Bitter Words Fly Over Denison Appointment

Senators Say Traitor Must Be In Midst

Governor Surprises Solons By Re-Submitting Temple Man

AUSTIN, (AP)—The Texas senate was thrown into five hours of partisan debate Thursday by a request of Governor Miriam A. Ferguson that it reconsider its action in refusing to confirm her appointment of F. L. Denison of Temple to be chairman of the state highway commission.

The long wrangle on what to do about the woman's chief executive's insistence that it approve her choice after the senate Wednesday voted to reject her selection of Denison was unsettled when the oratorical contest ended.

An executive session which was ordered at the end of hours of argument over parliamentary procedure failed to solve the dilemma. Senators stayed on the floor without lunch for three hours past the mid-day eating hour.

Set Special Order

There was only conjecture as to what happened in the secret session but indications were no senator offered a motion to reconsider the previous action rejecting Denison. The senate had voted to set for special order at 10:05 a. m. Ferguson's message resubmitting Denison for confirmation.

Opponents of Denison's confirmation planned to raise a point of order that a governor could not re-submit the name of a person proposed as an appointee.

There was considerable speculation about the identity of the senator who opposed Denison's confirmation. Some might have changed his decision in the matter. Debaters indicated he was from the West Texas section of the state. Gossip around the corridors of the capitol had it that if some senator shift his vote from the negative to the affirmative, a South Texas senator would switch his vote from confirmation, as of Wednesday, to rejection.

"Pressure" Charged

Charges that James H. Ferguson the governor's husband and adviser, was attempting to use "pressure" to obtain Denison's confirmation were made during the debate. "I'm afraid," said Senator Walter Woodward of Coleman, "that by threats, coercion or promises the proxy governor of this state has persuaded a man to go back on what he did yesterday."

Senator Woodward said the corridors and the hotel lobbies were filled with reports that threats had been made to veto West Texas land bills or appropriations for schools.

The Coleman senator was speaking in opposition to a motion that the senate go into secret session to reconsider its rejection of Denison. "If there's some man here," Senator Woodward shouted, "who by threats, intimidations or promises has been persuaded to change his vote, we should let the world know who it is."

Under the senate rules, a motion to reconsider could have been made only by a person who voted yesterday for rejection. The vote on confirmation was 19 to 11, one vote short of the two-thirds majority required.

Moore Asked to Change

Senator Joe Moore of Greenville, who opposes Denison, said that some one had come to him and asked him to change his vote.

"How did they know," Senator Moore inquired, "how I voted in executive session?"

"Who is this traitor in camp who carries the roll call down to the governor's office within five minutes after the executive session is over?" Moore asked, advancing toward the desk of Senator Roy Sanderford of Belton, Ferguson partisan.

Senator Woodward said "a man" had come to him after he voted against Denison's confirmation and asked him if he wanted to see his name on the state board of pardons and paroles.

"I told him to go back and tell Jim Ferguson to go ahead and abolish the pardon board if he could," Senator Woodward said.

Appeal To Be Filed By Parties Seeking Addition Of Strip From Chalk School District To Forsan

Notice of appeal to State Superintendent L. A. Woods has been filed by parties interested in pressing a petition asking that a portion of the Chalk district of this county be placed in the Forsan district.

The county board of trustees recently handed down a unanimous decision denying the petition to cut part of the Chalk district off and place it in the Forsan boundaries.

The petition was signed by some of the residents of a strip off the west side of the Chalk district, and bordering on the Forsan district. Other residents of the strip at issue strongly opposed the move, which was first made more than a year ago and again pressed recently. The districts include the Howard county oil field.

Chalk residents, including some in the disputed strip, pointed out that school taxes in the Chalk district are lower than in the Forsan district; that the revenue obtainable for the Chalk school from taxes is considerably lower than revenue already available for the Forsan school, and that the Chalk school would be irreparably damaged if the disputed strip, with its tax valuations, were taken away from the district. Woodward and Coffee represent the plaintiffs and Thomas and McDonald the defendants.

Those favoring the change declared that the children residing in the section at issue would have to travel less distance to Forsan school and that their community interests were the same.

Private Water Cut-Off Urged For Local People

While having your bursted pipes repaired, do the efficient thing and have a private water cut off installed.

City employees are called to answer numerous calls daily to cut off water where pipes have burst while thawing. In many cases great damage by water has resulted before employees could reach scene to stop the water flow.

Too, a private cut off will enable you to cut off your own water when freezing weather is predicted and to drain all pipes, eliminating the possibility of another costly plumbing bill.

Brock Makes Last Trip On Air Mail Line

Big Spring-San Antonio Service Discontinued Thursday

Merral Brock was the pilot Friday evening on the last run of the air mail ship on the Big Spring-San Antonio route.

By order of the postmaster general the mail service on the route was discontinued.

Operations had been maintained one year, three months and 25 days with one ship flying the route each way daily, leaving San Antonio mornings in time to connect here with the 11 a. m. westbound ship, and leaving here evenings after arrival of the 6 p. m. eastbound ship.

Over a rugged section of the country some of the finest pilots in the business had flown the route. For some time after it was established they did not have advantage of radio communication with ground stations, or of a completely lighted airway. But they were forced down rarely in spite of tough weather that existed much of the time on one part of the route or another.

Paul Vance had more trips on the route than any other pilot. He now is piloting tri-motor ship on the southern transcontinental line. Although the fact was not generally known for some time, and never released publicly because newspapers feared of it after such a long period of time, Vance miraculously escaped death once when

Washington Has Acute Attack Of Jitters As Time For Exchanging Of Government Jobs Draws Near

Outgoing Cabinet Members, Senator And Congressman Develop Worried Look As Big Democrats Await Roosevelt's Decisions

WASHINGTON (UP)—To put it bluntly, this old town has a plain case of jitters.

It is getting harder every day to stand the strain and there are still three weeks to go before inauguration.

Important democrats try to appear calm while biting their nails in anxiety as they wonder whether that cabinet job is coming through as the gossip hinted.

Outgoing cabinet members, senators and congressmen are acquiring a worried look as they approach the moment for plunging back into the cold waters of private life after basking in the spotlight's warm glow here.

The senate has been unable to settle down to one subject long enough to pass a single regular appropriation bill. The house reverses itself on such a simple issue as congressional funerals. Democratic representatives declare that the party's platform pledge of a 25 per cent reduction in government costs doesn't apply to congressmen's salaries. Nearly $1,000,000,000 for veteran aid is voted

An all-tournament team will be picked by a committee composed of Oble Bickow, D. H. Reed, and George Brown.

War General's Brother Dies

Pershing Remains At Midland; Brother Helped Build T and P

NEW YORK, James F. Pershing, younger brother of Gen. John J. Pershing, died in a hospital Thursday night of heart disease.

Pershing, who was 71, has been a patient in Manhattan general hospital since Dec. 20, when he suffered a heart attack at his home. He began a slow recovery but Monday suffered a relapse and fell into a coma from which he never emerged.

His brother, General Pershing, was in Texas.

Lived Quiet Life

Unlike his famous fighting brother, he had lived a quiet life, engaging in commercial pursuits.

Sixteen months younger than General John J. Pershing, James F. Pershing was born January 18, 1862 in Laclede, Linn county, Missouri. He was the younger son of Mr. and Mrs. John Fletcher and Ann Elizabeth (Thompson) Pershing. He was a great-grandson of Frederick Pfersohn, who emigrated from Alsace, France, in 1748, and settled in Pennsylvania, where the name was anglicized to Pershing.

Upon attaining manhood, Pershing's father moved from Pennsylvania to Missouri, where he worked as a railroad section foreman, married and later conducted a store and the post-office at Laclede.

Pershing attended the district grammar and high schools at Laclede, and upon graduation from the latter secured employment with a Missouri construction concern.

He succeeded rapidly in the construction field and when a young man in his early 20's he went to Texas where he supervised the local end of construction of the Texas and Pacific railroad.

Miss Boykin Second, Master Hodges Third At Ritz

Little Miss Veda La Nell Robinson, representing Robinson and Son, Grocery and Market, won first prize, a silver loving cup, in the second annual Tivoli revue at the Ritz theatre Thursday evening.

Second prize, a diamond ring, was won by Little Miss Joy Jane Boykin, representing the Logan Hatchery.

Master Jimmy Hodges, representing the Jordan Printing company, won third prize, a pearl necklace.

Applause of the audience determined the winners. Robert Reigel was in charge of the revue.

Mabel Robinson, assistant in the county tax collector's office, is confined to her home, suffering from an attack of flu.

Walton S. Morrison is confined to his home with a case of influenza.

B. O. Jones In Grocery Firm

Former Wilson And Clare Business Buys Wilson Interest In

B. O. Jones, prominent in Big Spring business and commercial life for 22 years, has returned to his "first love."

He has purchased the interest of E. D. Wilson in the Wilson & Clare grocery at Second and Runnels street, and the firm now is known as Jones and Jones.

Mr. Jones was in the grocery business with his brother, Frank, ten years before buying an interest in 1921 with Bob Austin in the general merchandise business known as Austin and Jones.

He was in the hardware business a number of years in Old Mexico before coming to Big Spring.

Mr. Jones expressed keen satisfaction over his new connection and invited his many friends to call on him in his new piece of business. W. B. Clare, his partner, has been in the business more than four years.

Resurrection

Democratic Floor Leader Robinson has quieted most of the senate democrats who were after his scalp.

His leadership this session has grown increasingly strong and effective. The fact that he made no speeches in the last campaign is being forgotten. His loyalty to the Roosevelt cause is no longer questioned.

It is too early to say how the inside fight against him will come out. But if he continues along the lines he has recently followed he can easily expect reelection to the leadership. Two months ago he was doomed.

A Song Echoes In Human Hearts
It is good to read that the people of New York got together to raise funds for destitute James W. Blake, 70-year-old author of that famous song, "The Sidewalks of New York."
Blake, of course, isn't one of the great poets of the century. An accident of politics, as much as anything, and the gay lilt of a catchy tune, have kept his song alive. But he put New York in his debt by writing it, just the same, and when he got down on his luck, New York saw to it that he and his family didn't have to suffer.
And that is the sort of debt that doesn't often get acknowledged in this country.
We take our poets as a matter of course. While they're working we let them get along as best they can, and when they quit we look on them as fantastic and impractical folk who are more or less bound to wind up on their uppers; and although they give us songs to sing that make life easier and more pleasant, we seldom figure that we really owe them anything.
But the world would be a darker and sadder place without its songs—ever its poor ones.
Take his "Sidewalks" songs, for instance. It isn't really much of a song. No editor is likely to include it in an anthology of the nation's best verse. But it is worth having, just the same. It picks up, somehow, a trace or two of the atmosphere of a great city; now and then, beyond a doubt, it has helped some dweller in that city to imagine that his lot is as trifling, colorful and cheerful as that it really is. And to do that, even if only for a few, is well worth doing.
The poet who remarked that he didn't especially care who made a nation's laws as long as he could make his songs really know what he was about. We might, in a pinch, get along without laws; probably, some day, when the race has got a few score more centuries distant from barbarism, we shall actually be able to do so. But even in that day we'll need our songs; songs to make us forget the things we lost and hope for the things we can never get.

TODAY and TOMORROW

By WALTER LIPPMANN
The Problem of Relief

The best available estimates, which are those of Mr. Ralph Hurin, of the Russell Sage Foundation, put the cost of relief in the United States last year at about half a billion dollars. For this year the cost can hardly be less than three-quarters of a billion and it is much more likely to reach a billion. For even though there is a recovery in employment during the next few months, the need of relief is certain to increase, owing to the fact that the unemployed, the partially employed, and those on drastically reduced wages are so much nearer the point where their power to help themselves and others is exhausted.

We are confronted, therefore, with the necessity of raising in the United States, by one means and another, about twice as much money as we raised last year. We cannot afford to consider a small sum if the nation is to make the minimum necessary preparation for the demands that will be made upon it.

The first condition that has to be faced is that we have just about come to the end of voluntary contributions as a source of emergency relief. Reports from 166 cities throughout the country, which are published in the January number of "The Survey" show that Community Chest campaigns have fallen short of their goal by about 15 per cent. This is a very certain indication that voluntary giving is on the decline, which is exactly what one would expect when incomes are so generally reduced and taxes are greatly increased. The time has clearly come when the attempt to rely upon private contributions to relieve the unemployed means that the ordinary social services, hospitals, child welfare agencies and the like, will be fatally crippled. The ordinary welfare work of the localities depends in large part upon voluntary contributions, and if we continue helping the unemployed from the same source, we shall in effect be taking help from children, from the sick, from the aged, and from the unemployed.

It seems quite clear, therefore, that from now on private charity must be relieved of the burden of emergency unemployment relief, so that it may devote all its resources to the maintenance of the necessary welfare services. Emergency unemployment relief which has hitherto been supported about 70 to 75 per cent from public funds, will have to be supported wholly from public funds.

Hitherto the chief source of public funds has been the local unit of government. The condition which we have now to face is that the taxing power and the credit of local governments are in many cases completely exhausted, in others seriously impaired, and that in all of them they are declining. As Mr. Newton D. Baker has pointed out, the chief source of their revenue is real estate taxes. These taxes cannot be increased in fact, it is necessary to reduce them. Assuming the best efforts.

What proportion of relief in each state comes from the Federal Treasury and what from state and local funds is not a matter of vital principal. It will necessarily vary with local conditions. What is vital is that the proportion of the state's contribution should be sufficient to prevent the state from relying to do without Federal aid as soon as it is humanly possible to do so.

It is on working out the application of this principle that a sound policy of emergency relief during the remainder of the depression depends. (Copyright, 1933, New York Tribune, Inc.)

Robbers Get $325,000 Loot In Mail Raid

$15,000 Currency, $200,000 In Bank Bonds Taken In Pouch

SACRAMENTO, Calif., (AP)—More than $325,000 in currency and Bank of America bonds was taken by three bandits in a daring holdup at the main postoffice at Seventh and K streets here Thursday night. The bandits surprised and disarmed a truck driver and an armed guard on the loading platform in the rear of the postoffice building, grabbed a pad locked sack of outgoing registered mail and vanished in the downtown traffic.

$125,000 Currency
Although an exact check of the contents of the mail sack had not been completed, postal inspectors said they were certain at least $125,000 in currency, largely in small bills, and approximately $200,000 in bank of America bonds were stolen. Whether additional securities were stolen could not be ascertained pending a detailed check.
Three men all wearing handkerchiefs as masks drove into California street, an alleyway in the rear of the postoffice, and parked a large, heavy black sedan.
Timid to Instant
Timing their arrival just to the instant that a truck had arrived from the terminal station to take the registered mail to the Southern Pacific station, the trio advanced with drawn guns on C. Swanson, the truck driver.
Swanson drew his gun but was overpowered, disarmed and warned to be quiet on peril of his life. After disarming Swanson, two of the men leaped upon the loading platform. The third man remained on guard over Swanson threatening his life if he sounded a warning.
W. E. Williams, armed guard who accompanied all registered mail trucks, stepped from the rear door of the postoffice onto the loading platform to face the other two bandits with revolver.
"We want that sack," the leader of the two said, Williams, likewise threatened with death, handed over the sack of registered mail to the leader.

Leap to Pavement
Both bandits then leaped to the pavement, and the third man, again warning Swanson to be quiet, led the way to their parked car and raced away.
Although fairly good descriptions of the men were obtained post employees were unable to get the license number of the car.
All three men wore white handkerchiefs over the lower parts of their faces. Two of the men wore blue and white overalls, such as are customarily worn by milk wagon drivers and other deliverymen. The third was dressed in dark clothing. All wore dark hats.
Just before entering the car one of the bandits fired his gun—apparently by accident.
The other two cried out, one saying "cut that out. We don't want any of that stuff."

Oil operations in Ector county were delayed by cold weather. Stanolind Oil & Gas Co.'s No. 1 Elliott Cowden, north offset to L. C. Harrison's No. 1 Addis, pool opener west of Odessa, was shut down at 2,800 feet in anhydrite with the water lines frozen.
Likewise Landreth Production Co.'s No. 1 Holt, northern Ector wildcat, was crippled by the weather. It was attempting to clean out the hole bridged at 4,200 feet after a shot with 120 quarts Monday night. The well was said to have headed twice, the first being lost and the second amounting to 24 barrels, according to one report. Another said apparently little benefit was derived from the shot. However 30 feet of road gravel was placed in the hole over the shot and will have to be cleaned out. The well did not clean itself. No. 1 Holt, in the center of the southeast corner of section 15,

Mrs. Myers Made Member Of R.N.A.

The Royal Neighbors of America, Camp No. 727, met at the Woodman Hall Thursday afternoon for the regular order of business. Mrs. W. C. Myers was taken in as a new member.
After the business the following boys gave an enjoyable musical program: W. T. Bolt Jr., Delbert and Henry Bugg, with Mrs. Della Bugg at the piano.
The visitors and members present were: Mrs. W. T. Bolt, W. M. Gage, A. H. Bugg, E. C. Boatler, J. E. Pond, Sam Nabors, Glass Glenn, L. C. Bonner, Ray Williams, L. L. Bugg, Theo Sampson, D. E. Orr, T. V. Corcoran and T. J. A. Robinson.
Mrs. M. Mitchell and son, Leroy Grimley, of Sweetwater, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. James Currie.

Reductions Made In Pullman Fares On Texas & Pacific
Beginning Friday there will be a 25 per cent reduction in sleeping car fares when tickets are bought in connection with week-end rates offered by the Texas & Pacific and other railroads serving West Texas.
Tickets on sleepers can be bought for one and one-half fares when used with roundtrip tickets good for Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays. The railroad tickets to Texas destinations at week-end rates cost one fare plus 25 cents.
Co-operation of the Pullman company in reducing rates interpreted by railroad men as additional evidence that the railroads are trying to offer an economical transportation as possible, thereby improving the condition of railroads. Passenger departments are experimenting in various ways, attempting to provide a lure for the public, which has been weaned away from riding on railroads by private automobiles and buses, especially the former.
Public response to the sale of scrip books, providing a 25 per cent reduction in railroad passenger rates, has been satisfactory. This was disclosed Tuesday at ticket offices here.
The books sell for $54 and $81, providing transportation ordinarily costing $72 and $108, respectively. The cheaper book is good for 2,100 miles and the other for 3,000 miles and both are good for a year.
Members of theatrical companies also are expected to benefit from the plan. High cost of transportation on railroads has been given as one of the contributory causes for the decline of "road shows."

Metcalfe And Greer Renew Their Fight Over State Redistricting

Texas Legislature To Make Determined Effort Toward Revision Into Twenty-One Congressional Districts

AUSTIN, (AP)—The Texas legislature will make a determined effort this session to redistrict the state into 21 congressional districts instead of 18. Failure of the last legislature to redistrict resulted in three congressmen-at-large being elected from the city of Dallas.

The question of being fair to the old congressmen will receive serious consideration. The legislature will hesitate to put two veteran congressmen in the same district because that will mean that one of them will be retired. That leaves three districts which can be made up entirely of territory not now having a resident congressman.

Bezar to Be New District

Bezar county may be one of these districts. The county has sufficient population to be a district in itself, and no congressman lives in it. At the present time, San Antonio and Bezar county are part of the district represented by Richard Kleberg of Corpus Christi.

The principal controversial question is where the two other new districts will be. It was on that question that the 42nd legislature was unable to agree. The East Texans in the senate insisted that one of those districts belonged in East Texas. The West Texans, who swung the house to their viewpoint, were equally insistent that West Texas should have them 1:1.

The same fight is looming in the current session. Rep. Penrose Metcalfe of San Angelo again wants to carve the two new districts in northwest, central-west and southwest Texas. Sen. Julian P. Greer of Athens, chairman of the senate congressional redistricting committee, is willing to give a new district to the plains country but he wants the other in the East Texas oil area.

Metcalfe and Greer Leaders

Metcalfe and Greer were the leaders of their respective factions in the 42nd legislature.

There is talk that in event the legislature again fails to redistrict, a law will be enacted districting the three congressmen-at-large. In that way, no section of the state would have more than one congressman-at-large.

One problem of which the present legislature is relieved is "taking care" of John N. Garner. In their redistricting plans two years ago, legislators were so full not to set up a district for Garner which the veteran congressman might be unable to carry. However, Garner will leave congress March 4 to become vice-president.

Woman Halts Burglar By Order Shouted In Darkness Of Her Home

DALLAS, (UP)—A man was in jail awaiting a charge of burglary because he heeded, and perhaps wisely, an order of Mrs. E. E. Price to halt as he prowled through her home.

Hearing steps of the burglar as he walked through the house searching for loot, Mrs. Price removed a revolver from under her pillow and crept over cold floors. She located the man in the dark and gave the order to halt or she would shoot.

He took her at her word. The sleeping husband was roused to hold the prisoner until police arrived.

Labor To Be Swapped For Food And Clothing

FORT WORTH, (UP)—Labor will be swapped for food and clothing in a colony of unemployed planned here by the unemployed workers and farmers league.

A colony of unemployed, maintaining cafes, grist mills, stores and a bank is proposed, explained J. M. Barron, war veteran in charge of organization work.

"Labor money" would be the medium of exchange.

Under the proposal, members of the colony would exchange labor for pigs, corn, wheat, vegetables or any other kind of product "cashable" at the colony's stores for labor or script.

These products would be sold by the stores for the same script, thus making possible an interchange of commodities.

Barron believes that within a few weeks he will be able to provide considerable farm labor, to be paid for by the farmer's surplus products.

The league is sponsored by the local Socialist party, but is not a party organization, according to Barron. E. E. Hardy is secretary treasurer of the league.

Abatement of the current cold wave is awaited before the project is actually launched.

Carter Glass Says He Has Not Decided On Offer Of Place In Next Cabinet

Mrs. Gandhi Sentenced To Six Months In Jail

BORSAD, India, (UP)—Mrs. Gandhi, wife of the Mahatma, was sentenced to jail for six months and fined 500 rupees in lieu of another six months.

She was convicted of leading a disturbing procession from the village of Ras into the countryside for agitation among the farmers.

Interscholastic Art Contest Plan Made For Region

ABILENE—Plans for the regional interscholastic art contest to be held here in the spring have been sent from Interscholastic league headquarters in Austin to Miss A. M. Carpenter, Simmons Art director, who has been chosen as director of this region.

This year is the first year that regional contests have been sponsored by the league and the first year art contests have been organized throughout the state by the league.

The state has been divided into a number of regions and Simmons University at Abilene has been named the art center for this region.

Three contests, for both intermediate and high school students, have been specified by the league officials. They are: (1) To draw in charcoal, a group of still life objects; (2) to painting color (any medium) a group of still life objects, and (3) to model in clay, wax, soap, or other material, an animal or figure, or other object, the nature of which will not be given out till the hour of the contest.

Other rules announce that previous winners in a contest are not disqualified and that regional winners are entitled to participate in the league rebate fund.

Heretofore, only an invitation meet has been held by the state, and contestants were admitted without prior qualifications in a regional meet. This year, only first place winners in one of the regional events can enter the state meet.

For further details students and teachers are requested to address the regional director Miss A. M. Carpenter, Simmons University, Abilene, Texas.

Shoe Styles Forecast For Spring-Summer

FORT WORTH, (UP)—Shoedonors of the southwest, meeting here in joint convention, looked at the thermometer today for an index to spring and summer sales.

If winter is long, shoemen may lose profits on gray shoes because of a short spring season. Gray, blue and brown shoes bring more profit to the dealer, but will be less in demand if winter fades abruptly into summer, it was pointed out.

White, will be the "depression" color for women's shoes, because it is adaptable to many kinds of frocks. Other style notes from the joint convention of the Texas and Oklahoma Shoe Retailers and Southwestern Shoe Travelers Associations are:

No more narrow toes. They will be round, but not broad. Heels will be of the boulevard type, not narrow stiletts.

Nearly 80 per cent of shoes sold after Easter will be white. Other colors in good style include beige and blue.

Sandals, wide-strapped and well perforated, will be in vogue.

Better Way To Bathe Ends Body Odor by Removing Cause

All who perspire freely know that bathing is often only temporary relief from body odor. That is because body odor is caused by stale perspiration deep in the pores. The thick, sticky layer of most ordinary toilet soaps is unsuited chemically to mix with this stale perspiration and flush it out. Instead it clogs the pores with curds.

Now research chemists give you a 100% pure vegetable oil soap—Kirk's Coco Castile—that breaks in to bubbly lather instantly, even in hard water.

This bubbly lather goes deep into the pores, actually removes stale perspiration curds, then rinses out completely. Thus it sends body odors at its source—the only effective way. And being odorless, it leaves no unpleasant M. E. (medicine smell), to betray its purpose.

Kirk's Coco Castile is made by the largest soap makers in America. And quite amazingly it costs no more than the average toilet soap, although it is half again larger. On sale at a new reduced price—the lowest in history. Be sure to ask for Kirk's Castile by name—at your grocer's.

DUTCH CRUISER IN HANDS OF MUTINOUS CREW

Native Sumatran sailors, angered because their pay was cut, overpowered nine officers of the Dutch cruiser De Zeven Provinciën, seized the ship while the commander was ashore at Harbor Oelen in Sumatra and put out to sea. The Zeven's commander and 10 naval officers of the main East Indies fleet pursued the cruiser in a government steamer. A wireless message from the mutineers aboard the Zeven announced the vessel was heading for Sourabaya, Java, where it would be delivered to naval authorities. (Associated Press Photo)

Sheriff Says Compton Made False Charges

Fowler Cited To Answer Contempt Of Court Charge At Angelo

RANKIN—Branding accusations of C. V. Compton, former McCamey school head, as "maliciously false" declaring Compton attempted to distort facts, Sheriff W. C. Fowler vigorously denied allegations of Compton who filed a petition before Judge John P. Sutton, 51st district court, citing Fowler and Attorney W. Van Sickle of Alpine to appear before court and show cause why they should not be punished for contempt.

Fowler said he was acting in line of duty as result of an order issued by the 53rd district court, this county, when he evicted Compton, his family and belongings from a McCamey teacherage last week. Fowler stated that Compton was aware of the court order and that he promised to furnish Fowler with sufficient bond as required by law before the order was carried into effect. At 7:30 o'clock Thursday evening, Fowler said, Compton had not furnished sufficient bond and that he proceeded to evict him from the teacherage saying he had no knowledge of an injunction being granted by any court except him from carrying out the court order until he received a telegram from Jesse Couch, Tom Green county district clerk, in which he was advised that an injunction had been granted.

Fowler added that he received this telegram at 8:20 o'clock, after the eviction had been completed, or nearly so.

Bronchial Troubles Need Creomulsion

Bronchial troubles may lead to something serious. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified croceote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action: it soothes and heals the inflamed membrane and inhibits germ growth. If all known drugs, croceote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to croceote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membrane and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the croceote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (Adv.)

Held For Slaying

Paul Mitchell (above), alias Paul Masters, 24-year-old mechanic of Amarillo, Tex., was charged with murder in Lubbock county in connection with the fatal shooting in Lubbock of Robert Sharp, grocery clerk and former McMurry college football player. (Associated Press Photo)

ton in citing him for contempt, Fowler said neither he nor his deputies had touched any liquor before or after eviction, that he did not handle furnishings of Compton in a "ruthless, brutal, harsh, tyrannical and rude manner," that he only supervised moving of the furnishings, and that Compton himself assisted the deputies in handling the furnishings "very carefully."

Fowler added that he brought two physicians along with him at the time to certify as to the condition of Mrs. Compton, who was ill. The two physicians agreed Fowler said, that it would do no harm for Fowler to permit her to be moved. Friends moved Mrs. Compton to a neighbor's house. Fowler said the Compton ouster was not a personal matter with him, but that he acted upon order of the court and that Compton in attempting court proceedings against him caused false statements to be published in newspapers, and had distorted facts.

"I treated them with all due respect and did not in any manner abuse or permit my deputies to abuse either Mr. or Mrs. Compton or their belongings," Fowler said.

Huey Long Defends Pay-Gouging Before Probing Committee

NEW ORLEANS (UP)—Senator Huey P. Long, defended "pay gouging," the practice of deducting from salaries of minor public job-holders to finance political machines, as he answered charges of election fraud before a senate subcommittee in session here.

"Everybody else does it," the "Kingfish" belted to General Samuel T. Ansell, counsel for the senate committee, who told Long the practice was "corrupt and damnable."

"The Republicans and Democrats both did it in the last election. Maybe you'd like to join me in a telegram to President Hoover, asking him to dismiss Postmaster-General Glover. Glover ask all postmasters and postal employees to contribute to the Hoover campaign?"

The committee, headed by Senator Robert B. Howell, Rep., Nebraska, made little headway in its attempt to throw light on campaign contributions and expenditures of the Long faction in the last election.

WHAT, NO MINISTERS!

LOS ANGELES—"I want a minister," stated a dapper young man as he walked into the filling station. "Very sorry, but we do not handle ministers—on the other hand we do handle very good gas," replied John G. Cochrane, station attendant. "But you see—I have no car. I am about to have a wedding so I need a minister. I also need $10 to pay him, so stick 'em up," ordered the young man as he drew a gun.

ALERT COUNCILMAN

KNOXVILLE, Tenn.—Every one on the council but Mr. Korns voted on the question of a bond issue for the improvement of streets. "Councilman Korns," called the recorder. He got no answer. There sat Korns as stiff as a statue, fast asleep. The chairman banged his gavel and the recorder raised another shout. "Aye," shouted Korns coming to life. And he looked sheepish when told he had voted to issue $100,000 worth of bonds.

MOUNTAIN IN DISGUISE

LONDON—Snowdon, the loftiest mountain in Wales, is to be disguised to resemble the mountains of Asia. Plants and foliage from the hills of Tibet, and China are to be imported by the Alpine Gardens Society and planted on the slopes of Snowdon. This project, which is going to be carried out at an altitude of 3000 feet, will help to beautify the mountain's bare cliffs.

Big Savings on Little Things! PENNEY'S NOTIONS

The Comforts of the American Home

IT IS a well-known fact that, home for home, the American household has more comforts and conveniences than that of any other nation. In foreign lands the modernized dwelling is found only in the better sections of the larger cities. In America, even in remote rural districts, you find the radio, the vacuum cleaner, washing machines, up-to-date heating systems, telephones and numberless labor-saving appliances. There is a well-kept look about residence, store or outbuildings with an atmosphere of prosperity and content. Did you ever stop to realize why this is so; how this condition was brought about? It is largely due to advertising. And a big share of the credit belongs to newspaper advertising. Stop and think how many of the foods you eat, the things you wear and other articles entering into your every-day life, you first heard of through newspaper advertisements. You will then realize what a part they do play, or should play, in your daily life. Read the advertisements in the newspapers regularly and thoroughly, if you are not already doing so. They mean more to you than you can tell.

SPOTLIGHT

CHAPTER XXVII

Jappy was sympathetic. "Cheer up," she said. "The 'city slickers' aren't the only ones we girls have to watch out for." The remark was well meant though scarcely tactful.

Sheila had reached the theater after most of the others in the company. She found that, as usual, Jappy had appropriated half her dressing room. Her trunk was there. Jappy had opened it, taken out the costumes and hung them in order.

Sheila told Jappy the whole story—how eager Jerry had seemed to have her remain in the company for the week-end but how little it had apparently meant to him. He hadn't even said goodby.

"Something may have happened, Sheila. There may have been a reason why he couldn't call," Jappy reminded her.

"But if he loved me—"

The other girl gave Sheila's arm a comforting pat. "He loves you," she assured her. "He asked for your address, didn't he? Give him time to explain."

Sheila gave Jerry time. Days passed. They stretched into a week and still no letter came. Then by a sudden juggling of engagements, the company's routing was changed, bringing them within 100 miles of Spencer. Somehow Jerry Wyman must have learned this. On the first night of the new engagement he was waiting at the stage door for Sheila after the performance.

Again life was rosy. Sheila was so happy she gave Jappy a hat which the other girl had long admired. The fact that Jerry had come to see her seemed to prove that he really cared for her.

Every letter Sheila wrote to him meant a heart-breaking wait for the answer. Jerry would dash off a brief note after three of Sheila's long, newsy letters.

"But that's your own fault, don't you see?" Jappy would explain patiently. "You shouldn't write so often. That would show him!"

"Men never like to write letters," Sheila answered defensively.

"Your friend Dick writes often enough."

That was true, Dick Stanley wrote frequently—long, entertaining letters. Sometimes they came twice in the same week. Always in the thick vellum envelopes he liked.

"Dick enjoys writing. It's easier for him."

"I know."

But this explanation did not cheer Sheila. Each day that she did not hear from Jerry was dreary and lonely. Half a dozen times a day she would ask at the hotel desk for letters or call the theater to see if mail had arrived there.

Then on days when there was a letter she seemed a different girl. At times Sheila thought it was almost worth the heartaches to experience such happiness.

At last the "Heigh-ho" company reached the city farthest west on the tour and headed again for New York. Each day now was taking Sheila farther and farther away from Jerry, from country lanes, brick factories, little model homes and all the places where she had been so happy.

The night came when the company gave its last performance on the road. McKee, the comedian, gave a party to which he invited the entire cast. Sheila did not go. She wanted to pack, to get everything in readiness for the next day when she would arrive in New York.

Daybreak found them in the city. Sheila telephoned to Ma Lowell from the station. Yes, there was a room waiting for her. It was larger than the old one, too. That was fine! Sheila had saved some money, she expected to find job fairly soon. McKee had mentioned a night club that paid well.

As she rode up Eighth avenue in a cab, her baggage piled about her feet and Jappy beside her, Sheila was happy. "It's great to be back, isn't it?" Jappy said.

Sheila agreed. It was June. Jerry was coming in August to spend his vacation. There would be two months in which she would find another job.

But theatrical obs. she was to find, were scarce. Now that summer was ahead even the supper clubs were not taking on dancers. Sheila had been in town only two days before Dick sought her out. He was hard at work, he said. Yes, writing a play. A new one now. He must have noticed a change in Sheila's manner for he said, "You don't like me any more, do you?"

"Of course I do. What makes you say such a thing?"

But when he spoke about seeing her again Sheila was evasive. Jim Blaine telephoned a few nights later. He was going to Chicago to sing in a musical show.

Thevior Lane gave a party and Sheila, went, arrayed in her best, her hair done in a new and becoming way. In spite of admiration and attention she could not be cheered. Jerry had not written for more than a week.

One afternoon when the search for a job, as usual had been fruitless Sheila hesitated between spending money to see a vaudeville bill or dropping in on Blind Timmy at Joe Paris' song shop. She finally decided to call on Timmy. She found him in a practice room and he welcomed her warmly, pathetically glad to have her call. Timmy had moved from Ma Lowell's several months before. He could not afford the luxury of his former room there.

"Written any new songs?" Sheila asked.

For answer Timmy ran his fingers over the keys, began playing a melody.

"That's lovely," she told him. "Will you let me sing it?"

Timmy's face shone. "Will you, Sheila?"

"If I can. I haven't a job yet." "Sing it at a party some time. See if it goes over," he urged, and she promised.

It was several weeks longer before a job materialized for Sheila. Then she had a chance to fill in with a partner at a smart supper club. Dora Rodney, who danced with her brother, Ted, at the Club Volens, became ill and Sheila agreed to take her place. Ted was a supercilious young man who thought no one his equal. Sheila danced with him one week and then another. Ted and Dora received $100 a week. Sheila was paid $50. That was fair enough, however. Alone or with a partner less well known she could not have won an engagement at the Club Volens.

At the end of the two weeks Sheila's finances totaled $300. It was enough to tide her over the rest of the summer. Instead of saving all this thriftily, Sheila bought some new clothes. She wanted to look her best when Jerry Wyman arrived. She was glad that she had so many friends. It would be nice to appear popular before Jerry. She could take him to one of Trevor Lane's parties and introduce him to actors, playwrights and others whose names were well known. She would show him the most entertaining supper clubs.

August arrived but with it no Jerry. Even his letters had become less frequent.

Sheila went back to the Club Volens to dance with Ted Rodney. "Will Dora's Spanish costume fit you?" he asked her.

"I think so," Sheila turned to him, conscious of two things—that she looked well and that Ted could never be induced to say so. "Scared?"

She knew enough to answer this truthfully. "Yes. Aren't you?"

"I always am lately for some reason."

"Maybe it's because you miss Dora," Sheila said sympathetically.

The master of ceremonies was announcing them. The orchestra began their number and the spotlight flung itself across the floor. Sheila and Ted stood in position at the entrance. They waited a moment. Then two running steps forward and they were off.

It was not until the dance had ended and they were bowing to the applause that Sheila noticed a young man seated at a nearby table.

"Gold Rush" May Arouse East Texas Village Once More

NAOGDOCHES UP)—A "gold rush" may awaken Appleby, a sleepy hamlet in the pine woods ten miles north of here.

Scenes of bustling activity may be found at the old Santa Anna mine shaft, where workmen are ready to tunnel deep in search of gold. The mine has an intriguing history, part truth and part folklore.

It was 25 years ago that residents of Appleby, whittling before the rustic grocery store and discussing topics popular in 1907, noticed a small cloud of dust raised by a crippled man who approached.

The stranger was a Mexican with one leg about four inches shorter than the other. That was Appleby's introduction to "Hopplin' Bell."

"His name was Bellas, or something like that, and he had a first name nobody could pronounce," said John Boyett, justice of the peace and pioneer of the neighborhood. "So they called him Hopplin' Bell. He claimed to be a nephew of old Santa Anna himself."

Hopplin' Bell wasted little time letting his business be known. He produced a worn map of the section, plotted off to show the location of a gold mine which had been worked by Spaniards years before.

When the Texans were crowding Santa Anna just before the Battle of San Jacinto, according to Hopplin' Bell, a large quantity of gold ore already had been mined. Crafty Santa Anna, realising he could not get the ore to a smelter in Mexico, sank it into an air shaft.

One corner of the plot was marked with a pistol in an old hollow tree, another with a gun barrel showed down into the ground, a third with an old-fashioned shuttle in the trunk of a large tree and the fourth the trunk of a tree with small pines driven through it.

The whole was supposed to be covered with a large rock.

Hopplin' Bell hobbled through the woods for days until he found the first marker. People began to believe his story. When he found a solid rock jutting up out of Turkey Creek and showed them shining sands of gold, the whole town joined in the treasure hunt.

Four men moved away the large rock, according to Sam T. Crawford, another pioneer and a trace of the old shaft was found. Hopplin' Bell died before the digging got under way.

There is a hiatus in the legend from the time of Hopplin' Bell's death to the present day. Three months ago A. S. Bergendahl of Houston leased the land from the Greening family for its oil and mineral content. Mining operations have been under way since then.

Independent Petroleum Directors Are Called

J. R. Parten, president of the Independent Petroleum Association of Texas, issued a call for a directors' meeting to be held in Fort Worth at 11 a. m. Tuesday, February 14th.

The purpose of the meeting has to do primarily with the political and legislative situation in Austin relative to oil matters.

The association has been active for the last three years in legislative circles, and this meeting prefaces continuous participation.

Mr. Parten would make no comment on the position of the association regarding the proposed Oil and Gas Commission, nor on the many other bills now before the legislature.

NEW YORK

By James McMullin
Telephone—
Inside reports indicate that Western Electric (A. T. & T. subsidiary) could shut up shop completely—except for the cable division—for eight years without impairing its usefulness to American Telephone. It has enough equipment already on hand to last that length of time.

In spite of this situation telephone officials have fought against a shutdown because of the adverse effect such action would have on the public morale. Western Electric is filling in by making trays and other non-electric products but is finding it difficult to compete in alien fields.

One thing about American Telephone—its directors all own sizeable blocks of stock themselves. So, whatever they do to their dividend affects their own pocketbook.

Federal Trade

The reduction of the appropriation for the Federal Trade Commission may not be directly traceable to New York influence. But there were more than a few long distance calls between New York and Washington shortly before the house committee made its report. Some of our leading utilities are convinced—although they never say so out loud—that the trade commission is an unnecessary pain in the neck.

Gold

Banking circles in New York are talking again about gold having been taken out in hundred thousand lots and stored away in safe deposit vaults by various millionaires who hurriedly withdrew the metal from their accounts when rumors flew that we were going off the gold standard.

These are some of the clashing stumps that flash out of this nerve worn, hectic capital on the eve of the Roosevelt inaugural.

"What are you going to do after March 4?" Secretary of Navy Adams was asked. "I'm going back to Boston and mind my own business," he answered. Not many are so detached in this moment. Washington always gets a fit of nerve just before one of its big moments. In the dramatic period just before the declaration of war on Germany, some now forgotten tourist around the capitol could restrain himself no longer and attempt to beat up the venerable Senator Henry Cabot Lodge because they disagreed.

These spells have been coming over Washington ever since the day the British burned the White House. For those who are only spectators it's a great fun. It only costs about $4,000,000,000 a year and half of that is just added to the public debt and doesn't have to be paid immediately.

his ship struck a mountain near Fredericksburg in blind weather, and was demolished. He climbed out, got his mail and flashlight, and walked into Fredericksburg.

Only a month before operations were stopped Ray Fuller, one of the most experienced pilots in the service of American Airways, operator of the line, was killed when his ship crashed near Boerne. Fuller had a number of close friends here, having been a member of the local camp of Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The pilots on duty when the line was discontinued were Brock and Ted Howe. All the men who flew the open-cockpit ships on the feeder line were well-known here, since they had lay-overs in the city practically all of every other day.

Ed Howe, who also was sent to tri-motor duty, was on duty for some months, and probably had more trips on the route than any other pilot except Vance. T. J. Hair was another pilot who saw service on the route.

Milk Fund To Receive Lions Show Receipts

Preparations continue for Home Talent Production Feb. 11-12. Proceeds of the Lions club-sponsored show, "Henry's Wedding," February 11 and 12, will go to a club milk fund and for underprivileged children, it was announced Friday.

With a cast of 125 people, the "wedding" will be the means of exhibiting the stage talents of leading business and professional men of the city.

Besides a rollicking comedy centering around a fifty-five year old bachelor who suddenly succumbs to the charms of a thrice grass widow, a hilarious negro confab is being rehearsed. Prominent Big Spring men have readily consented to appear in additional acts garbed in outlandish costumes.

Plot of the play hinges on efforts of "Henry" and his nephew to obtain a huge sum of money by marrying. In the tangle that follows, Henry is kidnaped, concealed in an ash heap with refuse by gangsters. A cigarette butt is tossed into the heap. There is an explosion. Henry turns up with blackened features, and is mistaken for Rastus, the man servant. Unsuspectingly, he becomes the center of attraction at a meeting of the colored meeting of the "Mystic Shrine" called to consult the gods to Henry's whereabouts. Dipping the holy waters, Henry becomes suddenly white, and members of the mystic shrine have seen a ghost. The ending of the complicated situation is equally as humorous.

Among those prominent in the cast are Dorothy Jordan, Mrs. George Gentry, W. C. Blankenship, Jeanette Pickle, Charles Corley, Wilburn Barcus, Mrs. Flossie Low, and Shirley Robbins.

A business men's chorus will furnish one of the highlights of the play.

TODAY and TOMORROW

By WALTER LIPPMANN
The Trans-Atlantic Debate

Envoys Home From Austin

The debate being carried on across the ocean by Mr. Neville Chamberlain on the one hand and by various Senators on the other does no credit to any of the orators. With the world as sick as it is, the least that can be asked of public men is that they have something to say that will help their people to surmount their difficulties.

The argument has come down to wrangle over whether war debts are to be reduced with or without "compensation" to the United States. The British spokesmen avow they will concede nothing. This all sounds very hard-boiled, but on closer examination it soon appears that the argument is essentially unreal because the debaters on both sides are reasoning from fictitious premises.

Let us begin by looking at the glass house in which we live. Those who assume that the war debts can be traded off for definite compensations are assuming that these debts still have a large tangible value. They see the European countries obligated to pay us some twenty-two billions in principal and interest during the remainder of the twentieth century, and they say to themselves that for twenty-two billions we ought to be able to buy some handsome favors. But this is certainly an illusion. These obligations, as Senator Reed, of Pennsylvania, pointed out the other day, have no sanction behind them and are supported by no collateral; they rest on our view, let us remember, of the British debt is worth as much as and no more than the British people feel it ought to be worth. Now the British view of what that debt is worth has undergone a radical change since the contract was made some ten years ago. There is every reason to think it has undergone a decisive change in the past two months. Up to December 15th that part of the British people which held the contract to be firmly binding determined British policy. It no longer seems to do so.

When the American government refused to postpone the Debenhams payment, it incurred something like a revolution of British opinion. The sense that this debt was binding snapped. The sense of moral obligation was destroyed by moral indignation at the unprecedented humiliation imposed by our refusal to postpone. Our government, by choosing to play the part of a hard creditor, lost its moral hold upon the conscience of the debtor. When Great Britain shipped the ninety-five millions of gold, her people sloughed off their feeling for the sanctity of that particular debt.

Since that time it has no longer been a question of what the United States would concede but of what Britain would still consent to pay. It will not be much. The unwisdom of the December policy has robbed default of its terrors. The whole world held us to be wrong in insisting upon the payment on that date, and default has terrors only if the world considers it odious. Therefore we may as well look the facts in the face and know that our claims have just about the same force today as had the reparations claims on Germany on the eve of theusanne conference.

The British illusion, the counterpart of the American, is that the fluctuating pound sterling is somehow a British asset and that the American desire to see it stabilized is a demand that Britain make a sacrifice to American interest. The manner in which British spokesmen dismiss American attempts to discuss this question are not only profoundly irritating but wholly misconceived. They appear to assume that a country like the United States will be docile under the impact of currency manipulation. They appear to assume that sterling can be stabilized without the co-operation of the United States. I say they appear to assume it for how else is one to account for the brutal disregard of American sensibilities which characterizes Mr. Chamberlain's speeches?

Yet one has only to glance at Mr. Chamberlain's four conditions necessary to the stabilization of sterling to see how fatally mistaken would be a British policy of high-handed disregard of American feeling during the coming negotiations in Washington. The conditions are: first, a war debt settlement; second removal of artificial trade barriers; third, redistribution of the world's gold stock; fourth, settlement or amelioration of the outstanding political questions. Can these four conditions conceivably be met without the active co-operation of the United States? Obviously not. Surely it is clear that the two nations have a common interest and that what the situation calls for is not trading, but teamwork.

What the two nations need is a common policy, a thorough understanding, an accord of confidence on the whole series of measures looking toward world reconstruction. Is there anything else worth working for? Is anything else worth talking about?

Extortion Plot Against Lindbergh Brings Order For Issuance Of Warrants

ROANOKE, Va. (AP)—Assistant District Attorney T. X. Parsons announced Friday he had ordered issuance of federal warrants for the principals in an attempt to extort $50,000 from Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh under threats against the safety of his second son.

Parsons made the announcement as he was informed the Department of Justice had entered the investigation of the case which Thursday led to arrest of Joe Bryant and Norman Harvey, young Roanoke men.

Parsons recommended that Bryant and Harvey be held for $25,000 bond each, and Harvey's wife, Elsie, for $5,000 bond. The arrests were made when Bryant called at a bank Thursday to cash a $17,000 check left by a police officer in a hollow stump.

Confessions Obtained To Kidnaping Of Woman

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Police said confessions made by Miss Luella Pearl Hammer, 35, and W. P. Howard, 39, early Friday, cleared up the mysterious kidnaping of Mrs. Mary B. Skeels.

Detective Chief Joe Taylor said Howard told a complete story conforming to facts already unearthed by police. Miss Hammer, confronted with Howard's statement, also confessed. Taylor said the pair also confessed to an attempt to abduct Miss Isabel Smith, Pasadena school teacher.

Extortion Plot Involving Second Lindbergh Child Is Bared, Two Youths Arrested

Amazing But Crude Plan To Collect Money From Colonel Fails When Pair Walks Into Police Trap

ROANOKE, Va., (AP)—Two Roanoke youths walked into a police trap here Thursday laying bare an amazing but seemingly crude attempt to extort $50,000 from Col. Charles A. Lindbergh through threats against his second child. Joe Bryant, 19, and Norman Harvey, 26, were arrested shortly after they attempted to cash a check for $17,000 deposited in a hollow stump by police detectives. They were charged with attempted extortion and held for United States authorities. Mrs. Harvey was held for questioning.

French Ambassador

The threats were made in two letters to Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, in December. Colonel H. Norman Schwarzkopf, of New Jersey police, who turned them over to federal authorities, said the hand writing apparently was not the same as that in the ransom note left by the kidnapers and slayers of the first Lindbergh child. No "Higher-Ups"

Roanoke police said they suspected no "higher-ups" in the case here. No federal action against the youths was to be taken before Friday.

The men were taken into custody after they attempted to cash a $17,000 check which Robert C. Johnson chief of the Roanoke police identification bureau was masked as an agent of Colonel Lindbergh, had planted in the stump.

The threatening letters sent to Colonel Lindbergh, written in poor English, told the colonel his other child died of "new moon" and that "we have no warm place to stay now. I do not want this little baby. We want the money and it will be cheaper to pay us the $50,000. Your child is worth that to you."

Police here refused to divulge the texts of the letters sent to Colonel Lindbergh, threatening his second baby. They said the letters were turned over to New Jersey police by the colonel, and were referred to Roanoke police by federal authorities.

No Connection With Other
 Colonel H. Norman Schwarzkopf, of New Jersey police, who gave the letters over to postal authorities, said he felt the case here had no connection with the kidnaping and subsequent slaying of the first Lindbergh child.

The letters will be turned over to United States authorities with whom the local officials have been working, C. E. Gentry, who was assistant United States district attorney here when the letters were received early in December, requested the Roanoke police investigation.

Chief Johnson, using the name of "John J. Jones," carried on correspondence with the writers of the extortion notes and arranged to deposit extortion money in the stump. They reached an agreement to reduce the amount to $25,000 and still later to $17,000. No deposit, however, was made.

more letters which disappeared. The final arrangements were to leave a check for $17,000 and let the extortionist take it to the bank and have it cashed. Bryant walked into the bank with the check. The teller, W. M. Skelton, warned by police, stepped back to the vault and telephoned police. He then began tying up some receipts about the size of the "big bills" that were requested.

Officers in plain clothes were awaiting when he returned to the window—the city hall was only a block away. The package was pushed through.

"Thank you," said Bryant as he walked away, smiling. Followed From Bank
 Chief Johnson and Special Officer Howard Ferguson followed Bryant from the bank. A block away he was joined by Harvey. When Harvey saw Johnson he began to run. The two went in different directions, but soon were captured, Harvey as he sought to get into a car occupied by his wife, Ethel, and a small child.

Specimens of Bryant's handwriting were taken at police headquarters and Johnson, who is a handwriting expert, expressed the opinion that it was that of the man who wrote the extortion letters. Bryant said he discovered the letter accidentally about five o'clock Wednesday.

Unusual Bargain In Antiseptics At Local Druggists

Local druggists are introducing a new oral antiseptic made by the makers of Vicks VapoRub. It is called Vicks Voratec Antiseptic. Of course, the only real proof of its quality and economy is actual use. To make this proof possible, a special trial size has been prepared. It contains 2 1/2 ounces—a 25c value. Its price, while the limited supply lasts, is only 10c. You can use Vicks Antiseptic in your customary way, for bad breath, as a gargle, mouth-wash, or antiseptic lotion; and for all the other customary antiseptic uses. Born in a depression year, Vicks Antiseptic is priced accordingly. The regular size, large 10-ounce bottle—a usual 75c value—is only 35c.—adv.

Thieves in the Night Which House is Safe?

Every night, somewhere, evil minds are planning crimes and wrong doings. Prevalent among the plots are those of house breaking.

A darkened home tells a complete story to the burglar—the folks are gone, it is safe to go in and leisurely ransack the place. So it is done and priceless possessions are gone forever.

Floods of light tell a different story—the folks are home, it is unsafe to enter. The thief has no way of knowing that the family is at the theater and have left their lights burning as insurance against this very thing—the cheapest insurance in the world against outlawry and crime.

For a few cents a week you can protect your home against burglars—by leaving ample lights burning when you are out for the evening.
