Curious Converge on Campus Only To Be Shot

AUSTIN (UPI) — Some thought the noise was coming from a construction site, some thought it was some students "rough-housing" and others thought it was merely a car backfiring.

But no one could immediately grasp the reality of the situation — that there was someone atop the imposing University of Texas tower systematically trying to shoot as many persons as possible.

Hundreds of persons watched the 90 minutes of terror, and each one had his own story to tell.

"I saw these kids—it looked as if they were rough-housing on the mall," said Allen Crump. Then I heard a boy cry out that he'd been shot. I called to them to take cover and started heading for cars in the street. Somebody yelled 'he's up in the tower.'

The man in the tower was Charles Whitman, 24, an honor architectural student. An hour and a half after he began his reign of horror he was shot and killed by an Austin policeman.

Some 27 floors below him, the usually placid University of Texas campus was turned into a battlefield. Bodies lay sprawled in the noontime sun and 100 degree heat.

Coeds covered behind trees, afraid to move in any direction.

Persons driving their cars in the vicinity stopped and hid behind their vehicles in an attempt to witness the unbelievable horror taking place on the normally quiet campus.

Puffs of grey smoke filtered away from the tower observation deck as Whitman fired one of his weapons. Then a bullet would smack into the tower itself from one of the scores of officers returning Whitman's fire.

The shells would leave pock marks in the tower, and a cloud of limestone dust would float gently away from the noise.

One of the best vantage points to the tragedy was occupied by T. J. Rudolph, who sat in his apartment three blocks away with his telescope and watched as Whitman picked out his victims one by one.

"He would select what he was going to shoot at, then jump up and do it," said Rudolph. The police were firing heavily. You could see the bullets hitting the wall. There was a lot of smoke.

One of Whitman's victims, John Scott Allen, 18, said he got shot in the arm simply because he was curious. The university freshman said he was in the Student Union building making a telephone call when he heard the firing.

Allen said he was puzzled and went up to the second floor of the building "for a better view."

He said he was standing about four feet from the window when a bullet struck him in the right forearm.

"He had to be an awful good shot to hit me if he was trying to," said Allen.

Tragedy will also bring a crowd, and this one was no exception. It was obviously dangerous, and it could have meant death for many more, but the crowds kept coming.

"Of all the stupid things to do," said Chief of Police R. A. Miles. "People just kept going to the scene."

Some of the wounded were standing well away from the scene, but with the excellent vantage point held by the assailant, no one within range of his arsenal was safe.

WEARING RIOT HATS — Riot hats seemed to be the thing for police from Omaha, Neb. to Perth Amboy, N. J. Sunday and Monday nights. Civil rights trouble has spread across the nation, and above, policemen moved in to restrain a Puerto Rican youth during a rock-throwing window-smashing spree in N.J.

POLICE BATTLE RIOTERS

Racial Disturbances Continue

By United Press International

A "black power" rally in predominantly Negro South Providence, Rhode Island late Monday night erupted into warfare between helmeted police and Negro youths. Three policemen were injured by flying objects.

Authorities said the rally, attended by some 500 persons and the largest civil rights gathering in city history, was not directly responsible for the disturbance.

Police armed with nightsticks and shotguns quelled the disorder without firing a shot. Eight men and four women were arrested on an assortment of minor charges. The three injured law officers were not seriously hurt.

Elsewhere

Omaha, Neb.: Beefed-up squads of police were kept busy during the early morning hours today answering a series of minor disturbance calls on the city's near North Side.

A police spokesman said the activities were "more or less hit and run stuff" and that damage was minor. Three gasoline bombs were thrown, at a grocery and clothing store, but the fires were put out quickly.

Perth Amboy, N.J.: Hundreds of Puerto Rican youths hurled bricks, bottles and rocks at police and passing cars for the second consecutive night Monday, injuring three policemen and a woman onlooker.

The violence flared again in this waterfront city of 37,000 when between 100 and 200 Puerto Ricans stalked out of a grievance meeting at a local public school at 10:15 p.m. and marched seven blocks to Hall Avenue, the scene of Sunday night's melee.

Eight teenagers and a middle-aged man were arrested as disorderly persons.

Chicago: A teen-age youth was shot in the back by sniper fire Monday night as 1,500 Puerto Ricans swarmed into the streets of a northwest side neighborhood after police shot a Puerto Rican man to death.

The outbreak of violence occurred in a four-square block area still bearing the scars of three nights of rioting in early June.

The wounded youth, Rigoberto Acosta Irizarry, 17, was admitted to Cook County

30 Others Shot by Ex-Marine

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — A crazed student went on an 80-minute campus rampage with an armful of weapons Monday in the worst mass killing in U.S. history. He shot 45 persons, killing his wife, his mother and 13 others before a shaken off-duty policeman shot him dead atop the 27-story University of Texas tower.

Charles J. Whitman, a 24-year-old architectural engineering student who once rejected psychiatric help, climbed to a ledge near the top of the 307 foot tower and calmly stalked scores of summer students, professors and visitors to the roiling green campus.

Shortly before the tower's clock struck noon, the first shot rang out. For the next hour and 20 minutes, the lazy summer campus was turned into a hellish battleground of dead, dying and wounded.

When it was all over, 16 were dead—including Whitman—and 30 others were wounded.

The noontime terror ended when patrolman Ramiro Martinez slowly edged his way around the observation platform and pumped six pistol slugs and a shotgun blast into the sniper, a Texas junior with a B average.

Soon after Whitman's blood-covered and limp body was carried from the tower, police found the young man's wife and mother. The wife, Kathleen, 23, was stabbed to death in the Whitman apartment. His mother, Mrs. C. M. Whitman, was (See SNIPER, Page 3)

Selection of Nominee Expected Within Week

By TEX DEWEESSE

Selection of a successor to U.S. Rep. Walter Rogers as 18th Congressional District nominee for Congress at the Nov. 8 general election may not be made for several days and possibly not until early next week.

Pat O'Keefe, executive secretary of the State Democratic Committee at Austin, said today reports that a meeting would be held as early as Friday were without basis.

Will Davis, chairman of the state committee, was back in Austin today from a trip to Port Arkansas where he was yesterday when the news of Congressman Rogers' withdrawal from the congressional race was officially announced.

"It is imperative," O'Keefe said, "that enough time elapse for a survey of the 30 county chairmen."

O'Keefe stated it was possible that a decision could be reached within 48 hours as to when a meeting time would be set.

Gov. Connally is expected to be back in Austin tomorrow or Thursday from his South American trip, O'Keefe stated.

O'Keefe added that the Democratic chairman and his committee aides expect to resolve the matter as quickly as it can be intelligently done.

"As of right now, though," O'Keefe said, "no hearing time has been set for a meeting of the district executive committee, but this will be attended to with as much dispatch as is possible."

When the meeting is called, O'Keefe said, it is probable

Primaries in four states today marked the halfway point in the 1966 primary season. Republican conservatives figured in the Michigan and Idaho contests. The other races were in Kansas and Missouri.

When the results are in, 25 of the 28 states which nominate candidates in primaries will have selected opponents for the Nov. 8 general election. Democrats hoped to win Senate seats in Michigan and Idaho.

In Michigan, former six-term Gov. G. Mennen (Soapy) Williams, 55, was favored to beat Detroit Mayor Jerome Cavanagh, 38, for the Senate Democratic nomination.

The winner will face Sen. Robert P. Griffin, whom Romney appointed last spring to succeed the late Pat McNamara.

Griffin is riding Romney's coattails, and the outcome could affect Romney's chances for the 1968 GOP presidential

A Yes And No Proposition

Senate Leaders Expecting Swift Action on Bill to End Air Strike

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate leaders cleared the decks today for swift action on a bill aimed at ending—at least temporarily—the costly 26-day airline strike.

At the same time, Labor Secretary W. Willard Wirtz was to meet with union officials to discuss the strike which has grounded United, Eastern, Northwest, National and Trans World Airlines. There was little prospect of any new bargaining sessions, however.

Debate was to begin on a bill approved Monday by the Senate Labor Committee to give President Johnson discretionary authority to order striking airline machinists back to work for up to 180 days while mediation efforts continued.

But there was a move afoot to relieve the President of any further responsibility in the walkout, Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, Mont., said he was supporting a substitute bill by Sen. Wayne L. Morse, D-Ore., to have Congress make the back-to-work order mandatory.

Mansfield said he thought his GOP opposite, Sen. Everett M. Dirksen, Ill., and House Democratic and Republican leaders would favor this approach.

Johnson has made it clear through Labor Secretary W. Willard Wirtz and other aides that he would prefer Congress to pass legislation making it mandatory for him to order the 35,400 striking machinists and ground-service crewmen back to work.

The measure the labor committee sent to the Senate gave the President discretionary authority. It would declare the strike had interfered with essential transportation services, but would leave it up to the Chief Executive to issue the order. (See STRIKE, Page 3)

THEY SAID NO — When Siemiller counted the votes of the striking machinists the following day he found that 75 per cent of the workers had voted against the proposed settlement. Congress was expected to pass a bill today to force the workers to return to their jobs.

WOODLAND BIOGRAPHIES—Forester George E. Pope examines pencil-thin drillings which tell the life stories of trees in the Alabama woodlands of a paper company, Kimberly-Clark. The ages of the trees can be read exactly in the rings of the drilling cores. This and other information on individual trees, such as height, diameter and soundness, are punched on computer cards, giving Pope and the forestry staff a permanent file on health and harvest-readiness of the company's stands of timber.

The only major primary contest for an incumbent Republican senator this year is in Kansas, where voters will choose between Sen. James B. Pearson and Rep. Robert Ellsworth, who gave up a relatively safe House seat to gamble for the nomination. Pearson is expected to win the Republican blessing for his first full six-year term. He will face the winner of the Democratic primary fight between state Sen. Harold Herd and former Rep. J. Floyd Breeding. Kansas Gov. William Avery was expected to win renomination in the GOP primary over Del Crozier of Wichita. Robert Docking, son of the late former Gov. George Docking, is favored to win the Democratic nomination over former state Treasurer George Hart. In Missouri, only three of 10 incumbent House members face primary opposition. Missouri does not elect a governor or senator this year.

Meanwhile, Bob Price of Pampa, the Republican candidate for the congressional post at the Nov. 8 election, continued to saw-wood and campaign as usual. Price held a press conference in Amarillo yesterday and fold newsmen the change in Democratic opponents would in no way change his campaign plans. The Pampa rancher indicated that, although the laws provided the manner in which the successor to Rogers should be selected, he believed it possible that the nomination would be influenced from Washington. He lost by less than 10,000 votes out of 106,000 cast in the district.

John Lilly, 312 N. Gillespie, was rushed to St. Anthony Hospital, Amarillo following an industrial accident at the Pampa Foundry Co. around 8:30 last night. A hospital spokesman said this morning that Lilly is resting comfortably following treatment for second and third degree burns about his face, neck and shoulders. An unexplained turbulence occurred in a vat of molten iron as it was being poured into castings. Some of the liquid metal was blown into Lilly's face. After emergency treatment at Highland General Hospital, he was taken to the Amarillo hospital, where his burns were examined and treated. Lilly, night foreman at the plant, had worked there about seven years. H. O. Darby, owner of the foundry, said that it was the most serious accident in the 13-year history of the plant. He said he would make every effort to investigate and determine the cause of the turbulence, which caused the accident.

Copper Wiring Taken in Theft

City police are searching for a thief or thieves, who removed copper wiring from three 440 volt electric transformers stored at the city dump. Sometime during the past few nights, an unknown person or persons turned the large transformers over and removed the tops and copper wiring from the transformers. GENERAL MISSING TOKYO (UPI) —Sinologists speculated today that Communist Chinese Joint Chief of Staff Gen. Lo Jui Ching has been freed. Confirmation of this theory was not possible, but sinologists here based their belief on the fact Lo made no appearance or speech during the Red Chinese army's 39th anniversary celebrations Monday in Peking. The general was the keynote speaker at last year's anniversary, but has made no public appearance or been mentioned in the Chinese Communist press since last November.

JOINT SUICIDE BUENOS AIRES (UPI) —The bodies of three sisters who committed suicide jointly by taking an overdose of sleeping pills were found Monday. They left a note saying economic difficulties forced them to take their lives. The sisters, Elvira, Irene and Adela Martinez, were all between the ages of 50 and 60. Police said two of their brothers who used to support them, died recently, leaving them without income.

National Window

By LYLE WILSON United Press International The practical politics of the 1966 civil rights bill is that President Johnson has much to lose and not much to gain if Congress enacts the legislation in the form in which the President proposed it. Section IV embracing the bill's open housing proposals is the political time bomb which could be deadly to Democratic candidates in northern suburbia. And there is no likelihood that other sections of the bill would attract votes to offset that loss. Section IV proposed that the federal government prohibit racial discrimination in the sale or rental of residential property of all kinds. LBJ and his spokesmen have been backing away from that provision ever since it was presented to Congress. The House Judiciary Committee has reported the bill to the House for consideration, but with some changes. As proposed by LBJ the bill would have subjected to punishment in federal courts the refusal to sell, rent or lease a dwelling to another person because of race, color, religion or national origin. As recommended by the House committee, the bill exempts from that provision all owner-occupied buildings and structures containing living quarters to be occupied by no more than four families. That will soften but it will not remove the opposition to open housing in northern suburbia. Sen. Philip Hart, D-Mich., recently said that LBJ's 1966 civil rights bill was a test of the sincerity of northern citizens in support of civil rights. Hart said that was because the open housing provision was aimed as much at the North as at the South. Northern suburbia is well on toward flunking the test. The affluent suburbanites build up a head of steam for civil rights legislation abruptly changing the structure of Southern life whereas changing the structure of their own suburban lives seems to be less desirable. President Johnson's dilemma delights his opponents but saddens his friends. Item: —The Northern Democratic party already has the support of Negroes and civil rights whites who would be expected to approve of the 1966 bill. —Extremist Negro leaders already are denouncing the 1966 bill as meaningless while the so-called social justice movement sparked by churches and liberal political organizations are not charged now with the fervor of previous civil rights battles. —Northern Democrats urgently desire to hold the support of northern suburbia which they regained from President Eisenhower after 1958. —The 1966 civil rights bill appears to be costing the Democrats votes in northern suburbia without elsewhere attracting votes to offset these losses.

Wall Street In Review

NEW YORK (UPI) —The Granville Market letter says every test of the market since the May 17 lows has been found wanting and the market has not formed a base for any sustained rally. He feels the Dow Jones industrial average may penetrate to the psychological 900 level again but that there would be no permanent relief from the lower market which would ensue following Labor Day. The analyst thinks there is not enough time to launch a summer rally and that a key test of the May lows cannot be faced with any degree of confidence.

Robert H. Stovall of E. F. Hutton & Co. Inc. says the market is traveling in a narrow range, a reflection of several counter-balancing forces, and seems to be mirroring disappointment that the sixty-six month bull market may not last forever. He feels the next decisive move of the market will not be indicated until more evidence is in. John C. Hammerslough of the Hammer Report says the majority of stocks showing any definite direction are on the downside and that in order to prosper in this market you must purchase high priced above average stocks.

WORKERS TO MOBILIZE SAN MIGUEL, Argentina (UPI) —Sugar workers in this northeastern Argentine province Monday voted to "mobilize" for higher salaries. The move could herald a return to the wave of strikes and union violence which was one of the principal reasons for the June 28 military coup against President Arturo Illia.

Violence Shatters Capitol Calmness

AUSTIN (UPI) — The capitol city of Texas is generally regarded as a quiet city, featured by wooded hills and a series of lakes that provide excellent recreation.

City officials urge the elderly to retire in Austin, stressing that it is a calm town.

But for the second time in two years, the calm of Austin was shattered by violence Monday.

Just over a year ago, on July 18, 1965, two Dallas coeds at the University of Texas were slain. Their bodies were found two weeks later in a field north of the city.

The subsequent investigation, arrest and trial of college student James C. Cross of Fort Worth, made national headlines. Cross, who admitted the murders, is now serving a life sentence in the State Prison at Huntsville.

Dear Abby... Don't Make Mockery Of Marriage Vows

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for a number of years, and I would call ours a very happy marriage. We are compatible in every way. Recently, the matter of having affairs outside marriage came up. My husband feels that as long as we love and respect each other, and such rates first with the other, an occasional affair is harmless. Although I admire his above-board approach, I find it hard to accept. Should I go along with my husband's thinking, hoping it will not hurt our relationship even though I don't accept it?

Eleven years ago, I, too, married a man who was prematurely bald, and he has been the most wonderful husband possible. He's kind, considerate, intelligent, and a good provider. He also has a marvelous sense of humor and is no slouch in the romance department either. Is it any wonder that when we're together people don't even notice his lack of locks? They're blinded by the stars in my eyes.

PROBLEMS? Write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply, enclose a stamped self-addressed envelope.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069, for Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions."

Add to silly superstitions that have flown out the window: it is bad luck to try on or wear briefly the wedding ring before the ceremony. It isn't bad luck. It might even be smart to see if the ring fits.

DEAR HOW: Married couples who behave as lesser animals should tear up their marriage certificates. At least they're not making a mockery of marriage. Tell your husband that you intend to keep your marriage vows to forsake all others, and if you catch him breaking his, he will have a battle on his hands.

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago a young girl wrote to you and said she was the unhappiest girl in the world. I was 12 then and I had her same problem. Now I realize that my mother wasn't so goofy after all. Please print this girl's letter again with your advice. I found it very helpful.

DEAR ABBY: Whoever said the teenage years were the happiest didn't know what they were talking about. I am 13 and I am not the least bit happy. Let me explain:
I can't date.
I can't wear heels.
I can't wear lipstick (even pale pink).
I can't wear nail polish (any kind).
I can't shave my legs.
I can't wear shorts or slacks.
I can't wear low-back dresses.
I can't listen to the radio or watch TV when I want to.
I can't stay overnight at anybody's house.
Had enough? Well, I have. I told my mother that she will regret it some day. And she will, too. I've been thinking of running away. I would, but I don't have any place to go. Please tell me what to do. I don't deserve this.

SICK OF BEING BOSSED DEAR SICK: Your mother is probably sick, too — of being battered. The things you would like to do are privileges teenagers earn by showing they are mature enough to handle them. One of the first signs of maturity is the ability to accept a decision without putting up an argument. Accept your mother's decisions for a while, and see what happens.

DEAR ABBY: Because of my own experience, I'm with you on not wasting sympathy on "Woody's Wife," who couldn't bear her husband's baldness.

Scouting Scoops

By MRS. G. J. BOYD
Last Saturday morning found the girls returning from the second session of Established Camp. Eighty-six girls attended first session, 56 going this past week. Some memorable and exciting events happened during this time. Understan Jean Neslage found it necessary to vacate her tent when new occupants decided to make themselves at home. New tenants became a mama raccoon and her young.
Word was received of the death of Mrs. Jean Thornton, executive director for this council during the forties. Many connected with scouting during these years will recall the years of enjoyment while Mrs. Thornton was located in Panama. The Thorntons were transferred to Drumright, Okla., and later to Tulsa. Mr. Thornton died in Tulsa and Mrs. Thornton moved to Littleton, Colo. Cards may be sent to Mrs. Edith McArthur, Box 252, Littleton, Colo. Mrs. Thornton was buried in Chapel Hill Memorial Chapel Gardens, Littleton. Survivors include her mother, Mrs. McArthur, daughter Mrs. Pamela McDougal, Evergreen, Colo., one sister and two nephews.
Five members of Cadette Troop 56 and their assistant leader—Mrs. H. C. Duesterhubs worked in the park and intended to work again this past week but the showers have made a postponement necessary. This is a good service project and a needed service which more girls can perform. Members working were Dianne Duesterhubs, Gayle Griffin, Rosalia Kurtz, Pat McCollum and Sheila Hickey. This troop recently spent a morning over-taking the household duties for the mother of ten children. This was in preparation for any emergency which might occur and understand the girls came through with flying colors: The girls are interested in becoming First Class Scouts and are working industriously to achieve this. They have met once a month during the summer, with a beach party held in June and a barbecue for the month of July.
Mrs. Phillip McCarterly assistant leader for Troop 22, and three of the members delivered sustaining membership certificates last week during the sweltering heat wave but heard the girls looked "calm, cool and collected in the Junior uniforms. All girls should remember their conduct during the time they appear in uniform reflects Girl Scouting and they should act accordingly. Heard several compliments on these girls representing Girl Scouts. Members performing this service were Debra Harris, Pam Welch and Kathleen Fitzgerald. This is another troop that has been meeting during the summer, of course many interruptions take place during the summer months, vacations, swimming lessons, etc., but the girls also have many extra hours to work on individually earned badges that are difficult to earn during school.
Mrs. Jim Terrell was presented a going-away gift by those working in the council office, including Mrs. Jane Kadingo, Mrs. E. Whitely, Mrs. L. Verne Burke and Mrs. Fern Dawson. The Terrells hope to be settled in Amarillo before school commences.
Mrs. H. W. Powers, field advisor for District I, is recovering from major surgery in Northwest Texas Hospital, Amarillo. We all wish her a speedy recovery.

Princess Bows To Hubby's Edict On Short Skirts

By MARGARET SAVILLE
United Press International
LONDON (UPI) —Princess Margaret has bowed to current fashion and to her husband's wishes and shortened her skirt lengths.
They are not as extravagantly short as the skirts worn by some of the young set around London wears them just now, but are two inches above the knee, which is quite a step for the 35-year-old princess. It has surprised all her friends.
When the shorter skirts first appeared, the princess refused to wear them. She has always been ultra-sensitive about her lack of inches — she is barely five feet — and felt they would make her look even shorter.

Hence the surprise when she first appeared in a honey-colored silk dress and then in a pink one ending well above her knees.
It happened that her husband, Lord Snowdon, liked the short skirt fashion, considered it contemporary, and told his wife frankly that he thought she should follow the current style.
So Princess Margaret changed.

When she goes out in public she compromises by covering her short dresses with matching coats four inches longer. This satisfies the royal rule that skirts must not reveal the knees when royalty sits on platforms or gets in and out of autos.
Queen Elizabeth II is taller and thinner than her sister and has long, elegant legs. She has shortened her skirts nearly two inches but still makes sure they cover her knees for both private and public wear.
Princess Margaret follows fashions carefully and subscribes to all the leading fashion magazines. But she has aroused mixed opinions, in America anyway, on her taste in clothes.

There are Garrison pants, stovepipe pants, bell bottoms and bermudas as well as shells, jackets, blouses, skirts and shifts. There are knits and wovens, easy-care blends, lightweight lawns and textured linen looks.

For week-end there are the new, low-slung Garrison pants with wide belt and cuffed, straight legs in any of three solid colors. With this you might wear a long-sleeved, printed Ban-lon pullover or a ribbed poor boy top in contrasting color.

When you're feeling especially western, there's a complete Caballero group in the collection. This includes an em-

Try These Health Tips To Beat Back 'Back Attack'

PROFILE IN SAFETY — Ballerina demonstrates safe work practices featured in a public service movie, "Maximum." Top: When lifting a heavy object, don't bend your back. Instead, bend at knees and keep back straight. Center: Sit erect while typing, keep feet firmly on floor to avoid slouching. Bottom: When using vacuum cleaner, don't bend, but hold cleaner hose high, keeping back erect. To clean under furniture, bend at the knees.

If you're a typical American woman, chances are better than even that you'll have back problems before you're 40. That's the word from medical specialists at Aetna Life & Casualty, which is distributing a public service movie on physical fitness in hopes of improving the odds. Aetna Life & Casualty, one of the nation's leading writers of health insurance, says lack of proper exercise, poor posture, and unsafe home or office work habits lead the "back attack." "Our society generally discourages women from strenuous physical activity," Aetna points out. "And the multitude of labor-saving conveniences we have makes it that much more difficult for women to get in top condition, even in their youth."

"Few women enjoy perfect posture and taller women are especially vulnerable to slouching," which increases chances of back muscle strain. Combine unconditioned muscles and poor posture with the strain induced by bad work habits and back pain often pops up. Aetna's color film, called "Maximum," features the Royal Swedish Ballet. The troupe uses dance techniques to demonstrate the proper—and safe—way to perform household and office chores. Examples:

1. When vacuuming, keep your back straight. If you bend to clean under furniture, do it at the knees.
2. The back-straight, knees-bent rule also applies to lifting, even when the object is light. If you must lift something heavy, hold it close to your body. This allows you to keep your back straight and in balance, and puts the strain on stronger leg and thigh muscles.

3. Sit, don't stand, to do such chores as peeling potatoes.
4. Plan your work schedule so that you don't "overdo it." Rest periodically, preferably in a chair that provides good back support.
5. If you work in an office, keep your back straight and feet firmly on the floor when working at a desk.
6. "Maximum" also points out that posture and general health can be improved by a sound exercise program. It can range from a few minutes of calisthenics at home to relatively strenuous outdoor sport. The film recommends swimming, bowling, cycling, and anything that requires plenty of walking.

Aetna Life & Casualty will lend "Maximum" free to women's organizations and other groups interested in health and safety. Write to the Information and Education Department, Aetna Life & Casualty, Hartford, Conn. 06115.

Russians Take Up Flowery Language
CINCINNATI — A prize-winning floral designer has found that flowers are one way of piercing the "Iron" Curtain of Russian reserve.

Mrs. Frances Jones Poetker recently returned from a Cultural Exchange Program tour behind that curtain to report that flowers are one way the Russians have of giving a lift to their "dull and drab" existence. "Russian women line up at flower stalls to buy single roses and tulips at prices that are astronomical by U.S. standards. Flowers are one of the few spots of color in their proletarian landscape," she said. "A single rose will go for as much as $1.25," Mrs. Poetker said. "A tulip for 40 cents. That is a lot when an average good job in the Moscow area doesn't pay much more than $25 a week." In an interview after her three-weeks' trip, the florist told how she arrived in Moscow with four dozen tulips that she'd bought in Budapest, where prices are more reasonable. "That many flowers immediately labeled me as some sort of big shot," she said, "and people couldn't be nice enough. They carried my bags and all sorts of things without being asked which is something they didn't do for anyone else in my group." Mrs. Poetker, a national lecturer on flower arrangement, has appeared on television and radio, has conducted courses in floriculture for educational television, and has been honored within the florist trade frequently. Mrs. Poetker noted that women aren't the only ones who buy flowers. "In Moscow after a day or two, you think nothing of it when you see a burly Red Army soldier walking down Gorky Street with a flower in his hand. . . you'll also see young couples on a date, with both the boy and girl holding single flowers."

Mrs. Poetker, who is design consultant for Florists' Transworld Delivery, said that when Ivan and Natasha get married, in the wedding place, it would be hard for the bride to toss her bouquet as is traditional in the United States. "Chances are," she said, "the bride will be carrying an arm bouquet of loose flowers just bought at a stall just outside the wedding palace." As far as she was able to determine, there's no way in which friends or relatives living in other Russian cities can send flowers to the bride.

"Mostly there are only flower stalls and hardly any flower shops in the American sense of the word." Mrs. Poetker said one of the highlights of her trip was in Leningrad when after his performance with the Leningrad Symphony she presented the violinist David Oistrach, with two bouquets of red peonies. Each peony had cost $1.

BACK FROM THE EDGE OF SPACE

M2-F2 landing maneuvers begin with free glide after drop from B-52 bomber at 45,000 feet.

After 90-degree left turn, glide continues down to 25,000 feet where power is switched on for practice rocket flareout.

Another 90-degree left turn, then final landing approach with flareout at 1,200 feet to cut speed from 350 to 170 m.p.h. at touchdown.

M2-F2 has two sets of jets for attitude control in space and two hydraulic flaps for control in atmosphere. Four hydrogen peroxide rockets deliver 5,000 pounds of thrust if necessary for maneuvering at landing. Body of aluminum skin covered with silicon heat-protective surface also has honeycomb-design heat shield covered by corklike material to withstand temperatures up to 4,000 degrees.

Astronauts of the future may be returning from orbit to landings under their own power at jet airports. A rocket-powered, wingless "lifting body," successfully tested in a drop from a high-flying bomber, may be the forerunner of maneuverable space re-entry vehicles. The test craft, designated M2-F2 and designed on the glider principle, produces lift in the atmosphere, unlike Mercury and Gemini capsules which are powerless and require parachutes to slow descent. Re-usable, it also is potentially useful for spacecraft inspection, repair and supply missions; search and rescue operations, and manned interplanetary flights.

Curiosity Saves US Pilot

By JOSEPH GALLOWAY
United Press International
SAIGON (UPI) —Because of one pilot's curiosity another pilot is alive today.

Lt. Col. Eugene P. Deatrick III of Morgantown, W.Va., was flying a routing visual reconnaissance of a remote valley just over the border in Communist North Viet Nam.

He spotted a flash of white and a figure waving.

"I went by so quickly I wasn't sure just what it was. Perhaps just a villager waving as we went by. But it was in such a dense jungle that I made a turnaround and came back," Deatrick said.

Deatrick was describing the rescue of Navy Lt. (j.g.) Dieter Dengler, 28, of Pacifica, Calif., who became the only American prisoner to escape from North Viet Nam.

"I made a third pass over and I noticed that on the rocks was written in some white cloth a scraggly S.O.S.," Deatrick recalled. "So we immediately put in a call to get rescue on the way."

Downed over North Viet last February, Dengler managed to escape from a prison camp north of the port of Vinh. Traveling by night and hiding by day the Navy flier and a fellow U.S. Air Force pilot headed toward freedom. The A1E Skyraiders had him spotted and they pointed out the area where he was down.

Used Parachute Strips

"He was down in the bottom of a little stream bed standing on some rocks. He had taken parachute strips and made an S.O.S. with rocks from the stream."

We went in and looked at him and then went in to pick him up. He'd been walking quite a while. He didn't have any shoes and there were blisters on his feet. When he came on board they put him on a stretcher and the para-rescue man gave him a quick physical and took care of him."

The para-rescue expert aboard Cowell's Jolly Green Giant was Airman 1c Mike Lenord of Fowler, Iowa.

Lenord, in recalling the mission, said, "on our second pass the hoist operator let the cable out. He must have lowered 150 or maybe 175 feet of cable, set it down on the ground and the guy got in it. It took him a couple of seconds to figure out how it operated. He was excited and glad to be there and we just had a little problem."

"He made it on the hoist all right and when we got him up I reached out and pulled him moment he kind of went to pieces."

"He grabbed me around the legs. He was just that happy to be aboard. Actually, it's hard to say if he said anything except 'Oh God!'"

"I talked to him a little bit. He went into shock on me three different times. I was pretty busy trying to keep him in the best shape I could, mentally as well as physically."

He was in excellent physical shape. He took care of himself real well."

U.S. military spokesmen said today that Dengler has been evacuated from Viet Nam and is receiving medical treatment in Hawaii.

His is a story of courage, luck and a "scraggly" little S.O.S. that caught someone's eye.

TRANSPORTATION HAZARD
MANILA (UPI) —The new chairman of an Anti-Huk Mayors League near here, Monday declined to attend a congressional hearing for fear the guerrillas might ambush him en route. Macabebe Mayor Domingo B. Flores' predecessor in the job was gunned down with five escorts in a Huk ambush two weeks ago.

Worldwide Food Idea Shaping

United Press International
By JOHN J. FRIED
WASHINGTON (UPI) —The ultimate defeat of global hunger may hinge on establishment of a worldwide network of food research and development facilities.

Such a network, experts here say, would enable U.S. scientists to find a basic solution to some problems and in turn enable scientists in underdeveloped countries to adapt the solution to their people's particular needs.

For example, U.S. scientists have developed a chemical control for what is commonly called a screwworm.

"We are on the verge of adapting the chemical so that it can be used to control the tsetse fly by sterilizing the male of the species," Dr. Erven J. Long of the Agency for International Development (AID) said in an interview.

"Every time you want to apply the chemical to a new insect, however, you have to make new studies of life cycles, habits and methods of application."

Only First Step

Finding the answer to a particular problem is only the first step toward hunger eradication Long said.

The second—and equally important—is the establishment of independent research institutions in foreign countries or geographic areas which would be part of the network.

"Within individual countries we have to build the framework for research," Long said. "This could even include writing legislation which would establish a land grant university capable of doing research."

Indigenous research facilities, Long said, are especially vital because food and hunger problems tend to be dynamic rather than static.

"You may develop a new wheat strain," he said, "and it would suffice you for several years. Then, bang! — along comes a new disease that wipes out your new strain. Research would have to be continuous to find not only a high-yielding strain but a disease-resistant one as well."

U.S. Research

While U.S. officials are working to set up the world food network, American scientists continue basic research efforts to help underdeveloped countries war odd hunger until the necessary institutions can come into full play.

One of the more valued projects currently undertaken by AID is a university of Nebraska effort to increase the protein content of wheat.

Until now, Long said, much of wheat research has concerned itself with disease resistance and yield capabilities.

"But there is a wide variety of protein content in various strains of wheat and we'd like to identify the genetic quality of those that have the greatest protein content," he said.

Research to increase the protein content of sorghums will be conducted at Purdue University, Lafayette, Ind.

To help underdeveloped countries take advantage of U.S. know-how, "mid-way" institutions are already functioning. One example is the Rice Research Institute in the Philippines and a vegetable research institute budding in Formosa.

"But eventually," Long said, "a scientist in Bolivia will come up with something new another scientist in India will be able to use."

The whole effort of defeating hunger is like building a skyscraper. It seems that it takes forever just to lay the foundation. "But if we get on with all these things, the world might be able to avoid catastrophe."

LOOKING UP at the stars soon will be these four large telescopes being assembled at South Pasadena, Calif. The high-precision star gazers, ranging from 16 to 40 inches in diameter, are destined for observatories of Princeton, Yale and Toronto, Canada, universities and the U.S. Air Force. Construction takes at least nine months at a cost of $35,000 and up.

Food Prices Up, Especially in Indy

By LYLE WILSON
United Press International
Indianapolis (Ind.) News

sends word indirectly that the price of breakfast bacon in his town has increased about $280 a ton in six years. Yeah, 280 dollars!

Coffee is up about $100 a ton in Indianapolis. Round steak $200. Flour, hog, dogs, milk, potatoes are going up. The rise in bacon prices comes out to above 14 cents a pound—from 65 to 79 cents. The common food of the common people is on the way to being too expensive for the common people to consume it.

Gollan passed the word through Rep. Richard L. Roubush, R-Ind., who reached me through the congressional record. Gollan told Roubush that food prices in the Indiana area have jumped about 20 per cent since Jan. 1.

It is instructive to consider the increase in terms of dollars and tons instead of pennies and pounds because the best Kennedy-Johnson-Humphrey administration to prevent a price increase also was against a backdrop of dollar, per ton. That was in 1962 when U.S. Steel and others announced a price increase of $6 per ton on some types of steel.

Kennedy turned on the heat. His jet flames roared along a broad government front extending from the antitrust division of the Department of Justice to federal docks at all levels. After he was blindfolded but before he accepted a last cigarette. U.S. Steel Chairman Roger M. Blough announced that the price increase had been cancelled.

The Kennedy-Johnson administration complained that a $6 increase in some steel prices would be disastrous inflationary to the disadvantage of all stable money.

Within weeks thereafter, the administration closed the books on fiscal year 1962. JFK and Co. had racked up a $6.1 billion debt hit a new high of $298.6 billion. Roger Blough and his steel prices are important factors in the economy. But they are no such engine of currency inflation as reckless public spending.

Steel prices have remained relatively stable and so has the Kennedy-Johnson-Humphrey administration spending policy. The policy is to spend along the lines of the political commandment allegedly uttered by the late Harry L. Hopkins.

Harry was accused of summarizing FDR's New Deal fiscal policy as being based on a political necessity to: Spend and spend tax and tax, elect and elect. Regardless of who said it, the system worked then for FDR, was working for JFK and is working for President Johnson.

WINDMILL WITH MORE EFFECT THAN JFK and charged the windmills of inflation. Only last week President Johnson announced proudly that in the fiscal year just ended he overspent Treasury income by a mere $2.2 billion.

Mamma should take heart from that as she tumbles her wagon loaded with kids and groceries past the supermarket cashier. Mamma also should find cheer in the fact that Roger Blough won't nick her for $6 the next time she buys a ton of steel. Bacon? Well, let her eat cake.

Government planners, who seem so sure they know what is good for the people that they are trying to force all to fit a pattern selected for the people—by the planners—should take another look at themselves.
