Pentagon Sees Increased Flow Of Red Supplies

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Some Pentagon officials are concerned that neutral Cambodia may become a major supply route for the Viet Cong if the United States steps up bombing raids in the port area of Haiphong.

Most enemy ammunition and weapons are now moved from North Vietnam to Communist forces in South Vietnam by way of the Ho Chi Minh trail, which runs largely through Laos. It cuts across a small portion of Cambodia.

But it has long been known that thousands of tons of Cambodian rice are sold each year through black market channels to the Viet Cong, and there is an "intuitive" feeling in military circles that these same smuggling channels are supplying the Viet Cong with ammunition.

It is reasoned that if future U.S. bombing in the area of Haiphong and along North Vietnamese supply lines leading South makes these routes more difficult, the Communists may try to make more use of Cambodia.

Ships which now carry supplies to Haiphong might go instead to the Cambodian port of Sihanoukville.

Supplies could follow known smuggling routes up a U.S.-aid highway to Phnom Penh and from there by roads and river up to the supply routes through southern Laos into South Vietnam.

Another route would be southeast from Phnom Penh across a largely open border into the populous southern area of South Vietnam.

If such a major shift in communist supply lines occurred, a naval "quarantine" of the port of Sihanoukville is considered militarily feasible.

But it would raise perhaps more serious political issues than a quarantine of North Vietnam, a course the administration has rejected.

Sihanoukville is one of Cambodia's two main ports. It handles 300,000 metric tons of shipping a year and is used by ships of at least two dozen nationalities. Some of those using the port most frequently are Communist China, France and Britain.

Indian Police Kill 5 Rioters

CALCUTTA (UPI)—A Communist-instigated 48-hour strike ended at dawn today and authorities began counting the cost of the bloody rioting that shut down this city of 5 million for two days.

At least five persons were killed, and 20 injured Thursday by policemen who fired 11 times into rampaging mobs that were protesting the central government's ousting of the Communist-dominated United Front government of West Bengal state.

More than 1,300 persons were arrested throughout the state, many for violation of the new law prohibiting the gathering of more than five persons.

As day broke, shops and markets lifted their shutters and opened, buses and taxis appeared again on the streets and the railroads resumed their schedules.

For the two previous days mobs fought running battles with police. Demonstrators fought with homemade bombs, bricks, firecrackers, vials of acid, bottles and rocks.

They snapped telephone lines, smashed railway tracks, set fires to buildings, automobiles and train coaches and attacked police outposts and government depots.

The police fought back with clubs, tear gas and rifles.

United Front leaders Thursday told the demonstrators to return to work today but to prepare for a "greater struggle" Nov. 29 when the state assembly meets for a test of strength between the new government of Prafula Chandra Ghosh and the United Front.

THE TOLL AT DAK TO continues to mount in what is shaping up as the major battle of the Vietnamese war to date. Wounded soldiers, evacuated by helicopter from Hill 875 after the Communist stronghold was stormed and taken by U.S. paratroopers, make their way to a field hospital.

Special Envoys Seek To Head Off Cyprus War

United Press International — Greek and Turkish troops, tanks and missiles today rumbled up to the 100-mile frontier between the NATO allies in a showdown over the Mediterranean island nation of Cyprus. On Cyprus, more than 500 women and children, mostly American, were being evacuated because of a threatened Turkish invasion.

Trying to prevent a war between Turkey and Greece, U.S. presidential envoy Cyrus Vance carried his Cyprus peace plan to King Constantine and other Greek leaders today in Athens. The former deputy defense secretary met with the king and Premier Constantine Kollias, then went into consultation with Foreign Minister Panayotis Pipinelis and U.S. Ambassador Phillips Talbot. Vance and a U.N. envoy talked Thursday night with Turkish officials in Ankara. The Turks said nothing new had been brought forward by the representatives of President Johnson and U.N. Secretary General Thant.

Record Gold Buying Rush Forces U.S. to Aid Market

LONDON (UPI)—The United States and its economic partners were forced to pour gold into the market today to feed a gold-buying rush of record size. Many dealers said the American dollar was under attack and they blamed France.

The "gold pool" nations—chiefly the United States—dipped into their Fort Knoxes to meet the demand and keep the price down near its support point of $35 an ounce.

In Paris the bullion market reported it was swamped with gold-buying orders from around the world, doubling Thursday's Official's of the much larger London gold market, main battle point in the fight to defend the dollar, kept silent on their turnover. But reliable estimates indicated today's turnover surpassed Thursday's trading of 80 to 100 tons of gold and set a new record.

Dealers said trading today easily dwarfed the record gold turnover at the time of the 1962 Cuba missile crisis. He shut the door.

Two Persons Hurt In Pampa Collision

A Pampa woman was listed in good condition and a 18-year-old Christoval, Texas boy was treated and released from Highland General Hospital Thursday following a two-car accident in the 700 block of N. Hobart.

11-foot Cobra Hid in Closet

FORT WORTH, Tex. (UPI)—Steve Boyd opened a closet door and found himself staring at an 11-foot king cobra in the face Thursday.

The demand for gold spilled over into London's other market for precious metal. Silver came under buying pressure and the price jumped 1 1/2 cents to $2.10 for a fine ounce.

Elvie Turner, director of Forest Park Zoo, and Buss Ross, a poisonous reptile handler, were summoned from Thanksgiving dinners and recaptured the snake.

HAD BURIED WRONG BODY

BLOUNTVILLE, Tenn. (UPI)—The Army notified Mrs. Blanche Guinn last week that her son had been killed in Vietnam. She buried the body the Army returned to her from the war zone.

The widow, impoverished mother of seven then got a gleeful Thanksgiving surprise: she crawled out of bed Thursday to answer a telephone call from her son in Vietnam. He was very much alive.

According to investigating officer S. R. Belt a vehicle driven by Jerry Edward Sledge, 18, of Christoval, was traveling north on Hobart in the Northbound lane and another vehicle driven by Myrl E. Springer, 722 W. Kingsmill, had turned out of a Minit Mart and was stopped in the middle of Hobart street.

The body of a young soldier from Guinn's company—the man originally identified as Guinn—arrives for a funeral with military honors.

Damage to Sledge's vehicle was estimated at $1,500 and Springer, who was cited for failure to yield right-of-way from a private drive, received an estimated $400 damage to his car.

"Hearing of the confusion was like hearing of his death again, said the widow of PFC Quinn William Tichenor, 23. The Tichenors had been married only eight months before he was shipped to Vietnam.

A passenger in the Springer car, Laura Mae Young, 44, of 722 W. Kingsmill, was reported in good condition in the hospital and Sledge was treated and released.

When Guinn talked by telephone with his mother from Vietnam Thursday, she did not

American Troops In Cong Ambush

Nation Filled With Turkey And Dressing, Snow or Rain

By United Press International — Much of the nation awoke today with stomachs full of turkey and dressing and snow or rain falling outside the window.

where a Thanksgiving Day snowstorm kept highway workers from their feasts.

Snow spread over most of the Northern Plains to Wisconsin, leaving a blanket 1 to 3 inches deep. A weather disturbance in the Texas Panhandle pushed snow into southern Colorado, Lamar, Colo., received a 1/2 inch of snow during a six-hour period that ended at 1 a.m. EST.

Mother-Rejected White Lion Cub To Be Released

BELLA GLADE, Fla. (UPI)—"Lucky," a rare white lion cub, may be removed today from a sterile hospital incubator which saved his life when his conventionally coated mother rejected him.

Travelers warnings were in effect tonight for northern Minnesota and northern sections of New Mexico.

The one-of-a-kind cub is "definitely looking better," said Dr. Clarence Kidder, the veterinarian who has been watching over the two-pound "Lucky" since he was born nine days ago.

The mercury dipped to 12 at Dickinson, N.D., before dawn and at the same time registered 72 at Key West, Fla., and Mobile, Ala.

Kidder said that if the progress noted over the Thanksgiving holiday while the cub lapped up milk and was pampered in a human hospital continued, he would take "Lucky" home to a cardboard box this afternoon.

Rain fell over most of the Pacific Northwest and into western Montana as a new Pacific front pushed into Washington. Snow and rain continued in New England.

The women and children had been brought into Nicosia from outlying danger zones on Cyprus Wednesday night and Thursday morning. Six transports had been chartered to get them out of the battle-ready capital.

Showers and thunderstorms soaked large areas around the southern Appalachians, clear skies prevailed from California to western Nebraska and it was cloudy in the rest of the nation.

Cyprus was an armed camp with anti-aircraft guns bristling skyward against a threatened Turkish invasion.

Up to six inches of snow fell in some high ranges of the Rockies Thursday. A small plane with four aboard ran into a blinding snow and made a forced landing in southwestern Colorado; no one was hurt.

Hundreds of miles of roads in strategic areas of Greece and Turkey were under military control and carried battle ready troops. Patton tanks and Honest John and Nike-Ajax missiles. Both sides fueled their American made F104 jets. NATO supplied the sophisticated weaponry but never intended for Greece and Turkey to deploy it against each other.

"Lucky" is the only all-white lion in captivity, and possibly the only one in the world. Although all white, the cub is not an albino, Kidder said.

Crack troops of the 3rd Greek Army guarded the frontier in full battle dress. Officers carried with them their sealed orders.

His mother, one of the 130 lions roaming a wild animal preserve near here, started swatting him around earlier this week and Kidder came to the rescue.

Turkey moved troops and tanks all night from Konya, headquarters of the 2nd Army Group, to the south coast facing Cyprus, the island nation about half the size of New Jersey where Greek Cypriots outnumber Turkish Cypriots 5-1.

Millions of Americans honored tradition with big meals and prayers of Thanksgiving Thursday and today turned toward the work-a-day world and the next holiday, Christmas.

Holiday Toll Continues At Surprising Slow Pace

By United Press International — Millions of Americans honored tradition with big meals and prayers of Thanksgiving Thursday and today turned toward the work-a-day world and the next holiday, Christmas.

Traffic accidents, the plague of modern holidays—in the United States, a nation on wheels, continued to exact its toll but apparently at a pace much slower than during a comparable nonholiday time.

Crack troops of the 3rd Greek Army guarded the frontier in full battle dress. Officers carried with them their sealed orders.

At 11:30 a.m. EST today, United Press International counted 169 traffic deaths in the nation since the start of the holiday Wednesday night. Deaths in airplane crashes, fires and other mishaps ran the total dead to at least 223.

The breakdown:

Millions of Americans honored tradition with big meals and prayers of Thanksgiving Thursday and today turned toward the work-a-day world and the next holiday, Christmas.

Turkey moved troops and tanks all night from Konya, headquarters of the 2nd Army Group, to the south coast facing Cyprus, the island nation about half the size of New Jersey where Greek Cypriots outnumber Turkish Cypriots 5-1.

But death took no holiday, either for Americans at home or abroad. The deaths in the Vietnam war brought special prayers for peace Thursday in churches, at tables and in the hearts of many.

Mother to Be Reunited With Vietnam Son

BLOUNTVILLE, Tenn. (UPI)—The Army notified Mrs. Blanche Guinn last week that her son had been killed in Vietnam. She buried the body the Army returned to her from the war zone.

The National Safety Council, which does not classify Thanksgiving as a "driving holiday," said that normally during a comparable 102-hour period, about 600 persons, or nearly six an hour, would die on the roads.

The widow, impoverished mother of seven then got a gleeful Thanksgiving surprise: she crawled out of bed Thursday to answer a telephone call from her son in Vietnam. He was very much alive.

During the first 32 hours of this holiday, the rate of traffic deaths was 4.5 per hour.

And today, Pfc. John W. Guinn of Elizabethton, Tenn., arrives home for a reunion with his mother who suffered temporarily the grief known only to a mother whose boy dies on a faraway battlefield.

In many respects, Thanksgiving is a turning point. It traditionally is the time merchants begin pushing Christmas gifts and wares. It is a time for Christmas parades, generally featuring a jovial Santa Claus.

When Guinn talked by telephone with his mother from Vietnam Thursday, she did not

This year's midweek holiday forced many Americans to suffer through one day of work today before greeting the weekend, although for the fortunate it means a long weekend.

After Mrs. Guinn was notified of her son's death, she received a letter from him dated Nov. 11 and mailed Nov. 12.

After Mrs. Guinn was notified

This brought doubt in her mind and in the mind of her brother and neighbor, Will Atkinson.

After Mrs. Guinn was notified

The funeral home opened the Army casket for her and the body apparently bore a strong likeness to her son. At least Mrs. Guinn was convinced.

Air Force B52s Smash At Guerrilla Forces

SAIGON (UPI)—North Vietnamese forces today ambushed 300 U.S. troops in the bloody battle of the Central Highlands. American planes splashed flaming napalm just in front of the GIs and smashed the Communist attack.

"A hell of a firefight here," radioed one U.S. ground commander at the scene and UPI correspondent Thomas Cheatham, watching from a plane over the jungle, reported fighting so heavy it sounded "like a giant popcorn popper."

Military spokesmen said one South Vietnamese soldier was killed and at least 28 North Vietnamese were slain before the Communists fled, chased by American and government forces through the napalm-soaked jungle.

Violent Deaths In Texas Fewer Than Predicted

By United Press International — Violent deaths continued at a surprising slow pace for a holiday weekend in Texas, a count by United Press International showed today.

U.S. Air Force B52 Stratofortresses smashed at guerrilla trails in hopes of catching Communists fleeing from the Highland area near the Allied bastion of Dak To. At least 381 Americans and 1,400 Communists have been killed in the three-week duel for mastery of the hills that form South Vietnam's waist.

Of the 11 persons who have died violently in Texas since 6 p.m. Wednesday, six of the deaths were on Texas streets and highways. There were two murders, one death by fire and two deaths from miscellaneous causes.

Never has a Vietnam battle been so long, so bloody or covered such a fighting area.

The count ends at Sunday midnight.

The ambush battle erupted a dozen miles below Hill 875 which a U.S. paratrooper charge captured Thursday after a five-day battle. It lay 25 miles south of Dak To. And 25 miles further south, near the main U.S. highland base of Pleiku, north Vietnamese rocket crews ambushed a six-truck U.S. Army convoy.

In San Antonio, Yelita Jaramillo, 16, was found hanging by her neck from a light cord in a shed behind her home.

They blew up one truck. Four Americans were injured. Air Force A1 Skyraiders zoomed in from Pleiku and smashed the guerrillas who picked up their rockets and fled.

Tonie Wickerson, 6, of Dallas, was burned to death Thursday night when a fire consumed her two-room home.

U.S. headquarters reported 280 U.S. soldiers and nearly 1,400 Communists had died on the hill and in the other battles swirling around the Central Highlands allied stronghold of Dak To the past three weeks.

Raymond Forge, 26, of Dallas, was shot to death Wednesday night during an argument about where children would sit for Thanksgiving dinner.

While the exhausted but triumphant U.S. troops dug in atop the hill, giant B52 Stratofortresses flew raids late Thanksgiving Day and before dawn today in an effort to mangle the retreat of an estimated 500 Communists.

Raymond Forge, 26, of Dallas, was shot to death Wednesday night during an argument about where children would sit for Thanksgiving dinner.

Their tenacious five-day hold on the hill cost at least 125 American lives and another 330 wounded, spokesmen said.

It was not immediately known how many Communists died in the battle. Many are entombed forever in the hill's puzzle of burned and bombed out tunnels some 50 feet deep.

Elsewhere U.S. troops killed 118 Viet Cong in separate clashes and U.S. warplanes fought past M G21 interceptors and streaked into the industrial heartland of North Vietnam to bomb army barracks and storage areas.

One of the MIGs was hit by an American air-to-air missile and became the 99th downed in the war.

A U.S. spokesman cautiously declined to call the hill 875 battle an overwhelming U.S. victory.

"It hasn't been a rout or anything like that," he said.

He said the Communist survivors were moving in a generally southwesterly direction, which would take them toward the nearby Cambodian border.

"Last Exit to Brooklyn" by American Hubert Selby Jr. and the publishers called the Thursday conviction, costing $1,440 in fines and court costs, a "victory for prejudices."

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My son-in-law is a very nice fellow, but he has a very bad habit of coming on a college student. This is an American.

My sister gave this girl a beautiful little shower, and my husband's family as well as my own gave the couple some very expensive wedding presents.

After living together for 20 days, this "bride" left her husband and filed for divorce. Her only reason is that he refused to use a condom!

She didn't send me thank you notes for her shower gifts or her wedding gifts, and she didn't give me the list of gifts so I can thank them. I don't know how to handle this.

That's the biggest problem in getting the gifts back from our side of the family. Neither she nor her mother will answer my letters or telephone calls. So what do we do?

INCENSED: Talk to your lawyer. You had your son file a work up report a year ago. This girl before he married her.

DEAR ABBY: I have been going steady with a girl I'll call "Dotty" for about a year, but there is another girl I like better. I don't want to hurt Dotty's feelings, but I would like to get out of going steady with her so I can openly date this other girl.

Dotty is a very serious girl.

The Pampa Daily News

A Watchful Newspaper
EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

The Pampa News is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man is free to control himself and all he produces, can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government. Freedom is—neither license, nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself. No more, no less. It is thus consistent with the Human Relations Commandments, the Golden Rule and the Declaration of Independence.

'Part of the Main'

Thirty or forty years ago, the federal government was relatively small. Its policies did not so critically affect the economic life of the nation as they do today. Now grown to gigantic size, its actions as taxer and spender, regulator and controller influence the personal and working life of every individual and business enterprise in the country. The cumulative effect of its policies will in the long run decide the future of the private enterprise, competitive, free market economy. This being the case, this economic responsibility which every citizen carries when he enters the polling booth is today greater than ever before. Since the young people of today will determine future public policy, their knowledge of economic reality is vital.

A motion picture highlighting the importance of economic education in our schools has been produced by the Joint Council on Economic Education with a grant from The Sears-Roebuck Foundation. This 28-minute film features unrehearsed classroom discussion demonstrating how students can learn the fundamental terms, relationships and principles of economics by relating them to their own daily life experiences. If young people are to be equipped to function as responsible citizens under a representative form of government, the importance of adequate economic education extending from kindergarten through college cannot be over-emphasized.

"A Part of the Main" was produced to acquaint teachers, administrators, school boards and parents with some of the unique, yet workable ways in which economics can become part of the working knowledge of every young person. It should be seen by leaders in communities all across the country who are concerned with school curriculum and the development of an educational system meaningful in terms of today's world and the perpetuation of individual liberty and freedom. (NOTE: This film is available on a loan basis from The Sears-Roebuck Foundation, 3333 West Arthington St., Chicago, Ill., or the Joint Council on Economic Education, 1212 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y.)

A Time for the Individual

The towering figures of the past, the Fords, the Carnegies, the Rockefellers wrote whole chapters in the story of this nation's growth and development. The institutions which they established have grown and matured to meet the requirements of a different age in ways that could not have been imagined by their founders. Today, despite the apparent dominance of huge organizations, both governmental and commercial, the individual is still of paramount importance. In the business world, he can exert his influence and his vision to help build a lasting productive organization of significant benefit to the long-run economic strength of the nation. One of this country's leading industrialists, Mr. W. F. Rockefeller Jr., provides an example of this fact. His concepts concerning the responsibilities which a company such as his own has toward the nation and to communities where it locates plants, and the benefits of in-

Rising Prices Still Here

Prices are almost certain to increase before the year is out. The U.S. Labor Department has predicted a 2 per cent rise in food prices. Its estimate may well be on the conservative side since deficit spending by the federal government appears to be headed toward record levels. Deficit spending breeds inflation; further depreciation of the dollar and higher prices. One thing that should be made clear is that as prices move up it does not necessarily mean that retailers are reaping higher profits. They are merely in the bitter position of being at the end of the line, where the exchange of goods for depreciated dollars makes itself felt most painfully to consumers. Never have the nation's retailers, both chain and independent, worked harder to achieve greater efficiency. The president of a major chain store system observes there is greater pressure on profits today than ever before. Retailers are going after higher sales by cutting prices and higher profits by cutting costs. This is the classic formula of mass distribution. But, even the most efficient techniques cannot offset the ultimate forces of inflation. The National Association of Food Chains issued a statement on the outlook for higher prices: "Consumers are—for the most part—willing to listen and to understand the facts, once they are presented openly. It is essential (therefore) that every effort be made now to inform the public of probable food price trends and the reasons for them."

The Record Speaks

By any standard of measurement, the oil industry provides an outstanding illustration of the free market working in the best interests of consumers. In distribution, price and product development, the record of oil is unsurpassed. In short, the consumer has been served well. The scores of millions of autos on the nation's highways are the best testimonial of the achievements of the industry. In the light of this record, the critical attitude of the Federated government was relatively small. Its policies did not so critically affect the economic life of the nation as they do today. Now grown to gigantic size, its actions as taxer and spender, regulator and controller influence the personal and working life of every individual and business enterprise in the country. The cumulative effect of its policies will in the long run decide the future of the private enterprise, competitive, free market economy. This being the case, this economic responsibility which every citizen carries when he enters the polling booth is today greater than ever before. Since the young people of today will determine future public policy, their knowledge of economic reality is vital.

West Germans Say TV Image Was Biased

West German Extremists No Threat to Democracy
By LEON DENNEN
NEA Foreign News Analyst
NEW YORK (NEA) — West Germans complain about an American television program in which they were depicted, according to Bonn's official news agency, as narrow-minded, unteachable beer drinkers and rabidly nationalistic.

The CBS program entitled "The Germans" was certainly, one-sided and a superficial assessment of a nation that is an ally of the United States, a member of NATO and a key to Europe's defense. Of course, there are nationalists in West Germany. Even some leftist students who organize anti-American demonstrations are more nationalist than Marxist-Leninist. "If I were to say that I am a nationalist I would be denounced as a neo-Nazi," a student told me on a recent visit to Germany. "As a leftist I am welcomed and cheered by the liberal intellectuals in the United States, Britain and France." However, neither the vocal leftists nor the extreme rightist National Democratic Party — which scored disturbing, though minor, gains in recent local elections — speak for a majority of Germans who reached maturity since Hitler's defeat 22 years ago. They certainly do not represent the overwhelming majority of West Germany's young people. Like the younger generation in the United States, German youth, while enjoying the advantages of affluence, is also in revolt against conformity and constantly in search of new values. Does this mean that the youngster who used to bow deeply and click his heels when spoken to is a vanishing species in Germany? Is the code of authority, blind obedience and supernaturalism dead? Here are a few of the answers I heard when I talked to West German youth: "The word Fatherland means nothing to me except crippling limping home from war," an 18-year-old student said. "I am against all wars," a young mechanic assured me in Munich. "Courage, honor, loyalty are not qualities to be learned in a soldier's uniform." An editor of a college journal in Bonn said: "This idea of military virtue is all nonsense. Why doesn't anyone talk about a milkman's virtues?" A leader of a Catholic youth organization was not opposed to all wars. But, he said, "If I ever have to go to war I want to be sure that what I fight for is worth fighting for."

Not all young Germans are already imbued with democracy. I have also met youngsters who were convinced that "the flag of the Fatherland is more important than death." Remnants of the ideology which fostered Nazism are still alive in Germany. In the United States, the democratic establishment is in no grave danger despite the existence of Communist and Nazi parties or the pro-Chinese Progressive Labor Party. But in post-Hitler Germany even the minor success of the neo-Nazi National Democratic Party is a danger signal that cannot be ignored. Nevertheless, it is an oversimplification to imply, as the CBS program did, that Germany is a patriarchal society in which Hitler's dictum, "kitchen, children and church," is still the lot of the woman. West

Germany of 1967 bears little resemblance to the Germany of the Kaiser or Hitler. No one can predict the future. But today the extremist voices, left and right, are not strong or loud enough to be considered an immediate danger to Bonn's democracy. The young German especially is now interested in his own destiny, as opposed to the national destiny. He does not even believe it worthwhile to fight for a united Germany which is the great concern of politicians on both sides of the Berlin wall. What a majority of young Germans want is individual freedom. Their new faith, if anything, is an amalgam of peace, democracy, European union — and above all personal security.

An Informed Public Is Friendlier
By P. K. RUBE
It is a fact of life in the U.S. that any industry which uses natural resources is under the watchful eye of a critical and largely uninformed public. The mining industry has finally realized that it is being watched. For the first time in its seventy year history, the American Mining Congress held a public relations session at its recent annual convention. It has realized that mines no longer operate only in remote areas. With the mobility of the automobile and the leisure time to seek out-of-the-way places, the general public often gets a view of mining operations, and does not like what it sees.

Since it is human nature to fear that which is not understood, the public cries out in alarm at resource uses or practices that may be perfectly sound. The result is an increasing clamor for more regulation of such basic industries as mining or lumbering. In some cases, demands are being made for lands to be taken from their owners and placed in government ownership, where, the advocates of this course believe, they will be properly managed "for the benefit of all." The average citizen appears to fear the profit motive. He sees an industry that "digs holes, strips vegetation, and ruins scenery and demands that this is being done "for profit." He seldom realizes that it is the profit motive, exemplified by many mining and manufacturing companies, that makes it possible for him to own an automobile or relax with a can of his favorite beverage as he watches television. Neither does he understand the great extent to which responsible mining companies are reclaiming their lands after open pit mining, and the care they are taking to avoid the problems of pollution that have plagued them in the past.

When a citizen sees an open pit mine, he thinks it is bad and should be stopped. Since he has been fully indoctrinated in the workings of democracy, his first reaction is "There oughta be a law." He seeks to stop what he believes to be the misuse of natural resources through political action. It matters little to him whether the mining is on public or private property. The failure of the public to understand the resource industries is accelerating our rush down the road toward complete public ownership or control of all natural resources, and thereby hastening our complete surrender to socialism — for control of resources by government means control of production by government. Public opinion surveys have shown that public attitudes are much more favorable toward an industry when the public is well informed about that industry — is aware of its economic contributions and its efforts to conserve its resources and reduce pollution of all kinds. Therefore, it is important to every resource-using industry that the public understand it. The mining and other resource industries require strong educational programs to provide a positive public image. Such programs must, among other things, demonstrate how the profit motive stimulates better use and conservation of resources. Only in this way can the trend toward complete government ownership and control be thwarted. I wish them luck.

Germany of 1967 bears little resemblance to the Germany of the Kaiser or Hitler. No one can predict the future. But today the extremist voices, left and right, are not strong or loud enough to be considered an immediate danger to Bonn's democracy. The young German especially is now interested in his own destiny, as opposed to the national destiny. The Nation's Press

FOLLOWING AGRICULTURE'S EXAMPLES
The Wall Street Journal Administration officials are trying, almost desperately, to head off a push by a number of industries for a wide-ranging system of import quotas. So far, however, they're passing up one powerful counterargument. The Federal men might note that agriculture already has gone far down the road that the steel, textile, oil and other industries propose to follow. They might ask the protectionists, "Do you really want the agonies of world agriculture?" Those troubles were described in a recent speech by Richard J. Goodman, vice president of Cook & Co., a U.S. grain-export firm. On the pretense of dividing the international market fairly among themselves, most of the world's major nations are deliberately wasting their resources.

The situation was, in one large respect, substantially worsened by the trade negotiations that ended this year in Geneva. Originally the talks were supposed to liberalize trade not only in industrial products but in farm goods as well; the way it turned out, the principal agricultural upshot was a proposed new world wheat agreement—the antithesis of liberalization. Far from freeing farm markets, the agreement, as Mr. Goodman says, is an experiment in international wheat collusion. Its complex terms try both to divvy up the world's wheat business and to set minimum and maximum prices for the countries involved. That result, of course, was no great surprise. The U.S. and other nations long ago decided that their farm producers should be protected from the rigors of competition. Accordingly, all sorts of quotas and other import curbs are needed to keep foreign producers from intruding unduly into the various domestic markets. The restrictions have been rationalized in various ways, all of them reminiscent of the pious now being advanced by one quota-eager industry or another. Import curbs are needed, one argument goes, to protect domestic sources of supply in case of war. Another line of reasoning is that the restrictions preserve domestic jobs. Still another is that it's only fair to deny foreigners access to the domestic market if they deny domestic producers access to theirs. Some of the rationalizations naturally contain elements of truth. Even so, it's well to ask whether the advantages purchased with farm market controls have actually been worth the price. In the proposed wheat agreement, for example, the minimum export price for U.S. wheat was set a good deal higher than it had been under the old world wheat pact. At the time there was concern about world wheat shortages, so the planners shorted production needed the support of a higher price. As often happens, the planners mis-guessed the market. The outlook now is that the U.S. domestic wheat price in the current marketing year will fall well below the minimum export price. To comply with the agreement, slated to take effect next July, the U.S. thus will either have to sharply curtail wheat output—raising the distortion of markets, a wide-domestic price—or levy some kind of export tax to boost the price to be charged foreigners. One way or the other, consumers somewhere will be penalized by higher-than-necessary prices. The arbitrarily high world export price, moreover, will push many countries into uneconomic increases in domestic wheat production, limiting the demand for U.S. wheat. The consequences, then will be burdens for consumers, distortion of markets, a widespread squandering of resources.

If it be objected that the steel, textile and other industries propose no such messy setup, we would contend it is only a matter of degree. Once an industry acquires official protection it has little incentive to get rid of it; its usual desire is for more. Strong political pressures build up for the system's enlargement. And just how long a step is it from controlling the quantities of goods that flow in foreign trade to controlling, or trying to control, their prices? As we've said before, we sympathize with industries troubled by foreign competition. If those troubles are in fact great enough to dictate Government help, consideration might be given to direct, above-the-board cash subsidies, which at least might stand less chance of achieving permanence. We doubt that the companies in question need such aid, but it would be better than pushing the nation's major industries down the dreary, protectionist road now trod by agriculture. A thought for the day—Scottish essayist Thomas Carlyle once said, "Music is well said to be the speech of angels."

The Doctor Says:

By DR. WAYNE BRANDSTADT
Q—What effect does the thyroid have on a woman's menstrual periods and her fertility? If a woman is taking prothiouracil and becomes pregnant, would the drug affect the baby? Would there be any danger of a miscarriage? Will benign, or colloid, goiters or fetal adenomas of the thyroid become cancerous if not removed?
A—A thyroid deficiency may cause the menstrual periods to be more frequent and profuse than normal. Since prothiouracil interferes with production of thyroid hormone and can pass through the placenta to baby's blood, the baby would suffer from thyroid deficiency. If this were severe enough, it would cause a miscarriage. Benign goiters, including the colloid type, do not become cancerous. Adenomas may do so, but this is the exception rather than the rule.
Q—Is it true that a toxic goiter is caused by stress and strain over a period of years? Is it possible for a person with myxedema to develop a toxic goiter later in life? Why would a BMR show the thyroid function to be below normal and the next week a radioactive iodine test show a toxic goiter? My sister, who was taking tranquilizers and thyroid pills for a long time, was later found to have a toxic goiter. What are her chances for a complete recovery?
A—Emotional stress may be a factor in causing a toxic goiter in a person with an unstable endocrine balance. A person with myxedema (thyroid deficiency) would not develop a toxic goiter but could show the symptoms of this disease if given too large a dosage of thyroid extract. There are many sources of error in laboratory tests, and when one or more tests are in-

GROWTH OF COMMUNIST PARTIES IN WESTERN EUROPE
One of the main arguments given for encouraging trade and greater contacts with Eastern European countries and the Soviet Union is that "better understanding" and a more tolerant relationship between East and West will result. This assumes that a lessening of our opposition to communism is desirable; that we would benefit by opening our gates to the natural enemy of everything constructive throughout the free world. If the people in Western Europe and the United States see that our government is not only condoning but actually advocating trade with Eastern Europe, they will come to believe that the communist dictatorships are the legitimate governments of these countries. They will begin to think of communism as merely a different form of government, rather than as an ideology completely alien and hostile to freedom. Recent events in two Western European countries have provided evidence that an increasing number of people are losing sight of the dangers of communism. In both France and Italy, the local communist parties have scored significant election gains. It seems likely, therefore, that the growing acceptance of communist dictator governments by the duly constituted governments of free people in the West has produced a sense of false security and complacency toward communism in general. This attitude can have very dangerous consequences for the future of the free world. Especially now that we are actually at war with communism in Vietnam, the U.S. must recognize that communism is evil and remains an enemy of freedom. All trade and aid to communist nations should be stopped and contact sought with the oppressed people, not the communist governments and their chosen representatives.

Your Dental Health

By DR. WM. LAWRENCE
Family Eating Habits Affect Their Teeth
Mary Jane is a tall, willowy, silky-blond, 19-year-old girl with a bright smile exposing front teeth that are just crooked enough to lend special charm to her face. There are many fillings in her front teeth but, as someone once told her, "Don't worry about those filling. If any man gets close enough to see them, he probably won't be interested in your teeth." When MJ laughs, it's quite a different story, and it's no laughing matter. Her back teeth are so filled with silver amalgam there's hardly any visible tooth structure left. Some teeth have four and five fillings. MJ must have spent days and days in the dental chair and doubtless made her dentist very rich. What happened to MJ's teeth? Was it lack of care? Poor dentistry? Genetic fault? Poor diet? Poor general health? Poor mouth hygiene? Why should this girl "who has everything going for her" have such sick teeth? It certainly isn't lack of care, and she's in obviously good health. Nor is it poor dentistry. Her dentist must have been a genius to have interlocked multiple fillings so cleverly as to hold them and the crowns of her teeth together. It's not poor hygiene. She claims she brushes after every meal and examination proved it: her teeth were clean. There was no soft food or tartar or debris of any kind on them. Then what is it? Reasons are complex. There just isn't any clear explanation available. But at least one interesting fact emerged from her history: MJ's parents lost their teeth early in life. And as a child she remembers "how funny grandpop talked" with his dentures. Composition of teeth, arrangement in the jaw, resistance to decay may be inherited characteristics but they are deeply influenced by family eating habits. MJ's family are great sugar eaters. Pounds are eaten in cereal, coffee and desserts, in soda, ice cream and candy. The family's favorite snack is bananas dipped in chocolate syrup. Could MJ's tooth sickness have been prevented? To a great extent, yes. The big word is prevention, and the best-known means of prevention are: ingested and topical application of fluorides; wholesomeness in a balanced diet, low in sugars; and, maybe, parents with good teeth.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

George Gershwin composed the first jazz concerto for the piano in musical history—Concerto in F—which he introduced in 1925 at Carnegie Hall, says The World Almanac. Gershwin had a genius for incorporating jazz and folk elements into his serious music, combining such other uniquely American musical expressions as "Porgy and Bess" and "Rhapsody in Blue."

World of Religion

By DAVID POLING
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

In this period of mourning for the church and waiting for the breakdown of organized religion, it might be appropriate to consider the emergence of powerful and timely lay leadership. The Christian faith has always had this source of vast and almost unlimited champions. Yet how little the laymen have been appreciated and how frequently ignored except during the capital fund drives, annual budget meetings or when the pastor is on vacation.

The Christian faith—stormed through Asia Minor, sailed oceans and straddled continents primarily in the lives and hearts of believing people. Not priests or bishops or college-trained clergy but ordinary men and women fired by a great conviction that was nurtured in the life of Christ.

In this last century, you can quickly name dozens of laymen who have brought the Christian church to heroic service by the dedication and determination they poured into daily life. Would the YMCA ever have succeeded on the international scene without the energy and brilliance of John R. Mott? It was John Foster Dulles who provided the early stature of the Federal Council of Churches and later the National Council as it undertook significant statements on world affairs and Christian responsibility.

United Presbyterians will consider for a long time the towering figure of Henry Luce and how he put so much enthusiasm and dedication into its Fifty Million Fund as well as countless other assignments and responsibilities.

J. C. Penney is known throughout America for the establishment of an empire of retail stores. His philosophy of the Golden Rule was a practical business application of his faith in Jesus Christ. Now in his 90s, he continues to radiate a compassion for people that I once felt when I worked as a stock clerk in his El Paso store.

For instance, Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., is surely one of the top young laymen in the Christian church today. Wherever he lives and whatever he is doing the concerns of the Christian community are vital to his way of life. To the daily pushing and shoving match of Washington, or the quiet fishing villages of the Columbia River, he communicates Christian ideals in a contagious, natural manner.

In the world of business, William Hendrickson of United States Life Insurance and Irwin Miller of Cummins Engine are laymen who not only give corporate leadership but who find time to probe the hard books in contemporary theology as well as the tough issues of current social problems. Today's church needs plenty like them who will move the mass out of the shallow water.

The church is on the campus and professors who give constant leadership to town and gown are laymen like Dr. Michael Novak at Stanford and Dr. Merton Ertell of Buffalo. William Stringfellow is not on one campus but many and is bringing a searing social gospel that may yet wake up the drowsy, white middle-class consciousness of so many students and their families.

Dallas Minister Named To Be Teacher Appreciation Speaker

Rev. Richard M. Freeman will be the guest speaker for the Teacher Appreciation Banquet at First Methodist Church on Nov. 29. Rev. Freeman was born in Dimmitt, and is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Alfred H. Freeman, Methodist minister.

Revival Services In Lefors Slates Church of Christ

LEFORS (Sp.)—Revival services will be held in the Lefors Church of Christ here Sunday through Dec. 3.

Mr. James E. Bryant, new minister of the church, will be the evangelist. Services will be held every night, except Sunday, at 7:30 p.m.

The new minister is a graduate of Roby High School and has attended Abilene Christian College. He and his wife Charlotte moved to Lefors in October.

Mr. Bryant has been a minister for six years. His father is a professor at Lubbock Christian College.

Voter Registration Forms To Be Issued At Central Baptist

Central Baptist Church will provide applications for voter registration forms for everyone attending the regular Sunday morning service.

"These are provided as a convenience to all people that wish to vote in governmental elections. Everyone should consider their individual responsibility to register and vote," the Rev. Thurman Upshaw, pastor, said.

The pastor's Sunday morning sermon will be entitled "Which Way?"

Revival Set at Church of Nazarene

Revival services will continue Sunday, at the Pampa Church of the Nazarene, with Rev. and Mrs. Herman Crews, of Dallas, the special workers.

Pampa pastor, Rev. Charles Spicer, reports that the Crews have been successful evangelists in the church of the Nazarene. Rev. Crews served as pastor in Pittsburg and Denison before he accepted the pastorate of the South Oak Cliff Church of the Nazarene in Dallas. He is now in full-time evangelism.

Mrs. Crews will assist in the services. She plays the piano, the accordion, and organ. Rev. and Mrs. Crews will also sing specials.

Key To Peace Is Neighborly Love Writer Believes

Since there will always be little injustices—even a "big one" occasionally—what matters isn't how many enemies one faces, but "how we react to them."

And principles based on neighborhood difficulties can be applied on national and international levels, believes Clao Gehrké DuBois, a writer and mother.

Jealousies and even kid squabbles can serve as "character-building" challenges, Mrs. DuBois writes in the November issue of "TOGETHER" magazine.

"We never showed anybody anything" by resorting to fists or angry words, she confesses.

Father, mother, son and daughter gradually evolved an effective and personally satisfying procedure for handling grievances and disputes. Neither a grin-and-bear-it attitude nor avoiding a trouble worked, so they learned "to handle conflict creatively."

Writing in "TOGETHER," Methodist magazine for families, Mrs. DuBois first of all recommends "describe exactly what happened" in facing up "creatively" to disputes. Next, "describe your feelings of injustice." Then "try to look through another person's eyes."

Weighing all the facts is essential, she says. And particularly in the case of children, an apology usually brings out something good in the other person.

"Plan an action to make the situation better" and be sure to carry out that action, Mrs. DuBois urges. And she recommends inviting the other person to join in.

Finally, she advises learning from failures as well as successes. What helps many a time, she reveals in the "TOGETHER" article, "We've Learned to Love Our Enemies," is that sometimes it pays to give in "because an issue is just not important."

Just as individuals can meet vexing personal situations in this manner, Mrs. DuBois believes they can devote attention to projects "that teach them to love at a national and international level."

Religion in America

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

A lot of young Americans are groping their way toward "churchless Christianity."

They are attracted to Christianity as a style of life, but are repelled by the church as an institution.

Their hostility toward the church is, in part, a reflection of an anti-institutional bias which is one of the outstanding characteristics of this generation. It also can be seen in their tendency to value higher education while scornning the university in which they receive it. But today's young people make a specific indictment of the church which goes beyond distrust of institutions in general. They feel that the church has become so identified with middle-class white society that it can no longer act as a reforming leaven within it.

evils such as war, racial discrimination and economic inequality which are flagrantly contrary to the teaching of Christ.

Also, they charge, the church has done the most un-Christian thing imaginable: It has become self-centered. It is often so intent on advancing its own institutional programs and interests that it has little money or energy to expend on serving human beings in need.

These young Christian rebels are not much interested in broad movements to reform the church, either because they're too impatient for see-saw work or because they see little hope of success.

But most of them recognize that Christianity is preeminently a religion of life-in-community. Fellowship and cooperation with other human beings is an essential part of Christian living. Therefore, some kind of group structure is needed, even for "churchless" Christianity.

It is for our benefit that Jehovah God inspired King Solomon to compose a most beautiful of songs and placed it in His Holy Scriptures. "Benefits for Us from Solomon's Superlative Song" will be the title of the public talk Jehovah's Witnesses will host at their Kingdom Hall, 944 S. Dwight, this Sunday at 9:30 a.m.

At Milanese, presiding minister of Jehovah's Witnesses in Dalhart, will be speaking to the congregation. All interested persons are invited to share with the Witnesses as they learn the value of the drama of the Bible book "Song of Solomon".

The Bible study starting at 10:30 a.m. is based on the scripture from Psalm 66:1 and is entitled "Let God Arise, Let His Enemies Be Scattered". An article by this title is found in the Nov. 1, 1967 issue of the Watchtower magazine and contains the questions that will be asked for discussion.

Competitive Sports is Still The Best Kind

By BUD WILKINSON
At the Thanksgiving season this country has so much to be thankful for it may overlook some of its minor blessings—such as competitive sports. I refer to sports at all levels, from the schools through the professional teams.

As a country, for example, we are moving slowly toward racial equality. In sports, this equality is a fact long established and accepted.

There have been much legislation and countless speeches designed to hasten equality nationally. However, sports provided the prelude. Perhaps the milestone breakthrough was the signing of Jackie Robinson to a major league contract.

There are still are walls of prejudice in sports, but they continue to crumble—and they vanish much faster than they do in most activities of our society. Today in sports as in perhaps no other activity, it has been proved the Negro can go as high as his talents will take him.

Wilt Chamberlain is the highest-paid athlete in history. Bill Russell is another landmark figure as coach of the most successful basketball team in his successes. Even the bigoted there is nothing funny about O. There are similar success J. Simpson's broken-field run-stories in almost every sport, and there will be more. Just as Competitive sports, of course, important, there will be fewer have given us much more than a civil rights example. No coach or athlete is ever surprised when he hears that a high percentage of our business and military leaders graduated from the grind of sports competition.

That's what it is—a grind. The cynics notwithstanding, there is nothing easy about becoming a success in sports—at any level. It takes a special kind of motivation, and it's the kind usually found among leaders.

But the game is over and the young men involved realize it. They also have learned more about victory and defeat and understand better how hard they must try in business, in battle or in life in general to be successful.

HOME AT LAST

Pampa Host to Quannah

By RON CROSS
Pampa's "Awesome Tensome" gets a chance to show the home folk how the game of basketball is played tonight when Quannah dares to invade the lair of the Harvester cagers for an 8 p.m. contest.

The Harvesters, under the tutorage of T. R. Culley, will be shooting for their second victory in a row and third against one loss, having been temporarily cooled off by San Angelo.

Pampa has disposed, handily, of the Winters Blizzards, who failed to cool off Pampa, and Childers, who thought maybe they were at the wrong gym and playing UCLA or somebody.

In three outings thus far Pampa has scored in the 90's twice, downing Winters, 92-26, losing to San Angelo, 61-57, and rolling up their highest point total of the season against Childers, 94-46.

This comes out to an offensive average of 81 points per contest for the Green and Gold, who hope to show off new uniforms tonight also. Defensively the Pampans are better than in some years with the 135 points scored against averaging to only 45 per contest.

The field goal shooting has been good for the 10 young men Culley travels with. They've shot in 82, an average of 27 per contest and free throws have come in abundance with 79 out of a possible 113 ripping the net.

All 10 on the traveling squad have scored in at least one game each and two are averaging in double figures and four others are averaging over nine points per contest.

George Bailey, who has the eye of an eagle, is leading the point parade with 65, an average of 21.2 per contest while mighty Alvin Achord, equally at home on the ball diamond, has tallied 27 points in two games, an average of 13.1 per game. All this while nursing a knee injury.

Moody Chamberlain Is Back in Point Parade

By United Press International
Wilt Chamberlain, the puzzling man of many moods, now seems to be back in a scoring mood.

Chamberlain, the one-time scoring machine, now turned playmaker for the Philadelphia 76ers, was off-criticized earlier in his career for shouting too much.

Chamberlain apparently feels he's made his point and he's gone back to shooting again as he pumped in a season high of 31 points to lead the 76ers to a 128-117 victory over San Diego in the second game of a doubleheader in Philadelphia.

In the first game, Seattle pulled off one of the most surprising upsets of the year by scoring 75 points in the first half en route to a 133-106 triumph over the Boston Celtics.

In the other two NBA games, Chicago upset New York 106-96 and Los Angeles turned back Detroit 132-120.

Chamberlain took a total of 25 shots from the field against San Diego and hit on 13 of them. He was also 5 of 13 from the free throw line for his 31 points. He also pulled down 27 rebounds and added six assists to the 76er attack.

John Block was high for San Diego with 24 points.

Seattle hit on 33 of 63 shots in the first half to build up an incredible 75-31 lead on Boston, which still leads the Eastern Division with a 14-4 mark although Philadelphia, now 13-5, inched closer with its victory.

Save a second. Kill a child.

The second you save by carelessly walking away from your unlocked car may cost a child his life. A stolen car has a 200 times greater chance of accident than other cars. Innocent people are killed or crippled. Last year, nearly 100,000 stolen cars were involved in accidents. Many fatal to one or more people. Teen-age joyriders—who steal most of the cars—are often scared, always dangerous. They watch for cops, not children crossing the street. You can help.

Don't help a good boy go bad. Lock your car. Take your keys.

Texas A-M Wins SWC

By United Press International
Young Gene Stallings, who grew up wanting to be a football coach, has had a number of thrills in his athletic career but none surpassed the joy of his Texas A.M. team's conquest of arch rival Texas.

Stallings' Texas Aggies capped a brilliant season comeback drive on Thanksgiving Day to edge the University of Texas 10-7 and earn the Southwest Conference championship and the school's first Cotton Bowl trip in 26 years.

Stallings, summoned back to his alma mater three years ago to rejuvenate the Aggie football program, called the victory "the happiest moment of my athletic life."

It was A.M.'s first conference title in 11 years and Stallings, a 32-year-old from Paris, Tex., played on the Aggie team that won the league title in 1956 under Paul (Bear) Bryant.

The Cotton Bowl berth opposite Alabama will match Bryant, the master teacher, against Stallings, one of the Bear's prize pupils. Stallings served as an assistant under Bryant before taking the Texas A.M. job.

Roger Brown Big Gun for Rams

By United Press International
Five years ago on Thanksgiving Day Roger Brown was an obscure defensive tackle for the Detroit Lions, who played under the shadow of Alex Karras.

But Brown's stunning performance in the 1962 Thanksgiving Day game against the Green Bay Packers, leading the defensive charge which kept Bart Starr on his back all day as the Packers suffered their only loss that season, made Brown an immediate star.

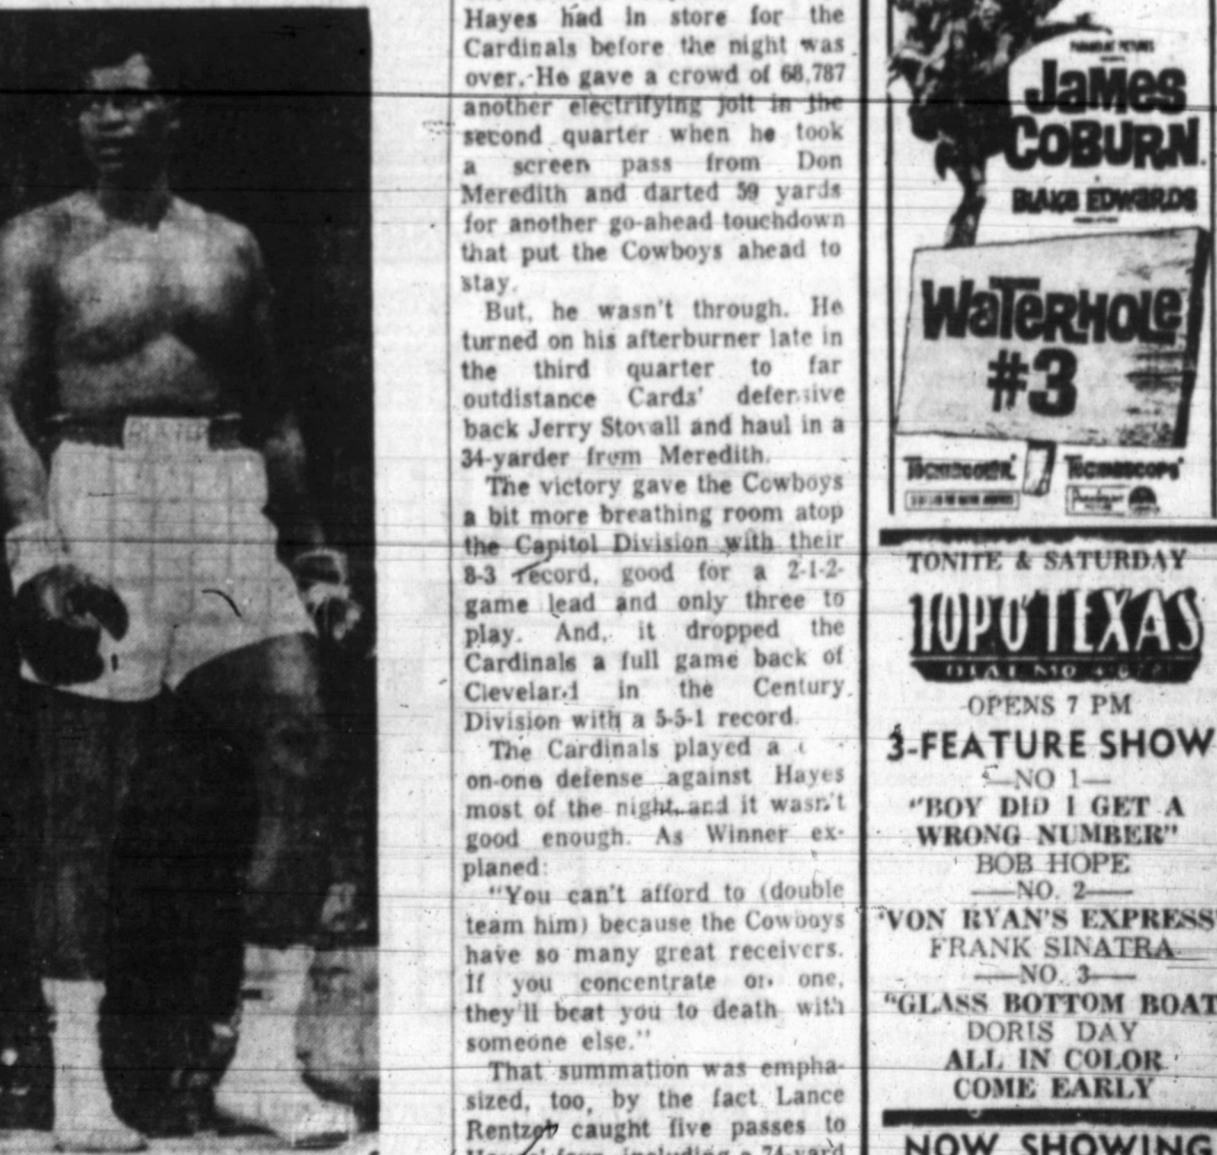

Of course, the fact that Karras was being double-teamed by the Packers gave the opportunity to break through—but the sight of the 300-pound Brown repeatedly clobbering Starr made football fans around the nation aware of the big tackle.

The nation's armchair TV addicts got another good look at Brown this Thanksgiving Day as he made his first appearance against his old teammates since being traded to Los Angeles and helped the Rams jolt the Lions 31-7.

In the other three games on the holiday, Oakland routed Kansas City 44-22, San Diego rallied to edge surprising Denver 24-20 and Dallas whipped St. Louis 46-21. It was possible for the devoted fans to watch nine consecutive hours of football—starting at noon from Detroit and ending at 9 p.m. from Dallas.

THE AWESOME BULK of Buster Mathis, looms large over the heavyweight boxing picture after his quick, brutal knockout of Ron Marsh. Bulldozing Buster moves quickly after a slow start in pro ranks.

Bob Hayes, bottled up much of the year, exploded for three sensational touchdowns against the usually tough St. Louis defense. He dashed 69 yards with a punt return, with 59 yards with a screen pass and made a 34-yard end zone catch of a Don Meredith pass.

Foreign-News Commentary

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

In the unruly House of Commons, British Chancellor of the Exchequer James Callaghan replied softly to a snort of disbelief from one of those who should normally have been among his friends, a representative of Labor.

"I need friends at the moment," he said. And it was true that neither Callaghan, who grew up in poverty, nor the Labor government of Prime Minister Harold Wilson ever needed friends more.

For it was Callaghan's lonely job to explain why, after three years of scramble for international credits and more than two years of austerity, the British government finally had decided to devalue the British pound from $2.80 to $2.40.

Conservative party members, shouting "resign," reminded him that it was only on July 24 that he had rejected devaluation with the declaration that to do so would cut the "real wage standards of every member" of the working class.

Bitter Medicine—There scarcely could be more bitter medicine for the Wilson government, dedicated to the welfare state but faced now with the need to explain a government cut-back in expenditures for housing and education. Nor could the moment have been less propitious.

In its first day of free trading after devaluation the pound survived well, traders even running it up to $2.42, two cents above the official level.

But still to be survived was the final reaction of British labor itself. British miners already were in revolt against a government decision to close more pits, the unions were fighting a government lid on wages, left-wingers within the party were demanding increased government spending on social welfare, and in by-elections the government had suffered severe setbacks at the polls.

In addition, rising unemployment threatened to pass the one million mark before Callaghan's promise of a turn at the beginning of 1969.

Success of Devaluation—In order to succeed, devaluation of the pound would have to result in increased British sales abroad because of a lowering of British prices and in a willingness of British labor not only to go along with the lid on wages but also to accept a decrease in the buying power of the wages it now has.

Rev. W. F. Blakley Resigns As Pastor Of Bethel Assembly

The Rev. William F. Blakley, pastor of the Bethel Assembly of God Church, has announced his resignation. He has served the church as pastor for the past 4 1/2 years. The church is located at Hamilton and Worrell Sts.

During his pastorate here Rev. Blakley has served in various capacities in his church structure. He served as the North Plains Sectional Sunday School Director and is presently the Christ Ambassadors (the Assembly of God youth organization) Representative for the North Plains Section, an area which involves 39 churches.

Within the local church he organized the first Royal Ranger Outpost (the Assemblies of God boys organization in the city. And the church has made various improvements to their property and grounds during his ministry here.

The Latin American Assemblies of God Church, Templo Betel Assemblies de Dios, originated from the Bethel Assembly of God Church, Rev. Blakley was instrumental in their formation and the organizing of their own Spanish-speaking church. The church meets in what was formerly the old Church of God building located on the corner of Campbell and Reid Sts. Rev. Vasquez is serving the group as pastor.

Rev. Blakley also served as a substitute teacher in the Pampa school system for two years while pastoring here. He is chairman of the Hospital Chaplaincy Committee of the Pampa Ministerial Alliance.

Rev. and Mrs. Blakley and their four children, Alan, Stephen, Treva and Eric will move to Ardmore, Okla. on Dec. 4 where he will assume the pastorate of the Lighthouse Assembly of God church in that city.

Television In Review

By RICK DU'BROW
HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—If you want to figure out how to create a successful, long-running television series, you study the man who has one.

And so, today, let us examine the working theory of Mr. David Dortort, producer of NBC-TV's "Bonanza," and try to figure exactly what he is trying to do with his new western on the same network, "The High Chaparral."

Both of Mr. Dortort's shows are one-hour frontier epics, both are seen on Sunday night—and, in fact, they are presented to the public back-to-back, with "Bonanza" coming first.

In addition, both center around tightly-knit families, patriarchal clans trying to make ago of it and overcome obstacles in a new land.

And here, according to a television source in a position to know, is where one can perhaps decipher the formula that Dortort has exploited to such effective results in terms of popularity.

According to this source, if you discounted the western getup worn by his clans, you could transfer the basic themes and stories of most of his episodes to the old Lower East Side of New York City, and to the values of its environment and immigrants.

Firm Theory—Our source is convinced that if you asked Dortort to do a show about, say, Alaska or Hawaii, the theory would hold firm right down the line.

All right, now, what is it exactly that Dortort is trying to do with "The High Chaparral?" At this point, the answer seems apparent and is an indication of Dortort's astuteness as a commercial producer.

What he appears to be doing in a nutshell, is preparing the groundwork for "The High Chaparral" to ease the public consciousness and eventually fill the gap when "Bonanza" runs out of steam. Though strong in the ratings, the long-popular "Bonanza" may only have several more years of real strength left, and there would therefore be a close alternative for viewers to pick up, with hardly any change in basic format—assuming, of course, that "The High Chaparral" can make the grade itself.

At this point, the new series seems to be following a beautifully predictable path on the ratings charts. It began strong with a blockbuster, brawling, lusty two-hour debut. Then, partly because of the competition of early-season big movies, it fell off sharply in the statistical race.

Slow Start—Many felt that it was doomed to failure simply because of its late-night slot on Sunday, a day when many persons go to bed early because the next morning starts the work week. And it is undoubtedly true the show would be doing better in the ratings in a more accessible time slot.

However, after its "sharp decline," "The High Chaparral" slowly but surely moved up in the ratings. It is by no means in the high numbers yet, but it is not far from being quite acceptable. "Bonanza" viewers may recall, was a near-failure at the start. Shows like family westerns often take a while to catch on—until viewers get acquainted with the characters and take to them. But once they do—and if they do—they are devoted followers of these characters.

This, then, is what "The High Chaparral" apparently is being aimed for. And if it should catch on with viewers, and eventually succeed "Bonanza," Dortort might find himself with a couple of shows spanning a may recall, was a near-failure

Soldiers Can't Be Made to Buy U.S. Savings Bonds

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Senate acted Wednesday to make sure the response really is voluntary when the general orders the colonel to tell the sergeants to suggest that the privates buy U.S. savings bonds.

By voice vote, the Senate approved a bill which would make it a court-martial offense for officers, or others acting on their behalf, to use coercion or threats in military bond or charity drives. The measure now goes to the House.

Recommending the bill to the Senate, the Armed Services Committee cited complaints from members of the armed services that pressures were employed to make them buy bonds to participate in charity drives.

TEENS TO RESCUE—Teenagers race into blazing Tucson, Ariz., nursing home and rescue 53 patients from fire fatal to four persons. (4)

END OF AN ERA—New York gives liner Queen Mary rousing sendoff as she sails out on her thousandth and last regular Atlantic crossing. (1)

CRASH INJURES COUPLE—SAN ANTONIO (UPI)—A man and his wife injured when their light plane crashed Thursday were in fair condition today and their 4-year-old daughter was released from Baptist Memorial Hospital. C. E. Earnhardt, pilot of the Mooney Mark 21, and his wife, Laverne, suffered shortly after takeoff from Stinson Field. A daughter, Cindy, was unmarked, but admitted to the hospital for observation.

GIRL FOUND HANGED—SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI)—Velia Jaramillo, 16, was found hanging by her neck from an electric cord Thursday in a shed at the rear of her home. Her mother, Mrs. Socorro Jaramillo, 36, told police she and her daughter had argued after the girl was ordered home from a neighbor's house.

LOVEJOY KILLED—CARROLLTON, Tex. (UPI)—James Edward Lovejoy, 21, of Lewisville, Tex., was killed early today in a one-car accident. Police said Lovejoy's car struck an exit sign on Highway 77 at the Crossley Road exit.

SEE 16 MILLION PASSENGERS—DALLAS (UPI)—An airport engineering firm's report shows the Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport will handle an estimated 16 million passengers a year in eight years. The report by Tippetts-Abbett-McCarthy-Stratton was released Thursday. It suggested railroad rights of way be reserved for a rapid transit system.

Wall Street Chatter

NEW YORK (UPI)—Goodbody & Co. says that as the effect of Britain's devaluation wears off and the market begins to reflect the positive aspect of the move, a further recovery in stock prices is likely. This optimism, however, assumes that no major complications arise in the many world monetary adjustments expected in the coming weeks.

Wright Investors' Service says the resilience of the U.S. security markets in the wake of British devaluation is almost certainly a definitive indication that a lusty year-end stock market rally is now beginning. It says it believes there will be revival of the blue chip stock market, with more attention paid to investment grade issues and less to the year's speculative favorites.

Thomson & McKinnon says that technically the market's outlook for the longer term is not satisfactory, with many stocks well below support levels and many others in severe downturns. It says the burden of proof is now on the bulls and a rally should provide house-cleaning opportunities in vulnerable stocks.

"This Is The Day"

Rev. Charles M. Spicer
Church of the Nazarene

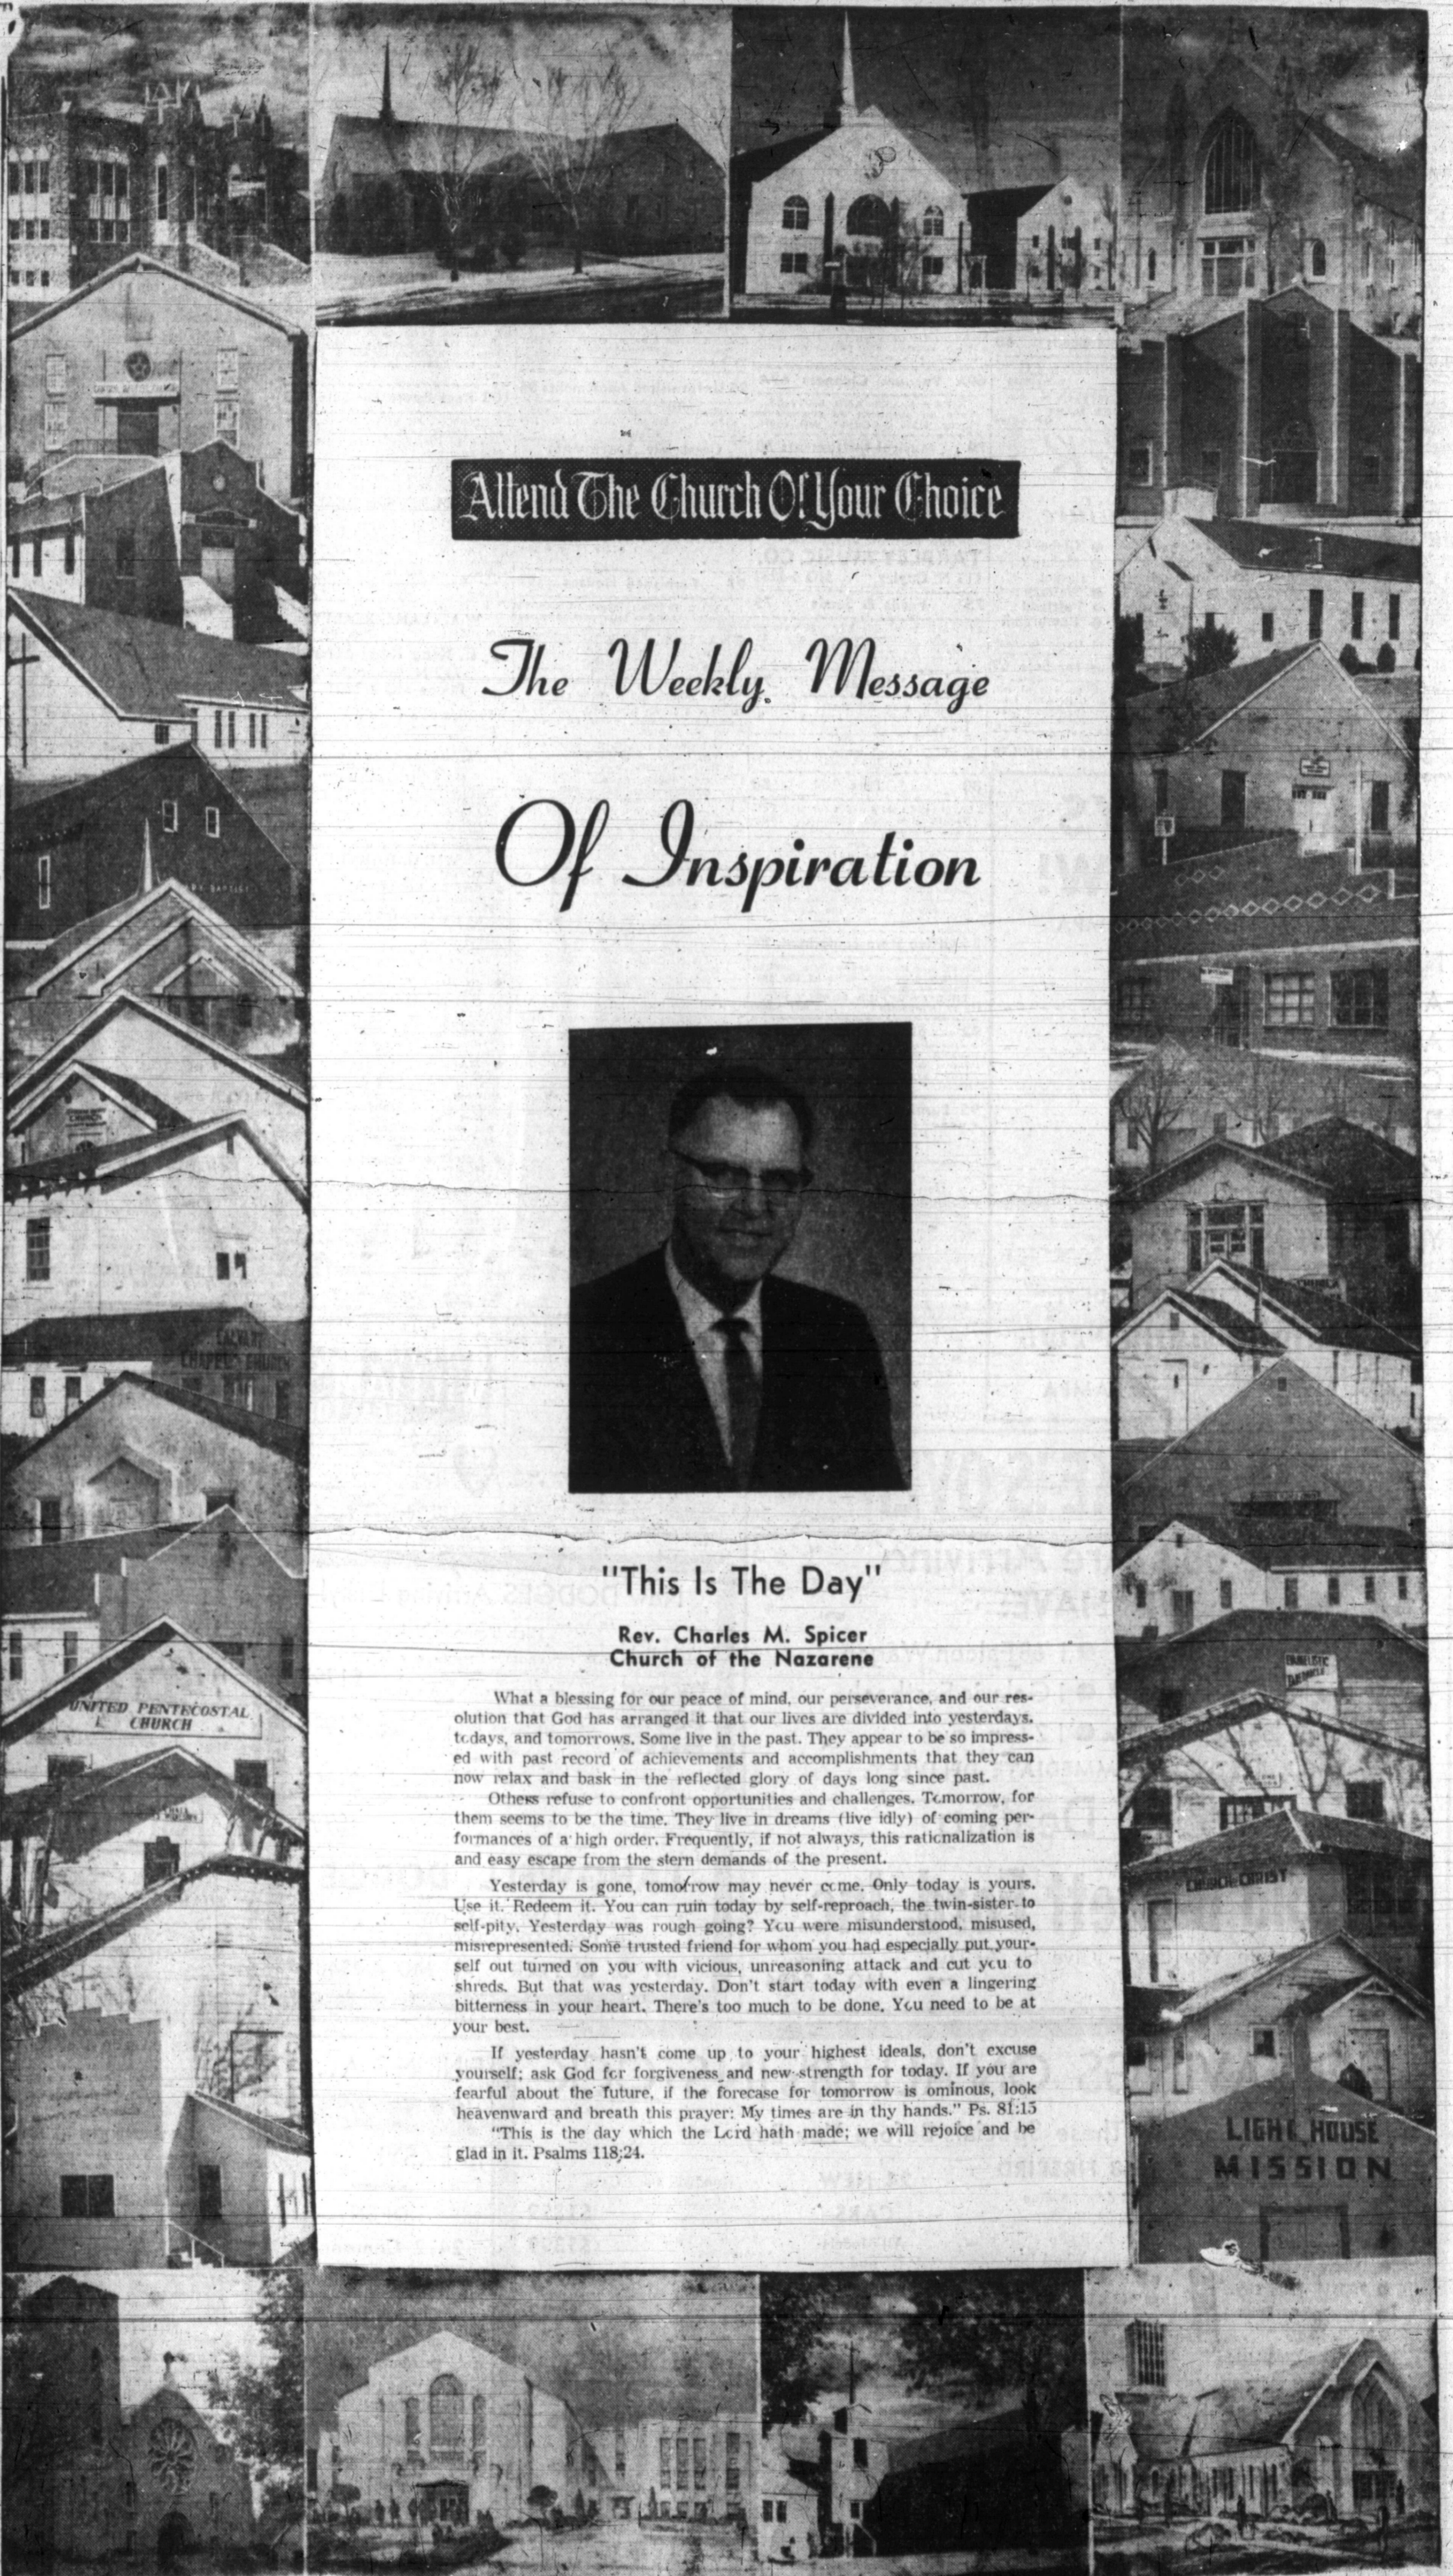

What a blessing for our peace of mind, our perseverance, and our resolution that God has arranged it that our lives are divided into yesterdays, today, and tomorrows. Some live in the past. They appear to be so impressed with past record of achievements and accomplishments that they can now relax and bask in the reflected glory of days long since past.

Others refuse to confront opportunities and challenges. Tomorrow, for them seems to be the time. They live in dreams (live idly) of coming performances of a high order. Frequently, if not always, this rationalization is and easy escape from the stern demands of the present.

Yesterday is gone, tomorrow may never come. Only today is yours. Use it. Redeem it. You can ruin today by self-reproach, the twin-sister to self-pity. Yesterday was rough going? You were misunderstood, misused, misrepresented. Some trusted friend for whom you had especially put yourself out turned on you with vicious, unreasoning attack and cut you to shreds. But that was yesterday. Don't start today with even a lingering bitterness in your heart. There's too much to be done. You need to be at your best.

If yesterday hasn't come up to your highest ideals, don't excuse yourself; ask God for forgiveness and new-strength for today. If you are fearful about the future, if the forecast for tomorrow is ominous, look heavenward and breath this prayer: My times are in thy hands." Ps. 81:15

"This is the day which the Lord hath made; we will rejoice and be glad in it. Psalms 118:24.
