World's Largest Oil Companies Likely To Meet Price Demands

TEHRAN (UPI)—The world's 10 biggest oil producing countries called it a surrender. The west's 22 biggest oil companies called it an agreement.

Whatever the word, the two sides met today in what experts described as the decisive session in billion-dollar negotiations which started 25 days ago. Prospects were the Western oil companies would agree to meet price demands set by the 10 members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), a deal which some experts said might cost the oil companies—and even-

Apollo 14's Moon Explorers Return Home For 2 Weeks Of Quarantine

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI)—Apollo 14's exuberant moon pilots returned home to a boisterous welcome from their families and friends today and gave a special thank you to the flight controllers who helped the astronauts overcome a nagging series of problems.

"It's really great to be back home," said Roosa, who was the first astronaut to greet the crowd under a bright pre-dawn moon that hung over the airbase as the plane landed from a 14 hour flight from Pago Pago in the South Pacific.

After the talks were suspended Middle East oil producing states threatened to fix prices unilaterally. It left oil companies with little to do but discuss details of OPEC demands.

Then OPEC also turned the screw by warning that its members would carry out sanctions, including a coordinated boycott, unless the companies bowed to its bargaining demands.

Oil experts said if only one major Middle East country decided to bar exports, Western Europe and Japan almost certainly would have to impose rationing.

Western Europe buys 85 per cent of its oil from OPEC members and Japan buys 91 per cent of its oil from them.

Western Oil sources said it appeared the major companies were resigned to accepting demands they pay another 25 cents per barrel in the "posted" price—the generally set figure on which taxes are based. The posted price of crude oil now stands at about $1.79 a barrel.

Oil companies said nothing for the record, but it generally was agreed OPEC originally wanted 35 cents a barrel while the companies offered about 20 cents.

"It's especially good to be back because there were so many little things that happened during the mission that weren't serious, but they could have been serious," said Alan B. Shepard, veteran commander of America's third successful lunar landing mission.

Shepard, Stuart A. Roosa and Edgar D. Mitchell were sealed in a quarantine van when their big jet transport landed at nearby Ellington Air Force Base at 4:34 a.m. EST, but the glass and aluminum germ barrier didn't dampen the enthusiasm of the welcome.

The astronauts broke into broad grins when their trailer was unloaded from the plane and moved up to a welcoming stand crowded with wives and children.

All three wives said their husbands looked great. "Marvelous, wonderful," said Joan Roosa. "He looks beautiful," said Louise Mitchell. And Louise Shepard said her husband "looks better than when he left" from Cape Kennedy Jan. 31.

The lunar explorers must remain in isolation at the $15 million lunar receiving laboratory here for two more weeks because of the slim chance they might have brought alien organisms back from the moon. They entered the comfortable quarantine quarters at 6:45 a.m.

In another wing of the laboratory, anxious scientists prepared to inspect the first rocks collected from the

20 U.S. Helicopters Shot Down In Laos

SAIGON (UPI) — South Vietnamese troops today were reported outside the Ho Chi Minh Trail supply junction of Seppoe in Laos. U.S. helicopter losses mounted steadily in the American air support of the Laotian drive.

Communiques from Cambodia said ailing Premier Lon Nol has turned over command of the war effort to Gen. Sosowath Sirik Matak.

Military sources said today more than 20 American helicopters and at least one jet fighter-bomber have been shot down in Laos and that the losses were growing. The South Vietnamese also lost helicopters to "murderous" ground fire but the number was not disclosed.

The U.S. command officially announced the loss of nine helicopters and the fighter-bomber to groundfire in Laos and the northern part of South Vietnam where Communist resistance was increasing but it reported only the loss of those totally destroyed.

The official death toll was set at 14 Americans killed in the loss of the nine helicopters and fighter bomber and in the loss of a transport plane in South Vietnam and a 10th helicopter in Cambodia. The South Vietnamese reported the loss of 35 dead and 124 wounded in Laos and said 205 Communists had been killed.

Military sources said columns of South Vietnamese paratroopers, rangers and infantrymen were positioned north and south of Seppoe. The town is 27 miles inside Laos and one of the main objectives of the South Vietnamese drive to wipe out Communist supplies stocks in the Ho Chi Minh complex.

Four Americans were killed and seven wounded in the loss of a UH1 Huey helicopter, and an OH6 Cayuse observation copter, to ground fire inside Laos, UPI correspondent Kenneth Braddock reported from Quang Tri, South Vietnam.

The helicopter losses raised to at least 21 killed and 52 wounded the American casualties in the campaign that began in South Vietnam Jan. 29. About 9,000 GIs are taking part in the drive on the Vietnamese side of the border.

U.S. military spokesmen reported a shelling attack against an American unit northwest of Khe Sanh Thursday night with an undisclosed number of wounded.

In Phnom Penh, an official communique in Lon Nol's name was read over national radio naming Matak, a cousin of deposed Prince Norodom Sihanouk as commander-in-chief. Lon Nol, 58, suffered a stroke of Seppoe. The town is 27 miles ancient hills of the moon. Geologists hope they might be pieces of the moon's primitive crust, some 4.6 billion years old.

"The thing that means the most to me tonight is to be back here with the people who did have to deal along with us with all the little nagging problems that happened during the mission and that worked out so well to make things come out so well in the long run."

Shepard, 47-year-old veteran of America's first manned spaceflight 10 years ago, said the nine-day flight of Apollo 14 was "a good mission" and "We're ready to start the debriefing and talking about it."

Montgomery Ward Issues Reply To Charge By Trade Commission

A statement from Montgomery Ward answering the Federal Trade Commission's accusation that the nationwide retailing firm engaged in deceptive advertising and violated the truth-in-lending law, was released today from its Chicago office.

Jim Stallings, manager of the Pampa Montgomery Ward retail outlet, said the following telegram was received from Ashley D. Deshazor, vice president in charge of credit for Montgomery Ward:

"Montgomery Ward's corporate advertising and credit policies comply fully with the letter and spirit of the law and FTC regulations.

"It is regrettable that the government did not see fit to discuss and verify our policies before making a public release. We have not yet received a copy of the complaint from the Federal Trade Commission."

The FTC accusation was made public in a release given nationwide publication last Wednesday.

68-Year-Old Chef Found Safe After Being Trapped 58 Hours In Quake-Leveled Hospital

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—A bulldozer took a giant scoop of rubble from the earthquake-flattened San Fernando Veterans Hospital and workers momentarily froze.

Two feet protruded into the cleared area and rescuers thought it was a workman who had fallen into the debris.

Then Frank Carbonara, 68, scrambled from a tiny space beneath a metal sink where he had been trapped for two and one-half days.

"We found a live one," shouted one of the rescue workers.

Carbonara, a chef at the hospital, was fortunate. He had suffered only broken bones in his hands and a bruised chest and physicians pronounced him in good condition.

Saved By Sink
"I fell I was dead. I didn't sleep for 58 hours," Carbonara said later at the hospital where he was being treated.

Forty of the 59 known victims of Tuesday's devastating Los Angeles earthquake died at the hospital in San Fernando Valley, 10 miles from the epicenter of the tremor. Two bodies were pulled out only three hours after Carbonara was found.

"I ran and then I crawled underneath the basin," Carbonara told a doctor. The act probably saved his life.

An air pocket formed under the large sink as the three-story building crumbled into a three-foot high mound of debris. There was enough air in the pocket to keep Carbonara alive.

"Thank you, Honey. Thank you, honey," Carbonara smiled.

Damage caused by the 6.5 magnitude quake was still being reported but county officials said it would cost $1 billion. Buildings in a 40-mile area sustained some sort of damage.

Dam Danger Ebbs
About four miles away from the hospital, the lake behind quake-cracked Van Norman Dam was being lowered three inches an hour, steadily easing the threat of another catastrophe should an aftershock jolt the earthen levee.

Some 120,000 residents of an 18-square mile area below the dam prepared to return to their homes this afternoon as the danger of the dam bursting subsided.

The residents were ordered to leave their homes, most in the $25,000 to $50,000 class, after it was determined that the dam holding more than three billion gallons of water would not be safe until it was lowered.

Most Los Angeles schools reopened Thursday but 148 in the San Fernando Valley remained closed while engineers checked structural damage.

A school district spokesman said more than 100 plumbers and carpenters were repairing damages at the schools. Thirteen of the buildings sustained major structural damage.

Lowest Rate Of Ads Asked For Politicians

AUSTIN (UPI)—Sen. Mike McKool, D-Dallas, introduced a bill Thursday that would make newspapers and broadcast stations sell political advertising at the lowest going rate.

The bill, in effect, would give politicians the right to the same reduced rates that large advertisers get, which is often lower since the large advertisers buy in such large bulk.

McKool's proposal calls for all political advertising charges not to "exceed the lowest charge per unit of space which the contracting advertising medium has made for any advertising sold within the three-month period preceding the date on which the contract is made."

Such a "lowest charge" provision would apply regardless of the total amount of space the particular advertiser had contracted for or the number of issues in which the ad was to be distributed.

It also prescribes both criminal and civil penalties for those who exceed the state's maximum permissible advertising rates.

The bill would apply to both broadcast and printed media, and would include billboards, the printing of pamphlets and handbills as well as the cost of public opinion polls.

Any company or individual who exceeded the minimum rate could be fined $100, court costs and double the amount of the excess charged the candidate.

Nixon Concerned About Reports Of U.S. Military Advisers In Laos

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (UPI)—The White House expressed concern today about reports from Southeast Asia that American advisers were accompanying South Vietnamese units in Laos.

Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said if the reports were true, they represented a violation of U.S. policy. "If anybody is there, they don't belong there," he said.

Although American helicopters and warplanes are supporting the South Vietnamese thrust into Laos, President Nixon has put a strict prohibition against participation by any ground troops.

Nixon, accompanied by his two top foreign policy advisers, is spending a long weekend here finishing work on the State of the World report he will submit to Congress Feb. 25 outlining his goals in Southeast Asia and other trouble spots.

Dr. Henry A. Kissinger, his National Security Advisor, said the 65,000-word document will explain the "general philosophy" underlying Nixon's foreign policy. He said it would cover the broad spectrum of issues confronting the President and raise as many questions as answers.

Kissinger and Secretary of State William P. Rogers, who flew here Thursday with the President, were scheduled to confer with Nixon at his bayside villa today on the final draft which already has been circulated for comment among top echelon government officials.

Kissinger said the report will include an assessment of the "fairly optimistic" chances of reaching an agreement with the Soviet Union on limiting nuclear armaments. He said it was the "logical outcome" of exploratory talks with Russia at Helsinki and Vienna.

"We now understand each other's point of view," Kissinger told newsmen. "We now have to see what we can do to bring them together."

Ziegler said Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird was originally scheduled to sit in on the final review of the report but had a long-standing commitment to speak in Phoenix, Ariz.

VICE IS VERSA
DETROIT (UPI)—A three-year veteran of the suburban Redford Township police force was arrested Thursday on narcotics charges.

The patrolman, Harold W. Howell, allegedly sold marijuana to an undercover agent from his own police department.

MOUNT VERNON, Ill. (UPI)—Much as they'd like to, city councilmen Russell Laur and Kenneth Martin won't be able to attend a "candidates forum" Tuesday with six men who oppose them in the Feb. 23 election.

The "forum" was scheduled the same night as a city council meeting.

Nepotism Law Ignored In District Attorney Appointment

AUSTIN (UPI) — The Senate Nominations Committee voted Thursday to recommend confirmation of William H. Healy's appointment as a district attorney, without investigating whether the appointment might violate Texas nepotism laws.

Healy's father is Rep. William S. Healy, D-Paducah, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee and one of the most powerful men in the legislature. The elder Healy's committee has much influence in state finances, including how much district attorneys make.

When Smith announced the nomination of Healy's son last week he was asked whether the appointment violated state nepotism laws. The governor said he had received "unofficial" information that the appointment "would be all right," but said he expected the Senate Nominations Committee to check out the legality of the appointment.

Ladybird Has Committee Approval As University Of Texas Regent

AUSTIN (UPI) — Tanned and dressed in a gray wool midi, Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson won quick approval by the Senate Nominations Committee Thursday to serve on the board of regents of the University of Texas.

It remains for the full Senate to ratify her nomination to the board.

Her committee interview lasted less than 10 minutes. She answered only one question—a query from Sen. A. R. Schwartz, D-Galveston, about her views on setting enrollment limitations at state campuses.

"I would hope that we would be able to at one or more of the institutions to take all of the students that wanted to come and were qualified," Mrs. Johnson said.

The panel also cleared for full Senate consideration the nominations of Dr. Joe Thomas Nelson of Weatherford and A. G. McNeese Jr. of Houston to serve on the UT regents board.

Nelson said he feels "there are probably some institutions at which there need to be some enrollment limits set." But the Weatherford doctor, a former member of the North Texas State University board of regents, said the matter "is probably a problem for the (state college) coordinating board."

Last year—after a long fight against coordinating board attempts to set enrollment ceilings—the UT regents adopted a plan to limit the number of students at the Austin campus.

Mrs. Johnson had prepared a formal statement but the committee, which generally conducts its interviews without such formalities, did not ask her to read it.

In the written statement Mrs. Johnson said she was "completely surprised" last month when Gov. Preston Smith nominated her to the regents, and at first was tempted to decline. She said she finally decided to accept for two reasons:

"One was I have always felt that the university (her alma mater) gave me more than I could ever return — but that I would try to repay it at every opportunity.

Many Believe Baum's Refusal To Quit Political Posts Imperils State Democratic Party

AUSTIN (UPI)—The steadfast refusal of Dr. Elmer C. Baum to resign either from the State Banking Board or as state Democratic party chairman over the insurance stock scandal is placing the entire Texas Democratic party in jeopardy, many political figures believe.

Baum reportedly told Gov. Preston Smith, who put him in both positions, that he would step aside if Smith felt he should. But the governor is said to have told Baum to stay put "because to resign would be admission of guilt."

The feeling that Baum should quit both of his political posts is almost universal among high Democratic party workers and officials. But so far, few have come forward to say anything publicly.

"But how are we going to get rid of him?" one party insider asked this week. "He refused to quit, and that's that."

An Unsecured Loan

Baum, an Austin osteopath and a longtime friend and ally of Smith, and the governor both admitted taking a $275,000 unsecured loan from Sharpstown State Bank in Houston in 1969 and buying National Bankers Life Insurance stock. They then turned it for a quick $125,000 profit during a period when the federal Securities and Exchange Commission charges that promoters and owners of several corporations manipulated the stock so that it had a false value at a much higher rate than what it was worth.

The Sharpstown bank collapsed during the height of the SEC investigation and had to be taken over by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. National Bankers Life is one of the defendants in the stock fraud suit filed in a Dallas federal district court.

Some Are Nervous

Baum's continuation as state Democratic party chief is beginning to make a lot of people in the party nervous.

"This whole thing is hurting all of us," one high state official said recently. "The people tend to believe everybody in state government is guilty."

Two politicians already feeling the bind perhaps more than some others are Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes and state Sen. Charles Herring, D-Austin.

Baum's nomination to the State Banking Board still is awaiting approval, or disapproval, by the state Senate. Herring, as Baum's local state senator, is on a hotseat over the nomination.

"He's damned if he supports the nomination and he's damned if he doesn't," one local political observer commented.

Not Just Now

There is no question that

Baum would be "busted," or rejected, by the Senate if his nomination were to be considered now.

One insider said this week that "I doubt that he could get 10 affirmative votes if it were voted on today."

Sen. Joe Christie, D-El Paso, chairman of the Senate Nominations Committee, said his panel wants to wait until after the Senate Investigating Committee has completed its probe of the State Banking Board and other aspects of the stock case before acting on Baum.

Some members of the Senate are getting letters from home about Baum. One writer from Houston asked a senator, "How can you even think of approving him? Remember, we'll be watching how you vote."

Feeling the Pinch

Herring is beginning to feel the pinch from his constituents in the Austin area over the Baum nominations. The Austin senator told one capitol newsmen a couple of weeks ago that he would vote for Baum's confirmation, then denied saying it the following day.

Herring is also the attorney for the State Democratic Executive Committee, which Baum heads, and reportedly has had some business ventures with the Austin osteopath.

Smith has strongly contended that neither he nor Baum did anything wrong in using inside information to make quick profits on the insurance stock, and has resisted all advice that he ask Baum to resign his banking board and state party chief posts.

Denies Wrongdoing

Smith denied at a news conference Jan. 20 that there was any wrongdoing or conflict of interest in his and Baum's actions in the stock deal.

"I just know that my business actions are all right," the governor said.

And with that contention, he is insisting that Baum stick to both his political posts—at least for the time being.

1ST DEMO IN CABINET

John Connally Sworn Into Office As 61st Secretary Of Treasury

WASHINGTON (UPI)—John B. Connally, oilman, lawyer, former governor and former secretary of the Navy, Thursday became the eighth cabinet member in history from Texas.

Connally was sworn in as secretary of the treasury during a brief ceremony in the East Room of the White House. A hundred persons, including members of Connally's family, six state senators and Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes, attended the swearing in.

Supreme Court Justice Harry M. Blackmun administered the oath of office to Connally, making him the first Democrat in President Nixon's cabinet.

"I hope I might prove worthy of the trust that was placed in me by you," Connally told Nixon after taking the oath of office.

Flurry of Comment

Connally was nominated to the post by Nixon shortly after the first of the year. He was approved in committee and on the floor of the Senate in the midst of a flurry of comment concerning his relationship with the Sid Richardson Foundation of Fort Worth.

"Mr. President," Connally said to Nixon, "you will permit me one big sigh. I finally made it. Today I go on the payroll."

Connally thus became the first Texan to serve on a presidential cabinet since former President Lyndon B. Johnson appointed W. Marvin Watson as postmaster general in 1969. Another Texan, Ramsey Clark, served in Johnson's cabinet as attorney general.

Other Texans who have served as cabinet members include Albert S. Burleson, appointed postmaster general in 1912 by President Woodrow Wilson; Thomas W. Gregory, appointed attorney general in 1914 by Wilson; Jesse Jones, appointed secretary of commerce in 1940 by President Franklin D. Roosevelt; Tom C. Clark, appointed attorney general in 1945 by Roosevelt; and Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, appointed secretary of health, education and welfare in 1953 by President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Was Navy Secretary

Connally retired to private life as a lawyer in Houston after he left the governor's man-nomination, Connally said he would take a loss of "several hundred thousand dollars" by becoming a cabinet member.

Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, asked Connally how much the job was worth to him.

Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, asked Connally how much the job was worth to him.

"Senator," Connally said, "I suppose you can't put any price on public service. I have no regret about the financial sacrifice."

Pros and Cons
WASHINGTON (UPI)—Legislation to implement the $5 billion no-strings-attached portion of President Nixon's plan to share federal revenue with state and local governments has been introduced in the Senate.

Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., called the revenue sharing plan "a tool whereby the resources and responsibil-ties of state and local governments can be strengthened." But Sen. Vance Hartke, D-Ind., said the administration plan in its present form has more defects than merits and, if passed, would move farther away from the problems it is designed to

The Lighter Side

By DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — It came as a shock to learn there is an active revenue-sharing ring in the capital and that the President of the United States himself openly advocates the practice.

I try to keep an open mind and a modern outlook, despite advancing years, but I'm sharply not ready for anything that un-conventional. It's my strait-laced upbringing, I guess.

As a child, I was taught to believe in fiscal fidelity. America in those days was a monomoney society in which the government that collected your taxes spent taxes. And no horsing around.

Road To Respectability

I had, of course, heard rumors that a revenue-sharing cult existed in Washington. But I always figured such tales were grossly exaggerated.

I even went to see a movie about revenue-sharing. It was called "Vermont and Georgia and Indian and Oregon" and it dealt with four states that became involved with each other's exchequer.

But it was primarily a comedy and didn't impress me as being very realistic. At any rate, I never thought I'd see the day when revenue-sharing would become more or less respectable.

A friend of mine who is inclined to be broad-minded about these matters told me my attitude was anachronistic. Personal Experience by Nature "Government is by nature poly-peucuniary," he said. "In these modern times, it is too much to expect the government to confine itself to a single tax standard, the way it did when you were a boy."

I said, "To me, taxation is an intensely personal experience. Unless I feel emotionally involved with the government to which I pay taxes, the whole thing becomes sordid and meaningless."

"At the present time, for example, I am domiciled in Virginia. Its government provides me with license tags for my auto and perhaps performs other services of which I am unaware. Two of my children were born in the state. Consequently, there is a sentimental attachment."

Jarring Expected To Continue Supervision Of Indirect Parley

UNITED NATIONS (UPI)—United Nations efforts to produce a Middle East peace depend on the quiet diplomacy of Gunnar V. Jarring, but diplomats of the world organization wonder how long Egypt will give him to produce a formula to its liking.

Jarring's mediation does not depend on existence of a formal Arab-Israeli ceasefire. Short of full scale warfare, he is expected to continue his supervision of indirect talks regardless of the status of the ceasefire now extended to March 7.

The Swedish diplomat's peace effort is given a better chance of success than the roughly parallel effort of the Big Four—U.S., U.S.S.R., Britain and France—ambassadors.

The ambassadors have met secretly 55 times, the last meeting on Feb. 12, with the aim of drawing up "guidelines" for Jarring. But with the United States firmly backing Israel and the Soviet Union staunchly aligned with Egypt, observers aren't very optimistic for a Big Four success.

Nor is much progress looked for from the U.N. Security Council, which Israel mistrusts for what it considers a string of pro-Arab decisions.

Egypt Still Demands Total Pullout While Israel Continues To Ask For Secure Boundry

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI)—The Arabs still demand total withdrawal by Israel from every inch of territory she conquered in 1967 as well as freedom for an estimated two to 2.5 million Arab refugees to return to their former homes and lands in what is now the state of Israel or to be compensated by Israel for their loss.

Israel continues to demand a peace treaty giving her what she describes as "permanent, secure and recognized boundaries," coupled with freedom of navigation for her ships through the Suez Canal and through the Gulf of Aqaba to her southern port of Eilat. Without this she refuses to budge from her conquests.

In the search for solutions, Western officials pin their hopes of peace on two slender threads—the revived peace mission of United Nations special envoy Gunnar V. Jarring and the obvious reluctance of either side to end the ceasefire.

Jarring Works Tirelessly

In the first months after the 1967 war Jarring, a Swedish diplomat, shuttled tirelessly between Israel, the Arab capitals and U.N. headquarters in New York. Jarring made no headway, neither did simultaneous effort at the U.N. by the ambassadors of the United States, Britain, France and the Soviet Union.

By early 1970 fighting along the Suez Canal between Israel and Egypt had erupted again on a major scale. It was accompanied by deep penetration raids by the Israeli air force into the Egyptian Nile Delta heartland. These were halted only when the Soviet Union rushed SAM2 and SAM3 anti-aircraft missiles with Russian crews to bolster Egypt's helpless air defenses. Soviet pilots appeared at the same time in MIG fighters in Egypt's skies.

Rather than risk a direct conflict with Russia, Israel called off her air offensive.

On June 19, 1970, U.S. Secretary of State William P.

Rogers proposed the so-called "Rogers plan," calling for a 90-day ceasefire and resumption of peace talks. Its aim was to get the two sides to stop shooting and to start talking before the Middle East conflict sparked a big power confrontation. Much to the surprise of many seasoned diplomats, both sides accepted and Jarring resumed his peace talks at the United Nations.

Almost immediately Israel pulled out, charging Egypt had taken advantage of the ceasefire to push SAM2 and SAM3 missiles closer to the Suez Canal. The United States confirmed this charge.

To compensate for the strategic disadvantage under which Israel suddenly found herself, Washington promised her 18 more Phantom supersonic jets in 1970 in addition to 50 already sold her, an additional $500 million in military aid and $200 million in economic aid during 1971.

Finally, Israel bowed to strong U.S. pressure and agreed on Dec. 28, 1970, to return to the negotiations. They resumed on Jan. 5 this year, although in the form of separate meetings by Jarring with the Israelis and Arabs.

No Compromise Seen

So far there is little indication either side is ready to compromise.

But there are factors now that did not exist in 1967. Egypt's President Gamal Abdel Nasser died Sept. 28, 1970. Western experts believe his successor, Sadat, would gladly switch some of Egypt's slim economic resources towards solving his country's critical internal problems. But they believe he also feels unable to show himself less belligerent than Nasser.

"It is far more honorable for us to die while defending our land than to live on our knees in surrender to the conditions of the United States and Israel," Sadat has said.

The Soviet Union has stepped up its stake in the Middle East.

Western officials estimate there are between 34,000 and 20,000 Soviet troops in Egypt today. Moscow has armed Egypt with jet fighters, tanks, artillery and anti-aircraft rockets and virtually taken over her entire air defense.

The Soviets now keep an average of 30 combat ships and 10 submarines in the Eastern Mediterranean, where they constitute a permanent challenge to the U.S. 6th Fleet.

The only hopeful sign in the Middle East is the return to more stable conditions in Jordan, where King Hussein's forces crushed the Palestinian guerrillas in 10 days of bloody civil war last September. The guerrillas no longer are considered a serious military threat to the Middle East peace.

For the United States and other Western countries the main interest is lasting peace. But, as Frank Giles, foreign editor of the London Sunday Times, wrote after a recent Middle East tour, "The first impression is that something not far short of a miracle will be needed if a lasting peace is to be achieved in the near future between Arabs and Israelis."

DESPITE WAR THREAT

Egyptian People Have Never Had It So Good

CAIRO (UPI)—Although renewed war with Israel remains a constant threat, the Egyptian man in the street has never had it so good.

He has money in his pocket, vegetables, meat, fruit and consumer goods readily available and cheap. A start has been made to implement promised reforms in everything from transportation to education.

By any standards this progress has been modest. By Western standards most Egyptians still live in poverty, with 70 per cent of the population still illiterate and many earning less than 25 piasters (60 cents) a day.

Recent advances, however modest they have been, represent a sharp contrast to the austere years when the home front was ignored as the late President Gamal Abdel Nasser immersed himself in the war against Israel and other pan-arabic goals.

While the trembling peace lasts, the new government headed by moderate Premier Mahmoud Fawzi continues to switch emphasis cautiously from war to internal policy.

Cairo itself, an abused and neglected city during the years of the "aggression," as Egyptians refer to the conflict with Israel, is undergoing a modest face lift.

Lights, blackened at the height of the conflict, have been switched on again. Sidewalks have been retiled. The construction industry is back in full swing.

Even so, many Egyptians fear they may be living their own version of the "Prague Spring"—the brief period of liberalization in Czechoslovakia before the Soviet invasion.

Romantics Preserve Valentine Traditions

NEW YORK (Sp)—Cynical bachelors and little boys aren't the only ones who think Valentine's Day is for the birds — even romantics thought so.

In fact, at one time nearly everyone believed Feb. 14 was the day most birds mated. And though fact proved fancy false, the day stayed set aside — at least for lovebirds.

Lighthearted loafers used Valentine's Day as a peaceful day to sleep. They took no chances that a common belief — that the first person of the opposite sex you saw became your loved one for the year — came true. No heartaches or aggravation for them.

Nor for the women, who like one 18th century lady, "lay in bed and shut my eyes all morning until he came to our house. I would not have seen another man for all the world."

It would appear that these ladies made sure that Cupid didn't interfere with their year's selection.

That chance, however, became more and more risky each year, and finally women decided to substitute a safer custom to celebrate the day. In the late 1700s, sweethearts began penning and decorating cards, some so elegant and beautiful, they are virtually museum pieces today.

And since neither mail service nor envelopes existed, "captured" colonists delivered their tokens of love — cards, candy perfume — in person.

The more well-to-do sent their cards by coach, though they double wrapped and sealed them with wax, so only their beloved could read the message. Then with the invention of lithographs and woodcuts — a boon to the inartistic competitors, but a burden to the mailman — nearly everyone began sending valentines.

Researchers have come up with these two amusing facts: Cards were even tailored to men in specific professions. The undertaker, for instance, could send a card which said, "Let Chloë smile upon her lover. Who will ne'er forsake her; Each day new charms she will discover. In her faithful undertaker."

Or the fruit grower could write his beloved that, "Sweetener than an orange grove, Is the charming maid I love, No grapes more luscious than your lips."

Lacedged sentimental valentines also became popular. Today, in addition to cards, fibbers, candy and perfume have become common Valentine's Day gifts. According to department store surveys, items

NEW WAY TO BE SUDDENLY SLIM

Los Angeles:—Are you a woman whose figure is on the good side but might look perfect? You'll be thrilled by the new easy way science has discovered for you to become Suddenly Slim and yet completely comfortable. If you're more than 15 pounds overweight, or your waistline is larger than 32 inches, then this idea is not for you. If your weight problem falls within this range, then you can realize a new, smoother figure today, without diet or exercise.

Suddenly Slim is an all-new kind of 4-oz. girdle constructed of science fibers. One startling innovation is the sheer nylon front panel. This is permanently stiffened by a science process and cannot give or sag. It's surrounded by a slimming action border. A featherstitched panel down each side of this girdle will contour your hips if they are a problem.

The girdle itself is of a "wonder" Lycra spandex blend. It's a new power net consisting of nylon, acetate and spandex. It is so comfortable, but has such slimming strength, it gives your figure everything that's possible with a foundation.

"Suddenly Slim," in both girdle and panty versions, is the peak achievement of the California designer-genius, Olga. They are available at VALENTINE'S DAY STORY — Centuries ago, young men selected their Valentines from names drawn out of a box. Many believe the mating habits of birds bear a direct relationship to Valentine's Day. Common gifts to sweethearts today are boxes of candy (some shaped like hearts) and beauty preparations.

PARKING UNFAIR

ANNAPOLIS (UPI) — The leadership of the Maryland Legislature allocates most of the choice parking slots around the State House to women lawmakers.

Delegate Robert Stroble calls it discriminatory—and a long walk from where he parks. Stroble Tuesday filed a resolution which would allocate the scarce parking spaces by a random drawing. Stroble said his resolution "is in agreement with the Woman's Liberation Movement."

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Do you think a man who has been promiscuous for 20 years can ever reform? My 22-year-old niece has just become engaged to a 37-year-old man who, by his own admission, has been with so many women, he lost count long ago. This isn't just talk because this is a small town and his reputation is well-known.

He now says he is tired of running around and wants to settle down with a nice girl and become a respectable family man. My niece is fully aware of his past, but is willing to accept his word that he will change. My question is, can he change even if he wants to?

He is a very successful professional man and could give her all the material advantages, but I wonder if it's worth the risk. My niece says she will give serious consideration to your opinion or that of any readers who may have had experience along this line.

DEAR ABBY: I am a psychotherapist who is presently working with a young woman who had precisely the same problem as was expressed by "Jessica's Mother."

My patient also had a boy friend who cried when she said she didn't want to marry him. He cried again when the girl's mother talked with him, and he told her he would kill himself if the girl didn't marry him.

The mother urged her daughter to marry him to "keep the peace," and so they were married. The five years they spent together were pure hell for the girl. Can you imagine

I am accused of being over-protective, and "spoiling her fun." Since when is it "fun" to tease a crying child?

The child gets along fine with his grandfather who approaches him slowly or waits for the boy to come to him. What's wrong with Grandma? Or am I out of line?

NO TOWN, PLEASE
DEAR NO TOWN: No, Grandma is. Someone should tell her to control her enthusiasm. Appeal to Grandma since he shows better sense. If that fails, you tell Grandma as respectfully as you can.

DEAR ABBY: I am a psychotherapist who is presently working with a young woman who had precisely the same problem as was expressed by "Jessica's Mother."

My patient also had a boy friend who cried when she said she didn't want to marry him. He cried again when the girl's mother talked with him, and he told her he would kill himself if the girl didn't marry him.

The mother urged her daughter to marry him to "keep the peace," and so they were married. The five years they spent together were pure hell for the girl. Can you imagine being married to a crybaby for five years?

Of course, my patient blames her mother for talking her into the marriage, and she blames the young man for trapping her with such a pathetic performance. If there is any "blame" to be fixed, it's the girl's own fault.

Now that her divorce is final, she is being treated for stomach ulcers and an emotional breakdown. Some people have a hard time learning that they themselves must make the major decisions of their lives, and they shouldn't allow themselves to be talked into anything to "keep the peace" or to stop someone from crying. No Group Of Human Beings Can Truly Achieve Unity

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Religion Writer
It's easy to criticize the church. At any time and in any place, men can justly accuse the church of failing to live up to its own teachings. The charge is always correct, to some degree, because the church proclaims ideals of unselfishness, love and service which no group of human beings can perfectly achieve. As an antidote to complacency and a spur to greater effort, criticism of the church can be a healthy thing. When it's overdone, it becomes merely destructive. It's one thing to say the church has shortcomings, which it certainly has. It's quite a different thing to suggest—as many now are doing—that the church is obsolete, useless and expendable. Company is Necessary. History says otherwise. From the time of Jesus until now, Christian living has been an adventure in which men and women have found it necessary to have company. It is difficult enough to be a real Christian when you have people around you who share your commitment and conviction, people on whom you can rely for support and encouragement, and who rely in turn on you. Without such mutual reinforcement, fidelity to the way of Christ is virtually impossible. Jesus recognized this. The first act of His ministry was to call together a little band of disciples to be His constant companions. It is quite clear from the gospels that Jesus didn't look upon His disciples merely as students to learn and relay His teaching. They were His friends. He needed them, just as they needed Him. And that, of course, is what the church still is supposed to be—not just an institution with worthy objectives, but a fellowship, a brotherhood, an ongoing community which transcends all barriers of time and space. The mission of this community is two-fold, and is plainly spelled out in the Bible. It is to nurture, sustain and instruct those already included in its membership. And it is to reach out with love and humility to render whatever service it can to the rest of mankind. Commitment is Basic. How well the church performs its mission at any particular place and time depends not on how large and powerful and rich it is, but rather on the degree to which its members are genuinely committed to the role of a servant community. It is not through great size, nor weight of numbers, nor wealth, but solely through commitment, that the church is able to stand forth among men in the high and holy role of the body of Christ. The critics are right when they say there is much about the contemporary church that is unlovely and un-Christlike. What they do not always seem to understand is that there ultimately is only one way in which the church can be reformed and strengthened—by individuals daring to become real Christians. The gospel of salvation according to Marx has promised much but has delivered little except starvation and oppression." —Edward P. Coleson

The Weekly Message of Inspiration...

BIBLE CHURCH of PAMPA

Rev. Jonathan S. Smith

LIFE IN ALL ITS FULLNESS

The story is told about a young man who died of starvation. Among his belongings was a Bible left to him by his parents, which he apparently never opened, because sandwiched between its pages were stocks, bonds, and cash.

Now it is tragic enough to die of starvation, but how additionally tragic and unnecessary was this death! His preconceived view of the Bible prevented him from opening it, and thus he suffered physically and spiritually.

This would be a sad story even if it happened only once in all of human history. But it is repeated many times each day in a slightly different form. Perhaps you have sensed starvation in your own soul, lacking the personal power to cope with life. Your problems are growing in magnitude with no solution in sight. Has your preconceived view of the Bible prevented you from opening its pages and receiving its riches — the help you so desperately need?

James speaks of a man "who will be blessed in his deed." He knows life in all its fullness. He can face trials, adverse circumstances, or the problems of life with inner joy and outer calm. The reason he can do this is quite uncomplicated. He looks into the Word of God, that is, he studies the Bible, to discover how God says to deal with this problem. Then, once he has learned the truth, "he continues in it," that is, he puts into practice what he has learned from the Bible. The unconditional promise from God to this man is "This man shall be blessed in his deed." THIS MAN COULD BE YOU! (James 1:25)

Our Capsule Policy

The Pampa News is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. Only when man is free to control himself and all he produces, can he develop to his utmost capability.

The News believes each and every person would get more satisfaction in the long run if he were permitted to spend what he earns on a volunteer basis rather than having part of it distributed involuntarily.

Blame The President

"The President has usurped the power of Congress. He has involved us in an unnecessary war. He has fumbled this war. It is a bloody and costly failure."

"Not a spark of genius has he, not an element for leadership. Not one particle of heroic enthusiasm."

"Money you have expended without limit, and blood poured out like water. Defeat, debt, taxation, and sepulchers—these are your only trophies."

"Stop the war! Withdraw your troops from the invaded states."

All of this may sound familiar, but don't let it fool you. These, writes Tom Mahoney, in the February, 1971 American Legion Magazine, are a few examples of the vitriolic press, pulpit and platform criticism directed more than a century ago—at the conduct of the Civil War by President Abraham Lincoln!

"All American Presidents have been targets of abuse," reports Tom Mahoney. But Abraham Lincoln seems to have been subjected to more than his fair share. "(An) important issue in 1864 was peace. Grant and Sherman's slogging soldiers were winning victories but with heavy casualties. The country was weary of the war and bored with it. Desertions from the Union Army reached 600 a day. Lincoln was accused of 'criminally prolonging' the struggle which some of his critics termed 'unjustifiable and sinful.'"

But the name of Lincoln will long outlive that of any of his detractors. In 1962, a poll of 75 historians voted him the greatest of American Presidents.

One of President Lincoln's most extreme critics, found Mr. Mahoney, was the Chicago Times. Can you imagine trying to live down a blunder such as the Chicago Times report of the ceremony dedicating the Gettysburg battlefield, which read: "We pass over the silly remarks of the President; for the credit of the nation we are willing that the veil of oblivion shall be dropped over them."

Let's Be Honest About It

This year, as wage earners have already noticed on their pay-check deductions for Federal taxes, the tab for "social security" has been substantially increased. The base tax rate jumped from 9.6 per cent to 10.4 per cent; one-half of which is deducted from the earnings of the worker before he gets his paycheck, and the other half (theoretically, at least) deducted "after" he receives his wages. Actually, of course, the worker never sees any part of the money; the whole amount is deposited by the company in a special account which is then turned over to the Federal government.

To say (as the Department of Health, Education and Welfare alleges) that the employee pays half, and then "the company pays half" of the Social Security tax is a crude deception. There is not a single business establishment in this country, large or small that possesses a magic money tree or which has the authority to print nice, new dollar bills. All of the money paid out by each business firm, whether in the form of wages, taxes, rent, utilities and other operating expenses must come from the earned income of the employees. If the employees don't earn it, the company can't pay it—period. If the company brings in a little more money than it pays out in combined expenses and salaries, then it will make a profit. But if it brings in less money than that expended—including "both halves" of the Social Security Tax—then that company goes broke.

Thus, a worker in the $5000 bracket (by Government reckoning) is now tapped for $520, as against $480 last year; one-half of this amount is reported on the paycheck, but the other half is simply turned over to the Government without anything being said about it. But the biggest increase hits the wage earner in the $9,000 bracket (by Government calculation) by ours, a true earned income after business overhead, of closer to $10,000, which increased from $748 in 1970 to $936 in 1971.

As long as we have the Social Security tax, why not be honest about what it is actually costing us?

Should Be A Choice

A victory was scored for free enterprise a few weeks ago. Judge William H. Timbers, in the U.S. District Court of Connecticut, ruled for the defendant in a government antitrust suit against a corporation, and stated that: "... the Government has not sustained its burden of proof upon the essential issue."

It has been said before, but is worth repeating; there is nothing wrong with being big as long as you are competitive. There is nothing wrong with being small either, if you choose to be small. You ought to be able to exercise a choice in the matter.

Judge Timbers went on to stress that: "... it is fundamental under our system of government that any decision to change the standard (antitrust laws) be made by the Congress and not by the courts."

However, what if the Justice Department decides to take the case on to the Supreme Court? The Supreme Court has a 100 per cent batting average against business in antitrust suits—it has decided for the government side of the case every single time. It would be unfortunate if the only monument to the current Administration is the continued dismantling of the Free Enterprise System as a result of the activities of the head of the Antitrust Division of the Department of Justice. What if they decide that since bigness is bad, all large companies should be dismantled? This has already been suggested in the case of General Motors.

If that idea ever becomes a reality, you won't have any choice anymore. You will have to be small—or pot at all.

USO Turns 30

The United States Organization, Inc., best known by its initials USO, marked the 30th anniversary of its founding on Feb. 4.

More than 25 million Americans who have worn their country's uniform since the beginning of World War II have been served by the USO. Today the organization is still serving the troops at more than 50 points overseas and in 125 communities in the United States.

At a USO club or lounge, a serviceman may relax, write letters, enjoy television, radio or records. He can get tickets to sports events, plays and movies or help in housing or personal problems.

In addition, more than 1,000 USO-sponsored entertainers annually give some 8,000 performances to audiences totaling more than seven million servicemen.

The USO receives no financial support from the government but is maintained by voluntary contributions primarily from the United Fund, Community Chest and other independent campaigns.

RECOGNIZE REDS
The push is on again to recognize Red China. A mounting frenzy by the usual apologists for Red chicanery dominates the national media. "Face the facts," the U.S. public and the Nixon Administration are urged by one dovish senator (Sen. George McGovern, newly announced candidate for the presidency of the U.S.), speaking on a national network.

"Recognize the Reds" would be a good slogan if the words meant what they say. Constructive citizens have always said we should recognize the Reds for what they are, but that doesn't mean to invite them to come into the living room and destroy our way of life. Those like Senators Fulbright and McGovern who want to "build bridges" to communist governments, while using our power and prestige to undermine anti-communist nations refuse to recognize what Reds really are.

Among the usual excuses for undermining anti-communist governments, the bridgebuilders often claim that such governments are not "representative" of all the people, meaning that communist subversives are not encouraged to undermine the government. In the case of South Vietnam, the fact that elections have been held under foreign observation is ignored. Somehow, the communists in such places as North Vietnam, North Korea and Cuba, which have never had any kind of elections observed by anybody, are representative of their enslaved people and deserve our recognition, according to the "bridge-builders."

A barrage of letters to opinion-makers and editors by aroused citizens would influence the more alert members of Congress to turn aside this latest drive to recognize Red China as a government suitable to sit in the councils of civilized nations. Better we should recognize Reds for what they are, not as valid governments equal to those of free lands.

Do you think that man is the perfect animal? Scientists are always saying so because he is the only animal that can think for himself. Balloon Soap! In the first place, man might have been able to think for himself at one time. But today, they won't let him. He is hammered, cajoled and forced, to think as others want him to think by teachers, bureaucrats, union bosses, and racketeers.

Not only that—man is not the only animal that can think. When a rabbit sees a fox warily creeping upon him he thinks—"Boy! I'd better start making tracks or I won't be around much longer."

If man ain't allowed to think anymore, he at least could be endued with some better physical aspects:

A set of suction cups on the tips of his fingers would enable him to more easily pick up divorce papers, draft notices and income-tax forms. And how about six wrists on each arm instead of two? He could really do a good job of squeezing his girlfriend....

Riots and crashes would not be near so harmful if he had his skeleton on the outside, like a lobster. He would become a regular walking armor. And think what a boon to mankind riding the freeways if he had compound eyes, like the fly, and could see to the back of his head!

Wouldn't it be wonderful to have digits as maneuverable as fingers on the end of your feet? Think how much safer a quarterback would be if he could toss a pass with either foot....

About the most important improvement I think, would be to have controllable monitors on our eardrums. Whenever desired we could shut out the babbling noises of civilization, dispose of unsavory gossip, and best of all, blank out political speeches at will. If we could do that, we might even get back to where we would be allowed to think for ourselves again....

STRAIGHT TALK:

Strange Dialogue Being Preached By 'Modernists'

By TOM ANDERSON

In 1958 Congressman Francis Walker, Chairman of the House Committee on Un-American Activities published a report saying: "... The Kremlin has succeeded in enlisting, at conservative estimate, the equivalent of some 20 combat-ready divisions of enemy troops on American soil."

More dangerous than these hidden combat divisions are the "modernist" preachers, formerly known as men of God, who are destroying God, family, country and morality.

Some of these church leaders are Communists and some are just fellow travelers. Some are "bleeding hearts" who do not understand. It makes no difference whether we are enslaved by Communists or by fellow travelers, or fools.

Mao Tse Tung's comrades have broken up family life and imposed a system of state slavery. Missionaries have been tortured and slaughtered. Churches which refused to deny God and preach Communism have been closed since 1950. Millions of Chinese, not only political enemies, but the aged and infirm, have been slaughtered, and their bodies ground up and spread on the land for fertilizer. Our "liberals" want to get Red China into the U.N. and under our foreign aid program, so we can put our arm around Mao Tse Tung and convince him that our commercial fertilizers produce better crops than bodies.

The April-June 1951 "Crossroads," a Presbyterian quarterly, made this amazing statement: "Military might alone cannot destroy an idea of such humanitarian appeal, and income-tax forms. And how about six wrists on each arm instead of two? He could really do a good job of squeezing his girlfriend....

Riots and crashes would not be near so harmful if he had his skeleton on the outside, like a lobster. He would become a regular walking armor. And think what a boon to mankind riding the freeways if he had compound eyes, like the fly, and could see to the back of his head!

Your Health

By Dr. Lawrence Lamb

Best Oils to Use In Your Cooking

Dear Dr. Lamb—I enjoyed your article about saturated and unsaturated fats. Since you did not list soybean and cottonseed oils as unsaturated, am I right to assume that they are saturated? What are hardened oils? What does whipping do to shortening? What should ignorant people like me think about things that are O.K. and used for years and then suddenly they're no good? For instance, oral diabetic tablets and cyclamate. And now cereals aren't as healthful as we've been told all these years. How do we innocent people know which foods and medicines are all right and which are not? It seems we cannot trust a thing because it's on the market or our doctor, in good faith, prescribes it.

Dear Reader—The common cooking oils all contain some saturated and some unsaturated fats. Safflower oil has the most polyunsaturated fat (linoleic acid) and the least saturated fat. Perhaps listing the common oils in the order of most to the least polyunsaturated fat will help you. They are: Safflower, corn, soybean, cottonseed, sesame, peanut, and olive oil. Olive oil has less than one-tenth as much polyunsaturated fat as safflower oil. Now let's look at the oils in terms of the most saturated fats. They are: Cottonseed, peanut, soybean, sesame, olive oil, corn, and safflower oil. From this listing and the actual values, in terms of large amounts of polyunsaturated fats and least amount of saturated fats, the three best oils in order are safflower, corn and soybean oil.

Hardened oils are those made more solid by adding hydrogen or making them into saturated fat.

Whipping shortening only adds air and does nothing to the important chemical structure of the fat.

What and whom can you trust? You can trust that whatever we believe today will change tomorrow. That is the nature of life and progress. When we learn more we have to sometimes modify our previous opinions, if we still have flexible minds. In every field we make mistakes but the trend is for constant improvement. Both in terms of nutrition and medicine we are far ahead of where we were a century ago. There has always been change. The rapid news media and well-informed public just learns more about it sooner these days.

Probe of Douglas Up to Rules Committee

Robert Allen

WASHINGTON — Some headway is being made on the bipartisan demand for a New and independent investigation of Justice William O. Douglas.

Fifty-five Republican and Democratic congressmen have signed a resolution calling for a sweeping probe of the ultra-liberal jurist by a special committee selected from the membership of the House at large, of the signers, 31 are Republicans and 24 Democrats.

Other legislators have indicated they will join in co-sponsoring the proposal.

The bipartisan originators of the resolution are Rep. Louis Wyman, R-N.H., Joe Waggoner, D-La., William Scott, R-Va., and Robert Sikes, D-Fla. The group has been in the forefront of the two-year effort to thoroughly probe Douglas' extrajudicial financial and other operations in the years 1960-69.

Official records show that during that period the militantly dovish jurist reported taxable income of $473,940 above his $396,749 salary — an average of more than $82,000 a year from moonlighting.

Principal source of the moonlighting — some $96,000 — was as the head of the Parvin Foundation with extensive holdings in Las Vegas gambling properties.

Basis of the bipartisan demand for a "meaningful investigation by a special committee" is the contention that last year's probe by a hand-picked House Judiciary subcommittee was a carefully contrived "whitewash."

Of the five members of the panel, only the three Democrats signed the exonerating report. The two Republicans abstained. One of them, Rep. Edward Hutchinson, R-Mich., filed a blistering dissenting opinion assailing the Democratic findings.

Foremost among his charges was the assertion that the report "raised more questions about Douglas' conduct than ever before."

WHAT HAPPENS NEXT — Next test of the bipartisan resolution will be in the House Rules Committee to which it has been referred.

It will determine whether the full House has the chance to vote on the proposal. If the committee grants a rule for such consideration, it will then go before the House for debate and a record ballot. If the committee turns thumbs-down, that will end the move—for the time being.

Rep. Wyman, one-time New Hampshire attorney general, has formally asked the Rules Committee to hold hearings on the resolution — before acting on it.

How soon the committee will do that is conjectural. It's very possible that ultra-liberal Douglas partisans on the committee may attempt to prevent the investigation demand from everything considered.

Last year, when a similar proposal was pending before the Rules Committee, Rep. Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y., chairman of the Judiciary Committee and a long-time close Douglas ally, suddenly announced the appointment of a hand-picked sub-committee to make an investigation. As a consequence of this diversionary maneuver, the Rules Committee shelved Wyman's resolution.

It was this resolution-scuttling probe that eight months later produced the report whitewashing Douglas.

The 15-member Rules Committee, headed by Rep. William Colmer, D-Miss., consists of 10 Democrats and 5 Republicans.

Colmer reportedly favors a new and independent investigation of Douglas. The five Republican committeemen are credited with similar views. But five of the Democratic committeemen are ultra-liberals and privately make no secret of their opposition to a bare-knuckle probe.

This backstage committee line-up means the outcome of the test is highly uncertain.

It could swing either way — depending largely on what hearings produce, if there are any. That's why it is anticipated Douglas' ultra-liberal supporters will strenuously fight committee consideration of the investigation resolution.

If they do and are rebuffed, that could prestage close approval of the proposal.

But that, too, is conjectural, and time and developments will tell the story.

Laos Strategy: Rip Out The Enemy's Supply Line

By RAY CROMLEY

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The explanation for what is happening in Laos is simple.

In this war we have learned the hard way that the only sure method for stopping North Vietnam's armies is to rip their line of supply. And it must be done on the ground.

Search-and-destroy missions against enemy guerrillas didn't work. The aerial bombing of North Vietnam and the Ho Chi Minh trails was only partially effective.

The Allied forces began to win in South Vietnam only after we systematically began to seek out and destroy rice, ammunition and weapons caches and underground repair stations.

Startling declines in North Vietnamese military effectiveness in sections of South Vietnam followed U.S. and South Vietnamese army sweeps which systematically destroyed the enemy's major underground quartermaster supply depots in key provinces near Saigon.

But the heaviest blow to the battle readiness of the North Vietnamese southern invasion army was dealt by the systematic blockade of South Vietnam's coast, then its rivers and finally the blockade of Cambodia, carried out in conjunction with the destruction of some of the major North supply depots along the Cambodian-South Vietnamese border.

This last combined action saved the inexperienced Cambodian armies from destruction. That is, it crippled the North Vietnamese units so effectively the Cambodians had time to get on their feet.

If North Vietnam's major depots and military way stations along the Ho Chi Minh trails in southern Laos can be destroyed, more time will be bought for Cambodia's hard-pressed forces. And a serious threat to the northern provinces of South Vietnam will be defused, thus making the steady withdrawal of U.S. forces possible.

And if the North Vietnamese find themselves hardpressed along the Ho Chi Minh trails, they may find it difficult this year to carry out their annual full-scale rice and opium forays in Laos. This would be a bitter blow in food and in revenue. Its effects could last the better part of a year.

One series of battles in southern Laos won't do the trick, of course. For Hanoi's armies will build their supply lines again, if given the chance. As in Cambodia, Saigon's armies will have to raid and raid again, from time to time, in order to keep the North Vietnamese off balance.

Washington Window

By STEVE GERSTEL
WASHINGTON (UPI)—Democrats in the Senate have turned to a corner from the land of the Magnolia blossom and the soft drawl to lead them to continued dominance over the GOP in 1972.

They elected Sen. Ernest "Fritz" Hollings of South Carolina as chairman of the Senate Democratic Campaign Committee.

It was, any window dressing notwithstanding, a hard-headed, political decision by the senators.

The fact is that more than half—seven out of 13—of the Democratic Senators up for reelection in 1972 are Southern Democrats.

Knows Their Politics
They are Sens. Allen J. Ellender of Louisiana, James O. Eastland of Mississippi, B. Everett Jordan of North Carolina, John L. McClellan of Arkansas, David Gambrell of Georgia, John J. Sparkman of Alabama, and William B. Spong of Virginia.

Hollings speaks their language, knows their politics. No northerner or westerner could help them more. Certainly no eastern seaboard liberal. In addition, Hollings doesn't have to worry about the big industrial states where civil rights is a big issue and a Southerner could have a negative impact.

Political Sense

The other senators up for reelection are from states like Oklahoma, New Hampshire, Montana, Minnesota, Rhode Island, and West Virginia.

If the Senate Democrats have adopted a "Southern strategy," it makes, in this case, plenty of political sense.

It also makes a lot of sense for Hollings.

As chairman of the Senate Democratic Campaign Committee, Hollings will get more exposure to more party wheels in more states than he has before despite his long political career.

And Hollings is not a man without ambitions of his own. The speculation that the Democrats, after naming a liberal from the North or West for their presidential candidate, may turn South for a running-mate has not escaped Hollings. It's a long shot but Hollings will be at the convention in 1972.

What would the Democrats get?

Mexican-Americans Opens 4-Day Confab

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Mexican-Americans opened a four-day conference hoping to draw attention of the Nixon administration to federal programs which have passed them by.

The gathering of Mexican-Americans from 15 states is designed "to focus attention on the Chicago (Mexican-American) at the national level," Manuel Fierro of Garden City, Kan., one of the organizers, said.

"We don't have adequate representation at the local level. But federal programs in all agencies have excluded the Chicano and have perpetuated the same situation as local officials have created. We don't want to be anglicized. We want programs relevant to us. Local officials have not been responsive."

The conference delegates will hear from federal officials—largely from the anti-poverty agency and the department of health, education and welfare, then will write reports for presentation to the agencies.

"We want to reach President Nixon and voice our concern through the agencies," Fierro said. "The Nixon policies have not been aware of the educational level or income level of the Chicano. They haven't listened to the report on civil rights in the Southwest or to the migrant reports."

What The Lawmakers Are Saying

AUSTIN (UPI)—What the lawmakers are saying:

Former San Antonio narcotics agent Jerry Rangel, speaking to a joint session of the legislature:

"There is no such thing as an old addict. There are only young ones. At 30 years old you are old in the drug world. The rest die off."

Rep. David Finney, D-Fort Worth, on the House's refusal to take up the college bond bill because it violated a technicality in House rules:

"Let's quit fooling around and get on with the business of the House."

Rep. Neil Caldwell, D-Alvin, arguing for committee action on a resolution inviting top government leader: "to explain their roles in a multimillion dollar stock scandal: "I am giving them the opportunity to regain the confidence that has thus far been irretrievably lost."

Rep. R. B. McAlister, D-Lubbock, commenting on Caldwell's resolution which was sent to a "deep freeze" subcommittee: "First we must ask ourselves if such a forum would benefit the people of Texas, or redundantly be the basis of another sensational news story."

Rep. R. C. Nichols, D-Houston, explaining his proposal to give auto insurance premium deductions to drivers who complete driver education courses:

"My bill would expand this coverage to all drivers, make it a required practice for all insurance companies, and in addition, put an end to discriminatory cancellation of auto insurance policies for people over 65."

Rep. Richard Slack, D-Pecos, on his bill to allow the University of Texas and Texas Tech to issue up to $185 million in tuition-backed revenue bonds for construction of eight new colleges and medical schools:

"In essence we are just borrowing against the general revenue fund and spreading it out over the next 30 years."

Rep. Frances Farenthold, D-Corpus Christi, on Slack's bill:

"This is no more than another device to postpone a responsible tax bill."

Rep. James Cole, D-Greenville on his bill to let first time teenage marijuana offenders wipe their slates clean:

"What I'm trying to do is provide a bridge until we can decide if the penalty should be reduced to a misdemeanor or retained as a felony."

Sen. Barbara JorCan, D-Houston, on her bill to establish a commission on status of women:

"We'd like to have some say in how we are helped."

Yoga Becomes Popular Exercise Of VIPs In Washington

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Leading Washington women and men are turning to yoga as the answer to life's hectic pressures. It's the new "in" thing with the beautiful people.

Their teacher is an exotic, graceful Indian woman, Savitri Ahuja, wife of a former diplomat, who has a waiting list of VIPs for her classes in the ancient art of exercises for the body and mind.

It's not all standing on your head, as some may think. Mrs. Ahuja, who also is a professional Indian dancer, has a number of students from officialdom.

Mrs. Muskie is a Student
One is Mrs. Edmund Muskie, wife of the Maine senator who stands as the front runner in the polls to oppose President Nixon in 1972.

The wives of several other senators, socialites as well as career women, attend the classes, all wearing leotards, in the studio of Mrs. Ahuja's home.

She also has a number of male students and a special class for couples. "Everyone in Washington is so up tight and tense," explained one yoga pupil. "This is a way to relax." Many sign up to slim down, but the main emphasis is on relieving stress and renewing energy.

Mrs. Muskie says when she finishes a class "I have the energy to do things."

Yoga Calms

"They come to me for health and beauty," says the Bombay-born Hindu teacher. "Some even want to put on weight. Some want to look young. Many come to find peace of mind."

"Yoga is not like the Western system of exercise which uses up energy. In yoga you renew yourself. It calms a person."

She helps many of her students to overcome back troubles and arthritic pains through exercises for the spine. "The spine is life," she says. "Breathing is another important factor in yoga. You don't learn yoga," she explained, "you experience it. And it helps you know your body better than you ever knew before."

Three Army Enlisted Men Indicted For Damaging Electric Substation

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A federal grand jury Thursday indicted three Army enlisted men on charges of blowing up an electric substation and damaging the water reservoir at Camp McCoy, Wis., last July 26.

Attorney General John N. Mitchell announced that a four-count indictment was returned in U.S. District Court at Madison, Wis. It was believed to be the first instance of soldiers being allegedly involved in recent bombing incidents.

Named were Spec. 4 Stephen G. Geden, 21, of Milton, Mass.; Spec. 4 Dannie E. Kreps, 21, of Torrance County, Calif.; and Spec. 4 Thomas M. Chase, 21, Glenrock, N.J.

The three are stationed at Ft. Carson, Colo., the government said.

They had been temporarily assigned to Camp McCoy last July to reopen the base for summer training for National Guardsmen and Army reservists.

The indictment alleged that the three soldiers conspired with one William B. Powers about July 10, 1970, to bomb military facilities at the camp. Powers, who was not further identified, was named as a co-conspirator but not as a defendant.

Kreps and Chase were accused of stealing explosives from the Overgaard Quarry near LaCrosse, Wis., on July 22, 1970.

The soldiers were charged in separate counts with using destructive devices to damage government property and to commit a felony, and with possessing unregistered destructive devices.

The maximum penalties upon conviction for conspiracy are five years in prison and a $10,000 fine. The penalty for using destructive devices to damage government property is 10 years and $10,000.

Conviction for using destructive devices to commit a felony carries a penalty of one to 10 years, while possessing unregistered destructive devices carries a maximum penalty of 10 years and $10,000.

Wall Street Chatter

The administration intends to succeed itself in 1971 and is pulling out all stops, Edward A. Viner & Co., Inc., says. However, the company adds that with optimism there is "a tendency to chase rainbows" and urges investors to "select commitments carefully." The company believes the market is ripe for "a minor correction" and suggests investors prepare to take advantage of more attractive price levels. "Business is not as good as the stock market, in fact, it is not good at all," W.E. Hutton & Co. says. However, the company notes that "there's nothing unusual about stocks anticipating with more enthusiasm" than is reflected elsewhere. The company says the market may be helped by the sour business news likely to come in the weeks ahead because "it probably will make the administration... even more anxious to implement recovery measures." Although the market hasn't given up much ground it seems to have lost much of its upward momentum, according to E. F. Hutton & Co. The company says a "stalemate" seems to be in effect with many issues still strong and others encountering substantial overhead resistance. Hutton advises a "somewhat less aggressive buying policy" and says it is "not averse to taking profits."

AT EASE for a change, Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield (D-Mont.), usually a figure of quiet but commanding authority piloting legislation through Congress, props feet on desk for a moment of relaxation.

Slingshot Works For Hamilton In Daytona

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (UPI)—The "slingshot" worked for Pete Hamilton but Buddy Baker was unable to pull off the same trick Thursday during two furious 125-mile sprints to fill out the field for Sunday's $203,500 Daytona 500.

Hamilton, the 28-year-old defending champion, took advantage of the drafting maneuver coming off the final turn in his 1971 Plymouth for a one-foot victory over A. J. Foyt in the first qualifying race.

Baker, in a 1971 Dodge, attempted to overtake David Pearson's 1969 Mercury by using the same trick on the final lap in the second race, but was forced to back off when he came upon slower cars.

The victories gave Hamilton the No. 3 starting position for Sunday's race with Pearson gaining the No. 4 spot. Foyt had already secured the pole position in his 1971 Mercury with a qualifying speed of 182.744 miles per hour last Saturday with Bobby Isaac earning the No. 2 spot in a 1971 Dodge with the second fastest qualifying mark.

The final big weekend of speed weeks at the Daytona International Track continued today with the Citrus 250 for Grand American Cars and the Inver House Grand Prix for Open Cockpit Formula Ford Cars, both over the 3.81-mile road course. The Permatex 300 Late Model Sportsman Race will be held Saturday over the 2.5-mile tri-oval.

250 Superstars Are Drawn To Los Angeles Times Meet

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI)—A fair sampling of the world's greatest track and field stars test their speed and stamina tonight at the 12th annual Los Angeles Times indoor games.

Included in the internationally-famed performers were 13 world record holders representing 14 countries as some 250 athletes compete in the star-studded meet at the Forum.

The Soviet Union was to be represented by nine athletes including sprinter Valery Borzov, middle distance star Yevgeniy Arzhanov, triple jump champion Viktor Saneyev and high jumper Kestutis Sapka.

In addition to Saneyev, the olympic champions appearing include pole vaulter Bob Seagen, shot putter Randy Matson, hurdler Willie Davenport, middle distance runner Ralph Evans of the United States and Australia's distance star Ralph Doubell.

Doubell will defend his 1,000 yard indoor record against a field that numbers Arzhanov and U.S. champion Tom Von Rueden.

As customary, one of the highlights of the meet will be the two-mile event in which Australians Kerry O'Brien and Kerry Pearce compete against the veteran U.S. campaigner George Young.

The Times mile drew another outstanding field that includes Henryk Szordykowski of Poland, Mikhail Zhelezovskiy of Russia, Dick Quax of New Zealand and U.S. competitors, John Mason, Chuck La Benz and Sam Bair.

Tascosa Rebels Are Looking For Upset Victory Over Harvesters

Pampa and Palo Duro are tied for district honors and tonight may be the tie breaker as the Tascosa Rebels will be playing host to the Harvesters and Palo Duro will be playing the Borger Bulldogs.

The Bulldogs upset the Harvesters 55 to 53 a week ago while Palo Duro was upsetting Tascosa. The Harvesters will be playing a tough game tonight as the stakes are the district title or at least a share of the laurels.

The Pampa victory over Caprock Tuesday night may have been the stage setting for a march on the district title as Caprock had just bounced back from slipping by the Dons and the Rebels.

The first half of district play ended in a four way tie to prove the old adage true that on any given night any team can defeat another team regardless of standings or power ratings.

The Rebels have had worse luck on their home court than on the road as one defeat came against Palo Duro and then two wins against Amarillo and Pampa.

The Harvesters are being led in scoring by long, tall Mike Edgar with a 14.8 average for the year and a 17.0 average for the season. Richard Bunton isn't far behind however, as he has 13.9 for the season and 13.2 for league action.

Bunton and Edgar team up on the court for a fantastic showing of rebounding and shooting in each and every one of the Harvesters' encounters.

Against Caprock Edgar ripped off 18 points with 16 of these coming on tosses from the charity line. Bunton had 18 points against Caprock and kept the other Harvesters busy shooting from his set-ups.

The Rebels hold a slight margin over the Harvesters in season play as they now hold a 15-11 record while the Pampa team boasts a 15-13 tally.

Victories tonight by Pampa or Palo Duro will push them closer to the final prizes but a loss MONTREAL (UPI)—Joe Sparma, who lost all four of his decisions with Montreal last year before being shipped to the minors, has been sold by the Expos to the Detroit Tigers.

Sparma, a 29-year-old right-hander, was acquired by Montreal from the Tigers in December, 1969. His contract was sold Thursday by the Expos' farm at Winnipeg to Detroit's affiliate at Toledo.

PHILADELPHIA (UPI)—Tenth-seeded Dennis Ralston of the United States upset fourth-seeded Tony Roche 7-5, 6-4 Thursday and knocked him out of the $62,500 Philadelphia Indoor Tennis championship.

Ralston in peak form with his service, drive and overheads, came back from 0-3 to take the opening set. The loss knocked Roche out of the single elimination tournament.

Ralston got to 6-5 on Roche's double fault and carried the set in the next game when the Australian scored into the net. The only service breakthrough in the second set came on another double fault by Roche in the third game of the second set.

sively, 6-7, 7-5, 30-15, retired, over left-handed Nikki Pilic of Yugoslavia, seeded eleventh. Pilic fell on the last point of the second set, injuring his left hand. He retired after three points of the third set.

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI)—A new telephone-linked computer system can give doctors anywhere in the country a speedy, complete diagnosis of a patient's condition based on electrocardiogram readings.

The Boeing Co. has developed the method especially to conduct routine physical examinations in industrial clinics and hospitals.

Dr. Larry Mellon, who runs the computer center in Philadelphia, said the high speed service "could definitely save lives" of persons needing prompt medical attention but who are unaware of it.

"The computers won't think for the physician, but they can greatly reduce his workload in this application," Mellon said in a telephone interview. "In fact, the computer tends to 'over-read' We have an awful lot of information."

He said the computer hookup gives at least half of the time typically required to process an ECG. The results would be back to the physician within a few hours of the original tests, he said.

"The computer reads the tests in about 30 seconds and then it is just a matter of the printout," Mellon said.

He added the method could be useful particularly in handling large numbers of routine physical examinations, spotting the borderline and disqualified cases and passing the remainder quickly.

"It definitely could save lives because we are offering speedy, accurate and uniform readings, diagnoses and data," the doctor said.

Thus far, Boeing serves three large medical bureaus and clinics in the East, the Medical Service Bureau in Philadelphia being $8,500, and has about 20 proposals out to hospitals around the country.

Foreign News Commentary

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst
It could be, as the Taipei police department says, that a gas leak caused the explosion the Taipei office of the Bank of America.

Less likely to be attributed to accident were the rocks that broke windows in the U.S. embassy's consular section on the second floor of a downtown commercial building.

As a close friend of World War II days and an exposed forward defense country on the perimeter of Asia, Nationalist China has become used to special treatment from the United States. In other lands, Yankees frequently were invited to go home. Not so on Nationalist China's island of Formosa.

Times May Be Changing
It comes as something of a shock, then, that times may be changing.

In Taipei, uneasiness over the United States' future attitude toward Red China is accompanied by a rising anti-American sentiment.

Officials complain that the United States does not fill them in on how far it intends to go in making up to the Chinese Communists.

They mistrust what appears to be a growing advocacy among U.S. officials of a two-China policy.

And as evidence to support this growing mistrust they point to elimination of regular U.S. Navy patrols in the Taiwan strait, the easing of the trade embargo against Red China and what they regard as a growing tendency in the United States to withdraw behind the ramparts of Fortress America.

Military Aid Continues

In the years since World War II the Republic of China has received $2.7 billion in U.S. military aid, and in 1968 still received $117 million.

In fiscal 1969-70 the figure fell off to $25 million, most of it going to the expenses of the U.S. military advisory group.

Even so, the Nationalists have not been doing badly, either in the matter of continued U.S. military aid or in their island's economic growth.

To the surprise of many and consternation of some in the U.S. Congress a foreign aid subcommittee hearing last year led to disclosure that the United States secretly had presented to the Nationalist Chinese aircraft, naval vessels, tanks, rifles and anti-aircraft missiles worth $157 million in 1969.

With the help of U.S. aid and through the considerable industry of its own people, per capita income has doubled in a decade.

Catholic Priest Refuses To Be Quizzed By Jury On Kidnap Plot

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI)—Although granted total immunity from prosecution, a Roman Catholic priest and a divorced mother of three Thursday refused to answer questions posed by a federal grand jury investigating an alleged kidnap-bomb plot.

The Rev. J. William Michelman of Baltimore, and Mrs. Patricia Chanel, 41, Silver Spring, Md., both risked contempt of court citations for refusing to respond to the grand jury's questions.

Michelman, who had refused to testify before the panel last month, said Thursday "priestly confidence was my base for the rejoinders." He had been asked seven questions by the grand jury in his one-hour appearance.

"The time was filled with the questions, and a dialogue about the seal of confidence and priestly trust," Michelman said.

"It was an educational session for those unfamiliar with priestly confidentiality."

"I explained it and they seemed to comprehend. But it's hard to tell from faces."

Mrs. Chanel, who had refused to respond to the panel's questions Wednesday, said after Thursday's appearance:

"I did not answer questions. Some of them I would not dignify with an answer."

Other witnesses who had been offered immunity to testify before the grand jury answered the panel's questions.

Michelman was the first priest to refuse to answer although a Roman Catholic nun, Sister Jogues Egan of Tarrytown, N.Y., was cited for contempt last month and jailed for four days for refusing to respond.

She was ordered released from jail when her attorney filed an appeal with the U.S. Third Circuit Court in Philadelphia on grounds the immunity laws were unconstitutional. A ruling on the appeal is pending.

To date six persons have been indicted by the grand jury
