THE PUBLIC'S FAILURE

Fixing the blame for our present economic confusion and our administrative waste, "with its sense of frustration," upon the politician or officeholder is but the surface indication of a disturbance which is much more basic, in the opinion of John B. Gaus, professor of political science at the University of Minnesota, who reports on "The State of Nation's Cities," in the 1936 Municipal Yearbook, shortly to be published by the International City Managers Association.

"The fundamental truth," says Professor Gaus, "is that we have, in our rapid development, outgrown the neighborhood and village conditions in which our political ideas were formed, and we have failed to achieve any adequate positive conception of the city and its collective services as essential parts in a true economy and welfare essential to all citizens."

As evidence of this confused public mind, Professor Gaus cites "the heavy costs of our lack of preparedness for the expanded responsibilities of our local government; the lack of adequate exact knowledge on which to base programs of public works of all kinds; the confusion and cost resulting from mixing relief and public works without clarifying the respective objectives and possibilities, and hence priorities, of each; and the lack of longtime schedules of financing permanent public improvements."

The business of placing responsibility for all these faults can not be stopped with pointing to the mass of officeholders, or to individuals. The public has failed to keep itself abreast of changing conditions. We are content to go along with forms devised by our great grandfathers because we have not been inwardly aware of the changes that have taken place since our great-grandfathers lived. There has been progress in government, at witness the many improvements in federal, state and local administration; but this progress has come rather despite than because of the public's exercised will. So far as public incentive or inspiration to better government is concerned, we remain in the horse-and-buggy age.—Star-Telegram.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—Donald R. Richberg is back on the inside again.

Once known as "assistant president," chief New Deal co-ordinator and head of the National Emergency Council, he disappeared from White House huddles as well as from the public gaze after the U. S. Supreme Court swung at NRA in its famous decision on Richberg's pet Schechter case.

But now he has again become such a court favorite—without publicity—that other insiders who don't like Mr. Richberg are beginning to grumble.

Richberg wrote most of the president's relief message to Congress, which called for co-operation by private industry to increase employment.

Don't be surprised if he soon receives an important appointment under the Department of Justice and subsequently appears both before the supreme court on New Deal cases and before the public with pro-New Deal campaign speeches.

Although his friends thought he had been treated shabbily by being dropped after taking many "raps" for the administration, Richberg never became bitter.

He began a series of speeches supporting Roosevelt on the constitutional issue and relations began to warm up again when, as head of the National Progressive League, he caustically criticized Al Smith's Liberty League speech.

His job used to be to conciliate industrialists and business men with the New Deal and he probably will resume that function.

Practically all parties concerned in the dispute over the Senate lobby committee's right to subpoena telegrams are agreed that Chairman Hugo Black of Alabama is a very smart man.

Whatever your opinion of the ethics involved, consensus in Washington is that Black's recent counter-moves have been good as strategic maneuvers. Loaded down with bad publicity by legal and other protests from Liberty Leaguers and William Randolph Hearst—who objected to Black's perusal of their telegrams—Black first diverted public attention and got the spectators all stirred up again by revealing that six congressmen had lived last summer with a "power trust" lobbyist.

Then he achieved his master coup by making available to Rep. John J. McSwain (Dem., S. C.), an alleged copy of a telegram which Hearst by court action had sought to suppress. The results were scarcely less than terrific as the popular McSwain, quivering into the heights of melodrama, read Hearst's description of him in a message to an editorial writer as "a Communist in spirit and a traitor in effect."

The House roared its approval of McSwain, who in 1917, at the age of 42, volunteered to go to war as a private and returned a captain.

He is a member of the Sons of the Revolution, Sons of the Confederacy, American Legion, and Veterans of Foreign Wars and pacifists have called him "the worst jingo in the House."

No man suggested that the telegram was "private" and shouldn't have been in McSwain's hands. Nobody cared. One of "the boys" had been attacked! And the reaction of the House spelled out the fact that, insofar as Congress was concerned, Black would have a free hand and all the money he wanted for his investigation.

Europe might consider the use of cellophane in which cigarettes and gum are wrapped, in drawing up new treaties.

A 3-year-old Colorado boy was found after being lost in a dust storm. By calling at his house, neighboring farmers may recover much of their missing topsoil.

Northwestern professor says people eventually will have no legs, because of lack of exercise. Still, politicians are doing their best to keep them from shrinking.

Tests made at a New York flower show prove that women have a better sense of smell than men. But think of the practice they get when hubby comes home late.

A London chef says the younger generation doesn't know soup. Which makes the score even; the y. g. always have contended their elders didn't know beans.

Italians already have captured a couple of mountains. The strategy undoubtedly is to keep this up until they have Selassie's range.

ABOUT NEW YORK

BY GEORGE TUCKER.

NEW YORK.—Tumult of the town: Theater-goers who strike matches after the curtain-rises are apt to get punched in the nose... The other night I was startled, and delighted, to hear a voice rasp: "Put that match out..." A fellow, probably because he wanted to consult his program, lighted a match and not only annoyed the actors by creating a flare during a tense scene, but licked the patrons who sat in his vicinity with sulphurous fumes.

The voice cut sharply: "I said put that match out. It'll come over there and get you!" The match was extinguished and John Anderson—it was he—sank back into the darkness of his seat.

Anderson is annoyed by such behavior. He has been conducting a militant crusade against match strikers in his reviews and in person... "Such action seemed probable, in fact, that for the premiere of 'The Case of Clyde Griffith,' Milton Shubert introduced a perforated program... It is legible when held between the eyes and the light from the stage... My knowledge, this is the first program of its kind ever distributed in a New York theater.

Zane Grey is rounding out another fishing excursion that has kept him at sea for a year, angling for the big ones in all waters of the globe... Almost all of his western thrillers are now written aboard ship.

Then there's Cory Ford, who does a little fishing himself... But Ford is a fresh water fisherman, preferring gleaming trout and hard-fighting bass to the heavier monsters of the deep... Rex Beach, Wallace Beery, John Barrymore, Gregory Taylor—all of these are famous fishermen.

The party was breaking up, and the liquor supply was exhausted. The movie star who had had most still wanted more. He wouldn't go home without another drink.

His companions obliged. They found a bottle of vanilla extract, poured it all into a glass.

The star took one tremendous swallow, turned and gulped in classical wrath: "What! Am I in the house of the Borgias?"

Allison Skipworth was considered the most beautiful woman on the English stage many years ago.

TRUCK COLUMN TAKES GONDAR ON LAKE TANA

IMPORTANT SECTION OF ETHIOPIA IS IN ITALY'S HANDS

BY EDWARD J. NEIL
(Copyright 1936 by The Associated Press)

WITH THE NORTHERN ITALIAN ARMY, GONDAR, Ethiopia, March 31.—This important strategic city at the head of Lake Tana fell into the hands of an Italian truck column led by Achille Starace, secretary-general of the fascist party today.

The mechanical cavalry roared its way southward along the Sudanese border, cutting off all northern Ethiopia from supplies which previously had been delivered over caravan trails from the Sudan.

This Italian drive is by far the most important international move yet made in the present war because of the significance to the British of the Lake Tana region.

Gondar is only a few kilometers from the head of Lake Tana, the source of the Nile. It is a strategically important city which gives the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan and Egypt its water supply.

The motor column was modeled after that of Gen. Rodolfo Graziani which, in the south, moved up from Dolo to Neghell to break up Ras Darg's army several weeks ago.

The Starace command has moved farther than the column which fought the Danakils under General Orseto Martini last November—moving on mules through the Danakili desert—but it traveled about the same distance as did Graziani's command in his semi-circular sweep—that is, about 155 miles.

Like Graziani's drive, it has been made in a huge semi-circle, starting originally at Amara and circling back through Eritrea up to the border at Umaga, which is only a few miles from Kassaia, the regular lake entry port of the British Sudan.

The way for the maneuver was paved by victories of the past six weeks, all along the northern front from Upper Atbara through Tembien province and the Takazze river area, allowing the fourth army corps on the extreme right of the line to penetrate deep beyond Setit and Semien and providing perfect flank protection for the northern "ball on wheels" column.

The capture of Gondar coincides in the general picture with considerable activity on the left extremity of the northern line where reports have it that Emperor Haile Selassie himself has taken the field in a general vicinity of Quoram in a last desperate effort to halt the Italians on their advance that has been all conquering since the victory at Amba Aradam February 10.

It is considered likely that the next—and possibly the last—big struggle in the north will be fought in the vicinity of Quoram if Haile Selassie can gather an army together to make a stand.

Man's Friends Glad He Told Them About BLACK-DRAUGHT

Writing from Texarkana, Texas, Mr. W. T. Bentley of that city says: "I have been using Black-Draught for fully forty years. I keep a supply on hand. I first knew of Black-Draught when I was a boy, clerking in a store. I saw people buying it and thought it must be good. I took it for constipation and biliousness. I would have a bad taste in my mouth and headache. I knew I needed a laxative—something to cleanse the system. I would hunt up the Black-Draught and take a dose. I would be relieved in a few hours. In time I have found a simple remedy—one that does not have any after-effects. I do not know of anything better to take for a dull, tired, listless feeling. I have recommended Black-Draught to many friends and neighbors. I know they have been glad that I did. They have said so." (Adv.)

CHAPTER IV.

It was a just an ordinary February day like a dozen others. Toby didn't see anything unusual about it as she hurried to the subway station. There was time enough this morning, but hurrying had become a habit. Besides, the air was cold and damp and it was slushy underfoot. Toby was glad to reach the store.

She had a customer almost as soon as the doors were opened. From then on, the morning routine was just as it had been the day before. Toby lunched in the employees' cafeteria and wondered why it was that the pea soup tasted exactly like the bean soup the day before and the cream of vegetable soup the day before that. The prune pudding was good, though. She had an extra cup of coffee and talked for five minutes with the girl who had been transferred, two weeks before, from the jewelry department to the fourth floor miss' wear.

Promptly at 1:15 Toby was back at her counter. So far, nothing had happened to set that February day apart from any other.

Gladys Sorenson ate lunch at the sandwich shop around the corner and came back to report that it was growing colder outside. "Wouldn't surprise me," she said, "if it's snowing by 5 o'clock."

Toby said, "Ugh! I hope not," and wished that she owned a pair of galoshes.

Gladys, who had a fondness for discussions of the weather, went on, "Last year, just about this time, we had that terrible snow storm. It lasted three days. Don't you remember—?"

Gladys' reminiscences were cut short by the approach of a customer, and Toby moved away. Business, oddly enough, was not so brisk during the early afternoon as it had been through the mornings.

It was while Toby was showing the new white and jade compact to a woman wearing a leopard coat that she noticed the young man. Involuntarily Toby's eyes raised. Then she lowered them quickly. It was the young man—no doubt about it. The one she had bumped into on her way to work the day before. He was standing less than a dozen feet away.

Toby said, without looking up, "It's really the nicest compact we have. The medallion is real jade—"

The woman in the leopard coat interrupted. "Yes, it's very attractive. You said the price is $4.98, didn't you?"

"That's right. Four ninety-eight."

"I'll take it," the woman announced. She opened her handbag, drawing out a coin purse. "Ask for the medallion," she said. "Oh," Toby exclaimed, "I'd forgotten. I meant to cash a check this morning." She stared at Toby, went on hurriedly. "I haven't the money to pay for the compact. Could you have it wrapped and hold it for me? I'll be back within an hour or so."

"Why, certainly," Toby agreed. "I'll have it ready for you, I'm Miss Ryan. If you don't see me, just ask one of the other girls—"

The woman smiled. "Thank you," she said. "I'll remember." As she moved away she repeated, "I'll be back within an hour."

Toby nodded and bent over her sales book.

"Miss Ryan?"

She hadn't expected to hear her name and looked up, startled. The young man—yes, it was the same one, all right; the brown eyes, the gray hat, the tweed topcoat all checked—stood directly before her.

"You are Miss Ryan, aren't you?" he asked.

"Why—why, yes."

He smiled, looking very well pleased with himself. "That's what I thought you said," he told her. "I heard you talking to that woman"—nodding in the direction in which the woman in the leopard coat had gone. "You know, you rushed away in such a hurry yesterday—"

Toby met his eyes. She looked as though she were about to rush away a second time, but instead she said, "You'll have to go. I can't stand here talking. We're not allowed—"

"But just a minute—please" the young man began.

"I'm sorry," Toby said firmly, "it's against the store rules."

"What is?"

"Talking."

His face showed amazement. "You mean you can't talk—not ever, to anyone?"

It did sound ridiculous and Toby couldn't help smiling. She said, a little more kindly, "Only to customers."

"Oh—then that's all right. I'm a customer."

"Ahe you?" she asked. "What is it you want?"

The brown eyes twinkled. "That's a large order," the young man said, "but I'll begin. First of all, your full name, address, telephone number—"

Toby backed away. "Excuse me," she said coolly. "I thought you were a customer."

"But I am! I mean I want to be I want—"

The young man looked about him. His eyes lighted on a tray of rhinestone clips. "Those," he finished triumphantly, "I want those."

"You mean those clips?"

He nodded. "Clips," he said. "Is that what they are? Yes, I want them."

"All of them?"

"But there are 20 of them."

"They're for sale, aren't they?"

"Yes."

"Then I want them."

Toby hesitated only an instant. The tray was a sign reading, "Genuine hand-set rhinestone clips, $2.98." Her pencil on her sales book, Toby said in her most business-like tone, "Will it be a cash or charge purchase?"

"Charge," the young man told her. "My name is Jamieson—Timothy Jamieson."

She wrote it down. "Twenty rhinestone clips at $2.98 each," she said. "That's—let's see—$59.60."

Tim Jamieson nodded. "Will you—er—have them sent?" The address he gave was one which even Toby knew was fashionable.

She nodded. "The package will be delivered in the morning, Mr. Jamieson. Thank you very much. And I hope you like your clips."

"But, see here—"

"Was there anything else you wanted?"

"Yes," he said, "there's something I want very much. I want you to have dinner with me tonight. I'll be waiting for you any time you say. Or, if you'd rather, I'll pick you up somewhere."

Toby smiled, but shook her head. "I'm sorry," she said. "I can't."

"But it's perfectly all right. Why shouldn't you? I'm as harmless as the day is long. Honestly, you're the prettiest girl I've seen in months and I want to know you better. We'll be anywhere you say."

Toby said again, "I can't really."

"Oh, but you'll change your mind! A girl like you couldn't be so hard-hearted. Now, listen, when the store closes I'll be waiting for you."

Toby didn't bother to object to that. A customer had paused at the other end of the counter and she hurried toward her. When she looked back a little later the young man was gone.

Toby thought of the $59.60 in her sales book. It certainly wasn't her day. She made sales like that in the costume jewelry. Maybe she'd get a bonus this week. If she did, she could buy the shoes she needed and galoshes.

He was a really nice-looking young man. There was something about him that was rather—rather exciting. Oh, well, she'd never see him again. That was the end of that.

But the day that had begun in such an ordinary fashion had more in store for Toby Ryan—much more.

The oddest thing about it was that it had happened so naturally. It was a few minutes past 3 when Miss Burrows, the jewelry buyer, approached Toby.

"The artists have finished with those watches we sent up to have sketched for the Saturday advertisement," she said. "Will you go up and bring them down? Ask for Mr. Keller. He'll get them for you."

Toby said, "Yes, Miss Burrows."

She knew exactly what to do; she had gone on such errands before. Toby stepped into the elevator and said "Ninth floor." She liked going to the advertising office. It was so different from the rows and rows of counters on the first floor. Cluttered and rather disorderly, with the artists, in ink-spattered smocks, working near the windows and three or four young men and women at desks in the foreground, Bill Brandt worked in an advertising office, too. Toby felt that knowing what Bergman's advertising department was like made her understand more clearly when Bill talked about his work.

She entered the big room, hesitated, and then went up to the nearest desk. "Is Mr. Keller here?" Toby asked.

The door of a private office opened just then and a man stepped out. It was Mr. Keller, the art director, and Toby recognized him.

She hurried forward. "Miss Burrows sent me for the watches that were sketched," she said.

"Oh, yes." The art director crossed to a desk, picked up four tiny watches attached to bracelets. Three of them were yellow gold discs. The fourth was the handsome "debutante special," white gold with tiny diamonds gleaming on either side of the oblong face. "Here they are," he said, and put them in Toby's hand.

She looked down at the watches. The gleaming "handful," she knew was worth something like $250.

A minute later Toby stood in the hallway, waiting for the elevator to take her to the first floor.

HITLER ANGER IS AROUSED BY FLANDIN TALK

BY LOUIS F. LOCHNER, Associated Press Foreign Staff.

BERLIN, March 31 (AP)—Adolf Hitler summoned his cabinet for a session late today—the day he promised to deliver his counter-proposals to the program advanced by the Lorcarno powers for a settlement of the Rhineland crisis.

Wilhelmstrasse spokesmen intimated that der fuhrer's peace proposals had to be altered, because of the critical speech delivered Sunday by French Foreign Minister Pierre-Etienne Flandin.

Doubt arose as to whether Hitler's proposals could still be presented today to British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, as was planned originally.

A CONSTIPATED child is so easily straightened out, it's a pity more mothers don't know the remedy.

A liquid laxative is the answer, mothers. The answer to all your worries over constipation, a liquid can be measured.

This treatment will succeed with any child and with any adult.

Doctors use liquid laxatives. Hospitals use the liquid form. It is best for their use, it is best for home use.

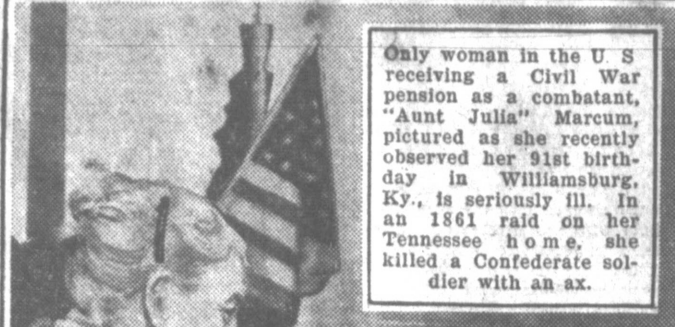

The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is a doctor's prescription, now so widely known that you can get it all ready for use at any drugstore.

A LIGHT SMOKE

OF RICH, RIPE-BODIED TOBACCO

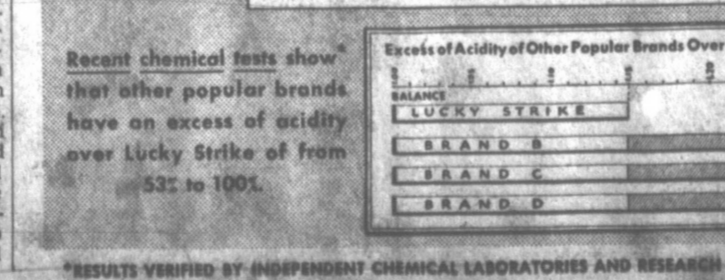

The simple mechanical details of cigarette manufacture are of surprising importance. Upon them depend the physical properties of the cigarette, such as weight, size, firmness, moisture-holding properties, uniformity of fill, uniformity of product—all of which have a far-reaching effect on the character of its combustion and the constituents of its smoke.

In the manufacture of Lucky Strike Cigarettes all of these properties have been standardized with care for the perfection of A LIGHT SMOKE.

However, Friday night we had our first date and George was terrible. Jimmie was a much better dancer and is better-looking, too. Come to think of it, here is my problem: Shall I keep going with George, who cares for me, or shall I go with Jimmie, whom I care for? Please tell me. Hopelyours, Lovesick.

Dear Lovesick:

The answer to your problem is very simple. You are much too young to go with boys at all. At your young age you should be playing with dolls, not with men's hearts. Forget these petty loves. I am sure you will find this advice to your advantage. A. T. L. Editor.

ANNA STICKS BY HUSBAND IN LAST MILE

SPENDS DAY VAINLY GRASPING FOR A STRAW

By MARY ELIZABETH PLUMMER Associated Press Staff Writer TRENTON, N. J., March 31. (AP)—Mrs. Anna Hauptmann, former waitress, stuck by her husband today to the "last mile" in her fight to save Bruno Richard Hauptmann's life as the hour of his death in the electric chair drew near; still was repeating her claim, "Richard is innocent."

She spent what seemingly was to be Hauptmann's last day on earth, casting about for a straw to save him. The doomed man's wife, whose loyalty apparently never wavered, sat in a hotel room and said, "Something will turn up."

Although she retired early, through the mid spring night in rumor-swept Trenton, she strove to think of something more to do while the story that Hauptmann would die went over the world. "It's no use, Anna," friends told her. But today she was still considering one more plea to Governor Hoffman.

"Blue, but tearless," was the report of the Rev. John Mathisen, Hauptmann's spiritual adviser, brought from her room after a visit to console her.

What would she do if the day brought no reprieve? Her plans were as vague as they were in Flemington, when she said all through Bruno's trial, "Soon all this will be over, and Richard will come home."

"Why think about it?" was her reply then about the future. "If anything happens, there'll be plenty of time to think."

Would she try to build up a new life for herself and her son Manfred? Her answer today was the same: "What would I be for us?"

Friends have said maybe she would return to Germany if Hauptmann dies, but Mrs. Hauptmann never has said. There have been reports she would end her life and Manfred's. She denied that, and continued telling her son she was proud of Bruno.

While Hauptmann awaited nightfall in his death cell, his wife anxiously watched the clock in her small hotel room.

So began what may be the last scene of Anna's role in the Hauptmann case—a role that began when police arrived at their home in the Bronx, moved to the Greenwich St. police station, then to Flemington, and finally to Trenton.

Through the months that have elapsed she made trips, conferred, testified for Bruno, bought new hats to cheer him when she visited his death cell—constantly declared him innocent, wept, prayed.

On what seemingly was her last visit, she refused to bid her husband farewell. "Auf Wiedersehen," said Mrs. Hauptmann.

"From her husband came: 'Auf Wiedersehen.'" for half an hour. He came to the details of the "last meal."

"I'd like to have that last meal sent to Dr. Condon, Hauptmann replied. He referred to Dr. John F. Condon the Lindbergh ransom intermediary whose testimony that Hauptmann was the man to whom he paid $50,000 ransom for the vital link in the circumstantial evidence that put the Bronx carpenter where he is today.

Hauptmann ate no breakfast. The hour set for his execution is 8 o'clock, but a Philadelphia gangster-killer will give Hauptmann a few more precious moments of life. The gangster, Charles Zied, also is to die tonight; and because he is to go first, Hauptmann will live twenty—perhaps thirty—minutes longer than he would if he alone were to die tonight.

For the legal avenue of hope, according to best information, lay in an appeal to Justice Thomas W. Trenchard for a new trial. His counsel considered this avenue so hopeless that it was doubtful even if it would be sought in the short hours left. Even the justice has been quoted as saying he could not act now in the case.

With Governor Harold G. Hoffman's terse, unqualified announcement, "there will be no second reprieve," Hauptmann's strongest advocate before the pardons court was definitely committed.

There was the possibility that Hauptmann himself might supply the sensation of the last day by making a confession or some statement of the importance of which might be great enough to bring at least a delay to the execution.

There was a report last night from a source close to the governor that Hauptmann had sent out word to his wife, Anna, that he might "talk more." Mrs. Hauptmann denied it. Officials said they had heard nothing of it. But the report persisted. If such a development should occur, the pardons court conceivably could be reconvened.

Principals Scattered. Principals in the case that for all the days since March 1, 1932, has astonished and horrified the world, were widely scattered as the hour of punishment neared.

Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, parents of the child who was snatched from his crib that blustery night and whose body was found later buried under sticks and dead leaves not far from the Lindbergh's Sourdian Hills estate, were in England—exiled from their native America by the notoriety born of their great tragedy.

Dr. John F. Condon, who became known everywhere as "Jafsie" because of the ransom negotiations he conducted under the name manufactured from his initials, and who paid the $50,000 ransom money in a Bronx cemetery to a man he later said was Hauptmann, was at his home in the Bronx.

Attorney General David T. Wilentz, the Russian-born attorney-general who prosecuted Hauptmann, planned to remain at his home in Perth Amboy.

"The case is closed, as far as I am concerned," he said. Governor Hoffman, whose interest in delaying Hauptmann's execution by a previous reprieve was explained by him as being due to his desire to "completely solve" the Lindbergh case, notified Col. Mark O. Kimberling, prison warden, that he would be constantly available during the day and up to the execution hour to take any action developments might warrant.

Rules Forbid Visiting. The prisoner's wife spent the night in Trenton hotel. Where she slept was to be tonight when the hour of her husband's death arrived was not disclosed.

There was a possibility she might seek to see Hauptmann once more; but prison rules forbid, and Col. Kimberling has said he will not make any exceptions. Hauptmann's spiritual adviser, the Rev. John Mathisen, arranged to spend much of the day with the prisoner.

The one child of the condemned man and his blond wife—the boy Manfred—remained in New York too young to know.

Hauptmann's fate was sealed in 30 swift minutes, dynamic with more of the fantastic drama that has made itself peculiar to the entire case.

First came the brief announcement that the court of pardons had denied Hauptmann's clemency appeal. With this second refusal within 10 weeks to interfere, the pardons court closed all but the small door of hope which some felt Governor Hoffman himself might open, even though he appeared to have no authority to do so.

Sleeps Soundly. With this double knell of doom sounding around him, Hauptmann went early to bed and was sleeping soundly, his guards reported, shortly after 9 o'clock.

Kent's Island, in the Bay of Fundy, was named for John Kent, an Englishman.

PAMPA TOPICS OF OUR CITY

Freezing Weather. Freezing temperatures returned to the plain last night, when a low of 39 degrees was registered. The maximum temperature yesterday was 50 above. Clouds replaced dust today as the sun again failed to shine at dawn, but signs of clearing appeared at mid-morning. Pears that fruit buds had been killed appeared to be unfounded, although some damage was predicted.

Federal Job Open. The U. S. Civil Service commission has announced open competitive examinations for the position of assistant director (historic sites and buildings) in the National park service. The entrance salary will be $5,600 a year, less a deduction of 3 1/2 per cent toward a retirement annuity. Applicants must have successfully completed a 4-year course in a college or university of recognized standing and, in addition, must have had certain specified experience. Applicant's experience must, among other things, indicate thorough and comprehensive training in American history. Full information may be had from O. K. Gaylor at the Pampa postoffice.

Driver Is Charged. A complaint charging driving while intoxicated has been filed here again Lena Benton. The offense is alleged to have taken place March 29.

Daughter Is Born. Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Jackson are the parents of a daughter, born this morning at Pampa-Jarratt hospital. Mr. Jackson is with the Danciger Refineries.

Under the existing statute "since the court has announced any pronouncement written under it will amount to a reduction rather than a prorated order."

The state contended the commission's order was valid and supported by the statute. Considering the pleading, the court noted it was its terms permitted and did not put in opposition to the fundamental law.

Under its holdings, the court said the commission was "entirely without power under the act to prorated plaintiff's production on a theory of correlative rights."

Observing there were no waste conditions in the sweet gas area, it held the commission was "equally without power to prorated it on the theory of waste." For that reason, it did not pass on subordinate questions raised by the companies.

Likewise, because of its view, the court said the particular formulas and bases assumed by the commission for its prorated were "unimportant."

With reference to the sweet gas-carbon black decision, the court said: "If upon the facts of the case the legislature has decided that the burning of sweet gas to make carbon black constitutes too great a destruction of a natural resource of the state for the result accomplished, it does not lie within the power of the court to review that determination."

McCrow commented that the sweet gas reserves "by the decision are protected for use by the people."

The PEOPLES COLUMN

Editor, The News: Please print in the Peoples Column the following open letter to those who signed the petition to place my name on the ballot for city commissioner.

To the Citizens and Voters of Pampa: I wish to take this means of conveying to each of you my appreciation of your expression of confidence, and I feel that, as your candidate, I owe you an explanation of my withdrawal from the municipal race, for I would not have you believe that I hold your endorsement lightly.

My formal resignation, which was prepared and presented to me by the mayor of Pampa, and printed in this newspaper, adequately provided for the withdrawal of my name from the ballot, but did not serve to advise my supporters of the reason for my resignation.

I wish to state that my withdrawal from the municipal race was not the result of any grave misfortune of my opponent, Mr. Fraser, and had it not been for this and affair, I would have run for the office and had I been elected, would have served the people to the very best of my ability.

Yours sincerely, M. A. (Mack) Graham.

Canadian Woman Given Federated Club Position

LEWISPORT, March 31. (AP)—Although not officially recognized until the votes are counted after the polls close this afternoon, biennial officers for the seventh district, Texas Federation of Women's Clubs, were made known this morning soon after the session opened. The nominating committee's choice, accepted by the delegates, which made no nominations from the floor, included: Vice president, Mrs. J. W. Walker of Plainview; first vice president, Mrs. Sam Jones of Canadian; second vice president, Mrs. W. H. Linn of Wellington.

By noon today over 665 delegates and visitors had registered.

Today afternoon Mrs. Volney Taylor of Brownsville, state federation president, will address the assembly on significant measures proposed by the legislative department. Mrs. J. W. Walker of Houston, director from Texas to the general Federation of Women's Clubs, spoke this morning.
