Rain Sends Floods Rampaging on Coast

Damage Expected To Run Into Millions

By United Press International
Light showers fell across much of Texas' upper Gulf coast today, the remnants of a storm system that dumped nearly 11 inches of rain in the Beaumont-Port Arthur-Orange area and sent water gushing through homes and stores.

Thunderstorms brought rain to a vast area of North Central and Central Texas.

Thundershowers were forecast for every section of Texas before nightfall.

Damage from flooding along the Gulf Coast was expected to run into the millions.

Hundreds of motorists were stranded by the fast-rising water and many streets were under two to three feet of water.

Although heavy rains deluged the entire "Golden Triangle" area of Beaumont-Orange-Port Arthur, the Beaumont suburb of Groves was the hardest hit.

More than 150 persons were taken from their homes in playing with boats in their front yards.

Almost 10 inches of rain fell on Groves in six hours. Police estimated 1,000 automobiles stalled in the three-city region.

Guests in the Tideland Motel in Nederland found water two feet deep gushing through rooms.

"We had it a foot-and-a-half deep in the lobby," said Bill Reeves, a clerk in the motel.

"As soon as it started going down, we went down and yanked up the carpets and sent them to the cleaners.

"I just sat there and watched it come," Reeves said. "It was two feet deep in some rooms. People got out of bed and put their feet in two feet of water."

"Most of them just rolled up their pants leg and walked out."

"We've never had rain like this," Reeves said.

He said some of the guests on upper floors "were sort of stranded and never did get to their cars."

The high water and blinding rain curtailed flights at Jefferson County Airport in Nederland.

Visibility was below landing and takeoff conditions for several hours. Several flights went on to Houston and Dallas.

Rainfall measurements of 10 inches or more were common and a gauge at Drainage District No. 7 in Port Arthur reported 10.79 inches.

It thundered for three hours continuously, police in Port Arthur said.

"But the young people seemed to enjoy it, though," a police dispatcher in Port Arthur said.

"They were out swimming and playing with boats in their front yards.

The American Red Cross opened three schools for shelters for evacuees but most residents were able to get back to their homes within a few hours.

Civil Defense authorities estimated no more than 300 persons had to leave their homes and most lived in southern Jefferson County.

Lightning followed by more than nine inches of rain struck the Village Theater in Port Arthur and the building collapsed. No one was injured.

Heavy rains totaling more than five inches fell at Fannin near Corpus Christi. A ranch near Fannin had high winds and 5.61 inches of rain.

The Sabinal, Frio and upper Nueces Rivers were bankful at some points and many low water crossings were closed.

The rivers were expected to rise for the next few days.

Flash-flooding in parts of Southwest Texas also closed Texas Highway 76 between La Pryor and Maverick County lines after heavy rains and U.S. 69 was inundated south of Groves.

LAST CHOP

LONDON (UPI) — Karate expert Michael Payne thrilled the Boy Scouts at a fete here as he blasted a board with his bare hand, battered a roof tile, and crushed three bricks with the same devastating blow.

Applause echoed through the hall as Payne stepped before a fourth brick, brought the hammerlike hand streaking down and screamed with pain.

He was taken to a hospital with a broken hand.

Relative Confirms Beauty's Romance With Late FDR

NEW YORK (UPI) — A relative of Lucy Page Mercer Thursday confirmed that the one-time Southern beauty had a bittersweet romance with the late President Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

The relative, who asked to remain anonymous, told United Press International Roosevelt wanted to marry Miss Mercer "but Eleanor would not consent to a divorce."

"Franklin was being mentioned in Democratic party circles for political office and Eleanor said she would not let him ruin his career with a divorce," the relative said.

The romance, gossip for years in high political and social circles, was placed in print by Jonathan Daniels, editor of the Raleigh (N.C.) News and Observer in his forthcoming book "The Time Between the Wars."

The TWA man said many of his customers were accepting the company's offer of $100 interest-free loans for 30 days to tide them over, while stranded in London.

Air Strike Costs $1 Billion A Day

NEW YORK (UPI) — The airline machinists' strike already has cost American business, including the tourist trade, at least $1 billion, airline officials estimated today.

The economic impact of the strike is spread widely but spottily and not until the strike ends will it be possible to estimate the total loss to everybody — the airlines and their employees, tourist agencies, resort hotels, the oil industry, car rental agencies, hotels and motels, taxi companies and others catering to airport services.

A substantial loss in tax revenue to federal and local governments must be added to these figures.

The Chicago Association of Commerce said the strike is costing the Chicago area alone $600,000 a day about $420,000 of this is being borne by the airlines and their workers, the rest by hotels and other enterprises dependent largely on air travel.

Curiously, only Chicago, among the major cities, reported that the strike is seriously interfering with mail service. There, rerouting and delivery of air mail from O'Hare International Airport is being delayed 24 hours or more.

But in New York, Washington, Los Angeles and other cities, officials said mail service is about on time. In Los Angeles, for example, mail is arriving and departing on time because the planes still operating fill up their mail bins now whereas they formerly carried only small postal cargos.

Internationally, airport officials in London said the problem is worst now than at anytime during the strike.

A Trans World Airline spokesman in London said — "a few days ago we could usually get passengers a flight out over the Atlantic within three to four days. Now it's a week to 10 days. We no longer are just trying to get people on flights to New York. We are rerouting many to Prestwick, Scotland, or continental Europe where they may be able to get flights to New York or Canada."

The House Commerce committee today approved, 17 to 13 legislation to end the 36-day airlines strike. House action was not expected until late next week at earliest.

Except for minor amendments, the bill reported by the committee is identical to a Senate-passed measure.

Committee Chairman Harley O. Staggers, D-W.Va., told reporters after the two-hour closed session that the bill would spark long and bitter debate when it reaches the floor.

He said he hoped negotiators for the striking machinists and the five affected airlines could reach agreement during the weekend "and save everybody in Congress and the country the embarrassment" of trying to deal with the problem through legislation.

Staggers obviously was distressed at the prospect of floor action. He said it would result in chaos and turmoil during debate.

The strike by the International Association of Machinists (IAM) has grounded about 60 per cent of the nation's air traffic. About 35,400 members joined the walkout against United, Eastern, North West, Trans World and National Airlines.

The House committee has tentatively approved Senate-passed provisions to order the strikers back to work for up to 180 days.

Under the provisions, Congress would issue the first order, sending men back to work for 30 days. The President would then be authorized to name a special board and extend the no-strike period for 60 days, and upon the board's recommendation, for a final 90 days.

Beatle Defends Statement Upon Cool US Arrival

CHICAGO (UPI) — Traitor clouds of contrition, Britain's unbeatable Beatles today opened a 14-day American tour.

Resident theologian John Lennon answered the most burning question of newsmen at a hotel news conference Thursday night when he said he was sorry he said the Beatles are more popular than Jesus.

But sorry or not, he said, it's true.

"I suppose if I had said television was more popular away with it," John said. "I'm sorry I opened my mouth."

He explained that in making his controversial claim he was "deploring" what seemed to be a decline in religious zeal. "I was not saying we were greater or better," he said.

All four of the mop-tops admitted they were concerned over the reaction to John's statement. Several radio stations, especially in the South, have banned the Beatles, and a Catholic youth group in Indiana staged a Beatle record burning.

On a beach in Chicago before the Beatles came, a young boy shook his head and said, "Ain't nobody popularer than Jesus."

Controversy or not, there was still a touch of teen-age madness attendant upon the Beatles' arrival here Thursday after flying in from London on a wing and prayer. American Airlines had placed Bibles by their seats on the plane as a "special gesture."

Four-square Chicago police helped the Beatles elude a screaming clow of teen-age fans at O'Hare International Airport by whisking the Liverpool foursome to a maintenance hanger for from the maddening crowd.

Ambulance Service Shaky for Pampans

Emergency ambulance service by Pampa's two funeral homes was on a somewhat shaky basis today as far as future operation is concerned because of a federal government ruling.

Within the next six weeks the government will start enforcing the wage-hour law for anyone who spends more than 20 per cent of his time on ambulance duty.

As a result of the government order, ambulance service provided by many funeral homes will become a thing of the past in scores of Texas communities when the enforcement lid clamps down Oct. 1.

Both Charles Duenkel of Duenkel Funeral Home and Paul Carmichael of Carmichael-Whitley Funeral Directors here said they had made no definite decision about suspending ambulance service.

They indicated further study of regulations as to how the government interpreted ambulance drivers' hours will have to be made to determine whether Pampa funeral homes fall into the government's wage-hour category.

"We don't know just what's going on or just how it will affect us," Carmichael said. "None of our employes spends 20 per cent of his time on ambulance duty. However, if they count the time a man sleeps while he is on call, it could affect us."

Carmichael said if that interpretation is placed on his funeral home, the ambulance service will have to be dropped.

"There's no profit in emergency ambulance service," Carmichael said. "Right now we have no plan to discontinue service, but we may have to take another look at it."

Duenkel said: "We do not plan to stop ambulance service unless the government forces us into it. Our employes operate mostly on a family basis and I don't know what the regulation will be on that."

Duenkel said funeral homes cannot operate ambulance service if they have to pay employes time and a half for the time they are sleeping.

"It may come to that," he said, "and if it does we will be out of the emergency ambulance business."

Officials Closed Mouthed Gang Gambling Probe

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Two officials investigating reports that money has been skimmed off the top of casino profits were close-mouthed today about what they have learned in three days of hearings.

Milton Keefer, chairman of the five-man Nevada Gaming Commission, said, "we have reached no conclusions regarding skimming." Adm. Deputy State Atty. Gen. Don Winne said, "we wouldn't have spent this much time without finding something."

The commission was to resume next week in Carson City its secret investigation of charges that the casinos funnel the money to the underworld. Then the investigators will return to Las Vegas for the final three-day session. More than half the witnesses during the initial three-day inquiry were owners or employes of the Stardust and Desert Inn hotels, both headed by Cleveland gambler Morris (Moe) Dalitz, currently awaiting trial on a federal charge of conspiring to avoid income tax payment on a stock sale.

The investigation spread to two other "strip" hotels Thursday afternoon with the appearance of Morris Lansburgh, secretary-treasurer of the Flamingo Hotel, and Did Wyman, vice president and part owner of the Dunes Hotel.

At least four other major gambling operations were expected to be involved before the additional hearings were concluded.

Heart Transplant Patient Reported In Good Condition

HOUSTON (UPI) — Mrs. Esperanza del Valle Vasquez, her heart still linked to an artificial pumping device, Thursday left her hospital bed and took four hesitant steps.

She was the first recipient of the revolutionary pump to progress enough to walk.

The hospital said the 37-year-old Mexico City beautician had been put on a diet of soft food. The other two heart pump recipients at Methodist never progressed past intravenous feeding. One never regained consciousness.

A surgical team headed by Dr. Michael E. DeBakey implanted the heart pump in a four-hour operation Monday.

Pampans Honored At WTCC Affair

By DORIS E. WILSON

Chamber of Commerce officials often inclined to look at the sunniest side of things, themselves were surprised by the overflow crowd that queued up for last night's honor recognition banquet given by West Texas Chamber of Commerce in the Starlight Room of the Coronado Inn.

Three hundred guests were expected. Three hundred and 75 guests sealed themselves to a dinner menu that listed all foods grown or processed in West Texas.

The awards banquet last night highlighted the WTCC mid-summer meeting here yesterday with a directors' meeting this morning that concluded the two-day conference.

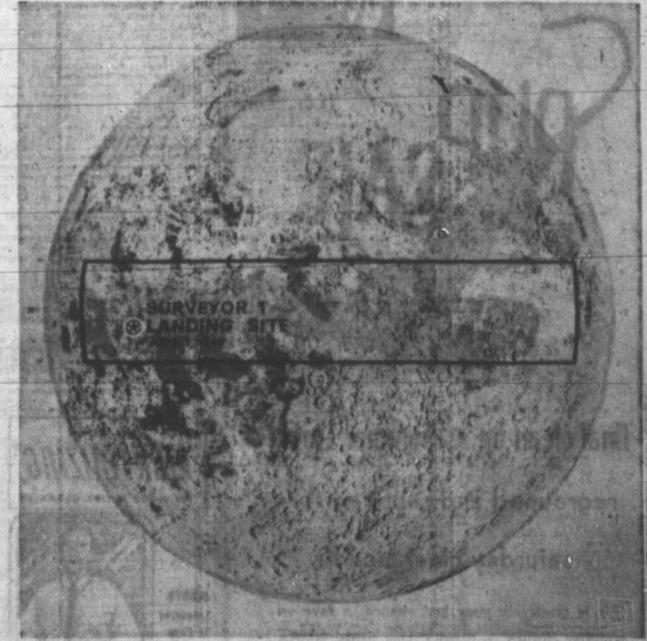

Sheriff Rufe Jordan and O. B. Worley of Pampa were among West Texans recognized and honored for volunteer work on state boards and commissions.

Jordan serves as a member of the Commission on Law Enforcement and Officer Standards and Education, created in 1965 to suggest basic minimum courses of training, training facilities, qualifications and methods of training for law enforcement officers.

Other members of the commission are A. C. Howerton of Fort Worth and Walter Suttle of Vernon.

Worley is a member of the Credit Union Advisory Commission established in 1949 to confer and advise with the Banking Commissioner twice a year concerning policies and problems which affect credit unions.

John Ben Sheppard of Odessa, WTCC president, as master of ceremonies, introduced the

Dear Abby...

Remember - There's Safety in Numbers

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were married six months ago, and two months later he was drafted and stationed in California. We had gone steady since high school so naturally I assumed that I was the only girl in his life.

Yesterday, while cleaning out our car, I found a little black book full of girls' names and addresses. Should I let him know about this, or should I forget about it?

SICK AT HEART
DEAR SICK: If it's going to bother you, and apparently it is, ask your husband to explain it. I wouldn't worry about it if I were you.

There's safety in numbers. Besides, if a name and number meant anything to a man, he'd have them tattooed on his brain.

DEAR ABBY: My son, Nick, is marrying a girl I'll call "Joan" soon. Joan wants Flo to stand up for her. Nick doesn't like Flo because while he was away in service, Joan started drinking and smoking and running wild, and it was Flo who got her started on this path. When Nick got home, Joan cried, said she was sorry, still loved him, and she promised to behave, so they went ahead with their plans to marry.

Nick told Joan he doesn't want Flo in the wedding party. Joan says it's her wedding, and Flo is her best friend and she wants her. Nick says it's his wedding, too, and he doesn't want Flo's picture in his wedding album to remind him all his life of the trouble she caused. Who is right? Doesn't my son have something to say about this?

DEAR MOTHER: Your son should have something to say about it, but if he isn't saying it loudly enough to be heard, that is his problem. Perhaps Nick is putting all the blame on Flo, when Joan is partly responsible.

Call Mark Buzzard MO 5-4391

But regardless, if Flo is in the wedding party against Nick's wishes, he and Joan will be starting down the aisle on the wrong foot. But this is strictly Nick's battle. And no one else should fight it for him.

DEAR ABBY: What is a father supposed to do when his 17-year-old daughter insists on going with a boy he doesn't like or trust? For two years I have fought with both my wife and daughter over this kid. And I mean fought. I am about ready to move out of the house. I simply cannot stand the sight of him or the sound of his name.

He has bragged all over about how much he gets away with, and I just don't trust him. I trust our daughter, but not him. He has caused her to lie to her mother and me, too. Don't advise talking to our pastor. I tried that and drew a blank.

AT SWORD'S POINTS
DEAR AT: If you can prove that your charges against the boy are valid, surely your wife, who is equally interested in your daughter's welfare would support you.

Something is cockeyed here. Either you dislike the boy without good reason, or your wife and daughter are a pair of nit-wits.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "AWARE" IN ATLANTA: If you're always the first to see the dirt, perhaps you ought to clean your glasses.

Newspaper Enterprise Assn. You can be an excellent mother when your children are young and dependent and, yet be a not-so-good mother when your children are grown and on their own.

You can get some idea of how you rate as a mother of grown children by honestly answering a few questions.

Do you hold your tongue when you are tempted to give your grown children advice or criticize their decisions?

Are you leading a full life of your own instead of living through your children and their children?

Do your children and their marriage partners feel at ease and comfortable in your company because they aren't afraid of upsetting you by expressing their own views and ideas?

Have you made it quite clear that you can be counted on in emergencies but that you have no intention of giving them any help they don't need or want?

Do your children really believe that you are fond of the persons they have chosen for life partners?

Do you let your children rear their children without any advice or disapproving looks from you?

Do you visit your married children by invitation as you would friends, instead of making long visits whenever you please?

Do you refrain from reminding your children of how easy they have it compared with the way things were when you were first married?

Are you willing to admit that your children can occasionally teach you something or show you a better way of doing something?

Did you make up your mind when your children left home that your job as teacher, and guardian was over and that what you wanted of your grown children was to have them regard you as a trusted friend?

If you can answer "Yes" to those questions you can be pretty sure that you are as good a parent now that your children are grown as you were when they were young.

Newspaper Enterprise Assn. NEW YORK (NEA) — The bare facts of fashion life are centered on the knee this season. To show or not to show seems to be the question. And it's the most controversial quandary since the Bard put a famous line into the mouth of Hamlet.

Fire Destroys Hoover Elevator

A fire of an undetermined origin totally destroyed the Hoover Grain Elevator last night in Hoover, eight miles east of Pampa.

The wooden elevator, covered with sheet iron, was built in 1924 and is reportedly one of the oldest in Gray County.

Electric clocks in the grain company's offices stopped at 11:10 p.m. Neighbors across the road, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Massengale, noticed flames around 11:30 p.m. and notified the Pampa Fire Department.

The 60-foot elevator was filled with approximately 500,000 lbs. of mulo, which was still burning late this morning and will probably take several days to burn itself out.

Southeasterly winds whipped flames out and around the new elevator, built in 1954, saving it from damage. Grain offices and the new elevator were sprayed by local firemen to prevent fire damage to them.

No one was injured in the fire.

executive board, who in turn, made presentations to those honored for volunteer work on state boards and commissions.

Expressing appreciation for the honorees were Hal Woodward of Coleman, member of the State Highway Commission and Mrs. L. E. Dudley of Abilene, member of the Board of Regents, Midwestern University.

"A Job Well Done" was the topic of opening remarks by Lt. Governor Preston Smith of Lubbock as guest speaker.

"The talent present here tonight, together with their colleagues on the various boards from over the state, could not be purchased with monetary standards at any price," he said.

"Texas since its very beginning has been able to command the volunteer services of the top people in business and professions. Your state has been able to command the best thinking and the best brains available."

"The character, the effectiveness, and the responsibility of our state government has been and will be determined by volunteers who give their time, their counsel, their knowledge, their money as well as to share with fellow Texans their experience gained in the fields of business, civic endeavor, religious activity and participation in the arts and culture."

"The millions of hours of work, the ideas, the time given to meetings devoted to affairs of our state government has afforded invaluable 'grass-roots' contact and has resulted in fresh, new thinking directly from the people."

"Your state government will not grow away from the people as long as it is rooted to the foundation of voluntary service," Smith said.

The lieutenant governor complimented the women of West Texas "who have answered their state's call to service, who lend their perceptive abilities and graciousness to making Texas a better place in which to live."

At a 9 a.m. board meeting today, Shepperd heard reports from committees on public information, tourist development, industrial development, education, state affairs, national affairs, agriculture and ranching, petroleum and chemicals and water resources.

He also outlined an active program for growth potential in West Texas.

said the time may not be far off when city and county of near Corpus Christi. A ranch official will have to furnish their own ambulance service.

Thirty funeral homes in East Texas will halt emergency ambulance service, Oct. 1, Austin funerals, homes are shutting down Sept. 1 and Kingsville funeral homes Aug. 15.

Dublin funeral homes will discontinue ambulance service Sept. 30. Fort Worth funeral homes will stop Sept. 11, although not entirely because of the wage-hour law.

Two Snyder funeral homes will drop emergency ambulance service by Sept. 1. Two Lubbock funeral homes already have stopped. Director Ed McGuire of the Texas Funeral Directors Association said many others either will stop or are considering it.

McGuire and other officials of the association met recently in Dallas.

"It didn't help very much but it put us on our guard," McGuire said. "We have given our members a lot of information so they will keep in compliance with the law, so they will know whether their employes are spending in excess of 20 per cent of their time in a week on ambulances."

"They may be under the wage-hour law one week and out five weeks and so forth. They have got to make up their minds on an individual basis. If they stay in, they are going to have to submit to the wage-hour law."

Funeral homes are exempt from the wage-hour law if they take in less than $1 million a year. Emergency ambulance service is in a different category.

If a regular employe of a funeral home—and some work 60-75 hours a week—works on ambulances more than 20 per cent of his time, he falls under the wage-hour law and must be paid the $1.25 an hour—federal minimum wage—and must be paid overtime if he works it.

New Mexico Garden Clubs Tour Glorieta Gardens At Assembly

GLORIETA, N.M. — Glorieta Baptist Assembly here was toured Thursday by about 175 New Mexico garden club members attending Glorieta Garden Club Day.

The Glorieta Garden Club, organized in 1955, hosted members from other clubs throughout the state in a one-day meeting featuring a tour of the Glorieta Gardens.

The assembly grows 60,000 perennial and annual plants each year. Cecil Pragnell, a Christian layman who has built famous gardens in America and around the world, designed Glorieta Gardens.

Mrs. Ruth Bush Jones, public information specialist for the Torres service, department of agriculture, presented a program entitled "Forest and Trees as Related in the Bible."

"Too often we try to conceive of man and nature as separate entities," she said. "Our entire culture teaches us that man is dominant and nature is his servant."

Mrs. Jones described the superiority of man over nature as a difficult tradition to change. Yet, she said, it must be changed.

"Our goal," she said, "must be to achieve a harmonious working relationship between the two."

"When a tree goes down . . . in a sense it also rises. Out of the tree rises perhaps the roof of a house or chairs or even an altar. When Christ died on the tree of the cross, Christianity rose with him."

"Let the tree remind us that we must begin now to overcome the biblical and doctrinal illiteracy which is so prevalent among adult church members," he says.

"The family, not the school or the church, is the single most effective educational agency. But most parents desperately need some basic religious education of their own before they can fulfill their responsibility for the Christian training of their children at home."

Catholic educators from all parts of the United States reached a similar conclusion at a recent Washington conference of the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine.

They urged parishes to curtail expansion of youth work for a while, and concentrate on fostering deeper understanding and commitment among adults.

"They not only must help youth to face these changes constructively, but they also must master the transition themselves."

His statement is corroborated by a private survey conducted by the Lutheran Church in America. It shows that many church-going adults, who have a strong faith in God, are bewildered by fast-moving events of our time, and are very uncertain about the application of Christian principles to specific social and personal problems.

To help them, the Lutheran Church in America has launched an experimental project called "the thinking man's religion." It consists of filmed interviews with people of outstanding competence in fields such as theology, diplomacy, sociology and psychology. The films will be available to local churches as a teaching resource and discussion-starter in adult classes.

The United Presbyterian Church is preparing to bring out a new church school curriculum which will have adults meeting in the same classes with high school juniors and seniors to study the relation of biblical insights to present-day living.

"Several denominations are looking into the possibility of applying 'programmed learning' techniques to adult religious education."

Some religious educators question whether new techniques are really needed. Adults who have been knocked around by life for a while are apt to be much more receptive to religious teaching—through books, lectures or other conventional means—than are young people.

Perhaps all that's necessary is for each church and synagogue to recognize that it's not only the lambs but also the adult sheep who need feeding.

Adults Should Be Prime Target For Church Education Programs

Religion in America By LOUIS CASSELS United Press International

For many years, churches and synagogues have focused their religious education efforts on children.

The wisdom of this approach, so long taken for granted, is now being widely challenged.

From Protestants, Catholics and Jews comes the revolutionary suggestion that adults should be the primary targets of religious education programs.

"The key to Christian education in the church is really the informed adult," says Dr. W. Kent Gilbert III of Philadelphia, executive secretary of the Board of Parish Education, Lutheran Church in America.

It does little good to send a child to Sunday school for an hour a week, he says, if the rest of his time is spent among adults who are ignorant or indifferent to Christian teachings.

"Unless we can have an informed laity, efforts to bring up children in the faith will be largely vitiated by what they learn from the adult community," Gilbert said.

Field Cries Out Dr. Frank E. Gaebelstein, co-editor of the magazine Christianity Today, agrees that "adult Christian education is a field that cries out for initiative on the part of pastors and boards, sessions and vestries."

"If for no other reason than that there can never be good Sunday school teaching without teachers who know the Bible, attention is being held."

Elison heads the missionary system in the state of Texas. A former resident of Salt Lake City, Utah, Elison and his wife have come to Texas to aid in the understanding of the Book of Mormon and its importance in the world today.

Attendance at this group meeting provides one of the opportunities to become informal and have an understanding of the "mormon" people and their beliefs. The meeting will be informal and open to the public.

The name of the West African nation of Dahomey means "Belly of Dan," in honor of a 17th century king who ate his victims, says National Geographic.

Delegates from the Pampa Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses were among the thousands who overflowed Market Hall in Dallas for the climax of the five-day "God's Sons of Liberty" Convention. It was hailed as the largest gathering ever held in Dallas.

Grant Suter, Secretary-Treasurer of the Watchtower Bible Society and principal speaker of the convention climaxed the assembly with the public talk, "What Has God's Kingdom Been Doing Since 1914?"

Suter started his discourse by saying, "This earth has never been the same since the year 1914. We say this because of the changed conditions among the people on earth, in the political structure of things, in morals, in scientific thinking, in religion, in warfare, and strange as it may sound, in superhuman invisible forces that are now playing upon mankind."

The speaker called attention to God's Kingdom being the answer to all the problems facing mankind and closed with the admonition for all to put themselves on God's side of favor and gain everlasting life on a paradise earth under God's Messianic Kingdom.

Each assembly day was highlighted by Bible discussions, and of particular interest were the dramatizations of Bible characters. Modern-day parallels of events experienced by these Bible personalities were acted out to serve as guidelines in applying Scriptural principles in daily life.

The Weekly Message Of Inspiration

SYLVIA S. RABER

First Church of Christ, Scientist

THE LIVING GOD

Man's ages-long search for a satisfying answer to the enigma of his existence early turned his gaze beyond himself to a higher Cause and Creator, whom he named God. His concept of himself rose higher as his understanding of God advanced.

The early Hebrews, in bondage to their Egyptian masters, had faint hope of any existence beyond slavery until Moses' revelation of God as the self-sustaining, ever-present I am proved powerfully adequate to break their bonds, guide them through the desert-wilderness, and lead them into the Promised Land. Then they could sing: "He is the Rock, his work is perfect: for all his ways are judgment: a God of truth and without iniquity, just and right is he." (Deut. 32:4)

Job's lament, centuries later, "Oh that I knew where I might find him! that I might come even to his seat!" (Job 23:3) is echoed today by millions in bondage to a worldly sense of materiality with its concomitant chains of sin, disease, and ultimate death. Does the answer lie in a flat denial of man's hope, epitomized by a current theory that God is dead?

The Bible attributes to God such qualities as wisdom, judgment, integrity, justice, perfection, understanding, mercy, and so on. We are aware that the existence of these qualities is evidenced by their expression in our daily lives. Since they are always available to be expressed, can we say that such qualities are dead? "The Lord is good," declares the Psalmist; "His mercy is everlasting, and his truth endureth to all generations." (Ps. 100:5) How incongruous, then, that the acknowledged course and creator of these good qualities could be thought less than infinite, omnipresent, and eternal! Rather should we exclaim with His son, Christ Jesus: "God is not the God of the dead, but of the living!" (Matt. 22:32).

From Rocky on Frederick's Seen 'em

SCHENECTADY, N. Y. (UPI)—Dan Frederick wishes Cassius Clay would return to the United States for championship bouts. "Otherwise," he says, "my streak might be broken."

Frederick's streak is one of the most unique in sports. The 83-year-old retired innkeeper hasn't missed a heavyweight championship fight since 1921 when Jack Dempsey defended against Georges Carpentier in Jersey City. Frederick has toured the globe watching heavyweight title fights. He's been to Las Vegas, Chicago, Toronto, Lewiston, Me., San Francisco, Seattle and the numerous other cities pursuing his hobby. His latest trips were to London after that. "Sooner or later," he said, "even rich people run out of money, you know."

He isn't sure, however, how many championships he will see after that. "Sooner or later," he said, "even rich people run out of money, you know."

Frederick writes for tickets as soon as any heavyweight title bout is announced. He flies to the city arriving the day before and leaving the day after. He says Miami and Las Vegas are his favorite fight spots.

CHARGED UP Earl Faison has settled his contract disputes with the San Diego Chargers and will seek another defensive end spot on the AFL all-pro team this season.

Pittsburgh Leads By Willie Stargell

By United Press International The Pittsburgh Pirates are ahead of the National League this year because Willie Stargell is ahead of his 1965 block-busting pace against the New York Mets. The Mets are in ninth place today but Stargell still isn't impressed.

Stargell has powered the Pirates to 12 victories in 15 games against the Mets this season by batting .404 with nine home runs and 19 RBIs. His pyrotechnics against New York have helped him receive his season batting average to .323 and send the Pirates two games ahead of the league.

Stargell's latest performance left the Mets slightly limp. Holding a 5-4 lead in the ninth inning Thursday night, New York was seeking its first victory against Pittsburgh in the three-game series. But the Pirates tied the score at 5-5 when Matty Alou led off with a single, took second on a sacrifice and came home on Roberto Clemente's single.

Thunderbird Classic Produces Lead Tie

By United Press International CLIFTON, N.J. (UPI)—The first round of the $100,000 Thunderbird golf classic produced a nine-way tie for the lead including Gary Player and a great big question mark tied to Arnold Palmer's ailing left shoulder.

The pain starts in my shoulder and runs clear down my left arm," said Palmer. "I feel fine but I just can't get the club back. I have to check my swing. I'm going to try to keep playing but I don't know how long."

Back of the fifty nine leaders and in excellent position to join the fun were U.S. Open champion Billy Casper among three 70 shooters and defending champion Jack Nicklaus who joined the one under par 71s with what he called "my best round since the British Open" which he won last match. Four under after 12 holes, Nicklaus missed three puny putts for bogeys on the back nine but that didn't worry him.

Others of note in easy striking position included Phil Rodgers at 70 and Julius Boros, Johnny Pott, Gay Brewer and Chi Chi Rodriguez among the 14 at 71.

R. H. Sikes, winner of last week's Cleveland Open, was back in the pack at 73 and PGA champ Al Geiberger skidded to a 76.

Fans Pay Final Respects For Charlie Dressen

DETROIT (UPI)—Hundreds of baseball fans paid Detroit's final respects to Charlie Dressen at special services here Thursday.

Dressen, who had managed the Detroit Tigers for the past two and one-half years, died Wednesday morning of his third heart attack in less than two years, brought on by a kidney infection. He was 67.

The fans and the officials of the Detroit baseball club said goodbye to Drossen by attending a High Requiem Mass at St. Aloysius Roman Catholic Church.

Dressen's sister, Mrs. Richard Rohmann of Cincinnati, attended the services but his wife, Ruth, who has been ill for several years was unable to make the trip from Los Angeles.

Tigers' General Manager James Campbell left Thursday night to accompany Drossen's body on the flight to Los Angeles, where final services and burial will be held Saturday.

Frank Robinson preserved the Baltimore victory by reaching into the right field stands in the bottom of the frame to take a home run away from Clete Boyer. Reliever Gene Brabender picked up his fourth win with two hitless innings while Pete Ramos, the fourth of five Yankee pitchers, took the loss.

No Practice Makes Good for Conigliaro

By United Press International No practice makes perfect for Tony Conigliaro.

The 21-year-old Boston outfielder, often celebrated for his unorthodox behavior off the field, has insured his reputation on the field as well by refusing to take batting practice before games.

It isn't that Conigliaro, the American League's defending home run champion, is being irascible. He just doesn't think the practice does him any good and he has the figures to back his argument.

Tony has hit .317 during the past three weeks, during which he has taken batting practice only once. Sure enough, the one time he indulged in the pregame ritual, he was held hitless.

Conigliaro, instead, has decided to confine his practicing to opposing pitchers and Thursday night he rapped a homer, double and two singles in four plate appearances and drove in five runs to lead the Red Sox to a 13-3 victory over Cleveland.

Baltimore increased its AL lead to 1 1/2 games by edging the New York Yankees 6-5 in 11 innings. Chicago defeated Kansas City in a 10-9 slugfest and Minnesota shaded California 4-3 in the only other games. Detroit and Washington were idle.

STRUCK BY LUNG CANCER

Zoldak Laboring for Breath, But Laughing About Past Luck

NEW YORK (UPI)—I want to apologize to an old friend. I didn't mean to cry as I did right in front of him, but I just couldn't help myself.

On top of the dresser in his room were two of the few mementoes he has left from the nine seasons he spent in the majors—a picture of himself in a Browns' uniform and a bronze-plated glove which was the last one he used with the Indians.

"Remember how Bill Veack bought me for $100,000?" asked Zoldak, harking back to one moment of glory in the past. "I used to kid the other Cleveland players about it. I'd tell them, 'this club paid $100,000 to get me from St. Louis. What did they pay to get you?'"

Zoldak was giving himself the worst of it because he did win 11 games in 1948, the year the Indians purchased him, and did help them win the American League pennant. Three years later, he was traded to the A's in a three-cornered deal for Minnie Minoso.

Weakened by treatments "I'd give anything to go out there," he said, looking through the window at his backyard less than 20 feet away, "and just throw the ball around a little again. I can't make it, though. Those cobalt treatments took too much out of me." Relatively few people in baseball are aware of Zoldak's ailment so he hasn't received too much mail.

"Bob Fishel, the Yankees' public relations man, has been real nice," said Zoldak. "He has written me three times... And I hardly know the man."

"I'm getting a little tired now, but when I was able to write last week, I dropped a line to Bob Swift. I was sorry to hear what happened to him."

Zoldak never made a great deal of money in baseball, but he saved what he could and bought a home for his mother a few years ago. That's the same one in which she now takes care of him.

"I don't have much," he said, "but whatever I do have is going to my mom. I've taken care of that already."

Sam's breathing was coming harder now and he excused himself.

"I'm sorry," he said. "I can't talk any more."

Price of admission is $1 for adults and 50 cents for children under 12. A special family ticket is also offered at $2.50. Purchase of this ticket will admit five people of any age.

Foreign Military Aid Funds

The following statement on foreign military assistance is from the Citizens Foreign Aid Committee (to Aid American Tax Payers). It raises some serious questions about whether the military assistance program is of benefit to the United States.

The Senate has reduced the President's fiscal '67 military assistance request from $917 million to a $792 million authorization. This authorization is for officer training and weapons for Latin America, Africa and countries adjacent to the USSR and Red China-Viet Nam excluded. One wonders if these authorizations are necessary.

Foreign officers trained in the U.S. learn to man modern weapons. Upon their return home, their governments rich in U.S. aid, appear inadequate. Some military coups against constitutional governments have resulted.

Latin America enjoys incidental hemisphere protection from the U.S. No weapons, other than for internal security, are needed. Latin America already has received $914 million in U.S. military assistance; no increase is now indicated. Likewise, Africa's military need is for police protection; already Africa has had $186 million for military assistance; to entrust Africans with more weapons would be tragic.

Nearly three-fourths of the $792 million military assistance authorization is earmarked for countries adjacent to the USSR and Red China. These countries already have received some $8 billion in U.S. military assistance, yet few have modern war capabilities. Defense Secretary McNamara has testified that there are 3 1/2 million military forces along the defense arc which borders the Communist bloc; they constitute an integral part of U.S. forward strategy, he said, and are an important factor in the world's strategic balance.

In the light of reality Mr. McNamara's above statements appear empty. This defense arc is possibly 6,000 miles long; much is in difficult terrain. Should Red forces plan to strike, they would have the advantage of initiative, purpose, concentration and overwhelming power. Forces below the arc would be unable effectively to meet the threat; forward strategy would become a paper strategy and a weightless balance. There is ample indication that most of the 3 1/2 million troops, while some fight each other or their governments, would not fight for the U.S. Forces which do help Koreans for example, are supported from our $2 billion monthly war cost.

Congress supports global military assistance because Defense officials advise the program is necessary for our own security, but is it?

Fighting Words

The Textile Workers Union of America recently asked that President Johnson issue an executive order banning the award of government contracts to an important supplier of vitally needed defense materials. The reason! A long-standing controversy between the union and the company.

Happily, the Chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, in Washington, Democrat L. Mendel Rivers, is both a patriot and a fighter. The Congressional Record for June 20 carries some fighting words by the Congressman which jump off the page to remind us how precariously intertwined are battles being fought here at home and in Viet Nam.

"I would like," said Rep. Rivers, "to bring to the attention of the Congress what I consider the current controversy between the National Labor Relations Board, the AFL-CIO and J. P. Stevens & Co., Inc., one of the country's largest textile firms."

By way of review let me say briefly that this controversy began in 1963 with a massive effort on the part of a group of unions . . . to organize the plants of Stevens.

"It is not my purpose to argue here today, the merits of this controversy. Let me just say that in elections held in eight

Stevens plants, employees have voted against the union in each and every one of these elections. In one of these plants . . . the NLRB ordered a rerun election . . . the employees went to the polls and voted the union down by a margin twice as large as before.

"The case has been argued in two U.S. district courts and the U.S. court of appeals as the union and the NLRB sought an injunction against the company. Each one of these courts refused to issue such an injunction. . . I say to you unequivocally, any individual or group that asks the Federal Government to withhold contracts for vitally needed war materials from a company simply because it has been found by the NLRB to be in violation of the Federal labor law is acting irresponsibly and without any thought for the welfare of our Armed Forces.

"This is merely a desperate attempt by the AFL-CIO Council to gain, by fiat from our Government, bargaining authority which it has not been able to win in secret ballot elections." Critical supplies and equipment for Viet Nam are involved in this home-front fight. Congressman Rivers thinks that our soldiers take priority over labor bosses. We agree.

Simplicity Not for Us

Whatever our shortcomings, there is one thing any fair-minded person has to concede to us Americans:

We won't do anything simply. Picking our income tax return as a random example, we manage to live our daily lives in a perpetual state of complexity and confusion.

Take sports and recreation. You think baseball and football are simple games? Try to explain one to a visitor from overseas who has never seen one!

Read about some piece—any piece—of legislation introduced in Congress, a state legislature, or even your local city council. Or arguments in an election contest.

Do you dig this stuff at first glance? You bet you don't. You have to study it as you wish you had studied your lessons when you were in school.

And the current war on poverty. You think poverty is something that is clutterproof? Hah! The whole project is now slowed down by the knotty question of just what is "poor" and who is successful enough to qualify as poverty-stricken.

We seem to have developed a mental block which makes it impossible for us to write, introduce, pass or sign a law, contract, agreement, pact, treaty, lease, form or even a weather forecast without sticking in enough "howevers" and "excepts" to throw the average victim who has to try to decipher it.

Surely it ought to be possible now and then to whop up something—however trivial and nonvital—in language so clear and simple even a grown man or woman could understand it.

Such as: "It is illegal to park your car in the middle of Cuyler St."

Now there is something anyone can understand. Except, of course, when . . .

A thought for the day—American educator Horace Mann said: "Be ashamed to die until you have won some victory for humanity."

Pull Up A Chair

By FRANK JAY MARKEY

Alaska's first tourist was a German naturalist named Georg (correct spelling) Wilhelm Steller, who arrived with the discoverer of what is now the 49th state, Vitus Bering in 1741. Curiously, Bering was a Dane employed as an explorer by the Russian Czar, and Steller was on the staff of the University of St. Petersburg. Steller marveled at what he saw: Lush green vegetation, towering stands of timber, glaciers pouring from snow-capped peaks, and abundant wildlife. Steller's account of the trip was so enthusiastic it led to Russian exploration of the northern paradise, but they didn't see what he saw and a hundred years later they were glad to sell it to the U.S. at a bargain rate.

Today's smile: Manny Williams, the funniest magician in show biz, tells us about the two mind readers who met on the street. One said, "You're feeling fine. How am I feeling?"

As any experienced traveler will tell you the old reccaps are rapidly disappearing from our railroad stations throughout the United States. Recently, in Boston, we learned that only six of the original force of 80 bag handlers are left at the South Station and three are on duty at the Back Bay station, whereas years ago there were always 40 reccaps there. There are none left at the North Station, where we used to take trains for Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire and Montreal. How times have changed!

Thoughts while shaving: We've noticed in news photos which show the storming of an American embassy or consulate in a foreign country that the pickets always carry signs saying "Yankee Go Home," but they never add, "and take your dough with you."

And, who would have believed twenty years ago when General George Marshall outlined the so-called Marshall Plan at a Harvard Commencement that the American taxpayer would be shelling out dough forever after to keep a lot of pint-sized politicians in office around the world, of whom couldn't be elected as a ward councillor in any American city.

We understand the Children's Medical Center at Boston maintains a display of all the "hardware" that has been removed from the throats of young patients. It includes such items as doll's eyes, French francs, buttons, keys, safety pins, can openers, and even a miniature airplane. . . . According to the findings of a municipal government committee a non-smoker in New York City inhales as much benzpyrene (a cancer-causing chemical) as there is in two packs of cigarettes every 24 hours. The only solution to that one would be to move from Manhattan to the wide open spaces. . . . So successful has the Chutspah Book been received by non-book readers that someone has suggested to co-authors, Art Moger and Bob Nisenzon, to issue a sequel called: "The Son of Chutspah." (Chutspah is a Yiddish word used frequently on TV, radio and screen, meaning "lots of gall.") The co-authors modestly admit they have "Chutspah" in abundance. And they have! . . . The Barre-Montpelier (Vt.) ARGUS-TIMES reported in a story: "Lassies To Trod Primrose Path." Of course.

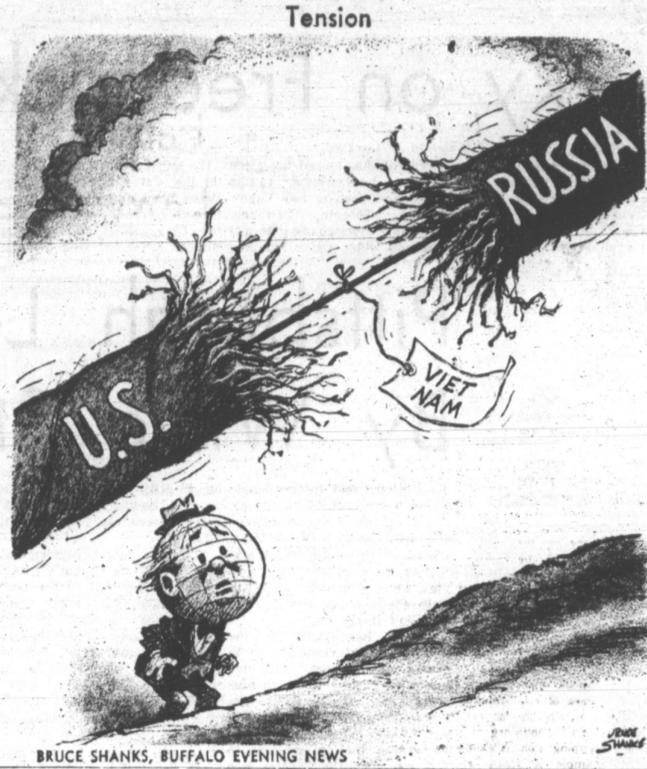

County Editor speaking: "If they win the war on poverty, they're going to employ all those high-salaried social workers!"

The Nation's Press PRESCRIPTION FROM DR. HUMPHREY Tipton (Ind.) Daily Tribune

Not long ago a certain Dr. Humphrey, who also serves as Veep . . . chided legislators of several States. . . for not having enough tax sources. These "corny" administrators believe that this country needs more taxes. . . like Tom Marshall believed that what this country needs is a good five-cent cigar. The "Minnesota Carper" volunteered "that two thirds of the states do not have an income tax, others not enough."

In other words: "get with it boys, don't you know the public is willing and ready to be plucked!" The Golden Eggs are there, according to Horatio. . . and they should be gathered—less they spoil!

The American Way

By HARRY BROWNE

It is obvious that if there were no government, some people would be plundered some of the time. Robert Clifton has pointed out that this self-evident fact causes most people to be afraid of a society without government. Instead, as he put it, they prefer a society with government—where everyone is plundered all of the time.

The fear of an absence of "law and order" prompts most people to overlook the chaos and violence that exists as a result of "law and order". Let's look at some examples:

1. Laws making unions immune from damages for violence caused by them has made it possible for millions of dollars of property to be destroyed and for many lives to be lost.

2. Laws providing for benefits to the post-rat Wata area have provided inducements for new riots all over the country.

3. Laws providing for plunder to foreign governments have sapped every American family of thousands of dollars—without obtaining the permission of a single family.

4. Laws make it possible for you to pay—without your consent—for other people's electricity bills, over-production, medical bills, retirement, etc., etc.

These few examples illustrate the point. Where is the "law and order" the government assures us would be unavailable in its absence? Obviously, governments are the greatest destroyers of order. They upset the orderly supply and demand system with price controls, subsidies and regulations. They provide inducements for violence and steal property from you to make it possible for others not to work.

We are plundered constantly by taxes that are levied without personal consent. We are told that we must abide by the majority's decisions—but we are never told why we must—and even the "majority" has no hand in making decisions, because there is no way the majority could ever be polled politically on every single issue.

Freedom will come when individuals are capable of protecting themselves from those who, in the name of government, seek to plunder them. Any man with ingenuity can protect himself from private thieves. If not, he can contract with a man of ingenuity for that.

gleaned a curious piece of information from the Ocean City, Md., Beachcomber, which reports: Bobby Baker, owner of Carousel Motel, told chamber of commerce representatives this week that he hopes to set up a young people's club by July.

"There isn't anything wholesome for the young people to do," he told them at a dinner Wednesday night. Mr. Baker may be remembered as Lyndon Johnson's protegee, who parlayed his clout as secretary to the Democratic majority of the Senate into a fortune of 2 million dollars through moonlighting operations and is now under indictment for income tax evasion. It is touching that he should go out of his way to save potential juvenile delinquents from themselves.

Question Box

It invites questions on economics and the proper functions of government, which will not feature anyone.

QUESTION: "Isn't it inconsistent to be against communism, yet for Medicare, federal rent subsidies, War on Poverty, etc.?"

ANSWER: We believe it is. Communism is a concept of taking from those who have and giving to those who are among the "have-nots." This is under the slogan of "from each according to his ability to pay, to each according to his needs."

The United States cannot oppose communism successfully by fighting Communists in various parts of the world and adopting the communist ideals at home.

Phony Freckles (Portland Oregonian)

A fashion story from New York relates that freckles are now considered beauty marks and the outdoorsy women who have them will no longer cover them with paint and powder.

All who are opposed to artificiality would cheer this news if they read no farther. But, as usual, the fad does not end with the natural look.

Women who have no freckles are painting them on, much to the delight of the cosmetics trade which is just as happy to sell artificial freckles as to provide the paint with which to cover the real ones.

The next step after putting on natural-colored freckles, says a cosmetics executive, "will be to match them with the color of a dress. For example, purple freckles with a purple dress."

A thought for the day—Norwegian playwright Henrik Ibsen: "The spirit of truth and the spirit of freedom . . . they are the pillars of society."

Police Sergeant—A college student, eh?

Prisoner—Yes, sir.

Patrolman—It's a stall. I frisked him twice and there ain't a single magazine blank on him.

Profile In Courage (Danville Commercial News)

The Teamsters union has produced a new definition of courage.

Courage is a young member, Larry A. Thomas, who alone among 2,000 delegates stood up to oppose use of union funds for meeting James R. Hoffa's legal expenses. Thomas, a Negro, is president of a Philadelphia local.

Only a few teamsters have ever risked twice-convicted President Hoffa's wrath in such open fashion.

Hoffa, awaiting the outcome of appeals on his convictions for mail fraud and bribing a juror, not only gets a blank check for defending himself in criminal litigation; he'll run the union from prison if he lands there. As a further protection of his power, Hoffa dictated the choice of a vice president to succeed him.

It is a pity that the teamsters cling to their puppet attitude toward their wily boss. It is all the more pathetic because of the union's public involvement.

Hoffa may end up behind bars but will his dream of paralyzing the economy with a nationwide truckers' strike, or worse? This nightmare in power could become a reality unless more teamsters show the Larry A. Thomas brand of courage:

Rapid, Shallow Breathing Clue to Rare Pneumonia

The tragic death of her 2 1/2-month-old son has left a reader confused as well as grief-stricken. This infant appeared to be well when she put him to bed and was found dead the next morning. A post-mortem examination showed the cause of death to be interstitial pneumonia, a disease that has been increasing in frequency in recent years. It is rare in adults and older children. It is caused by a small organism, the pneumocystic carinii, which appears to be either a single-celled animal or a fungus.

The infant infected with this organism usually takes rapid, shallow breaths and loses his appetite but there is no cough or fever. That is why the parents do not appreciate the seriousness of this often-fatal disease. When it is suspected there is something wrong, an X ray of the chest will show the typical findings of a widespread pneumonia.

Castro's Man Dorticos Is Old Smoothie

By RAY CROMLEY

Washington Correspondent WASHINGTON (NEA) — If Osvaldo Dorticos edges out Castro as Cuba's head rian, he'll be more dangerous than Fidel ever was.

(Dorticos wields great power as Cuba's president and czar of the island's economic life.)

As one anti-Communist Cuban puts it: "He looks clean. He shaves. He wears a suit and tie, not fatigues. He looks intellectual, not like a ruffian.

"Even a friend of mine who knows what he's really like came away from a conversation with Dorticos saying how reasonable he was. He very skillfully fooled the anti-Castro upper class for years before Castro took over.

"He is so smooth that when Castro put his own mistress in Dorticos' office to watch him, Dorticos twisted her around his little finger.

"He's a great contrast to Fidel. He gets things done. He's very efficient, good at organization. He doesn't go out on the town, publicly drinking, singing and chasing women.

"He works slowly and carefully, plays both sides against the middle. When he was in on writing many of the laws which seized foreign and Cuban private property, in talking with non-Castro Cubans he pretended to complain about many of the laws he was himself writing."

A professor who taught Dorticos in college recalls: "He knew his subject when he came to class. He was always well-dressed, never arrogant. He was more like an intellectual, discussing philosophical matters.

"But he was a very disturbed boy from a middle-class family which had gone down.

"His father had been a well-known physician, but never careful about saving money. When he died, Mrs. Dorticos found herself with two young boys and no funds.

"Young Dorticos had a grudge against everyone in the world and the rest of his family because he was not given money to live well.

"While at the university, he was befriended by the Communist, Carlos Rafael Rodriguez, and came under his influence. He became a Communist party member and secretary to a Communist party chief.

"He was a member of the Communist group at the university and gradually began to assume leadership in that group. He did this by not getting angry or loud when the others did, but talking quietly.

"Even as a college student he carefully put on the appearance of being a nice guy among a bunch of rascals. Thus he didn't arouse antagonism.

"When he graduated in law, he went back to Cienfuegos and put up his shingle. He began to represent business in cases against labor. He associated with business groups and began earning good money. He finally became head of the city's most aristocratic club.

"In these years, he hid his sentiments. No one thought of him as a Communist. He was living very well and was given a legal appointment from Batista. He became president of Cuba's bar association.

"Then in 1958 he became involved in a Navy revolt against Batista and left for Mexico."

The danger is that because Dorticos is so smooth when he chooses, he might cause us to relax.

Unfortunately, there is no specific treatment for this disease. Giving pure oxygen gives the child the best chance for recovery.

Q—When my 2-year-old son gets a mosquito bite his skin swells up. I have heard that a person with this type of reaction to a mild insect bite could have a violent or fatal reaction to a bee sting. What do you think?

A—A high sensitivity to one type of insect bite would not cause a high sensitivity to the bite or sting of a different kind of insect but, if your son is ever stung by a bee, he may become hypersensitive to bee stings. In that case, desensitizing injections of bee venom would be recommended.

Q—Our 2 1/2-year-old son passed a large roundworm. How does one get them? The medicine he was given cleared them up, but will they come back?

A—Roundworm infestation is common, especially in children. They pick up the eggs on their fingers from the soil. The eggs may be transferred to a child's mouth on contaminated fingers, food or toys. The adult worms are developed in the digestive tract. When a child who has roundworms can't be bothered to go to a toilet but instead deposits his excrement on the ground the stage is set for another cycle in the life history of roundworms.

When the infestation is cleared up it will not come back unless the child is reinfested.

Eminent Domain Should Be Abolished

(INNOVATOR)

"If you accept the principle of eminent domain," comments Isabel Paterson, "you are lost." Quite true, for if the "group" can appropriate the property of the individual any time it is deemed to be "in the public interest," what is the limit? There is none, for who decides what is "in the public interest"? At worse a political clique; at best the "majority." In either event the principle of individual rights has been rejected and it is for the State to nationalize private property when and where it may choose. (2)

Eminent domain is a bad idea gone wrong. Originally, eminent domain was intended only for the achievement of certain "public" facilities such as roads, public schools, etc.; in 1854, however, the Supreme Court upheld Federal Urban Renewal, by which is permitted the seizure of private property for favored PRIVATE use. The reach of eminent domain steadily lengthens: the University of California Board of Regents recently acquired condemnation of a 315-unit apartment complex in order to take it over for the use of UCLA students. In 1964 a Los Angeles resident named Steven Anthony was forcibly taken from his home in order that it might be destroyed to make room for a privately-operated film museum. (3)

The principle of eminent domain has been so extended that there remains not a home or field or a blade of grass that cannot be legally nationalized by the State.

Eminent Domain: Enemy of Progress

Coercive government measures such as eminent domain do not hasten progress — they retard it for private effort is thereby gradually removed from the scene. What private business can compete with the government agency that is not only subsidized with tax money but which is also empowered to seize by force any piece of private property that it desires? Moreover, what private business man would be so rash as to invest in a long-term venture (such as rapid transit) that would ultimately be regulated and controlled into insolvency and then be taken over by the State anyway? (This has been the fate of nearly every bus company and subway in every major city in the nation. Railroad may ultimately suffer the same fate.)

The bureaucrat, by virtue of coercive measures such as eminent domain, displaces private effort from one area after another. But then, having done so, the bureaucrat is unable to fill the vacuum that his own involvement has created. While those services provided by the private sector are available in abundance, the so-called "public services" are in chronic short supply. In no "public" area has the political mechanism functioned with any degree of efficiency or foresight (4), whether it be public streets, public schools or public anything. Consider water, for example: it is abundant in nature; it is far easier to handle than coal or natural gas or gasoline or bananas. But coal and natural gas and gasoline and bananas — all of which are supplied by private enterprise — are available in abundance; while water, the most accessible and least troublesome commodity of all, is in critically short supply in some of the nation's largest cities. If government had not shoved its way into the water business, private companies would no doubt be as busy today laying water pipelines as they are laying natural-gas pipelines.

Whether with water or roads or schools or rapid transit or whatever, the principle is the same. The real key to progress is not eminent domain, but a halt to government involvement. Private enterprise can do the job — any job — better. The practice of eminent domain should be abolished. If a demand exists for — let us say — a monorail system in Los Angeles, let whichever company wishes to make the effort, do so. Let it attain the right of way in the same fashion that many pipeline companies achieve rights of way, i.e., by acquiring "options to buy" along two or more alternative routes until one of the routes is completed. Without the confiscatory power of eminent domain it might indeed take years for a monorail system to become established — but it would be less time than that required by an inherently slow and inefficient bureaucracy. Moreover, the job would be accomplished at no expense to the taxpayer. Above all, abolition of the mechanism of eminent domain would represent a major step toward the free society. R. GRANT.

(1) This article is a condensation of the chapter on eminent domain in The Incredible Bread Machine by Richard Grant. The Incredible Bread Machine is a study of Capitalism and Freedom, to be published this year by the Institute for Social Progress, publishers of Innovator.

(2) True, the State pays for the property it seizes. But if eminent domain is justified by this fact, then there is nothing to prevent the State from nationalizing every scrap of private property merely by paying of it with the taxpayers' own money.

(3) Submerged in bickering and red tape, the museum was never built. The property was turned into a parking lot. Anthony was sentenced to a year in jail (still being appealed) and subjected to a tongue-lashing from a judge who called him an "anarchist, rabble-rouser, and publicity-seeker." An official of the proposed film museum suggested that Anthony's supporters were "communist inspired."

(4) The bureaucracy will inevitably be less far-sighted than the private business, for the bureaucrat can embark upon an undertaking only with the concurrence of the electorate. Accordingly, where the businessman can build in anticipation of future needs, the bureaucrat can act only when the need has actually arisen and has become painfully apparent. The bureaucrat recognized the problem, and, of course, has a ready solution: free the bureaucracy from legislative restraints. But, aside from the obvious danger to freedom, is there any reason to suppose that such an "independent" bureaucracy would be any more efficient or progressive? The experience of Soviet Russia suggests otherwise.

Vested Interests In Poverty

(Chicago Tribune)

It was predictable that chronic welfare statism and the Johnson administration's "war on poverty" would persuade apostles of discord that the claims of relievers on society far overshadowed any need on the part of these people to try to contribute to it. This philosophy is now out in the open.

The relief commissioner of New York City, Mitchell I. Ginsberg, has disclosed that a committee representing a city-wide organization of 5,000 relief recipients has demanded that the city's relief rolls be opened so everyone on welfare can be organized into a "union." There are 550,000 relievers in New York.

The law requires that the names of those receiving public assistance be kept secret, but that has not deterred a campaign to organize a national union of public aid recipients. According to Mr. Ginsberg, the strategy is to demand everything the welfare laws allow and to urge all those whose financial situation makes them eligible for welfare to apply for it. The organizers, operating from what is called the Poverty Rights Action center in Washington, contend that for very person now receiving relief in New York, another one is eligible but doesn't apply.

At present one person out of every 16 in New York is on relief. The campaign is to extend relief to one New Yorker in every eight. Mr. Ginsberg says that many of those who are not on relief are able to handle their problem in other ways and don't want to be on the relief rolls.

The purpose of unionization is not only to build up a huge lobby as a pressure group but to undermine the existing relief system. Doubling the relief rolls in major cities and unionizing those on the dole are deliberately designed to create such a financial crisis for the cities that the federal government would have to step in with a whole new system of income distribution.

Those pushing the campaign seek to substitute a guaranteed annual income in place of relief checks. Such a plan would impose enormous burdens on cities, states, and the federal government. It would institutionalize "poverty" as a permanent and immutable condition and discourage any effort by free riders to better themselves and get off the backs of the taxpayers. We could expect one family generation after another to collect incomes from the productive member of society, with constantly accumulating demands for "more."

On the recent death of Raymond Hilliard, Cook County director of public aid, we recalled that Mr. Hilliard had nothing but scorn for those who are trying to organize and inflame the poor. He wrote:

"Too many are being misled by some of today's bogus leadership into believing that the war on poverty and the fight for social justice can be a 'fun game,' a happy round of parades and protests, meetings, denunciations and general conviviality. These fakery most generally smear at education and preach resistance for its own sake, even to such things as the taking of decent jobs."

There spoke a prophet in his own time.

Big Business

(Industrial News Review)

In the current era, people have been educated to the idea that someone owes them damages every time they stub their toe, and the liability for simply living is becoming so great that the average person can hardly afford to pay for adequate insurance. If you give your neighbor a lift to work in your car and have an accident, he can sue you and collect exorbitant amounts. If a friend walks across your property and injures himself, he can sue you and collect. You constantly read of judgments of $10,000, $50,000, $100,000 and up.

Expecting the other fellow to pay for all the risks of life has become big business. It is promoted by some of the sharpest mercenary minds who make a profession of litigating damage suits. It's time we all realize that although insurance companies may write the checks to settle outlandish damage claims, we pay the bill in ever-rising costs of essential insurance coverage.

The Family Lawyer

CARELESS CLOTHES

What to wear? Choosing your costume for a particular occasion is not just a matter of fashion but also a matter of law. Should you be injured, careless clothing may jeopardize your right to collect damages by pinning a "negligent" label upon you.

Consider this case: A young woman, going for a walk on a wintry night, knew that the sidewalks were slick with ice. Yet she chose to wear very high heels. Sure enough she skidded and suffered assorted injuries.

But when she sued the city for damages, the judge decided she herself was guilty of negligence in her choice of footwear.

On the other hand, a woman who stumbled on a hotel stairway was held not negligent. The heels she was wearing were only moderately high — and the process of walking down steps did not demand any special precautions.

Even choosing an unwise color, if not negligence at all by itself, may at least tip the scales in that direction.

Was a hunter accidentally shot by a companion? It may count against the victim, legally, that he was wearing a grey hat exactly the color of a grey squirrel.

Was a hunter accidentally shot from a dark highway, struck by a passing car? It may be held against him that he was wearing a hard-to-see black jacket instead of an easy-to-see white shirt.

In addition to choosing your clothing with care, you are expected also to wear it with care. For example:

A woman passenger, emerging from a friend's car, shut the door on her own sleeve. Unaware of her predicament, the driver started forward, hurling the woman to the pavement. But a court later found no fault with the driver. The woman herself was negligent, said the court, for letting her sleeve get caught.

In another case, a man with foot troubles sued a shoe dealer for selling him shoes that were too tight. But the court turned thumbs down on his claim. The judge commented: "He is the best judge of whether the shoes fitted or pinched. If the customer persists in wearing the shoes and allowing the pinching, he has himself to blame and none other."

The Lighter Side

By DICK WEST
United Press International
WASHINGTON (UPI) — A man whose name I don't know was sitting around one day without much on his mind and he got to brooding about the trouble that people with fat-fingers have dialing telephone numbers.

He may have been fat-fingered himself or he may have had a lot of fat-fingered friends. Anyway, he decided that what the world needed was an automatic telephone dialer. So he invented one.

Unfortunately, there was very little demand for the instrument. It was cheaper for fat-fingered people to stick the end of a pencil in the dial holes. Besides that, the telephone company began making a pushbutton model.

Not Wasted
I am pleased to say, however, that his flash of inspiration was not entirely wasted.

The automatic dialer has made possible the development of a security device called the robotguard, which is used in counter-intelligence work and that sort of thing.

This story was related to me this week by an official of International Security Service, Inc., a new company that claims to offer the nation's first private enterprise debugging service.

It staged a demonstration to show members of Congress "the latest security and privacy-penetrating devices and techniques that may be probing their confidential matters and private lives."

The company also demonstrated "equally modern scientific counter-devices," such as the robotguard.

Must Be Defended
"In this scientific age privacy and security cannot, unfortunately, be taken for granted, but must be defended actively," Albert P. Senteio, head of the firm, told the congressmen.

He said congressional offices could be rigged for electronic eavesdropping and hinted he knew of such cases.

Any lawmaker who suspects the "big ear" of operating within his sanctum sanctorum was invited to hire Senteio's firm to debug it. Or he can purchase do-it-yourself debugging equipment.

With all the snooping and counter-snooping that is going on these days, I suppose it is only a question of time before someone opens a rent-a-spy agency.

Then a rival agency can go into business with the slogan: "We're only number two. We have to spy harder."

Television in Review

By ROBERT MUSEL
United Press International
NEW YORK (UPI) — Many Americans now feel we are winning the war in Viet Nam, a belief which somewhat surprises Thomas H. Wolf, "We're not," said the Executive Producer of "ABC Scope" which has been concentrating on the conflict since last February. "The best that can be said is we've stopped losing."

Wolf has one of the most difficult jobs in television in trying to present a balanced picture of an involvement which has raised so many questions among Americans and provoked so many points of view.

"Every week, 52 weeks a year, in prime time we will carry on our effort to explain what is going on there," he said. "As far as I know we are the only show attempting to put the situation into perspective instead of just offering a review of the week. We are giving all viewpoints a share of the time because no one seems to know all the answers."

This Saturday "ABC Scope" will study the case of Cambodia and explore the questions of whether the neutral nation is a sanctuary for the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese regulars and why it considers the Americas to be the intruders in Viet Nam. Wolf said one of his correspondents got the first filmed interview for the program given by chief of state Prince Norodom Sihanouk in two years.

Wolf, whose "ABC Scope" is now taken by 110 stations, is also completing a one-hour documentary "To Save a Soldier" based on the work of the helicopter medical teams in Viet Nam.

"The ratio of wounded to dead has been going down with each war and in Viet Nam it is at its lowest yet," he said. "The reason is that the helicopters can get medics there 10 or 15 minutes after an attack and the wounded can be on the operating table in 45 minutes. Our last day of filming there we covered an under fire landing and a kid had his guts shot out. Half an hour later he would have been dead except that in half an hour he was undergoing surgery."

"We plan to follow him home when he is released from the hospital." On his way back from Viet Nam Wolfe, who has many a distinguished documentary agency.

Reflections On The History Of 'Dominium Eminentis'

The "power of eminent domain," or something like it, has existed wherever the control over property derives from force rather than from free-market exchange. It is the doctrine that the king or lord is sovereign over all property in his "domain," and may take what he wants it, as an attribute of this "sovereignty."

The counterpart of eminent domain in the field of personal service is called "angaria," the power of a ruler to exact compulsory labor or mandatory duties. And then there's that business of "jus primae noctiae" — the theory of eminent domain applied to sex, or rape by due process of law.

But our main concern here is with real estate law, the characteristics of which have come to us from the middle ages. (The real estate term "fee" simply means "fief," a feudal right to use land whose ownership stays with the lord.)

"Feudal tenures were abolished in England by the statute 12 car. II c.24; but the principles of the system still remain at the foundation of the English and American law of real property. . . . The State steps in, in the place of the feudal lord, by virtue of its sovereignty, as the original and ultimate proprietor of all lands within its jurisdiction." (1)

Thus it has been held by American courts that the power of eminent domain did not arise from American Constitutions, but like slavery, already existed prior to such Constitutions, and was left untouched by them.

Hugo's Curse
The origin of the phrase "dominium eminentis" is obscure, but it is sometimes attributed to Hugo Grotius (1623-1645), Dutch jurist and politician, one-time attorney general of Holland, and author of "The Law of Plunder," and "The Law of War and Peace." Grotius says:

"The property of subjects is under the eminent domain of the State; so that the State, or he who acts for it, may use, and even alienate and destroy such property, not only in case of extreme necessity, . . . but for ends of public utility, to which ends those who founded civil society must be supposed to have intended that private ends should give way. But it is to be added, that when this is done, the State is bound to make good the loss to those who lose their property; and to this public purpose, among others, he who has suffered the loss must, if need be, contribute." (2) domic justification for them in order to get public land grants and, in some cases, used legal authority to steal privately-owned lands at a fraction of their worth." (3) Property owners were actually shot for defending their property rights.

In the 1900's, the Roosevelt Administration stole hundreds of thousands of acres of good farm land in the Tennessee Valley for what has been called a "flood-control project" — and flooded them.

In more recent years, over one million Americans have been driven out of their homes and businesses, for "urban renewal," highway construction, and even for baseball parks, hotels, and monuments!

Some people are under the impression that when property is thus expropriated, something called "just compensation" is paid for the property! As a general rule, however, the compensation offered is much less than what the property owner could have obtained in a private sale if the State had not lowered the boom. And in most cases little or no compensation is paid for loss of business, good will, the cost of moving and establishing a new location, and other intangibles.

In any case, such phrases as "just compensation," "market value," and "fair price," have meaning only in a voluntary exchange of free-market situation. When the property owner is told, in effect, that the alternatives available to him are (1) accept the price offered, or (2) be visited by a hundred sheriff's deputies armed with tear gas, riot guns, and bulldozers, then it is not a market transaction that is taking place. It is ARMED ROBBERY.

It makes no difference, incidentally, whether the formalities of actual condemnation and eviction are carried out; it is enough that they are held as a threat. The property owner has two ultimate choices: GET OUT or GET SHOT. That is the nature of eminent domain, and that's what it's all about. R. BRAY.

(1) Bouvier's Law Dictionary, Rawle's Revision, Kansas City, Mo., 1914, "Feudal Law," and "Escheat."

(2) The Law of War and Peace, BK. I, c. 20. John Locke considered such a view "an absurdity." In his Second Treatise of Civil Government, Locke wrote: "The supreme power cannot take from any man any part of his property without his own consent. For the protection of property being the end of government, and that for which men enter into society, it necessarily supposes and requires that the people should have property, without which they must be supposed to lose that by entering into society, which was the end for which they entered into it, too gross an absurdity for any man to own."

Price Jabs Freeman For Advising Demos

MULESHOE — Agriculture Secretary Orville Freeman was the target of Bob Price, Republican candidate for Congress, in a speech here last night.

Conducting another of his Crop and Cattle Clinics, Price accused Freeman of advising Democratic candidates on how to dodge embarrassing questions rising out of the cost of living.

"He has a simple formula," Price said. "He just tells them not to answer, but to slip, slide and duck and, above all, don't ever get caught in a debate on higher prices between housewives and farmers."

Price declared that Freeman thought he was giving the advice in private to a group of Democratic Congressional candidates who went to Washington to get top Administration instruction on how to conduct their campaigns.

"But a reporter for the Chicago Tribune got into the private session by accident," Price said, "and he found it so interesting that he reported the proceedings for his paper."

Price charged further that Freeman told the candidates to be careful what they say about farmers. "They're very sensitive, he cautioned, and don't like to be told they are doing all that right."

Then, Price went on to say: "The secretary is in a position to know something about the sensitivity of farmers. He stirred up a hornet's nest last March when he expressed pleasure at a reduction in the prices farmers were getting for their products, and predicted with apparent satisfaction that farm prices would go still lower."

"That happened when President Johnson and his aides were juggling the inflation ball and trying to drop the blame on somebody else. The farmers thought Freeman was trying to set them up as the patsies in this buck-passing game, and he has been trying to talk his way out of it ever since."

"Having been badly burned himself, he now passes on that new-found wisdom to the Democratic candidates."

"Don't talk about inflation... Slip, slide and duck... If you get cornered, take the side of the farmers. Their votes are better organized than those of the housewives."

"That's Secretary Freeman's advice to all Democrats."

Cooperative Ventures To Be Studied In College Workshop

DALLAS — How cooperative ventures may be accomplished to benefit the nine Texas colleges and universities supported by Baptists will be probed in an extensive joint workshop for staff and faculty members Aug. 31-Sept. 2.

More than 300 participating leaders are expected from the nine schools, which have a total average enrollment of more than 12,000 students with some 800 faculty and staff members. The three-day workshop is planned at Lakeview Methodist Assembly south of Palestine under sponsorship and financing of the Christian Education Commission of the 1.8 million-member Baptist General Convention of Texas.

The 1966 Texas Baptist College and University Workshop will have as its theme, "Strengthening Christian education through interinstitutional cooperation," according to Dr. E. N. Jones of Dallas, secretary of the sponsoring BGCT education commission.

The education commissions of office here has received numerous notifications of intention to attend the workshop.

Texas Baptist colleges and universities involved are Baylor University at Waco; Dallas Baptist College; East Texas Baptist College at Marshall; Hardin-Simmons University at Abilene; Houston Baptist College; Howard Payne College at Brownwood; Mary Hardin-Baylor College at Belton; the University of Corpus Christi; and Wayland Baptist College at Plainview.

Purpose of the annual working assembly of faculties and staffs is "to add strength to strength by studying possible cooperative ventures in administrative and instructional areas," stated the invitation from Dr. Jones of office. Schools pooling their financial resources in order to secure noted specialists and lecturers was cited as an example of a possible outcome of the conferences.

The workshop will include general sessions and discussion groups. Leading in the general sessions will be Dr. Landrum Bolling, president of Earlham College, Richmond, Ind., and Paul Parker, executive director of the Associated Mid-Florida Colleges Deland, Fla.

LBJ Lauds Interfaith Observance

NEW YORK — Spiros P. Skouras, national chairman for the forthcoming 26th annual National Bible Week observance, announced that he had received an official message from President Lyndon B. Johnson commending the Interfaith event, which will be sponsored by the Laymen's National Committee, Inc., the week of Oct. 17-23.

The presidential greeting read as follows:

The White House, Washington, July 28, 1966 — "In the Scriptures there is inspiration. It is there for persons of every belief, of every nation, of every circumstance. It need only be discovered — and once found, rediscovered. The Bible gives grace to life and hope to humanity. On its sacred pages the message of peace, brotherhood and faith is forever enshrined. 'I welcome the observance of National Bible Week. And I hope this week evokes awareness in all men that the Bible is not ours for occasional recourse, but ours for daily living.'"

Lyndon B. Johnson

Wall Street Chatter

NEW YORK (UPI) —Edward V. Vanecko & Co. Inc., says that although signs of an economic adjustment are imminent, it is advisable that the prudent investor critically re-examine his holdings in the light of possible developments.

Stanley Heller & Co. says in its opinion public confidence in the stock market has not been too damaged by the recent sharp decline. The firm believes it will take an actual decline in corporate profits or a sudden monetary upheaval before the small investor joins the present ranks of cautious professionals.

Hornblower & Weeks-Hemphill, Noyes says the fact that stock prices have retreated only slightly from last week's modest recovery suggests that investor concern over reduced corporate profits because of strikes or tight money has been discounted in the 17 per cent decline from the highs of six months ago.

Report Disease
GENEVA (UPI) —There were 1,316 reported cases of the plague last year with the highest number, 377, in South Viet Nam, the World Health Organization reported Monday. One hundred and twenty of the victims died. The disease was most prevalent in South America, with Ecuador reporting the most cases, 374.

In 1936, Germany's Nazi government announced it would not intervene in the Spanish Civil War.

Lynda Bird Job Hunting in NY

NEW YORK (UPI) —Lynda Bird Johnson job-hunts in New York like any other girl from out of town. Except, of course, for the Secret Service escort, dates with a movie star and prepared statements issued by prospective employers.

The President's 22-year-old daughter flew to New York Monday and has been on the go ever since. McCall's magazine and the Ford Foundation have interviewed her.

She and actor George Hamilton saw a Broadway musical, then hit a few nightspots Wednesday. The President's oldest daughter also spent some time at a museum, unspecified by her spokesman.

And everywhere that Lynda went, the Secret Servicemen followed.

Robert Stein, the editor of McCall's, said he was "very impressed" with Miss Johnson's qualifications for a job but said further statements would have to come from her.

The couple saw "Man of La Mancha" Wednesday night and later went to Chez Vito, a candle-lit nightclub with strolling violinists and an owner who sings opera. The Secret Servicemen declined a meal, saying they had eaten at two discotheques on the way over.

Hamilton sang "The Language of Love" to Lynda to the accompaniment of the violinists and the amusement of other patrons who broke into "People Will Say We're in Love" for the benefit of the President's daughter and her most frequent escort.
