Energy Advisor Warning Of 'Sunday Driving' Ban

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A nationwide ban on Sunday driving and other emergency energy-saving measures are "very real possibilities" because of the nation's energy crisis, one of President Nixon's top energy advisers warned Congress today.

Charles DiBona, the President's special assistant for fuel, told a joint House-Senate hearing that even total compliance with current conservation measures such as turning down thermostats and a 50-mile per hour speed limit will not be sufficient.

He said that an optimistic assessment of these conservation measures, plus hope for increases in domestic supplies, will provide only 2.3 million barrels of oil a day while the shortage is about 3 million barrels a day.

"This means that we're going to have to have stronger, strict mandatory measures," asked Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis.

"Yes sir, and soon," DiBona replied. DiBona said that among the "very real possibilities" the administration was considering a ban on Sunday driving. He said that 25 per cent of all gasoline used in private cars is consumed on weekends.

Among other proposals being considered are a ban on fuels for private boats and aircraft; closing public parks to automobiles; closing service stations on weekends; and blue laws to close all businesses on Sunday, he said.

Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., chairman of the Joint Economic Committee, asked if gasoline rationing was not a better alternative.

"We have people aggressively pursuing a rationing program, but it's a tough, tough job to draw up a plan that is equitable," DiBona said. "If we can take other steps we should."

DiBona said one proposal the government was considering would make it mandatory for people to lower their thermostats to 68 degrees, accomplished by delivering only sufficient fuel oil to heat their homes at that level.

DiBona said that the administration estimates the energy shortage at about 18 per cent—based on the assumption the Arab petroleum boycott continues and it will be a normal winter.

President Nixon says he has asked Congress only for "contingency" authority to ration gasoline if that becomes necessary. He told a televised news conference with Associated Press managing editors in Orlando, Fla., Saturday that "our goal is to make it not necessary."

Two Democratic senators disagreed with the President's assessment Sunday. Sen. William Proxmire, Wis., said "Gasoline rationing is essential. We have to have it no matter what happens. As it looks now we're going to have gasoline rationing for at least a year or so."

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, Mont., said rationing "is the only way that I can see, hard though it may be."

Mansfield said the President already has authority to ration gasoline under the 1950 Emergency Defense Act, "but he doesn't want to do it. He will, as he said last night, consider it only as a last resort, but in the meantime, the economy will burn, and people will freeze and industries will close down, unemployment will increase, inflation will go up and we're just paving the way to a recession next year."

Mansfield was interviewed on NBC's "Meet the Press," Proxmire, on CBS' "Face the Nation."

Congress is sharply divided on the issue. The Senate voted 48 to 40 last week to reject an amendment to the energy crisis bill, which would have required gasoline ration by Jan. 15, leaving it instead up to the President. The Senate scheduled eight hours of debate today on the bill, to give the President emergency powers to deal with the energy shortage, including rationing authority.

Division was also apparent within the administration. Energy adviser John A. Love, Interior Secretary Rogers C. B. Morton and domestic affairs adviser Melvin R. Laird have all talked of rationing as inevitable. Herbert Stein, head of the Council of Economic Advisers, has suggested raising gasoline taxes as a better way of limiting use of gasoline.

But Caspar W. Weinberger, secretary of health, education and welfare, said in a UPI weekend interview "I don't know that at this point it is necessary to increase taxes or to ration," presumably meaning slower driving and fewer trips, and efforts to increase supply.

FOR EUROPEANS Arabs Relaxing Oil Restrictions

VIENNA (UPI) — Arab oil-producing nations partially relaxed their oil cutbacks for Europe today, but Saudi Arabia Oil Minister Sheikh Ahmed Z. Yamani told Japan it must sever relations with Israel to qualify for supplies of Arab oil.

The Organization of Arab Oil Exporting Countries (OAPEC) has decided that those countries which are affected by reductions will be exempted on the condition that they assist the Arabs in a very significant way and force the Israelis to withdraw from occupied Arab territories, Yamani said.

Japan cannot help us militarily, so the second thing to do is cut relations with Israel," Yamani said.

Yamani spoke to newsmen after a three-hour meeting of ministers of the 12 members of the Organization of Oil Exporting Countries (OPEC).

(In Tokyo, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs told its ambassadors in Arab countries today to ask that Japan be granted the same exemption from the Arab oil embargo that was given Western European countries.

(It said instructions were issued to ambassadors of the 10 countries belonging to OAPEC. A spokesman said ambassadors in Tokyo of the 10 nations also will be summoned to the Foreign Ministry to hear a similar request.

(The Ministry told Japanese ambassadors to tell the Arab governments that there is no difference between Japan's position in the Middle East crisis and that of the Common Market nations.)

The Arab oil nations agreed Sunday at a meeting in Vienna to call off a new five per cent cut in Common Market petroleum shipments scheduled to go into effect next month.

In other developments, Romania became the first Communist nation to order tough fuel rationing measures to cope with expected energy shortages and Belgium joined Holland in banning Sunday driving.

Foreign Ministry officials in Bangkok said China has offered to sell surplus Middle East oil to Thailand, one of America's major allies, and other unidentified Southeast Asian countries.

The Organization of Arab Petroleum Exporting Countries said, however, a 25 per cent cut ordered last month would remain in effect and scheduled five per cent monthly reductions would resume in January.

Astros Tell Lie On Health State

HOUSTON (UPI) — Skylab 3 crewman William R. Pogue becomes a space fixit man today to put a fresh supply of fluid in the flying research ship's cooling system that works like a car radiator.

The crew reported no more motion sickness Sunday and officials considered closed an incident Saturday night in which it was discovered the pilots had lied to doctors about the state of their health.

Pogue, mission commander Gerald P. Carr and scientist Edward G. Gibson were running only two hours behind schedule in getting their eight almost three months of research work.

"Like Skylab 2," flight director Neil Hutchinson said, "their initial whack at everything is taking 150 per cent of the time it should."

But he said that was only because the astronauts were still learning their way around the spaceship and like the first two crews, the "learning curve" should improve.

Hutchinson said for the fixit job, Pogue will clamp a valve over one of the cooling system's lines, screw it into the line for about three minutes and fill the system with fluid. The radiator-like system that keeps electronic gear cool has been using a backup line since the middle of the Skylab 2 flight.

Hutchinson said if the repairs are successful, the astronauts can use cooling fluid to air condition their spacesuits Thanksgiving Day when they are scheduled to go on possibly the longest spacewalk ever.

If they have to use an air cooled system during the outside work, they might have to break the planned 6½ hour spacewalk into two parts, Thursday and Friday.

There was no more discussion Sunday of the discovery by ground controllers that the rookie scientist lied their first day in orbit Friday when they said none of them had vomited. Officials found out Pogue had only after tape recordings the crew thought were private were sent to the ground Saturday morning.

Chief astronaut Alan B. Shepard in an open radio message sharply rebuked the men for the "serious error in judgment" and Carr agreed the crew made "a dumb decision."

Privately officials said they wanted the public scolding of the astronauts because of concern the crew might try to keep other things from flight controllers.

Youth Admits Setting Blaze At L.A. Hotel

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A young drifter with an arson record, paroled only a week earlier from an Arizona reform school, has admitted setting the deadliest structural blaze in the city's history, police said Sunday.

Michael Altenburger, 18, was being held on suspicion of murder in the Stratford Apartment fire, which killed 24 persons late Thursday night and early Friday.

Police and arson investigators said they would bring charges against Altenburger today or Tuesday.

Retired Roman Catholic Cardinal John Francis McIntire was to say a special mass today for the dead—most of whom were Mexican-Americans—at a church in the downtown Los Angeles neighborhood of the Stratford.

The case against Altenburger includes "physical evidence" in addition to his confession, investigators said. They would not say what that evidence is.

Altenburger was arrested some distance away, near the UCLA campus, by officers who found him sleeping on a bench at a bus stop, and brought in for routine questioning.

Police said it was learned that he had been paroled Nov. 8; his 18th birthday, from the state Industrial School for Boys at Ft. Grant, Ariz., where he was sent after an arrest in September, 1972, for arson at a Tucson mobile home lot where he lived.

Oil Firms Called 'Selfish'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Thomas J. McIntyre, D-N.H., charged the major American oil companies today with incompetence and selfishness for failing to see the coming of the energy crisis.

McIntyre, in the opening Senate debate on the emergency energy bill, said the oil companies, with the Nixon administration a "willing accessory," have "betrayed the trust of the American people."

The Senate set aside eight hours today for debate on the energy bill that would give President Nixon wide powers to meet the crisis, including rationing gasoline. A vote was expected before the day was out.

The Senate hoped to recess Wednesday for Thanksgiving and return Nov. 26. Most House members, except those on the Judiciary Committee studying the vice presidential nomination of Gerald R. Ford, left Washington Thursday.

McIntyre contended the oil industry had denied for years that an emergency was coming, had opposed repeal of oil import quotas, had urged the American public to use more oil, had built too few new refineries, and had turned their profits into fields other than energy.

"I still cannot find it in me to believe that the industry contrived the oil shortage to drive prices up," he said.

"But, I can find it in me to believe that today's fuel crisis can be laid directly to the betrayal of the public trust by the major American oil companies. I am charging these giants of the industry with gross incompetence, stubborn blindness, with selfishness and with a lack of foresight that seems totally incredible."

He said the administration has accepted industry's word without questioning.

"While the crisis is hurting," he said, "the major oil companies are reaping windfall profits of historic dimensions."

Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., said, "There is a great need in this country to get off the energy binge." He said the two new trade towers in New York City use enough electricity to light and heat Syracuse.

Sen. Charles McC. Mathias Jr., R-Md., said, "I am a little distressed that we've heard so little from Detroit on this debate. It would have been a help if we heard from the auto manufacturers that an efficient small car would be developed—that instead of building bigger autos, they will soon be building more efficient autos and give Americans the greatest mileage per gallon."

Sewage Treatment Plans Get New 'Shot Of Life'

By TEX DEWEESE

A new shot of life was injected today into Pampa's long-pending order from the Texas Water Quality Board to bring the city's sewage treatment plant up to state standards.

The rejuvenation was in the form of a telephone call from the Environmental Protection Agency to Mayor R. D. Wilkerson asked city officials to appear in Dallas at 8 a.m. next Monday for a conference in regard to Pampa's application for a federal grant to help construct the proposed $570,000 project.

Added to that was a letter received by City Manager Mack Wofford notifying the city that a public hearing has been rescheduled for Monday Dec. 17, in Austin at which examiners of the Texas Water Quality Board will consider revision of the Municipal Construction Grant Priority List for fiscal 1974.

The meeting will be in the Texas Highway Department auditorium, 11th and Brazos Sts. Austin.

Hugh C. Yantis Jr., executive director of the TWQB, advised the city manager Pampa's representatives at the hearing will have an opportunity to discuss any matter concerning the priority list.

Wofford said the notice of the hearing stated Pampa still held the No. 10 position on the original priority list issued by the board.

The city manager added that he will be accompanied to the Monday hearing by Mayor Wilkerson and Gene Barber, consultant engineer on the sewage plant project.

If Pampa's original application for federal aid is approved the city would receive 75 per cent of the grant, or $427,500. That would leave the city's share of the construction cost at $152,500.

The TWQB recently notified the city that domestic dischargers are required to chlorinate unless they provide a 25-day retention time in oxidation ponds.

Pampa currently was providing less than 8-day retention time and the City Commission at its meeting last week voted to chlorinate on a temporary basis.

The Water Quality Board stated facilities proposed by the board to bring Pampa's plant up to standard are designed to provide 25-day retention time, and when completed chlorination should no longer be necessary.

LOW IN UPPER 20s Front Threatening Cool Thanksgiving

The sunny, unseasonably warm weather enjoyed by Pampa and area residents thus far this fall will come to an end tonight if early weather forecasts prove accurate.

Freeze warnings, with temperatures expected to dip into the upper 20's tonight, have been issued by various weather services.

"Along with the cold there is a chance of light rain tonight turning to light snow early Tuesday.

The high this afternoon was expected to reach into the mid-60's and the high tomorrow should be around 40 degrees.

The 15 to 25 mph southerly wind which blew today should change to northwesterly tonight and northerly tomorrow.

In UPI reports:

A double-barreled cold front bore down Texas today, bringing the state its first of snow for the season and the promise of a cool Thanksgiving.

Weather forecasters predicted temperatures in the 20s and rain possibly mixed with snow flurries in the Panhandle late tonight and Tuesday.

North Central and Northeast Texas were expected to have thunderstorms tonight, and the north portion of South Central-Southeast Texas the same on Tuesday.

"There is a pretty good shot of moisture in the air and we could have some real bangers," a spokesman for the Fort Worth regional National Weather Service said.

A cold front from the Pacific neared West Texas Hours after it starts spreading west to east, colder air from the Central and Northern Rockies, where there already is a snow blanket, will slip into Northwest Texas, triggering light rain and possible snow.

The Pacific front should push through the rest of the state Tuesday followed by the arctic air.

An unseasonably cold Thanksgiving was expected in West Texas with fair, cool weather in the rest of the state.

Group To Attend Miami C-C Meet

Rex McAnelly, president of the Chamber of Commerce, and Mrs. McAnelly, along with Chamber Manager E. O. Wedgeworth and Mrs. Wedgeworth will attend tonight's annual meeting of the Miami Chamber of Commerce.

Max Faulkner, president of the First State Bank of Miami, is the current president of the Miami Chamber.

Wedgeworth will install the new slate of officers for the Miami Chamber's new year.

ONE OF THE DEAD — Firemen administer oxygen and external heart massage to an unidentified victim of a fire in a 3-story apartment complex near downtown Los Angeles on Friday in which 24 persons died. A young suspect with an arson record, Michael Altenburger, 18, has admitted setting the blaze.

Board Re-admits 2 PHS Youths

Two Pampa High School students who were suspended from school last week for alleged possession of narcotics were reinstated in school today at the recommendation of PHS principal Don Walker.

Walker told members of the school board, meeting in executive session at Carver Center this morning, that he had outlined to the students and their parents the conditions under which they could return to school.

The board then voted to allow the two readmission.

An open meeting of the board scheduled this morning to discuss drug-related problems affecting students in the district was postponed until Monday, Nov. 26, at 7:30 p.m. at Carver Center.

Amarilloan Hurt In Gun Accident

Gregory Lynn Bunyan, 21, of Amarillo was treated at Highland General Hospital for shotgun pellet wounds to the lower abdomen yesterday morning following a hunting accident at a ranch between Berger and Skellytown.

Bill Tarpley of Amarillo told Pampa police officers he, his 12-year-old son and Bunyan went to the ranch to go quail hunting.

Tarpley said when they arrived at the ranch, Bunyan got out of the vehicle and was standing beside it. Tarpley then got out and reached for his shotgun, which discharged accidentally, reports said, wounding Bunyan.

Following emergency treatment in Pampa, Bunyan was transferred to High Plains Baptist Hospital in Amarillo where he is in fair condition today.

Ben-Gurion Ill

TEL AVIV (UPI) — David Ben-Gurion, former prime minister of Israel and one of the founders of the Jewish state, was in "serious condition" today after being partially paralyzed by a stroke.

Doctors at Tel Hashomer hospital outside Tel Aviv said the white-haired, 87-year-old elder statesman was felled Sunday by a cerebral hemorrhage that paralyzed his right side.

This hungry world The real question: Do we care?

"They that die by famine, die by inches."
—Matthew Henry

By Don Oakley
(Last in a series)

Humanity's food supply is at a critical point. On the one hand, "the chance of enough food for millions of human beings may simply depend on the whims of one year's weather," as FAO Director-General A.H. Boerma warned recently.

In other words, many, many people are living precariously close to the edge of starvation.

On the other hand, hunger can be all but eliminated from human experience if man is willing to make this his highest common global priority.

What it all comes down to is will and money.

The real power to provide an adequate diet for the world lies with the rich and powerful nations of the world.

For, as most observers point out, the food gap between the wealthy few and the poor majority on the planet, is at root a reflection of the increasingly lopsided distribution of the world's income.

For instance, the developing countries — where malnutrition is a fact of life for 40 to 80 per cent of the people — have been severely deprived of their share of world commerce. Where the developing world accounted for 40 per cent of world trade 10 years ago, their share today is 17 per cent.

During the U.N.'s First Development Decade, ending in 1970, the total gross world product increased by $1.1 TRILLION, 80 per cent of which went to the industrialized countries with only one-quarter of the world's population.

Only 6 per cent of the increase went to the 60 per cent of the earth's population with yearly incomes of $200 or less.

The only way to reverse this trend is for the wealthy countries — the U.S., Western Europe, the Soviet Union, Australia, Canada, Japan — to give outright, or else make available on easy loan terms, more capital and machinery to speed agricultural growth in the poor countries.

The poor countries, themselves, must restructure their agriculture away from primitive, subsistence farming in order to increase output and provide jobs for their expanding populations.

For this to happen, there must be a drastic rearranging of world trade patterns which encourage poor countries to specialize in crops (such as cocoa) which bring in foreign capital but fail to feed their own people.

The need for cash in the developing countries has resulted in such paradoxes as Peruvian fish, which could supply critically important protein for malnourished Peruvians, being exported to the United States.

The situation is aggravated by tariffs and non-tariff barriers which the wealthy nations use to suppress economic growth in the poor countries.

Robert McNamara, World Bank President, says that with one hand, we help poor countries and then, with the other, we penalize them for competing with us in manufactures.

Nor has foreign aid been as great as commonly believed. The U.S. ranks near the bottom of the list in terms of aid to poor countries. When interest and principal payments on previous loans are deducted from our 1973 foreign aid, for example, the Nixon administration's request for $3.3 billion is chopped down to $1.3 billion — about one-tenth of 1 per cent of each American's less than two cents a day.

Clearly, drastic and concerted effort is needed on the part of the well-fed world to increase standards of living and food output in the poor world and, coincidentally, begin to reduce population growth rates.

One plan currently being proposed by Boerma involves a whole series of national and international actions to ensure stable, orderly growth of world food production and trade, and to expand money-making opportunities for the developing world.

The plan would reduce or eliminate artificial barriers to world trade.

A third element to the FAO plan is a stockpile of emergency food supplies against local famines wrought by drought, flood, frost or blight. But it is a band-aid measure, targeted at spot crises.

If this — or any — plan is to succeed, to bring the people of the world into some sort of humane balance, it must be implemented on a global basis — and fast.

Not just the U.S. but all the wealthy countries can, and must, in their own self-interest, do more to remedy the maldistribution of the world's wealth.

Investment Chatter

NEW YORK (UPI) — "Rather painfully, the stock market is adjusting itself to suddenly revised and sobered expectations" as a result of the energy crisis, according to W. E. Hutton & Co. Despite rampant pessimism over the future of the U.S. economy, which is dependent upon the lavish use of energy, the firm advises investors to consider stocks related in some way to an amelioration of the energy crisis. "Many of the much-hurt areas... have gone a long way to discount poor prospects," it adds.

The recent market fall was not only healthy and long overdue, "but it generated a score of bright signs to indicate that we are headed for a very welcome and soundly constructed bull market sometime in late 1973 or early 1974," says Sindlinger & Co., Inc., of Swarthmore, Pa. The small investor has not been soured by the plunge and is stocking up-cash for an auspicious return to the market when it appears to have hit bottom, the firm continues. And most important, the market "started to snap back to its proper levels which are dictated by expectations of consumer spending as reported by consumers themselves," it adds.

Despite financial market gyrations, political uncertainty and the energy crisis, the economy is following the general pattern that economists had foreseen earlier this year, says Argus Research Corp. Virtually all the economists agree the slowdown will continue to the middle of next year, the firm continues, "and most forecasters see a pickup in business activity sometime after mid-1974." Inflation forecasts now are uniformly high with economists concurring the "1974 rate of price increase will be 5 per cent as measured by the GNP deflator and 6 1/2 per cent as measured by the Consumer Price Index," it says. The firm adds the typical economist expects a removal of controls sometime next year.

The Woman's View

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Never underestimate the power of the woman in the automotive industry.

First off, of the number of drivers in the United States an estimated 42 to 43 per cent are women, or between 45 and 50 million of them behind the wheel.

Secondly, it's estimated that 21 per cent of car purchases are made by women and certainly she influences further when she and husband shop together for a car.

"When a husband and wife go to a dealer, it's like a flip of a coin on who's the final determinant," said Gene Bordinat, vice president for design at the Ford Motor Co., Dearborn, Mich.

More Color
And because of that feminine influence, the manufacturers have both turned to more color inside and out and also to mechanical changes women wanted.

Even so, the world of actual design still belongs to men, even though the driver may be a wife or daughter more often than hubby.

Donald F. Kopka, executive director of interior design at Ford, counted them on his fingers—two clay modelers, two in trim and color, one in exterior design, and two in the industrial design division.

"I don't think it's a case of discrimination," said Kopka. "It's just that women are not made aware of this area as a Bordinat and Kopka, joined by K. David Ash, also of the company's interior designer division, spoke of women's role during a New York news conference held primarily for reporters in the fashion and home furnishings fields.

Change in Upholstery
One major change was made in upholstery surfaces in the interior because of what some fabrics did to fur. The company calls it the "minking test."

"Several years ago, we discovered that some of our seat materials were pulling the hair from women's mink coats," Bordinat recalled. "The cloth would part just enough to allow mink hairs to penetrate the weave, then snap back when the woman left the car. So we designed a test to detect problem weaves."

The influence women have had on color is one of the greatest, the three men agreed. Two generations ago, they said, the buyer had a choice of two interior colors—tan or gray—and three fabrics.

Now Ford alone has 552 trim sets and figures that, as Kopka said, "what's inside the car is the final selling point."

MYSTERY CRIME
MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — A Montgomery woman told police that someone had entered her home and left behind an unusual trail.

The woman said she found an extra pair of panties in her bureau. A window shade that had been down was pulled up. And an extra soft drink bottle was present. Nothing, she said, was missing.

The Lighter Side

By DICK WEST
WASHINGTON (UPI) — All U.S. Presidents are hard pressed for time, Richard Nixon more than most.

Besides attending to affairs of state, which more than fill a normal working day, Nixon has been obliged to make time for a host of activities not imposed on previous Presidents.

Thus he must operate on an extremely tight schedule, which may run something like this:

6:30 a.m.—Alarm clock goes off. Gets out of bed, turns off alarm and turns on tape recorder.

6:32 a.m.—Slips on robe, pours cup of coffee and glances at headlines in Washington Post.

6:33 a.m.—Slings paper across room and takes two aspirins.

Henry Not Home Yet
6:35 a.m.—Calls Henry Kissinger to check on overnight Middle East developments.

6:37 a.m.—Calls to congratulate Coach George Allen of Washington Redskins on last Sunday's victory.

6:44 a.m.—Phones kitchen to order breakfast. Asks chef to put a little more ketchup on the cottage cheese.

7:15 a.m.—Goes into study to listen to playbacks of Watergate tapes.

7:18 a.m.—Awakens Pat and asks if she remembers where he put the tapes of his conversations with John Dean.

7:20 a.m.—Searches for missing tapes until time to go to Oval Office downstairs.

7:30 a.m.—Arrives in Oval Office.

Office. Checks thermostat to make certain room temperature is 68 degrees.

7:32 a.m.—Kissinger returns call. Conversation difficult because of party noises in background.

Turns on TV Set
8 a.m.—Turns on TV set to hear news report on latest Middle East developments.

8:06 a.m.—Dictates memo on distorted reporting by network newscasters.

8:12 a.m.—Asks Alexander Haig to bring in list of Cabinet officers. Refreshes memory as to who is currently serving as attorney general and calls Justice Department to discuss Watergate investigation by special prosecutor.

8:21 a.m.—Calls Counsel Fred Buzhardt to discuss Watergate investigation by federal court.

8:27 a.m.—Calls Sen. Baker to discuss Watergate investigation by Senate committee.

8:30 a.m.—Calls George Allen to wish him luck in next Sunday's game.

8:45 a.m.—Delegation of House Republicans arrives to discuss Watergate case.

9:30 a.m.—Delegation of Senate Republicans arrives to discuss Watergate case.

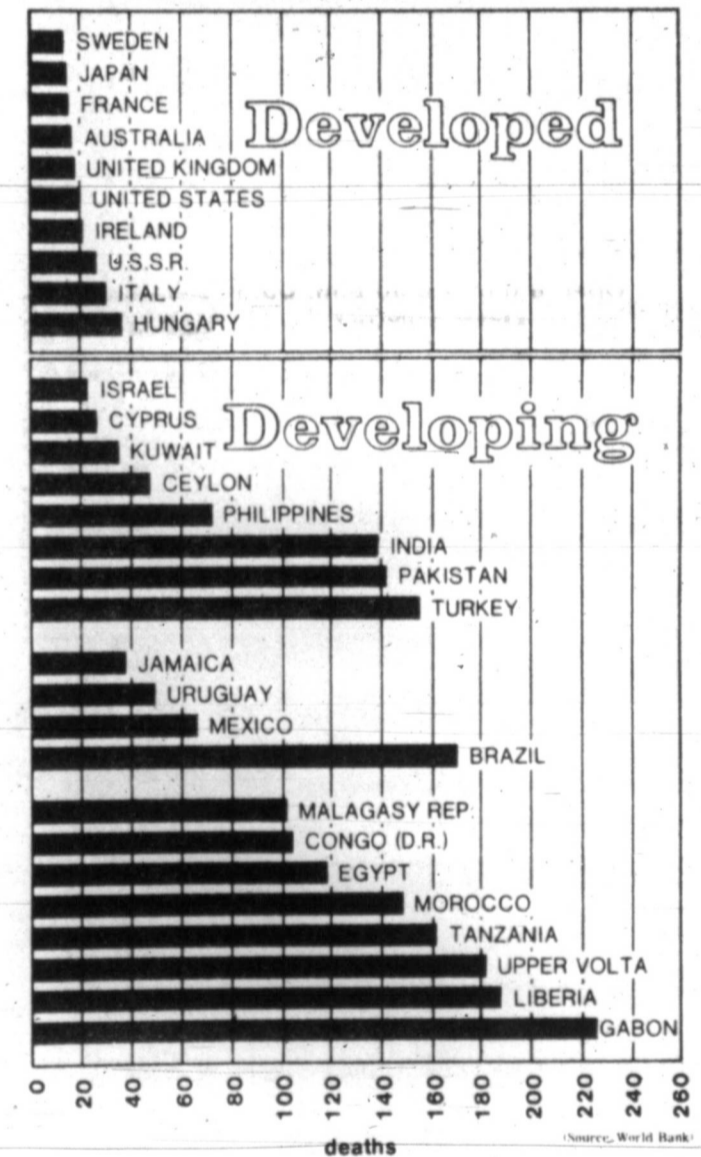

10:15 a.m.—Goes to White House press room to deny leaks by House and Senate Republicans.

And so on far into the night.

BATTIN' AROUND

SEN. HART SAYS

Government Should Build
Nine New Oil Refineries

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., said Saturday he will introduce a bill to require the government to build nine new oil refineries to help end a potential lack of refining capacity.

Under Hart's plan, the government would sell the refineries to the public through stock offerings. Major oil companies would not be able to participate.

That would mean "injecting more competition into the industry," Hart said in a statement.

He added he also will propose a bill, after Congress' Thanksgiving recess, to cancel any natural gas rate increases recently that were tied to things other than increased costs of producing the gas. Future rate increases would have to be tied to costs, Hart proposed.

"There is no evidence higher prices will bring forth more natural gas," Hart said. "In fact, our experience seems to suggest the opposite...the federal power commission has been letting prices rise fantastically."

By C.R. BATTEN
"Extremes are always dangerous," Henry J. Taylor wrote in a recent column. Maybe so, from the point of view of those who fear change. Yet, most, if not all great discoveries were made by extremists whose extreme ideas led them to those discoveries.

Christopher Columbus believed that the world was round — certainly an extreme idea in the days when everybody knew the world was flat. So he discovered America. Certain extremists of colonial America signed one of the most extreme documents of all time — the Declaration of Independence — and created our nation.

Whether a movement based on extreme ideas results in progress or in retrogression depends, not on the fact that it is extreme, but on the foundations on which it is based. If the ideas are based on sound knowledge and reason in a genuine search for truth, then hurrah for the extremes.

Taylor's column was the most shrill blast at the "environmental propagandists" that I have yet seen. Their opposition to the mining of low-sulphur coal beds in the West "literally borders on lunacy," wrote Taylor.

Now, he said, the environmentalists are even blaming the periodic and suicidal emigrations of the lemmings to the sea on pulp and paper mills along the coast of Norway. The lemmings normally live on bare mountain tops or Arctic tundra. Their march to the sea was reported at least as early as 1868.

THE BOOT PINCHES
Those persons who favor evermore national parks should take a second look at what they have wrought, and see if they would like to be in the boots that they have lasted for others. Perhaps they could even see that the same tyranny of majority rule could be turned against them in other circumstances.

The bill to create the Voyageurs National Park in Minnesota was passed by Congress about two years ago. The Park Service is expected to begin to acquire land for the park in November.

In the meantime, the major private landowner in the area has maintained several campgrounds and has continued to pay taxes on the property, yet has received no income from it since the park bill was passed.

The minute the President signed the act creating the Redwood National Park in California the ownership of the private lands within the boundaries was transferred to the United States Government. That was in 1968, and the former owners still have not been paid for the land that was taken.

This is one of the practices that led certain extremists to sign that revolutionary document in 1776. Article V of the Bill of Rights says "...nor shall private property be taken for public use without just compensation."

A FOOTNOTE

There is good reason to believe that even within one agency of the federal government, one hand does not know what the other is doing. The northern regional office of the Forest Service, based at Missoula, Mont., has just thrown confusion into the tussock moth issue.

Although Denver, Colo., is known as the "Mile High City," Albuquerque, N.M., actually is 30 feet higher.

Vet Auto Grants Showing Decreases

WACO — Auto grants and adaptive equipment expenditures on service disabled veterans totaled $6.8 million in fiscal year 1973 — down from $10.5 million a year earlier. Jack Coker, VA Regional Office Director, reported today.

Coker said grants of up to $2,800 toward purchases of cars for 1,705 veterans and servicemen accounted for $4.6 million of fiscal year 1973 expenditures.

The balance ($2.2 million) went for installation, maintenance and repair of special adaptive equipment, such as hand controls, to facilitate driving the cars. In fiscal year 1972, costs of these benefits for 3,265 recipients came to $10.5 million. Benefits totaling $118.5 million have gone to 67,200 since the first $1,600 auto grant was authorized in 1946 under Public Law 79-663 for certain disabled World War II veterans.

Coker noted that throughout the years several laws have expanded and improved the program. Public Law 82-187 (1951), for example, extended eligibility to Korean Conflict veterans, and Public Law 90-77 (1967) further extended it to certain disabled veterans with service after Jan. 31, 1955.

In January 1971, auto grants were increased from $1,600 to $2,800 by Public Law 91-666, which also extended them to servicemen who suffer qualifying disabilities on active duty. In addition, the law gave VA authority to pay for installation, repair and replacement of adaptive equipment.

Car grants and adaptive equipment are available to service disabled veterans of World War II and later periods, and servicemen who suffer loss or loss of use of one or both hands or feet, or incur permanent impairment of vision in both eyes, to a prescribed degree.

The only surviving grandchild of Queen Victoria is Princess Alice, Countess of Athlone, who was born in 1883.

Association Praises Attack On Diabetes

NEW YORK — Pending federal legislation calling for a massive attack on diabetes — the nation's number five killer by disease — was hailed as a major step forward by Mrs. Gail Patrick Jackson, chairman of the Board of the American Diabetes Association.

She made the statement on the occasion of Diabetes Week, held last week in hundreds of communities across the country.

"Since I am a diabetic myself," Mrs. Jackson said, "I feel that I speak not only for the American Diabetes Association, but for every living diabetic."

Bills establishing a national diabetes program have been introduced in both houses of Congress, calling for the expenditure of over $100 million in the next three fiscal years to implement programs in the prevention, control, diagnosis, education and treatment of diabetes.

"This week when national attention is focused on diabetes," Mrs. Jackson said, "it is encouraging to note that the Senate bill will be reported favorably out of committee in the very near future and that hearings have been completed on the House bill."

The American Diabetes Association urges passage of this legislation because even with the most dedicated army of citizen volunteers working in its behalf, the Association alone cannot cope effectively with a problem of this magnitude.

"We can only achieve our goal of finally conquering diabetes when we can work in partnership with the federal government."

"Diabetes is a major health problem in the United States," Mrs. Jackson noted, "since the disease afflicts from five to ten million Americans and there are about 325,000 new cases of diabetes diagnosed each year."

The American Diabetes Association applauds this manifestation of interest of the Congress in one of the most deadly chronic diseases that afflict mankind.

Association applauds this manifestation of interest of the Congress in one of the most deadly chronic diseases that afflict mankind.

She pointed out that 35,000 deaths are attributed to the disease annually.

"Furthermore," she said, "diabetes is the real underlying cause of many thousands of deaths that are officially counted under the heading of heart disease, stroke and kidney disease. It is the second leading cause of new cases of blindness, and it produces blindness almost 20 years earlier than glaucoma, which is the leading cause."

"Many people — through fear or through ignorance," Dr. Seltzer said, "tend to ignore the common symptoms of diabetes: excessive thirst, frequent urination, constant hunger, loss of weight, itching, tiring easily, changes in vision and slow healing of cuts and scratches."

"In fact, it is possible to have diabetes and not know it. That is why we urge all persons to be tested either during Diabetes Week or by their own physicians. If the test is positive, they can be guided in learning proper control of the disease," he concluded.

Unsanitary kitchen has her leery of cooked gifts

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: How does one discourage someone (a relative) from sending cookies, cakes, homemade preserves, and other goodies on any and all occasions? [Especially Thanksgiving and Christmas.]

This person is a dear and generous soul, but her kitchen is far from clean, she has a houseful of small dogs running around, and her place smells like a kennel.

I know she spends a lot of time and energy [not to mention the cost of the ingredients] on these things, and we just throw them out. I suppose it wouldn't kill us to eat these gifts, but I get a mental picture of that filthy kitchen and all those dogs licking the cookie dough off her fingers, and that does it. Any suggestions?

WEAK STOMACH IN W. VA.

DEAR WEAK: You could tell her you're counting your calories [isn't everybody?] and to please help you resist temptation by ceasing and desisting.

DEAR ABBY: We are the parents of six adult children. When our youngest was a senior in college we moved to a retirement community, hoping to make a new life for ourselves. Our two youngest moved in with us—temporarily, they said. That was two years ago, and they are still with us.

We couldn't afford a very large place, so we are very crowded. Not only that, but we still don't have the leisure life I had looked forward to.

Abby, how do you tell two grown children to get out on their own? I would like to set a specific date—like next Monday.

My husband doesn't have the courage to tell the boys to leave, but he feels the same as I. What's the answer? How do other parents handle this delicate situation?

Perhaps I should mention these boys are nonpaying guests.

GOOD OLD MOM

DEAR MOM: Say, "John and Jim" [unless, of course, their names are Bob and Tom], "It's time you left the nest, so spread your wings and take off."

DEAR ABBY: I read a letter in your column from "FRIGHTENED," who was upset because the oil man she invited in for coffee made a pass at her. You told her most men whose jobs took them into homes were straight, and didn't try that. Well, I used to think so, too, but not anymore.

When we were living in town I let a guy who was working on the house next door come in because he asked me for a glass of water. Well, the baby started crying and when I went into his room to check on him, this bum followed me and tried to get funny, but I got away from him. I called up the company he worked for and reported him.

Later we bought a mobile home and once when my husband was out of town I had sewage trouble so I asked the man we rented the space from if he would fix it. Well, he fixed it, and then tried to fix me, too, and I had another battle on my hands.

I am 24 and happily married, and I'd like to know why these creeps always pick on me? Or are all men sex maniacs?

LEARNED A LESSON

DEAR LEARNED: Don't judge all men by the two creeps who gave you a bad time. The lesson you learned, however, is one that all women should learn: Take no chances with strangers!

CONFIDENTIAL TO "SO IN LOVE IN GAINESVILLE":

Whether he is married or not is beside the point. He SAID he was, which means he wants to end the romantic involvement with you.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L. A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

He's loved across the country because... Kids get respect from Mr. Rogers

By Helen Hennessy
 NEA Women's Editor

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Take one man who is a writer, holds a degree in music, has taken virtually every graduate course offered in the area of child development and is an ordained Presbyterian minister. Blend these ingredients with a genuine love for and understanding of children and you have Fred Rogers of public television's "Mister Rogers' Neighborhood."

He is loved by kids all across the country. One reason is that Fred Rogers treats children's anxieties with respect. And traumatic events for children can be anything from getting a smallpox shot to getting a haircut.

Linda Philbrick, an expert in child development and a mother of two and Professor James E. Hughes, also a specialist in child development, are consultants to the children's program.

"We feel," Hughes said, "that Sesame Street has its strengths and its values. It sells learning to a child to get him to take in letters and numbers in the same way commercial TV tries to get him to take cereals and vitamins."

"Mister Rogers' Neighborhood is a different kind of show. Fred tries to make the child feel his worth because he is a child and worth more than anyone else in the world."

Linda explained some of the things that concern and interest children. And they are a surprising assortment.

"One child," she said, "sat on her teacher's lap to talk about Watergate. It's important to children because it has disturbed their parents."

But another kid said he didn't like Watergate one bit. He had the measles and his favorite programs had been canceled.

"Don't underestimate the kids," Hughes added. "They don't miss a trick."

"Four-year-olds play 'Watergate.' They use toilet paper tubes for cameras. And one little boy said, 'When the gate goes up, everyone is going to get drowned.'"

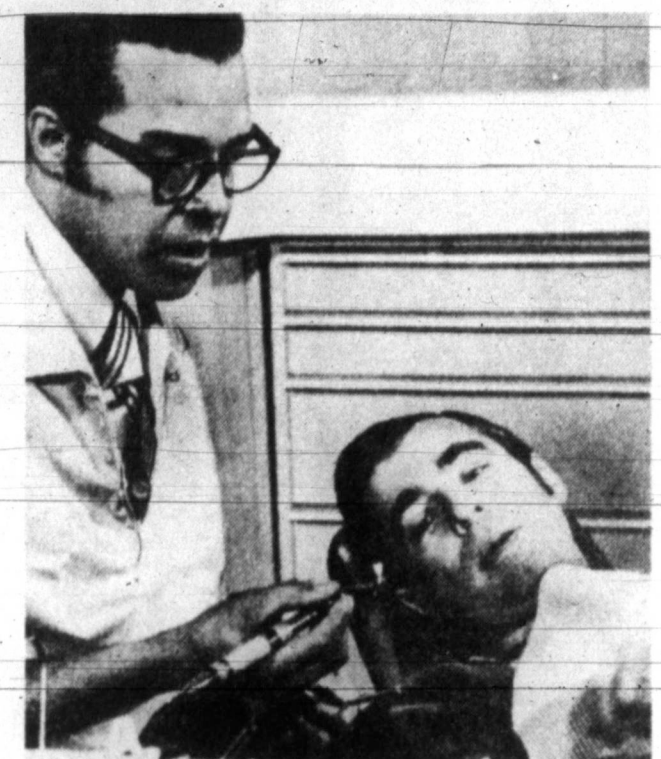

Because what's happening to their parents is so important to children Fred Rogers believes that kids should be told what their mothers and fathers are wondering about or angry about or arguing about.

What makes Mister Rogers' Neighborhood different from other children's television shows is that it brings reality to its young viewers. Here Fred Rogers visits a dentist and assures his 3-to-8-year-old audience that dentists are helpful people and that children should not be afraid of them.

"Then," said Linda Philbrick, "they know that even if their parents are upset, THEY are safe."

Rogers also feels that it's important to tell children that no one really knows what they are thinking about. A child, he says, thinks his mother can magically read his thoughts. "He tells children," Hughes said, "that even if they have bad thoughts and bad wishes they can change their minds and not do anything wrong. Thinking isn't doing."

Rogers also brings reality into their living rooms by explaining to them that although they can see him he cannot see them — that no one can reach out from the television set.

An awakening giantess

By Joanne and Lew Koch
 (Note: Today's column is written by Joanne)

Who is this woman? Typical characteristics: new spirit, frank and open, greater sense of humor, less readily satisfied with her lot. Relationship with husband: believes she could go it alone, shares more experiences with him, demands changes. Attitudes toward housewife role: dissatisfied with confinement to home, more active in neighborhood and local community.

Attitudes toward motherhood: children no longer the center of her attention and aspirations; she's becoming more self-centered and self-indulgent; two or fewer children, in her opinion, is the ideal number.

Social contacts: less dependent on relatives, developing many more friends. Fundamental change in outlook: she has a right to become a "new person" — in appearance, personality, occupation — if she wants to.

Did you guess the above was a profile of the typical Ms. magazine subscriber, or the woman most likely to vote for the Equal Rights Amendment?

In fact, the above describes the new working class woman, the woman least likely to be a vocal supporter of women's lib and most likely to be affected by it.

According to a report just issued by Social Research, Inc. based on interviews with blue collar wives in Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Dallas, Denver, Detroit, Philadelphia and San Francisco, the working class woman has changed more profoundly in the past seven years than in the previous 30 years.

Project director Dr. Bureigh Gardner refers to the working class woman — representing 40 million blue collar wives in the country or 60 per cent of the adult female population — as "the awakened giantess."

Certainly the blue collar wife of previous years, characterized as dependent and passive, suffering in silence and completely absorbed in her home and family, did not regard herself as a giantess. "For years," claims Dr. Gardner, "the working class woman was captive of the husband-child-rent-home triangle... Today these women are rejecting such limitations. They feel women should have a choice of careers, homemaking or both."

So the giantess is beginning to flex her muscles. But militant feminists are more likely to feel the brunt of that new found force than the blue collar husband.

A strange paradox exists in the attitudes of the working class woman. She concurs with women's lib — on equality in pay, in choice of job, in opportunities. Yet this study also reveals that she vociferously resents what she feels are efforts by women's lib advocates to put down the role of wife, mother and homemaker.

In our next column we will try to account for the anti-lib feelings of many working class women.

Was Archibald Cox naive? Honesty is the worst policy: a political axiom

By Tom Tiede

NEW YORK — (NEA) — It is the fashion currently to speak of former Watergate Special Prosecutor Archibald Cox as incurably naive. In particular since he recently admitted before the nation that he had violated a confidence, that he had leaked privileged information concerning White House pressure in the 1972 ITT investigation.

Said he simply: "It was inexcusable. I was wrong." Indeed, the Cox admission strikes many as unsophisticated. Once the first lesson of Washington was borrowed from the Greeks: "If you would understand virtue, observe the conduct of virtuous men." Now the lesson seems to be borrowed from Hermann Goerring, who, in 1933, gave order to Prussian police: "Shoot first and inquire afterwards, and if you make mistakes I will protect you."

In fact, the idea of owning up has been lost in the capital and perhaps in much of the rest of the nation. Admission of error, much less guilt, is in precious short supply. Spiro Agnew was only the latest of high government officials exiting the executive offices in disgrace but admitting nothing. Said Agnew:

"My decision to resign... rests on my firm belief that the public interest requires swift disposition of the problems which are facing me. I am advised that a full legal defense of the probable charges could consume several years. I am concerned that intense media interest in the case would distract public attention from important national problems — to the country's detriment."

Never a word of apology. Not a hint of personal error. Not a mention of the 46 pages of charges which a grand jury had put together accusing the man of high fraud and felonious misconduct. Rather, a statement that smacks of a supreme patriotic sacrifice. Agnew left office like a victim, not a crook. "At no time," he intoned, "have I enriched myself at the expense of the public trust."

It is perhaps quite obvious why such men refuse to bow. Tads are taught in school, as Benjamin Franklin said, "The things which hurt, instruct" — but forget it growing up. New York clinical psychologist Dr. Harold Kooden says men assign to themselves roles and images in life and strive to keep them come what may. Agnew's role, like that of many political leaders, was one of steady

commentary

fast devotion, honesty, morality — the works. Any admission of error, even if someone is caught red handed, destroys the image. It is, therefore, better to have a tattered image than none at all.

Actually, Kooden adds, it is probably true that the public appreciates men who cling to politics is you can't be right too soon and win."

Romney, a religious man, is disturbed that telling truths in America can be so damaging. He says President Nixon, for example, "would have been much better off if he had laid it all on the line about Watergate from the start." But that's not the way the game has been played and so George Romney, wiser if somewhat the worse for wear, is "glad" to be out of the Washington mess.

There is, perhaps, something to be said for the fact that barefaced men like Romney and Archibald Cox shouldn't be in Washington in the first place. The capital is the preserve of the hard-nosed, so the argument goes. Political leaders can't admit errors because usually it's not just their hides at stake; a president who goofs in the nuclear age risks the entire citizenry.

But Kooden doesn't buy the hard-nose theory. He says it has always been Richard Nixon's thesis, "and all it is a way of putting people down." Kooden says Americans aren't children. That the population can survive both mistakes and fools. The electorate does not vote for gods but humans with dandruff and halitosis. If someone goofs, if attorneys general are indicted, then echo the opinion of Nathalia Crane: "There is glory in a great mistake."

No, Archibald Cox is not naive. If the principles of public service are honesty and humility, it is his detractors who are the simpletons. Fiorello LaGuardia, when he was mayor of New York, used to say: "I don't often make mistakes, but when I do it's a beaut." That's not a bad philosophy for politicians and people to follow today. No one is infallible.

Even John the XXIII admitted: "I make mistakes too. After all, I'm only the Pope."

SS Office Now Taking New Income Applications

The Pampa Social Security Office is now taking applications from Panhandle residents for the new federal program of Supplemental Security Income.

The new program known as SSI establishes a nationally uniform income floor for people in need who are 65 or over, blind or disabled. Payments will range from $1 to $130 a month for individuals and from $1 to $195 for couples.

The exact amount of payment people will get depends upon how much other income they might have.

To be eligible for any payment a person's resources cannot exceed $1500 for an individual or $2250 for a couple. Resources include such things as checking and savings accounts, cash on hand, bonds, etc.

However, not everything counts as a resource. A house, household goods, personal effects, automobile and insurance policies do not normally count as resources if they are of reasonable value.

Howard L. Weatherly, manager of the Pampa Social Security Office, said that certain items of income are also disregarded in determining the amount of payment.

The first $20 a month of any type of income is excludable. Also, for those persons working part-time the first $65 a month of earnings will not be counted and only one-half of the amount over $65 will be considered as income.

To illustrate how the exclusions apply Weatherly gave the example of a 68-year-old woman whose only income is a $109.50 monthly social security check and a part-time baby sitting job paying $90 a month.

In this case the first $65 of earnings and one-half of the remainder will be disregarded leaving only $12.50 of earned income which must be counted. Also, the first $20 a month of the social security check may be excluded. Thus, total countable income is $89.50 plus $12.50 or $102.

Since $130 is the basic benefit due an individual a payment of $28 a month would be made.

Weatherly said that the example given is not from a real case but that his office has received many applications from persons whose circumstances were similar. It demonstrates that one may work part-time and still be eligible for some payments. It also shows that receipt of other income such as social security, VA payments, teachers retirement, etc., may not prevent some payment being due.

SSI benefits are first payable in January, 1974. People who are currently on state assistance rolls as aged, blind, or disabled recipients will be automatically converted to the new program in January if they are eligible for a state payment in December, 1973. It is not necessary for these persons to file a claim with the social security office.

However, anyone who is not receiving state assistance payments must file an application for SSI benefits in order to receive them.

Weatherly said it is probable that most persons who will be eligible to receive the maximum SSI payment of $130 or $195 a month are already receiving state assistance payments and need do nothing further to qualify for SSI payments in January.

However, he estimates there are several thousand persons in the Panhandle who are eligible for a partial payment who must file a claim before payment can be made.

He said he hopes that those persons reading this article will tell their relatives, friends and neighbors, who might qualify for payments, about it in order that everyone eligible might become aware of it.

Weatherly also stressed the fact that SSI payments will be financed by federal general tax revenues and not from social security contributions. Although social security offices will take applications and the Social Security Administration will be responsible for the overall program, SSI and Social Security will remain two separate and distinct programs.

Four Bowls Still Looking For Opponents

By United Press International
The overall bowl picture turned out to be predictable; but there is still some mystery left as the college football season enters its final big week.

Seven of the 11 major college post-season bowls were filled Saturday and not one of the teams named came as any surprise. The results of the pairings were known well before the NCAA's official announcements went out, and the various bowl committees went right along with their original choices.

Four of the teams named to post-season competition — Kansas, Tennessee, Missouri and Auburn — were beaten Saturday, but that didn't matter. They all knew in advance that no matter what the outcome of their games they would still be invited.

The Liberty, Astro-Bluebonnet, Gator, Sun, Sugar, Cotton and Orange Bowls all were filled Saturday, leaving the Fiesta, Tangerine, Peach and Rose Bowls still searching for opponents.

The Peach Bowl committee showed real concern about having a winner on Saturday. Arkansas had been promised a bid to the Peach Bowl if it beat Southern Methodist, but the best the Razorbacks could do was a 7-7 tie and the backers of the bowl said "no thanks."

The Peach Bowl committee, in fact, is willing to wait until next weekend to find a suitable opponent for Maryland, which was named Saturday after beating Clemson. The committee has given Georgia the same ultimatum it gave Arkansas: "beat Georgia Tech next Saturday and you're in. Lose and we'll find someone else."

The other three bowls also will be filled this week. Pittsburgh was named Saturday to the Fiesta Bowl on Dec. 21 at Tempe, Ariz., and the Panthers' host will be the winner of Saturday's game between Arizona State and Arizona, which will decide the Western Athletic Conference.

Miami of Ohio, winner of the Mid-American Conference and boasting a perfect 10-0 record, gets an official invite to the Tangerine Bowl today and the Redskins' opponent for the Dec. 22 contest at Orlando, Fla., will probably be East Carolina. However, the Pirates are not considered a shoo-in for the berth and they have stated that unless they get a bid by tonight they are going to tell the committee to forget it. Temple is also being considered.

Both spots in the Rose Bowl are currently open, but they automatically go to the winners of the Big Ten and the Pacific Eight conferences. Those two titles will be decided Saturday when top-ranked Ohio State meets fourth-ranked Michigan for the Big Ten crown and eighth-ranked UCLA takes on ninth-ranked Southern California for the Pac Eight championship.

The other bowl pairings are Cotton — Texas vs. Nebraska, Sugar — Alabama vs. Notre Dame, Orange — Penn State vs. LSU, Gator — Tennessee vs. Texas Tech, Liberty — North Carolina State vs. Kansas, Astro-Bluebonnet — Houston vs. Tulane, and Sun — Missouri vs. Auburn.

In addition to deciding the remaining bowl participants, this week's key games could decide the UPI national championship and help settle the confusion surrounding the Heisman Trophy voting. Ohio State, which walloped Iowa, 55-13, on Saturday, can wrap up the UPI Board of Coaches national championship with a victory over Michigan. However, should the Buckeyes lose and second-ranked Alabama defeat seventh-ranked LSU then the national title will be up for grabs and would not be decided until Alabama meets Auburn on Dec. 1.

There is no clear-cut favorite in this year's Heisman Trophy balloting, but the leading candidates appear to be Ohio State sophomore Archie Griffin, Texas junior Roosevelt Leaks, Penn State senior John Cappelletti and Pittsburgh freshman Tony Dorsett. All are running backs.

All enjoyed good days Saturday and all face some tough competition Saturday which could help settle the issue. Griffin, who gained 246 yards against Iowa, goes against Michigan's rugged defense Saturday while Leaks, who picked up 105 yards in a 52-7 rout of TCU, faces Texas A&M on Thanksgiving Day.

In other games Saturday involving the top 10 ranked clubs, Alabama crushed Miami (Fla.) 43-13, third-ranked Oklahoma routed Kansas 48-20, Michigan whipped Purdue 34-9, LSU topped Mississippi State 26-7, UCLA clobbered Oregon State 56-10, Southern California walloped Washington 42-19 and 10th-ranked Nebraska decimated Kansas 50-21.

NBA ROUNDUP

LA Rallies, Nips Cleveland, 102-100

By United Press International
The Los Angeles Lakers may have a new cast of players but that may not make any difference in their drive for another title in the Pacific Division of the National Basketball Association.

Wilt Chamberlain jumped the club before the season started to go to the ABA and Jerry West and Bill Bridges are out with injuries, but the Lakers — bolstered by the acquisition this year of Connie Hawkins and Elmore Smith — still have a 12-6 record, good for a two-game lead in their division.

The Lakers' latest victory came Sunday night when Gail Goodrich and Happy Hairston scored 14 of their last 17 points, pacing a late rally to beat the Cleveland Cavaliers 102-100.

Goodrich, who scored eight of his 30 points in the final five minutes, sank two free throws with nine seconds to play for the winning points. Hairston had six points in the final five minutes and finished with nine.

In other NBA games Sunday, Buffalo beat Capital 112-101, Seattle topped Philadelphia, 95-91, and Chicago nipped Detroit, 104-102.

Hawkins scored 17 points and Smith 15 for Los Angeles while Austin Carr had 24, Bobby Smith 22 and Len Wilkens 18 for Cleveland.

Bob McAdoo scored 43 points, two shy of the team record which he holds, to pace Buffalo over Capital and knock the Bulls out of the lead in the Central Division.

Seattle survived a six-minute scoring drought in the fourth quarter and got its final four points from Fred Brown to beat Philadelphia.

Norm Van Lier's 20-foot jump shot with three seconds left gave Chicago its victory over Detroit.

NFL ROUNDUP

Denver Stuns Steelers, 23-13

By United Press International
The Denver Broncos, the Cleveland Browns and a controversial official's call have combined to set up one heckuva race in the American Conference.

The Broncos, the only American Conference club which has never participated in post-season play, moved into solid contention for a playoff spot Sunday as they upset the Pittsburgh Steelers, 23-13.

Pittsburgh's loss, combined with Cleveland's stunning 7-3 upset of the Oakland Raiders and Cincinnati's hairbreadth 20-14 victory over the New York Jets when an official disallowed two apparent Joe Namath touchdown passes in the final minute, set up a hectic final month in the AFC.

With the score tied 13-13, Jim Turner kicked a 46-yard field goal which bounced over the crossbar to give Denver a 16-

13 lead and Charley Johnson sealed the win when he threw two yards to tight end Riley Odoms late in the game. Floyd Little also had a 10-yard TD run for the Broncos, now unbeaten in their last six games, while Terry Hanratty provided the lone Steeler TD with a 42-yard pass to Ron Shanklin.

Maurice Tyler recovered two fumbles for Denver to set up Turner's 32-yard field goal and Johnson's TD pass.

Mike Phipps threw a seven-yard TD pass to Fair Hooker early in the second quarter and Cleveland's defense made it stand up against the Raiders. The victory left the Browns 1 1/2 games behind Pittsburgh and knocked the Raiders out of a first-place tie with Kansas City to third in the AFC West behind Denver.

Cincinnati took a 17-0 lead over the Jets and held a 20-14 advantage when Namath, who's been out since Sept. 23 with a shoulder separation, entered the game. Namath, who hit 6-of-13 for 98 yards, had his first drive stopped by a fumble. But he hit passes of 21 and 16 yards to Rich Caster, 31 to Eddie Bell and 10 again to Caster to bring the ball to the one. An offside penalty moved the ball to the six-inch line with 19 seconds left but Cliff McClain was stopped short of the goal line and time ran out on the Jets.

Jet Coach Weeb Ewbank, who chased the officials across the field after the game, was critical of two calls — one which ruled Caster out of bounds in the end zone and the other on Namath's final completion to Caster which was ruled at the one instead of a TD.

"Richard was in twice," Ewbank fumed afterward. "I thought I scored both times." Caster agreed, "but the man said no and that's that."

"So close, so close," Namath said. "You get so close only to lose."

Elsewhere, Kansas City bombed Houston, 38-14. Miami shut out Buffalo, 17-0. Dallas ripped Philadelphia, 31-10. Washington downed Baltimore, 22-14. Los Angeles whipped San Francisco, 31-13. New England stunned Green Bay, 33-24. The New York Giants overcame St. Louis, 24-13. San Diego edged New Orleans, 17-14 and Detroit trounced Chicago, 30-7. Minnesota is at Atlanta tonight.

Learning From Errors

Brand names on products mean a lot because a company stakes its reputation that the contents of the can will match the label. Brand names on ideas are not so reliable. You have to understand the history of a specific idea to know whether it agrees with the label or not. We think people must be terrible confused about the terms "liberal" and "libertarian," for instance. In the News we try to explain the libertarian idea and we strive to expose the liberal idea. Since both terms derive from the word "liberty," it must seem at times that we oppose what we propound. Therefore, let us offer a few words of clarification.

Of the two terms, "liberal" and "libertarian," the former is the elder. It originated in England in the early 1800s as a distinction from those who classed themselves as conservatives. In general, conservatives of that era stood for the power of the crown. Liberals on the other hand took up the cause of the down-trodden, especially those who were down-trodden by political laws.

In broad terms, conservatives believed that the universe was governed by certain immutable laws and that the authority of the king was a divinely favored outgrowth of those laws. Though the authority of the king was great—in the conservative view—yet the monarch himself was subject to laws. For basically the king did not create law; he merely executed pre-existing natural law.

The liberals, insisted to the contrary. The king's law, they argued, was not a sacred category. The king had in his power to do what he willed. Law was nothing more than the king's command. Out of this liberal influence arose the notion of positive law; namely, that the king—or in more general terms, the government—not only could forbid certain types of behavior such as stealing and killing but also could mandate certain types of behavior such as payment of taxes for the support of welfare.

In the meantime conservatives were more or less contending that true law was basically negative in character; that is, "thou shalt not kill, steal nor covet... etc."

Thus history played a funny trick. The liberals who initially opposed the damage that big government caused came out for a bigger government than ever. And the conservatives who had defended the damage came out on the side of limited government. This confrontation rocked on for about 100 years.

About that time, a number of persons who favored individual liberty discovered that they could agree with neither liberals nor conservatives. They tended to the conservative idea that law is essentially like the Ten Commandments—negative—but they objected to the divine right of kings or bureaucrats. Like the liberals, they opposed the damage that big government commits, but they saw that positive laws would do nothing but lead to a greater tyranny.

Somehow or another, the word "libertarian" caught on, and it is used today to refer to a set of concepts that are liberal in some aspects, but conservative in that it adheres to a moral law that does not change. It is liberal in that it aims at individual freedom.

What we seemed to have arrived at in this country today is king's law. This is the notion that the elected politician or the appointed bureaucrat can do no wrong. All that is lacking is the crown. A good strong shot of libertarianism in the intellectual diet would cure the excesses that liberals and conservatives have gotten into.

Europe Press Speaks Out

Western European newspapers generally denounced the recent pro-Arab declaration by the nine foreign ministers of the European Common Market in reply to oil blackmail threats.

Words like "appeasement" were frequently used, and numerous papers compared the failure to rally to the support of Holland, the only European target so far of a total oil boycott, with the sellout to Hitler in 1938.

"Our leading politicians are prisoners of a Munich complex," said Gazet van Antwerpen of Belgium.

"The solidarity we show with Holland is like that with Czechoslovakia in 1938," said the French news magazine L'Express. "It's an economic Munich."

"One can compare Israel to Czechoslovakia," agreed L'Aurore of Paris. "For the governments of Europe, the existence of a little country is a question of central heating."

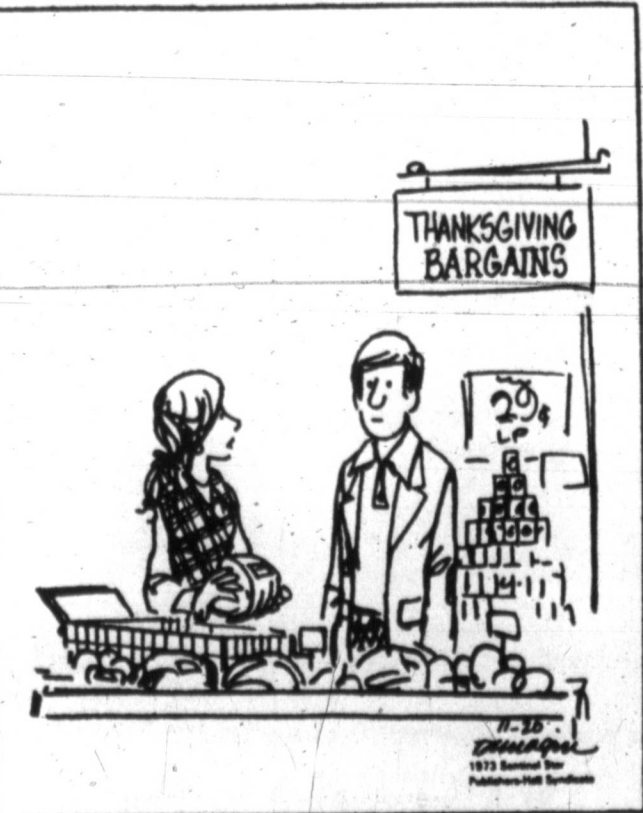

"There is not much reason to think that the Arabs can be so easily appeased," said the more reserved Times of London.

The British Financial Times labeled the declaration which condemned the "acquisition of territory by force" and urged Israel to withdraw, as "appeasing the Arabs." It would be surprising, it added if the Arabs did not ask for more.

At least the press of Western Europe is alive and well, even if that area's governments exhibit a disturbing deficiency of backbone—and inability to remember their own history.

Even Best Friends Are Hush-Hush

By BRUCE BHOSSAT

WASHINGTON (NEA) — In the view of one dependable Nixon-watcher here, it would be a mistake to imagine that the President would do a quick turnabout, Angew-fashion, and resign after telling the American people he would not.

As this source reads Mr. Nixon, even in the depths of his "down" moods he could not easily bring himself to contemplate the idea. The man adds:

"He doesn't want to think about it or hear about it. It would just tear up his mind."

This source doubts there's a single White House staff aide or anyone else who might qualify as friend or associate who would dare bring up the subject of resignation with the President.

"It would be a fool's errand. In fact, if he got any idea that was the purpose of a visit, he wouldn't even see that man," he adds.

The one caveat my watcher offers is that these judgments of Mr. Nixon's attitudes and behavior might have to be set aside if he is harboring some deep secrets of personal guilt in the Watergate affair which, though presently more than half-hidden from himself, finally break through and strike his conscience with full force.

But my informant so far finds nothing in the President's demeanor or actions which gives any clear hint of this.

There is no sign yet that Mr. Nixon's public assertion he will not resign is going to stem the cries for such a move.

It was suggested to me, however, that when the firmness of the assertion-sinks home, it will further anger substantial segments of a disillusioned public and might well advance the prospect of impeachment proceedings.

By refusing to resign, it is argued, the President is depriving the country of what it either perceives or senses is the "easy way out" of the issue of his possible personal involvement in Watergate. There is indeed something of the air of the panacea about the swift, surgical solution of resignation.

For complaining Americans to be denied that relatively soft route may be to give them a feeling of being let down. A resulting fresh anger, adding fuel to the still incessant cries for resignation, might bring impeachment action much closer than, realistically, it is today.

Should he ever confront seriously the idea of resigning, the President could hardly see it in the neat terms that appeal to the complaining citizenry and to distinguished journalists and public figures.

In the first place, it is not all clear that, as a private citizen, he would not be open to charges that would pull him into the courts in self-defense for months or years. Former aides who may think of themselves today as "protecting" Mr. Nixon might sing a different tune in their own possible Watergate cases if he were out of the White House.

Moreover, my informant suggests that with the President's instinct to go for the jugular, he might take a good bite out of the winners (those who drove him out) as he went. That might make him conservatives who enemy list is long.

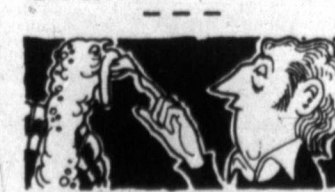

Yet the argument is plausible that, for all his flashes of bitterness, Mr. Nixon wants no such role—any more than he wants to retire and cultivate roses. He is a self-styled "fast-track" man who almost surely looks ahead to a post-presidency role as some kind of roving ambassador-activist in foreign affairs. A clouded resignation would close that door tight.

Resignation: too many would be unconvinced

WASHINGTON (NEA) — There is a belief across the land that a torrid clamor forced President Lyndon Johnson not to run for another term. Now some of the same voices are calling for the resignation of President Richard Nixon without a trial.

Yet curiously, the Constitution of the United States, written under the leadership of such men as Thomas Jefferson and Benjamin Franklin, deliberately set up balances so that the feelings of the moment, justified or not, would not bring the downfall of a President or a government. They considered and rejected the British parliamentary system, opting for a president who would serve four years, whether or not his party had a majority in Congress and whether or not public opinion or Congressional support were with him. They created senators whose terms would be so staggered that a windfall of sudden doubts would not mean a complete turnover.

By contrast, at one time or another the Chinese and North Vietnamese Communists have set up courts in which men have been condemned to death by crowds gathered on the streets, whipped up to white-hot vindictiveness by official acuteness. Witch hunters used this technique in early days. So did French revolutionaries who, themselves, were later condemned by the same means when public opinion turned.

If there is reasonable evidence to suppose President Nixon has committed a crime, then Congress should waste no time in impeaching him and bringing him to trial before the Senate. If there is no such evidence then we, in effect, are operating by the same barbaric rules as those spectators in the Roman arena when they yelled for the death of a gladiator by turning their thumbs down.

This in no way assumes Mr. Nixon is guilty or that he is innocent.

There is, of course, a situation where resigning is proper. If the President knows in his heart that he is guilty, then he should resign forthwith without trial. If he knows in his own heart that he is innocent, then to quit now would be cowardice. He owes it to the country and to the presidents who come after him to fight it out. Otherwise the belief would be widespread, set off by Lyndon Johnson's decision not to run again, that if enough clamor can be aroused, then a President can be forced out of office.

The danger to the republic lies here. Suppose the President resigns. Suppose it is believed by even a fourth of the American people that he was hounded out of office by his enemies. This reporter has already been told by moderate Republican men and women who have never been fond of Mr. Nixon that "The Kennedys are out to get him like they did Lyndon Johnson"—a rumor strengthened in their minds by the fact that the fired Archibald Cox was an intimate of the Kennedys and by their noticing that some violently anti-Nixon newspapers took such a different stance on political dirty tricks, corruption and executive evasion when President John Kennedy and others held office. People who remember that there was a time when President Truman rated even lower in the polls than President Nixon does now are not much impressed by talk that lack of confidence makes resigning necessary. Under such circumstances, how much cooperation would there be in case of resignation among those Americans who were firmly convinced Mr. Nixon was hounded out of office without trial. The bitterness would be so great among a sizeable minority (a minority which most certainly would include some who now say they have lost confidence in him) that this nation would suffer from deep divisions for at least a generation. The President would be a martyr.

H.L. Hunt Writes

WHY DEFENSES ARE INSUFFICIENT

The Kremlin has not lost its hostility to our country, nor its desire to be the most powerful nation in the world. Our government thus has a responsibility to the people of our country to make sure that our defenses remain strong against any threat of attack.

But in two specific areas, our government has failed to take practical steps which could not only strengthen our defense capability but also reduce the number of innocent people whose lives would be lost should a nuclear war ever occur.

Firstly, we refused to build an anti-missile system (ABM) around our cities. In 1971, then Deputy Defense Secretary David Packard told a Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee that ABM sites "planned for initial deployment in ICBM fields defend some of the most sparsely populated portions of the United States."

Both administration officials and Congressional leaders have since then continued this policy, thereby leaving our cities and the millions of civilians in them unprotected.

Secondly, referring to multiple warheads for missiles (MIRV), Packard said "this Administration made a deliberate decision not to improve the accuracy of our MIRV... to what was and is technically feasible." By making this decision, our missiles have been deliberately made less accurate. If war should break out, all we could do is destroy Russian cities, with their civilian populations, rather than attacking the smaller targets which are Soviet bases, missile sites and so on. These policies could be changed if Congress would take the initiative. Letters to Congressmen and to newspapers would help to make clear the danger our country is in.

Keep true to the dreams of thy youth. — Johann Schiller, German poet.

Problems During Her Period

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 15 years old. I have been menstruating for two years. I don't know if you will understand my problem, but please help me and answer my questions.

I can't get along with my period. Everytime I have it I get emotionally upset because I can't feel good or free or act like I don't have it. I always feel down. I cry a lot and just get so mad at myself. Maybe you can't understand why, but I just think that if I didn't have it, I could be happy and live so much better. About 99 per cent of it is because of sports. Basketball means a great deal to me. Plus softball, golf, tennis, etc. I love sports. I just can't play well when I have it. It upsets me so much.

Is there any kind of operation to stop the menstrual period? How long would it take to recover from such an operation? Would you have any trouble with it afterwards? Do you have any other advice for me?

DEAR READER — It isn't uncommon for women to have changes in mood and behavior before and during their menstrual periods. In recent times the woman's lib movement in part has stimulated a rash of public articles saying this is all cultural, or literally in your mind. The message is that if women weren't conditioned to the idea that they would have such signs of femininity that they wouldn't have such problems.

That's a nice theory, but it doesn't square with reality. You can see the same type of changes in the animal kingdom, if you look for them. You can also cause changes in animal behavior by giving or eliminating hormones. So, such writings notwithstanding hormones can and do make a difference. The animal experiments and animals in their normal environment haven't been conditioned to behave like females but rather respond to hormonal and natural influences.

I mention this to tell you that you do have a sound, physiological basis for having a problem. Being female you will continue to have changes associated with changes in female hormone formation. How much it does affect you, though, can be influenced by attitudes and even fears. But, as long as you are female, it is something you might as well accept as part of you.

Many women engage in sports in spite of menstruation. And, it doesn't seem to hurt them. Some doctors think that regular physical activity and staying in good shape actually minimize the problems that can occur.

You are probably going to feel better as you get older, during your periods. A lot of the types of problems you are now having tend to disappear after having had children or usually by the middle 20s. This is particularly true of painful cramps. You may continue to have mood swings, though, feeling "up" and energetic in the first half of your cycle and "down" in the latter part. I think it is important for people to recognize this cyclic change, and I mean both men and women.

House Vote on Ford 'Soon' — But Don't Count on It

By Robert S. Allen

WASHINGTON — Presumably the House is slated to vote on the confirmation of Vice President designate Gerald Ford the week of Dec. 3—but don't count on it.

The Judiciary Committee, which only today opens hearings on the appointment, is in a class by itself when it comes to crass, shabby and blatant partisan politics.

Almost anything can happen in this committee—and probably will.

For more than a month under temporizing and pussyfooting chairman Peter Rodino, D-Newark, N.J., the Judiciary Committee has sat idly on its hands doing nothing about this pressingly important matter. Rodino and the clique of committee red-hots and militant blacks who, in effect, run him went about their other affairs and interests literally ignoring the confirmation problem.

In striking contrast, the Senate Rules Committee, under forceful and decisive chairman Howard Cannon, D-Nev., acted promptly, thoroughly and responsibly. Detailed public hearings were conducted in a dignified and impartial manner, and a wide range of witnesses heard.

The proceedings were a credit to all concerned—the committee, the Senate and the Vice President designate.

It's virtually a foregone conclusion that this distinguished record is not likely to be matched by the House Judiciary Committee on the basis of what has happened there so far both out in the open and behind closed doors. Examples:

From Bad to Worse

At a secret meeting, the Democrats, by a straight 21 to 17 partisan vote, rammed through a motion vesting chairman Rodino with sole subpoena-issuing authority and empowering him to call meetings without the long-customary two-day notice. Personal and political feeling ran high at this session.

Outnumbered Republicans indignantly assailed the power grab as "infamous," "autocratic" and "hyocritical." This bare-knuckle berating so infuriated the Democrats that they finally cut off debate.

Later, a committee member related, "It was the worst brawl I have ever seen there. I've been on this committee for years, but nothing like it ever happened before."

Last week, on the eve of the committee's long-stalled hearings, committee member John Conyers, D-Mich., chairman of the District of Columbia Committee, and Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., are against a caucus declaration against Ford.

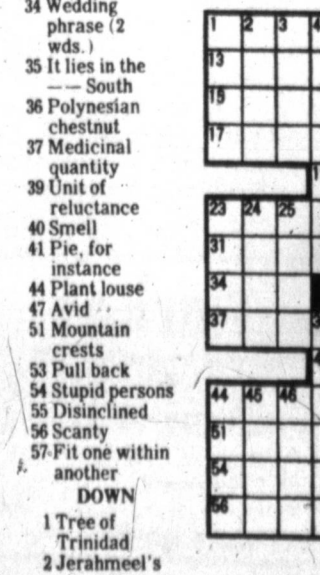

Time and events will tell whose counsel wins out. They will also determine the wavering course of committee chairman Rodino.

Committee insiders say the 64-year-old legislator is not "basically anti-Ford," that in the end he is "likely to vote for confirmation." At the same time, they admit Rodino "could be persuaded" to wind up on the other side.

The Consumer Alert

by John L. Hill
Attorney General

AUSTIN — Usually, when a new scheme for taking advantage of people who have managed to put away a few hard-earned dollars comes on the horizon, it is short-lived. Some of these schemes are referred to commonly as "con" games, because the originators or practitioners are "confidence men" who have the type of personality or spiel to gain the average person's trust, and convince that person that he stands a chance to "get rich quick."

But the consumer's confidence threshold drops to zero as soon as he or she begins to suspect that not only is there no pot of gold at the end of the "con man's" rainbow, but the savings invested in a fraudulent investment program are endangered.

As soon as the dream dust evaporates, the deluded consumers begin to complain, and about the time that they do, the purveyors of dreams begin to disappear, along with the money they have taken.

The Attorney General's Consumer Protection Division staff often has observed that just about the time a rash of complaints springs up about one deceptive practice, the operators have begun to pack up to play their game in another state. Or, they may turn up later as the objects of another type of complaint.

That is the reason, as we have stated previously, that we are working for coordination of consumer protection efforts between Texas and other states and Texas and the federal government — to put dishonest operators out of business entirely.

Obviously, Texas consumers who had been lured into deceptive commodities futures options schemes had reached their saturation point by the end of August.

They have complained of losing large sums of money from purported purchases of "options" on commodities such as silver, grain and other items important to international trade. The hitch was that the self-styled dealers did not have any claim to or control of the options they were offering.

When this problem came to the specific attention of our office, the Attorney General's staff immediately started working on this problem with the State Securities Board. On September 13, we issued a joint

TOO MANY PRESIDENTS
CHICAGO (UPI) — For awhile, Americans seemed destined to have a superabundance of presidents. The title of president, reports the Encyclopedia Britannica, was used for the chief executive of state governments that were organized after the American Revolution.

There was a president of Delaware, of New Hampshire, and of South Carolina. Since 1792, however, the title of chief executive of each state in the United States has been governor.

BANKS THE CULPRITS
DALLAS (UPI) — Wright Patman, chairman of the House Banking and Currency Committee, says "the big banks" are leading the nation into a depression through high interest rates.

"The big banks and federal reserve are making a depression right now," he said. "The prime interest rate is a big fraud anyway. It is not meaningful and nobody enforces it."

ONION-SKIN WEATHER
NEW YORK (UPI) — The troposphere is a thin layer which surrounds the earth — just below the stratosphere. It is where turbulence and moisture are transported around the earth.

Compared with the thickness of the earth, the seven-mile thickness of the troposphere is like the skin of an onion compared with the onion itself.

declaration that commodities futures options are securities, and therefore must be licensed and regulated by the State. I appointed a special investigator task force headed by Joe K. Longley, chief of my Consumer Protection Division, and Bill Flanary, an assistant attorney general who has specialized in securities cases. Their work and efforts by other state, local and federal enforcement groups led Dallas District Judge Dee Brown Walker to convene a court of inquiry on the commodities options business, now in progress.

In the meantime, two other Dallas trial courts have upheld our declaration that commodities futures options are securities subject to regulation, but an Austin court has decided to the contrary.

Our efforts are aimed at protecting Texans from commodities options offers which are misleading, some of which may be deceptive to a criminal degree.

There are legitimate futures contracts in the commodities field being offered through members of the Chicago Board of Trade and members of stock exchanges who engage in a highly sophisticated level of accounting in international trade.

These regulated brokers would be quick to caution you against banking all your assets on the hope of "getting rich quick" in a speculative market.

Beware of anyone who tries to sell you on "a sure thing."
