By WALTER LIPPMANN The Removal of Mayor Walker

While there is no doubt that the Governor of New York has the power to remove the Mayor of New York City, the case of Mayor Walker is really unprecedented.

But the obligation of the Governor does not end at this point. If he decides that the Mayor should be removed, he will in effect be creating a situation in which the voters of New York City will have a chance to uphold or reverse his decision.

It is the Governor's duty to take every possible step to avert it. The responsibility is his. On the wisdom, the courage and the leadership he displays now depends, if it is his duty to remove the Mayor, it is his duty to see that his judgment is upheld.

In view of Governor Roosevelt's tortuous course throughout this affair, it will not be easy, if he is nominated at Chicago, to convince the public of his disinterestedness.

Should the Governor, therefore, decide for removal there is great danger of a complete fiasco in the form of the Mayor's re-election, unless the Governor does what he has never yet done, unless he stops denouncing those who are fighting corruption and puts himself at the head of the forces fighting corruption.

France Disapproves Hoover Plan For Arms Reduction

Great Britain Calls Proposals 'Inadequate'; Italy Enthusiastically Accepts Program Of President

By The Associated Press GENEVA, SWITZERLAND - President Hoover's program of drastic armament reductions, designed to save the world $10,000,000,000 during the next ten years, provoked strong and immediate disapproval from France when it was presented to the disarmament conference.

Italy accepted the program enthusiastically and unconditionally. Germany hailed it as a "new impetus" in disarmament, Japan expressed willingness to co-operate, and Russia approved it on the theory that any method of restricting arms was progress.

The upshot of the stirring conference session was that Hoover proposals were made part of the agenda for the private discussions under way among the United States, Britain and France, to which the other powers soon will be admitted.

France's objections were voiced by Joseph Paul-Boncour, minister of war, who first told newspaper correspondents the program was "absolutely unacceptable" and then went before the conference where he vigorously assailed it.

The core of his opposition was the traditional French policy of security. Who, he asked, would provide security if the reductions were carried out? Mr. Hoover proposed: Abolition of all tanks, chemical warfare, large mobile guns, bombing planes and all bombardment from the air; reduction of one-third in the strength of all land armies over and above forces required for internal safety; reduction in the treaty number and tonnage of all battleships by one-third; reduction in treaty tonnage of aircraft carriers, cruisers and destroyers by one-fourth; and reduction of submarines by one-third with no tonnage having a total exceeding 35,000 tons.

Gibson Explains Plan Hugh Gibson, head of the American disarmament delegation, declared in explaining the president's program it meant the United States was ready to scrap 300,000 tons of naval vessels and to forego the right to build more than 150,000 more tons.

"In land materials," he said, "our proposals would affect more than 1,000 heavy mobile guns and approximately 900 tanks; in aviation about 200 bombardment airplanes. "Reduction of armaments," responded M. Paul-Boncour, "is inseparably bound up with security."

French spokesmen said privately they objected to the surprise manner in which the American program was presented. It amounted, they said, to an ultimatum.

The proposals were heard at a special session of the conference called at the request of Mr. Gibson. Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, who opened the discussion, subjected the proposals to detailed and cool criticism.

Sir John assumed the American delegation that the Hoover program would be "promptly examined with sympathetic attention." Dino Grandi, Italian foreign minister, was accorded an enthusiastic ovation for his declaration that "Italy accepts entirely and in all its parts the disarmament plan submitted today by the American delegation."

"Italy," he said, "is a country armed on land, on sea and in the air, and by accepting the American plan Italy is prepared to make substantial sacrifices. She will make them gladly."

LEAP YEAR BRIDE

by Laura Lou BROOKMAN

BEGIN HERE TODAY
CHERRY DIXON, pretty 19-year-old daughter of wealthy parents, falls in love with DAN PHILLIPS, newspaper reporter. She quarrels with her father about Dan, leaves home and, taking advantage of Leap Year, asks Dan to marry her.

They are married and for the first time Cherry finds out what it means to lack money. Her struggles with housework are discouraging. DIXIE SHANNON, movie critic of the News, is friendly with Cherry. She meets handsome MAX PEARSON, who also works on the News.

Cherry receives a letter from her mother enclosing a check for $500. She returns the check because pride will not let her keep it. A young woman living in the same apartment building attempts suicide and is taken to a hospital. Cherry sends the girl some flowers and while down town meets Pearson who invites her to luncheon.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXIV
Max Pearson studied the menu. "Like scallops?" he asked. "All the sea food is very good here."
How handsome he looked today, Cherry, meeting Pearson's eyes, glanced down again quickly at the card before her.

"I'll have the shrimp paté," she said, "and watercress salad. Coffee later."
They were in a restaurant new to Cherry. It was an attractive place, obviously more expensive than the establishments she and Dan had patronized. Cherry looked about and noticed there were more men than women diners. All of them were fashionably, prosperously dressed. The restaurant had a subdued, quiet air that was a relief from the street.

Pearson seemed thoroughly at home there. The waiter who took the order greeted him as an acquaintance of long standing.
"Now then," Max said when the question of food had been settled, "tell me what you've been doing?"
"Just the usual things. Trying to remember to salt the potatoes and how to open a can without cutting myself. I'm still one of the world's worst cooks!"

"You are—?" Pearson began and then checked himself. He did not finish the sentence but said, "Where's that waiter? I want him to bring some matches."
He began talking of the office and Cherry was interested. The sense of warmth—the feeling that she must be on her guard with Pearson—left her. There was no use telling herself that she should never have been there. Cherry knew very well that she was enjoying this luncheon. It was pleasant to sit across a table from such an attractive, entertaining young man and it was certainly a treat to eat food that she had not herself prepared. Yes, she was enjoying the luncheon.

She told Max about the kitten and he seemed amused at her description. Somehow Dan's name entered the conversation. Cherry had a sudden inspiration. She leaned forward.

"There's something I'd like to ask you," she said. "I've wanted to talk to someone about it for a long time. I believe you're the person."
"Fire away!"

Pearson was holding a lighted match to the top of his cigarette. His eyes, intent on the flame, did not waver.
"It's about Dan," the girl went on earnestly. "I want to know if certainly very kind of you."

He told her the name of the garage and where it was located. "One of the boys will drive the car out for you," he assured her. "They're darned obliging. That's the reason I keep it there. How about using it this afternoon?"
She told him she could not. She had left the apartment in a hurry and there were a dozen things to be done. Suddenly she thought of the kitten.

"Poor little Pinky!" she exclaimed. "He'll be starved. Oh, I'll have to go right away!"
Pearson looked at his watch. "Time for me to be getting back, too," he agreed.

They walked down the street a block together. Cherry thanked him for the luncheon and said good-by. She was smiling as she boarded the street car.

"I was wrong about Max Pearson," she told herself. "He only wants to be friendly to help me out. Oh, it's going to be wonderful to have a car to drive again!"
True to prediction, Pinky was feeling neglected when Cherry arrived home. He came running toward her on his slightly unstable legs, meowing as loudly as his little lungs would allow. Cherry picked him up, filled a saucer with milk and watched the kitten's clumsy efforts to drink the milk and at the same time wave in it.

She told Dan that evening about lunching with Pearson and about his offer to loan her the roadster.
"Darned nice of him!" Dan told her. "Didn't I say Max is a prince?"
"But do you really think I should, Dan?"

"Why not? Max would be hurt if you refused. Of course it's all right."
Cherry was silent for a minute. Then she said, "He told me something else today. Max thinks you can write. I mean short stories—or a novel maybe."
"Did Max say that?"

Cherry nodded eagerly. "I've been thinking about it all afternoon and I'm going to help you by having everything out of the way so you can get to work as soon as dinner is finished. I won't let anyone interrupt. You can begin tonight."
Phillips protested with a groan. "Hey, wait a minute—wait a minute! I don't want to sit down before a typewriter tonight. I'm tired! Even if I did I couldn't write anything worth while. Honestly, Cherry, I can't do it tonight! I tell you I'm all in."

"But, Dan, if you're ever going to write there has to be a beginning."
"Say—I didn't know you were such a slave driver! What kind of a frameup is this, anyhow?"
Cherry was disappointed. "It's only that I wanted to help," she told him.
"Then you'll have to do your helping some other time."

He went out a little later saying he had promised to call one of the boys. "It was 10 o'clock before he returned. The next evening Dixie dropped in and they played three-handed bridge. The night following Dan had an evening assignment.

It began to look to Cherry as though her husband's literary career was a long way distant. Then there came a Sunday—the second in June—when the drizzling rain that had begun in the morning settled to a continuous downpour. Dan was home for the day. He had changed his working hours and now spent Sundays with Cherry. Clad in an old bathrobe he sat at the typewriter and began to bang the keys.

For almost three hours he worked steadily. Then, with a loud exclamation, he slumped back in his chair.
"What's the use?" Dan demanded. "I can't write anything. This stuff is terrible! It's—oh, it's a mess!"
Cherry crossed the room. "Can I read it?" she asked.
"If you want to. I don't care what you do with it so long as I don't have to see it again!"

He jumped up, strode to the dressing room and five minutes later was busy shaving.
Cherry read the manuscript. It was little more than a character sketch, a conversation between a taxidriver and a lunch counter attendant in a cheap, open-all-night place. Gus, the driver, had opinions on many subjects and seemed to be something of a hero to his friend. Their conversation was terse, colloquial, and much of it Cherry could not understand. There were vague allusions to underworld activities.

She read on. Pearson was right about it. Dan did have an original way of putting things. She came to the fourth page and there the narrative broke off in the middle of a sentence.
"But, Dan!" Cherry exclaimed, "this is interesting! Why didn't you finish it? I want to know the rest!"
Phillips appeared in the doorway, made a gesture of disdain. "Oh, I'm sick of the thing. Tear it up!"
Cherry folded the sheets hurriedly and put them away. There was no more writing this day or the next.

Late Wednesday afternoon Cherry was summoned downstairs. She cried out at sight of the man who was waiting in the hallway.

Vacation Time Gives Daughter Opportunity to Aid Her Mother

By JOSEPHINE GIBSON Since vacation has begun, many girls will enjoy relieving mother of some of her duties in preparing meals. If mother can be sent away for a few days, girls will find it great fun to have all the responsibility. If that cannot be done, they can send her out for the afternoon, telling her that they will prepare dinner. Unless girls have cooked a great deal, they should not undertake an elaborate meal. Attractive, nutritious and economical dinners can be served by utilizing some of the many varieties of prepared and semi-prepared foods now furnished by the modern food manufacturer and the job is one of assembling wisely rather than preparing all the foods. Following are menus that girls might serve when they prepare dinner.

Cream of Pea Soup (Prepared) Crackers Sweet Gherkins Pork Chops with Oven-Baked Beans Buttered Carrots or Spinach Quick Cold Slaw with Apple Stewed Fresh Cherries or other Fresh Fruits

Baked Pork Chops with Noodles Spiced Bananas or French Cucumber Pickle Slices Buttered Peas or Spinach Apple, Nut and Celery Salad Prepared Fig Pudding with Sauce

or Ice Cream Coffee

Porcupine Beef Balls Baked Potatoes Head Lettuce with Mayonnaise and Sliced Olive Dressing Grape Jelly Hot Rolls Baked Apples

(*) Indicates that recipes are given below. Pork Chops with Oven-Baked Beans: Fry 6 pork chops until nicely brown. Pour over chops 1 can Oven-Baked Beans, add 1 teaspoon sugar and 1-2 cup Tomato Ketchup; mix lightly. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for about 20 minutes.

Quick Cold Slaw with Apple: To 3 cups cabbage and 1 cup apples finely chopped, add 1 chopped green pepper and a few drops of onion juice. Sprinkle with 1 teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon sugar and dash of pepper and moisten with Mayonnaise Salad Dressing, which has been combined with 2 table-spoons Pure Vinegar. Mix well and serve in nests of crisp lettuce. Baked Pork Chops with Noodles: Cook 2 cups egg noodles in salted water for eight minutes. Drain. Fry pork chops until nearly done and salt slightly. Mince 1 small onion, combine with noodles, 1-1/4 cups water, and 1-3 cup tomato ketchup. Put chops in casserole, cover with noodles, sprinkle top with buttered bread crumbs. Bake at 350 degrees F. for 30 to 40 minutes.

Absent Pastors To Return To Pulpits Sun.

Methodist To Meet On Lawn; Episcopal People To Talk

The Rev. Richard J. Spann will return to his pulpit Sunday morning following a week spent at Fort Stockton teaching in the training school there and will commence open air meetings on the church lawn Sunday evening. For the morning service Dr. Spann's topic will be the first in a series of six sermons on the general subject, "Jesus Parable on the Christian Discharge of Social Obligations." His theme will be "The Good Samaritan on the Modern Highway to Coz."

The evening service will be held on the lawn at 8:30, during the summer so the members may be cool. The topic will be "Moses versus Emily Post: Righteousness versus Correctness."

First Christian The Rev. D. R. Lindley will also return to his pulpit Sunday after an extended absence. He will arrive in town Saturday from Haskell where he has been holding a summer revival. His sermon topics are not yet announced. On Monday Mr. Lindley leaves for Center Point, where he will teach in the Young People's summer conference.

First Baptist "The Cornerstone of the Christian Religion" will be the sermon topic of the Rev. R. E. Day at the First Baptist church Sunday morning.

In the evening there will be baptismal services and special music. Episcopal Church Saint Mary's Episcopal church was represented in the Young People's conference this week by Miss Mary Louise Gilmour, Frederick Koebeg, and Jack B. Hodges, Jr.

Sunday morning, June 28 the sermon time at the 11 o'clock service will be taken up by these young people who will each make an address on one of the following subjects: "The Prayer Book Explained"; "The purpose and benefit of Seaman Hall and the North Texas Young People's conference"; and "My Impressions of the conference." All church people and friends are invited to hear these reports; and become better acquainted with the work of the Episcopal young people in this district.

Recent Bride Is Shower Honoree

The members of the Young People's department and of the Junior Department of the First Baptist Sunday School surprised Mrs. Martha McDonald with a lovely miscellaneous holiday shower Thursday afternoon at her home at 806 Lancaster St.

The girls in Mrs. McDonald's Sunday school class had part in the shower. They left their gifts at the church and then met at the honoree's home for a class party. The officers of the department assembled at the church and went from there in a body to the shower. Mrs. McDonald received many lovely and useful gifts for her new home, in appreciation for the work she and Mr. McDonald have done in the Sunday School. The girls of the class who attended were: Lois Whitehead, Rebecca Thomas, Urcelle Ella, Lindora Ross, Gussie Persky, Gertrude Sanders, Dorothy Dean Rain, Ida Fails Duff, Mary Elizabeth Dodge, Lillian York, Imogene Barnett and Zollie Mae Dodge.
