," and the committee said it considers gasoline scarce.
Within days after final congressional passage of the bill, Nixon would have to agree with state and local governments to cut energy use by 10 per cent. Within a month the guideline is 25 per cent.
Power plants that can convert to coal would do so unless environmental harm would be too high.
Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., said Congress gives up too much in the bill.

STATE OF REST—With the Mid-East conflicts seemingly in a state of perpetual check, two Israeli soldiers take advantage of the cease-fire to work on their chess game. In a move of her own, Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir has refused to withdraw to the Oct. 22 truce lines because "they don't exist."

GOLDA MEIR SAYS Israel 'Will Not Return' To Oct. 22 Truce Lines

By United Press International
Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir said today Israel will not return to the Oct. 22 truce lines as part of a Middle East cease-fire agreement because no such lines exist. The return was ordered by the U.N. Security Council, and Egypt has made it the keystone of a Middle East settlement.
Mrs. Meir's statement in Parliament came in the midst of another crisis over implementation of the Sunday agreement signed by Israel and Egypt—the turning over of Israeli checkpoints on the Israeli-held Cairo-Suez City road to the U.N. peace-keeping force to give the U.N. control of the road.
Israel demands that a prisoner-of-war exchange accompany such a turnover and on Monday Israeli forces dismantled a checkpoint set up by the U.N. force. Fisticuffs broke out between the Israelis and the Finnish soldiers manning the post.
Israel said today the attempt by the United Nations to take over the road infringed on Israel's sovereignty since it would cut the Israeli forces in Egypt in two and might lead to resupply of the encircled Egyptian 3rd Army on the east side of the Suez Canal.
The situation which imperiled the cease-fire agreement was so serious that Finnish Maj. Gen. Enso Siilasvuo, commander of the U.N. Emergency Force, flew to Jerusalem for talks with Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Dayan. Siilasvuo said after the 30-minute meeting "there were no misunderstandings today."
Mrs. Meir told Parliament that "what has been called 'the position of 22 October' is a concept that never existed and does not exist in reality."
"On 22 October the I.D.F. (Israeli Defense Force) was engaged in a running battle against the attacks of the Egyptian forces which did their best to overcome our troops," she said.
"No one can identify the positions of the two sides on 22 October," she said. "There were no U.N. observers in the area and the spokesman of the U.N. Emergency Force was right when he admitted on 29 October that he was unable to determine what the situation on the ground was on 22 October."
"I will say this," Mrs. Meir told the crowded chamber. "The definition 'positions of 22 October' was coined by the Egyptians and the Soviets as a political slogan intended to serve a dual purpose."
The purposes, she said, were to enable Egypt to accuse Israel of cease-fire violations and lift Israel's encirclement of Cairo's 3rd Army on the east bank of the Suez Canal.

"We are confident that the friendship of China and the United States will grow stronger and stronger and will move toward normalization," Cheng said.
But there was no real expectation that the relationship was yet far enough advanced to move to full diplomatic relations—formal exchange of ambassadors.
A U.S. spokesman said Kissinger wanted to make clear to his hosts however that future U.S. administrations, whether Democratic or Republican, would have U.S.-China relations as a major concern.

WITH NIXON Committee Wants 'Formal Meeting'

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Senate Watergate Committee voted 5-1 today to request a formal meeting with President Nixon at the White House on all aspects of the scandal.
At the same time the seven members of the committee said they would not participate in Nixon's dealings with other congressmen about the Watergate case.
Sen. Edward Gurney, R-Fla., was the only senator to vote against the formal meeting. Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., was absent.
Pampans Attending Manpower Council
Milton Saltzman, city personnel director, and Harris Brinson of the Chamber of Commerce, were in Amarillo today attending a meeting of the Manpower Area Planning Council, a branch of the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission.
The meeting of area officials was called, according to City Manager Mack Wofford, to study methods of alleviating a labor shortage in the Texas Panhandle.

The committee action was much stronger than that taken last week when it was decided that the possibility of a Nixon meeting would be explored. Committee lawyers met with White House counsels on setting up a meeting, but no agreement was reached.
The formal request for a meeting was proposed by Sen. Lowell P. Weicker, R-Conn.
Under his proposal the entire committee and its counsels will meet with Nixon, question him at length about the Watergate case and make public immediately a complete transcript of the entire conversation.
In addition the committee requested Nixon "to make available all writings, memoranda, documents, taped recordings and other materials which contain information relative to the matters the committee is authorized to investigate."
The committee voted that Nixon would not have to be under oath.
Nixon has been meeting recently with congressional leaders in private to explain his position on the Watergate tapes.

City To Limit Electric Lights For Christmas

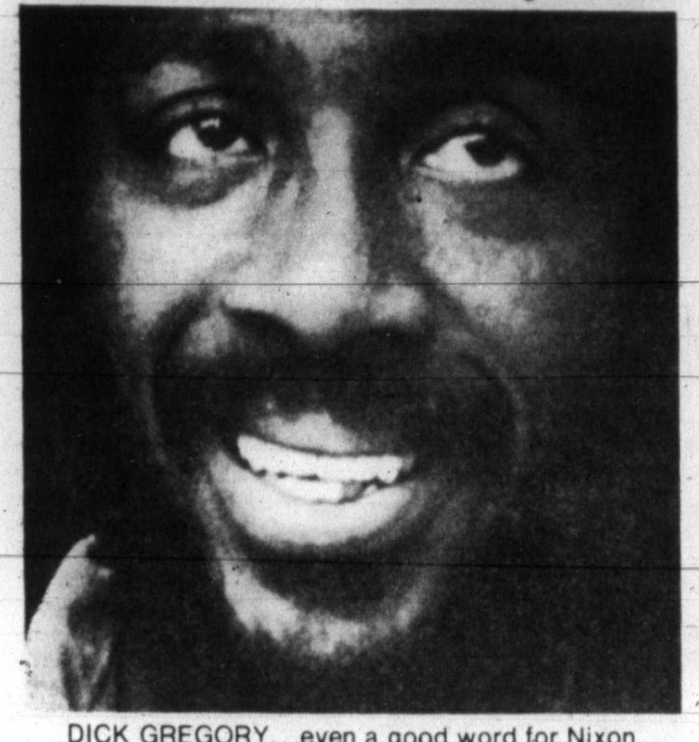

The electric lights on Pampa's Christmas decorations will burn only five days this year.
In past years they have been turned on around Thanksgiving Day and allowed to burn until New Year's Day.
City Manager Mack Wofford said today an agreement had been reached with Chamber of Commerce officials to turn the lights on for the first time Dec. 20th and turn them off Dec. 26, the day after Christmas.
The move, Wofford said, is a gesture to urge others to adopt a similar policy with Christmas lights in line with the general trend around the country to conserve electric power during the nation's energy crisis.
The city manager said the city staff also is studying other methods of conserving energy.

Mellow Dick Gregory finds a better weapon—wit

DICK GREGORY... even a good word for Nixon.

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — "These are good times for comedians," says Dick Gregory. "All you have to do is say 'Agnew' or 'Watergate' and the people laugh. Agnew's resignation only means that you have to change the names. I used to do a joke about him — 'He can't walk and chew gum at the same time.' Now I tell the same joke but I either say it about Nixon or Ford. Same big laugh." Gregory, long one of our most acerbic topical comedians, seems to have mellowed with age. Or else he's decided that wit is a better weapon than anger. Whatever the reason he is no longer the bitter voice of black protest. Instead, he is admittedly optimistic about our mutual racial future. He says, "Young people are our salvation. White kids today are great. Their parents would rather say 'nigger' to me than to their children — they know I'm not going to hit them but their kids will throw them out of the house." He knows kids, because he plays to them almost exclusively these days. He's given up working in nightclubs because of his strong anti-alcohol conviction. It would be hypocritical, he believes, to work in a nightclub and make jokes about how bad alcohol is while they serve it. So he does lectures and gives concerts at colleges. One performance has been preserved on a new United Artists album called "Caught in the Act."

He is, predictably, anti-Nixon, but here again he couches his opposition in less severe terms than he used to. "Nixon has been good for the country," he says, "because everybody has become united to press on for progress during his administration. There have been no riots under Nixon — the black groups are afraid of what he might do so they have united together." He says he's more worried about the left-wingers than the right-wingers. "If a right-winger wants to kill me," he says, "he'll get a rifle, draw a bead on me and shoot my brains out. But if a left-winger wants to kill me he'll wait until I'm in a football stadium and blow the whole place up." He thinks TV has had a good effect on race relations. "Years ago," he says, "white kids, if they knew any black folks at all, only knew the maid in the kitchen. She was always singing. They might ask their parents about blacks and their parents would say, 'They're happy — look at Beulah.' But today's white kids have seen ghettos on TV and they know all about them."

Gregory says he has no political ambitions himself. He says if he could put anybody he wanted in the White House, it would be Ralph Nader, as president, and Constance Motley, a black woman jurist, as vice president, to represent all minority groups. The king in "Anna and the King of Siam" was King Chulalongkorn, or Rama IV, who ruled from 1851 to 1868.

BUT NOT ENTHUSED Persons Adjusting To Energy Crisis

By United Press International
The fuel shortage sent many Americans to work today from cooler homes to cooler offices, in cars not supposed to go faster than 50 miles an hour and with news that a heavy gasoline tax or rationing of auto fuel is likely before long. Two top administration energy experts said chances are good for gasoline rationing before the end of winter, and the New York Times and the Washington Post both reported the administration is considering a 40-cent per gallon gasoline tax. But the energy crisis was not bad news for everyone. Firewood and long underwear dealers say business is booming. In Massachusetts the Brookline Ice and Coal Co. reported a run on firewood. "We've been swamped with telephone inquiries for the past four weeks and in that time our business has doubled," a spokesman said. Two Boston area dealers said they were out of wood and, "it may be weeks before we get more."

Long underwear also was in great demand. Wally Smith, a buyer for a recreational equipment store that stocks supplies of mountaineering and skiing gear, said, "A sudden run on such apparel could exhaust our stocks. Resupply took a month last year. It may take three months or more this year."

Speed Limits Lowered
In New York and New Jersey, highway speed limits were lowered to 50 miles an hour, and motorists in about a dozen other states or major cities were asked to observe the 50 m.p.h. limit voluntarily. UPI reporters in seven states where residents have been requested to observe a 50 m.p.h. limit, said most drivers were not. Several people who got behind me and then had to change lanes to pass looked at me like I was some kind of nut," reported Los Angeles correspondent Jack Fox. Robert Faulkner, regional superintendent of maintenance for Continental Trailways bus lines, responding to recent New York and New Jersey directives to reduce highway speed limits to 50 m.p.h., said diesel bus engines function at top efficiency only at speeds of 60 m.p.h. and above. "At lower speeds it has a tendency to run cooler and less efficiently," he said. The energy shortage has caused many communities to forego plans for bright Christmas lighting displays of years past. In New Hampshire, Gov. Meldrim Thomson suggested an old-fashioned Christmas with popcorn and cookies on trees instead of lights. Asks Lights be Eliminated "People can decorate their trees with popcorn, cookies and things like that, but it would be best if they held off on lighting to save electricity," Thomson said. "If you and I do not make the sacrifices necessary to conserve energy many of the workers in our factories and plants, are going to be unemployed this winter."

A number of major New Hampshire industries rely on propane gas in their processes, and it is in short supply. The Washington Post said the White House is considering a tax of between 30 and 40 cents a gallon on gasoline to discourage excessive driving. But the paper said economists feared it would take too much spending power out of circulation. The New York Times, in a similar report, said one option being considered is a "refundable tax" which could be returned by reducing income tax at the end of the year for motorists, or by lowering the amount withheld from paychecks.

AT BAYLOR UNIVERSITY Cates Reviews New Constitution

State Rep. Phil Cates of Pampa told a Baylor University audience that "rural Texas will want a state constitution that will allow us to meet today's challenges." Rep. Cates discussed the role of the House of Representatives in constitutional revision and the expected reception of the new constitution in rural Texas at Baylor University in Waco. "The problems of our small towns and rural areas are not the same as Dallas or Houston, but are tied to each other. The new constitution for Texas will cover both rural and urban Texas. It would allow each area the flexibility to meet the needs faced by each." Rural Texans will not accept just any new constitution, Rep. Cates said. "We will demand that the new constitution be a clear improvement over the present Constitution. We will not forfeit the control of the ballot box over our elected officials. With the view of the debt of our federal government, the

Postal Service Questions Answered In New Guide

What's the difference between registered and certified mail? How can postal customers be assured next-day delivery of important documents to distant cities? Persons wanting to know the answer to these and dozens of other questions will find the answers in "A Consumer's Guide to Postal Services and Products," according to Postmaster Carl V. English who said copies of the 16-page guide are available without charge at the Pampa Post Office service windows. The guide was published by the Postal Service in response to the questions postal employees receive from customers. In addition to describing characteristics of the four principle classes of mail and how to use them, the guide tells the best ways to send valuables through the mail, the limits on international money orders and how to send parcels to servicemen stationed overseas. The Consumer's Guide also invites customers to speak and ask for help if they have questions or problems with their mail service. Postmaster English urges customers wanting assistance with mail problems to get in touch with their postmaster or another local postal official. If a problem can't be solved at the local level, postal customers are urged to write directly to The Consumer Advocate, U.S. Postal Service, Washington, D.C. 20260, English stated.

Governors Divided On President Issue

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Four state governors, all Democrats, believe President Nixon no longer can govern and should resign. Two others are leaning toward that opinion and two say impeachment proceedings should go forward. Nine other governors, eight of them Republicans, opposed either resignation or impeachment in a survey conducted by United Press International last week just before the President reaffirmed his determination to stay on the job.

Nineteen Democratic state chairmen favored the President's resignation and five others called for impeachment. Thirty-seven Republican state party chiefs opposed resignation, but five said the House should proceed with its impeachment investigation and either clear the President or bring charges against him. The remainder of the governors and state party chairmen either declined comment or were unavailable to reply to three UPI questions—whether they agreed with Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., that the President has lost his ability to govern and should quit, whether he should resign immediately or wait for confirmation of vice presidential nominee Gerald R. Ford, whether Congress should go ahead with impeachment proceedings if Nixon does not resign.

One Prefers Impeachment Democratic Govs. Kenneth Curtis of Maine, Philip W. Noel of Rhode Island, Patrick J. Lucey of Wisconsin and Arthur Link of North Dakota believe the President should resign, although Link prefers impeachment. Except for Noel, who opposes impeachment and favors a proposal for a special presidential election, the governors believe Congress should go forward with removal proceedings, but that the Ford nomination should be dealt with first. "The President has been rendered ineffective because of everything that happened surrounding Watergate," Noel said. "President Nixon has passed the point at which he might have been able to regain the confidence of the American people and for that reason should resign."

Resignation Not Ruled Out Democratic governors who opposed resignation now but did not rule it out were Jimmy Carter of Georgia and Dale Bumpers of Arkansas. Carter: "If he persists in concealing the evidence or if he is found guilty of serious crimes, he ought to resign immediately and save the nation the ordeal of impeachment."

Bumpers: "I would say the President's ability to govern has been seriously impaired." Bumpers said resignation should await a determination whether Nixon has committed "an impeachable offense." Democratic governors who see impeachment as the best course are Calvin Rampton of Utah and Thomas P. Salmon of Vermont. Rampton said he agreed with Brooke "that Nixon has lost his ability to govern, but it could be restored if the House committee discovered no evidence to connect the President with illegal activities." Salmon said he agreed with Sen. George Aiken, R-Vt., that Congress should either impeach the President or end the current turmoil. Those in Favor Democratic chairmen who favored either resignation, impeachment or both were from Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, California, Connecticut, Florida, Hawaii, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kentucky, Maryland, Maine, Minnesota, Mississippi, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Mexico, Ohio, South Dakota, Vermont, Washington and Wisconsin. Practically all the Democratic leaders agreed that the vice presidency should be filled before the President leaves or is removed from office.

Republican chairmen opposed to resignation included those from Alaska, Alaska, California, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Hawaii, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New Mexico, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, South Dakota, Texas, Vermont, West Virginia and Wisconsin.

Some Are Opposed Opposed to resignation were Republican Govs. Bond, Ronald Reagan of California, John Vanderhoff of Colorado, Otis Bowen of Indiana, Thomas Judge of Montana, Winfield Dunn of Tennessee, Linwood Holton of Virginia and Daniel Evans of Washington. So was Democrat Milton Shapp of Pennsylvania. The four GOP state leaders who favored congressional impeachment proceedings generally saw that course as a way to clear up matters rather than a method to remove Nixon. West Virginia GOP Chairman Tom Potter said he thought "they should proceed with the investigation to determine if impeachment is warranted. I think that will clear the air, one way or another." Florida GOP National Committeewoman Paula Hawkins said "I don't think that they have any grounds. But I think they should clear the air rather than have trial by sidewalk." New Mexico Republican

VOICE OF BUSINESS Trade Opportunities For Small Businesses

By ARCH BOOTH
Executive Vice President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce
WASHINGTON — I have just returned from a whirlwind tour of the Asian-Pacific area, encompassing 10 cities in eight countries, plus the British Crown Colony of Hong Kong. Now that I've recovered from "jet lag" and got my shirts back from the laundry, I'd like to share some of what I learned. The purpose of the trip was to assess the market for American exports and investment in the great arc from Japan south through Korea, China, the Indochina peninsula, Malaysia and the Philippines to Australia and New Zealand. And then to learn what the U.S. government and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce can do to help American businessmen take advantage of whatever opportunities there are.

The results are in some ways surprising. In numerous talks with the leaders and trade ministers of foreign government, and with American and native businessmen in the area, one message kept coming through loud and clear: Send us your products. We want them. We are not getting enough of them. In all of the countries we visited, we learned that U.S. exports are not only competitive in price and quality, but are needed and welcomed. The two U.S. dollar devaluations, coupled with the technological and quality advantages of U.S. manufactured goods, provide U.S. exporters with excellent opportunities. Equally important, we found most country government and business leaders willing and desirous of increasing imports of U.S. made goods — in many cases to balance what they regard as a threatening degree of economic penetration by Japanese interests.

Opportunity Begging Unfortunately, there was near-unanimous agreement on another point, too: U.S. businessmen are simply not taking advantage of many of the export opportunities that exist in the Asian-Pacific markets. American businesses — particularly small and medium-sized firms, were consistently characterized as not being sufficiently interested in, or even aware of, these important and dynamic markets. Thus, Japanese and West European companies are rapidly increasing their sales in this area, often at the expense of U.S. businesses. This is a sad state of affairs. Remember, we are talking here

The Woman's View

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor
NEW YORK (UPI) — The energy crisis could be that proverbial blessing in disguise. It could put Americans back on their feet. We might start walking the three or four blocks to market instead of hopping into the automobile. More of us might start walking to and from the job as thousands already do, including that well-publicized walker, Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis. Walking also seems destined to become a necessary means of getting there and back, as public transportation costs go up and our fuel supplies go down. And all to the good, using shank's mare, for medical science generally agrees that walking is one of the best exercises that almost all of us can enjoy. Walking would rid us of the television-sitting slouch and paunch. For walking steps up circulation and helps clear the clutter from the mind. And it's all free. Only calories and shoe leather are consumed. So get out of the riding habit, get into comfortable walking shoes, take off at a brisk pace, and listen to what some of the sages through the years have written about walking. "Of all exercises, walking is the best," Thomas Jefferson wrote a friend in 1786. "It's a gwynne to make you walk as straight as a string."

wrote Mark Twain in "Pudd'n Head Wilson." "If legs were a new invention, we would realize that they are more remarkable than the automobile or even the wheel," Joseph Wood Krutch. That great naturalist Henry David Thoreau looked at walking this way: "Every walk is a sort of crusade preached by some Peter the Hermit in us, to go forth and reconquer this Holy Land from the hands of the Infidels." Of course there were some writers who considered walking in other lights. Benjamin Franklin in "Poor Richard's Almanack" wrote "He that can travel well a foot keeps a good horse." The term "walk" shows up in our lingo through the ages. There is the Latin proverb that "the matter—the difficulty—is settled or solved by walking." People get their "walking papers" when dismissed. Our class distinctions and occupations put us in various "walks of life." We "walk the chalk." Sometimes the way to get rid of a rogue aboard ship was to make him "walk the plank." Domineering characters "walk all over" people.
