B52s' Collision Mars Successful U.S. Action

LIBERATED from the Viet Cong, a brace of bicycles make for some nonregulation transportation for two soldiers of the U.S. 14th Infantry Division operating in War Zone C near the Cambodian border.

Marines Kill 150 Reds Without Loss

SAIGON (UPI) In the greatest saturation bombing of the war U.S. B52s smashed a massive Communist buildup in South Vietnam today and Leathernecks killed North Vietnamese kidnapers so quickly that not a single American life was lost, spokesmen said.

Air losses marred the day's action. Two of the giant stratofortresses collided and crashed into the South China Sea, rescuers saving at least seven of the 13 crewmen. Communist ground fire downed four smaller jets, with only one pilot being rescued.

Westmoreland Tells McNamara U.S. is Winning

SAIGON (UPI)—Gen. William C. Westmoreland solemnly assured Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara today "the war is not a stalemate... we are winning slowly but steadily." But all assessments were that the war would be long and costly.

A shirtsleeved McNamara met with top U.S. diplomats and military leaders in secrecy behind a door labeled "High Noon Conference Room" shortly after McNamara arrived on his ninth trip to Vietnam in six years. Excerpts of what he was told were relayed to the press by U.S. Mission spokesman.

"High Noon" was the code name for the secretary's visit but it was to be changed to something more secret when American television cameras panned over the sign on the door as McNamara joined Westmoreland, the U.S. military commander here, and other generals and political, economic and aid officials.

Although Westmoreland is expected to ask for substantial increases over the 466,000 American troops now in Vietnam, the spokesman said there had been no discussion of increases so far. Westmoreland is expected to ask for at least two more divisions to put troop strength above 500,000.

U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker reported "much still must be done."

Attorney General Shuts Down Bugging

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark has sharply curtailed electronic eavesdropping by federal agencies and is now the able U.S. lawyer who can authorize bugging.

A Justice Department spokesman acknowledged Thursday night that a seven-page memorandum setting down rigid guidelines for such snooping has been sent to all federal agencies.

The new rules require that federal investigators obtain advance approval for their bugging plans from the attorney general.

Federal agency heads will be permitted to authorize use of eavesdropping gear only in emergencies, and they must explain why it was an emergency to the attorney general within 24 hours.

The new directive appears designed to prevent any future dispute like the one which embarrassed the Justice Department earlier this year, when former Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy and FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover accused each other of approving bugging

The Vietnam fighting mushroomed as U.S. Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara began his ninth visit in six years to find out what is needed to win the war. American commanders were expected to tell him they need 200,000 more U.S. troops.

Record Nine Missions

The 466,000 U.S. servicemen in the war zone could point with pride to the day's work. B52 crewmen completed an unprecedented round of nine missions in just over 24 hours against Communist targets in South Vietnam. Seven of the raids by the $8 million eight engine jets struck the North Vietnamese troops and struck convoys trapped between mudslides in the A Shau Valley, an infiltration zone the Communists were building into a major offensive launching pad, according to intelligence reports.

Each of the Stratoforts carried up to 60,000 pounds of bombs. Their record-breaking cycle of raids against A Shau began Thursday and continued through today.

Reds Outfoxed

About 35 miles to the north on the brutal battlefield of the North-South Vietnam border, UPI correspondent Alvin B. Webb reported a company of the 9th Marines spotted about 200 Communists pushing south along a trail through a draw in the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ). The Marines waited.

Then in an instant they opened fire. They radioed for and got artillery support. Webb reported that when the smoke cleared the Marines counted 150 Communist dead.

Not a single Marine was killed, a special event in a battle area where only Sunday 109 Leathernecks died in a single firefight.

Congo Troops Recapture Town

KINSHASA, the Congo (UPI)—Congoese army troops have recaptured Bukavu, one of two eastern towns reported taken over by foreign mercenaries on Wednesday. Radio Kinshasa said today.

The government-controlled radio also said loyal Congoese forces had recaptured part of Kinsangani in heavy fighting today. A special broadcast said the Congoese army had scored a "great victory" over the foreign mercenaries.

Only hours earlier Congo president Joseph D. Mobutu claimed the mercenary forces still held the two towns and that heavy fighting was continuing.

The broadcast said, "valiant Congoese troops have destroyed the forces of evil in the country. They have won a great victory."

Informed sources said former Katangese gendarmes and Belgian, French and Spanish mercenaries who attacked Congoese troops stationed at Bukavu on Wednesday had been defeated.

The sources further said that two loyal government troops at Kinsangani had destroyed the airplanes which flew mercenary soldiers into that city on Wednesday and had wrested control of a large part of the provincial capital from the rebels.

Only Thursday Mobutu appealed to his African neighbors and to the United Nations for help in putting down the rebellion which he claimed was being staged by an "international mafia."

The U.N. Security Council met Thursday night at the Congo's request and scheduled another meeting for this afternoon. Mobutu also appealed Thursday to the Organization for African Unity.

The United States ordered all American citizens out of the area and began airlifting citizens from Bukavu, one of the towns where fighting broke out Wednesday. A State Department spokesman said most of the 64 American citizens in Bukavu had been flown to safety.

Mobutu's radio Kinshasa kept broadcasting reports of heavy fighting in Bukavu and Kinsangani.

Western nations, including Britain, France and the United States said at the Security Council meeting Thursday night that the Congo had failed to prove its case and asked for more information about the uprising.

There has been no actual confirmation of the rebellion and it was Mobutu's government itself which sounded the alarm that mercenaries had taken control of the two towns on Wednesday.

Congo ambassador to the U.N. Theodore Idzumbur was to try again this afternoon to convince the security council it should act to put down the insurrection.

Since the Congo and Algeria do not have diplomatic relations, the extradition proceedings became entangled in legal and diplomatic red tape.

Boumedienne met with his cabinet Thursday to discuss the extradition request.

Informed sources said the two countries might seek to re-establish relations to facilitate the extradition. According to Algerian law, the return of a prisoner to a government with whom Algeria does not have relations would fall into jurisdiction of the supreme court.

Crisis in Congo Cuts Breather Of U.N. Delegates

UNITED NATIONS (UPI)—The Congo gathered evidence today to press its plea for United Nations Security Council help in putting down an uprising in two Eastern Congoese towns.

The council scheduled a meeting for this afternoon to look into Congo government charges that an "international mafia" was staging a rebellion in the towns of Bukavu and Kinsangani.

Congoese ambassador to the U.N. Theodore Idzumbur called a session of the security council Thursday. He said an "international mafia" of foreign powers, supporting former premier Mosis Tshombe was trying to "bring to its knees the present Congo government of President Joseph D. Mobutu."

But Western nations on the Council, including the United States, Britain and France, argued that Idzumbur failed to prove his case. They asked for more detailed information about the uprising before taking any action.

It was Mobutu himself who announced the rebellion by foreign mercenaries in the two towns on Wednesday. Mobutu accused Belgian, French, Spanish and British mercenaries of starting the fighting.

There has been no actual confirmation of the insurrection. But the Congo government-controlled Radio Kinshasa has kept a steady stream of battle reports and said today heavy fighting was continuing in Bukavu and Kinsangani.

Idzumbur's statement at Thursday Security Council session failed to mention any numbers of troops or planes involved and did not name any countries for providing mercenaries.

The ambassador also failed to mention Tshombe by name. Tshombe was kidnapped June 30 while on a private flight and hustled to Algiers. The Congo, which convicted him of treason and sentenced him to death in absentia earlier this year, asked for his extradition.

Judge Rejects Plea to Release Convicted Doctor

COLUMBIA, S.C. (UPI)—A federal judge Thursday threw out a petition for a "commander's parole" for Capt. Howard B. Levy, the Army doctor convicted of making disloyal statements about the Vietnam war.

Ruling that a military officer has no absolute right to bail, District Judge J. Robert Martin Jr. dismissed the writ of habeas corpus action by which Levy hoped to be freed during appeal, from the Ft. Jackson Hospital confinement ward.

Charles Morgan Jr., Levy's attorney, had filed duplicate briefs in the federal court and in the U.S. Court of Military Appeals in an attempt to gain a court order directing the Ft. Jackson commanding general to issue the "commander's parole" freeing the captain.

The action in the military court is still pending.

Levy, a 30-year-old dermatologist, was convicted June 2 of making "intemperate, defamatory, provoking and disloyal statements" to special forces troops about the Vietnam war. He was also convicted of refusing to instruct Green Beret medics in the treatment of skin diseases they would encounter in Vietnamese jungles.

"There is no law which grants military personnel absolute right to bail or release," the judge ruled. "Therefore, the relief prayed for is denied and the petition is dismissed."

Mobeetie Bank Announces Plans For Rebuilding

MOBEETIE — The First State Bank of New Mobeetie will construct a new bank to replace its old building which was totally destroyed by a tornado Monday night, according to J. T. Johnston, vice president.

"An Amarillo architect will meet with me today to discuss plans for the new structure," Johnston said.

Construction will begin as soon as plans for the building are drawn and a bid is accepted, which may take some time, Johnston stated.

The bank plans to rebuild in the same location, but final plans will depend upon architectural recommendations. Transactions of the bank will continue to be made in the W. Adkins grocery store until new building is completed, Johnston said.

Gate Tender Blamed For Train Crash

BERLIN (UPI)—An East German government commission today blamed a gate tender of the state-owned railway for the fiery crash of a commuter train and a gas truck that killed 79 persons, including many children. It was the worst European train wreck in 15 years.

The official East German news agency ADN said the gate tender failed to lower the crossing barriers before the double-decker train hurtled through the station at Langensiedel on Thursday and slammed into the tanker truck on the tracks. The crossing attendant was arrested, ADN said.

The tanker truck exploded when the train hit it and spewed out nearly 4,000 gallons of burning gasoline that set fire to four cars and the station. The station was burned to the ground and two of the coaches were partially burned out.

Many of the 54 persons injured were critically burned by the flaming gasoline and the death toll was expected to rise, ADN said. "Regrettably, many children are among the dead and injured," the agency said.

A government investigating commission sent from East Berlin and headed by Interior Minister Friedrich Diekel ordered the arrest of the gate attendant.

The small Saxony town that was the scene of the accident is seven miles southwest of Magdeburg, a city about 20 miles from the West German border and 80 miles southwest of Berlin.

The accident was East Germany's worst train disaster and the worst wreck in Europe since 111 British commuters died in a train disaster at Middlesex, England, on Oct. 8, 1952. The worst wreck on record was the derailment of a passenger train at Modane, France, on Dec. 12, 1917, that killed 543 persons.

The worst previous East German train wreck occurred May 15, 1960 when two crowded passenger trains collided outside the Leipzig station, killing 64 persons.

when the rifleman fired at least 13 shots from three weapons in 20 minutes of random shooting around his neighborhood. The firing rocked the fashionable Point Grey section of this Canadian West Coast port city.

Fourteen carloads of police surrounded the gunman's home. His mother ran from the house screaming, "don't shoot! don't shoot!" Then the suspect walked out with his hands in the air, leaving his bedridden father in the home unharmed.

Killed in the sudden, unexplained outbreak of gunfire were Dr. and Mrs. David A. Webster, both about 30. They died almost immediately in their strawberry patch. Webster shot in the back and his wife Marele through the chest. Webster was an assistant professor of architecture at the University of British Columbia and the son of a well known former member of parliament.

The killing of the Websters orphaned their four children ranging in age from 6 months to 10 years.

Authorities described the shootings as the work of a man "gone berserk" and said they found 13 weapons and several hundred rounds of ammunition in his room. The man about 35, was not identified.

He reportedly was recently discharged from the Royal Canadian Air Force and had a background of mental instability.

After the Websters were shot, the gunman then aimed the rifle across the back alley and peppered a dwelling. No one was hit.

Rocket Astronomers Report All Space Glows Like X-Ray

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Rocket astronomers report evidence that all space glows with X-ray "light," apparently a byproduct of a primeval fireball that exploded with a big bang 10 billion years ago to create the universe.

They also reported Thursday:—Detection for the first time of X-radiation from a quasar, one of those recently discovered mysterious objects near the edge of the universe which pour out energy in amounts baffling to science.

Confirmation that the super galaxy M87, 10 times more massive than our own 100-billion-star Milky Way galaxy, is a gigantic X-ray machine as well as a powerful radio source.

Discovery of three other unidentified X-Ray sources far out in space which may be quasars invisible in ordinary radio light.

These new "firsts" in the infant science of X-rays astronomy were disclosed at a news conference by Dr. Herbert Friedman of the Naval Research Laboratory.

Friedman and his associates have been studying X-rays from space for several years with Aerobee rockets fired from the White Sands, N.M., missile range. Such research has to be done at high altitudes because the earth's atmosphere absorbs X-rays and prevents them from reaching ground observatories.

In 1963 only two distinct X-ray sources had been discovered in the heavens. The total is now close to 40. Most of them are inside the Milky Way, but perhaps five are in distant reaches of space beyond the local galaxy.

X-rays provide a new window on the universe, disclosing information not seen in visible light or radio. The discoveries reported today were made by an Aerobee rocket launched from White Sands May 17.

Radio astronomers last year discovered faint "whisperings" in space. These have been interpreted as feeble leftovers from the extremely hot rays which were shot out in all directions from the "primeval atom" of super dense material from which all the stars and galaxies of the expanding universe eventually were formed, according to the "big bang" theory of creation.

FLEW THE COOP

COLCHESTER, England (UPI)—Syd Sanson today was trying to figure out why his pigeon had flown 3,000 miles instead of 300.

On June 10, a bird belonging to Sanson was released at Perth, Scotland, with a number of others from Colchester. Most of them flew the 300-mile route home.

Sanson heard Thursday that his bird, identified by its wing stamp and ring number, had been found at Takoradi, Ghana.

The Barbie Market

By BETTY CANARY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

I never thought it would see planned obsolescence in a doll. A refrigerator, yes. An automobile, O.K. My baby? Never! But it is here. Little girls can take their Barbie dolls and trade them in on new ones.

Of course, if the television ads promised the wretches would end up in that big doll-house in the sky I would gather up Barbie and all her kith and kin and streak to the nearest post office. No deal. You get another one in return.

My little girls do not feel motherly towards Barbie the way I felt about my dolls. (Feel about them, that is. I still have mine.) Put, after all, they can hardly consider her their baby when she wears black lace nighties and mink-trimmed coats. One does not play with a Barbie. A Barbie is to dress.

I suppose it is obvious that I can't think much of poor Barbie. However, I am not going to condemn the manufacturer or accuse him of having some sort of scheme or plot. Frankly, I should imagine the toy industry is more than a little bit tired of that sort of thing.

They may produce all the things we complain about but we are the ones who buy the stuff to give to our children to break. Parents do not have to buy them.

Parents Needn't Always Be Square

By HELEN HENNESSY
Women's Editor

Newspaper Enterprise Assn. NEW YORK (NEA) — You can only hear what's going on in the house next door to mine when someone is mad enough to yell. So my neighbor's high-pitched, "You'll never be hired in that get-up," told me her son Donald, was off on a job hunt in what his mother considered unsuitable garb.

A few minutes later he passed my window, hair brushing his shoulders under a peaked cap, wearing a hooded vinyl jacket, tight pants and boots. Poor Donald.

I could picture mom holding a neat suit in one hand, polished shoes in the other, a trip to the barber on her mind — and no audience. Poor mom.

With all the hullabaloo about more than one-half of the total population being under 25 and how the young group is having so much influence on fashion thinking and buying power, Donald naturally considers his mother's fashion advice kindly, perhaps, but square. And when he doesn't get that job, he will blame it on the older man who looked down his nose at him and he'll call him a square, too. Poor Donald.

Kids have been so brainwashed into believing that they call all the shots today that they forget their age group is still too young to have reached the top in industry and that whether or not they're hired still depends on the nod from a nonmod.

Have you thought about what the fashion youthquake has done to family relationships? Parents are really on the spot. Not only do the kids reject any suggestions on how THEY should dress but they also cast a fishy eye on how pater and mater are togged out.

If mom's skirt is below her knees and dad settles into a conservative suit every day they are regarded tolerantly but pityingly by their offspring.

Not being so dense as the kids would like to believe, their parents may decide to "think young and get with it." So mom hikes up her hemline, pop decks himself out on a leisurely Saturday in a blazer with epaulettes and brass buttons and they both add a few hip words to the breakfast conversation—like teen-bopper and crazy.

Does it do the trick? Nope. Once again they get the pitying look. And this time with NO tolerance.

Ah, me. It's discouraging to be on the shelf at a relatively young age for no better reason than that you're literally outnumbered by mod men and their miniskirters. Especially when you're still paying the bills.

Makes you kinda wish the statisticians had kept their information to themselves. Maybe if the kids didn't know they outnumbered us and the designers weren't aware of a chance for early retirement in a whole new, kooky market, to slash or not to slash skirt wouldn't be THE question.

To those more knowledgeable than I, I leave the problem of establishing rapport with teenagers on a thinking level. But fashion can be removed from the argument schedule if parents play it smart.

You can't fight 'em and you are too old to join 'em. And if you think about it at all clearly, you'll realize that you don't really want to do either.

Don't nag. Remember that your mother probably thought the New Look pretty silly, too. And don't climb into a miniskirt. If you have teen-aged children, you're too old to be a cheerleader.

By all means take up your hems. To the point where they won't be a conversation piece. Wear low heels, buckled shoes and squared toes. They're not only "in," they're comfortable. Be current with good taste.

IS THIS any way to go after a job?

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: When a woman asks, "Should I tell my friend that her husband is having an affair right under her nose?" you always say, "No mind your own business."

I disagree with you, I was one of those trusting wives who was the last to know that her husband was carrying on with a young woman in his office.

After I found out, my friends said, "Everyone else knew it." Abby, I caught my husband with his girl friend. He said he didn't want to break up our marriage, and he begged me to forgive him. The girl-left town, my husband has been trying to make it up to me ever since, but I can no longer trust him.

If some kind friend had told me sooner I think it might have softened the blow. This is making an old woman of me, and I am

ONLY 36

DEAR ONLY: You may actually believe that hearing the news from a friend might have softened the blow, but I doubt it. It usually works the other way around. When your husband was faced with a choice, he chose you, which indicates he thought more of you than he did the girl friend. That should count for something.

Stop beating yourself and try to forgive and forget, and rebuild your once good relationship. Your unwillingness to face one of life's uglier realities is making an old woman of you—not your husband's indiscretion.

DEAR ABBY: I like a boy, but I have the feeling he likes me only as a friend. He comes over to my house a lot, but I think it's only to eat. I like to cook and bake, and I try out my new recipes on him. He'll eat anything—burnt, raw, he's not fussy. I ask him to everything our club or the school has that a girl can ask a boy to, but when something comes up that he can ask ME to, he always asks one of my girl friends. This sure hurts. Sometimes I think he does it just to be dirty. How can I get him to like me like I like him?

DOWN-HEARTED DEAR DOWN: The way to a rat's heart is through his stomach. Try cheese!

DEAR ABBY: I raised a wonderful boy, and I always took pride in the way he was dressed. But now that he is married, neither he nor his wife seems to care how he looks.

Isn't the wife supposed to see that her husband's shirts are clean, and have all the buttons on, and that his suit is pressed, and his shoes are shined?

Does a mother just have to swallow her pride and say nothing when her son looks like a bum in public? Or isn't he my son any more?

DISAPPOINTED MOTHER DEAR MOTHER: Yes, the wife is responsible for keeping her husband's clothes in shape. But if she lets her husband go around looking like a "bum," and the man himself does nothing about it, it reflects not on his mother, or on his wife, but on himself.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "N" and "B": What parents leave in their children is far more important than what they leave TO them.

Miniskirts Are Rule Again, Conservative Look Absent

By HELEN HENNESSY

Newspaper Enterprise Assn. NEW YORK (NEA) — Italian ready-to-wear gains mor in importance here each season. And from what was shown at the Samia Ready-to-Wear show in Turin recently the manufacturers have unabashedly jumped on the Carnaby Street bandwagon—with a definite Italian touch in colors and better fabrics.

While the London mini-and miniskirts were the exception Canned shrimp that have been pre-chilled tend to hold shape and texture better when added to hot mixtures. Pre-chilling in the can firms the meat, helps shrimp stay curled, plump, pink, and unbroken in the can until ready for use. If you rinse the shrimp before using, always use cool rinse water.

last season, they were the rule this time. The average skirt length was 15 3/4 inches.

The traditional Italian conservative look was conspicuous by its absence. And there wasn't a black dress in sight. Capes were on the scene, coupled with both dresses and suits.

One manufacturer featured corduroy trench coats in tangerine and shocking pink. Other coats came with matching slacks to give the appearance of slacks suits with longish jackets.

This is the year of the slack suit. In fact, the classic suit seems to have been almost replaced by this new phenomenon available for all hours and occasions.

The evening collections glittered with gold and silver. Lame is as strong as ever and evening knitwear is almost exclusively in jersey lame.

Egypt Is Paying Cost of Defeat

By WALTER LOGAN United Press International

Egyptians today began paying the cost of defeat in the Middle East war.

A government decree Thursday night said the budget for the coming year will cut public spending by two thirds and investment by one half.

Government workers will be barred from promotion, bonuses and overtime pay. Not one penny will be handed out for foreign aid commitments.

The cause was clear. Egypt lost a $1 billion army in the Sinai desert. The closing of the Suez Canal cost about $500,000 a day. Tourist profits are nil. The cotton crop of Egypt is threatened by bugs.

The belt-tightening reflected no lessening of Cairo's verbal campaign against Israel. Editor Hassanain Heikal of the Cairo newspaper Al Ahram, a confidant and frequent spokesman for U. S. R. President Gamal Abdel Nasser, announced he supports Jordanian King Hussein's call for an Arab summit

Queen Elizabeth Knights Voyager

GREENWICH, England (UPI)

—To the proud cheers of thousands of his fellow Britons, Francis Chichester was knighted today by Queen Elizabeth II for his solo round the world voyage in the ketch Gypsy Moth IV.

Greenwich gave the 65-year-old adventurer a welcome that rivaled the reception for Lord Nelson in 1801. The quadrangle of the Greenwich Naval College, where the public ceremony took place, was packed.

The crowd burst into cheers and applause as the Queen touched the kneeling Chichester's shoulders with a sword and dubbed him Sir Francis. She used the same broad sword that Queen Elizabeth I gave another Sir Francis—Francis Drake—for his voyage around the world in 1581.

Ships blew their horns in salute. Church bells pealed in his honor. Trumpets sounded a fanfare.

The Gypsy Moth stood in the River Thames nearby, her sails furled after a five-day, 350-mile trip to Greenwich from Plymouth, where Sir Francis put in at the end of his epic voyage May 28.

Col. Garrison Is Concerned Over Driving

AUSTIN (UPI) — Half of 18-day's youngsters someday might be killed or injured in an auto accident if the present trend of recklessness on the state's highways continues, Texas' top law enforcement officer said Wednesday.

Col. Homer P. Garrison Jr., director of the Texas Department of Public Safety, made the prediction after reviewing the list of deaths and injuries on Texas roads during the Independence Day holiday.

"The state has been very conscious of a need to do something about the rising death toll," said Garrison. But he said the state could not do everything by itself — that it needed the help of individual drivers.

"If people don't become conscious of the dangerous traffic situation," he said, "it will not be long before one out of every two young people of today can expect to be killed or injured in a highway wreck during his lifetime."

Bangkok Bus Crash Kills 40 Persons

BANGKOK (UPI)—A train-bus collision killed 40 persons and injured 36 more Thursday after the bus driver leaped to safety and his vehicle with more than 100 screaming passengers rolled into the train's path.

Authorities called it the worst accident in Thailand's railway history. But all the victims were aboard the bus.

Police arrested the driver, who tried to flee, and charged him with negligent homicide.

Ban to Be Lifted To Permit Hunting Of Prairie Chicken

AUSTIN (UPI) — The prairie chicken, protected from hunters for years due to threatened extinction, will be open to two days of hunting in the Panhandle Oct. 14-15.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP OF TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

The Pampa News is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. Only when man is free to control himself and all he produces, can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government. Freedom is neither license, nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself. No more, no less. It is thus consistent with the Human Relations Commandments, the Golden Rule and the Declaration of Independence.

Beauty The Freedom Way

Socialists, having little or no regard for the intelligence and abilities of their fellowmen to plan their own lives and manage their own properties but an enormously swollen idea of their own omnipotence, are chiefly responsible for the fact that, today, government at all levels either owns or controls in tax-exempt dominion approximately one-half of the entire land and water surfaces of the United States.

Socialists believe, or appear to, that, unless the government steps in to appropriate the land or rigidly control that left in private hands, individual owners will ravage and destroy all natural beauty and resources. The government, consisting of vested interest and empire building time-servers, stands ready and eager, of course, to humor them.

Such people fail to understand—or, perhaps, they just don't think—that the profit motive, a motive with which all individuals, socialists included, are liberally endowed, acts to explode their ridiculous theories. In the absence of tax laws and other restrictions which act to inhibit the natural inclination of property owners to improve the appearance and value of their holdings, that motive, in itself alone, would act to prohibit people from deliberately devastating their own lands.

As the principle applies in general, it applies specifically to owners of timber and mining interests. In fact, in spite of tax laws which do inhibit the natural drive of owners to enhance the value of what they own, private enterprise, timber and mining companies are doing a magnificent job of forest restoration, and without calling on the government to plunder taxpayers in the process.

One company alone, the Georgia-Pacific Co. of Portland, Ore., with holdings in nine states in the South and along the Pacific Coast, planted more than 57,000,000 new trees during the 1966-67 planting season. It was recently announced by GP President, R. B. Pamplin.

Of these 57,000,000 new trees, 10,000,000 were established, Pamplin said, by hand planting of seedling trees and more than 47,000,000 by helicopter aerial seedlings of timberlands. These, he added, are conservative figures which could rise to as high as 500,000,000 sprouts from seeds under favorable conditions. In addition, and not included in forest regeneration reports, are millions upon millions of trees which sprout and seed naturally.

Pamplin explained that one of the major handicaps to reforestation was the steady encroachment on productive forest lands by government decreed "single use" parks and other land acquisitions.

In view of the foregoing and mountains of other evidence to the effect that private enterprise, not government, has really taken the initiative in preserving natural beauty and resources, one would think that the Socialists, always pushing for more government acquisitions and controls, would change their tune.

If they are not satisfied with the present rate that private enterprise is doing the job one would conclude that they should be interested in removing governmental restrictions which inhibit the desires and abilities of owners to improve their properties.

Among such inhibiting restrictions are tax laws which increase taxes on improved lands and other properties. If to improve one's property means that government tax predations will increase in direct ratio to improvements effected, it is not difficult to understand the reluctance of owners to make improvements under those conditions. Here, too, it must be realized, is one of the major causes of proliferating residential and business slums.

Force-oriented socialists are invited to recheck their premises and act accordingly.

Russia Seeks U.S. Tourists

The Soviet Union insists that the United States pull out of Vietnam, but this does not mean that Moscow wants Americans to go away altogether. In fact, the Russian government has greatly stepped up its program to beckon tourists from a broad — Americans notably included — to visit Russian cities.

The Russians obviously have come to realize that tourists spend a great deal of money when they travel. Americans, for example, are welcomed because many spend as much as $40 a day on deluxe tours. To publicize Soviet tourist attractions, the Russian Intourist Board will spend close to one million dollars this year in foreign advertising. Travel magazines, postcards, films and brochures are being placed in more than 500 travel agencies around the world permitted to arrange Soviet trips. Information centers have been set up in New York, London, Paris, Vienna, Stockholm, Berlin and Tokyo. In addition, Intourist was allotted $337 million this year to improve tourist facilities in Moscow and surrounding areas.

The Russians expect about 750,000 tourists from capitalist (to a degree) states to visit Russia in 1967. But having so many tourists also has its disadvantages. Intourist admits that the Russian government has been forced into a crash program to build new facilities and to train hotel personnel and guides. And to south Americans' fears, the USSR has promised the rights of Americans will be better protected.

But perhaps the most difficult problem for the Russians is figuring out a way to justify being so capitalistic about tourism. They probably will find a way, however, as the tourists' money rolls in.

Question Box

(We invite questions on economic and the proper functions of government which will not injure anyone.)

QUESTION: Since God did not see fit to transplant perfection into mortals, who is capable of defining "A Moral Absolute" with exactitude? Please illustrate.

ANSWER: Moral absolutes, generally accepted by Judeo-Christian civilization, are contained in the Ten Commandments. Thou shalt not steal is a moral absolute.

Man is morally bound to respect the property belonging to another, and knowingly taking the property of another without his consent is stealing.

We never expect to have a perfect world because there is no perfect man. But we will more nearly approach it if we have an objective to reach for. We cannot measure distance without having an agreed unit to measure it by. If we had no agreed unit to measure distance or weight we would be in great confusion, just as we are in great confusion because people do not use a single standard to measure right and wrong; therefore they do not realize that they must respect the property that belongs to others and not trespass on it or his ideas or his person.

A man could not be branded a thief because the property of another which has disappeared is found in his possession. Some one else might have stolen it and put it in the man's property. But the fact remains that knowingly taking another's property without his consent is stealing and any act of stealing violates the moral absolute, Thou Shall Not Steal.

Man must acquire his possessions in a peaceful, willing basis, where both parties make a profit in order not to violate that moral absolute. We can think of no exceptions if a man wants to be moral. If he wants to be immoral, he will pay no attention to it. Or if he is ignorant, he will pay no attention to it. And no attempt should be made to protect either from the consequences of violating the moral law. The ignorant man will learn from the consequences and the immoral man will be deterred.

QUESTION: I would like to know why an anti-Semite or an anti-Negro is a bigot, while an anti-anything else is just that—anti-anything else?

ANSWER: We do not know why some individuals are inclined to call others bigots, unless it is because they themselves are engaging in bigotry — adhering intolerantly to their views and using coercion to exclude the views of others.

There is a tendency today for many individuals to attempt to label others with whom they may disagree. For instance, the term extremist has become a sneer term. Individuals who take an extreme view are accused of being extremists by other individuals who frequently are taking a stand at the other extreme. Actually, the term means nothing, just as the present use of such terms as liberal and conservative have lost their original meanings. And the term moderate as used politically means nothing at all.

We would say that in our experience there are few persons who are really anti-Semitic, anti-Negro or anti-white. Those who adhere intolerantly to a stand that people of any race, color, or creed or nationality are bad because of those conditions of birth and who back their views with coercion probably are correctly called bigots. They are more to be pitied for their mistaken beliefs than shunned.

Some apologists for this situation point out that the war in Vietnam has caused expenditures for national defense to rise. However, while these defense expenditures have risen by 68 percent since 1960, non-defense expenditures have risen by 97 percent.

Unfortunately, the trend is still upward. Federal spending during the last four years has gone on at a rate about two and one-half times as fast as in the immediately preceding four years. It will undoubtedly keep going up until and unless those in government can be brought to abandon the fallacious idea that money poured out like water can solve all the nation's problems overnight . . . or any other year.

The United States became the greatest success in the world through the industry of its people and through education, training, and sound development of men and resources. These remain sound processes. They are hindered, not helped, when the nation buys too much government.

ARE THE COMMUNISTS ALL POWERFUL?

The widespread onslaught of collectivist propaganda contains many premises that go unchallenged. Even the most fervent anti-communists repeat communist propaganda while pressing for supposedly "anti-communist" legislation.

One particularly popular myth has to do with the alleged strength of the communist countries. We have to be careful, it is said, or "the communists will catch up" with us—or we must catch up with them—or whatever.

It is assumed, without challenge, that communism is strong even though it is bad. Economic theorists, such as Ludwig von Mises, Murray Rothbard, Hans Sennholz and others, have proven beyond question that a communist economic system is so weak that it could never threaten a capitalist system unless the capitalists chose to subsidize the communists with strength that does not exist.

Excellent proof of the weakness of communism is contained in Howard Norton's book "Only In Russia" (published by Van Nostrand, 120 Alexander St., Princeton, N. J.; $4.95). The author spent three and a half years in Moscow as a newspaper correspondent. In his book he itemizes the natural inefficiencies of a coercively planned economy in minute detail.

For example: "It makes the Muscovite very proud to take a ride through some of these boulevards and see the progress that has been made toward erasing the still critical lack of shelter in the communist capital. But woe to any Muscovite who goes there to seek out the new apartment of a friend!

A map, a compass, an efficient radar, and a seeing-eye dog are not enough to do the job without precise and explicit directions. For the planners of these colossal housing projects, in their pre-occupation with structural matters, overlooked one vital detail. They forgot to put up any signs.

Mr. Morton then details the necessary ingredients of finding a specific apartment in this complex. "For example, you are looking for No. 10, and you find yourself standing in front of house No. 8. So you walk 100 yards up the street, past five numberless doors, to the next apartment house. It turns out to be No. 6.

"This means retracing your steps 200 yards in the opposite direction to locate No. 10. "But your troubles have only just begun. "The next problem is to locate apartment No. 39 in house No. 10. . . . And on and on and on.

Similar problems exist in the transportation system, stores, industry, etc. Only in a communist system could such incredible inefficiency be maintained. For in any free market, superior competitors would rush to fill the breach—in order to make the profit involved.

And we are afraid of the communists? . . . Harry Browne

YOUR DENTAL HEALTH

Are You a Good Dental Risk?
DEAR DR. LAWRENCE: I am 30 years old. Since I was 16 I've tried desperately to save my teeth. My lowers are O.K., but I have left only the six front ones in the upper. Two of these have had nerves removed and another was treated for abscess. My dentist says these six teeth can be capped and a partial, removable denture made to replace the back teeth. The estimated cost of this work is high, much more than extracting them and having a full upper denture made. I really don't know what to do. Can you help me?

Small Town Mayor Learns Cost of Federal Red Tape

The city of Grandville, Mich., is going to get its long-needed new water system — but no thanks to the Great Society. Actually, local taxpayers are going to have to shell out an additional $70,000 due to cost increases during the many months' delay caused by the Housing and Urban Development Department.

Here is the sad chronology of events as reflected by the correspondence between Grandville's mayor, William A. Timmer, and GOP Rep. Gerald R. Ford who represents the area in Congress.

April 11, 1966 — Grandville applies to HUD for a $245,000 grant to convert the city's ground water system to a Lake Michigan supply system.

April 10, 1967 — The file on application now is one year old and two inches thick, and Mayor Timmer writes Ford to ask if he can learn the status of the application.

April 12, 1967 — Ford replies that HUD reports the application still is in HUD's Chicago regional office. Upon approval, it will be sent to Washington for "further action."

May 12, 1967 — Ford checks with HUD again, is told "the application is in pretty good shape," but there is a question of money.

May 19, 1967 — Ford checks again, can't get a "yes" or "no" reply.

May 24, 1967 — Ford wires Timmer that HUD "reports no change since my letter of May 19 . . ."

June 12, 1967 — HUD tells Ford the application was sent to Washington from the Chicago regional office, but had to be returned for further information.

June 16, 1967 — Mayor Timmer writes Ford: "I would like to advise you our Council has decided to proceed with extensive water system improvements with local financing. We will write HUD requesting our application be withdrawn."

The letter continues: "Some of our frustrations are due, perhaps because of the speeches, brochures, meetings in Washington with the Vice President (Hubert Humphrey) and others all of which lead local communities to believe there is a way to provide the services they know are required . . . When the and go back in time still further, we discover that this same land was occupied before by the ancestors of the Israeli people. And according to the Old Testament, God gave the land to the descendants of Abraham forever. So there is a good case to be built for the Israelis if we point out that this terrain is their ancestral heritage, according to their most deep seated beliefs. They were driven out of captivity. And there is so much more, there is almost no end to it.

What can be seen here is the real problem. Had the Israelis been able to purchase property privately, had they been able to deal with Arab owners in this century, then, instead of having created a new country by political and military methods, they would simply have purchased land and gone to live in the area we used to refer to as Palestine.

But this wasn't done and it is too late for recriminations. It is too late to try to fix blame for events that occurred long ago, or even in recent days. Who is to blame is not the problem. What is to be done from this point forward, is.

I would strongly urge the adoption of private market principles on a wide scale at once by all persons and nations involved. They may not be perfect, but they are the best we have. This means that we should stop thinking and acting as "nationalists" and begin acting as individuals. All products including land, should be made available to the highest bidder irrespective of nationality. This means that a world market would be opened. All trade routes must be opened and kept open. Then goods, services, and people can move freely, as they have the ability and inclination. If we do not come to this realization soon, it will be tragic beyond words to describe.

When two people want the same product or service, they bid against each other and the highest bidder wins. When two nations want the same product or territory, they don't bid, they launch a war. Regardless of where our sympathies lie, and they can be anywhere in this one, let's consider swapping war for market place procedures.

promises turn to dust or become too illusive to catch, frustration mounts . . . Our water improvement costs have increased . . . $70,000 . . . The city is now faced with arranging additional financing which will substantially increase water rates to customers. . . . I am sure our experience is not unique. I cannot help but feel that our tax dollars would go further and be used more wisely if the monies spent through HUD were returned directly to cities on a population basis. It would also be more equitable for all."

To which GOP Leader Ford replied: "Amen."

Pull Up A Chair

By FRANK JAY MARKEY

Charles Hamilton, noted New York authority on autographs, tells us that autograph collecting is the most personal of all hobbies because it brings the collector close to the great men and women of the past. He says many persons collect autographs of their favorite authors for insertion in first editions. Others gather letters and documents for the sheer joy of owning examples of the handwriting of famous men and women. He adds autographs, unlike books, furniture and paintings, take up very little space, generally hold their value, and often prove to be profitable investments. He also pointed out that during the Great Depression they held their value while stocks were plummeting.

Today's smile: A passenger on a commuting train asked the conductor: "Is smoking permitted in this car?" The conductor answered: "No." The passenger persisted: "Well, there are cigarette stubs on the floor. Where did they come from?" The conductor, losing patience, said: "From people who did not ask questions."

A theatrical press agent told us the other day that half of the 21 shows now playing on Broadway will close before Labor Day. He said a few hits like "Mame," "Hello, Dolly!" "Cactus Flower," and "Cabaret" will survive but the new season will see a whole flock of new plays and musicals: We hope there are a few good ones.

Thoughts while shaving: Poker is the national card game because it so well suits the American temperament. It's a game for the individual, where the player is the master of his own fate. It can be a serious game for expert card players, or hilarious one for the family or a group of friends. Ely Culbertson, world-acclaimed authority on Bridge, once said that despite myths to the contrary, poker is a real game of skill and does not necessarily require a gambling element for enjoyment. Taylor, Hornung Back Together Again

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI)—Hard-running Jimmy Taylor, the newest member of the fledgling New Orleans Saints, says he's eager to get into his new uniform and will join the rest of the team Saturday in their San Diego, Calif., training camp.

Taylor, grinning from ear to ear and shaking every hand in sight, announced his contract Thursday in a news conference with Saints owner John W. Mecom Jr. and Louisiana Gov.

John McKeithen. Mecom said the Saints gave up their no. 1 draft choice next year and another player to the Green Bay Packers for the 31-year-old Taylor, who played out his option with the Packers last season.

Neither Mecom nor Taylor would discuss terms of Taylor's new contract. "That's between Jimmy and me," Mecom said. Mecom did say the contract was similar to the one Taylor had with Green Bay and that it was "longer than one year." Packers Wanted More

The terms of the deal between the Packers and the Saints reportedly fell short of what Green Bay coach Vince Lombardi wanted for Taylor, who gained more than 1,000 yards rushing for five consecutive years.

Lombardi had reportedly asked for three first round draft choices.

Mecom said NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle "helped a little" in the deal and "he had been kind of a mediator" between the two teams. Mecom said there was no money involved in the deal.

Taylor said his nine years with the world champion Packers "were satisfying and enjoyable" and quickly added he is looking forward to playing with the Saints.

Taylor, a former All-American at Louisiana State University, said he thinks the Saints will do better than the Atlanta

Falcons did in their first year. Chance at Title

He indicated that he and his old running-mate Paul Hornung, whom the Saints picked up earlier, might give the Saints a shot at the NFL title.

"We have an excellent chance of winning the NFL," said Taylor, "the whole ball of wax."

Saints head coach Tom Fears said he is happy to have Taylor on the club and said the Taylor-Hornung punch "should be a big boost to our team."

"I was at Green Bay for five years while Jim was playing there," said Fears, "and no one knows better than I his value to a football team."

To offset the loss of Taylor from their championship backfield, the Packers turned to the Los Angeles Rams and picked up fullback Ben Wilson, captain of the Southern California team which defeated Wisconsin in the 1963 Rose Bowl.

10-Year-Old To Be Bared From Women's Tour

BALTIMORE (UPI)—At a tender young age when most girls don't even know about the birds and the bees, Beverly Sue Klass knows all about the birdies and the bogeys.

Beverly is playing in pro golf tournaments at the age of 10—but she may be making her last Association said that starting appearance in eight years this weekend in the $15,000 Lady Carling Open golf championships.

Miss Klass has entered the tourney, which started today, but the Ladies Professional Golf next week, players under 18 will not be accepted. The LPGA earlier dropped plans to bar the young girl this week.

It was believed the entry of Miss Klass would violate the child labor laws but a ruling by William Walsh, deputy commissioner of labor and industry, cleared the way for her appearance. He said she would be classified as self-employed and therefore be exempt from child labor laws.

Miss Klass already has played seven rounds in three tourneys, firing an average of 89 in 154 rounds—an incredible mark for a 10-year-old girl. The tour leader, Mickey Wright, has a 72 average.

Miss Klass also has won $131 in unofficial money—a sum somewhat above the average allowances for 10-year-olds even in these days.

While Miss Klass is proving that golf is just a kid's game, Kathy Whitworth will be attempting to defend her title. Miss Whitworth won this tourney last year and has won three already this season, trailing only Susie Maxwell in the money standings.

Miss Wright, who had planned to withdraw from the tourney because of a death in the family but flew back from the West Coast in time to start, is considered another top threat on the 6,400-yard par 36-36-72 Pine Ridge course. Miss Wright has won just about everything in women's golf but has never

IT'S LIKE OLD TIMES at Chicago's Wrigley Field, with crowds pouring through the turnstiles to watch the Cubs as they haven't in years. Two good reasons for the upsurge are Ferguson Jenkins (left inset), who has 10 pitching victories, and manager Leo Durocher (right inset) who has molded the young team into a genuine challenger in the National League.

MAJOR LEAGUE ROUNDUP

Lee Loses Both Ways With Cards

By United Press International

Bob Lee had less success trying to pitch to Orlando Cepeda than he did trying to fight him.

The Cincinnati Reds' reliever, making his first appearance Thursday night since he helped trigger a wild brawl Monday night, was the victim of Cepeda's "gamer"—game winning hit.

Cepeda stroked a single off Lee with two out in the bottom of the ninth inning to drive in Bob Toland and give the league-leading St. Louis Cardinals a 6-5 victory.

"I wasn't bothered by the fact that Lee was pitching," Cepeda said after the game, "actually we didn't even meet Monday night."

The incident started Monday night when Card pitcher Bob Gibson was exchanging words with the Reds' Tony Perez and Cepeda stepped in to make sure things didn't get out of hand.

The Sound And Fury

But Lee suddenly came charging out of the leftfield bullpen and immediately both dugouts emptied and the scuffle was on. Lee claimed "Cepeda was threatening Perez and he was coming to Perez's aid."

The other versions of the incident were different and even Perez denied that Cepeda was threatening him—but regardless, Cepeda and Lee didn't tangle.

"Fighting is for Cassius Clay and the birds," Cepeda said at the time and he let his bat do his talking Thursday night.

He collected three hits to raise his league-leading average to .359. He hit a two-run homer in the fourth inning and Tim McCarver, the next batter, followed with another homer.

The Reds battled back for a 5-3 lead on Perez' two-run homer in the sixth and a run-scoring single by Deron Johnson in the eighth.

Queen For A Night

Julian Javier hit a two-run homer for the Cards in the eighth to tie the game 5-5 and Lee then came on in the ninth in relief of starter Mel Queen.

Toland, subbing for all-star outfielder Lou Brock, collected his third hit, a single, and moved to second when Lee walked Curt Flood. Cepeda then stroked his two-out single to decide the game.

It was a key victory for the slumping but league-leading Cardinals, who have won only five of their last 14 games. Since Chicago suffered its fourth straight defeat, a 4-3 loss to Houston, the victory boosted St. Louis' league-lead to 1 1/2 games.

In the only other major league game, the Baltimore Orioles turned back Chicago to cut the White Sox' American League-lead over second place Minnesota to 2 1/2 games.

Astros Fly High

The Astros jumped on Cubs' starter Ferguson Jenkins for three runs before he retired a batter but Jim Wynn's eighth-inning homer proved to be the margin of victory. Singles by Sonny Jackson and Joe Morgan, Wynn's run-scoring double and Ed Mathews' two-run single gave Houston a 3-0 lead. Jenkins then stopped the Astros until Wynn's eight-inning homer made it 4-1 but it proved to be the difference when the Cubs rallied for two in the ninth. Bo Belinsky got the victory with ninth-inning relief help from Carroll Sembera.

Dave McNally stopped the White Sox on five hits to give Baltimore its victory. Paul Blair and Sam Bowens hit homers off loser Jim O'Toole and Blair also singled in another run to give McNally all the help he needed. Although he still hasn't completely recovered from an inflamed elbow, McNally evened his record at 5-5. Dick Kenworthy homered in the second inning for the only run off McNally.

COACHES ALL AMERICAN

Spurrier Gets Call

ATLANTA (UPI)—Purdue's Bob Griese found himself playing second fiddle to Florida's Steve Spurrier again today when the Heisman Trophy winner was named the starting quarterback for the favored east in Saturday's seventh annual Coaches All America football game.

Griese was runnerup to Spurrier in the Heisman ballot, losing last fall to name the outstanding college back of 1966.

The American Football Coaches Association, sponsor of the All-Star game, apparently muffed a golden opportunity when they named the two ace quarterbacks to the same team.

Observers feel it would have been a bigger attraction if Spurrier and Griese had been opposing quarterbacks instead of teammates since fans have been arguing for three years over which is best.

Spurrier completed 392 passes for 4,848 yards and 37 touchdowns in Southeastern Conference competition while Griese completed 348 for 4,402 yards and 28 touchdowns in the Big Ten. Both are triple threats who run, punt and placekick as well as pass.

The coaches argue that geographical boundaries forced them to place Spurrier and Griese on the same team although other All-Star events have been known to do a bit of gerrymandering to avoid such a conflict.

The West quarterbacks, Jon Brittenum of Arkansas and James (Bo) Burris of Houston have excellent records but neither gained the reputation, especially in this part of the country, that Spurrier and Griese enjoy.

While East Coach Tom Cahill of Army named Spurrier as his starter, West Coach Bob Devaney of Nebraska selected Brittenum.

The East backfield also will include tailback Floyd Little of Syracuse, fullback Nick Eddy of Notre Dame and either Gary Rowe of North Carolina State or Dave Dunaway of Duke at flanker.

The West will have Mel Farr of UCLA at tailback, Rod Sherman of Southern Cal at flanker and either Harry Wilson of Nebraska or 240-pound Roy McDonald of Idaho at fullback.

Cahill named Little, center Bob Hyland of Boston College and linebacker Jim Lynch of Notre Dame as tri-captains for the East while Devaney named split end Dave Williams as offensive captain for the West and middle guard Loyd Phillips of Arkansas as defensive captain.

National-American Stars To Play Here Tonight

Two queens will be crowned tonight—a National American and National League All-Stars will do battle at Optimist Club Park with ceremonies beginning at 8 p.m.

Newt Secret will serve as Master of Ceremonies for the queen crowning and program.

Following the program All-Stars from the American and National leagues will do battle. The National league stars will represent Pampa in the district tournament at Olton.

The Stars meet Canyon in first round action at 5 p.m. Monday and a victory would put them in a 5 p.m. game Tuesday against the Plainview Spearman-Stinnett winner.

Pampa will be entered with Plainview, Dumas, Olton, Muleshoe, Spearman, and Stinnett.

Wildlife Commission Cuts Four Days off Dove Season

AUSTIN (UPI)—The Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission cut from six to four days Thursday the hunting season on the South Texas whitewing dove.

But the Commission opened up public hunting for the first time in a bird sanctuary in the area.

The commission set the 1967 whitewing season in the Texas Lower Rio Grande Valley and along the Texas-Mexican coast for the weekends of Sept. 2-3, and Sept. 9-10. The season was six days last year.

The annual mourning dove shoot was kept about the same as a year ago.

Newcombe 2-1 Tennis Favorite

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI)—Unseeded Wilhelm Bungert and third ranked John Newcombe meet today for the men's single championship at the 81st Wimbledon Lawn Tennis Championship.

Newcombe, who never has won a major tennis tournament was installed by London bookmakers as a 2-1 favorite to return the men's title to Australia where it has gone for eight of the last 11 years.

Bungert, a 28-year-old German, was the sixth non-seeded player to reach the Wimbledon finals. None of his predecessors, however, were able to capture the title.

Saturday's women's singles final will be more to form when the tournament's top-seeded defending champion, Billie Jean King of Alhambra, Calif., meets the third seeded local favorite, Ann Haydon Jones of England.

Both advanced to the final Thursday, Mrs. King with an easy 6-0, 6-3 victory over Kathy Harter of Seal Beach, Calif., and Mrs. Jones with a tense 2-6, 6-2, 7-5 triumph over the darling of the crowd, teenager Rosemary Casals of San Francisco.

Bungert never had beaten Newcombe and in their most recent meeting the 23-year-old Australian came back to win in last year's U.S. championships after Bungert had taken the first two sets.

ITS CATCHING

DOVER, England (UPI)—Ten British students are to leave here Friday to travel 6,000 miles across the Sahara and West Africa to catch fleas.

Among the things they hope to discover about the 500 varieties of fleas is how many fleas an African animal can support. Terry Fox, 23, a zoology student, said the British average is eight.

The central range of the Andes Mountains cuts down through southeastern Bolivia and into Argentina. It is a region of roaring rivers, precipitous cliffs and jungle cover that makes aerial observation impossible. Even jeeps cannot negotiate its trails.

It is two-gun country reminiscent of the United States' old Wild West. Strangers seldom stay overnight in the scattered towns whose people are suspicious and unfriendly.

Speaking from behind a desk cluttered with official papers, Bolivian President Rene Barrientos in La Paz in April told this correspondent he estimated about 400 guerrillas, mostly foreigners, were undergoing training in those mountains of southern Bolivia.

Their orders, he said, came 100 per cent from Communist Cuba. But he added, "We are serene. We are unafraid."

Wall Street Chatter

NEW YORK (UPI)—Good body & Co. says it does not expect a sustained market advance presently in light of the uncertainty regarding administration fiscal and tax policies, the upcoming second quarter preparation earnings reports and diminishing prospects of a major business recovery early in the second half of the year.

Still, the analyst suggests that individual issues offer "attractive" values.

Wright advisory reports says the recessionary influences predicted for 1967 by the stock market last year are much more likely to appear in 1968. The investment firm says it does not suggest the market is headed for a "general collapse" in the fall partly because strong buying support based on solid fundamental values would move in on any significant decline.

Stanley Heller & Co. notes that the loss of momentum in the stock market, particularly among the blue chips, indicates a "developing attitude of uncertainty" regarding the outlook for interest rates and taxes. It points out that the "more tempered" performance of many top investment issues still hasn't cast its reflection on speculative issues, "thus magnifying the market's divergent

JAMBOREE GATEWAY -- Five Pampans who helped construct this eight-foot tall cowboy and Indian hold up the frontier models for inspection in front of Mrs. Billy Davis' home, 2536 Duncan. Those going to the annual Boy Scout World Jamboree in Idaho in August are Bill Gething, scoutmaster, left, and his son, Mark, center. Mrs. Davis (second from left assisted by Janie Leverich and Peggy Ragdale, right, painted the display which includes the cowboy and Indian and a 12-foot teepee. Miss Leverich is daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Leverich, 1824 Christine. Miss Ragdale's parents are Mr. and Mrs. William J. Ragdale, 1709 Coffee.

AT WORLD JAMBOREE

Cowboy, Indian to Identify Pampa Scouts

Several Pampans are working in Idaho's Farragot State Park on a cowboy, a peace-pipe smoking Indian and a 12-foot teepee to mark the gateway of Mrs. Billy Davis of 2536 Duncan, assisted by Peggy Ragdale, and Janie Leverich, have helped paint the eight-foot cowboy and Indian which will stand beside the teepee marking the entrance to Gething's camp area.

Gething will direct jamboree activities of boys in Troop 25, His son, Mark, and another Pampa youth, John Karr, will be members of Troop 28, which will be directed by Gerald E. Cole of Midland, Clouis H. Hansen of Del Rio and James C. Gormley of Hobbs, N.M.
 Karr is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Karr 1112 N. Somerville.

The two troops, 25 and 28, include boys in the West Range of Jamboree jurisdiction, which includes Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma and parts of Arkansas and Arizona.

They will meet in Amarillo July 24 for a pre-jamboree training session and will set up camp at Camp Herrington, 10 miles south of Amarillo.

Gething's assistants with Troop 23 are Ernest Bolton of Albuquerque, N.M., and Bobby J. Moody of Lubbock.

In making pre-jamboree plans, scoutmasters have met via short wave radio networks organized here by Herman Whatley. The next shortwave scoutmasters meeting is July 13, Gething said.

Scouts and leaders from Midland area are building a camp area gateway in Midland for boys from Troop 28, because the troop leader is from Midland, Gething said.

Gething also attended a world jamboree in 1963, in Athens, Greece and prepared a gateway display for his camp area.

Gething, his son Mark, and the Karr youth will spend two weeks sightseeing and camping with 14,000 Scouts and leaders from 100 nations.

The ninth World Jamboree will be a display of international skills in camping, outdoor craft and folklore and demonstrate the 60th anniversary theme "For Friendship."

Scouts and leaders attending the jamboree will participate in flag ceremonies, arena shows, a rodeo, campfire programs, archery, conservation, outdoor cooking, swimming, fishing, boating and canoeing, scout skills, booth displays and a scoutcraft adventure trail designed to show resourcefulness of patrols.
