

West Texas Senator Would Sue New Mexico

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS: Whirligig

WASHINGTON By Paul Mallon Cabinet—A Republican Senator with elephantine ears overheard two Democratic leaders talking about Senator Walsh and Glass going into the Roosevelt cabinet.

It created a very bad situation for Walsh and Glass. They were put in the light of having disclosed something that should have been kept secret until President-elect Roosevelt announced it.

The situation at that time strongly suggested that both would go in the cabinet at the positions named.

The three way deal had not then been consummated. Authorities were certain it would be. Identity of the new Secretary of State was then indistinct.

The Democratic oracles say Mr. Roosevelt wanted to get the three key positions in the cabinet off his chest before he starts his cruise Saturday.

The Walsh appointment would be bitterly received by those who like to run their business in a free and easy way with no particular restraint from law.

Enforcement - Not Repeal

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON RESOLUTIONS (From Baptist Standard)

The United Forces for Prohibition assembled in statewide mass meeting at Dallas, Texas, January 3, 1933, make the following declaration of principles and purposes, concerning the prohibition of traffic in intoxicating liquors both by the state and our national government.

We affirm that the principle of the law is right which treats intoxication as voluntary insanity, and therefore holds an intoxicated person responsible for his acts. We affirm that an inevitable corollary of this principle is that all who manufacture the liquor which produces intoxication, all who sell such liquor for gain, all who make law permitting such sale, all who knowingly vote for those who make such laws and all who assist in producing a sentiment which tolerates such traffic, justly share before God and should share before men joint responsibility for all the evil results of such intoxication.

Intoxicating liquors have been condemned by every branch of science relating to the human body or mind, every principle of social order, all investigations of economists, the experience of all courts from the juvenile courts to the supreme courts of all nations. It is outlawed by the law of God, and is inhuman to continue to be outlawed by the Constitution of the United States and the laws of all the states in this our great nation, which has attained the foremost place among the nations of the earth since it adopted the only right attitude for any government toward the liquor traffic, which is, not regulation for revenue, but prohibition of evil.

We affirm that true temperance is the moderate use of that which is wholesome and right, and abstinence from that which is harmful and wrong. A moral wrong can never be socially right. A saloon by any other name would smell as foul; not because of the name, but because liquor producing intoxication, the cause of crime, poverty, sorrow and suffering, political corruption and a long train of universally recognized evils would be sold there. The sale of liquors which produce intoxication is contrary to the fundamentals of civil government, and the saloon has therefore always been a legalized outlaw. We are unalterably opposed to legalizing it again, or to legalizing any outlaw with another name but the same character, thus to sanction and become a partner with sin.

We honor all law makers from the State Legislature to the United States Senate who strive to improve the social order, moral standing, economic prosperity and personal efficiency of the people; but we insist that men charged with such duty should not be allowed to decline due chiefly to the shutdown in East Texas while well pressures were determined.

It is easy to see that Professor Auguste Piccard, the European stratosphere aeronaut, is going to be a godsend to American newspaper reporter and press photographers. The professor poses that inexpressible something which makes good copy, and will help the boys of the press to enliven many a dull day.

The professor's first act, coming up the harbor of New York, was to rebuke the reporters for smoking in his presence. He said the smell of tobacco smoke makes him ill, and refused to be interviewed until the boys had extinguished their cigarettes and given the room a thorough airing. It's a safe bet every reporter's story was written around that colorful incident. Good copy! Human interest stuff!

The combination of odd foreign mannerisms and a smattering of scientific glamor is always good copy. Einstein, the nine-day wonder, is a case in point. Einstein was hailed in the public prints as the greatest genius the world has ever produced; a genius so great that nobody really understood his theory—not even Herr Einstein. Only history is qualified to pass up on his worth to science. Ten years ago the great genius was a Frenchman named Coue, and today not one reader in one hundred can tell you what M. Coue's practiced, advocated and genuined.

Investigation Of Railroad Loans Before Committee

By RAYMOND CLAPPER

United Press Staff Correspondent (Copyright, 1933, By United Press)

WASHINGTON (UP)—The long-awaited day of reckoning is about to dawn for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

For one dizzy year it has been pumping into the veins of the nation's business a golden stream of taxpayer's money—$1,500,000,000—a sum equal to more than half of the total federal revenue.

The inevitable reckoning is being approached cautiously. Investigation of the corporation's railroad loans was to begin Tuesday before a senate banking and currency subcommittee headed by Senator James Couzens, Rep. Mich., the eagle-eyed millionaire whose knowledge of business, banking and railroads makes him the most feared question-asker in the senate on these subjects.

His investigation is in support of his pending resolution to forbid further R.F.C. loans to railroads except with approval of congress. It is the first serious attempt to lift the cover from this secrecy-screened gigantic government lending agency and find out exactly what has been happening, and what the chances are of this money being paid back.

Which Course?

It is an attempt to consider whether the government should continue trying to bolster with cash the boom-time financial structures now suffering from undernourishment due to low earnings, or let them be deflated in the same way wages and prices have been deflated.

Congress has on the whole been discreetly silent during the first year of the R.F.C.'s attempt to revive American business with injections of its golden hypodermic. There was hope that this costly medicine would be successful. Success probably would have been accepted by congress as full justification.

Defenders of the corporation declare it has been worth what it has cost because it warded off panic and cushioned the difficulties of hundreds of banks and other institutions. Those favoring self-liquidating projects as a depression cure insist the R.F.C. has not loaned enough in this direction.

But doubts continue to grow in the minds of critics. Reports of many kinds now in circulation are aggravating these doubts. These reports, and other circumstances which are contributing to the growing pressure for a thorough inquiry, are summarized herewith without any implication as to their merits.

Coming Back

Railroads which borrowed from the R.F.C. to pay bankers who refused to renew loans are coming back again for more money because they can't meet their interest.

Of 5,000 banks given R.F.C. loans, 500 later closed, according to one senator. Couzens says he was informed by the R.F.C. regarding the loan Charles G. Dawes received just after retiring as president of the corporation, the loan being twice as large as the senator had been led to believe.

Institutions in which three of the directors of the R.F.C. were in-

Outlook Favorable In Federal Reserve District Says Report

DALLAS, (UP)—Business and industry in the Eleventh Federal Reserve district entered the new year generally well sustained and with a favorable outlook, the Federal Reserve bank of Dallas reported today in its monthly business review.

Department store sales in data compiled January 15, reflected gains slightly larger than seasonal for December, while wholesale distribution showed some improvement. Business failures declined 22 per cent despite the year-end financial strain and the agricultural outlook was improved materially.

The bank's summary of agricultural prospects was particularly optimistic. Less than seasonal recession in some lines of business and a narrowing of margin of decline as compared with a year ago forecast received loans.

Charges have been made that large amounts loaned to small banks were for the purpose of paying off loans called by big banks and that communities into which loans were originally sent received no benefit. Two prominent Republicans closely associated with the administration are said to be connected with institutions which received generous loans.

One large loan was made to a Louisiana institution just before it collapsed. The same thing happened in Nevada, each instance involving approximately $1,000,000.

retailers continued to move forward cautiously, the bank found, and still make replenishments to stocks only in response to consumer demand. As for demand, the requirements for groceries at wholesale recorded a smaller than seasonal reduction for the second successive month and distribution of merchandise in principal retail stores reflected a seasonal increase than the average.

"The agricultural situation was improved materially by the general rains and snows during December and early January," the bank found. "A good season now obtains in most sections. Small grains, while in very poor condition, have shown some improvement recently."

"The December freezes pulverized the soil and left it in excellent condition for working out land preparation is still backward in many areas due to the wet soil."

"Live stock and their ranges are in generally good condition and live stock are expected to go through the winter in fine shape."

Cattle prices during December and early January were irregular with the trend toward lower levels due both to the poor demand and the lack of quality receipts.

In industry, cottonseed oil mill operation recorded a large seasonal decline, with activities below those in the same month of 1931, while a recession somewhat larger than seasonal was reflected in cement milling.

Oil production recorded a marked with such high duties and responsibilities should refrain from voting for, or encouraging the traffic in intoxicating liquors in any form and we pledge ourselves to help our representatives in the Legislature and in Congress to realize that such is our position.

We honor judges on the bench, policemen, sheriffs and their deputies, U. S. marshals and their deputies, and all peace officers, when they endeavor to enforce faithfully the laws of the land, and we pledge ourselves to render all the assistance we can in such patriotic enforcement. At the same time we insist that oaths of office ought to be binding and pledges of faithfulness made to the people ought to be honorably observed.

We insist that no political convention has the right nor the power to deliver a mandate for the American people to officers of this country. The Constitution of the United States is the supreme mandate of the people for all who take the oath to support it and it must remain so until it is changed in a constitutional way. We firmly re- pose confidence in the American people that they will never change the Constitution so as, again, to legalize the greatest outlaw that ever cursed this or any other land. We affirm that the recent national campaign, when properly interpreted was not a demand for the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

We call upon all good citizens of any and all nationalities, all churches and schools, members of all useful trades and professions, all women who love and cherish worthy homes and want the world safe for childhood, all young people who must live and labor in the world of a few years hence, all patriotic organizations, all organizations for the suppression of evil, all who are connected in any capacity with gainful business of any kind, all who want life to be safe on the highways or among whirling machinery, all who love God, and home, and a peaceful, progressive, and prosperous country to wage the fight every day and night in every possible way to prevent that traffic which is the ally of every evil, and destructive of all good, from ever legally returning it to our beloved country.

What Is it about CHESTERFIELDS?

Well, I can't tell you much of anything about what is in Chesterfields

BUT I smoke a good deal, and I noticed that they said that Chesterfield Cigarettes were milder and tasted better; so I smoked a package or two and found it to be true.

I also noticed that the cigarettes were well-filled, seemed to be the right length and the right circumference, and burned uniformly—not up one side and down the other.

I liked the aroma—very pleasing. I liked the appearance of the cigarette—the paper, dead white. The package rather appealed to me.

I don't know exactly what it is, but I just like 'em. It's about the only luxury that I enjoy; so I think it's all right for me to have a good cigarette, and I believe Chesterfield is just about the best.

Panhandle Farmers Organize To Combat Foreclosure Sales

MIAMI (UP)—Permanent organization of a group of Panhandle property owners, most of them farmers, who reside in Roberts, Hemphill and Gray counties for the purpose of obtaining relief from mortgage foreclosures was expected here.

The meeting, to be held in the courthouse, will be the second of its kind at this prairie town within 72 hours.

The skeleton organization was formed when 400 persons, the majority of them farmers and cattlemen, met Saturday and heard plans for the group. Gene Howe, Amarillo newspaper publisher, and Maj. E. A. Simpson, attorney of that city, were principal speakers.

B. J. Jackson, pioneer cattleman of Roberts county, presided and was named president of the temporary organization. The meeting will be to hear reports of the constitution and name committees.

Simpson advised for peaceful settlement of the foreclosure problem. He counseled against violence and advised that a local attorney be questioned before any steps in opposition to the foreclosures be made.

The speaker urged that members of the legislature and congress be asked to enact laws temporarily relieving debt-ridden farmers.

The Amarillo editor urged the organization to distinguish between "good" and "bad" mortgage holders.

As result of his speech, the organization decided first to ask leniency and prevention of foreclosures before taking other steps.

David Hopper Reports For Winter Training On Baylor Grid Squad

WACO—David Hopper of Big Spring, who was tackle on the freshman football squad at Baylor

last fall, and has done stellar work on the Cub basketball team this season, was among the 26 candidates to respond to Coach Morley Jennings call for winter practice in preparation for the 1933 season.

Hopper came to Baylor with high recommendations, and he is measuring up to those estimates in both of the sports he has entered so far.

Baylor will lose only four men from last year's varsity team by graduation, and while Jennings is making no prophetic, he expects to have an unusually strong squad

CHAPTER XIX

The gentleman whose money was backing the play in which Marion Randolph was started was Craig Abbott. As it happened, Abbott was feeling weary. He was weary of financial responsibilities, bringing practically no returns. He was weary, too, of Miss Randolph's pouting and petty tyrannies. When things went wrong—and they did frequently—Marion was quick to let everyone know it. Craig Abbott had begun to think of sailing dates and ocean liners. A long leisurely cruise, alone and unhampered, to Paris unknown. For an indefinite period. That would be delightful. He was rather new to this business of "angeling" plays. He was rather young. He was unfamiliar with the tempestuous whims of leading ladies but during the past weeks he had been learning rapidly. What he had learned had considerably changed his viewpoint. Abbott realized now that he had been making mistakes. Numerous mistakes. There was that girl he had seen the other evening? Clever youngster. Talented. And he had allowed Mandrake to put her out of the show simply because Miss Randolph so desired. Yes, dropping Sheila Shayne from "When Lights Are Low" had been a serious mistake. All this was in Abbott's mind as Marion Randolph spoke. He sat on a divan in the living room of her apartment. Marion, nearby, was standing because the lines of her tea-time pajamas were better when she stood. Marion might take little thought for the morrow but she took thought contently for her appearance. "Blaine's no good in that part," she repeated. "Get rid of him. Craig, and find someone else." Abbott looked up from the book he had been reading. He said, "Well, if you want him fired, fire him. Why not?" She pouted. "I can't do it, Craig. You know that. But I'm warning you right now there isn't a show in town big enough for both of us!" The man eyed her. "Then why not fire yourself for a change? You've already gotten rid of a good comedian, a cute little dancer, and half the chorus." He counted them off on slim fingers. "You ruined two expensive costumes for no reason at all. Spiked heels," he paused to allow his change of tone to sink in, "aren't awfully good for velvet frocks, are they?" "But I want Blaine fired!" "Darling, why didn't you say that before? I'll go and see him right away. Where does he live? It would be too bad to drag him way down to the theater tonight when he won't be needed."

He rose and was half-way to the door before Marion stopped him with a hand on his arm. "Go back and sit down," she begged, trying to laugh. The venom had drained from her eyes and at that moment she looked innocuous. Her skin, as she well knew and frequently announced, as flawless. Her hair, without that last gold rinse, would have been lovely. Its curl was fairly natural. And the tilt of her head was superb. Even at that moment Abbott would have agreed to all this.

None of these facts, however, interested him. He was thoroughly tired of Marion and Marion's petty whims. "What is the chap's number? We'll get the business over," Abbott went on.

Marion named Blaine's hotel. She was looking worried. Some how she didn't like this mood of Craig's. She had never seen him quite like this before.

"I'll call him," the man was saying, "and take him out to dinner."

"But I thought you were having dinner with me?" For answer Abbott gave the operator the number. A moment more and he was asking for Jim Blaine. There was a pause and then he said, "Blaine? This is Craig Abbott speaking. You don't know me but I'm interested in 'When Lights Are Low.' Wonder if you'd dine with me this evening?" "I'd like to suggest a few changes."

He winked at Marion who quickly recovered her composure. This was going to be all right. How Blaine would write? Still hadn't he a contract? She wrinkled her forehead a moment over this, then decided that he was probably too new to the show business to think of a detail such as that. In that case everything would be fine!

"Well, it's settled," Craig remarked as he replaced the telephone. He did not return to his seat. Instead he closed the book he had been holding and replaced it on the table.

"I'll leave this—or have you a book?" he asked dryly.

"Do you know any more old jokes?" Marion retorted. But she flushed. The old story of the book and the chorus girl had never amused her.

Craig smiled as he let himself out of the apartment. "And now," he said to himself, "I wonder just what inducement I can offer to that little girl who looked as though she liked her geraniums. Let's see—when was it I saw her?" Four hours later they were seated at a dinner table. There were places for three at the table but Jim Blaine had had to leave early to reach the theater. Abbott leaned forward, looking directly into Sheila Shayne's eyes. "To think," he was saying, "that Jim and I have been friends all these years and I didn't recognize him in the show!"

"It was nice of you to let him bring me," Sheila said. "I'm afraid you and Jim had a great deal to talk about." She hadn't been told that Craig Abbott was interested in "When Lights Are Low."

"So have you and I?" "Just a minute! How would you like to drive around the park until Jim can join us?"

"In one of those funny old carriages?" "In anything you say—an airplane or a wheelbarrow. Make your choice, Madams. I am at your service."

"They strolled up Fifth Avenue together," Craig said, "Remember when I told you that I was sure you liked red geraniums? What's your address? I'll send you a truck load of them tomorrow."

She told him the house number and he nodded briefly. "Aren't you going to put it down?" Sheila asked, disappointed.

"As if I could forget it!" They drove through the park until 10:30 and then returned to the hotel where they had dined. There Abbott sent a bellboy to Jim's theater with a taxicab. He didn't care to risk meeting Marion Randolph that evening.

Jim met them promptly at 11. "Now," Craig suggested, "let's go to Harlem. It's my treat."

They set out for Harlem in a cab. "Do you know another girl you could add to the party at this highly impossible hour?" Abbott asked.

Sheila shook her head doubtfully. "There are the Samper sisters," she said finally. "There are five of them and they all look alike. When one is busy you can always ask another."

Two of the five Samper sisters were at home. One of them would have to remain with Mama but the other would be glad to join them.

"Toss a coin and see who stays and who comes," Sheila advised. The Sampers lived on Washington Heights and the cab detoured up Fort Washington avenue. Teasie, radiant, met them at the door. She was pretty and blond. The other four sisters were dark, so on the stage Teasie wore a wig. Their mother didn't approve of dyed hair but with a wig Teasie looked exactly like the others. In street clothes she was the only one Sheila could distinguish from her sisters.

The four "did" Harlem. Teasie had never been there before, she said, but Mama was willing to let her go with Sheila. They found a supper club where the music was gay and the entertainers skillful. Abbott's party was a complete success.

Sheila slept late next morning. She was not needed at rehearsal until late afternoon. She stirred in bed, hearing a commotion outside the door. Footsteps, Ma's voice, something bumping against the wall. Someone knocked and Sheila opened the door.

It was Myrtle who came bounding in. "A ton of geraniums!" she exclaimed. "With your name on them! Your young man isn't out of his head, is he, Sheila?"

El Paso Mayor Studies Issuance Of Scrip As Stimulant To Business

EL PASO (UP)—Proposal to issue $500,000 worth of municipal scrip as a business stimulation move is being considered by Mayor R. E. Sherman.

Under the proposal the city would issue the scrip in 31 denominations, making it obligatory for anyone receiving it to pass it on within a week.

Those receiving scrip would buy a two-cent stamp from the city and place it on the scrip. Each piece of the issued "money" could circulate for 52 weeks and would be redeemed when 52 two-cent stamps were attached.

R. E. Nunnally And Family Move Here

BAIRD—The discontinuation of a local freight train on the Texas & Pacific has caused a number of changes and has made necessary the moving away from Baird on one of our best and most popular families, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Nunnally, who have been residents for years. They will move to Big Spring.

Mr. Nunnally has been engineer on the local freight running west for a number of years and since this train has been discontinued he has taken the run as engineer on the Sunshine Special between Baird and Big Spring and as his longest law-over is in Big Spring.

Mrs. Nunnally and the two charming little daughters, Ellen Louise and Vivian, will move to that city.

Mr. Nunnally has been in the service of the Texas & Pacific for 42 years, beginning work in Big Spring and has made his home in Baird for many years. It was here he and Mrs. Nunnally were married and the family has lived here continuously since.

Mr. Nunnally is the second oldest engineer in point of service on the road between Baird and Big Spring. Tony Weeg, being his senior by a short time. Mr. Weeg is also engineer on the Sunshine Special running opposite Mr. Nunnally.

Other men affected by this change in train service are: J. W. Wilkins, conductor; Mr. McCaslick, W. Shafer and Mr. Lowery, brakemen and Jim Alphin, fireman on the local freight and several of these families will also move from Baird.

Unidentified Cowboy Killed Near Pecos

PECOS (UP)—Identification of a cowboy who was dragged to death by his horse at Crystal Water Ranch near here was sought today.

His skull was fractured yesterday in a 150-yard gallop in which he hung head downward. His chaps caught on the saddle horn as the horse jumped into a dead run when the cowboy attempted to mount.

He had been in this vicinity only three days.

Long—

The air parted to let Huey Long into the R. F. C. the other day. Escorted by Harvey Couch he breezed into the presence of Gardner Cowles. He waved away a chair with the assertion that no one ought to sit down with times what they are. Both Couch and Cowles immediately sat down.

Senator Long then gave his book-seller talk, requesting relief loans for Louisiana. He thanked Cowles extravagantly for previous loans and slapped him twice on the back. The air made way for him going out.

Cowles, a conservative Iowan, was prepared to take Long down a peg. He had no chance to speak until Long was gone. Then he turned to Couch and said: "You know I kinda like that fella."

Johnson—

First mention of Hiram Johnson as a member of Mr. Roosevelt's Cabinet came as a joke from his sidekick Senator McNary.

McNary put the newsmen on Johnson's trail some weeks ago by suggesting he had heard that maybe, perhaps, buzz—buzz—buzz. The newsmen worried Johnson sick with insistent queries. The matter received so much publicity that the Democrats took up the idea and Johnson was seriously considered. The truth of the matter appears to be that Mr. Roosevelt would like to have Johnson but that the Californian will not take it.

At least he would not up to a week ago.

Notes—

There were so many mistakes in the R. F. C. loan report to Congress that a New York financial newspaper refused to carry the lists after several pages had been set up in type. Complaints rolled in from banks all over the country. The Senate visit of Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador, was probably not important but it looked like it. Change the political faux pas to Democratic Leader Robinson who confessed it. Senators facetiously referred to Sir Ronald as "The British debt lobbyist."

Mr. Roosevelt is going back to New York after his cruise down South. He will remain there until March 4. His first public appearance after inauguration will be at the dinner of the White House Correspondents Association March 11. Senator Glass refused to pose for a news photographer saying: "You know how ugly I am, and I know I am not getting any better looking."

NEW YORK

By James McMullin

An exchange of High Commissioners between the United States and Russia may be the novel solution which the President-elect will bring forward. His close friends here are keen about the plan.

N. Y. Central—

There is more than meets the eye in Delaware & Hudson's acquisition of 500,000 shares of New York Central. Purchases have been going on for months and have been referred to several times in this column. Here are several points worth bearing in mind:

(1) Delaware & Hudson sold ten million dollars worth of short term government bonds and other income producers in order to buy a stock with very poor dividend prospects.

(2) Up to now D. & H. earnings on investment have just about offset the railroad's operating deficit. This advantageous position has now been sacrificed.

(3) L. F. Loree's pet ambition has always been to head a major trunk line.

(4) The announced purchase of 500,000 shares is backed by Loree and his friends having bought a lot more on the side for themselves—perhaps as much again.

A major consolidation of Central,

Lackawanna and Delaware and Hudson is distinctly possible. That would sound a lot better than to have the New York Central go broke. The debt might be reduced through a readjustment which would normally wipe out the common stock interest of Central (including Delaware & Hudson's holdings). It can be safely assumed that Loree has been given assurances against that contingency. Less influential stockholders might not fare so well.

There is also a chance that the R.F.C. may be asked to relieve the Central's debt burden—and incidentally relieve the bankers who are now holding the bag.

Once readjustments are taken care of there could still be a lively war for control between Loree and the Vanderbilt-Baker crowd. Loree talks like the boss but he isn't—yet.

Rails—

The Morgan angle—coupled with Edison Institute development—means that these interests are gradually sliding out of the railroad picture to concentrate more heavily on utilities.

Pennsylvania's fifty cent dividend will be the last for some time, barring miracles. The stock of this company is more widely held than that of any other railroad. It is known locally as the widows and orphans road. By luck or judgment it has maintained a better cash position than its competitors.

Canadian Pacific is in a unique position. Its financial structure is such that it would remain solvent even after a default of all of its obligations and such an eventuality is extremely remote. Informed opinion holds that Canada will probably come back much faster than the United States.

Canada—

Britain's policy of carefully avoiding offense to Japan in connection with Manchurian development is beginning to bear fruit. Japanese lumber orders which used to be placed in this country have been switched to Canada and the industry there is beginning to feel chipper again.

R. F. C.—

There's a very competent woman in the personnel department of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Every application for a job has gone through her hands since the Corporation was set up. Her relations with her former employers are close and cordial. The House of Morgan is a great help.

HEARING—

"If he is losing $1,000 to $2,000 a year, he had better abandon his property. Check blocked a suggestion of the court and the producers that trial of the cases be expedited by considering testimony offered at three previous reviews. Check refused to accept the records cited.

Judge Hutcheson then ordered the suit brought by the Rowan & Nichols Oil Company, Fort Worth, tried first. Attorney Rios Tilley called A. H. Rowan, president of the company, as the first witness.

Rowan testified his company held two leases in the field, one comprising 28 acres and the other 25 acres. He said while the present proration order is supposed to take "bottom-hole" pressure into account as a major factor in determining allowables, actually it did not.

The present allowable calls for a maximum per well production of 31 barrels and a minimum of 28 barrels. This, Rowan said, made it possible for a well located on a one-acre lease to produce as much oil as an oil located on a 20-acre lease if the "bottom-hole" pressure

BASEBALLERS WORK OUT WINTER KINKS

Rowan charged there had been many infractions of the commission order for not more than one well to a 20-acre tract. He said 5,300 of the wells drilled in the field had been exceptions to that rule.

To refute the plaintiffs' testimony the commission's counsel called E. O. Buck, resident petroleum engineer, to the stand.

"The orderly method of withdrawal of oil under proration orders," Buck testified, "is preventing the encroachment of water and will make possible a greater recovery of oil."

If the field's allowable were increased materially, Buck continued, much oil would be lost through too rapid encroachment of water.

LIPPMANN—

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1) teen hours a week, and every one will have an income of $20,000. The prophecy of doom suits the popular mood: when prices have been falling for three years, why not suppose they will fall to zero? The prospect of a millennium is also popular: who would not like to believe scientists who promise riches with almost no work? Thus the prestige of science, the mystification of scientific jargon, the prediction of disaster, and the promise of salvation have proved to be an ideal combination to impress a people who are disillusioned, frightened and eager for guidance.

It is a heartless pretense. I say this without impugning the good faith of many men, some of them personal friends of mine, who have been caught in the agitation and sincerely believe in it. Technocracy is to the misery of the depression what Inquisition and Kreugerism were to the frenzied finance of the boom. It is a vast inflation and pyramiding of generalizations and theories on a small base of substantial truth. Honorable and sincere men believed in the Insull and Kreuger contraptions, for there were some real properties underneath both these enterprises. Honorable and sincere men believe in technocracy, for there are real problems of manifest importance underlying its spectacular assertions. But the prophecies and promises which purport to be based on these realities are scientific hocus pocus.

In making this charge I rely upon the testimony of Joseph W. Barker, dean of the Faculty of Engineering at Columbia University. Mr. Barker, it should be understood, is the head of that department of Columbia University which, according to Mr. Howard Scott, is "in association with" the "energy survey of North America now being conducted by Technocracy." Writing in the "American Bankers' Association Journal" for February, Dean Barker explains that Columbia has been associated with technocracy, not for twelve years, as the public has been allowed to believe, but for approximately ten months. He states that the work of collecting data on the effects of technological changes is in its early stages and that thus far there has been only one "preliminary conference," held last December, to consider the material thus far collected. "It must be recognized," he says, "that the very magnitude of such a study precludes any possibility of immediate results." Yet here are Mr. Howard Scott and his disciples writing magazine articles, publishing books, speaking on the radio and issuing statements purporting to contain conclusions drawn from the study at Columbia.

Dean Barker has supplied the clue to the mystery of technocracy. Every since last summer, when technocracy came into the limelight, the most puzzling aspect of the agitation has been the curious behavior of Mr. Scott and his disciples when they were asked to produce the underlying material for their generalizations. I have talked with Mr. Scott and with his chief lieutenants at considerable length, and I was not able to obtain from them any plain answer to the obvious question: where is the material on which you base all your theories? Others have obviously had the same experience. The American Engineering Council, for example, has stated publicly that it has been impossible to obtain "from the promoters of the movement an authoritative statement of their findings and their program." In the New York Times of Sunday, January 22, replying to Mr. Simon Strunsky's criticism, the technocrats state that "the results" of their research "will be published when they have assumed a form consistent with logical presentation and the highest possible accuracy in detail." In the meantime Mr. Scott will go on publishing his "results" in the popular magazines and through all other forms of publicity.

Now the technocrats profess to be engineers who have been working since 1920 according to the canons of scientific research. Imagine the situation were it to be announced through a press agent that a group of research workers at the Harvard Medical School had been studying heart disease for 10 years and had discovered revolutionary knowledge pertaining to it; and then suppose that they failed to invite other medical men to examine their data, test their instruments, check their procedure, though they were quite willing to write for popular magazines and make the most tremendous claims. In medicine that would be dismissed indignantly as quackery. Among technologists it is also quackery.

Dean Barker has let the cat out of the bag. It is true that material is being collected at Columbia, presumably in a conscientious way. This material is, however, so incomplete that the engineering faculty at Columbia, which has been studying the analysis ready for publication and as offering no foundation whatever for any immediate practical conclusions. Taking off from this investigation, a movement headed by Mr. Howard Scott has been launched which pretends to be speaking for the research workers, but is in fact offering the general public Mr. Scott's own notions about things in general.

This explains the main mystery of technocracy, which is: how does the analysis of the facts lead so certainly to Mr. Scott's enormous conclusions? The explanation is that it does not lead to them. There is no logical or rational connection between the analysis and the conclusions. For the conclusions have been reached before the analysis has been completed. Mr. Scott's prophecies of doom and his promises of a millennium have, therefore, no essential connection with the survey which is being carried on at Columbia University and the claim that he is speaking "in the name of science" is simply no more. (To be continued tomorrow)

Things look different in COLD BLACK TYPE

"I HEAR," said the friend, "that you have just made $50,000 in the insurance business."

"Right—except for one or two slight particulars. It was real estate—not insurance. It was $75,000, not $50,000. And I didn't make it—I lost it!"

Has it ever happened to you that something you've told an acquaintance comes back, after many days, so distorted that you hardly recognize it? The spoken word so changes and colors much that we say, that by the time it passes many lips only the skeleton of truth remains.

But how different it is with the printed word! That is why you can trust the advertisements. Had you thought of it that way? Because the manufacturer and merchant are compelled to be accurate in type, you know that the quality of soap, ginger ale, clothing, butter or furniture you buy is as standardized as the calendar. It's all the manufacturer and retailer claim for it. It has to be!

Read the advertisements. Read them carefully, critically. Read them for profit! Read them knowing that the truth pays . . . you and the advertiser!

Steers Play Odessa Team

Only Contest Of Week Scheduled For Tuesday Evening

Coach George Brown and his Big Spring Steers take off for Odessa this afternoon where the only game of the week will be played. The Steers will rest for the remainder of the week.

Odessa was easily disposed of by Big Spring in the tournament at McCamey last week end, but is expected to put up a stubborn fight on their home floor. Brown will likely start his regulars.

The following week Steers resume activity with a heavy schedule. Odessa will come here for one game, Big Spring will go to Big Lake, and the latter will come here for a return engagement.

A slight calm in the Steer schedule will occur before the team goes to Colorado in quest of a western half District 8 championship February 17-18.

Congressman-Elect Soon To Take Post

HOUSTON (UP)—Joseph Henry Eagle, representative-elect from the eighth Texas congressional district, will leave for Washington the latter part of this week if Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson has signed his credentials by that time, he announced.

Against a field of 22 candidates Eagle was sent back to congress by a clear majority in one of Texas' most remarkable elections.

Eagle received 18,862 votes as compared to 5,470 votes for Chester A. Bryan, his nearest competitor, and 4,776 for Robert L. Cole.

The returns were from 111 complete and 14 incomplete Harris county boxes and scattered boxes in Grimes, Waller and Fort Bend counties.

Eagle served as eighth district congressman for four terms during the war, resigning voluntarily in 1920. Saturday's special election was caused by the death of Rep. Daniel E. Garrett in December.

Oscar F. Holcombe, who was once mayor of Houston four years ago by Walter E. Monteith and again defeated by him two years ago, was returned to office by a slim margin of 222 votes. It was necessary to add the second choice votes of the candidates to decide the outcome.

Quick Report On Railroads Is Promised

Alfred E. Smith Spokesman For Committee In Washington

WASHINGTON—The results of a quick but thorough inspection of the government's end of the railroad problem were carried back to New York by a voluntary citizens' committee with the promise of a definite plan for righting the country's transportation troubles by late February.

The distinguished national transportation committee of which Calvin Coolidge was chairman until his death, left behind the capital a quickened activity on various angles of the rail problem which forecast action in several directions before the committee report is issued, by Feb. 22.

The members, Bernard M. Baruch, acting chairman; Alfred E. Smith, Clark Howell of Atlanta and Alexander Legge of Chicago, conferred at the Capitol with Representative Rayburn, chairman of the House Interstate Commerce Commission for an extended discussion with the officials who direct rail regulation.

Smith Promises Report
Smith, acting as committee spokesman, set the date for the report, said the committee was in sympathy with the rail bankruptcy plan of the La Guardia-McKeown bill, but declined to endorse it specifically. He did approve Rayburn's pending bill to repeal the recapture clause under which the government is authorized to take a portion of excess railroad profits.

Definite new energy was put behind this and other legislation, although the bankruptcy act was the only one appearing to have distinct chances of passage at the present session.

Couzens Moves In Senate
Another attack on rail problems, however, was launched by Senator Couzens, who as chairman of a banking subcommittee, started investigation of Reconstruction Corporation loans to determine whether his resolution to forbid any more such credits for a time, should be adopted.

Couzens said the committee would require estimates of the present value of collateral put up for such loans, would demand the names of roads likely to have to borrow within the next six months and would call upon the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to give a complete summary of the loans made and where the money went.

Hearings will begin Tuesday. Smith announced the date of the forthcoming report after the conference with Rayburn. He declined to indicate what the recommendations would be.

Presidio Ranchmen Arm Selves In Fear Of Mexican Raids

MARFA—Reports reached here that ranchmen in the vicinity of Presidio, seventy miles south of Marfa on the Rio Grande, had armed themselves as a protection from raids by bandits from across the river.

Stanley Casner, manager of the Chinati plantations, north of Presidio, said that a store which carried supplies and clothing for farmers and ranchmen had been looted and that an investigation proved the robbers were from Mexico.

Casner stated that the Mexicans, who cross a shallow ford at that point, have boasted openly that soldiers and the post at Fort D. A. Russell at Marfa had been removed and that they could do as they pleased. The border patrol and ranger forces were described as inadequate to cope with the situation. County peace officers consist of several deputies and a sheriff.

President-Elect To Have Contact With Newspapers

By HERBERT PLUMMER
WASHINGTON—With such veteran newspapermen as Louis Howe, Stephen T. Early and Marvin H. McIntyre installed as members of the Roosevelt secretariat, it would appear that the incoming President plans to keep a close watch on the trend of public sentiment during his occupancy of the White House.

Presence of this trio at the executive mansion will enable Mr. Roosevelt to keep his finger on the public pulse. Opinion on the great questions of government, as reflected in the press of the various sections of the nation, could hardly escape their trained eyes.

Improvements in the existing system of keeping the President informed even may be instituted. For since the days of Wilson Presidents have found it expedient to keep tabs on editorial opinion.

war President, conceived the idea of assimilating daily editorials and clippings and grouping them "in such a way as to make it easy for the President to read them."

The President's Papers
This digest came to be known unofficially as the President's daily newspaper. President Harding used the same method to some extent when Mr. Hoover came to the White House the "newspaper" assumed greater proportions.

Thirty-five or more papers are received at the White House every morning. In addition, two clipping services provide material from the smaller papers.

A clerk at the White House, with an assistant, spends the better part of the day going through these papers and clippings and classifying them. They are mounted on sheets of yellow foolscap, loosely bound, and placed on the desk of the President late in the day.

If Mr. Hoover has time before leaving the executive offices, he studies the clippings. If not, he often carries them away with him to the White House proper to pore over them at night in the quiet of the Lincoln study.

Papers By Airplane
President Hoover always has been an avid reader of newspapers. His interest in them is attested when he is away from Washington on week-ends at his camp on the Rapidan. Every Sunday morning a plane circles overhead and drops the morning newspapers and urgent mail.

Guests at the Rapidan have been surprised upon awakening Sunday mornings, no matter how early, to find the President seated in "Town Hall", the center of the camp, deeply engaged in the papers. Often he has finished with them and able to discuss with his guests the day's news in detail.

President Hoover, too, is an ardent reader of the daily papers. On his campaign trips he spent much time in reading them each day and scanning the clippings provided by his secretaries.
