BEFORE MILLIONS

Princess Anne Marries Mark

LONDON (UPI) — Princess Anne, smiling her happiness every step of the way to the altar, married Capt. Mark Phillips today in a ceremony that spread the joy of young love to thousands thronging the flag-bedecked streets of the capital and to millions watching by television.

As the Princess walked down the royal blue carpet, laid the length of the abbey, on the arm of her father, the Duke of Edinburgh, her eyes were already searching ahead to the altar, where Capt. Phillips waited in the splendid dress uniform of the Queen's Dragon Guards.

And his eyes sought hers. To keep from grinning with pride, he lowered his head and bit his lip.

Queen Elizabeth, watching her only daughter's happiness, wept the first tears anyone has ever seen her shed in public.

Queen Mother Elizabeth turned from smiling at the young couple and appeared startled to find her daughter, trained from cradle to throne to control her emotions, in tears.

More a Mother than Queen

She stared a few seconds at the Queen and then turned back to witness the end of the ceremony. The Queen, blinking, appeared to be lost in her own thoughts, more a mother than a Queen.

A glittering congregation of 1,500, including 23 members of foreign royalty, smiled at the scene at the altar, for it is rare that members of royal houses—or a tank commander for that matter—make open displays of affection.

The tall, blonde Princess never looked prettier nor dark-haired Mark more handsome. The bride, who broke tradition to have her gown made by a house better known for ready-made clothes, wore a "princess line" dress of specially woven white silk with a high neck and Elizabethan sleeves edged with pearls and mirror jewels.

Her transparent shoulder train of silk-net was embroidered with floral sprays of silk and silver thread embellished with pearls and mirror jewels. It was held in place by a magnificent tiara—something borrowed—from the collection of the Queen Mother.

Mark wore a scarlet and gold tunic with blue velvet collar and cuffs, light blue trousers with a white stripe down each leg, boots, spurs and a sword.

After the simple service the couple walked arm in arm between the rows of guests to the door of the abbey, chatting and smiling all the way.

No one could remember a royal bride acting this joyous way at her wedding.

The Queen's bodyguard, swords drawn, breastplates and helmets gleaming, clattered their matched chargers into Buckingham Palace and trotted out again, escorting the Queen, Princess Charles, the heir to the throne—celebrating his 25th birthday today—and Prince Andrew.

Four carriages of British royalty followed her and then came Princess Anne, radiant and clutching her father's arm, in the romantically named Glass Coach, an equipage so loosely sprung the Queen urged her daughter to take seasickness pills.

Republicans Questioning Nixon About Handling Of Watergate

IN THE MIDDLE — President Nixon, center, held a meeting with 75 Republican congressmen this morning to discuss the Watergate situation. Sen. Edward W. Brooke, left, R-Mass., told Nixon at a meeting with senators Tuesday he should resign. White House chief of staff Alexander M. Haig, right, indicated Nixon would be taking new steps to ease public concern over his role in the affair.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Seventy-five Republican congressmen questioned President Nixon today, to his face, about his handling of the Watergate scandal. At a similar session for some GOP senators Tuesday, Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., told Nixon he should resign.

The breakfast meeting in the White House State Dining Room for House members—first of three such meetings so all 179 GOP congressmen will have a first-hand chance to question him—was part of the President's new plan to meet "head-on" criticism over Watergate.

The first of the meetings to include all Republican members of Congress, as well as some Democrats, took place Tuesday night with 15 senators and Brooke said afterward he repeated to Nixon personally what he had said before—that he should resign in the national interest.

Brooke said the President was "very gracious" in rejecting the advice. "He said he understood my statement was not made with malice, but he said that would be an easy way out, and he was not going to take it."

The Brooke remark to Nixon apparently was one of the major points of what participants almost unanimously described as an extremely blunt, tough session. It lasted two hours, 15 minutes.

The President has a second meeting tonight with another third of the Republican senators, with the last group invited Thursday House members were invited in two more groups for breakfast sessions Thursday and Friday.

In the courts, hearings on the President's Watergate tapes were in suspension until later in the week. White House chief of staff Alexander M. Haig indicated new Nixon steps to assuage public concern over his role in Watergate would come following rulings by Judge John J. Sirica.

The Senate Watergate committee stiffened its demands Tuesday for a face-to-face meeting with the President and Haig said Nixon "is moving toward a solution to satisfy" the committee but added "we're moving slowly because the matter is in court."

The committee formally asked for a meeting with Nixon, with a transcript made of his answers to questions Brooke said the President told senators Tuesday night he had not made a decision on the request.

Two Watergate committee members were present at the Tuesday night meeting—Sens. Howard J. Baker, Tenn., and Edward J. Gurney, Fla., but another member, Lowell Weicker, Conn., said he would refuse to attend a similar session unless Nixon agreed to meet also with the committee.

Sen. Wallace F. Bennett, R-Utah, invited to tonight's second meeting with senators, said: "I have a lot of questions I'm going to ask him, but I can tell you I think things have turned the corner" in Nixon's favor because of what Bennett said was a change in White House atmosphere.

A Democrat who was at the White House Monday, Sen. John L. McClellan, Ark., said "there is a revival of optimism about the whole situation."

A Nixon critic, Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., one of those invited today, said Nixon's gesture at inviting open questioning was a "very important" change. "Before, the subject of Watergate was forbidden. Now it's being brought out into the open at last."

In Los Angeles, Sen. Barry M. Goldwater, R-Ariz., who goes to the meeting tonight, said Nixon would not resign and would not be impeached so "let's cool it." He said Nixon realized he had made mistakes and was trying to correct them.

One senator at Tuesday's meeting said: "If he's going to have meetings like this the rest of the week, he's one hell of a man."

It was one of the most phenomenal and stark sessions a senator could have with the President of the United States.

said Sen. Marlow W. Cook, R-Ky.

Must Satisfy Public
Sen. James L. Buckley, R-N.Y., said he "had the opportunity of telling the President directly that the critical fact with which he must cope is not to satisfy a court, but to satisfy a skeptical public."

"I hope the President will be able to meet the burden of proof, which clearly is still his," Buckley said.

Another senator, who declined to be named, said was "a very tough meeting for the President to go through. There were loud exchanges. He still has to go further, but he knows the next step is still his."

Committee Members Present
Two members of the Senate Watergate committee, which has twice asked for its own meeting with Nixon, with no response, were present. Committee Vice Chairman Howard Baker, Tenn., felt he got little new information. "I don't really think we got very far into the factual situation," Baker said.

The other committee member, Sen. Edward J. Gurney, Fla., said the senators "had a lot of input" during the session. "He needed to realize the gravity of the situation," Gurney said. "There was a lengthy discussion on the means to improve his credibility. The President took it well."

Housing Shortage Studied

What to do about Pampa's shortage of housing for low and middle income families was discussed at a meeting this forenoon of realtors, bank and loan association representatives, building contractors and industry officials with Chamber of Commerce and Pampa Industrial Foundation officers.

The shortage of housing was viewed from all angles by approximately 35 persons in the meeting presided over by Kay Fancher, chairman of the chamber's Industrial Committee.

After more than an hour of discussion it was generally agreed there is no immediate solution and those present were asked to digest this morning's contributions for further attention at a meeting early in December.

Lack of rental units for low and middle income families wishing to come to Pampa seemed to be the major shortage, according to several participants at today's session.

It also was generally conceded that the high cost of building and high interest rates has forced low income families from buying a home or building one of their own.

O. K. Gaylor told the group Pampa currently has only 90 houses listed for sale with the Multiple Listing Service. Fifteen of them are in the $5,000 class, 27 in the $10,000, 22 in the $15,000, ten in the $20,000, eight in the $25,000 and eight would sell for more than $25,000.

As the meeting ended the consensus was that no immediate relief is seen for the shortages of places to live in Pampa.

It was indicated a committee may be appointed in the future to launch a campaign to repair a number of old houses and make them available for rent or sale.

MARCHING FIELD DISCUSSED

Board Votes To Request Opinion On Bus Liability

By CLAY LIVELY
Members of the Pampa Independent School District today approved a recommendation to request an opinion from the Attorney General of Texas on the liability of the district and bus drivers employed by the system involved in accidents injuring a third party.

Board president Ben Sturgeon said he felt an opinion was necessary because "inroads are being made in the concept of governmental immunity every day."

Also discussed by the board was a request by Pampa High School Band Booster Club to proceed with plans to construct a paved marching field for the band.

The marching field expense will be divided equally between the school district and the booster club.

Projected cost for the field, to be located on the northeast corner of the practice field west of Harvester Stadium, is $11,310. That was the cost estimate submitted by a contractor nearly a year ago.

The board deferred any action on the request to build the field pending an updating of the cost estimate.

The proposed field would run 300 feet north and south and 175 feet east and west on the area west of the stadium.

According to an earlier agreement between the board and the booster club, the marching field could be used by the school system for school activities and as a parking area for football games.

The state of disrepair of typewriters used in the commercial department at the high school was again brought to the attention of the board by Sturgeon and PHS principal Don Walker. No action was taken on the matter.

An offer by Charles Martin of Canadian to sell or lease a lot at the corner of Harvester and Charles Sts. to the district was taken under advisement but no action was taken.

In routine business, the board approved the appointment of a textbook committee as recommended by Superintendent James F. Malone.

Board member Warren Hasse asked Malone to make available to the board various objections made to proposed textbooks by Texas citizens.

In routine business, the annual audit was accepted by the board and a report on both the swimming program and the other various athletic programs was given" by athletic director Ed Lehnick.

The purchase of mats to be used in elementary school physical education programs, although provided for in the current budget, was entered in the minutes at the request of Malone.

Hasse recommended that system physical education classes (eg. tumbling classes), music and band programs be utilized for entertainment at halftime of basketball games.

A swap out involving the use of school gymnasiums by the Optimist Club for their basketball program and Optimist Park by the high school for baseball games was approved by the board.

The high school will be able to charge admission to the baseball games and keep all proceeds, according to the agreement.

The request by the Concert Choir to enter the Arizona Invitational Music Festival at Tempe, Ariz. next spring was approved by the board, as was a request to use Carver Center Gym for a community project in December.

Consideration of minutes, due bills and invoices and the results of an executive session involving personnel held before the regular session were not completed at press time.

Dr. Malone said only one item, a resignation, was discussed at the personnel meeting.

Amarillo Representative Joins In Model Legislature Project

Another member of the Texas Legislature, State Rep. Bryan Poff of Amarillo, announced today he will work with Model Legislature II. State Rep. Phil Cates of Pampa said Saturday he will also participate.

Poff will serve as President of the Senate, a position filled by the lieutenant governor in the actual Texas Legislature. Cates will be the Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Pampa High School student body president, Wayne Bruce, will act as governor for the day. Model Legislature II will take place Nov. 17 at Pampa High School.

Poff, an Amarillo attorney, has served two terms in the Texas Legislature. He represents the 65th District comprised of Carson, Randall and Potter Counties.

He authored and passed legislation to assist with nurses' training at Northwest Texas Hospital and West Texas State University. He was also instrumental in having laws regulating scabies modified.

Poff served on the Business and Industry Committee and Intergovernmental Affairs Committee this year and was chairman of the Higher Education Subcommittee of the Education Committee.

REP. BRYAN POFF joins Model Legislature

In this first term he served on the Governmental Affairs Committee, Public Education Committee, Highways and Roads Committee, Motor Transportation Committee and the Committee on Judicial Districts. Poff is a graduate of the University of Texas Law School and Texas Christian University.

"We have had 192 students

Israel, Egypt Take Steps To Follow Terms

By United Press International
Israel and Egypt agreed today at a meeting in the Egyptian desert to begin carrying out terms of the four-day-old cease-fire accord on Thursday. The first steps included an Israeli turnover of checkpoints on the Cairo-Suez road to be followed immediately by an exchange of prisoners of war.

Israeli officials hailed the agreement reached at Kilometer 101 on the Cairo-Suez Road as the first major breakthrough towards making the Middle East cease-fire work.

It followed an uncompromisingly stubborn statement Tuesday by Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir who said "Israel will not budge from the Cairo-Suez highway. Not one gram of food and water will go through to Suez or to the 3rd Army if Israel does not get the prisoners back."

Registration and picking up packets of materials will begin at 8 a.m. Saturday at the high school.

The morning session will be devoted primarily to committee meetings where the students will draft legislation. The afternoon sessions will feature debates in a manner similar to the Texas Legislature. The public is invited to observe.

EX-UNIVERSITY PRESIDENT SAYS

Education Needs Personal Touch

By LARRY HOLLIS
"If I don't like some of the things that are going on in school, I don't need to get OUT of it. I need to get IN."

People need to get more involved with the educational systems of the country, stressed Dr. Andrew D. Holt, president emeritus of the University of Tennessee, at the Knife and Fork Club banquet meeting Tuesday night at Coronado Inn.

Speaking on "Education Common Sense," the retired but active educator and businessman asked three concessions from his audience.

Education is here to stay. What happens in the schools today is going to affect all of us. And all of us would like to do something to make the schools better.

Working from these viewpoints, he said, there are three major actions that should be taken by those wishing to improve education:

"Put our money where our mouth is when it comes to support of education. Become personally involved in the school programs. And do a better job of rearing your children."

people than ever before to educate," he said.

There are a number of reasons for this, including the fact that there are more people. But in addition, other factors are affecting the extent of education being undertaken today.

Students tend to stay in school longer. In addition to compulsory attendance laws, more students are also interested in the higher levels of learning — college and graduate study included.

Also, there is more emphasis being placed on junior colleges, vocational schools and adult education courses.

And all of these require more teachers, Dr. Holt noted.

"We're paying school teachers too little," he said. "We're going to have to pay the better salaries to get the best teachers."

He explained that people often talk about education but seem to be doing little about it. In relation to this fact, he urged others to become aware of what's happening in the schools and to the students.

usually small group of ragged, dirty, unkempt students often found on school campuses.

Many of these same "radicals," he said, have deep religious convictions, are kind and intelligent and "most of them will change."

He suggested that people take more interest in the operations of the various local school boards.

"If you don't want to run for the school board yourself," he advised, "then make sure you get the best people running for the offices."

He also suggested that parents with school children should serve on the Parents-Teachers Associations.

"At a time when parents and teachers should be getting together more often, they seem to get together less," he said, noting a decline in the numbers of PTA members.

But the most important facet of improving education is that of improving the students.

He again gave three steps for obtaining this:

time finding anybody to listen to them.

"Be sure you set your children the right example. Children pay more attention to what their parents do than to what they say."

He said he has found that the family that plays together, eats together, goes places together and talks together is the family that makes things happen in the world.

"We're not going to teach our children to be considerate if we ourselves have no consideration for others," Dr. Holt stated.

But above all, he said, is the need to learn to love God.

"If you love God, you've just got to love your neighbor," he said.

And if you care for your neighbor, you'll be interested in education at all levels.

Bill Hite presided over the meeting in the Starlight Room, with Dr. Lloyd V. Hamilton, pastor of First United Methodist Church, delivering the invocation. Roy Sparkman introduced Dr. Holt, with Sue Higdon providing the dinner music.

Ray Duncan, past K&F president, was given a plaque in appreciation of the work he did for the organization.

Kissinger Arrives For Japan Talks

TOKYO (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, who worked out a Middle East truce accord and improved relations with China during his worldwide campaign of personal diplomacy, arrived in Tokyo today for difficult talks with Japanese allies on the world energy crisis.

The visibly tired Kissinger went straight to his hotel for sleep before his first round of talks with the Japanese this afternoon. Japanese officials said the Arab oil cutbacks would be the main topic of discussion between Kissinger and America's major Asian ally.

Kissinger flew to Tokyo from Peking this morning after assuring Chinese leaders America intends to continue improving relations with Peking "no matter what happens in the United States."

U.S. officials said, however, a joint Chinese-American communique to be issued later today would be "general in nature" and ruled out establishment of full diplomatic relations between Washington and Peking in the immediate future.

Chinese policy has been to refuse full diplomatic relations with any nation maintaining an embassy in Taipei. The United States, with tens of thousands of troops and major military bases in Taiwan, has decided not to downgrade its representation in the immediate future, officials said.

Kissinger gave a hint of what the communique would contain when he reassured Chinese leaders in a toast at his farewell banquet Tuesday evening that "no matter what happens in the United States in the future, friendship with China remains a constant factor in American foreign policy."

Kissinger had only three hours sleep after the final meeting with Premier Chou En-lai Tuesday to conclude work on the joint Peking-Communique.

Next-to-Last Lap
The secretary of state's visit to Japan is the next-to-last lap of a trip which began in the Middle East with a peace breakthrough and ends in Seoul Friday.

His talks with Japanese leaders are important because they are related directly to the Middle East problem.

Japan, which receives more than 85 per cent of its oil from Arab nations, faces heavy fuel and industrial cutbacks because of the oil supply cutback to pro-Israeli nations.

Japanese Foreign Minister Masayoshi Ohira greeted Kissinger as he stepped from the plane from Peking. Newsmen at the airport asked Ohira what would be the major topic of conversation with Kissinger.

Under the two-tier system, national governments bought and sold gold among themselves at the official U.S. price of $42 an ounce while prices were freed on the open market, allowing the metal to seek its value on the basis of supply and demand.

The system sparked a boom in gold that sent prices spiraling around the world as speculators moved into the market.

Connally Asks Americans To Keep Patient

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — John B. Connally asked the American people Tuesday to be patient and wait until all the facts about Watergate are known before trying to get rid of President Nixon.

"We're seeing a great period of political stress unequalled certainly in our lifetime and perhaps in the history of the republic and everyone tends to panic about it," Connally told 3,000 delegates to the Southern Medical Association convention.

"We hear cries on all sides—resign, impeach, Well, is that really what we ought to do?" Connally said the courts should be allowed to handle the Watergate controversy.

"Shouldn't we be patient enough and kind enough to let it have time to work its way, to work its will through the judicial processes of the country, or when there's a loss of confidence do we indeed want a president to resign, do we want a member of Congress, do we want a mayor, do we want a governor, all to resign when the polls indicate he's not popular anymore?"

"If we do, why don't we adopt the British system?" The former three-term Democratic governor of Texas who became a Republican this year, told reporters he doesn't know on what grounds anyone seriously talks about impeachment.

"This is a very drastic step for the nation to take," he said. "It seems to me the charges have to be very clear and unequivocal and I don't know on what basis charges would be brought."

Connally also said the energy crisis and other shortages are going to change Americans' style of living.

"We're a wasteful people," he said. "We're an extravagant people. We've got a waste race and nation. We've used too much of the world's goods and too much of our resources in too extravagant a fashion."

"The fact is we're going to have to make hard choices because it's not just oil and gas. We're short of a great many things. We represent 6 per cent of the population of the world yet we consume over 30 per cent of all the raw materials consumed by all the peoples of the world. Now this ratio is going to have to change."

London's Gold Bullion Market Value Declines

LONDON (UPI) — The value of gold fell dramatically on the big London bullion market today, wiping out millions of dollars invested by speculators in the biggest decline in prices since the introduction of the two-tier gold system five years ago.

The market, responding to the announcement that the United States and six European countries have now junked this system, initially devalued the metal by $7.25 an ounce, but prices recovered part of the loss as the day progressed.

By midmorning, gold was officially fixed at $90.85, down $5.90 from Tuesday's closing but improved over an opening price of $89.50.

Dealers attributed the decline to fears that the seven countries releasing their gold reserves from the two-tier system will now start selling gold on the free market.

If the United States participated in such a move with its big gold reserves, the price would be driven down even further, they said.

Under the two-tier system, national governments bought and sold gold among themselves at the official U.S. price of $42 an ounce while prices were freed on the open market, allowing the metal to seek its value on the basis of supply and demand.

The system sparked a boom in gold that sent prices spiraling around the world as speculators moved into the market.

Mainly About People

The Planned Parenthood clinic session, with a medical doctor in attendance, will be at 10 a.m. Thursday, in the clinic at 615 E. Albert. Women attending this clinic session receive counseling in family planning, a medical examination, including a PAP test, and a TB test. All these services are free of charge.

AIME TOLD Drilling Prospects Trouble Landman

By CLAY LIVELY
The changing role of the landman in the oil and gas industry was the topic of an after dinner speech given by Max Pischel, Jr., district landman for Phillips Petroleum Co., last night at the monthly meeting of the Panhandle Chapter, Society of Petroleum Engineers (AIME).

Pischel said that unlike in the early days of the gas industry, finding drilling prospects is not easy because few sections of land are now available for leasing.

Buying leases is also a more selective process now than it was in the early days, Pischel said. Speaking about Phillips' policy, he said, leases are not bought "on the come."

If a lease is purchased, Pischel said, you can be reasonably certain the company buying it is sure it will find oil or gas on the site. "When the lease is bought, the idea is to drill a well," Pischel said.

Pischel also went into some detail on the procedures involved in obtaining a lease and some of the difficulties involved in securing title — liens, mortgages, etc. — which must be worked out.

Also pointed out was the increasing cost to the petroleum industry in obtaining leases. As an example, Pischel told of one lease which cost Phillips $5 an acre the first time it was renewed and $50 the second time around. He also said the chances of Phillips renewing it a third time were "very remote."

Pischel pointed out to the gathering that landmen have become involved in a movement to get professional status for their profession and said the business has become pretty complex, with several universities offering majors in the field.

With regard to the problems involved in finding, and then obtaining leases for, land which might produce oil or gas, Pischel said he has concluded that neither leasing land for prospective drilling nor geology (which supposedly finds producing areas) are "exact sciences."

Pischel has been with Phillips as a landman for 25 years. He is a member of the American Association of Petroleum Landmen, The Panhandle Association of Petroleum Landmen, the Oklahoma Bar Association and Phi Delta Phi legal fraternity.

He holds both B.A. and J.D. degrees from the University of Oklahoma.

The AIME meets once a month in the Pampa Club.

Petroleum Council Supports Rationing

HOUSTON (UPI) — The National Petroleum Council's Committee on Emergency Preparedness has released the contents of a report it is sending to the Secretary of the Interior that recommends immediate gas rationing.

"By immediately, I mean get started immediately," Committee Chairman Carrol Bennet said Tuesday. "We think it should take at least until the first of the year to get the machinery rolling."

He said gas should be rationed on a priority basis with industries getting the top priority.

"High priority should be given to providing the fuel needed by those industries most vital to the economy," Bennet said.

"Critical human needs must, of course, receive high priority," he said. "However, the public would undoubtedly prefer some discomfort and inconvenience to idle plants and high employment."

Bennet said fuel for pleasure driving would be the biggest cutback in any rationing program.

Churches Hold Weekly Class On Bible Study

For eight years Calvary Baptist Church and the Central Baptist Church have co-sponsored an after-school Bible class for children, known as "The Children's Hour."

The group meets every Thursday from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. at Calvary Baptist Church, 824 S. Barnes.

"The Life of David" is the present Bible study and is being taught with the aid of flannelgraph. Children are encouraged to memorize a Bible verse each week.

Eight teachers volunteer their services for approximately 160 children attending each week.

Both churches provide buses for transportation. All children are invited and welcome. Further information may be obtained by contacting either church.

United Parcel Service Opens Pampa Branch

United Parcel Service recently opened a branch in Pampa at the corner of Atchison and Cuyler Sts.

The branch office was opened Nov. 5 with Ken Stanger of the Amarillo office as supervisor.

Six trucks and seven employees are involved in the operation of the service in Pampa.

United Parcel Service is the company which went into business several years ago in direct competition with the parcel post division of the U.S. postal system. Its operations have spread greatly in recent years, according to published reports.

Scouts Plan School Night

The Santa Fe District of the Boy Scouts of America is sponsoring a school night for scouting at 7 p.m. Thursday in the cafeteria at St. Vincent de Paul Catholic School.

All boys ages 11 to 14 who are not already involved in scouting are urged to attend with their parents to find out about the improved scouting program and what it can do for them.

The general public is also invited.

PROFESSOR CLAIMS Oil Firms Need Government Aid

DALLAS (UPI) — The president of the Geological Society of America said Tuesday oil companies need financial incentives from the government to find new oil reserves.

Dr. John C. Maxwell said in an interview at a geological society meeting attended by more than 3,000 Earth scientists that there are fairly large reserves yet to be found—probably off both U.S. coasts and in Alaska.

"I would suspect there are also places in the United States proper where if there were some financial incentives to do so, we'd get much more active

FORT WORTH, Tex. (UPI) — To join Uglies Unlimited you need $2 and a face that would stop a train.

"We open our doors to secretaries with pimples, stewardesses with freckles, hostesses with lumps, barbers without hair and businessmen with hook noses, but most of all we embrace the ill-made masses wallowing in self pity," says Danny McCrory, the founder of the organization. "Membership is $2."

But Uglies Unlimited is not a social club geared to providing happiness for the habitual wallflowers of the world. The organization was formed to protest the emphasis placed on the beautiful people. The men with the wide brimmed hats, thin mustaches smoking little cigars that attract only flat-bellied, fair-skinned lasses in skimpy bikinis that soak up the sun around the pools at singles apartments.

The organization abhors the newspaper advertisements in general and the want ads in particular, the ones that say "Wanted attractive receptionist" or "Pretty secretary needed."

Uglies Unlimited staged its first formal protest Tuesday. Eighteen of them paraded back and forth in front of the American Airlines ticket office protesting the practice of seeking only the best looking applicants for jobs as flight hostesses.

Walt Kistler, director of flight attendant recruitment for the airlines, said he has nothing to apologize for.

"These are standards with the airlines," he said. "We have these requirements for the same reason there are job descriptions and qualifications for any kind of work. We don't expect beauty or perfection, but there are limits beyond which we don't go."

But McCrory said the fight to find peace for the ugly people of this world will not end.

"We just want to be accepted for who we are instead of what we look like," McCoy said.

wildcatting and we'd find more reserves." Maxwell, a professor of geology at the University of Texas at Austin, said.

Even if accelerated oil exploration begins today, Maxwell said it would take four to six years before new oilfields can be developed and petroleum delivered to the refinery.

"The best thing now would be to get on the stick and make some very energetic plans to encourage oil and gas exploration and for moving over rapidly into using coal and possibly oil shale," he said.

"Certainly some kind of economic incentives for drilling and for production is needed. That's the only way to do it. There's just no other way to do it."

Maxwell said the nation has enough coal and oil shale reserves to meet actual energy needs for the immediate future. But they both have economic and environmental drawbacks, he said.

"So if we really wish, we could guarantee our future energy needs for decades to come simply by making the economic and legal actions necessary to start using these materials," he said.

Mother Helps Sons Finance Drug Habits

HOUSTON (UPI) — Doris Elaine Gee, a mother of seven, told police Tuesday she took money from coin-operated machines to finance her heroin habit and the habit of her two sons.

"Ricky has a $150 a day habit and Robert has a $100 a day habit," she said. "I have a $75 a day habit."

The woman said her daughter's 25-year-old boy friend introduced the family to heroin in 1969. She said she injected the drug into a muscle at first but later began mainlining.

Mrs. Gee said she served as the lookout while her sons and accomplices broke into various vending machines located in apartment complexes scattered throughout the city. While she robbed the machines, a friend cared for her other children, aged 11, 9, 7 and 3 months.

They were arrested last Thursday ending their eight-week crime spree.

This hungry world

The protein crisis: 1 dead child in 4

By Aileen Claire
(Second in a series)

NEW YORK — (NEA) — While food scientists and food processors congratulate each other because they can "spin" meat imitations (analogs) from soy protein, can grow edible high quality protein using yeast and bacteria on urine, manure, petroleum products, paper or garbage, 10,000 people in the world die every day from malnutrition.

This is primarily due to the lack of adequate protein in their diet. That makes 3.5 million people a year who never will know the joys of dining on egg-less eggs, shrimp-less shrimp or meat-less roasts.

According to the United Nations, 25 to 30 per cent of all children die before their fifth birthday. Those who do live are stunted physically and mentally for life because they suffer from protein-deficiency diseases such as kwashiorkor.

Moreover, some 40 million non-starvation deaths a year are related to hunger. Crippling and killing infectious diseases strike down those weakened by a constantly poor diet from the day they were born.

How can this be? About 118.7 million tons of protein are produced yearly throughout the world, according to John A. Pino, director of agricultural sciences for The Rockefeller Foundation. Theoretically, this should be enough for the present world population.

But with the world's skyrocketing population, even this theoretical sufficiency is fast disappearing. The world is on the brink of a protein crisis.

The rude fact is that as developing countries pull themselves up by their sandal straps, the rich get richer and the poor get poorer (or, as the lyric originally was, get children).

Pino explains that as income rises in the small, relatively affluent sectors of the population in such countries as India, Pakistan, Bangladesh, Malaysia, Colombia, Peru and some African states, the gross increase in consumption of meat, milk and other animal proteins masks a backlash effect on the poor, who suffer most from malnutrition.

wheat, corn, rice.

For example, as middle and upper income groups demand beef, pork, poultry or lamb, more acreage is planted in animal feed grains cutting down the supply of human food grains and raising their prices.

Even at an optimistic rate of 2 per cent annual increase in income, it would take 100 years for those in the less than $100-a-year group to afford enough animal protein just to meet their minimum needs.

The answer, Pino believes, is to improve the quality of cereal grains which are the staple for the world's poor. The Green Revolution which led to the planting of high yielding wheat varieties in Mexico, part of India and Pakistan, Pino says, was thought by many to be the hungry world's manna. It was merely a seed for other projects, world food experts now admit.

Pino believes the key to righting the protein imbalance rests with improving the cereals and introducing more legume — fava beans, cow peas for lowland tropics, pigeon pea, lentils, soybeans and, a most complete food, the chick pea (garbanzo) — to combine with the corn, rice or wheat now eaten.

Pino's experience with Indians in Mexico has been that it is best not to change the look or taste of food which they are accustomed to eating. Adding lysine to corn genetically raises its protein quality without changing its look.

In underdeveloped countries, he continues, changing the cereal composition, improving yield per acre and improving quality of legumes must also be done so that it does not require that the already poor native buy something extra.

In Mexico, for example, Pino is encouraged that many natives are double-cropping by growing vine beans with their maize. The corn-bean diet that results is a rather complete, if monotonous, one.

Higher yielding, higher quality protein cereal grains grown locally also will improve the future lot of children in countries where they exist on rice, casava root or banana root, low in healthful nutrients. It is almost impossible for a person, especially a child, to consume enough food in bulk of casava or banana root to get his protein requirement.

Taboos or traditions also block many well-meaning efforts to change eating patterns of the impoverished and uneducated. For example, in most hurting nations, the male adult gets the most and highest quality food because he is the laborer, then comes pregnant and lactating women and at the end of the food line are the children under 5 who need the largest amounts of protein. In India beef still remains taboo;

Muslims eat no pork; in Africa some tribes frown upon women eating eggs, even when they are available.

The development of engineered foods from soybeans, algae, fermentation and fish meal concentrates are not the panacea to world hunger and malnutrition many would like them to be, Pino points out.

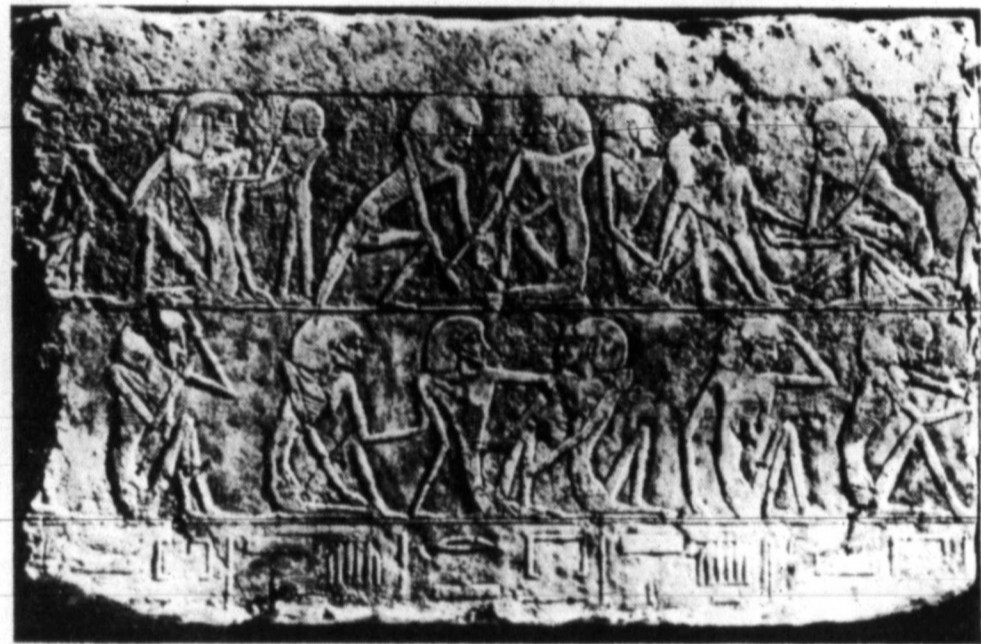

"People who have no money can't buy these for themselves even if they would eat the resulting foods which most of them won't. They can't buy them to feed animals either. These items must be made available free from their own governments."

A major infusion of protein for the world depends on the eradication of the tsetse fly. Currently, one-third of the African continent and much of Latin America are closed to cattle farming because of this pest. Otherwise, the land could support 120 million head of cattle.

Even though Pino, and other food scientists, nutritionists and economists sound a pessimistic note, Pino admits that he is optimistic that right steps are being taken so that in the next decade 10,000 people a day will not die for lack of nutritionally sound food.

(NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

THE EXPERIENCE OF MASS HUNGER pre-dates the earliest traces of civilization. Even now, when man has the know-how to eliminate hunger from the earth, 10,000 people still die every day from malnutrition. Here a relief from an ancient Egyptian temple shows emaciated peasants dying of hunger during a famine, some so weak they have to be supported by relatives.

THE UN-JOLLY TRUTH

There's No Joy For Fat Persons

By RICHARD M. HARNETT
HAYWARD, Calif. (UPI) — "The world is made for people in small sizes," says Jim Fries, who is down from 587 pounds to a trim 181.

Now that he is a relatively skinny man, Fries wants the world to know the "un-jolly" truth about being fat.

"Fat people have to be jolly," he said. "Everybody expects it. But jolly we are not. It's misery. It's lonely."

"People never invite you out, or over for dinner. They don't know what to fix, or how much."

He said it is embarrassing, unpleasant and expensive to have to buy two tickets to a football game to be comfortable and to pay $18 for a shirt.

Discouraging Moments
There are very discouraging moments in your life, he said. In a casino at Reno he was seized, frisked and had a lot of explaining to do for the FBI. "It seems a fat man had robbed a bank that day. I didn't know all fat men looked alike. Now I know what discrimination is all about."

Life as a fat man is over for him, says Jim Fries, at age 30.

About 30 months ago, he looked at himself in a mirror — all 587 pounds. He was so unhappy with what he saw that he went on a diet of one 29-cent TV dinner a day. That got him down to 340 pounds in 10 months.

"I liked being 340. But that wasn't enough. I wanted to be skinny," said Fries. He underwent an intestinal bypass operation in which a large section of his intestine was disconnected.

Now, a year after the operation, he is "tremendously happy" because he can do things like bend down to tie his shoes, wear normal sized clothing, and "sit down and have a lap."

The Road was "Pure Hell"
The road from 587 to 181 was "pure hell," he says. "I was miserable, a nervous wreck. I was hungry all the time. I was constantly jumping down people's throats. No one could live with me."

An understanding boss on his construction job put him off to work by himself during this period.

"The biggest thing is self-confidence," said Fries. "My whole personality has changed." He has started his own construction business.

Fries, who lives with his mother, blames no one but himself for getting fat in the first place. "I ate too much all my life," he said. "It seemed like I could breathe air and it turned to fat."

Now, he says: "I'm disgusted with fat people, and I can say that because I was fat. It is pitiful for people to let themselves go like that."

The Almanac

By United Press International
Today is Wednesday, Nov. 14, the 318 day of 1973 with 47 to follow.

The moon is approaching its last quarter.

The morning stars are Mercury and Saturn.

The evening stars are Venus, Mars and Jupiter.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Scorpio.

Robert Fulton, inventor of the steamboat, was born Nov. 14, 1765.

On this day in history: In 1832, the first horse-drawn street car made its appearance in New York City. It carried 30 passengers.

In 1851, Herman Melville's novel "Moby Dick" was published.

In 1940, German planes bombed Coventry, in southern England, destroying or damaging 69,000 of the 75,000 buildings in the city.

In 1972, for the first time in its 76-year history, the Dow Jones industrial stock averages closed above 1,000. Also on that day, former Congressman Martin Dies, first chairman of the House Un-American Activities Committee, died at the age of 71.

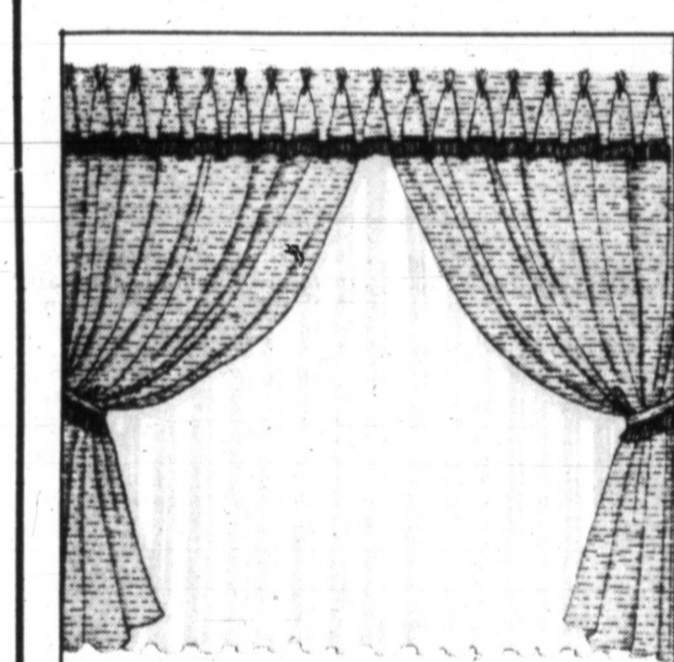

A thought for the day: Swedish inventor Charles Francis Kettering said, "A man must have a certain amount of intelligent ignorance to get anywhere."

TV In Review

By RICK DU BROW
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) —

Notes to watch television by: ABC-TV's broadcast of the movie "Airport" this past Sunday got sensational overnight ratings in the New York City and Los Angeles areas. Another movie that has been a huge box office success, "The Poseidon Adventure," will be presented by ABC-TV next season.

The same network is also planning for next season a series based on the motion picture "Paper Moon," which earned acclaim for its depiction of the adventures of a charming young con man and a precocious nine-year-old girl in the depression era. The series will also be called "Paper Moon." Burt Reynolds will star in a group of prime time NBC-TV specials in the 1974-75 season.

An hour documentary about the expense of higher education in America, "Colleges and the Middle Class," airs on NBC-TV Dec. 16. "The People of People's China," an hour ABC-TV documentary, is set for Dec. 1. The late President John Kennedy will be the subject of NBC-TV's two-hour "Today" program Nov. 22, the day that marks ten years since his assassination. NBC radio also will broadcast two programs entitled "J.F.K. — A Remembrance" the same day. CBS has reinstated its instant analyses "immediately following appearances of the President and others of public importance, when in its own judgment such service seems desirable and adequate preparation is feasible."

A Drama About Lombardi
A drama about the late Vince Lombardi, "Portrait: Legend in Granite," will be presented by ABC-TV Dec. 14, with Ernest Borgnine portraying the great football coach and Colleen Dewhurst as his wife Marie. ABC-TV's honored "Wide World of Sports" series, a weekly Saturday entry, will, as planned, offer added Sunday editions for the early part of next year — from Jan. 6 through April 14. Last week's CBS-TV drama-music-and-comedy special starring Carroll O'Connor, who headlines video's top-rated series "All in the Family," fared poorly in the national ratings. The 100th anniversary of the birth of the incomparable blues composer W.C. Handy is scheduled to be marked in a special salute on the "Today" program Friday, with planned guests including his brother Charles, 90, and pianist Earl "Fatha" Hines.

Marshall Efron's Illustrated, Simplified and Painless Sunday School, a seven-part series for children featuring the talented character actor, debuts on CBS-TV Dec. 2, and a network executive says: "The series is a means of teaching values and transmitting basic religious information to kids in a way that is entertaining, informative, sometimes comical and, we hope, occasionally inspiring."

Efron, according to CBS-TV, "will serve as the central character (and) reflect the modern child's sophistication, humor and iconoclasm, in his own witty and expressive way. He will tell Bible stories, take field trips and show films "that try to bring viewers a step beyond most children's programs to a mood of fantasy and awe," adds an executive of the seven-part project.

"What we hope to convey above all is that the goodness of the world can be salvaged because it has been salvaged before."

The non-commercial television network's lengthy nighttime broadcasts of the Senate Watergate hearings have caused a postponement of some publicized series on that coast-to-coast outlet. For example, a nine-part production of "War and Peace," originally set to begin Nov. 6, now will have its premiere next Tuesday. And a group of "Hollywood Television Theatre" plays, previously expected to start Nov. 7, will bow in instead Nov. 21, with the opening work to be George Bernard Shaw's "The Man of Destiny," starring Stacy Keach and Samantha Eggar. The second play in this series, written by well known actor Gardner McKay and titled "Me," is, according to an advance storyline, about "a family's consuming need to escape their own problems and insecurities by 'sacrificing' themselves for the 17-year-old retarded son," and will be seen Nov. 28. McKay also staged and codirected his play, which had been set for Nov. 14, and stars Geraldine Fitzgerald.

William McKinley of Ohio was the 25th President of the United States from 1897 to 1901.

Investment Chatter

NEW YORK (UPI) — Standard & Poor has recommended a wait-and-see attitude toward the stock market in its latest outlook analysis letter. "Pitfalls abound in the present investment environment," it said. "The market seems prone to emotional excesses in both directions, and we would defer making new commitments for the time being."

The Dines Letter investment guide, which rejected the market's rally in September and October as genuinely bullish, said the selling spree of the past two weeks had proved its point.

There is no change in our stubborn insistence of recent weeks that this is a bear market, interest rates will remain high, Wall Street firms are on the brink of disaster, and that energy and food crises are just ahead of us," the letter said.

Corporate dividend payments are likely to increase next year as a result of the government's liberalized guidelines for such hikes, the Abraham & Co. newsletter, Trend & Value said. The letter said this year's disbursements will be somewhat less than 40 per cent of corporate net profits, but those of 1974 may approach 47 per cent.

The Timings newsletter said President Nixon's removal from office by any means, including resignation, would be unlikely to more than temporarily interrupt the stock market's basic trend at that time. The letter said it based its findings on a study of market reactions to sudden and major presidential changes in recent years as well as evidence that the fate of a president does not have longterm influence on the market.

The first European settlement in the United States was San Gabriel, N.M., which was colonized by Juan de Onate and 200 other Spaniards in 1598.

Wants wife filled out, not 'bursting at seams'

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1973 By Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I have been married for five years. I've always told her that I prefer well-filled out girls to skinny ones. My wife is really overweight, but knowing that I like a well-padded body has given her an excuse to get sloppy fat.

She is 5 feet 2, weighs about 170 pounds, and is still gaining. I've hinted that she should start reducing, but to no avail. How can I get it across to her that I would like her to lose about 40 pounds? AIR FORCE HUSBAND

DEAR HUSBAND: Quit hinting, and tell her that by "well-filled out" you do not mean, "bursting at the seams." Tell her, too, that carrying around all that excess weight is unhealthy, and you'd be heartbroken were she to drop dead of high blood pressure or heart trouble, because then you'd be forced to replace her with a younger, slimmer, healthier woman. [THAT should do it!]

DEAR ABBY: I would like to get the opinion of some hairdressers. My mother passed away, and a few hours later I got a phone call from a hairdresser saying she had heard the sad news, and wanted to come to the funeral home to fix my mother's hair. She said she thought so much of Mom she felt that this was the last favor she could do for her. I thanked her, and told her I appreciated her generosity. [No mention was made of money.]

After the funeral, this hairdresser called the funeral home and demanded $15. Of course I saw to it that she got her money, but I really think it is a shame that a person would call and offer her services as a "friend," and then ask for money.

She later said it was against the law to do that kind of work for free. Is it? JUST WONDERING

DEAR JUST: If it is, it's news to me. Hairdressers?

DEAR ABBY: My husband says he thinks I don't like being married. I asked him why, and he said: "Because of the comments you make to single people, like, 'You're not m'ing anything,' or, 'You don't know when you're well off.'"

I know this sounds like a reflection on my marriage, but I'm not speaking of mine. I'm referring to the majority of marriages I read about in your column, and also to the statistics.

As a single person, I had no debts and was able to save a large sum of money. Since I've been married, I haven't saved a dollar and we always are in debt.

How can I convince my husband that I am satisfied with my marriage? I explained to him that I was not referring to our marriage, but only to marriages in general. BIG MOUTH

DEAR BIG MOUTH: You will have a tough time convincing him—and also me!

CONFIDENTIAL TO E. S. H.: Thank you for making me an honorary senior citizen of the city of San Diego, Cal. It's a first for me. I hadn't considered myself ready for it. But if you take 'em at age 50, I qualified five years ago!

Liberated blue collar wives are movement's surprise

By Helen Hennessy
NEA Women's Editor

NEW YORK (NEA) — Some 40 million strong and representing almost 60 per cent of the adult female population, blue collar wives — after decades of being one of the most stable, unchanging groups in American society — are emerging as a new social, political and economic force to be reckoned with. This is a fact strongly indicated by a comprehensive study recently taken by Social Research, Inc., in Chicago.

Both the greatest success and the strongest critic of the Women's Lib movement, the working-class woman has been profoundly influenced by Women's Lib. Liberation and consumerism both of which the authors of the study conclude are "deep running currents of social change."

Announcing the findings from the nationwide study of blue collar wives in eight major metropolitan areas, Dr. Burleigh B. Gardner, Chairman of the Board of Social Research, said, "These changes are of such a character and are proceeding so rapidly that we feel justified in referring to this working-class woman as the awakened giant. Our society will never be the same again."

Most pervasive and dramatic of the changes in the attitudes of the awakened blue collar wife are her views of her role as wife, mother and homemaker.

"For years research has shown that her life was captive of the triangle of husband, children and home. As late as 1965 changes in the working class housewife were very slow and important changes were not expected," Dr. Gardner said.

"Today these women are rejecting such limitations. They feel women should have a choice of careers, home-making — or both."

Among the more dramatic manifestations of her changed attitudes documented in the study are: A shift in career values. Almost a third say they would not choose homemaking as a career if they could go back to being 15 years old.

There is a new desire for independence. Eight years ago, 48 per cent thought that a personal second car was a luxury. Today the same number see it as a necessity.

In 1965 the majority saw the ideal family as having four children. Today 71 per cent in their early 20s say they plan to have two or fewer children.

A new interest in herself as a person rather than as an instrument for the care of family and home is reflected in a shift of priorities from wanting products that helped her mother and older sister serve their families to those that will free her from housework or which contribute to her own comfort and gratification — a dishwasher instead of a stove, an air conditioner instead of a sewing machine.

She has a new interest in community and jobs. She is expressing a marked interest in the larger world and no longer confining herself to solely domestic matters.

"This is the most significant change we have witnessed in more than a quarter of a century of probing the attitudes of blue collar wives," Gardner added. The implications of the research are far reaching for business, labor, government and education.

While working-class women share with Women's Lib the conviction that women should have equality with men in pay, in choice of jobs, in opportunities and not be restrained just because they are women, the study shows that these women vociferously resent what they feel are efforts by Women's Lib advocates to "put down" the role of wife, mother and homemaker.

"She still feels that her desire for husband, children and home is important to a satisfactory life. But she doesn't want to be enslaved by them," Dr. Gardner cautioned.

The study showed that the new working-class woman is much more likely to become involved in those community issues that affect her — air pollution from a nearby factory or the quality of education in local schools than in "intellectual" causes such as endangered wildlife species.

Dr. Gardner noted that as a consumer the working-class woman is thoroughly enjoying the fruits of prosperity resulting from higher blue collar incomes and a two-wage-earner family. But at least half of these women are critical of big business as an institution believing that big business does not charge fair prices and forgets the public welfare.

Because blue collar wives in growing numbers are working outside the home, their economic influence is growing.

With her new level of income and growing independence the working-class woman is considerably less interested in seeing her family "move up" to middle class values and lifestyles. She is too busy enjoying her freedom and opportunities to be envious of the world of status or wealth. She still wants to keep up with the Joneses, but the Jones family is now located immediately next door rather than in the "classy" neighborhood across town.

Her presence in the job market holds significant consequences for labor unions, according to Dr. Gardner.

"With more women demanding jobs it will often be in direct competition with the working class man. This in turn will present a dilemma for the unions. Either they make room for the women or they force serious conflicts."

GERMANY'S SUPERHIGHWAY GROWS

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

THURSDAY, NOV. 15
Your birthday today: You will be way ahead if you put off new ventures until at least the beginning of 1974; the interim is best used for preparations. Today's natives have generally high competence for politics, often are much admired by opposite sex.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Do what you can on your own; your ideas run ahead of those of your colleagues. Check your budget.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Home and local social connections gain stronger meanings, involve more activity. Tact is an essential part of the whole situation.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Enlisting support of important people works much better than making another circuit of those who have tired of your regular stories.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: If you are steward for other people's resources, the most important thing you can do now is redeem that responsibility faithfully.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Friends and relatives get into the act on your behalf, turn everything around nicely if you will let them.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Satisfactory results come with persistent, gentle persuasion rather than impersonal demands. Self-improvement is key to success.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Be sure you do not raise additional issues needlessly. One impasse is quite enough to resolve at any one time, particularly at home.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Strong as today's movements seem, they are in the long run temporary expedients, and best treated as such. Watch expenditures.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: You can triumphantly pursue social opportunity wherever it exists, but expect business activities to encounter resistance, slack cooperation, disinterest.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: The low point in your energy cycle passes, and you are on your way up with a better idea of how to go about current enterprises.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Check for accuracy. Display your highest good humor in the doing. There can be no successful once-over-lightly for the moment.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Hurrying merely means you skip some item you must go back over later when no time is available. Do first things first—and right.

Silver Anniversary

Rev. and Mrs. John F. Blue, Albuquerque, N.M., former Pampa residents, were honored recently on the occasion of their 25th wedding anniversary, in fellowship hall of Fellowship Baptist Church in Albuquerque, where he now serves as pastor. The couple was married Sept. 19, 1948 in the home of Mrs. E.G. Gordon, 320 N. Ballard, Pampa. Rev. Blue entered the ministry in 1950 and served as associate pastor for ten years for his father-in-law, the late Rev. H.M. Hutchinson. The couple has two children, J. Frank, a junior at the University of New Mexico, and Teresa Ann, a senior at Sandia High School in Albuquerque. Approximately 200 church members and friends attended the event.

Roger Trezel and Pierre Jais of France are one of the great partnerships. Unlike most expert pairs they do use psychics. This hand was played in a 1958 match between England and France.

Jais who sat East decided that desperate measures were called for after Trezel passed as dealer and North opened the bidding. Hence, his one spade overcall.

South doubled and Jais ran out to one notrump. If South had elected to double again Jais would have had to show his heart suit, such as it was but South bid two notrump.

From that point on North and South climbed to six spades on fairly reasonable bidding. There was only one fly in their ointment. Trezel opened the queen of hearts. Jais returned the suit to force dummy to ruff whereupon South took the wrong view in spades and wound up one trick short.

North was in six diamonds at one time. That contract would wheel in without a finesse as would six clubs. It appeared as if the Jais psychic had really paid off.

It didn't. At the other table East passed after North opened one club. South bid a spade; North two clubs; South three diamonds; North four spades. South four notrump; North five diamonds and South six spades. The same queen of hearts was led; the same unfortunate play in spades and the same result, so all the psychic got was a stand-off.

Reggie Named Most Valuable

NEW YORK (UPI) — "There are lots of things I can do in the game that I haven't done."

An aging star, perhaps? A retiring veteran, maybe? No, just the small-boy enthusiasm of 27-year-old Reggie Jackson, selected unanimously Tuesday as the American League's Most Valuable Player this year, and thinking he still has more to do to prove himself.

Jackson, only the seventh player in the 43-year history of MVP awards to win without a dissenting vote, led the American League with 32 homers and 117 runs batted in this year and named MVP of the Oakland A's second straight World Series victory as well.

But, Jackson said, he still has plenty to do, and he enumerated some of his goals.

"I have not hit 300 yet," he told a news conference in Oakland. "I have not hit 50 home runs. I have not stolen 40 bases. I have not won two MVP's. And I have not been on three world championship teams."

"...Until I do them, I will be shortchanging myself, the fans, the owners, the team and everybody else." Jackson added "I would like to be the best. Whether I can or not remains to be seen."

Named first on every ballot cast by a 24-man committee—two in each AL city—of the Baseball Writers Association of America, Jackson polled 336 points to easily outdistance runnerup Jim Palmer of the Baltimore Orioles.

Palmer, the league's Cy Young Award winner as the top pitcher after four successive 20-victory seasons, drew 11 second-place votes and 172 points while centerfielder Amos Otis of Kansas City, a 300 hitter, had 112.

Rod Carew of Minnesota, who won his third batting title this year with a .350 average, Detroit reliever John Hiller and Oakland third baseman Sal Bando each had 83 points.

The previous unanimous selections were Denny McLain of Detroit (1968), Orlando Cepeda, St. Louis—the only unanimous winner ever in the NL—(1967), Frank Robinson, Baltimore (1966), Mickey Mantle, New York Yankees (1956), Al Rosen, Cleveland (1953) and Hank Greenberg, Detroit (1955).

Harvesters Should Be Contender, Start Play Against Hereford Herd

By PAUL SIMS

The end of football season always signals the start of four months of basketball and in Pampa that usually means the start of a successful year on the hardwoods.

That should be the case this year, that is, if the Harvesters perform as expected as one of the top three teams in 3-AAAA (coaches' prediction).

The Harvesters, district co-champs along with Amarillo Tascosa last season, take to the floor at 8 p.m. Saturday in Hereford against the Herd, a team notoriously tough at home and with a reputation of giving Pampa a battle wherever the two schools meet.

Pampa, 20-10 last year and a 52-49 loser to the Tascosa Rebels in the district championship game, is along with the Rebels and Amarillo Caprock, one of the top teams in the loop. "We'll be a contender; we have size and we'll be a good shooting ball club. Defense? Well, that remains to be seen," said Pampa coach Robert McPherson, in his fourth year with the Harvesters.

Defense was last season's strength as Pampa yielded only 52.2 points per game while scoring 57.4. "Defense takes a lot of pride and work. If this year's group takes as much pride defensively as last year's group, we'll be good," said the head coach.

McPherson lists a good attitude, size and scoring ability as Harvester attributes prior to this season.

Six-six senior Randy Warner and 6-3 junior Billy Wilbon, last year's Sophomore of the Year in 3-AAAA, give the Harvesters height under the basket. Warner averaged 6.5 points a game last season and hauled down 5.4 rebounds while playing in all 30 games. Wilbon averaged over four rebounds and nine points last year.

Another spot expected to see much playing time is 6-3 senior Darrell Carey, who was a Shocker last season.

The Harvesters will run a two-post offense. Possible starters at forward in that offense include 6-2 senior Ricky Beesley and 6-0 junior Robert Young. Beesley played in 22 games last year and scored 84 points.

Ray Powell, a 5-10 senior, and Keith Samples, a 5-11 senior, are McPherson's top two guard candidates. Both saw a good deal of action for the Harvesters last season.

The Herd, who fell to Pampa, 60-48 and then beat the Harvesters, 59-49 last year, feature the most talented post in the area in 6-7 Greg Vanderzee, a third-year starter and all-district last season. Vanderzee averaged 11 points and 11 rebounds last season to pace the Herd to a 23-10 overall mark.

"We're depending on too many young kids because we lost nine of 11 varsity players to graduation. Our younger players are going to have to become scorers and take the pressure off Vanderzee," said Barry Arnwine, Hereford's first-year coach. Arnwine, an assistant at Hereford for three years, moved up this season after Ron Mayberry accepted the head coaching job at Odessa Permian.

Five-eleven senior Dennis Noggler, who led JV scoring by averaging 12 points last year, and either 5-11 junior Junior Morales or 6-3 junior Lynn Tarr will start at the forward slots for Arnwine. Seniors Andrew Wingert, 5-10, and Mike Albiar, 5-11, will start at guards.

"We have a great deal of respect for Pampa. Pampa traditionally has the best program in the Panhandle," said Arnwine.

Hereford hosts the Canyon Eagles Friday.

Mallory--UPI Best Coach After Game

OXFORD, Ohio (UPI) — Bill Mallory is "rockin' the cradle" and he couldn't be happier.

Mallory is head football coach at Miami University, which has spawned such outstanding coaches as Woody Hayes, Ara Parseghian, Bo Schembechler, John Pont, Weeb Ewbank and Paul Brown and proudly calls itself the nation's "Cradle of Coaches."

Mallory can feel right at home in the cradle this week after he led undefeated Miami to a 20-10 victory over Kent State in last weekend's Mid-American Conference "game of the year."

The win gave the Redskins their first undisputed conference title since 1958, sent them to the Tangerine Bowl and led to the selection of Mallory today as UPI National "Coach of the Week."

"This is the greatest week of my life," the exuberant 38-year-old Mallory said. "Saturday's win was the biggest in my career. It was a long, hard road but we finally took the title."

In each of his four previous seasons at Miami, Mallory posted 7-3 records—good years, but not quite good enough to win the Mid-American Conference, a league that is gaining prestige around the country.

Mallory, a football star at Miami in the mid-1950s and later an assistant to Woody Hayes at Ohio State, says he teaches "pride" as much as football skills.

"Pride is what really is important. Anytime my players go into a game or practice, I want them to take pride in themselves. I want them to believe in themselves."

"Pride also brings about a good, hungry attitude and this year's team really has it," he added. "They're hungry—they wanted to bring the title to Miami."

After five good seasons at Miami, can Mallory be lured away as were his four predecessors—Hayes, Parseghian, Pont and Schembechler?

Simpson Wins Lifesaver Of Month Award

NEW YORK (UPI) — Running back O. J. Simpson of the Buffalo Bills, given the Lifesaver of the Month Award for September Tuesday for setting the NFL single-game rushing record, has his eye out for records, but not while he is in a game.

"I rarely think about records while playing," Simpson said. "I just run and hope we win. When we lose I don't even look at the individual statistics."

But others cannot ignore his achievements. In the first game of the season on Sept. 16 the Bills running back set the single-game mark against New England, carrying the ball 29 times for 250 yards, breaking Willie Ellison's 1971 record by three yards. It was for this achievement that Simpson was voted the Lifesaver Award by a national panel of sportswriters.

Thirty-four persons are killed every day in the United States and Canada as a result of fires.

Burrow Lost For Remainder Of '73 Season

ATLANTA (UPI) — Wide receiver Ken Burrow, who leads the Atlanta Falcons in pass receiving, will undergo a neck operation and be lost for the remainder of the season, Coach Norm Van Brocklin said Tuesday.

Burrow, a third-year pro, underwent a similar operation last May which caused him to miss most of the pre-season games and limited his effectiveness in the early part of the season.

Jaworski's Aim: Honest Inventory

By RAY CROMLEY

WASHINGTON (NEA) — This writer does not personally know Leon Jaworski, the man President Nixon has named to succeed Archibald Cox as special prosecutor for Watergate and associated crimes. But one thing is certain: Jaworski came back from helping prosecute the Nazi criminals after World War II with a deep and burning hatred of the Hitler men and a nagging worry that Nazism could happen here.

Fifteen years later his fears had not lessened. "Apathy and indifference to a course of wrongdoing of political leaders and acquiescence in their evil practices can prove to be as helpful as active assistance," he said in 1961. "It was the business of each German citizen to know what went on in his nation." Yet, he said, many Germans remained silent "when opposition should have been sounded." Jaworski has asked himself time and again whether Americans will always have the will needed to expose and oppose leaders who go astray.

He regards as especially dangerous those leaders who take illegal actions in the name of patriotism. That is no mitigation, he has said. "Many of the Nazis — in the wrongs they committed — were inspired by a sense of patriotism... when the means employed are wrong, the results cannot be lasting good."

Jaworski believes he and all of us have learned from Hitler what institutions must be kept strong and unimpaired if we are to keep this nation from heading in the direction of Nazism.

A free press willing to unmask demagogues and tyrants.

A strong judiciary willing to strike down oppressive official acts.

Churches which fight for love and against hate.

Home and schools which teach us regard for our fellow man as well as the folly of rule by force.

"It is well to take an honest inventory," Jaworski has said. "In the early 1920s, there swept across the United States a movement in the form of a secret order based on prejudice, hate and oppression. The participants marched, threatened and flogged; they seized power and exercised it with flagrant disregard of the constitutional rights of American citizens... They infiltrated public office — even judicial office. They took an oath of allegiance to their organization in conflict with the true principles of Americanism."

It was not surprising that the less desirable elements of our citizenship found this order so much to their liking but it was alarming that good men, righteous Christian citizens, joined this movement.

Jaworski went on to say that even though the organization clearly advertised that it sought to take the law into its own hands and that it stood for principles which violate our constitutional guarantees, "still good men joined." There were, says Jaworski, "floggings and burning crosses and eerie parades and secret plots. And still good men joined... One shudders at the thought of what this movement would have done to our land had it not been checked."

But Jaworski has written "it is not true that we still find in our midst... movements predicated on some of the same diabolical principles that formed the background of Nazism?" So intent do we become to force our views on others that at times our adversaries are smeared and blackened and even subjected to economic reprisal.

EVERYTHING IS NOT SOOTHED BY OIL!

Bruce Biossat

Athabasca oil is not for tomorrow

EDMONTON, ALTA. (NEA) — The spurt of important new activity amid the sprawling Athabasca oil sands northeast of here gets its prod, of course, from the energy crisis, a rash of steep price hikes from many world producers, and the aggravations of a nagging Middle East war.

But what is stirring at Athabasca is the mere beginning of a very costly, arduous productive endeavor whose potentially great fruits — the steady output of large amounts of synthetic crude oil — will not be gained until at least the mid-1980s.

The world's great oil users, the industrial nations of North America, Europe and Japan, meantime face a terrible crunch. They will have to be ingenious, resourceful, sometimes unhappily competitive though basically "friendly," to bridge the years from now until the 1980s when the big flows of synthetic crude can be realistically looked for.

The exciting real start of oil sands development at Athabasca obviously can't provide any immediate comfort to the citizenry of the United States, hit as they are by the war-induced Arab oil embargo, higher foreign oil prices, already imposed mandatory fuel allocations and the prospect of serious gasoline and home-heating oil shortages.

Yet oil experts like C.O. Nickle in Calgary believe Americans should nevertheless welcome, encourage and promote to the fullest the oil sands projects. What they promise, he suggests, is the kind of "internal continental security" in oil resources whose present lack is cruelly underscored by the Arab embargo.

In Nickle's view, this hope of security warrants the enormous capital outlays, the painful unfolding of time, and the gargantuan labors which will be involved in extracting a really large volume of usable synthetic crude oil from the stubborn, mostly deep-lying Athabasca sands (not to mention those at Wabasca, Cold Lake and Peace River elsewhere in oil-rich Alberta).

No venture so huge in scope as Athabasca begins out of the blue. An official survey 10 years ago showed that more than 1,600 wells had already been sunk into the oil sands to produce test cores and other data which would put a gauge on Athabasca's potential. In the intervening decade, another 1,200 wells have been drilled.

The turning-point endorsement in late September of a $1 billion Mildred Lake plant to be built by Syncrude (a four-company combine) is not exactly a ground-breaker, either. In the last five years, by tough pioneering, Great Canadian Oil Sands Ltd. has produced some 72 million barrels of synthetic crude oil by both surface stripping and mining operations.

Getting at the 10 per cent of Athabasca's reserves which lie reasonably close to the surface is, of course, the easiest part of the chore. To get at the

Question Box

QUESTION: Is the preamble of the Constitution a short resumé of what the Constitution is all about? If so, why did the authors use the word 'provide' for the general welfare or the general prosperity instead of using the word 'provide' as they did with the general defense? In Section 8 — Powers of Congress — it is lumped together with provide for the common defense and general welfare. Is this a contradiction? Can we really provide the general welfare (prosperity) by taxing the cost of production of our wealth of goods and services and impeding the production of energy?

—C. Meyer
Huntington Beach

ANSWER: We believe the preamble was an effort to give a general idea of what the Constitution was intended to do, that is to form a union with more power than the old confederation. We doubt if any effort was made to give a resumé of the entire document.

Attempting to answer why a certain word was used instead of another is difficult unless one has an explanation by the authors. We believe they used the word 'provide' because the founding fathers believed government should have the authority to take steps to advance the general welfare of the nation as a whole. Obviously, they expected the individual states to promote their own general welfare.

We think there was no thought given to actually providing for the welfare of the people. We can find no wording in the Constitution or in the Federalist papers which would support the idea of the federal government providing welfare. Madison in Federalist No. 41 pointed out that the general terms were followed by "a recital of particulars." The particulars limited the government, he believed. Apparently Madison, called the Father of the Constitution, did not believe there was a contradiction.

We presume the question in referring to "we" means the political government. We do not believe the government can provide prosperity. It can tax one person and give it to another one, although there is grave doubt that such actions by the national government are constitutional. This does not provide prosperity, since it deprives some of the aid of others.

We do believe it is possible for those in government to promote (advance) the general welfare by exercising great restraint upon itself and limiting restraint on citizens.

Inside Washington

New Flare-Up of Old Feud Between China and Soviets
By Robert S. Allen

WASHINGTON — For Secretary of State Henry Kissinger being in Peking at this particular time is a graphic instance of that old saying "out of the frying pan into the fire." China and Russia, the two long ferociously feuding super-powers of the Communist world, are at it again, furiously execrating and threatening one another.

Particularly awkward for the visiting architect of U.S. foreign policy is that this latest flare-up of the venomous feuding between the two Red giants is raging behind the scenes. If and when it will surface and in what form is a guess.

Equally conjectural is whether this backstage outbreak of malevolent exchanges will be confined to ideological ranting and raving or erupt into armed hostilities.

There is no lack of TNT for such a violent explosion. It has happened repeatedly before and could again. Both sides have huge ground and air forces massed at strategic sections on their 3,000-mile common border.

In recent years there have been a number of fierce clashes between these armies over disputed areas — literally sizable wars of which only faint reports have reached the outside world. Whether that will happen again will be known only when the fighting subsidies or flames into all-out conflict.

Western military and intelligence authorities have long been aware that the Kremlin rulers on more than one occasion deliberated a preemptive strike at China's nuclear weapons centers.

In one of these sinister crises, the U.S. was sounded out on such a possible blow. President Nixon personally, promptly and emphatically condemned it.

All this, of course, is fully known to Secretary Kissinger. He is also thoroughly aware that behind the scenes Moscow and Peking are in the midst of another frenetic wrangle — and that the utmost care and delicacy must be exercised to avoid getting involved in it in any way, even by inference or implication.

That's why Kissinger's highly volatile dilemma and tortuous trains in Peking are no less thorny and sensitive than his negotiations in Cairo and the other Arab capitals — with one crucial difference.

The U.S. is directly involved in the war-seething Middle East. So far, it is only an "intently interested" bystander in the long-incipient Sino-Soviet vendetta.

In effect, U.S. policy in this fateful arena is to carry water on both shoulders — to court both sides and stay on good terms with both.

With the Soviet Union, the U.S. is bent on expanding the Nixon-Brezhnev detente to include arms and troop limitations and to increase trade and other exchanges. With China, the U.S. objective is to establish full diplomatic relations and enlarge economic and trade ties.

Immediate goal of Kissinger's Peking visit is an announcement that the two countries are exchanging full diplomatic recognition — with their present representatives in Washington and Peking raised to the rank of ambassador.

If this comes off, it will be fanfared by Washington as a memorable international achievement. Primary cause of the latest backstage brawl — in which Kissinger unwittingly stumbled into — is a Russian charge that Chinese troops violated the border between China and the Soviet puppet Mongolian Republic.

This 1,500-mile border is in addition to the 3,000-mile east-west border between Russia and China.

Moscow irately contends that in recent months large Chinese military units have perpetrated more than 150 "incursions" of the Mongolian border, and "abused and mistreated" natives in these areas.

The Chinese foreign ministry branded these accusations as "fabrications and slander with ulterior motives."

Indicative of the exceptional nature of the episode is that the foreign ministry went out of its way to refute the Soviet's claims by telephoning foreign newsmen in Peking — particularly those from Iron Curtain countries.

This was most unusual because ordinarily the only way to get a comment or reaction from a Peking ministry is to ask for it. But in this instance the denunciatory repudiation was volunteered and with undisguised contempt and scorn of the Soviet and its Mongolian satellite.

Still a mystery is just why Moscow precipitated this vicious wrangle. One theory is that the purpose was to inveigle China to shift some of its large forces from the Soviet border to the Mongolian border. Russia has an estimated one million troops on the Sino border — more than the Chinese, but not overwhelmingly so.

If China could somehow be finagled into diverting sizable forces to the Mongolian border, that would play powerfully into Soviet hands.

More Charges
Significantly, Moscow followed up its border-violation accusation with another of a different type.

This time China was charged with ignoring an offer of a non-aggression pact. No less than party boss Leonid Brezhnev hurled this indictment. He uncorked it in a speech in Tashkent, in central Asia, and the West only learned about it from satellite sources.

According to their accounts, Brezhnev lashed the Chinese brush-off of the non-aggression proposal as due to their "frenzied anti-Sovietism."

The Kremlin chief gave no details of this alleged treaty; when and how it was submitted, the terms or other aspects. Brezhnev merely contended an accord had been tendered China, and had been spurned without a word.

Chinese officials curtly retorted they knew nothing about it; that it was another instance of "Soviet lying and trickery."

Nothing can replace the American dollar and it practically has.

Europe Closer to 'Union'

The 50 states of the United States of America are bound together by the glue of a basic legal document — the Constitution — whose ultimate interpreter is the Supreme Court.

Although the nine members of the European Economic Community — which is the closest Europe has yet come to a "United States of Europe" — have no constitution as such, they do have a common body of agreements and a supranational court of adjudication which is becoming a growing force in the daily lives of Europeans.

This is the European Court of Justice, created by the 1952 Treaty of Paris which established the European Coal and Steel Community, a forerunner of the Common Market.

The court's role is to interpret the various Community treaties and the laws flowing from them in cases of disputes between Community members. But increasingly, notes French journalist Jean Lecerf, writing in the publication European Community, the court is finding itself deciding suits brought by private citizens against their own or other member governments.

For example, one as yet undecided case involves a German engineer who obtained his employer's consent to take a position in Alsace. Soon after his arrival in France, he was the victim of an on-the-job accident. Who pays — the French social security system or the German?

Without the Court of Justice, the engineer might have run up against a double refusal. As it happened, the German court to which the matter was brought has deferred judgment pending the European Court's interpretation of the appropriate text.

It also appears likely, says Lecerf, that in coming years the Court of Justice will become an instrument of recourse in the application of Article 119 of the Common Market Treaty, which stipulates that men and women shall receive equal pay for equal work. One female employe of the European Parliament in Luxembourg has already won a case in which the alleged salary discrimination on the basis of sex.

The growing stature of the court has raised an important question. When Community law and national law conflict, which should prevail? A minor case has served to establish the preeminence of the European Court in this area.

It involved an Italian citizen who had been called before a judge for refusing to pay an electricity bill on the grounds that the nationalization of the electric power industry violated the Rome Treaty. The issue was particularly serious in that an opinion of the Italian Constitutional Court had held that any national law overrode an earlier Community statute.

The European Court disagreed, and recent decisions have confirmed the supremacy of Community law.

The court's verdict last July against the Italian government for having continued to levy a tax on exported art objects, a practice prohibited by the Treaty, established a fundamental legal point.

"Applications of Community law is to be identical at all times and in all parts of the Community and must prevail over any obstacles that a member state may place in its way," the court declared.

In relinquishing to the Community the rights and powers corresponding to the Treaty provisions, the member states have effected a definitive limitation of their sovereign rights which no national statute may disavow.

In just such a way did the 13 original American states relinquish their absolute sovereignty 184 years ago when they joined together to form "a more perfect Union."

National Security Gap

The Commander and Chief of the Armed Services causes surreptitious recordings to be made. These electronic documents, constitute a record of random matters. Among the matters are those that involve the national security, including the most sensitive military secrets. A controversy then develops, bearing on non-security portions of the recordings. In the controversy, a number of the recordings are presented in evidence to a court. At that point it is discovered that two of the electronic recordings are missing.

The possible explanation for the electronic gap is three-fold: (1) the missing recordings never made; (2) they were made but their whereabouts is unknown; (3) they were made but their whereabouts is being concealed. If the first is true, we have a situation in which potential top-secret security information that once was supposed to exist does not in fact exist. If the second is true, the situation is that potential top-secret security information is lost. If the third is true, the situation is that potential top-secret security information is in unauthorized hands. Any of these possibilities is further complicated by the fact that the journal of possession for the documents, in part, consisted of bits of paper torn from a brown paper bag.

1040 U.S. Individual Income Taxpayers Ask IRS

This column of questions and answers on federal tax matters is provided by the local office of the U.S. Internal Revenue Service and is published as a public service to taxpayers. The column answers questions most frequently asked by taxpayers.

Q. Are "points" paid on a home mortgage deductible as interest expense?

A. Yes. The term "points" is sometimes used to describe the charges paid by a borrower to a lender as loan origination fees, maximum loan charges, or premium charges. If the payment of these charges is compensation solely for the use or forbearance of money, it is interest and generally deductible in full as interest expense in the year paid.

However, if the payment of any of these charges is compensation for specific services that the lender performs in connection with the borrower's account (such as lender's appraisal fees, the cost of preparing the mortgage note or deed of trust, settlement fees, notary fees, etc.) it is not interest. Moreover, payment of these amounts cannot be considered an additional cost of the property and may not be added to the property's basis.

The term "points" is also used to describe loan placement fees that the seller may be required to pay to the lender as a condition to arranging financing terms for the buyer.

WORRY CLINIC

By George W. Crane, Ph.D., M.D.

Hilda says European men differ from American males in being buttocks-oriented regarding women. Americans (she claims) are far more breast-oriented. She wants to know why? Scrappbook this diagnosis.

CASE Y-569: Hilda B., aged 27, was in my recent public audience.

"Dr. Crane," she said, "I sent up that question about the different attitudes of American men vs. European males regarding girls."

"For I find that American men are more breast-oriented. The Europeans seem far more buttocks-oriented regarding women."

"How do you explain such differences?"

BREAST VS. FANNIES

Here are some of the psychiatric explanations:

(1) European males have seen mother nurse their babies in public so the men are familiar with exposed and sagging breasts.

Crying babies and smelly diapers thus become indirectly linked with female breasts in Europe, thereby reducing their romantic allure.

But the female buttocks (fanny) are more mysterious to the European in being covered and not so publicly flaunted.

That's also one reason why such men like to "pinch" a girl's rear pizza.

In America, however, more babies are bottle fed.

And young American mothers are more reticent about publicly baring their breast even when they nurse their babies.

So the female breast is a more mysterious (and thus exciting) sex fetish to American males.

"Familiarity breeds contempt," is thus an adage that helps explain the greater sexual allure of the unfamiliar part of the female anatomy.

As nudists can attest, the totally nude female body is not nearly as erotically stimulating as the partially clad figure.

For clothes excite the passions while nudity reduces them via that "familiarity breeds contempt."

(2) American advertising has glorified a girl's bustline far more than her hip measurements.

In this country, therefore, it is that first number in the usual "measurements" that intrigues the American male.

Thus, if a girl is described as a 36-24-36, it's the first "36" that intrigues American males most!

And the typical bathing suit female has her fanny exposed more than her breasts, so it thus loses its exotic appeal.

Even with the usual very scanty bathing suits there is more of her bust hidden than is true of her fanny.

(3) At puberty, the American boy becomes more conscious of the definite enlargement of a girl's breast.

He doesn't note a similar marked change in her hips or fanny.

So it is her breasts that immediately becomes the usual sexual fetish that symbolizes her romantic charm.

Girls recognize this fact for when they have small breasts, they often seek uplift bras or "falsies."

But do they also employ "falsies" or uplift prosthetic aids to enlarge their fanny?

(4) In Europe there is also a greater tendency to stress aberrant sexual acts, such as sodomy.

The recent rash of Danish and Swedish pornographic movies and stag films has emphasized the variations of erotic indulgence.

They usually deal with the waistline, not the bustline.

And many men, during childhood, derive the notion that babies are born via the rectum.

So they subconsciously focus on that orifice, which often explains why European males are buttocks-oriented.

DROUGHT PREDICTED

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI) — Dr. Walter Orr Roberts, a research scientist who believes sunspots directly affect the weather on earth, says a severe drought rivaling the Dust Bowl days of the Depression may hit the Great Plains next year or by 1975.

Roberts, president of the University Corporation for Atmospheric Research, says an upcoming period of very little sunspot activity may signal an oncoming drought. He said the sunspots follow a 20 to 22 year cycle and the droughts on the Great Plains fit that same pattern.

CHICANO CHAMPION

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Old-timer Gilbert Roland was cited by the League of United Latin American Citizens for championing the cause of Chicanos in motion pictures and television.

The Lighter Side

By DICK WEST
WASHINGTON (UPI) — I read the other day that some community colleges and adult education centers now offer courses in walking.

That type of instruction likely will grow increasingly popular as the gasoline shortage worsens. So I got in touch with Dr. Archibald Stridwell, professor of peripatetics at Brogan State College, to see what was going on in his field.

"Walking has become a dying art during the automobile age," he told me. "Most people who aren't crippled can still get around on foot, of course. But the subtleties and nuances of walking have largely been lost."

"When, for example, did you last see anyone slide?"

I had to admit that I had not observed any sliding worth mentioning for a dozen years or so.

He Holds Graduate Degree
"I thought not," said Stridwell, who holds a graduate degree in ambulation from the Shanks-Mare Institute in Heidelberg.

"There's a lot more to walking than merely putting one foot in front of the other. Walking also can be an important means of communication and a valuable emotional outlet."

"Once you master the various gaits and paces, a whole new world of self-expression opens up to you."

At the moment, he said, the Brogan State curriculum includes two courses in walking—Beginning Pedestrianism 110 and Basic Promenading 411.

The former offers introductory instruction in the elementary steps—tramping, trudging, plodding, shuffling and so forth, with maybe a smattering of shambling.

The latter gives the student a rudimentary grasp of the more advanced forms of walking, such as strolling, sauntering and sidling," he explained.

The next evening after my talk with Stridwell I'll be jiggered if I didn't get a call from the Arthur Scurry Studio.

The Lucky Night
"This is your lucky night," a dulcet female voice informed me. "Your number has been selected for our Bonanza Telephone Quiz."

If you can answer the question correctly, you will receive six free walking lessons.

Arthur Scurry instructors teach all the latest steps taken by world famous ambulators in New York's sidewalk society, which the energy crisis has restored to fashion.

You'll learn to strut, stalk and slither—be the first in your neighborhood to traipse.

Ready for the question? — How many feet do you need to travel by the Ankle Express?"

I missed the answer, which probably means I'm still not ready to give up my car. But fortunately, Arthur Scurry has promised me a second chance.

Senate may outlaw hobby forgeries

Legal counterfeiting has plagued the hobby industry for years. Collectors items with any market value at all could be reproduced and sold as originals without fear of reprisal because there were no laws against it.

The older or rarer the article the easier it was to reproduce and, in many cases, the "legal copy" was so well made, it was impossible to distinguish from the original. Some copies have even been known to command a much higher price than the original although its authenticity was in doubt at the time of purchase.

Whether or not it will ever be possible to completely eradicate this practice is questionable, but with the passing of Senate Bill S-1880 Congress will have taken a giant step in that direction.

Unfortunately, it covers only two categories out of the thousands in the hobby industry: numismatic items — coins, tokens, medals, wooden and paper money, script, legal documents etc., and political items such as campaign material, political buttons and souvenirs.

The new bill will make it mandatory that all reproductions be clearly labeled as to date of production.

Regarding coins, the bill specifies that the manufacture in the United States, or importation of any imitation numismatic item which is not plainly and permanently marked "COPY," is unlawful and is an unfair or deceptive act (under) the Federal Trade Commission Act. Enforcement of the law is left to the Federal Trade Commission.

The legislators' intentions are good, but about all this bill will do is drive the manufacturers of such material underground for the next few years. The only way the American lobbyist can hope to win is through its own diligence. The law is there and the penalties are there. All we have to do is see to it that every questionable case is brought to the attention of the Federal Trade Commission.

Inspectors Survey Louisiana Waters

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Louisiana health officials have asked oyster fishermen to stay out of coastal areas while inspectors survey the waters for conditions that could cause hepatitis.

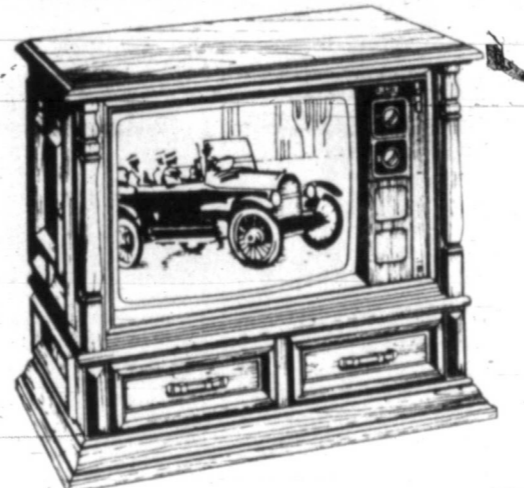

Hepatitis outbreaks in Texas and Georgia have been traced by federal officials to Louisiana oysters.

Dr. Charles C. Mary Jr., state health officer, said he asked oyster fishermen to suspend operations voluntarily for 10 days to two weeks so they could not impede health department teams.
