TODAY and TOMORROW

By WALTER LAPPANN
 Hoarding

The spectacular rise in the price of stocks and bonds is a vote of confidence by the markets in the measures thus far taken. It reflects confidence that the terrifying effect of bank failures has been ended. It reflects confidence that the threat of currency destruction under the impact of an uncontrollable deficit has been removed. It reflects confidence that the administration has established its leadership sufficiently to proceed promptly with further measures of relief and reconstruction.

To sustain this confidence so that it may translate itself into the revival of trade, a resumption of investment and a recovery of employment is now the order of the day. For we should be unreasonably tickler-minded if we allowed this most desirable speculative enthusiasm to subside as once more into the complacent notion that an automatic return of prosperity is now guaranteed. That mistake has been made at least three times before during the course of the depression. It was made in the winter of 1931, and again after the Hoover Moratorium, and again last summer. A speculative rise based on a change in mood is not a solution. Let us hope that this time we shall seize the opportunity.

Beaumont Exporters Open With New Machine This Year As Usual

BEAUMONT (UP) — Tradition prescribes that the Beaumont Exporters be a new machine each year.

Absent from the roll of players which carried the Exporters to the Texas League championship last year are such men as Hank Greenberg, Art Herring, Schoolboy Rowe, Lizzie Goldstein, Pete Fox, Luke Hamlin, Buck Morrow and Frank Reiber.

Some of the players will be returned to the Exporters if they fail to make the grade with the Detroit Tigers, father of the Beaumont chain club. But notwithstanding this depletion of ranks Business Manager Bobby Stow looks to his Exporters to repeat this year last season's performance.

Stow's forecast came without consideration that some of the 1932 Exporters would be returned here. Neither, said he, does he take into consideration the fact that the Tigers may ship other men here who heretofore have not worn the Beaumont uniform.

Tradition of team changes is carried out this year in one more particular. Manager Del Baker of the

Debaters Of Forsan Take County Meet

Both Boys And Girls Given Decisions Here Saturday

Foreign debaters captured all honors Saturday in the county tournament. Both boys' and girls' teams emerged victors.

Forsan boys won over Coahoma by a single vote margin and won a clear right to the county title when Knott teams were forced to withdraw because of an epidemic of measles in the community.

Lomax girls advanced to the finals because of Knott's withdrawal, but lost by an unanimous vote to Forsan girls, who had previously nosed out Coahoma.

Since Howard county operates under the city-county unit rule, Big Spring was not entered in the debate events. The remaining portion of the county meet will be held Saturday. The county inter-scholastic executive committee convenes Monday evening to arrange a schedule.

Question for debate was: Resolved, that at least one half of all state and local revenue in Texas should be derived from some source other than taxes on tangible property.

Back To The Farm

abcock reports that there have been a dozen to a hundred locations for every vacant ten-acre farm in that area of the South. Most of the applicants are farmers who, after a taste of "the work" are anxious to get back to their first love.

It goes over most of the county farms that have been vacant years are being taken up and made livable by families bent on doing close to the soil.

One of them expects to make a one. That is not what they are seeking. They are seeking an opportunity to make a living.

he farm as a place of refuge from economic blasts, a place of reasonable security against the uncertainty and strain of pursuing a holding a mere job, is coming in popular favor.

It is true that the lot of the farmer has been a difficult one for several years. Perhaps it isn't any better now than before, but it is something that the city does not always provide in times like these—a roof overhead, an opportunity to dig a living out of the earth and a chance to "sustain."

Kindly Nature has contributed to the growing attractiveness of farm. Seasons were good last year; this year, promise of another good crop is held out. Gardens are flourished, feedstuffs have been abundant.

The general swing back to normalcy, the farm will lead way—as it always has. Farm men will be the first to react, as, with millions of arable acres touched by the pow, is in a similarly strong position to reap benefits of this newer economic which many believe we are now seeing.

Pretty Birthday Party Given By Jimmie L. Mason

Jimmie Lee Mason, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie Mason, celebrated his third birthday with a party at the home of his mother, Mrs. Mason, on Saturday afternoon. The little guests received rabbits and chickens from a fish pond as favors.

The dining room was attractively decorated in green. The birthday cake was iced in green with three pink candles on top and surrounded with grass and Easter eggs. Two large green candles in Irish potato holders were on each end of the table.

The little host was dressed in a green suit. Pictures were made of the children on the lawn. Many nice gifts were received by the honoree.

The guests were: Lynn Porter, Laird and Mary Nell Reneke; Raymond, W. B. and Joanna Winn; Jimmie Harris, Billie and Bobbie Bass, Bob Coffey, Betty Jean Underwood, Billie Jones Neal, Hayes Franklin Stripling, Billie Jean Younger, Betty Ray Neal, Bobbie Glaser and Nora Elizabeth Howe.

The mothers present were: Mrs. Alton Underwood, W. B. Younger, Byron Neal, Raymond Wian, W. H. Reneke, A. A. Porter and H. L. Mason.

The following sent gifts but could not attend: Emma Jeanne Slaughter, Janice Dunagan, Charles Davis, Mr. J. B. Nail, Nell Davis, Charles Lovelace and Kathleen and Bill Little.

The Chesterfield FORMULA—what is it?

The formulas and processes which make Chesterfield a milder and better-tasting cigarette are secret—to prevent others from copying them

If every person knew the method and processes of tanning leather, it would be of interest; but what people want to know is: Is it a good shoe? Is it comfortable? Will it wear longer? Is the price right?

So it is with Chesterfield Cigarettes. If smokers, men and women, knew all of the formulas and processes of manufacture, it would be of interest to them; but what smokers really want is the result.

Everything that goes into Chesterfield Cigarettes is as good as money can buy.

Every process has in it all that science knows about cigarette manufacture.

The formulas are secret to prevent others from copying them. The mildness and the better taste you may prove for yourself. May we ask you to try Chesterfield?

Wherever you buy Chesterfield, you get them just as fresh as if you came by our factory door

One I Love

CHAPTER XII

The young man across the aisle looked slightly and shifted his eyes to the bright border of the cards over Janet's head. His blue eyes, fastened on a purple and orange monstrosity advertising cough syrup. It must have interested him for he studied it intently. Janet was able to give him a second, covert glance and recognized him at once. He was not as she had supposed, another of the stern and unsmiling to be frigidly ignored. He was the new roomer at Mrs. Snyder's—the young man who had mistaken her room for one that was vacant and come there to borrow an electric light bulb. She had seen him only once since, leaving the house one morning about her. Janet's quick scrutiny took in the dark blue overcoat and the snap-brim black felt. Yes, he was rather nice looking.

Suddenly their eyes met again and this time Janet smiled. The young man smiled too. Tremoringly Janet remembered that she had not been very gracious the other night. Quite the opposite! She had treated the young man as though he were a burglar, practically accused him of being one. He had been embarrassed and she had done nothing whatever to alleviate the situation. "What's the matter with me tonight?" Janet asked herself. "Do I have to quarrel with everyone? Can't I even speak civilly to a stranger?"

They were still several blocks from the rooming house. Janet did not look toward the young man again but when they both rose to save the car he waited to let her go ahead. On the sidewalk she "nerved" hesitating. The young man swung down to the ground.

"You're Mr. Grant, aren't you?" Janet asked. Only a moment before the name had come to her.

"Yes, I was quite sure when I saw you on the car."

"My name's Janet Hill," the girl went on. "And of course I know you're living at Mrs. Snyder's. Have you been in Lancaster long?"

"A little over a month," he told her. "The first week I stayed at a hotel but I didn't like that very well."

How tall he was! Walking beside him, Janet felt much less than her five feet five, which was certainly a good average height for a girl. Something about him made her sure that he had played football and probably other sports. He looked like a fighter. Why shouldn't he like it here? she asked politely.

"Oh, I guess so. It's convenient. I'm working for Standard Steel down in the Rosier building."

Janet had never heard of Standard Steel but the name was familiar.

"What do you do?" she asked.

The young man laughed. He had a pleasant, low-pitched laugh to match his pleasant, low-pitched voice. "To tell the truth," he said, "I'm just beginning to find out what it's all about. I'm supposed to be a salesman, some day I guess. About all I've done so far is look through files and answer letters. Before I came here I worked in a steel mill. This office life is all new to me."

He mentioned the name of the city where the steel mill was located and added that he had worked there since leaving college two years before.

There was a pause in the conversation. Steel mills were certainly not a subject on which Janet had much information. She could think of absolutely nothing to say about them.

But they had almost reached the rooming house. She felt back on one of the stock questions used with newcomers. "Do you know many people in Lancaster?" she asked.

"Oh, I've met quite a few at the office. There are a couple of fellows, too, that I used to know at school. Lancaster seems to be a nice place all right. I guess I'll like it as soon as I get to feel more at home here."

"You'll like it," she assured him cheerfully.

Now they had reached the rooming house. Janet entered and went to the hall table where mail was left to see if there was anything for her. Young Mr. Grant hurried up the stairs. There were no letters on the table for Janet but she lingered to speak to Mrs. Snyder who appeared in the doorway. Then she mounted the stairs slowly and went to her room.

No letters. No telephone calls. Nothing but a lonely evening ahead exactly like last night and the night before.

She closed the door behind her, took off her hat and coat and went about the business of preparing a sketchy meal. Eating was only a matter of routine these days. As she lit the gas burner and set the tea kettle on to heat, Janet's thoughts returned to the young man upstairs. Rather a nice young man, she thought casually. Not handsome, not really good-looking like Rolf, oh, there she was, doing what she had sworn she would not do! Thinking about Rolf. Comparing everything she did to other days and evenings when she had been with him! Why shouldn't she stop it?

Well, she would stop! She would deliberately put Rolf Carlyle out of her mind, as she had assured herself again and again she had already done. She would not think about him!

There was that young man upstairs, Mr. Grant. Janet wondered idly what his first name might be. Anything of course. You never could tell about names. She liked the way his eyes crinkled at the corners when he smiled. They were such very blue eyes. She liked the way he laughed, too, and the low pitch of his voice.

Well, she had tried to make up for the cross way she had spoken that other night. She hoped she had made a better impression this time. Not that Janet had tried consciously to create an "impression" of any sort. It was natural, though for her to be friendly with everyone. She didn't like to think of herself as being cross and snappish even when there were excuses for it.

"I'm glad," she said to herself, "that he didn't say anything about a date. Since he's already made friends I won't have to worry about that."

A few days later one of Janet's questions about the new roomer was answered. She learned that his first name was Jeffrey, for among the letters laid out on the table in the hall was one addressed to "Mr. Jeffrey R. Grant." It was rather a nice name and it seemed to suit him.

A week passed and she did not see Jeffrey Grant again. February had given way to March, which arrived in lamb-like fashion and remained that way. Each day the sun shone. The wind lost its chilly nip and at midday was almost zephyr-like. Crowds pouring out of downtown buildings lingered on the sidewalks to chat and amuse themselves. The windows of department stores blossomed with bright-colored spring garments. Already girls were wearing little snug straw hats and some of them had discarded winter coats for jacket suits and light-weight wraps that might be cool but were undeniably trim and becoming. Tulips and hyacinths and freesias made gay masses of bloom in the flower shops, and every sign pointed to spring.

What a time to be lonely and unhappy! What a time to nurse heart-ache, to paint a brave smile on lips that did not dare to stop smiling!

Janet tried to find solace in work. It was a busy time in the Every Home office and she was grateful for it. She arrived early and remained late. Young Hamilton, who customarily forgot that there he worked with lacked his immense physical energy and dynamic driving power about every privilege of an employer. He gave her more work regularly than any secretary could turn out between the hours of nine and five o'clock. He gave her errands outside the office and he was irritable when the letter he wanted was not on his desk the minute he wanted it. Janet was uncomplaining. When she was too tired to think of anything except the ache in her shoulders it was easier to forget spring days a year ago. It was easier to forget a sky of midnight velvet splashed with star-shine, soft winds playing a mad, exciting melody, a boy and a girl, hearts beating high and in unison and the world at their feet.

It was easier to forget that all that was over.

She came slowly up the stairs of the rooming house one evening, pausing on the next to the top step to find the key in her purse. A door half-way down the hall opened and Mollie Lambert emerged.

"Janet!" she exclaimed eagerly. "You're the very person I've been looking for!"

Miss Martha Edwards Becomes Bride Of Mr. Jesse A. Maxwell

Ceremony Performed In Waurika, Oklahoma Friday

MRS. JESSE A. MAXWELL
Miss Martha Edwards, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Edwards of Big Spring, became the bride of Mr. Jesse A. Maxwell in a ceremony performed at Waurika, Okla., Friday afternoon by the Rev. A. J.

Johnson, Methodist pastor of that place. Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell left Waurika immediately after the ceremony for Atlanta, Ga., where Mr. Maxwell has been transferred as local manager for American Airways, Inc., a position similar to one he had held here since the spring of 1931. He took up his new duties there Monday and has offices at Candler Field.

Mrs. Maxwell has resided here five years, coming with her parents from Henrietta. Her father is a well-known oil man. She is a former student of Southwestern university and the University of Texas, where she was a member of Delta Delta Delta sorority. For her wedding she was attractively attired in a traveling suit of gray with gray hat, shoes and accessories and carried a bouquet of yellow jonquills and hyacinths.

The couple was accompanied from here by the bride's father and her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. J. Henry Edwards. At Henrietta her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Douglas, joined the party.

Mr. Maxwell was born and reared in Tuscaloosa, Ala., and attended the University of Alabama in that city. Later he entered the army flying school at Kelly Field, San Antonio, and is a licensed pilot. He became connected with American Airways about three years ago and was stationed in Dallas and Austin before coming here.

Kentucky Man Tells Why He Prefers Black-Draught

"I have tried other medicines, but haven't found any of them that has given me the satisfaction that I have found in taking Black-Draught," writes Mr. W. N. Futrell, of Hickory, Ky. "About three years ago, I began suffering from constipation that made me feel dull, tired and worn-out. I did not feel like I could keep going. I tried remedies but not anything that gave me the satisfaction that Black-Draught has given, and I have laid them all aside for Black-Draught. I am truly glad to recommend it to others, for it is a good medicine for constipation."

Thousands of men and women rely on this famous medicine when they need a laxative. Sold everywhere.

Medical Men Of Two Continents Prepare For Meeting In Dallas

Annual Congress Of Pan-American Medical Association To Open Sessions Saturday; 1,000 Expected

By JACK BISCO

DALLAS (UP)—Medical science, which recognizes no international boundary, will be fittingly represented in Dallas for five days beginning Tuesday, March 25, when leading practitioners of two continents assemble here for the fourth annual congress of the Pan-American Medical Association.

An estimated 1,000 persons will gather to hear 200 eminent authorities outline the latest findings of research workers in a never-ending vigilance for the conservation of human life.

Last minute preparations for the meeting, the first to be held among English-speaking peoples of the Western Hemisphere, are being directed by Dr. John O. McReynolds, Dallas, the congress president.

Among the scheduled early arrivals is that of Dr. Francisco M. Fernandez, Havana, Cuba, president of the association. Dr. McReynolds as congress president serves only for one year's session.

Notables

The roster of notables on the speaking program assures in the convention's success.

Major Gen. James Guthrie, Harvard former chief of staff of the United States Army will address a public health session of the Congress. Among his audience will be heads of national public health departments of the United States, Mexico, Cuba and many other countries.

And here are only a few of the other speakers of note, whose topics will embrace virtually every field of medical study:

Mr. Mario Torrella, professor of pediatrics at the Central University, Mexico City; Gen. Herbert Stroy Birkett, Montreal, Canada, professor of otology and laryngology of McGill University; Dr. Ulises Valdes, professor extraordinary of surgery at the National University, Mexico City; Dr. P. Brook Bland, professor of obstetrics and attending obstetrician at the Jefferson Medical College Hospital, Philadelphia.

New Yorkers

Dr. Fred H. Albee, New York, professor of orthopedic surgery at Columbia University, is another speaker as is Dr. Julius J. Valentine, New York, urologist at the Doctors' Hospital in that city.

In addition to the scientific sessions, the association members will find a full program of entertainment and recreation awaiting them and during their stay in Dallas, the Dallas Chamber of Commerce and other civic organizations are cooperating with local members of the medical profession in arranging the latter features of the convention.

Mrs. John Bryan, formerly Miss Carolyn Early of this city, has returned to her home in Tyler after visiting a few days with relatives here.

VAGULATOR Coffee Brewer

"Have you found a new brand of coffee?"

"No. It's the same brand, but this coffee is made in a Vaculator coffee brewer. It brews perfect coffee by extracting the maximum amount of aromatic oils which give coffee its fine flavor, and leaves in the coffee grounds the elements which make some coffee unpleasant. After this, you'll always have 'vaculated' coffee."

You, too, will like the new and different way of making coffee. Ask any employee of this company for an explanation or demonstration.

HOW THE VAGULATOR OPERATES

Messured water in the bottom, pushes coffee in the top, and heating apparatus of coffee in one cup of water.

Heat generates pressure, which forces water to flow upward. The use of hot water hastens this preliminary scum.

Coffee is brewed in upper glass when correct temperature is controlled. When upward flow ceases, current should be turned off.

Removing from heat creates a vacuum in lower glass which "pulls" down filtered coffee in a jiffy.

Remove upper glass and serve. The coffee will stay hot several of thirty minutes in the decanter.
