Antiwar Vets Win President's Sympathy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Nine hundred Vietnam veterans, marching silently past the White House in a demonstration for withdrawal of U.S. forces from Indochina, may be reaching President Nixon as no other antiwar groups have been able to do.

The battle-dressed veterans, wearing the medals and ribbons they won in Vietnam, walked or rolled in wheelchairs in a candlelight parade Thursday night so silent it couldn't be heard half a block away.

They carried the flag upside down — depicting what one spokesman said was the military's acknowledged signal of distress.

Demonstration leaders called the march another victory for the veterans who earlier had camped out on the Capitol Mall despite a Supreme Court order forbidding it.

White House insiders said President Nixon passed the word "without fanfare" for the veterans to stay on the grassy parkland that runs west from the Capitol past the Washington Monument to the Lincoln Memorial.

Nixon watched a football game on television during an antiwar demonstration in 1969 and surrounded the White House with a barricade of buses during a demonstration last spring.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., said in a statement, "these veterans, whose opinion carries the badge of battle, have made an impression on the Congress. Their opinions have been heard."

Muskie Visits Vets

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., ate hamburgers and talked with the veterans on the Mall before dawn Thursday. Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, said, "your reaction to the war has changed our policy." Muskie visited the camp before the march.

The Oregon Relations Task Force of the White House Conference on Youth, meeting at Estes Park, Colo., sent a telegram that said, "Our thoughts and prayers will be in Washington as GIs in uniform remember those Americans, Vietnamese, Cambodians and Laotians who have died in this tragic war."

The candlelight march ended Thursday's activities that included more lobbying on Capitol Hill, the arrest of 110 demonstrators at the Supreme Court and a favorable ruling by the U.S. District Court.

The court reversed an order forbidding the veterans from camping on the Mall. The injunction against camping had been upheld by the Supreme Court only 24 hours earlier.

The Justice Department, which sought the injunction, also asked for the reversal. Assistant Attorney General L. Patrick Gray said the new ruling was sought because "these men are men who have served their country honorably."

Lawyers for the veterans had used similar words in arguing against the injunction.

110 Arrested

Before the injunction was dissolved, 106 men and two women were arrested on the marble steps of the Supreme Court after a 90-minute rally against the Indochina War. Two Vietnam veterans—both double amputees in wheelchairs—demanded to be arrested, but were ignored by police.

Attacks Penetrate 120 Miles Into Area

SAIGON (UPI) — Big American Chinook helicopters dropped sling-shot loads of home-made napalm on North Vietnamese buildup areas just outside the A Shau Valley today in preparation for an Allied drive into the Laotian border area.

American and South Vietnamese spokesmen said the Communists were concentrating men and equipment in the A Shau and "we think soon we will have some contact."

As the helicopters hit the Communist concentrations, the U.S. command also announced that 1,375 U.S. Marines began a standdown in preparation for return to California to begin the 100,000-man Phase 7 of President Nixon's troop withdrawal eight days ahead of schedule.

Military spokesmen also reported that American fighter-bombers hit Communist anti-aircraft missile installations nearly 200 miles inside North Vietnam Thursday night. It was one of the deepest penetrations north of the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ) since the halt of U.S. bombing in 1968.

UPI Correspondent Alan Dawson reported from the La Vang headquarters of Operation Lam Son 720, the A Shau Valley campaign, that more than one battalion of South Vietnamese troops is operating in the valley.

No contact has been reported yet in the drive.

Maj. Vo Van Tri, spokesman for the South Vietnamese 1st Infantry Division, said "We think soon we will have some contact. The North Vietnamese don't have enough forces to fight yet. They are waiting for reinforcements." He said the North Vietnamese 304th, 308th and 320th divisions were in the A Shau area. All three units fought in the recent six-week Laotian incursion.

At Fire Support Base Gladiator, nine miles northeast of the valley, Lt. Col. Keith Barlow, 39, of Camden, S.C., said "The enemy is building up. I have no doubt there will be contact."

Five Influential Senators Urge Nixon To Set Date For Pullout

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, says Democrats are as eager as President Nixon to eliminate the Vietnam War as a 1972 election issue, and that total U.S. withdrawal by a definitely established date is the way to do it.

Muskie and four potential rivals for the Democratic presidential nomination argued Thursday night that President Nixon should set a firm, early date for a pullout.

Muskie, Sens. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., George S. McGovern, D-S.D., Harold E. Hughes, D-Iowa, Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., and Democratic National Chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien appeared in a half-hour television program on ABC to reply to President Nixon's broadcasts on administration Indochina policy.

Muskie, Humphrey, Bayh, McGovern and Hughes all advocated a definite date for withdrawal, saying this would open the way for negotiations with the Communists on release of American prisoners of war. Nixon has pledged that total U.S. withdrawal will not take place until POWs are freed.

Jackson, who has generally supported administration policies, did not advocate setting a withdrawal date but said greater effort should be made to negotiate a mutual ceasefire.

The six senators made separate statements, with O'Brien opening and closing the program.

Muskie, the last to appear, said: "Some have said that we Democrats want the war as an issue in the 1972 campaign. That is nonsense. Every one of us here wants this war over before 1972."

He expressed hope that the war could be eliminated as an issue so that next year's presidential campaign could "be fought on the issue of how America should be led in peace."

McGovern, the only announced candidate so far, said "current policy only guarantees that our prisoners will remain in their cells, that our troops will remain in danger... and that the killing will continue."

Bayh accused the administration of attempting a "crow's foot" by suggesting that POWs might be released before the end of our involvement in the war.

Hughes said "there is no honor in sacrificing American lives" in Indochina. "There is honor, I believe, in binding the wounds of our domestic society and making America a strong nation again."

Humphrey, who led off the separate presentations, said Nixon had unfairly implied that Democratic administrations were to blame for the Vietnam entanglement. "The responsibility for our involvement was a national responsibility—not a partisan one; and our disengagement, it seems to me, must also be the task of all of us," he said.

'Hotline' Busy During First Service Week

Pampa's newly instituted Suicide Prevention-Crisis Information service has reported a busy beginning.

A report issued by the advisory board of the 24-hour a day telephone service states that the 23 volunteers associated with the center have dealt with 50 calls since the service went into operation on April 14 at 7 p.m.

Five of the calls were related to suicide; one concerned questions of psychiatric problems; four were related to family problems; and 22 were seeking general information. Eighteen of the calls were credited as incomplete, dealing with wrong numbers or crank calls.

Twenty-eight trained volunteers man the answering services 24 hours a day. The purpose of the "Hotline" is to provide a confidential relationship for those in any kind of need, (interpersonal, medical, psychiatric, financial), and to make referrals, upon the callers' request, to other agencies and services. The Crisis Center also encourages the use of its services by ministers, teachers, industrial personnel managers and others who need information concerning referrals. For any need... call 665-3771.

Rogers Optimistic About Progress Toward Peace In Turbulent Mideast

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State William P. Rogers, announcing plans to visit five Middle East countries early in May, said today there is "an exceptional opportunity" for further progress toward peace in the turbulent area.

Rogers told a news conference that he thought this opportunity "should not be missed." He said diplomatic progress plus the fact there had been an effective cease-fire for about nine months gave "reason for hope."

The secretary said that during his talks with Egyptian and Israeli officials as well as others in the area, he hoped to provide further evidence of the U.S. desire to "play a constructive role" in achieving peace.

He turned aside suggestions that the United States, by acting as a go-between for Israel and Egypt, had usurped any functions of United Nations mediator, Gunnar Jarring.

In addition to Egypt and Israel, Rogers will visit Jordan, Lebanon and Saudi Arabia during the week of May 2. He flies Monday to London for a SEATO meeting and then Turkey for a CENTO meeting before the Mideast tour.

His stop in Cairo will mark the first time a U.S. Secretary of State has visited the Egyptian capital since John Foster Dulles went there in 1953 during the Eisenhower administration.

Egyptian President Anwar el Sadat made clear that Rogers would be welcome.

Rogers said the United States, at the request of Israel and Egypt, was in consultations with them on the possibility of an interim agreement to reopen the Suez Canal.

He said, however, that this would be but one part of an overall peace settlement which is the ultimate responsibility of the United Nations.

He also expressed hope that direct trade might be established soon with Mainland China.

"It's up to the Peoples Republic of China," he told the news conference.

Rogers will leave Monday morning for London to attend the SEATO Foreign Ministers conference and will fly to Ankara on Thursday for the annual meeting of the CENTO ministers.

On the way to Ankara he will stop briefly in Paris to talk with French Foreign Minister Maurice Schuman to get the latest official French views on the Middle East.

Soviet Building In New York City Blasted By Bomb

NEW YORK (UPI) — A makeshift bomb exploded in the downtown Manhattan offices of the Soviet import-export corporation Amtorg after working hours Thursday, blasting a steel door off its hinges and further straining Soviet-American relations.

There were no injuries. Police and firemen had been tipped by anonymous telephone calls and evacuated persons from the area around the 19th floor.

A second bomb was found one floor above in a hasty search and defused two seconds before it was set to explode.

Amtorg is the official Soviet Trade Mission in the United States and the sole importer and exporter of goods between the two nations.

No organization or individual stepped forward to claim credit for the bombing, the latest in a series of harassments of Soviet institutions in this country. Most of the actions were said to be protests for the treatment Jews receive in Russia.

In the past, American nationalists in the Soviet Union have been harassed following such incidents.

The ship then sped out of radio range for a time.

Manson Neighbor Of Sirhan Sirhan

SAN QUENTIN, Calif. (UPI) — Cult leader Charles Manson, warned that hippies are "universally disliked" on death row, was locked Thursday in a gloomy cell two doors away from assassin Sirhan B. Sirhan.

The nation's two most infamous slayers won't be neighbors for long as Manson must be returned to Los Angeles before his trial on two other murder charges resumes Monday.

Manson, 36, sentenced to death last Monday for the seven Tate-LaBianca murders, became the 94th resident of California's death row—a tier of small cells above San Quentin's apple green gas chamber.

Senator Challenges Qualification Of Governor's Board Appointee

AUSTIN (UPI) The appointment by Gov. Preston Smith of the husband of his personal secretary to a $19,000-a-year state job is awaiting a decision from the attorney general.

The Senate Nominations Committee voted Thursday to refer the nomination of Richard Lee Penn, appointed to the State Industrial Accident Board, to Attorney General Crawford Martin.

Sen. A. R. Schwartz, D-Galveston, challenged the legality of the nomination. Schwartz said Penn does not have the legal qualifications to serve as the employer representative on the three-man board.

Penn told the committee he had never actually been an employer until the weekend before Smith named him to the board. One of the qualifications for the job is the appointee must be an employer. The other positions are held by an employer and an attorney.

Weekend Employment Penn said an Austin firm agreed to put him on the payroll for a weekend so he could meet the legal qualifications as an employer and qualify for the job.

Industrial Accident Board. Penn said "I didn't like the idea but I was told that other board members had gone to work for a few days as an employe just to qualify."

Several Pay Hikes Penn has received a number of promotions and pay raises since his wife went to work as a Senate secretary in 1957 and became the governor's personal secretary in 1961. Penn left a "machine accounting" job with a private insurance company in 1959 to join the state government.

Refused Explanation But Schwartz didn't accept this explanation. "I am convinced that as a matter of law you do not have the qualifications for the job," Schwartz told Penn.

It was Schwartz who suggested the committee get the legal opinion from Attorney General Martin. Sen. Joe Christie, D-El Paso, the chairman of the committee, said the vote on the appointment will be delayed pending the attorney general's decision.

U. S. Senate OK's Degegregation Laws JUMP 1-14 US SENATE WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Senate has gone on record for a second time in favor of uniform enforcement of school desegregation laws.

It voted 44 to 34 Thursday to adopt an amendment by Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., that called for uniform enforcement, whether the segregation was Northern or Southern-style.

But the vote was a policy statement only, and technically meaningless unless Congress passes laws against neighborhood segregation, or unless the Supreme Court rules such segregation is unconstitutional.

Nevertheless, Stennis hailed the vote as a victory. He said if the Senate continued to adopt stands favoring a single policy, the idea may catch on some day and become reality "like water dripping on a stone."

In the North, most racial segregation is a result of neighborhood residential patterns, not the result of any former official or legal separation of the races. So far, neither the courts nor Congress has said this type of segregation is illegal or unconstitutional.

City Employees Interviewed In Attitude Survey

Twelve city employees were scheduled for interviews this afternoon in the preliminary step of an Attitude Survey being conducted to determine how municipal workers feel about city hall policies and operations.

Employees for today's interviews were selected at random from the tax, finance, police, fire, parks, streets, sanitation, engineering, health, library, health and water departments.

The interviews were conducted by James Witterding and Thomas Donnelly, professors in Texas Tech University's Management Department at Lubbock.

Today's interviews, City Manager Mack Wofford said, will be used for preparation of a questionnaire to be sent to Pampa's 195 city employees for the general attitude survey.

The questionnaire will seek to learn employee attitudes on various City Hall policies covering such things as insurance, retirement, working conditions, supervision, etc.

Results obtained from the secret questionnaires will be used, Wofford said, "As a tool to develop city policies and improve employee relationships."

White Deer High School Senior Awarded Celanese Scholarship

LINDA JEAN CORNETTE

Miss Linda Jean Cornette, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin B. Cornette, White Deer, has been named one of this year's winners of the Celanese Scholarships.

Cornette is safety inspector at the company's Pampa facility. Approximately 1,300 high school seniors were named winners of four-year Merit Scholarships by Edward C. Smith, President of the National Merit Scholarship Corporation. The Merit Scholarships awarded provide between $100 and $1,500 per year depending upon the individual student's needs.

The awards are underwritten by business and industrial firms who sponsor the National Merit Scholarship Program and are usually named for the sponsoring organization. Celanese, in conjunction with the Camille and Henry Dreyfus Foundation, has sponsored college scholarships for employees' children under the National Merit Scholarship Program.

Linda plans to major in Mathematics, spending two semesters at West Texas State University and the balance of her college career at Oklahoma State University. She hopes to eventually become a Statistician.

Linda is involved in many extracurricular activities ranging from the National Honor Society to the High School basketball team. For the past two years, she has represented the White Deer District at the regional Number Sense Contest. Her work has not gone unrewarded though; she has won the Betty Crocker Homemaker of Tomorrow award, the Texas Chemical Council award, and the Bausch Lomb Science award.

Besides school activities, Linda serves regularly in her church. She taught Vacation Bible School for three years and has periodically filled in as Sunday School teacher.

Connally Attacks Interest Rate Hike

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Nixon administration is serving notice on the nation's big banks that it will not watch silently if there is new round of interest rate increases.

In some of the toughest language the administration has aimed at business, Treasury Secretary John B. Connally Thursday denounced the Chase Manhattan Bank of New York for increasing its prime interest rate.

"I was very disappointed at this increase in the prime rate of Chase Manhattan Bank," Connally said in a formal statement. "I was totally unaware that loan demand had reached such proportions as to justify such an increase."

PROTEST WILL REACH CLIMAX TOMORROW

An Anatomy Of Washington Demonstration

By LEE MUELLER
WASHINGTON (NEA) — For weeks, the date — April 24 — has been hammered into Washington citizenry the way the greeting card industry annually promotes Feb. 14 and Dec. 25 and other birthdays.

April 24. You saw it on lapel buttons, bumpers, buses, fences, newspapers, and occasionally scrawled on national monuments. The city prepared itself. The time was coming, again, for another antiwar demonstration in the nation's capital.

It is not a new idea, of course. Not now. There have been three major antiwar demonstrations here since 1967. In recent years, the United States seems to have become almost comfortable with the marching and shouting of its dissident faction.

After all, demonstrations have been a popular form of expression in this country since the Boston Tea Party. From Carry Nation to Jane Fonda, the country has been blessed with citizens willing to protest vigorously.

Protest marches have become an uncontrollable vogue in the United States. Italian-Americans, Afro-Americans (Indians) or some other faction of our population marches daily against one oppression or another. The antiwar demonstrations, however, continue to draw more interest — and more participants.

It was on the nation's campuses that the first demonstrations arose against the war in 1964, when the cauldron in Vietnam was just beginning to boil.

College students, historically concerned with such esoteric activity as cafeteria food protests, became a vital concern in politics. Unlike their crew-cut predecessors, the new generation of collegians was unwilling to accept the gaps between professed ideals and actual performance — and likewise refused to be impressed by the previous generation that had found the way out of a major depression and defeated a massive wave of totalitarianism.

MARCHING ON WASHINGTON in 1969. From the Boston Tea Party on, there have been Americans willing to protest vigorously.

And it was college students who generated the first large antiwar protest in Washington, October 1967. That demonstration caused considerable uproar but the two that followed — in November 1969 and May 1970 — were more or less antiwarclimaxes.

This time, it would be different. "It's an 11-day program; not just a protest-and-go-home meeting," explained Randy Bregman of the People's building. The Justice Department gets the same treatment May 4.

A "motatolium" — calling for work stoppage and a student strike — is scheduled May 5. "Then," said Bregman, "hopefully, on May 6, the war will be over."

The other sponsoring group the National Peace Action Coalition, concerns itself only with the April 24 antiwar activities.

"No two demonstrations are exactly alike," said NPA spokesman Steve Cohn. "They involved different people and lead in new directions. Indications are that the April 24 march will involve sections of the population never deeply engaged before, especially from labor unions."

March plans included various contingents, a Woman's Contingent, a Third World People's Contingent for Non-white Americans, a Vietnam Veterans Contingent, a Gay Contingent and an Academic Contingent, among others.

"I'm going to march," said Sally Neil, a New York paraprofessional lawyer, "but I'm having difficulty deciding on the group I want to join."

So it goes. Another year, another demonstration.

The Lighter Side

By DICK WEST
WASHINGTON (UPI) —The pharmaceutical industry on occasion has been accused of overdoing its promotion of over-the-counter medical products.

According to consumer groups and other critics, excessive advertising causes us confused laymen to waste millions of dollars on unnecessary purchases of various nostrums, palliatives, elixirs, herbifuges.

To some extent, at least, I believe this censure is unwarranted. For it overlooks the important point that medical advertising often serves a double purpose.

In many cases, medical advertising must do more than inform us that a remedy is available; it also must educate us as to the existence of the ailment.

For unless we know we have a certain ailment, we obviously are not going to the drug store and buy a remedy for it.

Consider, for example, the massive advertising campaign that will be needed seven to 10 years from now, which is when Syntex Pharmaceuticals of London hopes to produce a pill for the prevention of "jet-lag."

Jet-lag is described in the current issue of McCall's magazine as the feeling you have in the evening "when your body still thinks it's morning."

The symptoms may include a vague sense of unease, some impairment of decision-making ability and abnormal sleep patterns, plus slight deviation in body temperature, breathing rates and pulse beat.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I do not get along very well. In fact, if it weren't for the kids, I wouldn't live within 1,000 miles of this idiot. We are both artists and my husband specializes in Western art now, and he has been selling his paintings before the oil is dry on the canvas. I don't mean to put him down, but my work is much better than his even if it doesn't sell half as well. The public just happens to be going for gimmick art.

I can hardly stand it when my husband sells a painting. For one thing, he has a way of gloating that makes me want to put my fist right through his face. I wish I knew how to get over this envious attitude. Can you help me?

DEAR ABBY: My husband's mother recently remarried after having been a widow for a good many years. She is a dear, sweet woman, and I couldn't love my own mother more. She and her new husband visited us last Christmas, and during the evening he made me a little uncomfortable just by the way he kept looking at me. He followed me into the kitchen once and said he wanted to give me a little Christmas kiss. I gave him my cheek but he grabbed me and said, "No, not that kind..." then he tried to kiss me on the mouth. I got away from him and kept my distance all evening. Now he calls me on the phone when he knows my husband is at work. He says he wants to talk to me. I am afraid of him. He is 70.

Please tell me how to handle this. They live in another town not far from us, but we see them quite often.

DEAR ABBY: When my girl and I started going together, I asked her to please get her teeth fixed as she needed it badly. I even offered to pay for it. She agreed to see a dentist but she never did. I know she hasn't been to a dentist in a good many years.

We are planning to be married in a few months so last night I reminded her of her promise and told her to start right away so she would look nice for our wedding. She turned very cold on me and said she didn't want to discuss it.

Abby, she's a pretty girl but her teeth are ugly, when she smiles it spoils her looks. She's a wonderful person in every other way, but her teeth are so bad I would even postpone our wedding until she gets them fixed. What should I do?

—THE BRIDE GROOM

DEAR GROOM: The only logical reason for your fiancée to duck the dentist is fear! She needs to be assured that dentistry has come a long way since she was a little girl. Offer to go with her, and let the dentist examine her mouth and explain exactly what must be done. A neglected mouth is not only unsightly, it's unhealthy. She may be a "wonderful" girl, but she needs to grow up and face reality. Help her.

DEAR ABBY: I heard that a doctor can lose his license if he prescribes birth control pills to a girl who is underage. Is that true?

—ILLINOIS READER

DEAR READER: No. Birth-control pills are sometimes prescribed to underage girls to regulate their menstrual periods.

ON TRAVEL TRAILS

Civic Culture Club Has Scenic Program

Civic Culture Club members met recently with Mrs. Katie Vincent, at 1901 Dogwood, as Mrs. A.E. Cross, president, conducted the business meeting. Members discussed the Top of Texas district convention and learned Mrs. Vincent was honored as being the oldest active club member in the Top of Texas District.

Mrs. Cross presented Mrs. Irvin Cole who was program coordinator for the day on "Beauty Spots of Texas." Mrs. Cole showed pictures of the Azalea Trail in Tyler, and the Dogwood Trail in Palestine. "The taste of Texas has formed 10 travel trails to guide visitors. They average 650 miles in length and take about two days to see the recommended attractions. These trails are marked by blue and white markers," Mrs. Cole said.

During the social hour, members served were Mmes. E.L. Henderson, Irvin Cole, A.B. Cross, A.D. Hills, John McKnerney, A.D. Rife, Chester Williams, H.W. Waters, and the hostess, Katie Vincent.

POLLY'S POINTERS Tips For Lengthening Too Short Dresses

DEAR POLLY—Please tell me how to remove a brown spot left on my vinyl tile floor by a cigarette burn. I have tried everything but this eyesore remains.

DEAR POLLY—Mrs. C.L.N. can lengthen her expensive dresses without letting down the hems and in several ways. An entire new midriff section of lace, matching or contrasting material, will add considerably to the length. Also one wide or several insertions can be added to the skirt. These could be made of a variety of materials depending on the fabric in the dress. There are beautiful embroidered ribbons for luxury fabrics, braid and wide ribbons that can be used for contrasting fabrics.

Such dresses can be converted to new long tops to be worn with harmonizing pants and have a new pantsuit. Sewing in a piece of contrasting material at the waist or above and below the waistline, as so many new dresses are styled, is also an answer to too short dresses.

DEAR POLLY—I do hope to help Mrs. C.L.N. with her too-short dresses. Cut the dress either straight or on a slant all the way around just below the zipper ending. For the set-in band, use fabric of the same texture as the dress and cut straight or on the bias, as the dress. Be sure the side seams are even. A fringe also could be added around the lower edge of the garment.

Make an overshirt or full-length vest and wear it over the dress. A deep hem in the overgarment conceals the length of the original garment. Color works wonders with any of these ideas and buttons could match the inserted strip or added fringe. Jewelry and scarves to match also will add.

Senator's Wife Aids Husband With Goals

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Marvella Bayh is ambitious in her efforts to help her husband, Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., but she says she wouldn't wish a burden like the presidency on him.

At the same time, she acknowledges he is interested in being president. This is his second Senate term. He gained wide publicity when he led the fight that defeated Clement F. Haynsworth's nomination to the Supreme Court, and took part in the successful opposition to President Nixon's second choice, G. Harrold Carswell.

He led the drive, again successfully, for congressional approval of a constitutional amendment to permit 18-year-olds to vote in all elections. A few weeks ago he opened a campaign office in Washington and he makes frequent speaking trips around the country.

Mrs. Bayh's reaction to this activity was: "Why would any wife choose for her husband to be president? I can't imagine a family wanting this for a loved one."

But her husband is interested, she acknowledged. She quoted him as saying if he did not open a campaign office "it would be like closing the door" to his supporters.

WINNER BY A WHISKER WACO, Tex. (UPI)—Students at Baylor University have elected Miss Delilah Bear as spring holiday queen.

Their only child, Evan, 15, is "very adjustable—we always take him into our confidence." If her husband eventually should become president, would Mrs. Bayh pursue a special project?

"My main interest is the great and crying need for child development centers," she said. She cited the rising crime rate, the need for more and more prison space, and the large number of unemployable persons. The best way to deal with this is by caring for children in the first place, she said.

Mrs. Bayh said there are five million children under school age whose mothers work, and only 500,000 in day care centers. Half of the other children have virtually no care at all during their mothers' absence, she said.

Crime costs the nation $51 billion a year, she said, the Defense Department's annual budget is $75 billion, and the expense of keeping a man in prison for a year amounts to $3,500.

"It would take only $6 billion to $8 billion a year to take care of our children," she said. "It's a mammoth job, but it must be done."

Opportunities for progress will be emphasized Sunday at Christian Science church services. From Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy, this citation will be read: "Progress takes off human shackles. The finite must yield to the infinite. Advancing to a higher plane of action, thought rises from the material sense to the spiritual, from the scholastic to the inspirational, and from the mortal to the immortal."

Of God And Man

By LOUIS CASSEL
UPI Religion Writer

Even the most devout person occasionally finds his private prayers slipping into a monotonous rut. Day in and day out, his prayers cover the same ground, focus on the same concerns. Even though the concerns are real and the petitions sincere, this amounts to "vain repetition" which Jesus cautioned his disciples to avoid in prayer. One way to introduce new dimensions of depth and variety into private devotions is to use prayers written by someone else. There are many good books of prayers on the market. Many denominations publish quarterly booklets, providing a different prayer for each day. But you don't have to rely on such modern resources. There is a great prayer book in the Bible. It's the Book of Psalms. This ancient collection of Hebrew poetry contains prayers to fit almost every conceivable human need or emotion. In an hour of anxiety, for example, one can hardly improve on the simple, direct cry of the 22nd Psalm: "Be not far from me, Lord, for trouble is near, and I have no helper." If disaster has already struck, the 6th Psalm may express your feelings: "Be merciful to me, O Lord, for I am weak."

"Heal me, my very bones are shaken; My soul quivers in dismay. Deliver me for Thy love's sake." When trouble is past, the 30th Psalm provides words for a grateful heart: "I will exalt thee, O Lord; Thou hast lifted me up. O Lord my God, I cried to thee, and Thou didst heal me." The best use of the Psalms, however, is to move private prayer beyond its usual pattern of petitions and thanksgivings into a higher realm of sheer adoration.

"TODAY"
Psalms 95:6-8a

O come let us worship and bow down: let us kneel before the Lord, our maker.

For He is our God: and we are the people of His pasture, and the sheep of His hand. Today if you will hear His voice harden not your heart.

Everyday becomes a day of new opportunities for each of us.

Yesterday is history in our lives-tomorrow is the future. Whatever we do, we do today.

As we face the beginning of each new day, we should begin in worshipping the Lord. This is becoming a lost part of our attitude toward God. Many Christians will live many weeks, perhaps months, without giving "thanks" unto our Heavenly Father for all His benefits. The more we praise God, the more spiritual blessings become ours. Where should we worship the Lord?

FIRST-WITHIN THE HOME

How sad that many children never have the privilege of having family devotions within the home-never know the joy of kneeling together and giving thanks unto our Father. Psalms 95:6 says: "Let us kneel before the Lord, our Maker." Would we not have closer united families if as a family, we worshipped God.

SECONDLY... we must worship the Lord within our Church.

Many, many are the people who are members of the church but are not enjoying gathering together to worship of God. The Word of God declares, Heb. 10:25; "We are not to forsake the assembling of ourselves together."

How can we expect our children to be strong Christians and really serve the Lord if we do not set an example for them to follow. Let us begin to make a family affair of attending the House of the Lord. TODAY is the day to begin to really worship the Lord.

Today, if you will hear His voice, harden not your heart.

God desires to commune with you today. As we listen to the voice of the Lord and obey His voice, we will begin to find real peace and contentment. May we listen to HIS WORD and not harden our hearts.

Many lost sinners put off accepting Christ as Savior until a tomorrow. To many of these, the tomorrow never comes.

Why should one wait until a tomorrow? For the scripture says: "TODAY" is the day of salvation, NOW is the acceptable time."

What will YOU DO with today?

Extremist Acts Of 'Jewish Defense League' Strain U.S.-Russia Relations

Inside Washington

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President John F. Kennedy used to quote Chinese philosophers on how a journey of a thousand miles must begin with the first step.

In Washington—and particularly at the White House—an atmosphere of hopeful anticipation is evident on the road back to normal relations with mainland China.

The U.S. table tennis team's visit to China, with the fresh observations of its members and the obvious wooing on the part of the government and people in what is called the new "smiling diplomacy," has had widespread approval among Americans.

The White House also points out that the reaction of other levels has been positive. And it took the opportunity while the ping pong players were in Peking to make additional moves to relax travel restrictions for Chinese to visit the United States and to lift a 21-year embargo on direct trade between American businessmen and China.

In this rosy picture, the only dissenting note was struck by Vice President Spiro T. Agnew who apparently complained to reporters in a late night trap session that the United States took a propaganda beating on the visit. He was said to have expressed the view that the United States had been trapped by the invitation and was concerned about too eager a policy of embracing a long-time foe.

President Nixon is approaching the problem cautiously. He recently told a panel of editors and White House correspondents that it was "premature" to talk about U.S. recognition of China and it is "premature also to talk about a change of our policy" with regard to representation of the People's Republic of China in the U.N.

The United States has a commitment to Taiwan and undoubtedly Americans would take a dim view of any scuttling of that protective policy toward the Taiwan government.

EDITORS' NOTE: Less than three years ago three angry American Jews decided it was time to fight back—against any form of anti-Semitism, as they saw it, from any quarter. They formed the "Jewish Defense League" for that purpose. Since then they have taken on the Soviet government, the U.S. government and, indirectly, the government of the Jewish state of Israel. This dispatch examines the league.

By DONALD E. MULLEN
NEW YORK (UPI)—Russians assigned to the permanent Soviet mission to the United Nations are getting some sleep these nights.

Their 11-story office and apartment building on 67th Street in Manhattan's posh East Side is guarded around the clock by 40 policemen. Their block between Lexington and 3rd Avenues is closed to through traffic by police barricades. Anyone passing through must state his business.

The Russians have been forced into this almost protective custody existence by a small group of militants called the Jewish Defense League (JDL). And, although the JDL must now conduct its noisy demonstrations and pursuing campaign elsewhere in a campaign to focus world attention on the plight of Soviet Jews, that block on 67th Street probably will remain barricaded for a long time.

Police Guard Embassy
The same situation exists on a smaller scale in Washington, where a 24-hour watch has been beefed up around the Soviet Embassy and other Soviet offices following a series of demonstrations, insults, threats in person or by telephone from JDL members or their sympathizers, culminating in a series of bombings early this year.

Such an uncomfortable situation could be considered a triumph for the JDL, which in less than three years of existence has assumed the right of guardian over Jews anywhere in the world—whether they are to be protected or not.

Led by an orthodox rabbi, the Jewish Defense League, with rarely more than 300 members on hand at any given time, has succeeded in making headlines around the world in a string of actions that stretches from mounting tough street patrols in ghetto areas, to campaigning against New York Mayor John Lindsay for lowering college entrance scholastic requirements for Negroes and Puerto Ricans, to throwing stink bombs at concerts of visiting Soviet musicians, to insulting Russian housewives in Manhattan supermarkets.

Jews Denounce JDL
The league's slogan is "Never Again," a reference to the six million Jews murdered by Nazi Germany, and its actions are predicated on the assumption that the United States is heading toward a cauldron of anti-Semitism.

For its militant actions the JDL has been roundly, and thoroughly, denounced by every major Jewish organization as a "lunatic fringe group," as "exploiters of fear," and as "destructive of public order and contributory to divisiveness and terror." Despite all this there are indications that there are also some who approve of the idea of karate-trained Jews fighting for their rights.

The JDL has chapters in a number of U.S. cities and points with pride at Boston and Philadelphia where members have mounted tough ghetto patrols, as well as worked directly with black activists on community problems. It is supported by individual contributions and dues, with a yearly budget, according to one official, of less than $100,000 a year.

Kahane Sets Danger
The JDL's national headquarters takes up the third floor of a decrepit building on the seedy end of Manhattan's 42nd Street, a few blocks west of Times Square where dirty movies vie with "live" nude entertainment and pornographic bookshops.

On the walls leading to the cluttered offices in the rear is an inked slogan: "Kahane's Commandos."

Orthodox Rabbi Meir David Kahane, 38, is the founder and leader of JDL. He is an intense, friendly man with the natural magnetism of a leader and an unshakable belief that the violence of the times spells danger to American Jews.

Jew is Scapegoat
Kahane—he pronounces his name Kah-hah-nah—believes a wave of anti-Semitism is coming to the United States "because of the growing social problems, the growing economic problem in this country. In such a situation there is always a search for a scapegoat. The Jew is an easier scapegoat, far more than blacks. And the Jew is the most convenient one around, with many seen as successful, wealthy persons."

Kahane is the Brooklyn-born son and grandson of scholarly Orthodox rabbis. As a teen-ager he was active in the struggle for Israel's nationhood. In the 1940's, he helped pack guns in Hoboken, N.J., for shipment to Palestine. He also participated in anti-British demonstrations in New York.

He was a brilliant student, graduating from religious schools and New York University as an ordained rabbi with graduate degrees in law and international affairs.

Kahane Forms JDL
Kahane has been editor of the Jewish Press, a Brooklyn newspaper, and co-author of a book which took the stand that a U.S. pullout in Southeast Asia could trigger an isolationist mood in the United States that could affect U.S. support for Israel.

In July, 1968, Kahane and two other men, one of them Bertram Zweibel, now JDL defense counsel and No. 2 man in the league, formed the organization in reaction to rising urban violence in which Jewish residents of slum neighborhoods were being beaten, robbed and even killed.

"We were trying to change the image of the Jew as a patsy," Kahane explained. "Jews have always been ready to turn the other cheek. Well, as every kid knows, a bully will keep beating you up until you fight back."

JDL Grows
At first, JDL was just a handful of young men who studied karate and street fighting tactics. They set up patrols in Jewish neighborhoods and, dressed in green berets and green guerrilla outfits, quickly got the reputation as feisty tough guys who would not brook even a whisper of anti-Semitism.

The JDL's tactics have always been aimed at getting maximum news coverage, and it has resorted to some flamboyant methods. When black militant James Forman indicated he was going to appear at Manhattan's prestigious Temple Emanu-el to demand "reparations"—as he had at leading Christian churches—the JDL dispatched, unrequested, 30 members carrying baseball bats to guard the temple. Forman never showed up.

When eight neo-Nazis picketed a JDL demonstration with signs that read "Gas the Jews," league members beat them up so badly they had to be hospitalized.

JDL Insults Russians

EMERGENCY DRUG SUPPLY
ST. CHARLES, Mo. (UPI)—St. Charles County officials discovered Wednesday they inadvertently have been providing drug users a large supply of barbiturates.

About half the 100,000 barbiturate tablets placed in abandoned bank vaults by Civil Defense authorities have been stolen, witnesses told a county court judge.

The court ordered the rest of the pills removed.

CALLING IT QUITS
LIVERPOOL, England (UPI)—George Jones doesn't think he and his wife will be having any more children. At age 77, he figures three are enough.

Jones' wife June, 31, has given birth to twin boys at Liverpool's Fazakerley Hospital. They already are the parents of a 3-year-old girl.

Jones, who married his second wife seven years ago, has five sons and nine grandchildren from a previous marriage.

In 1969 the JDL took up the fight for Soviet Jews. Their tactics escalated from picketing to taking over the Park East synagogue directly across the street from the Soviet Mission headquarters where they blasted away with ugly and sometimes obscene insults in Russian through loudspeakers. They followed individual Russian personnel on foot and in cars, shouting insults.

Then came raids on the Manhattan offices of the Soviet news agency TASS, the travel agency Intourist and Aeroflot, the Russian airline. Then came attempts to break up performances by visiting Russian artists.

During all of these there were clashes with police resulting in arrest of Kahane who has been charged with everything from rioting to disorderly conduct.

League Condemns Bombings
In Washington, JDL members kept up a constant harassment of the Soviet Embassy. The anti-Soviet campaign reached a climax at the end of 1970 and early this year with the setting off of bombs outside several Soviet buildings in Washington, and another at the Manhattan offices of Aeroflot and Intourist. JDL denied it was responsible for the bombings, but Kahane refused to condemn such acts, telling a news conference:

"Any protest to help enslaved people is a legitimate form of protest—including bombing and other forms of violent actions."

Such extremist acts put a strain on U.S.-Soviet relations. A formal protest from the Soviet embassy in Washington termed the JDL's tactics "hoodlum actions" and accused U.S. authorities of failing to ensure the security of Soviet personnel and institutions in Washington and New York.

In Moscow several U.S. newsmen were roughed up and their cars damaged by toughs in an obvious reaction to the harassment and bombings.

The ensuing uproar made it plain that the JDL has few friends in major Jewish organizations. The leaders of Jewish communities in 23 cities expressed outrage at the bombings in a telegram to President Nixon, which read:

"Such irresponsible and criminal actions from whatever source must be stopped... American Jews strongly condemn such criminal acts because they are morally wrong, injure the cause of Soviet Jewry, and undermine the cause of democracy in the U.S."

This was echoed by Israel Prime Minister Golda Meir, who, referring to Arab terrorism in her criticism of the JDL's tactics, said, "It can only damage our just struggle and play into the hands of our enemies by enabling them to equate us with those being denounced in most parts of the world."

Noisy Public Clamor To Free Calley Now Only Whisper

By United Press International
The noisy public clamor to "Free Calley" that shook the nation following Lt. William L. Calley's conviction for murdering 22 Vietnamese women, children and old men now is only a whisper.

"Free Calley" rallies are fewer, a recent benefit dance to raise funds for the young infantry officer in Iowa flopped, an American Legion post in New York State indicates it is more interested in a baseball dinner now and the ambitious drive to raise a $100,000 defense fund begun by a Georgia veterans group still is about $85,000 short.

More significant, perhaps, politicians are talking less about "the Calley injustice."
"Things are not as good as they once were," said Dr. Max Anderson, a chiropractor and Korean War veteran who commands American Legion Post 35 at Columbus, Ga., a short distance from Ft. Benning where Calley is held confined to quarters while his conviction and life at hard labor prison sentences are being reviewed.

"Our big problem is to keep up public sentiment," Anderson said Wednesday. "We're writing all persons who signed earlier petitions to get them circulating more petitions."
Contributions have dropped sharply and so has the mail, Anderson said, noting that the height of the reaction following Calley's conviction on March 29 for his part in the My Lai massacre, the Legion's fund drive headquarters was receiving between 300 and 500 letters a day.
"Now we are down to 100 to 150 letters a day and that is not good," Anderson said. "We are going to have to work harder."

Anderson said a week ago the "Free Calley" defense fund had reached about $15,000. Wednesday he said he had not had time lately to go over the figures but he thought it to be "a little in excess of $15,000."
A survey Wednesday showed interest in Calley had waned sharply since the initial reaction that had draft boards resigning en masse, congressmen and other politicians making angry speeches and President Nixon intervening to remove Calley from the guardhouse and install him in his comfortable post bachelor quarters.
At Sioux City, Iowa, only about 80 persons turned out for Joe Hupp's benefit dance for Calley and Hupp lost $600.
Ten days ago at Rochester, N.Y., the Monroe County American Legion established a fund to help pay for court appeals for Calley. The Legion earmarked $300 of its own money, but Mrs. Fola Steiner, Legion executive secretary, said only a one-dollar donation has been received.
"I'm more concerned with our baseball dinner right now," Mrs. Steiner said.

United States Is Believed Losing Its Technology Lead To Soviet Union

WALTHAM, Mass. (UPI)—The United States is rapidly losing its technology lead to the Soviet Union and is in danger of falling far behind, according to one U.S. scientist, Dr. George N. Hatsopoulos.

One reason for the lag, Hatsopoulos says, is that the Soviets sat back while the U.S. did all the expensive preliminary research and development, and then picked up where this country left off "when we dropped the ball."

Hatsopoulos, president of Thermo Electron Corp., and a pioneer in the field of thermionics—the conversion of atomic energy directly into electricity—said "the leadership of this country today, in technology, has resulted from investments that were made 10 years ago."

But because the investments are not now being made to sustain our lead, "I don't think we can avoid the technology gap," he said.

Hatsopoulos' comments in an interview were prompted by a recent report out of Moscow that the Soviets had made a "breakthrough" in the development and testing of an advanced engineering system capable of converting nuclear energy directly into electricity.

Russia Outstrips U.S.
The thermionic converter had an electrical capacity of "several kilowatts," the report said, far ahead of American efforts. Hatsopoulos said that only with wise and efficient spending could the United States close this gap, and this would take three to five years.

However, he held out little hope the funding would be forthcoming. Under the present economic climate the United States, he said, "We will never catch up."

The direct conversion of atomic energy into electricity has extremely attractive application possibilities—both militarily and commercially—including use on spacecrafts and beneath the oceans, any remote area where traditional power supplies are impossible.

Nuclear power plants under construction now in the United States produce heat that is converted to steam which drives turbines to generate electricity.

Hatsopoulos, a senior lecturer in mechanical engineering at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, said the United States about a dozen years ago was funding "every idea no matter how crazy."

The Soviets, on the other hand, didn't have that kind of money to throw around so were very cautious about what they invested in.

U.S. Focus Switches
After spending many millions of dollars, Hatsopoulos said, American scientists determined that thermionics was feasible. To reach this point was extremely expensive, he said, because "more money in a development goes in finding out what is not the way of doing things."

Hatsopoulos, who wrote the article on thermionics for the 1967 edition of Encyclopedia Britannica, said the United States spent literally millions of dollars in "weeding out the bad from the good ideas, finding out what you shouldn't do and what you should do."

"So what happened?" he asked. "The attention of the American mind went to something else—pollution, the war. So, we dropped the ball, which is about the time that the Russians picked up the ball."

He said the United States spent hundreds of millions of dollars investigating a dozen methods to find out which one works, and once that was determined all the Soviets had to do was concentrate on that one which they knew was good because of U.S. efforts.

"The assinine thing," he said, "is that we dropped the ball after all that investment."

EAGLES INK QB BARTON PHILADELPHIA (UPI)—Quarterback Greg Barton has agreed to terms of a three-year contract, the Philadelphia Eagles of the National Football League announced Wednesday. Barton, 24, was traded by the Detroit Lions to the Eagles in January.

Wall Street Chatter

NEW YORK (UPI)—The Dow Jones industrial average may well turn reactionary for a while, possibly in response to the forthcoming government bond offer, Hoppin, Watson & Co. says. Whether speculative issues would also weaken in such a situation or whether they would resume the strong uptrends they were enjoying prior to the Dow's recent strength is hard to determine, but the firm thinks the latter more likely.

Look for a temporary market setback in May and June, since "April's stock market sunshine often brings May showers of selling," Indicator Digest says. Ever since the great bull market of 1962, the May-June period has been a time of correction in every bull year and it could prove to be a time of temporary weakness this year, the investment advisor notes.

The market's recent weakness surprised virtually no one, being overdue on a timing basis and presaged by a gradual weakening in the market's technical structure. E. F. Hutton & Co. says. Even though glamor issues acted poorly during the recent market advance, they probably will "provide the first clue" to an upturn, it adds.

The market is discounting the future and "telling us that improvement is coming right around the corner," according to Fraser's Contrary Investor. The "name of the game" is earnings, with the rewards going to those who "dig deep and work out currently unrecognized factors that are likely to help future earnings," it adds.

Growing American Contacts With Peking Upset Moscow

SOPIA (UPI)—The Kremlin is so upset by growing U.S. contacts with China that it may harden its diplomatic line toward the United States, Communist sources said Thursday.

Glimmers of that hardened line have emerged at the Bulgarian Communist Party Congress, where the Russians and their Bulgarian spokesmen have suddenly dropped all references to possibilities of Soviet-American progress.

Barely three weeks ago, Soviet Party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev proposed a series of multilateral and world conferences on disarmament, nonaggression treaties and other international measures. That was before the U.S. table tennis team went to Peking.

In speeches here, however, the talk has been only about better relations between East and West Europe. The United States has been condemned—mildly—for its policy in Indochina and the Mideast and has been otherwise ignored.

There has been no public mention of the Sino-American

"ping-pong diplomacy." But the sources said it has been a prime topic of private conversation between Brezhnev and other Communist leaders gathered here for the Bulgarian Congress—the first big Communist-meeting since the Sino-American rapprochement began.

The sources explained that the Soviet Union has a great fear of a strong and militant China and has worried for years over any Sino-American alliance aimed at Russia.

Against this emotional background, they said, the new ties between Washington and Peking loom as confirmation of the Soviets' worst fears.

Pampa Loses A Civic Leader

Pampa will feel the loss of Mr. A.A. Schuneman, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of the First National Bank, who died Wednesday night.

Mr. Schuneman, a community leader who was interested in Pampa's growth during his residence here for more than a quarter century, contributed much to the city's civic progress.

No task was too difficult for him to tackle, once he was convinced it would make

Pampa a better place in which to live.

His work with Pampa's United Fund, Salvation Army; Chamber of Commerce and his service with many other organizations in various capacities will long be remembered.

He was an ardent Pampa booster in every sense of the word. He loved his community and the people of his community loved him and will miss him.

Sewage Plant To Blame?

Many a housewife who used to feel guilty if she didn't have a whiter-than-white wash now feels guilty if she does.

The phosphates in her laundry detergent are helping to pollute the nation's lakes and streams, she's told. Being a good citizen, she joins the rising clamor against phosphates, and if she's really a good citizen, joins a group seeking to have detergents with phosphates banned in her community.

All she really knows is that phosphates are bad for the environment. They cause something called "eutrophication," and that's bad. And, as far as some environmental crusaders are concerned, that's all she needs to know.

But both eutrophication and phosphates are bad only in that in some parts of the country they have become too much of a good thing.

Eutrophication simply means fertilization and is a natural process that takes place in all bodies of water as they accumulate nutrients carried by the water that runs into them. It becomes bad when, thanks to man's contributions, over-fertilization occurs. Algae and other plant life proliferate; they decay and become both aesthetically offensive and fatal to fish by robbing the water of dissolved oxygen.

Eutrophication is not pollution. Pollution is a problem almost everywhere in the United States; eutrophication is a serious problem in perhaps 10 or 12 per cent of our natural waters.

Phosphorus is a natural element, essential to all forms of plant and animal life and is only one of the factors involved in eutrophication. Scientists are not agreed as to whether it is the most important factor. In some cases it may be carbon, or other nitrogen. Total production of the compounds called phosphates for industrial and agricultural use is more than 21 billion pounds a year. Of this, over two billion pounds, or about a tenth, are used by the detergent industry.

This figure reflects a reduction of 100 million pounds by the industry in response to pressure and pending the success of its search for a substitute for phosphates.

But even if a replacement chemical could be found that would be as safe and as effective in detergents as phosphates (none is in sight), the problem would still remain, for more than 50 per cent of phosphates entering our waters comes from urban sewage plants and agricultural run-off.

Almost overlooked in the controversy is the fact that low-cost chemical treatment processes now exist that could remove over 90 per cent of all phosphates, including that from detergents, from waste water.

The cost estimated at about $2 per person per year. So where does all this leave good-citizen housewife? She may, if she lives in an area of naturally soft water or has a water softener, switch to soap. She can try some of the new no-or low-phosphate detergents coming on the market.

She might also ask her community officials if it's really true that most of the phosphate-eutrophication problem could be solved right away by making a few modest improvements at the local sewage plant, and if true, why they aren't doing something about it.

Locally, City Manager Mack Wofford says he is checking into the matter to see what, if anything, needs to be done at Pampa's sewage plant.

Free The Teenager

We are pleased always to read about the positive achievements of Orange County's young people. Many of our readers complain that we do not print enough stories about the good things teenagers do.

Our statistics prove otherwise, but folks have a way of remembering the good things about their own past and the bad things about others.

Shakespeare said it a long time ago: "The evil that men do lives after them, the good if oft interred with their bones." So we are happy to read about their accomplishments, because it means to us they have overcome tremendous obstacles to achieve something on their own.

The teenage American is in a most unfortunate state of servitude these days. Never before has any group had so much done for it. It has been "done for" to death.

Even when a teenager gets into serious trouble with crime or narcotics, his adult champions come rushing at him from all sides, ready to "do" for him once again.

There used to be a plea in a TV commercial that might well be the universal cry of the teenager: "Please, mother, I'd rather do it myself."

Doing for oneself is the mark of manhood, and every boy races toward that magic time when he can become a man.

It has been true since primitive societies and it is true today. In primitive societies, the only thing that kept a boy from becoming a man was his own inability. As soon as he proved himself a hunter, he was a brave or a warrior or whatever.

But today he is protected to death, never mind that he may be a most accomplished auto mechanic at 14, he is protected by law from the privilege of working around moving machinery until that magic age of 18.

Our brilliant politicians are now decreeing that young people are wise and knowledgeable enough to vote at 18, but that's about as much freedom as they are willing to allow.

Perhaps the politicians are right about voting — maybe it doesn't take much experience to pick politicians, and if it takes any intelligence, its use isn't reflected in the choices that have been made.

The only real value in granting the 18-year-old the privilege of voting is that maybe the young people will begin demanding further emancipation... the right to work when and where and at what task an employer is willing to hire them.

We suggest that granting reasonable freedom to our offspring is the best way to eliminate the unhappiness that burdens a great many of them.

H. L. Hunt Writes

WHAT KIND OF REVOLUTION?

In his State of the Union message President Nixon called for a "new American Revolution." It appears that the State Department's Foreign Service Institute may be taking the word "revolution" literally.

The Institute has asked the farleft Institute of Policy Studies (IPS) to conduct seminars for State Department personnel. The first seminar featured militantly anti-war speakers and others from radical groups. One of the speakers schedule for the future traveled to Hanoi in 1969 to coordinate plans for anti-war actions in the United States.

The farleft record of the IPS is well-known. Its directors have urged UN membership for East Germany, Red China, North Korea and North Vietnam; unilateral abandonment of all nuclear tests; the break-up of NATO; and the "neutralization" of central Europe under terms set forth by communist Poland. Its leaders have been in the forefront of militant demonstrations against the war and against the government. Yet this organization is being given tax money to transmit its views to government officials.

A far more constructive program would bring experts on anti-communism to speak to State Department personnel, especially since many of the policies which come from that department seem obvious to the communist threat. At the very least, some balance could be maintained in the seminars by inviting speakers who have actually experienced communist terror, especially in Vietnam, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Cuba.

We do need a revolution in this country, but a moral and spiritual revolution, not a political one. No good purpose can be served by subsidizing and giving a platform to those whose avowed aim is to destroy order and freedom in the United States.

It was therefore no surprise that Gus Hall, a spokesman for the U.S. Reds, was given an opportunity to make a long oration at the Moscow congress of the Russian Communist party.

As was to be expected, Hall rose to the occasion like Professor Pavlov's conditioned dog reacted to the ringing of a bell.

According to the Communist press, he "stirred" the delegates as he contrasted Russia's "exciting steps on the path to human progress" and the "decay and degeneration" in the United States.

This was what the Russians and their foreign guests (the Red Chinese and Albanians refused to attend the congress) wanted to hear. They cheered. And yet, even as Hall spoke, the secret police (KGB) was hounding Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn, Russia's greatest living novelist who recently received the Nobel Prize for literature.

Thousands of writers, scientists, students and young workers were languishing in jails and insane asylums as "enemies of the Communist state." They were punished because they had the courage to advocate civil rights and more freedom for Russians.

Soviet sociologists were discussing in the press and scientific journals the problem of juvenile delinquency little different in kind and possibly even greater than those typical of the United States.

The persistent and alarming growth of crime mocked their claim to have constructed a Communist society in which criminal behavior is progressively eradicated.

Even Leonid Brezhnev, who held onto his job as the Kremlin's top man, conceded publicly at the Moscow congress that the question of nationalism continues to simmer beneath the surface of Soviet political life.

To be sure, he was conspicuously silent on such acute issues as the agitation of Soviet Jews to emigrate or the efforts of the Crimean Tartars to be allowed to return to their homeland from which they had been expelled by Stalin.

But Brezhnev, in his keynote address, could no longer ignore the struggle of the Ukrainians, Balts and other nationalities for cultural and religious freedom.

Nor could he ignore the deteriorating economic situation. Once again he promised the Russian people

THE GLOBAL VIEW

U.S. Commies Not Telling Story Like It Really Is

By LEON DENNEN
NEW YORK (NEA)—The American Communist party, after five decades, remains an insignificant group of Russia-firsters with no roots in the political and social life of the United States.

Even the latest breed of New Left revolutionists regard it with contempt as a purely "Muscovite party."

Nevertheless the Kremlin's rulers frequently parade their American supporters as heralds of the "rising tide of revolution" in the United States.

It was therefore no surprise that Gus Hall, a spokesman for the U.S. Reds, was given an opportunity to make a long oration at the Moscow congress of the Russian Communist party.

As was to be expected, Hall rose to the occasion like Professor Pavlov's conditioned dog reacted to the ringing of a bell.

better economic conditions — "a better life" — as Lenin promised them more than 50 years ago and Nikita Khrushchev a decade ago.

The fact is that even if the Kremlin's "new economic goals" are met in the next five years, the Russians' standard of living will remain well below that of Western countries.

The Kremlin rulers themselves, despite their optimistic rhetoric, are increasingly aware of the economic and social difficulties they face.

But not Gus Hall, Moscow's apologist in the United States. For him life in totalitarian Russia continues to "blossom into full bloom." The tragedy is that many Russians who have to rely on their regimented press for information might take seriously Hall's claim that he speaks in the name of "progressive" Americans.

Let's hear what the scientists say who did the actual study: "It does not mean that the difference between Framingham and some other population (say the people of Japan) in serum cholesterol is unrelated to differences between these populations in diet. Still less does it mean that serum cholesterol levels cannot be changed by changes in dietary intake."

Worldwide studies have been conducted on different populations in Africa, Asia, Europe and the United States. Different forms of living habits have been studied and even the effects of imprisonment and occupation during war.

The huge mass of data accumulated through history and on a worldwide basis clearly indicates the role of too much fat of any kind in the diet and particularly saturated fats found in dairy products and animal fats. This is not my personal opinion; it is the official opinion of the Inter Society Commission on Heart Disease funded by the federal government and reported Dec. 14, 1970. The Commission recommended that less than 35 per cent of all the calories in the diet should be fat and less than 10 per cent of the calories should be of the saturated fat variety.

The dairy industry could do a lot for health by developing a positive attitude. This means using cattle that produce milk relatively low in fat (like Holstein cattle versus Jersey cattle). And, of course, people can use the low-fat milk products and the nonfat milk powders and uncreamed cottage cheese — all are good for the health.

So Short now vows to take his baseball players someplace else. Maybe he has hopes of getting some city to let him play in a tax-supported stadium — and maybe he will.

We can only hope that it won't be our city.

They already play their games in the taxpayer-owned Robert F. Kennedy stadium. But, in resting before a subcommittee of the House Dies, baseball's Gall of Fame Bob Short, said:

"There's no way I can get through July 4 without the banks moving in."

He then backed a proposal which would transfer control of the ball park from the D.C. Army Board to the Interior Dept. so that he could negotiate a favorable lease agreement — like for Free.

An official of the Interior department, however, muddled up his home-plate by arguing that the national interest in the stadium is not sufficient to justify a national assumption of management.

So Short now vows to take his baseball players someplace else. Maybe he has hopes of getting some city to let him play in a tax-supported stadium — and maybe he will.

We can only hope that it won't be our city.

Where did they get rid of stale peanuts before ball game crowds were invested?

Low-Fat Milk Products Are Best For Cholesterol Levels

By Dr. Lawrence Lamb
Dear Dr. Lamb—We read your article and felt moved to write you on your article and notion about animal fat being the cause of cholesterol levels in heart and vascular disease. Dairying is our business. While waiting in a doctor's office, I read an article in a health journal that said they realized cholesterol levels are not changed by animal fats but more likely by genetics. Haven't you heard about this yet?

Dear Reader—Thank you for your letter and also the enclosures of a dairy association. Of course I have heard of the influence of genetics on cholesterol levels and so have most authorities working on this problem. It is one of several factors. I understand your concern since you are in the dairy business.

Now let's clarify a few points. The enclosure you sent refers to the Framingham Diet Study and states that fats are unrelated to cholesterol. A number of groups in the food industry, including both meat and dairy groups, have made this statement out of context trying to vindicate their position.

Let's hear what the scientists say who did the actual study: "It does not mean that the difference between Framingham and some other population (say the people of Japan) in serum cholesterol is unrelated to differences between these populations in diet. Still less does it mean that serum cholesterol levels cannot be changed by changes in dietary intake."

And, of course, people can use the low-fat milk products and the nonfat milk powders and uncreamed cottage cheese — all are good for the health.

So Short now vows to take his baseball players someplace else. Maybe he has hopes of getting some city to let him play in a tax-supported stadium — and maybe he will.

We can only hope that it won't be our city.

They already play their games in the taxpayer-owned Robert F. Kennedy stadium. But, in resting before a subcommittee of the House Dies, baseball's Gall of Fame Bob Short, said:

"There's no way I can get through July 4 without the banks moving in."

He then backed a proposal which would transfer control of the ball park from the D.C. Army Board to the Interior Dept. so that he could negotiate a favorable lease agreement — like for Free.

An official of the Interior department, however, muddled up his home-plate by arguing that the national interest in the stadium is not sufficient to justify a national assumption of management.

We can only hope that it won't be our city.

Where did they get rid of stale peanuts before ball game crowds were invested?

Not Consumer Goods But Politics at Red Congress

John Goldsmith

WASHINGTON—Much of the talk about consumer goods at the recent Soviet Union Party Congress in Moscow appears to have been window dressing. That is the preliminary judgment of Kremlinologists here who are beginning an intensive analysis of the proceedings of the party congress. One of the experts tells us that the consumer talk appears to have been "mostly cosmetic."

Party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev sounded the consumer theme in his six-hour opening speech to the 5,000 congress delegates, Premier Alexei N. Kosygin elaborated on the theme in his subsequent report on economic policy.

Kosygin said, for example, that one Russian family in three now has a refrigerator and one of two has a television or a washing machine. By 1975, said Kosygin, the Kremlin wants two of three families to have a refrigerator and nearly three of four homes to have a washer or a TV set.

To do that sort of thing, the premier said, about 30 per cent of the government outlay for the economy will be earmarked for consumer goods and agriculture rather than about 24 per cent under present economic planning.

Preliminary analysis here suggests, however, that Soviet investment in defense will continue at about the present levels. In addition, significant resources will still be funneled into defense-oriented industry — machinery, chemicals, electric power and the like.

BREZHNEV BOOSTED—Analysts here agree that the status of Brezhnev was greatly enhanced as a result of the carefully orchestrated events during the party congress. That was the judgment of U.S. newsmen who reported on the congress from Moscow.

Brezhnev's speech was extravagantly applauded by the delegates and it was carried "live" on Moscow television. In contrast, a summary of Kosygin's speech was made public by Tass, the Russian news agency, and videotaped excerpts were later televised.

More important, in the eyes of the experts here, were the changes announced in the powerful politburo. The politburo membership was increased from 11 to 15 — a move which tended to dilute the influence of the old politburo members. In addition, reports here are that the new members are regarded generally as associates of Brezhnev's.

Various theories have been advanced for the reappearance of Hsieh in a role which, if not quite as prestigious as his old one, is still important in the mainland China hierarchy. The reestablishment of local and municipal party organizations has been a major goal in Red China, in the wake of Mao's disruptive cultural revolution.

The best guess here is that Hsieh has been "rehabilitated" — that is, that he was sent away for a while to bring his thoughts into conformity with the present party line — and that he has now been returned to duty, chastened and reformed.

All in all, Brezhnev appears to have moved into a central position of leadership and out of the so called "collective" which displaced Nikita S. Khrushchev. Indications are that Brezhnev was the big winner from the 24th Congress. The big loser may have been Alexander Sholepin, former head of the KGB, whose power had occasionally been reported on the rise in recent years. Sholepin was dropped towards the bottom of the politburo hierarchy.

Kosygin is also rated something of a loser since Nikolai Podgorny, formerly the number three man in the Kremlin hierarchy, was advanced to number two in some of the pecking order listings.

NOT ALL PING PONG — While the Kremlinologists were eyeing the Moscow party congress, China watchers had more than the U.S. table tennis team to occupy them. Power shifts continue in Peking.

Early this year we reported that two top officials in Mao Tse-tung's government had come up missing and were presumed purged in the wake of Mao's cultural revolution. Last month we reported that a third member of the Peking politburo had apparently dropped from public view.

That, of course, is the signal of administrative convulsion in a closed-society — when a powerful official is not seen on ceremonial occasions and is not longer mentioned in accounts by the official news agency.

Now one of the original duo, Hsieh Fu-chih, who was minister of public security until he was dropped from sight a little more than a year ago, has reappeared but in a new job. The former secret police official was recently listed as the new head of Peking's municipal communist party committee.

Various theories have been advanced for the reappearance of Hsieh in a role which, if not quite as prestigious as his old one, is still important in the mainland China hierarchy. The reestablishment of local and municipal party organizations has been a major goal in Red China, in the wake of Mao's disruptive cultural revolution.

Senate May Refuse To Confirm Baum's Appointment To Board

AUSTIN (UPI) — An all-out drive is underway to pressure members of the state Senate to confirm the controversial appointment of Austin osteopath Dr. Elmer C. Baum to the State Banking Board.

Baum, who also is Gov. Preston Smith's chairman of the state Democratic party, and the governor admitted earlier this year they made big, quick profits by borrowing money from a bank under Baum's jurisdiction and buying stock in National Bankers Life Insurance Co.

The Senate Nominations Committee is scheduled to consider Baum's appointment to the Banking Board May 6. Most observers feel the Senate will refuse to confirm the appointment.

Baum was named to the Banking Board by Smith shortly after the end of the September, 1969, special legislative session. He immediately took his oath of office and has been serving on the state bank regulatory agency since.

Possible Open Debate

One report this week indicated that a move may be made by some senators to have the Baum confirmation debate open to the public. The Senate considers virtually all appointments by the governor in closed sessions. A new rule this year, however, would permit the Senate by a simple majority to vote to open up confirmation sessions.

Although several senators privately have admitted pressure is being applied, a spokesman for Smith denied that the governor had made any threats to veto legislation or offered appointments in exchange for favorable votes for Baum.

"He just doesn't work that way," a Smith aide said, although he admitted the governor "is very interested in trying to get Dr. Baum confirmed."

Some Rumors

One senator reportedly was told that a major piece of legislation he is sponsoring will be vetoed unless he supports Baum. Another reportedly was told that one of his close friends would get a high appointive post if he votes for confirmation.

However, the Smith aide said if such offers or threats were made, "they sure didn't come from the governor." He admitted it was possible some "over-enthusiastic supporters" of the governor may have dropped such hints to senators without the governor's knowledge.

Smith repeatedly has stated that neither he nor Baum did anything wrong by buying the speculative stock and making $125,000 profit on it in three months time.

Jaycees will see a demonstration of a laser and will experiment with "exotic" future telephone services when Southwestern Bell Science Demonstrator Roy Wickerham addresses their meeting Tuesday evening.

Wickerham's program, entitled "Innovation in Three Acts," includes a number of innovations developed by the Bell System," said George Newberry, Southwestern Bell manager for Pampa.

Wickerham will show the laser's potential for telecommunications use. And his model telephone system will give the audience a chance to try out some of the exotic telephone services to be available in the future.

Newberry said the program also includes a lens made of Las and a model television system that projects the audience's image on a television screen.

He said Wickerham travels the western half of Texas demonstrating Bell System innovations. Wickerham has 14

Tyrannical Ruler Of Haiti Dies And Succeeded By Son

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (UPI)—Francois 'Papa Doc' Duvalier, Haiti's president for life and tyrannical ruler for the past 14 years, died Wednesday night at the age of 64 and was succeeded Thursday by his son, Jean-Claude, 20.

The announcement of Papa Doc's death, seven days after his 64th birthday, was accompanied by a government proclamation of 30 days of national mourning and, despite the apparently orderly succession, raised speculation about a struggle for power even within his own family.

Jean-Claude, a pudgy playboy with a penchant for fast cars, motorcycles and women, is the youngest of Duvalier's four children and the only son. His oldest sister, Marie Denise, is married to army Col. Max Dominique and has been influential in palace affairs since Papa Doc pardoned her husband from involvement in a palace plot and allowed them to return from exile.

The announcement of Papa Doc's death gave no cause but said he had been ill for three months.

JEANE DIXON Your Horoscope

SATURDAY, APRIL 24

YOUR BIRTHDAY SATURDAY: Most of the upcoming year is spent seeking fresh starting points, getting ventures under way in directions you have not explored before. Tentative methods, deferred rewards are to be expected. Saturday's natives usually are extremely good at arranging complicated schemes and schedules.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): — Close out your work week as best you can without extending tasks beyond their usual hours.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): — Home, family and friends claim more attention or upset earlier plans. Placidly straighten matters out.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): — The nearer you operate Saturday, the better you and your own set of people thrive.

CANCER (June 21-July 21): — Keep your patience while things resist being settled. Look at it as though reality is having a tantrum and, therefore, you are not at fault.

LEO (July 22-Aug. 22): — Long projects draw to stopping points. See that your eagerness to get done doesn't lead you into poorly planned, last minute purchases.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): — Doing for others at the moment promises to serve your own goals and welfare better later on.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): — You do some trivial thing by surprise, without intending it, and trigger strong reactions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): — Business must be tended diligently throughout. Let tempting new projects wait for another review and more planning.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): — This promises to be a day of stirring action which goes in circles and achieves little until later hours.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): — Unfinished business should get first priority. Better results are promised if you can avoid adding new complications.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): — Take the day off from your normal tasks and chores. The details you try to fill in now are not in harmony with your long-range goals.

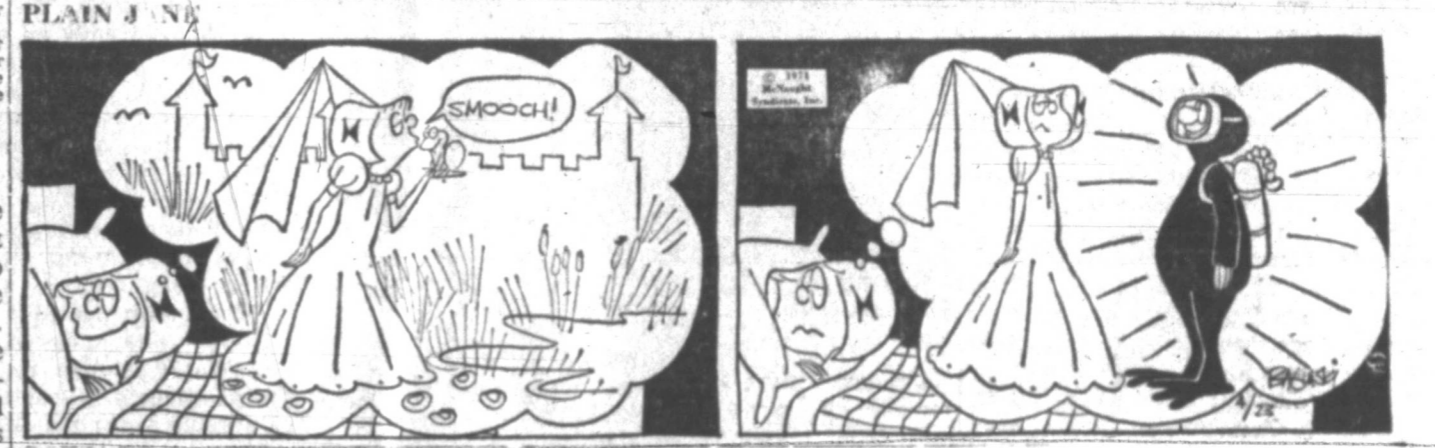

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): — Your relations with children and younger people are almost certain to improve later in the day after quite a range of discussion.

NEW YORK (UPI)—The average stock price level at this time is too far advanced to justify unreservedly aggressive investing, Abraham & Co. notes. Not only does the economy's recovery cycle appear to be lagging behind expectations, but it probably is not safe to assume that prospective 1971-72 earnings gains could support much more than a 10 per cent advance in the Dow Jones industrial average during the next twelve months, the firm says.

Marked strength in the blue chip segment of the market in recent sessions masked weakness in a growing number of issues, E. F. Hutton & Co. believes. Even while the blue-chip index rose above "a channel in which it has been confined all year," the transportation index was languishing and the market's overall gain narrowing, the firm observes.

Although it can be argued that the reason for the market's strong advance since November is that influential money-managers have extended their sights into 1972, Harris Upham & Co. believes a better reason for the market's buoyancy has been the funneling of excess cash into equity investments. There is a good possibility that the market could repeat its performance of 1968, when it "zoomed" through previous resistance points without a substantial correction in a sharp upward trend, the firm adds.

Alcindor Thought Wilt Made The Right Decision

By MILTON RUCHMAN
UPI Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UPI)—Lew Alcindor thinks Wilt Chamberlain made the right move.

"He's lucky he didn't fight All," Alcindor says. "Wilt would've taken a licking."

Ed Carmel says the 7-foot-2 Alcindor is wrong, dead wrong.

This time I've got to go with Ed Carmel. His height has a little to do with it.

Ed Carmel is 9 feet and 5/8ths of an inch tall. He's the tallest guy I could find around in the immediate vicinity and he told me not to bother looking anymore because he's the tallest guy who ever lived.

Naturally, at that height he had more than a speck of interest in all the excitement over that proposed fight that never came off, the one that fell through in Houston between 6-foot-2 Muhammad Ali, or Cassius Clay as some people still call him, and 7-foot-2 Wilt Chamberlain.

"Next to me Chamberlain is a dwarf," says Ed Carmel. "I'm nearly two feet taller than he is but I think he would've beaten Clay if he had used his height advantage. Chamberlain not only is very big, he also has tremendous coordination. That's very important, too."

Carmel is 30—"a little older than Clay and a little younger than Chamberlain"—and for eight years he worked as the circus giant for Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey. He has seen Clay and Chamberlain do their individual things and has a mutual respect for both.

"Clay is mostly a lotta mouth and Chamberlain, if he ever learned how to take a foul shot he might be good," Carmel puts both away.

Nonetheless he's positive the fight would've drawn "an awful lot of people."

"Why? Because the thing would've been a phenomenon of sports...I make appearances in night clubs and supermarkets, and why do so many people come to see me? They wanna see something they've never seen before. Anyway, I'd be glad to fight either one of them for a million dollars."

That fight doesn't figure ever to take place either.

Ed Carmel isn't as fast as Ali or Chamberlain although he has been watching himself lately.

"I'm on a 25,000 calorie-a-day diet," he says. "I've slimmed down to 460 pounds."

While he was talking with me Carmel was taking apart what seemed to be a 10-pound T-bone steak and when I asked him what he was eating, he took a big swallow and said:

"My heart out. I wish Clay would've agreed to fight me instead of Chamberlain. I wouldn't have backed out. Look at all the money we would've made."

But that's the way the ball bounces.

Apart from all other considerations, it may be a source of satisfaction to Chamberlain to know that Carmel would've been rooting for him had he gone through with that bout with Clay. Chamberlain once was quoted as saying "nobody loves Goliath" but if he said that he never reckoned with Ed Carmel.

"Anytime David goes up against Goliath I root for Goliath," says the out-sized New Yorker. "We traced our family tree back once and discovered that I'm a descendant of his. Goliath was a Philistine but he was a good family man, a kind man who always gave charity to others. I would've rooted for Chamberlain had he fought Clay because he's the taller of the two and I'm for tall people. What's-a-matter, aren't we human beings, too? Anytime one of us gets hurt we feel it. Do you think we're impervious to pain? We're not. You hit us, we hurt. The same as you or anyone else."

I'm sure that's true, and as for that fight which never came off, Wilt Chamberlain and Muhammad Ali both struck me as if they had nothing better to do and as long as that was the case, why not go up against

Steve Carlton Decides Slider Is His Downfall

By FRED McMANE
UPI Sports Writer

Steve Carlton has figured out his pitching problem. It was simply a case of too many pitches in his repertoire.

The 26-year-old lefthander of the St. Louis Cardinals, who lost 19 games last season after winning 17 the year before, gave up six hits Thursday night for his fourth consecutive victory as he pitched the Cardinals to a 5-2 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

It was Carlton's third complete game performance, and he claims the reason for his good start is that he's stopped using the slider entirely and is throwing mostly fastballs.

"I'm throwing a lot more fastballs this year. Last year I'd hang a curve or a slider and one inning would beat me. I threw too many breaking balls. When you keep losing, you lose confidence. I've discarded the slider. It's a different year. I forgot about last year."

In the only other National League games Thursday, Pittsburgh beat Atlanta, 7-4, and Houston defeated Chicago, 6-1. The White Sox topped Milwaukee, 4-2, and Oakland whipped California, 7-3, in American League games.

Carlton, who did not win his fourth game until June 21 last year, walked two and struck out five in besting Jim Bunning, Baltimore's Frank Robinson for most home runs during the month of April. Earl Williams hit his fourth homer for the Phillies' hits were singles and three of those came in the ninth inning. Joe Torre singled home what proved to be the winning run for St. Louis in the fifth.

Willie Stargell continued his assault on Atlanta pitching by cracking his 10th homer as the Pirates defeated the Braves. Stargell's homer was his eighth in six games against the Braves, and it tied him with Cincinnati's Tony Perez and Baltimore's Frank Robinson for most home runs during the month of April. Earl Williams hit his fourth homer for the

Throwing Things Into Stands Becoming Habit For Hadfield

NEW YORK (UPI)—Throwing things into the stands is becoming quite a custom for Vic Hadfield, a habit he can afford thanks to his added ability of being able to fire a hockey puck into the nets.

In the second game of the Stanley Cup quarter-finals against Toronto, the veteran Ranger left wing threw leaf goalie Bernie Parent's face mask into the seats during a wild free-for-all. On Thursday night to celebrate a far happier occasion Hadfield tossed a hat to the fans in Madison Square Garden.

The occasion was Hadfield's first three-goal hat trick in Stanley Cup competition that carried New York to a 4-1 victory over the Chicago Black Hawks. The Rangers now lead in the best-of-seven semi-final series, two games to one, with the fourth game to be played here Sunday afternoon before a national television audience.

"I've been wanting to do that a long time," the grinning Hadfield said of his hat-throwing episode. "I felt so good about scoring all those goals I wanted to show my emotion. It was a tremendous feeling, one of the highlights of my career."

What Hadfield did was to pick up one of the score of hats thrown onto the ice after he notched his third goal with only 3:51 left to play, place it on his head while he skated to the stands and then toss it into the seats.

Hadfield, the oldest Ranger in point of service, having joined the club in 1961, now has seven goals for this year's playoffs, three more than his entire total for four previous Cup series. He is only one goal shy of equalling the all-time team record for goals in a playoff year set by Cecil Dillon in 1933.

"I'd like to break that one in the next game," Hadfield said.

One other Ranger playoff record was broken and another tied during Thursday night's victory. Jean Ratelle drew assists on all four New York goals, surpassing the team record previously shared by Phil Watson in 1940 and Don Raleigh in 1950, and Rod Gilbert got his 16th goal in Stanley Cup competition, tying him with Hall of Famer Frank Boucher for top Ranger honors.

Hadfield's hat trick was only the fourth ever registered by a Ranger in Stanley Cup play. The others were turned in by Boucher, Bryan Hextall and Pentti Lund.

The Ratelle-Hadfield-Gilbert line now has accounted for five of the six Ranger goals in the series against Chicago and all three of the members credited their success to the six years they have skated as a unit.

"We've been working together for a long, long time and we work well together," said Gilbert. "Jean is skating like I've never seen him skate all year and Vic has been just tremendous."

"The three of us are skating well and we were all sharp tonight," Ratelle said. "I know instinctively where Rod and Vic are, and it's just a matter of getting the puck to them. We are not selfish players and I am just as happy to get the assist as a goal. Anytime Rod or Vic or one of our defensemen score, I feel that I am part of the goal."

Challenger Ray Anderson Has New Mystery Punch For Champ Foster

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI)—Challenger Ray Anderson says he has developed a new punch to use tonight on light heavyweight champion Bob Foster but Foster said he had better have a bicycle instead if he intends to be around at the end of the scheduled 15-round title fight.

The 9:30 p.m. (EST) fight will be seen on national television, with the Tampa area blacked out.

Foster was expected to weigh-in at the limit of 175 pounds, while Anderson was expected to scale 173.

Foster will be making his sixth defense of the title he won in May, 1968, when he knocked out Dick Tiger in four rounds, and is favored to put Anderson away for the count.

"You know no light-heavy is going to stay with me long unless he gets on a bicycle,"

Foster said.

Foster's record appears to bear him out. His longest fight in a career dating back to 1961 went 12 rounds in 1965 and he has gone 10 rounds only five times while running up a record of 42 wins and only five losses. And 36 of the wins were by knockout. He has lost five and has had one draw.

The last fighter either man faced was Hal Carroll, Anderson scored a 10-round decision Nov. 18 while Foster knocked Carroll out in the second round March 2.

Television In Review

By RICK DU BROW
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The season's best television drama, "Poet Game," recently shown on the non-commercial network, was written by Anthony Terpil, a former Hollywood writer now living in Wales. The play concerned a hard-drinking, mid-aged Irish poet trying to lighten out his personal life while on an American lecture tour.

Through the "Hollywood Television Theatre," which produced his play, I asked Terpil if he would care to go along some recollections of his time in Hollywood. Following is part of the reply he cabled:

"I was old enough to know what I was doing when I came to Hollywood. I had command of the cliché about disillusionment and cynicism. My idea was to make the most of it and be only as cynical and disillusioned as I had to be. Like a soldier going into battle convinced that everyone else can be killed but himself, writers go to Hollywood saying 'I'll take the money and run—God is on my side and also my talent.'

"I went because I was sent for, paid for and loved every cliché of it. You can't cry rape when you know what's going to happen. My greatest complaint was that it didn't happen often enough. Some good fairy kept me from it, Hollywood's not a harem. Nobody forces you to stay. In fact, it's hard to stay there and make money. A good half of professional writers earn nothing in given years. Another great percentage get by on handouts for story ideas which are given to other writers or abandoned.

"I jumped into Hollywood enthusiastically and got unexpected benefits and unexpected damages: You know, brain, liver, stomach, morale. I found love, if not fame and fortune. I got out, so no complaints. I wanted to be used, I told my agent to find somebody to use me unmercifully. They said, 'you're too good to be used. I tried hard to prove them wrong and failed utterly but, inexplicably, I wrote many American television entertainments and got on producers' short lists and was invited to previews.

"Agents always exhort you to go in with four great stories in the morning. I was given a useful tip by a fellow writer: to tell the story in three words. I learned. And it worked, but the laugh's on me because I was then required to create a story from those three stupid words. Producers were looking at me wondering why they weren't getting pages on time. Is there no thinking allowed? So, you're a part-time fraud for a start, but you get paid for it.

"You're there to sell your services, as it says in the contract. You have to come up with current, acceptable, salable ideas that sound great in story conferences. In my clever later years I brought a tape recorder to conferences that lasted for hours, then got my wife to type a transcript. I couldn't stand to read it so I'd ask: 'Could you boil this down to a paragraph—or, better yet, one sentence, and then would you read it to me?' ...

"In Britain the audience is not deprived. Television companies take a play and, for the most part, produce it as written. Lewis Freedman (producer of the 'Hollywood Television Theatre') ... is a creative producer who takes the script, enhances it, refines it but doesn't change its intent. He trusts writers, a unique experience in Hollywood.

"Seven years ago I was asked to come to Hollywood. Last June I was asked to leave but not ridden out on the rail, a ticket to London by Freedman, I had the good sense to stay where I began my commercial career 10 years earlier. Hollywood is no trap. Somehow I knew when I could

PIGSTY SOLITUDE
SHAKER HEIGHTS, Ohio (UPI)—Robert L. Vitek Jr., 19, sat out his three-hour pigsty sentence in privacy Wednesday at an undisclosed location.

Judge Manuel Rocker handed the youth the unusual sentence for calling a policeman a pig. Vitek also was fined $100.

The judge became secretive, however, after police and newsmen asked permission to accompany Vitek to the designated pigpen and to photograph him.

"I don't want this to become a Roman circus," said the judge.

AIRPORT FUND-RAISING
BOSTON (UPI)—St. Peter's School didn't just want to wash cars to raise money for its recreation fund. Students washed a 707 jetliner instead.

"They did a fine job," said EOAC Chief Engineer Remmold Riff after the 80 seventh- and eighth-graders swarmed over the plane with detergent, mops, and other cleaning equipment supplied by the airline, which paid them $150 Wednesday.

The students scrubbed and polished all but a small part of the tail section which rises 40 feet into the air. BOAC's insurance company banned them from climbing up there.

The shiny jetliner, which arrived at Logan International Airport from Detroit earlier in the day, then took off for London.

Cates Discusses Trend Of Youth At Medical Assn.

Rep. Phil Cates of Lefors addressed the Texas Medical Association in Perryton recently concerning American principles and foundations, the rights and worth of the individual and the future of Texas and nation.

Cates discussed the historical foundations of the United States and related these foundations to current thoughts and trends of today's youth.

Following Cates' remarks on American history, he referred to the United States' present and future and contributed its greatness to the importance which is placed on the individual.

"There exists no other country which can compare with ours," says Cates. "Our greatness can be attributed to the high value and worth we place on the individual."

Many of the representative's comments centered on youth and the important role they are playing in an ever-changing society.

"The youth of our nation realize that changes must be made to keep up with progress and economy," said Cates, "but they must also realize that history reveals a nation of gradual change . . . change sought in an orderly and lawful manner."

Cates said he sees the future of the United States as being a successful one due to the unique element of hope which is found in our democracy.

Congressman Reaffirms Demand That Director Of FBI Be Fired

WASHINGTON (UPI)—House Democratic Leader Hale Boggs said Thursday his home phone had been tapped. He blamed the FBI and reaffirmed his demand that J. Edgar Hoover be fired.

The Louisiana Democrat made the charge in a speech prepared for delivery late today to the House. Sources close to Boggs said he would also say there was other evidence the FBI had exercised improper surveillance over members of Congress.

Boggs prepared the speech in support of his assertion on April 5 that the 76-year-old Hoover had adopted the tactics of Hitler's Gestapo in spying on members of the House and Senate. His charge stirred a fury of official denials and demands that he retract or back up his accusations.

Sources close to Boggs said the prepared speech included a charge that a telephone company investigator, checking interference last summer on his telephone in Washington, found evidence that the line had been tapped although the tap at that time had been removed.

Boggs was reported to have no direct evidence the alleged tap had been applied in behalf of the FBI. However, he noted that the telephone company officially denied to him there had been any tap, and he said he understood this denial was in line with company policy when taps were applied at FBI request.

Boggs told a reporter he was not backing down from his demand that Hoover be fired. Aides said he did not expect his speech to satisfy FBI defenders, but that he believed it would convince others of the truth of his charges.

CLINGING TO LIFE

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI)—A doctor treating a 6-year-old boy for acute rabies said Wednesday physicians are "keeping our fingers crossed" and waiting for a change in his condition.

The youngster, Honofre Angel, was bitten by a dog while in Mexico with his parents. He has been in a coma since March 28 and is listed in "stable but critical" condition.

One of the doctors keeping the child alive with machines and intravenous feeding, said there is no way to compare his response with that of Matthew Winkler, 6, of Lima, Ohio, the only survivor of acute rabies.

Mexican Officials Destroy Two Tons Of Marijuana

EL PASO, Tex. (UPI)—Mexican officials Thursday piled two tons of marijuana, worth about $2 million on the criminal market in the United States, in the old bed for the Rio Grande, doused with diesel fuel and set it on fire.

The marijuana, acquired in seizures over the past six months, sent clouds of smoke into the air. Southwest winds blew part of the smoke into El Paso.

Mexican Deputy Attorney General David Franco; Norberto Salinas, federal attorney in Juarez, and assistant U. S. Attorney Victor Sizemore of El Paso attended the burning.

The old bed of the Rio Grande is about 50 yards south of the new channel, which was dug at the time of the El Chamizal settlement. The new channel is the border.

The Juarez fire department poured diesel oil on the marijuana and Franco personally applied a match. He promised to continue the fight against marijuana and all drugs in Mexico.

Seizures of the marijuana burned involved 30 defendants, half of whom are Americans.

Park Ranger Of Sanford Back On Duty

SANFORD — Park Ranger Larry J. Waldron is again on duty at Sanford Recreation Area after 14 weeks of police training in Washington, D.C. Superintendent James M. Thomson and staff welcomed Ranger Waldron back just as visitation is increasing at Lake Meredith and his services will be most useful.

Ranger Waldron described his training experience as one of basic law enforcement. The session was designed for the 25 park rangers and 15 Park Police recruits in attendance, he said. The trainees studied accident investigation, riot control, narcotics, firearms, defensive tactics and behavioral sciences at the Consolidated Federal Law Enforcement Training Academy. Instructors for the various subjects included men from the FBI, the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs, the Secret Service, and the editor for the magazine "Criminal Law Reporter."

The trainees also attended two college courses at American University in Washington, D.C. for regular college credit. They studied criminal law and criminal investigation.

Another part of the training involved actual in-service work with the U.S. Park Police in Washington.

The main benefits from the training were learning how to patrol, communication and report methods, investigation, crime prevention, and cooperation with other law enforcement agencies," said Ranger Waldron. "I found the instruction very valuable and shall use it in my work at Lake Meredith."
