Legislator Breaks Filibuster Record

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — A longwinded, snuff chewing legislator talked his way to a world filibuster record Sunday with a grueling 29 hour, 22 minute stand that apparently killed the legislation he opposed.

Sen. Don Kennard, D-Fort Worth, said he could have continued the talkathon but sat down at 9:50 p.m. when he learned he had enough support to block the passage of a proposal that would have changed the University of Texas in Dallas from an upper-level to a four year college.

The talkathon broke a world record set by former Texas State Sen. Kilmer Corbin of Lubbock who talked for 28 hours and 15 minutes straight in 1955.

Former Oregon Sen. Wayne Morse holds the congressional record of 22 hours, 26 minutes. Spectators lined the Senate galleries to watch Kennard's endurance feat and laugh at his joke-filled dialogue.

Even the sponsor of the legislation, Sen. Ralph Hall, D-Rockwall, joined in the tributes to the Fort Worth senator when he broke the Corbin record at 8:44 p.m.

Following a Texas tradition that calls for the sponsor of a filibustered bill to present something to his opponent whenever a talkathon record is set, Hall handed Kennard a $100 bill.

The Rockwall senator said he hoped the money would be enough to convince Kennard to shut up and sit down.

But Kennard refused to budge in his opposition to Hall's bill and finally got two senators who had voted earlier for the proposal to switch sides.

The bill was tentatively approved on a 19-11 vote, but Hall was unable to get the necessary two-thirds majority to suspend the rules and consider final passage.

Hall refused to concede defeat outright, saying he would try to recoup and make another run before the legislature adjourns at midnight today.

Kennard, however, would have another go at talking the bill to death then.

The Fort Worth senator complained a four year Dallas school would compete with the University of Texas at Arlington in his district, and other established institutions in the areas.

Solons Expected To Okay Budget, Redistricting Bills

Judge Welcomes Residents To Be Present At Meet

Gray County Judge Don Cain said that he would like to see voters present for the commission meeting scheduled at 10 a.m. tomorrow in the County Courtroom.

The top item on the seven-item agenda is re-opening discussion on redistricting Gray County precincts.

No vote is expected to be in order at tomorrow's meeting, according to Cain.

However, he said, this is a matter of major concern for all residents.

Redistricting attempts were rejected by the court in 1969.

Federal rulings have set up an equalization of voter representation in the nation.

A commissioner elected by at-large votes or the practice of gerrymandering the precincts, are two possible methods of complying with the rule. A third, that is remotely possible, according to the judge is dividing precincts again, adding to the number of commissioners.

The court now is made up of one representative from each of four precincts, elected by the electorate in the resident precinct.

At-large voting of commissioners would throw all commission candidates open for approval by all county voters.

The 1970 Federal census lists 26,949 residents in Gray County with about 21,000 of those people residing in Pampa.

HONORING WAR DEAD — The Veterans of Foreign Wars, American Legion and auxiliaries placed flags at the graves of veterans in Pampa today at sunrise. Special services were conducted at Memory Gardens and Fairview Cemetery for the veterans who had served their country. Texas Legislature To Close Tonight

AUSTIN (UPI) — Texas legislators, weary from five straight nights of midnight sessions, faced last minute votes today on a record $7.1 billion budget and redistricting bills as the turbulent 62nd Legislature struggled toward adjournment.

Leaders of both Houses were unanimous in predicting all the required work would be completed before the 140 day regular session runs out at midnight. But Speaker Gus Mutscher admitted the final votes on the major budget and redistricting bills in the House may come within a few hours — or perhaps minutes — of the final gavel.

The budget compromise, worked out in a 10-man conference committee, is by far the biggest in the state's history, and requires an estimated $700 million in new taxes that Texans will begin paying in July.

The bulk of those new levies have already been signed into law. A liquor tax bill, however, was among those bills expected to be pushed through in the closing hours of the session.

Both Houses of the legislature overcame delaying tactics Sunday night and hammered away at a flood of routine bills. House debate was stalled for three Sunday by the "Dirty 30" who attempted to kill 102 bills at one swipe in an effort to convince senators to block the House redistricting bill.

Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes finally adjourned the Senate shortly after 10 p.m. But the House worked on past midnight. It was fifth straight night one house or the other had stayed in session until midnight to handle a logjam of legislation.

Regardless of action today, the 62nd Legislature will go down in history as the "taxingest" session in the history of the state. The biggest previous tax bill in Texas annals was a $365 million measure approved in 1969. The 1971 tax bill may double that figure.

The session was ending as it began — in turbulence — as armed officers appeared Sunday in the House chamber while member of the "Dirty 30" deliberately killed off the 102 Senate bills. The atmosphere was tense, but was nothing to compare with the emotions of Friday night when fistfights almost broke out and the session was finally adjourned because of a bomb threat.

The session was under a cloud from the very outset as Mutscher and half a dozen of his cohorts were named in a U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission stock manipulation suit filed one week after the lawmakers convened.

FOUR INCHES FOR YEAR

Pampa Gets .33 Inch Of Rainfall In 2 Days

The first measurable rainfall since April fell in the Pampa area late Saturday and early Sunday. The .33 inch boosted the total rainfall for the year to a little over four inches, or just about half the normal rainfall, according to Deryl Sehorn, official observer for the U.S. Weather Bureau.

No measurable rain was recorded here in January and the 27 inches of snow that fell in February and March rainfall totaled .50 inches and the .33 inch that fell over the weekend boosted the total for May to .41 inches.

Eight-tenths of an inch had fallen earlier May, but was measured in traces.

The welcome relief from drought conditions came about midnight and continued through most of the night.

Thunderstorms moving into the Panhandle were dotted with reported tornadoes, none of which caused any reported damage.

Reports of sightings were made in Amarillo early Sunday. Later sightings were made from the Panhandle Pantex area and still another near Lake Meredith as the line of clouds moved over the Top O' Texas.

A heavy fog and mist moved into the Pampa area about 11 p.m. Saturday, causing a cut in visibility for travelers. Strong southerly winds moved the wall of mist and fog much like blowing snow causing hazardous driving conditions for several hours before the electrical and auditory effects of the storm became evident.

Letors reported .30 inch of rain as a result of the night of wind, thunder and lightning that caused more than one resident to eye the dark mist-shrouded skies with concern. Strong winds continued to sweep the area until daylight Sunday.

The forty percent chance for additional showers forecast by the U.S. Weather Bureau failed to materialize yesterday, and skies cleared by midmorning as a prelude to a clear day just right for holiday picnics and a day in the sun.

Yuba City Deputies Widen Search For More Victims

YUBA CITY, Calif. (UPI)—Mass murder suspect Juan V. Corona ate a steak dinner and visited with his family and a lawyer in his new jail Sunday while authorities widened their search for possibly more victims.

In 10 days, sheriff's deputies have unearthed 23 bodies of brutally slain itinerant farm workers from crude graves along the serene Feather River in this agricultural area 125 miles northeast of San Francisco. It is the greatest crime in history involving individual "murder by stealth."

The 22nd and 23rd bodies were found Saturday but none were uncovered Sunday despite an increase in the force of diggers from 15 to 25 men.

Sutter County Sheriff Roy Whiteaker said the search would be expanded to "one or two" adjacent ranches Monday and would "continue for some time ... several days."

"I don't believe the end is in sight right now," he said. "I just believe there's more out there." He added some of the suspected grave sites were under water from a week of rain and "it will be at least a week under bright sun" before they can be excavated.

Pampa Residents Pay Homage To War Dead In Memorial Rite

Pampans joined with the rest of the nation today in paying Memorial Day tribute to those who died in the military and naval service of their country.

Local units of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, American Legion and their auxiliaries conducted special services in Memory Gardens and Fairview Cemetery.

The Stars and Stripes were raised at sunrise above the graves of veterans in Pampa cemeteries as veterans organizations here honored the American war dead in observance of Memorial Day.

The sound of "Taps" drifted over the graves of the servicemen in the brisk morning breeze.

Residents were coming to Fairview and Memory Gardens by dawn to lay wreaths of honor on the graves of those buried there.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars raised the flags, each bearing a name plate of a veteran in Memory Gardens, forming a path of color for cemetery visitors and reminding passersby of the price paid by the men in uniform.

Picnics, camping, motorcycle riding and short vacations filled the day for most citizens as employees eligible for the Monday holiday enjoyed a week beginning with leisure.

People began coming to the cemeteries at dawn today to honor their dead. Wreaths and flowers were placed on civilian as well as military graves as the sunrise lighted the areas.

Bank services in Pampa were limited to Citizens Bank and Trust Co. First National Bank closed its doors for the observance as did the majority of businesses in Pampa.

Pampa school students attended classes on a regular schedule, making up a day lost because of inclement weather in February.

The long holiday weekend marked the first day of summer vacation for many. Most schools in the area closed Friday, and swimming pools, including Pampa's two Municipal pools went into summer operation schedule.

Threatening weather marred part of the day Sunday, but not enough to keep residents from city and area parks and recreation areas.

Memorial observances will end here at sundown when veterans organizations take down the honor flags at the cemeteries.

Texans Recount Frustrations In Attempt To See Reds In Paris

ERIAN, Tex. (UPI)—The Communist delegations to the Paris peace talks perhaps greet every American group interested in prisoners of war in the same manner: with a time consuming mixture of putoffs and come-ons.

That's how we were treated during our week in Paris.

We never met with either the North Vietnamese or the Viet Cong representatives. Twice we thought we would see the representatives, but they both fell through. In the end we had to come home.

We sent telegrams to the Vietnamese Communists, made

10 telephone calls and delivered petitions with more than 50,000 signatures to the North Vietnamese delegate general along with two personal letters from Mrs. Bobby Meyers of College Station, whose husband is a confirmed prisoner of war, and from Neal Ward of Bryan, whose son is missing in action.

Members of the delegation made two trips to the Viet Cong's peace talks representative Madam Nguyen Thi Binh's house, attempting to get an appointment.

I accompanied delegates Jim Wright, president of the Bryan-College Station Jaycees, Larry Locke, president of the Brazos County Texas A&M Former Students Club, John Sharp, president of the Texas A&M student senate, and Jack Cumpston, president of the Jaycees when the "On to Paris" project was started by the Jaycees.

We arrived in Paris Sunday, and went to the U. S. Embassy where an aide, Francis Cook, helped us get organized. She provided us with the names of the Communist representatives, and their telephones. Then she got us an interpreter who turned out to be invaluable, both for her language skills and her knowledge of the communists.

We met with our interpreter, Mrs. Yannick Majors, and planned.

We wrote down for her exactly what our proposals for the Communists were. After that, she did the talking with them over the phone and in person; she seldom had to confer with us other than to tell us what they were saying. She had done this before for other U. S. groups.

One of our first contacts was with an elderly French Communist working at the home of Madam Binh. We talked with him for about 30 minutes, but got nowhere. Mrs. Majors had told us most of the Communist representatives hire French Communists to act as buffers.

He told us, through Mrs. Majors, to "go home to America and tell Mr. Nixon to get the troops out of Southeast Asia. Then we will talk about the prisoners of war." We told him our government was not involved with our trip. We wanted to have a nonpolitical discussion.

He nodded his head and said he understood we were there for humanitarian reasons and if he could he would let us talk to Madam Binh. He said he had been a prisoner of the Germans during World War II.

Then he told us in a firm, final voice that Madam Binh gets many calls from American delegation. He told us to write her a letter.

"Madam Binh won't see you unless you have something new or interesting to talk about because everybody wants to talk about the prisoners of war," he said. He added a friend of Madam Binh's was staying at her house because the woman's husband was a prisoner of South Vietnam and had not been heard from in four years.

We left, but decided to try to use this friend to get us an appointment.

We wrote a two-page letter offering to find out from our government what happened to her friend's husband if she would let us in to talk with her. When we delivered the letter there were several men in the garden. The French spokesman who met us at the gate said nobody could meet with us because they were busy giving a party. The next day we called to get Madam Binh's answer and the spokesman said she had read the letter and refused our proposal. He said there was

Proposals For Cutting U.S. Gls In Europe To Be Ready In July

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Defense Secretary Melvin H. Laird says administration proposals for cutting U.S. troop strength in Europe will be complete in July.

Laird, speaking at a plane-side news conference Sunday upon his return from a week of NATO meetings in Europe, said the proposals would be submitted to the allies for discussion before any definite steps were taken.

Secretary of State William P. Rogers will be attending meetings of NATO foreign ministers in Lisbon Thursday and Friday. Further discussion of the Brezhnev overture was virtually certain there.

Mariner 9 Speeds Toward Mars For Closeup Look At Red Planet

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI)—Mariner 9 raced two distant Russian probes toward Mars today to orbit the planet, map its battered surface and search from its icy poles to dusty equator for clues of life.

Mariner 9 was operating on its own today, using the bright star Canopus as a celestial reference point along with the sun and the shrinking globe of earth. A central computer that can be cued from earth controlled routine operations.

Mariner 8 to destruction May 8, accelerating Mariner 9 to 24,500 miles per hour in 13 minutes to break earth's gravitational grip.

The American spacecraft trailed the farthest Soviet craft by more than 1 million miles, but still was given a chance of reaching Mars first. Officials called the accuracy of Mariner's course "fantastic."

Still ahead is an important course correction scheduled Saturday. It will compensate for a deliberate trajectory error programmed into Mariner's rocket to eliminate the possibility that the probe or the rocket would hit and contaminate Mars.

Dr. George M. Low, deputy Space Agency administrator, said Mariner 9's mission ranked second only to Apollo moonlights in importance to the agency this year. It marked the beginning of a planetary exploration program covering all eight other planets in 10 years.

Soviet commentators have hinted the heavy Mars 2 and Mars 3 spacecraft might land on Mars with biological sensors. Mariner will not be able to detect living things from orbit, but may turn up evidence indicating the existence of extraterrestrial life.

Of particular interest to scientists is a mysterious "wave of darkening" suggestive of vegetation moving with the seasons. Mariner 9 is designed to operate in Mars orbit for at least three months to watch for seasonal changes.

MIAMI (UPI)—Despite a direct appeal to Cuban Premier Fidel Castro from airline President Najeeb Halaby, a hijacked Pan American World Airways jetliner spent its second straight night in Havana Sunday with all 69 passengers and crewmen.

Woman Held In Shooting At Clarendon

CLARENDON—A 57-year-old housewife was arrested on a murder with malice charge here during the weekend following the Saturday shooting death of her husband, Bruce C. Gambill, 49, at the couple's home.

When we called Wednesday afternoon we told the woman that since she had not returned our calls we decided more action was necessary. We told her we decided to stay in Paris indefinitely or until they met with us.

Police activity over the weekend was limited to investigation of vandalism reports and domestic disturbances. A late Saturday call from J.D. Langwell, 521 N. Dwight alerted officers that a rent house located at 312 N. Doyle had been the scene of extensive vandalism.

Stock Market Quotations

To observe Memorial Day today, Amstar stock market offices which provide The News with Chicago Exchange Live Beef Cattle Futures and the New York stock market quotations were closed.

Mrs. Mary McCarty, 2020 Alcock, called Langwell shortly after 5 p.m. and told him that her son had smelled smoke when he walked down the alley behind the house.

Other activities in the festival include high school class reunions for graduates of 1921 and 1946 and a meeting of old timers at the American Legion Hall at 9 a.m. Saturday.

DOUBLE INDEMNITY — The cattle business is looking good to W. R. Combs, Lefors, these days. Friday noon, his herd had an unexpected increase when a nine-year-old Hereford, raised by the surprised cattlemen, became the mother of twin bull calves. It's the first time twin calves have been born in the Combs herd since 1951. However, it's the first time live twins have joined the ranks. Combs said of the twin ranks 20 years ago, only one calf lived out of the three sets born. (Staff Photo)

Rogers Defends Nixon's Program On U.S. Troop Pullout From Viet

HAMILTON, N.Y. (UPI)—Secretary of State William P. Rogers says President Nixon is getting the United States out of Vietnam and his program for winding the war down is "irreversible."

Rogers, in a commencement address Sunday at his alma mater Colgate University, defended the President's handling of the war despite demands from students last year that he resign from the university's board of trustees because of the Nixon administration's Vietnam policies.

"We are, of course, examining closely the implications of the treaty arrangements just announced between Egypt and the Soviet Union. The Soviets have been an important factor in the Middle East situation for some time, however, and it remains our judgment that we should persist in the policies we have been pursuing."

When Rogers began to speak, four students walked out of the hall. They returned when the secretary finished. The valedictorian, Thomas O'Brien, concentrated his speech on student opposition to the Indochina War. He pledged he would not serve in Vietnam if drafted, and read the names of 158 graduating students who took the same stand.

Rogers also said the United States was reviewing the possibility of a Middle East peace settlement in view of the 15-year friendship treaty signed by Egypt and the Soviet Union.

The secretary noted that he was leaving on a diplomatic mission to Europe to attend the NATO ministerial meeting in Lisbon scheduled June 3 and 4. He said he would consult there on a new initiative to accelerate the movement towards negotiated reduction of Western and Communist forces in Central Europe.

Southern Baptists To Gather In St. Louis

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI)—More than 15,000 Baptists will gather in St. Louis this week for the 114th meeting of the Southern Baptist Convention, the nation's largest Protestant denomination.

The Southern Baptists number about 11,600,000 in 34,000 churches in the 50 states. The meeting begins Tuesday morning and ends at noon Thursday.

Funeral services for Mrs. Frances E. McClelland, 55, will be held at 4 p.m. Tuesday at Harvester and Mary Ellen Church of Christ with Jack Pape, officiating.

Pampa Boy Wounded By Glass At Park

A nine-year-old Pampa boy, Mark Helfer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Helfer, 701 N. Russell, was treated by a local physician after an accident at Central Park yesterday.

The boy's parents told police that the child was wading in the pool at Central Park when he stepped on a piece of glass. Several sutures were required to close the wound, according to a report given police by the complainants.

Funeral services for Mrs. Sarah Pearl Anthony, 83, will be held at 10 a.m. Tuesday in Dukenel Funeral Home Chapel with Nat Lunsford, officiating. Burial will be in Memory Gardens Cemetery.

3,600 More Americans Withdrawn From South Vietnam Last Week

SAIGON (UPI) — U.S. Command spokesmen announced that 3,600 more Americans were withdrawn from the war zone last week, leaving 255,700 U.S. servicemen in South Vietnam. This was the lowest figure since March 31, 1966, when there were 231,200.

Twelve civilians were killed and 11 wounded early Sunday when Communist troops sent 13 rounds of 122mm rockets into Da Nang. Eight of the rockets hit the Da Nang Air Base but no casualties or damage were reported there.

A U.S. Army OH6 observation helicopter was shot down Sunday over Kompong Cham province in Cambodia and military sources said three allied choppers were downed during the weekend near Snuol, Cambodia, but no casualties were reported in any of the incidents.

Reportedly, North Vietnamese troops fleeing from a battle plunged into a throng of 60,000 Roman Catholics visiting a shrine near Da Nang Sunday. Some of the pilgrims were caught in a crossfire between the Communists and the pursuing South Vietnamese.

The World's Biggest Toy

It is what some call a huge polyethylene bag added to the California landscape near San Luis by architectural design students. Also known as the "space pillow" — maybe because it looks like nothing else on earth — its purpose is experimentation with new design ideas. But it also is a lot of fun. Below, collapsed bag is laid out for inflating by fun to 50-foot length, below left. Small ventilation holes control air escape, preventing rapid collapse. Bottom, class comes to order inside.

Death Has Become Growth Industry In U.S.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Death has become a growth industry in the United States. After remaining fairly static for nearly 40 years, the mortality trend has turned sharply upward. The Deputy Chief Actuary of the Social Security Administration has projected 2.297 million deaths annually by 1980, more than 20 per cent higher than the number of recorded deaths during 1970. Those grim statistics represent a growing market for the services of the $2 billion licensed funeral service business. While burials conducted at public expense average between $300 and $400, others run as high as $25,000. The average funeral cost in the U.S. runs from $1,200 to $1,500. During the decade of the 1960s the funeral business grew about 4 per cent per year. It is expected to grow about 5 per cent a year during this decade and hit the $3-billion volume figure by 1980. The funeral service business still is essentially "family operated." Last year, no single funeral company accounted for more than 1 per cent of the industry's volume. However, as in other fragmented industries, there has been a trend toward larger, multi-unit operations. Some 35 per cent, or 8,000 of the 25,000 licensed funeral homes currently operating in the U.S. and Canada, now handle 70 per cent of the total annual volume. The growth factor has made the funeral business look more and more toward public ownership. Among the leaders in the movement are Kinney National Services, Inc. of New York; International Funeral Services, Inc. (IFS) a Des Moines, Iowa firm whose stock was listed May 19 on the American Exchange; Oakridge Holding, Inc. of Chicago (OTC); Service Corporation International on the AMEX; Funeral Homes of America, Dallas; Baird Case Co., of Florida; and Margrom Service Corp. IFS, which has been operational only since April, 1967, already includes approximately 60 funeral service centers in the U.S. and another 15 in Canada.

REPORT SAYS

Winter Wheat Crop Much Below Normal

The Santa Fe Crop Report issued for June 1 states the condition of winter wheat in non-irrigated areas of Texas, the western one-half of Oklahoma, in New Mexico and in a few counties of Southwest Kansas and parts of Southeast Colorado is generally much below normal with many farmers plowing up their crop or "grazing it out."

A considerable part of this abandoned wheat acreage will be planted to grain sorghums if sufficient moisture is received by late June. In the remainder of Kansas, most of eastern Colorado, eastern Oklahoma and in Nebraska and the states to the east and north the 1971 winter wheat crop is generally in good condition.

Damage from disease and insects generally has been light except in a few small areas. Freezing temperatures during the second week of May, when record low temperatures for so late in the season occurred, could have caused some damage to the wheat crop from southwest Kansas and southeast Colorado into the Oklahoma and Texas Panhandles. Development of the crop is generally about normal for this time of the year, with harvest underway on the few remaining fields in the Oklahoma-Texas portion of the Red River Valley.

Because of the improved conditions of the wheat crop during the last month in much of eastern Colorado and in most of Kansas, in spite of the continued decline in condition in much of Oklahoma, Texas and New Mexico and the possibility of freeze damage, the five states of Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, Colorado and New Mexico can possibly produce a total of 418 million bushels this year from an estimated 16,307,000 acres. A 1970 crop of almost 535 million bushels was harvested from 17,657,000 acres.

TERRORIST KILLED
PHNOM PENH (UPI)—A terrorist trying to attack a brigade headquarters in Phnom Penh was killed late Tuesday night by guards and by his own explosives. An unidentified man and a comrade were within a few feet of the gate of the 7th Infantry Brigade headquarters when they were challenged by guards. When they did not identify themselves the guards began shooting, police said. One man was found dead amid several exploded detonator caps police said, and the other escaped.

Strangers to this town in southern India were startled Friday to see a procession of about 80 nude women carrying lamps on their heads file along the banks of a stream during the early morning hours. A Fable of Our Time

Once upon a time there was a man who lived by the side of the road and sold hot dogs.

He had trouble hearing so he had no radio. He had trouble seeing so he had no television and he read no newspapers. But he sold good hot dogs.

He put signs up on the highway telling how good they were. He stood on the side of the road and cried, "Buy a hot dog, mister." And people bought.

He increased his meat and bun orders. He bought a bigger stove to take care of his trade.

He finally got his son home from college to help him. But then something happened.

His son said, "Father, haven't you been reading the newspapers? There's a big recession on. The Indochina and Middle-East situation is terrible. The domestic situation is worse. Everything's going to pot."

Whereupon the father thought, "Well, my son's been to college, so he reads the paper and he ought to know."

So the father cut down on his meat and bun orders, took down his advertising signs and no longer bothered to stand out on the highway to sell his hot dogs. And his hot dog sales fell almost overnight.

You're right, my son," the man said to the boy. "We certainly are in the middle of a great recession."

$11.5 Million Budget OK'd For West Texas

CANYON —The West Texas State University Board of Regents has approved an $11,549,179 operating budget for fiscal 1971 but provided for no across-the-board faculty salary increases. The budget was adopted although the Texas Legislature has yet to appropriate funds for higher education in the state for the fiscal year beginning Sept. 1. The House version of the appropriations bill calls for no pay increases for faculty members.

Dr. James P. Cornette, university president, told the regents the budget "is within the estimated income of the university." The budget as submitted to the board compares to $10,636,390 approved for the current fiscal year. More than 50 per cent of the proposed budget, $6.3 million, is earmarked for salaries. The next largest expenditure is $4.3 million for maintenance and operations.

The appointment of new deans of the College of Arts and Sciences and the School of Business also was approved by the board. Dr. Eldon C. Lewis, 37, associate dean of the College of Business Administration at Wichita State University, was named dean of the School of Business, succeeding Dr. C. C. Callarman, 66, who retired after 15 years as dean.

Dr. Theodore D. Freidell, 44, associate professor of history at University of Missouri-Kansas City, was appointed dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, replacing Dr. Ray A. Malzahn, 42, who becomes academic vice president.

The board approved faculty and staff appointments for the 1971-72 year, including 12 new members of the teaching and library faculty.

The retirements of W. Mitchell Jones, 70, a member of the College of Education faculty since 1926 and a former dean of men, and Mrs. Evelyn Frieze, 65, an instructor in English since 1955, were accepted by the regents. One of two high-rise dormitories under construction has been named in honor of Mitch Jones. It also was announced that Dr. Robert C. Busted, 63, asked to step down as head of the department of biology, a position he has held since 1948. He will continue as a professor of biology. No successor has been named.

In another departmental change, Dr. Philip J. Gensler, 32, will become head of the department of computer information systems in the School of Business. He will succeed L. Durwood Henderson, 39, who will continue as associate professor and director of the Computer Center.

The regents authorized the university to enter into cooperative agreements with

More than 1,500 pounds of flour, cereal products, sugar, potatoes, fats, oils and eggs are consumed annually by the average American family of four.

The assets of American agriculture equal about half the market value of all U.S. corporations listed in the New York Stock Exchange.

Texas A&M University and Texas Tech University for graduate programs in agriculture.

The agreement with Texas Tech would call for a cooperative Master of Science Degree in Animal Science and that with Texas A&M would be for a Master of Science in Plant Science.

"The purpose of this cooperative plan is to offer a superior program of graduate study in agriculture by bringing together the facilities and facilities of these two universities," Dr. Cornette said.

Army 'Sin-Buster' Says War Totally Immoral

FIREBASE RIFLE, Vietnam (UPI)—Jimmy Young, alias "Sin-buster," was fast asleep in his foxhole curled up on a camouflage poncho, when the first mortar round shook the orange earth around him.

The 36-year-old Springfield, Mo., Army captain, rubbed his hazel eyes, buttoned his jungle fatigues and stood up in dusty combat boots.

In the light of the exploding mortars it was just possible to make out the cross on his left lapel and the Bible bulging inside his right breast pocket.

"When you're in a situation like that you don't have a chance to pull out seven textbooks on morality to decide what to do," said Chaplain

Young, who prefers to be called Chap, or Sin-Buster.

He did just about everything but pull a trigger to turn back a Communist attack the other night against U.S. Army engineers building Firebase Riffe on a mountaintop 15 miles southeast of Hue.

Chap won a Silver Star from the Army for his efforts, but he's not so sure how churchmen back home will take to a man of God leading troops in battle.

Conscience is clear

"I feel I acted right," he said, crossing his legs and puffing on a filter-tip cigarette. "My conscience is clear. If what I did was morally wrong then God will be my judge."

Sin-Buster talked with his hands, his eyes and his face. His closely cropped black hair was graying, but he still had a boyish grin.

"Why did I do it?" he said. "I don't know for sure. Maybe I can explain it by telling a story about when my daughter was two or three years old. I saw this rattlesnake near her and there wasn't enough time to yell out. I did the only thing I could. I ran my lawnmower over it."

Chap stumbled out of his foxhole just before midnight into a night lit up by explosions and tracer rounds. A soldier limped toward him, blood rushing from his face, back and arms.

"Over here," the GI said, pointing to American bunkers 50 yards away. "They need help there. You better hurry."

Communists killed by the base's defenders.

"Don't get the idea I'm some sort of Patton of the Chaplain Corps," he said. "I believe war is totally immoral. I don't see anything right about it. But a soldier's job is to fight and my job is to have him do what he's trained to do."

Scientist's Hot Water Pick Speeds Up Time Needed To Cut Arctic Ice

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI)—A hot water pick that cuts through Arctic ice almost as if it were butter has been developed by a University of Washington scientist on ice island T-3 about 250 miles from the North Pole.

Robert E. Francois, a senior engineer of the university's Applied Physics Laboratory, returned to Seattle after spending three weeks on the ice island floating in the Arctic Sea and reported his hot water ice pick could dig a 15-foot-deep hole 4 feet square in a matter of hours whereas conventional methods would take several days to accomplish the same feat.

Francois said he was assisted by Elbert Pence, a senior physicist, in developing the pick which consists of a hot water circulation system. Francois drilled small holes in the under side of a distribution manifold of steel tubing to provide the "cutting" edge.

Water heated on a Colman stove is pumped into the manifold through a rubber hose. The multiple holes in the manifold distribute the hot water evenly, melting the ice along the line to be cut.

The water is recirculated through the system, reheated and reused until the job is done.

By this method, Francois explained, a solid pillar of ice can be cut down to the water. The pillar is pushed under the surrounding ice sheet to provide access to the water.

The normal method is to excavate the hole with a chain saw, cutting a few feet at a time. The ice then is chipped out, piece by piece, and removed from the top.

The ice hole digger is a spin-off of an advanced Arctic technology project of the university's Division of Marine Resources. The program is financed by the Advanced Research Project Agency of the U.S. government.

Production Set For Palo Duro This Summer

CANYON—A new stage production is planned for September and October this year.

In the open-air amphitheater of Palo Duro Canyon State Park.

The play, "They Came From Spain," will follow the regular summer run of the popular "Texas" production which ends in August.

"They Came From Spain" opens Sept. 2, directed by Eddie Thomas, a member of the speech department of El Centro College in Dallas.

A fund raising campaign netted $66,000 in underwriting to produce the show, which will play on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday evenings. There also will be Sunday evening performances on Labor Day and Columbus Day weekends.

The new show will use mixed media: light and sound, film and live movement based on techniques developed during the popular first production in the theater, "Thundering Sounds of the West," in the summer of 1965.

The production tells the story of the Conquistadores, led by Coronado, as they crossed the plains and took refuge in the canyon in 1541.

Ireland's Religious Conflict Caused By Economic Factor

By MURRAY OLDERMAN

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (NEA)—Since the "troubles," as they call them in Ulster, broke out in the fall of 1968, a total of 48 deaths have been directly attributed to accidents or shootings connected to the interecneine Catholic-Protestant conflict.

The number so far for this year is 13.

The sum casualty figure is one-third of the number of Americans who die on U.S. highways every single day. It is one-tenth of one per cent of the Americans who have died in Vietnam.

In terms of actual danger, the religious confrontation is overblown, sensationalized to the point of exaggeration in a country of 1.5 million people. Their neighbors to the south, the three million of the Republic of Ireland, are embarrassed by it. And yet gelignite bombs are being planted by clandestine Irish Republican Army dissidents almost every day and walls are being blown down.

The headlines in Belfast newspapers are scary: "Terror Bombers Strike at Barracks"; "Four Escape Death in Explosion"; "Army Units Put on Guard Against Kidnap Attempt"; "Eire Moves Against Gunmen."

These are in thick, black, capital letters. I've just spent a week traveling Ireland, north and south. I haven't seen any wild-eyed IRA Provisionals (Catholic) or fanatic Paisleyites (Protestants, also Prods). I haven't seen any buildings bombed, and I wasn't particularly aware of any armed tension, even in the tinder spots of Londonderry and Belfast.

In that time, only two inflammatory signs were seen. One in a Belfast doorway, read, "Orange Pigs!" The other, on a wall, was scrawled, "Ulster Above All."

Driving from Shannon to Galway to Sligo to Derry to Coleraine to Belfast to Dublin, around the west, north and east perimeters of the island, one doesn't feel uneasy and scarcely notices the boundaries separating Eire from the British north.

THE CHARM and grace that make Ireland a haven for tourists like those visiting the castle at left have been undergoing competition from sporadic violence, such as the rock-throwing incident in Londonderry in British-ruled Northern Ireland, where Catholic-Protestant tensions have caused nearly 50 deaths since 1968.

The first time crossing the border just outside of Garrison, a little fishing village on Lough Melvin, which lies just inside Northern Ireland, the customs inspector didn't even stop me. There was no sign. And when I was finally aware of him, 100 yards back, he waved me on.

Where there are customs depots on the main roads, traffic flows freely. In six border crossings, I was stopped just once and then the bags in the trunk of the car were not opened.

Even the government ministers of both countries are very friendly," says the Very Rev. V. G. Griffin, dean of St. Patrick's Cathedral in Dublin and formerly of Derry in Ulster. "You know, Brian Faulkner has been down to spend his holidays with Charles Haughey."

Faulkner is the new prime minister in Northern Ireland, and Haughey was forced to resign as minister of finance for the Republic because he countenanced the shipment of arms to the northern rebels. Dean Griffin adds that the children of the two men were seen together on vacation in Spain.

The fact is that all the Irish, except possibly the extremists among the IRA Provisionals and the Prods, are ashamed of the inner conflict in the same way a mother doesn't like the neighbors to see her two sons slugging it out front on the sidewalk.

The cause of the unrest which led to the violence has been economic. All of Britain is suffering from a rising rate of unemployment, but because the jobs in Ulster are concentrated among the Catholic minority of half a million, there are religious confrontations, translated into sporadic violence.

The effect has been to keep people from enjoying the lush nature of the country and the innate friendliness of the people. The tourist business in the north has become virtually nil, and in the south it has fallen off drastically.

A busload of tourists arriving in Wexford (Kennedy country) on a ferry boat from England turned around immediately upon landing and seeing the Irish newspapers. They couldn't be convinced it was safe even in the south.

"You can't argue with little old ladies," says John A. F. Kennedy of Dublin. An Irishman without a peaceful argument is unhappy indeed.

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Ralph Nader's campaign for automobile safety has been a blessing and all of us motorists are greatly in his debt. No doubt about that.

At times, however, the windmills of my mind are turned by a gust of apprehension: Is there such a thing as carrying safety too far?

For once a concept gains a foothold in this country, it has a tendency to get out of hand. (See "Mercury, industrial use of.")

On a stage in Prague, Svoboda, too, must have played out a bitter charade.

Pampa Garden Club Announces Officers

Mrs. James Malone entertained 24 members of the Pampa Garden Club with an Oriental Luncheon in her home at 1915 Holly Lane, May 24. The house was filled with arrangements of Spring flowers from Mrs. Malone's garden.

After the luncheon Mrs. H.H. Boynton installed the incoming officers, carrying out the flower garden theme. Each officer was presented with a growing plant to be planted in her garden, symbolizing the duties of her office.

The following officers were installed: Mrs. Lee Harrah, president; Mrs. W.E. Abernathy, vice president; Mrs. Joe Curtis, second vice president; Mrs. Lee Moore, treasurer; Mrs. Holly Gray, recording secretary; Mrs. Joe Weaver, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Georgie Mack, Historian and Mrs. H.H. Boynton, parliamentarian.

Mrs. Joe Curtis, delegate to the Regional and State Garden Club Convention in El Paso, made her report to the club. The "Gardener of the Year" plaque was presented to Mrs. Joe Weaver, who was selected for that honor by the members of the club. Mrs. James Malone was presented with a President's pin in recognition of her work with the club.

Mrs. James McCune, chairman appointed by the club president at the request of E.O. Wedgeworth, manager of the Chamber of Commerce, to study the rezoning of the city for the City's Beautiful Yard Contest, made her report to the club. She recommended the Pampa Garden Club approve the plan of the committee to make six zones in the place of the present four, for the contest. It was approved by the club.

Members of the club then went to the Park where they planted crysanthemums in the newly constructed flower beds along the trail and other parts of the park. One hundred sixty-two dozen crysanthemums were ordered by the Pampa Garden Club through a local nursery to carry out the aim "A show of mums all over Pampa." One hundred dozen are planted in the park, the cost of which was shared by the City, Pampa Garden Club and Civic Culture Club. The

DEAR ABBY: I am a Catholic and I'm proud of it. Since Catholics don't believe in divorce, even a baby on the way is not a good enough reason for me to use up the one marriage I've got coming if I didn't really love the guy and planned to stay married to him for the rest of my life. I am only 14 but I am...

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I respected your answers until you gave a put-down to that person who was all for forced marriages.

It doesn't make one bit of difference what kind of husband or father the boy will be. He can be a rotten husband and a lousy father, but at least the children will have a legal name. That is all that is important. It doesn't even matter if he lives with the girl after he marries her. If he's no good, let him clear out.

A boy should be forced by law to give his name to any children he fathers. That's the trouble with the world today, nobody is made to live up to their responsibilities.

OLD FASHIONED

DEAR OLD-FASHIONED: You are entitled to your point of view, but please read on.

DEAR ABBY: Those who think the best solution to an unmarried girl's pregnancy is to force the guy to marry her might like to hear my story.

When I was 14 years old, I "fell in love" and became pregnant. The boy was 16. Our parents decided it would be best for all concerned if we got married. You can't know the horrible disaster it was. When my baby was three months old I got pregnant again, and my child-husband went home to his mama. There I was, not yet 16, with two babies!

I was supposed to get support checks, but none came, so no organization would help me. I couldn't pay my rent or buy food. We nearly starved to death. We lived on mayonnaise and bread for two weeks. Then eviction.

My own parents turned their backs on me so I took my two babies to my husband's parents where at least they would be fed. These "kind" people refused to let me see my children after that. It has been eight years now and I am grateful that my children have a good home even though I am not allowed to see them.

I am not blaming my parents. At the time they did what they thought was best for me, but I tell other parents: Please don't push two kids into marriage just to give a baby a name. I would have been much better off with one baby and no husband.

OLD AT 22

DEAR ABBY: One of your readers thought shotgun weddings were the only answer when a girl gets into trouble. Let me tell you my experience as a shotgun bride.

I married because I was pregnant, and my husband really had a gun in his back. Before my fifth anniversary, I had five babies, three of which were in diapers at one time. I had no running water, no toilet facilities, inside or out, and we all lived in three small rooms. I never got to go out, with or without my children. Yes, my children have a legal name, but I don't know if you would call them legal or not. You see, their father never paid the doctor's delivery fees. A marriage doesn't mean your husband will support you, or love you, or take care of you.

I'm now separated, not divorced, because he claims he "loves" me and the children into the skin. Follow with a clear rinse.

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY—Since many of the readers are doubtless sending packages to service men and perishables are probably a large part of those packages, I would like to pass on two Pointers which my son tells me are quite worth-while for this purpose. Empty plastic-topped coffee tins can be filled with cookies or candy. When the goodies have been eaten the can makes a sturdy container the serviceman will find useful, particularly if he is serving in a damp area.

The second Pointer, which really met with the approval of my son and his buddies, was the packing of clean, usable rags instead of wadded-up paper in the empty spaces of a box. I remove all buttons, zippers and collars and cut the cloth into as large pieces as possible, pack these cloths firmly between packages to keep them from moving around in the box. The boys are always having to clean and polish and they tell me good cleaning cloths are at a premium.

Feminine Physician Starts Crusade Of Women In Pants

By LEON SILER
NEW YORK (NEA)—It's a tidal wave of pants for women these days — long pants, short pants, Hot Pants, tight ones and loose ones, wide bottoms and narrow, plain and checked and striped. And it's a promising phenomenon according to forecasts of an early-day pants-for-women crusader.

Happier marriages, better protection of femininity from masculine wiles, the diminution of vice—these are among the boons the crusader foresaw from the general substitution of pants for petticoats and skirts. Realization of these boons from today's far-advanced stage of that substitution seemingly could spell a reversal of any threatened trend of public and private morals toward looseness or decay.

The early crusader's name was Mary Edward Walker. Of pants-for-women advocates she was one of the most articulate as well as one of the first; she made a ruckus about it.

Her first pants were blue with a gold stripe down the leg, the uniform of a first lieutenant in the United States Army. Mary Walker, a recent graduate of Syracuse Medical College was an assistant surgeon in the Civil War.

Distinction was to come to her at the war's close. On Jan. 24, 1865, with the concurrence of two presidents — Lincoln and Andrew Johnson — she was awarded the Medal of Honor.

No other woman had received the nation's highest military decoration, and none has received it since.

Dr. Mary wore the medal for 50 years, practically all of which she spent presenting vigorous pants-for-women arguments in one way or another — talking, writing, demonstrating. Then on Feb. 15, 1917, the same United States Army which had presented the medal to her decided to take it away.

It acted, the War Department of those days and officially, because a board of general officers set up by Congress had determined—this after a full half-century of elapsed time—that the award of the medal to Dr. Mary was not in accordance with law. Specifically, the board indicated there was no evidence that Dr. Mary, during her service at Various Civil War fronts, had demonstrated heroism in combat.

Hundreds of thousands of women have served in the armed forces since Dr. Mary's time, at home and overseas, but somehow the services have never got around to recommending any of them for Medal of Honor distinction.

During much of her life after the war, Dr. Mary traveled far and wide, wearing pants and urging other women to wear them. She made innumerable speeches on the subject, wrote pieces for the newspaper and magazines and a book or two.

But her campaigning seemed to get no results. Dr. Mary came up with an "American reform" costume for women, featuring pants of a sort, but it was a flop.

There was novelty about the doctor's discussions. Some of them were a bit racy for those days — and the doctor liked to pause and hint that much more could be told to a strictly feminine audience about the relative merits of dresses and pants and their various accouterments.

Pants for women are "hygienic" that was a note upon which the doctor usually began her talks or her writings. They wouldn't "produce or aggravate mechanical displacements of the abdominal and pelvic viscera." They would not cause the "vast amount of debilitation" that results from the weight and "swaying motion" of long dresses.

If men, she insisted, were really protectors of women, as they professed to be, "they would not attempt to compel women to dress so that the facilities for vice would always be easy, but would sanction a dress that is quite the reverse, and no man would attempt to invade the family circle of his neighbor."

Dr. Mary always returned to the thought that the fact she was speaking or writing for a general audience, rather than women only, prevented her from "making full elucidations and comparisons."

Dr. Mary always returned to the thought that the fact she was speaking or writing for a general audience, rather than women only, prevented her from "making full elucidations and comparisons."

She was certain that tight dresses "attack the respiration, the digestion, and the assimilative circulation of the blood and the nervous fluid," and she was sure that milady wastes "animal electricity" in burdening herself with the voluminousness of dresses and petticoats. There are better things to do, she commented, with animal electricity, "especially in the marriage relation," than waste it in "carrying about drygoods."

Here is the doctor's own description of her "American Reform" outfit:

"The linen is made with high neck and loose waist, and whole drawers, and long sleeves with wristbands attached; thus making a complete undersuit in one garment. The drawers are folded over the ankles and the stockings adjusted over the drawers, thus keeping the ankles warm and also keeping the stockings arranged without elastics or bands. The pants are like men's, and are either buttoned to the waist of the undersuit or are arranged with the usual suspenders."

A sort of combination vest and sack coat, made in one piece and falling to the knees, completed the rig.

The doctor wore this outfit occasionally, but more often she wore ordinary pants, white

Budgeting the family ski trip includes the decision on whether or not to take the dog. It's worth a telephone check to be sure that dogs are welcome at your lodging. If not, you may arrive to find it necessary to hunt for a more expensive motel that accepts pets rather than the relatively inexpensive, family-style lodging you originally planned.

shirt, bat-wing collar and long frock coat, while campaigning for the pants cause in Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York and other cities.

Cat-calling small boys followed at her heels, on the streets. Policemen arrested her half a dozen times for the high crime of masquerading.

Eventually, she gave up and retired to a lonely, frustrated life in a home she called "Bunker Hill" at Oswebo, N.Y. Bitterness was added to frustration when in 1917 she was notified that her Medal of Honor had been withdrawn. She brooded for two years, and then died, alone, on a cold February day of 1919, leaving no survivors — and not knowing that in a generation or so, women would be going for pants in a very lively and picturesque fashion.

No one knows what became of the Medal of Honor. It was not returned to the War Department. Make baby more comfortable in his playpen with a soft, colorful Heir-Loom playpen rug. Made of Dupont virgin nylon, this washable rug attaches easily to the four corners of any standard-size play pen. The latex backing prevents it from wrinkling, slipping or skidding. Available in pink, blue, white or yellow with colorful harmonizing design in center.

Trevino Wins Classic On Way To Masters

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI)—Lee Trevino, the former Army sergeant who has earned more than a half-million dollars in less than four years on the pro golf tour, won the Danny Thomas Memphis Classic Sunday and promised to end his self-imposed exile from the Masters.

Trevino, a member of the pro tour since mid-1967, pocketed $35,000 for a 12 under par 268 for the 72 holes at Colonial Country club to boost his winnings for the year to $115,785.

It was good enough to move him into second place in the money winning list behind Jack Nicklaus, who has won $131,788 and skipped the tournament here.

The victory boosted his career earnings to $529,000, moving him to 14th on the all-time winners list and making him the 15th golfer to reach the half-million dollar mark.

Trevino played last at the Masters in 1969 and said he would not play again because the course did not suit his game. Sunday, he told newsmen he had changed his mind and would go back next year because of Nicklaus.

He said he and Nicklaus were playing an exhibition match at West Palm Beach, Fla., when Nicklaus told him to go back to the Masters because "you don't really realize how good you can play this game."

Trevino put together 66-66-69 on the par 70 course to complete play in the 14th annual tournament here for the final three days. His lead was cut to a single stroke Sunday when he bogied the par four 8th hole.

Bird Dogs Gain New Status With Forestry Department Management

AUSTIN — "Look at ole Blue fetch that bird... he never ruffled a feather."

To a bird dog or retriever man, a "soft mouthed" dog is a joy and a blessing. No hunter likes his freshly-shot quail pre-chewed by an over-enthusiastic dog.

Wildlife biologists also appreciate gentleness in dogs, particularly on the Gus Engeling Wildlife Management Area. The difference is that the retrievers there are concerned with capturing young deer alive.

A German shepherd and a Labrador retriever share the night-time duties, which consist of rounding up fawns which evade capture attempts made with spotlights and dip nets.

The captured fawns are tagged and released, to be part of an ongoing study of deer aging in the Oak Woodland region of East Texas.

If a fawn bolts and refuses to be caught by a biologist after he dismounts from his perch on the front end of a jeep, one of the dogs is released to make the pinch.

George Foreman: Young Boxing Man In A Hurry

By MURRAY OLDERMAN
OAKLAND, Calif.—(NEA) — The fighter sits on the green-painted wooden bench in the cold concrete dressing room and his knees rock together with nervous tension as he talks, the sweat of his exertions running down the mahogany of his face in rivulets. His hands revolve as a reflex form some anxiety within.

George Foreman, young and big and strong and unscarred so far, is practicing to be the next heavyweight champion of the world and part of that exercise is to parry questions and explore the emotions that transform a normally docile person into a fighting machine. Ever since a young Cassius Clay came on the boxing scene more than a decade ago, brashness of personality is in.

George is trying that bag, too, but it doesn't come easy—not for a kid who came to public attention waving a little American flag around the ring in Mexico City after winning the Olympic heavy-weight championship. George is finding it hard to be popular.

They booed him in Oakland just around the corner from his adopted home town of Hayward, Calif., when he smashed out a brutally easy technical knockout of Gregorio Paralta, a battered old campaigner from Argentina who has a lot of smarts but limited equipment. Although there is fitness to his movements and power in his punching, George doesn't excite people the way a Louis or a Marciano or a Frazier did.

One reason is that his manager, Dick Sadler, has been fairly cautious in bringing Foreman along. It takes two to make a fight, but most of his opponents were out-classed going in. So there's not much exhilaration in watching someone sop up punches with little chance to retaliate. Further, George's personality doesn't reek from killer instinct. He was a little defensive about the fact that he didn't put 36-year-old Paralta away cleanly.

"I don't want anybody telling me no more about age," Foreman said. "They come any age—I'm gonna hit 'em."

George also has become a shade edgy about his progress into the championship bracket of boxing, and the big money that is supposed to be derived therefrom. He can't tell when he'll fight Frazier or Ali.

"My manager don't ask me nothing," he said. "He takes my money."

And over in another part of the room, Sadler was saying, "How he handles his own money."

"I'm uneducated, illiterate," countered George when someone wondered why he didn't control his own destiny.

And Sadler, making it sound like two-part singing, was saying, "His program is geared to the past present and future. The past is his mother—George has got to take care of her. The present is what he needs to live on. The future is what he'll need when he stops fighting."

Allison Brothers Hold World 600 Stock Car Title

By ROYAL BRIGHTBILL
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI)—The brothers Allison of Hueytown, Ala., will keep the World 600 Grand National Division Stock Car racing crown in the family for another year.

This time, "big brother" Bobby is wearing it. And he's counting that $29,400 first prize money that goes with the Charlotte Motor Speedway victory.

He took it from Donnie, the defending champ. Sunday after beating the younger brother by nearly a full lap in the 600-mile event, winning in a record four hours 16 minutes and 20 seconds at an average speed of 140 or 142 miles per hour.

It was the first time in four Grand National events in which the Mercury-driving brothers finished one-two that Bobby was on top.

"I was just tickled he could get second," said Bobby. "It's a big thrill when you run one-two."

A long duel with pole-sitter Charlie Glotzbach in a Chevrolet Monte Carlo ended with Glotzbach smashing into the wall near the first turn on lap 234 and Bobby went ahead to stay.

Those Radio Voices

Last January it was revealed that Radio Liberty and Radio Free Europe, two supposedly nongovernmental, publicly supported operations, have all along been financed by the Central Intelligence Agency. In 1970, for example, the CIA subsidy amounted to $30 million. The disclosure threw an unfortunate cloak-and-dagger shadow over these otherwise admirably effective operations.

Created during early Cold War days in the 1950s, both stations broadcast to the millions behind the Iron Curtain, using powerful transmitters in Spain and Portugal.

The mission of Radio Liberty is to reach to the people of the Soviet Union, and that of Radio Free Europe to reach the satellite nations, with news of local and foreign events not reported over Communist government-controlled stations. As such, they have been "unofficial" voices of the United States. The official voice, seeking to explain America to the world, is the Voice of America, operated by the U. S. Information Agency.

The Nixon administration, with strong bipartisan backing, is asking Congress to establish a semipublic corporation which would finance Radio Liberty and Radio Free Europe through annual appropriations, like the Voice of America, and end the CIA's involvement.

The testimonial to Radio Liberty's worth is that the Soviets constantly jam its transmitters. There is also a severe penalty for Russians caught listening to the broadcasts.

Yet the broadcasts do get through, as shown by the many letters that come via neutral countries to the New York headquarters of Radio Liberty as well as Radio Free Europe.

We must be doing something right. We ought to continue doing it, but the right way — completely out in the open.

Ratings For Billboards

Six years after passage of the Highway Beautification Act of 1965, Lady Bird Johnson's pet project as First Lady, Congress finally got around to appropriating money to compensate billboard owners for the loss of their property, Newspaper Enterprise Assn. reminds us.

The first billboard to be removed was during recent ceremonies in Freeport, Me., at which Transportation Secretary John A. Volpe officiated.

That it was the first to be removed under the Beautification Act. In southeastern Michigan, night-raiding vigilantes have saved down 81 billboards illegally in the past two months. Owners have retaliated by erecting new signs with steel supports instead of wood.

"Let's see them cut down steel poles," says Joseph Jones, manager of a Lansing advertising firm. They probably will. Inevitably, however, an anti-billboard movement has sprung into being. In New York, an artist named Linda Charleston is pioneering the use of billboards for the display of fine art.

"Why should advertising get all the best space?" asks she, plunking down $1,900, to have one of her paintings enlarged to billboard size, plus $250 a month rental fee, for the edification of motorists on Manhattan's West Side Highway.

New York was also the scene of a one-woman picket protest against the blanket indictment of all billboards as "eyesores."

Sharon Harvey, whose bikini-clad figure adorns thousands of billboards coast to coast as Miss Tanya, the symbol of a surtation of letters from drivers who say they think her billboards are beautiful. One man wrote that he stays awake during night driving by watching for the Tanya billboards. But even women write to her; one said that the billboards inspired her to diet and thus saved her marriage.

Sharon suggests there should be a rating system for billboards, similar to the one that classifies movies. An "X" rating, for example, would mean that a billboard was truly unsightly and should be banned.

Miss Tanya of course, rates a "G" — for gol-lee!

current bumpers are a bit too flimsy. But this does not mean that a government agency is competent to pass judgment on what the replacement should be. A father and son mechanical team from Buffalo, N.Y., brought up this point in a hearing before the Senate Commerce Committee.

While demonstrating their own design, engineer Paul H. Taylor and son Douglas disclosed that existing bumpers are safer than those decreed for all new cars by the U.S. Department of Transportation. Specifically, the Taylors testified that the Department of Transportation standards will protect the cars but endanger the occupants. Merely stiffening the bumpers on a car increases the incidence of whiplash, they pointed out.

The Taylors reminded that, if you prefer to have a crushed fender to an injured passenger, then you would choose the current weaker bumpers over the heavier variety prescribed by the Department of Transportation. The two engineers have their own design which, they say, is superior to the other two. That may or may not be the case. The pertinent fact is that a seemingly simple thing such as an auto bumper is far too complex to be universally legislated. This should provide a clue both as to the inherent limitations of man-made laws and the lawmakers, whether they are elected or administrative.

A second evident point is that the law gives in this instance either let their minds wander of the subject, or else their motive was something other than the safety of the motorist.

Show us a man who packs a picnic basket, and we'll show you a picnic basket with tomatoes under the ham bottles.

Question Box

QUESTION: Would you agree with the inherent Jeffersonian doctrine that in this country any radical or anything in between) has a Constitutional right to free and full expression, that the adherents of "unpopular" political philosophies have the same guarantee and Constitutional safe-guarded right of free assembly, as do adherents of "popular," or traditional philosophies and would you declare that if any scoundrel or group of intolerant intellectual or political thugs should attempt to invade those rights, then the community has an obligation in a free society to be heard from? Or the drop of a hat?

ANSWER: The question has many parts.

Let us see what the U.S. Constitution says on the points alluded to in the question.

The pertinent portion of the First Amendment states as follows:

"Congress shall make no law... abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to ASSEMBLE."

Now as to the several points in the question:

1. The term "free and full expression" is a somewhat broader term than the phrase "freedom of speech, or of the press" used in the First Amendment. "Expression" might take the form of overt physical acts that damage another person or that inflict an unwanted obscenity upon him, or upon property in which he has an identified interest, as a public right of way. If Thomas Jefferson ever had a doctrine to that effect, we have never read it, and would not agree with it if we had.

2. Communist thought in the sense of a philosophy may be ranged along side Conservative philosophy in that both are modes of looking at life. But Communist thought in the sense of conspiring for revolution, inciting to violence has no standing as a philosophy. It is a criminal combine not different in type from any other criminal group.

3. The popularity or unpopularity of a cause does not license the adherents to assemble other than in a peaceable manner.

4. "Free expression" that goes beyond freedom of speech, or of the press, has no cover from the First Amendment, nor does the fact that a free expression may utilize speech or a press in itself bring it within First Amendment limits.

As the preamble states, the Constitution was established to "insure domestic tranquility." Programs, movements, causes, activities that precipitate destruction of the domestic tranquility are therefore afforded no sanctuary in the Constitution.

Apart from the Constitution, from a common-sense standpoint it seems to us that any right is nothing but a property. So when a philosophy comes before the bar of public opinion with a petition for its belonging in one hand and denial of other people's belongings in the other, the example is something less than intellectual honesty.

He created a system using 85 characters by which every sound in the Cherokee language could be reduced to writing. The World Almanac says. Calling the Roll

The Worry Clinic

By DR. GEORGE W. CRANE

Clem is a typical example of the adage, "Stingy with love; generous with money." When formerly generous husbands become Silas Marner after 40, you wives should serve more cheesecake in the boudoir! So use the booklet below to make your hubby loosen his strange hold on the family purse.

CASE Q 567: Clem D., aged 46, is a problem mate.

"Dr. Crane," his wife began, "Clem used to be a very generous and loving husband. But the past year he has done a right-about-face! For now he is literally as stingy as Scrooge or Silas Marner!"

"But he doesn't need to be so, for we have plenty of wealth and he draws a big salary. But Clem just sits around every night computing the amount of interest we are drawing on government bonds and figuring out the other income that we shall receive. He is also a platonic husband so could this greed for money be causing his lack of romantic interest in me?"

Sex And $$$

Clem's wife has merely reversed the usual cause and effect! For it was his growing impotence that scared Clem into being a tightwad with his wealth! Alas, this is typical of married people who lose their erotic vim and vigor. It also characterizes elderly unmarried folks who feel that they are slipping in health and physical vigor. For money is a universal symbol of power.

As we lose our "love power" over our mates, as well as our "health power" in old age, then we may avidly clutch at $$$.

A platonic husband subconsciously thinks: "I can no longer command my wife's sweetest allegiance because I am impotent. Ergo, I shall make her beg even for nickels and dimes, thereby retaining my dominance over her."

Not all these miserly husbands have consciously faced this mental process, but subconsciously this is the basic reason they suddenly grow miserly at middle age.

Scrooge also realized he couldn't command the cooperation of his neighbors or employees on the basis of love. So he coerced them into sycophantic groveling for wages, thereby retaining his power over their lives.

Even domineering parents may likewise use wealth as a club by which to force their children to break off a romance that looks as if it will soon terminate in a wedding.

For Mama may be jealous of the younger girl who is winning Mama's son. So Mama may then threaten to cut off that son in her will or curtail his liberal allowance. Same goes for jealous fathers, who likewise threaten to disinherit their daughter if she marries anybody of whom Papa disapproves. And Papa usually votes every boy friend who looks as if he may be ready to place a wedding ring on daughter's finger.

Wives if your husband is unduly stingy in middle age, regard this as typical of the male climacteric. The best way to restore him to his former generous, affectionate nature, is to increase the boudoir cheesecake you serve. For when you can restore your husband's erotic confidence and help him function ardently, he will then become generous.

"Generous with love; liberal with money," is a psychological axiom. So send for my booklet "How to Prevent Platonic Marriage." (Always write to Dr. Crane in care of The Pampa News, Hopkins Bldg., Melott, Indiana 47556, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 20 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

H. L. Hunt Writes

PAPA DOC PASSES

Death has ended the career of one of the most despotic rulers in the history of the Western Hemisphere. A combination of illnesses took the life of 64 year old Francois Duvalier, the man who made himself "President for Life" in Haiti and then enslaved five million inhabitants as he turned the little country into his personal fiefdom.

Here was a tragic case of people having no voice in their official affairs either through ignorance and apathy or intimidation. The tragic plight of the Haitian people should put all of us on guard. Visitors coming out of Haiti say that the average annual income is about 70 per person, that a majority of the population lives in misery and fear. The dreaded Tontons Macoute, the personal gestapo-like force created by "Papa Doc," is everywhere. Execution without trial is common and bodies are frequently left in the streets.

There seems little chance that the lot of the people will change since Duvalier's son, Jean Claude, a 300 pound playboy, has succeeded his father. There is some speculation that the 5000 man army may intervene in the succession. But there is doubt that even a coup would change things much.

And still another danger lurks from without. Castro's Cuba has long cast its revolutionary eyes on Haiti. Cuban agents sent into Haiti to foment revolution have usually been dealt with by firing squads but Castro is not one to give up. And he may see the changing of dictators as a golden opportunity. The prospects for the Haitian people look grim indeed.

It's much better to have a lost weekend than to be able to recall Saturday and Sunday, but nothing about the five days you were supposed to be working.

Your Health

By Dr. Lawrence Lamb

Heat Influences Sperm Formation

Dear Dr. Lamb — I have been told by some people that bikini underwear can cause a man to become sterile. Is that true? And if so how? I can't understand it. How can you tell whether you are sterile or not?

Dear Reader — If true it would certainly be a boon to the population control people.

Nature provided a means to control the temperature of the testicles by placing them outside the body and providing muscles that contract and relax the scrotum. When it is cold they contract and the testicles are drawn up close to the body warmth, when it is hot the muscles relax and they are farther away from the body heat. Heat does influence the formation of live sperm.

Any underwear or garment that interferes with nature's mechanism of controlling the temperature can have some effect on the live sperm. This is not enough though to cause sterility since millions of men wear this type of underwear for "support."

You can tell you are not sterile if you father a child and you are sure it's yours. Another way is an examination. The fluid is examined under a microscope to see how many live cells it contains. You can have fluid, of course, and have no, or not enough, live cells to be fertile. Of course, it only takes one in the right place at the right time.

Dear Dr. Lamb — In regard to your comment in your column, "If it were possible to treat every strep throat properly rheumatic heart disease would cease to be a problem." It's possible. And very simple. I can't afford to take four children to the doctor for every sore throat and he wouldn't have time for everyone if they could. If the babe would do a throat culture for strep for say $1.00 each instead of $5.00 or $6.00 then at each sore throat parents could afford to have it done — if strep shows, go to the doctor — this would also have to be a help to him.

Dear Reader — Your suggestion has merit and perhaps throat cultures and other laboratory tests will one day be available to the public before going to a doctor. Don't expect everyone to take advantage of the opportunity though even if it is free. In San Antonio, Tex. for example, at the height of a recent diphtheria epidemic only about half of the population bothered to get immunizations even when they were offered free.

Please read your questions and comments to Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D. in care of this paper. While Dr. Lamb cannot answer individual letters, he will answer letters of general interest in future columns.

Inside Washington

Congress Asked To Give John Goldsmith Chief Justice $40,000 Assistant Robert Allen

WASHINGTON — Something new is being added to the U.S. Supreme Court — Congress willing! The unprecedented innovation is a $40,000 a year administration assistant to the Chief Justice. And that isn't all. This contemplated functionary, who would be named by the Chief Justice and "serve at his pleasure," could be a federal district or appeals court judge. If such a jurist were selected, he would receive no additional compensation above his regular judicial salary.

However, if an active judge is made administrative assistant, the President could appoint another judge in his place. Function of the administrative assistant would be to relieve the chief Justice of what is claimed to be an increasingly heavy burden of non-judicial responsibilities and activities. Cited as illustrations are: Chairman of the Board of the National Gallery of Art; Chairman of the Oliver Wendell Holmes Devise Committee.

Indicative of the importance Chief Justice Warren Burger attaches to this proposal is that one active and one retired member of the Supreme Court testified in favor of it. They are Justice Potter Stewart, an Ohioan appointed to the tribunal by President Eisenhower in 1958 and retired Justice Tom Clark, a Texan named by President Truman in 1948.

The legislation authorizing this innovation originated in Chief Justice Burger's office. It is pending in the House Judiciary Committee, and inside indications are that after some revising, the bills will be reported to the full House for approval. With the committee's endorsement, they will very likely be enacted by the House and sent to the Senate for concurrence.

THE SALES PITCH — Committee men say they were particularly impressed by two points made by Justice Stewart, as follows:

(1) That the numerous extrajudicial obligations of the Chief Justice compel him to "regularly put in a 6 1/2 day week with rare and limited vacations."

(3) He gets "as many as 200 to 500 letters a day and at times in excess of that."

This mail comes from judges, lawyers, bar associations, law schools and the public. The handling of much of this mail would be an important part of the administrative assistant's work. A lot of it Justice Stewart said, could be taken care of by the assistant without referring it to the Chief Justice.

Also stressed by Justices Stewart and Clark is the fact that the chief judges of all federal courts of appeals now have administrative assistants to relieve them of non-judicial chores. Pointed out Justice Clark, "The need for an administrative assistant to the Chief Justice is emphasized by what is now provided for chief judges of courts of appeals."

Presently, the staff of the Chief Justice consists of four law clerks and three secretaries — one of the latter borrowed one of the latter borrowed from the Federal Judicial Center. This secretary devotes full time to sorting and classifying the flood of mail daily received by the Chief Justice.

The proposed administrative assistant would have a staff consisting of a secretary and several clerical employees. If a federal judge were designated as the administrative assistant, his replacement on the bench would be rated as a temporary appointee, in this way: He would be named for life, as are all federal judges under the Constitution. But no appointment could thereafter be made to a vacancy caused by death, resignation or retirement of the judge serving as administrative assistant.

The eight associate justices of the Supreme Court each have two law clerks and two secretaries. Several years ago Justice John Harlan, 72 appointed by President Eisenhower in 1954 from New York, was given a special reading clerk because of severely impaired eyesight.

PAUL HARVEY NEWS

Fed Up With Lawbreakers

By PAUL HARVEY

Americans are fed up with lawbreakers. Never before have Philadelphia's voters turned out 50 percent to vote in a primary election. They turned out 67 percent to nominate a tough cop for mayor.

And that's not all. How about that recent rhabarb involving the Boy Scouts of Rochester, N. Y.?

Caustic commentators and self-righteous defenders of the rights of wrongdoers — claimed stolen FBI documents — revealed that Rochester's Boy Scouts were actually helping the police of that city. I should hope they would!

Yet such was the hue and cry from the wrathful liberals that the Boy Scouts were denying it, the city's officials were pleading ignorance and Rochester's police were apologizing.

How about that! Here's the rest of the story of what was represented to be a sinister conspiracy by police to misuse our youngsters. It was two years ago that Rochester's Boy Scouts were instructed in the responsibilities of good citizenship; to deal with emergencies, accidents, fire, thefts. The scouts of the local council were instructed to report emergencies or crimes to police — as any good citizen used to. The boys were provided with a list of emergency phone numbers. The program was called "operation SAFE"; the S-A-F-E standing for "Scouts Awareness For Emergency."

FATHER AND SON make it two in a row in the world bridge championships. Nonplaying captain Oswald Jacoby, right, and leading player James Jacoby show off the Bermuda Bowl, representative of world supremacy, at Taipei, Taiwan after leading the North American team to a final-round victory over France and a second consecutive title. The Jacobys write about their championship techniques in their widely read daily newspaper column, Win at Bridge. Their system is explained in the recently published paperback, "Win at Bridge with Jacoby Modern."

WTCC Executive Vice President Quits His Post

ABILENE — Jack G. Springer, who has served as executive vice president of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce for the past eight years, has resigned to accept a similar position with the Oklahoma State Chamber of Commerce. The announcement was made by A. L. Scott, Fort Worth, president of the WTCC.

Scott stated that Springer's successor will be announced shortly. Springer will report to his new position in early July.

According to Scott, the WTCC has made great progress during Springer's tenure: the organization has been stabilized financially, membership has grown and the WTCC's program of work has been much more effective in all areas.

Springer is a native of Oklahoma, a graduate of Oklahoma University and served as manager of chambers of commerce in Seminole and Pauls Valley before coming to Texas in 1953. He was manager of the Bryan-College Station chamber of commerce from 1953 to 1961 and was chief executive of the Galveston chamber of commerce from 1961 until assuming the executive vice president's position with WTCC in 1963.

Active in many professional associations, Springer is secretary of the Council of State Chambers of Commerce; a past chairman of the board of regents of the USOC Southwestern Institute; director of Southern Chamber Executives Association; American Chamber of Commerce Executives Association, Texas Chamber of Commerce Managers Association, Chamber of Commerce Executives of West Texas, Texas Industrial Development Council, Texas Urban Development Commission and the International Good Neighbor Commission.

Springer was named manager of the year by the West Texas chamber executives in 1969 and the same year received the coveted designation of chartered Chamber Executive (CCE).

Springer is married to the former Doris Marie Lebow, also an Oklahoma native. They reside at 4125 S. 25th in Abilene and have four daughters: Sheryl Jane, Cynthia and Mrs. Frederick B. Power.

Social Security 'Q' And 'A'

EDITOR'S NOTE — Have you a question about social security? Address it to: Howard L. Weatherly, Branch Manager, Social Security Administration, 1541 N. Hobart, Pampa, Texas 79065. You will receive an answer in this column or by mail.

By HOWARD L. WEATHERLY

Q—I have my own business. When I applied for my retirement insurance not long ago, your representative said there was an error in the amount of net earnings reported by me, and he says I am entitled to a tax refund. Can you explain that?

A—You failed to state all of your business expenses on the self-employment part of your income tax return. We are required to reduce the reported net income by the amount of unclaimed expenses in figuring your average earnings to determine the amount of your social security benefit. Since you overstated your net earnings, you overpaid your tax, and a refund or adjustment is in order.

Q—I understand that social security cannot be paid for the first six months of a worker's disability. Why is that?

A—Disability benefits are payable only when a worker's inability to work will be of long continued duration. Disability benefits are not paid for a temporary or partial disability.

The six month waiting period allows for an evaluation of the worker's condition in order to determine the extent of his impairment and whether his disability can be expected to last not less than 12 months as provided by law.

BUDGET DEFICIT

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Treasury Department says the federal government ran up a $21.6 billion budget deficit during the first 10 months of the fiscal year that ends June 30.

June is traditionally the best month of the year for federal revenues, and the final deficit for the year may be less than the 10-month figure.

TEST A-LAST PHUTE MESA, Nev. (UPI) — The Atomic Energy Commission exploded 1,000 pounds of high explosive chemical Friday in a test designed to provide data on ground motion in nuclear detonations.

The non-nuclear blast, touched off underground in a tunnel at the Pahute Mesa area of the Nevada test site, was not heard off the AEC facility and caused no damage.

HEAT KILLS 2 BABIES

MONTERREY, Mexico (UPI) — Two infants died Friday of dehydration as temperatures in this northern Mexico city continued to hover around 100 degrees.

Dr. Roberto Sepulveda, chief of public health for Nuevo Leon state, said two infants died and 58 had been hospitalized for extreme dehydration.

Television In Review

By RICK DU BROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—For a long time, one of the really annoying things about watching network television series—if you were male—was that so many of the stars were either pretty-faced actors or homely, cute, middle-aged dames.

There was a reason for this. Television is, above all, a marketing medium (commercial television, that is). And since women spend most of the money in the nation, and invariably have the most to say about what to watch at home on video (after the kids are asleep), the heroes and heroines were made chiefly to appeal to them.

Obviously if you are trying to sell your product to a nice, middle class, middle-aged housewife—which television used to try to do very hard, and still does to a strong degree, even if the desired audience is a little younger—you give her some pretty-faced actors to look at. The regard for the intellect of this audience never was very high at the networks, and still isn't. After all, how can you respect an audience that responds to those imbecilic detergent and cosmetics commercials?

At the same time, it was sort of an unspoken, but understood, rule that you never, or almost never, made a gorgeous, sexy woman the star of a series, particularly if she was also young. The idea here, naturally, was that all those nice, middle class, middle-aged housewives—in fact, most typical video-watching female—would subconsciously resent them out of a feeling of inferiority. After all, the proportion of gorgeous women isn't especially high, particularly among average housewives.

So there we men were, looking at nice plain ladies, or fictional female characters that were married if they were desirable, or—as in "The Beverly Hillbillies"—cartoon versions of sex symbols. Well, things haven't changed that much—most television stars are men, in case you hadn't noticed. But now that the desired audience is indeed a little younger and more with it, we get a break here and there.

We have, of course, had beauties like Diana Rigg and Mia Farrow and Diahann Carroll and Inger Stevens and Barbara Parkins and Honor Blackman, but we still come up short today. Nevertheless, we can enjoy Peggy Lipton of "The Mod Squad" and Linda Cristal of "The High Chaparral," but hardly any others you can call genuinely gorgeous, sexy and desirable.

1st Girl Scout Troop

The first Girl Scout troop in the United States was formed in 1912 by Juliette Gordon Low of Savannah, Ga., according to Encyclopedia Britannica.

The perspiring 12 were rescued by firemen who dropped a ladder through a hatch in the elevator's ceiling. "I've heard of hung juries before, but this is ridiculous," said one of the women.

In making preparations to move to his new position, Springer said, "The people of West Texas have become great friends of ours and we shall always consider West Texas as our second home. We have seen progress in many areas during the past 8 years and feel that we have had a part in some of the development.

"the growth of the cattle feeding industry has been a boom to all of West Texas, we are hopefully closer to adequate water supplies for all the State, tourism has increased in all sections of our service area, the general business climate is better and the working relationship between business and government has never been more cordial and efficient.

"These are the major objectives of the regional chamber of commerce and under the dedicated leadership of such business leaders as A. L. Scott, the WTCC will continue to provide a strong voice for business in Austin and Washington as well as work for a better life for all West Texans."
