Hundreds Evacuated Rainfall Heavy In Border Area

By United Press International
Blinding deluges of rain sent waves of water, mud and debris surging into the lowlands of El Paso and Ciudad Juarez Saturday, forcing hundreds of persons from their homes on both sides of the Rio Grande and collapsing scores of small adobe homes.

The rains which fell before dawn Saturday brought the 72-hour rainfall total in the border

Light Moisture Reported Here

A slow, drizzling rain fell intermittently in the Top O' Texas yesterday morning, but Pampa received only .23 inch of moisture.

Small amounts of rainfall, all reported as drizzle, were recorded around the area. Reports included Miami, .30; Lefors, .12; and Laketon, .10.

area to more than half that usually received in an entire year.

Churches opened their doors to evacuees in both cities, and more than 200 persons were sheltered at the Armed Forces YMCA in downtown El Paso.

Water flowed waist deep through homes in eastern El Paso, and silt and mud rose to the roof of one home.

Four feet of water flowed along Juarez Street in El Paso's sister city, and streetcars between the two towns were stopped.

The police and fire department in El Paso, ran out of sandbags in trying to stop the flow of water into homes. Water flowed into basements across the city.

The rains which struck the mid-morning Saturday, and the sun peeked out from behind the clouds. Additional light showers were forecast, however, through Sunday.

"I think the worst is over," said El Paso Police Chief Ted Vogle shortly after noon Saturday. "It will be all right if we don't get any more hard rains."

Almost four inches of rain has struck El Paso and Juarez since Wednesday morning. The annual average rainfall for El Paso is a mere 7.89 inches.

The rains which struck the western section of Texas spread only slightly eastward over the City Will Consider Selling Lake Water

A proposal to sell Canadian River water to the City of Lubbock will be considered by the Pampa City Commission at its regular meeting Tuesday forenoon in City Hall.

An item on the Tuesday agenda states:
"Consider approval of proposal to sell water to City of Lubbock as per City Manager's letter dated June 5, 1968."

Details of the water proposal will be released at the meeting. Although Pampa has an aqueduct leading from Lake Meredith to the west city limits at Kentucky Ave., the city will not be using water from the lake until a treatment plant is constructed.

Construction of the $750,000 plant is not expected to start until the Spring of 1969. Plans for the project are still on the drawing board and probably will not be ready until late this year for the letting of contracts.

Other business on the Tuesday agenda will include:

state, but most of Texas remained clear to partly cloudy (See RAINFALL, Page 2)

AIRLINER OF FUTURE — A time-saver for the future would be this proposed 30-passenger rigid-rotor transport that could make vertical takeoffs and landings, but would cruise at 230-mile-per-hour speeds. Lockheed engineers said the craft could be in commercial service by the early '70s and would be especially suited for high-density routes between major cities.

Sanford Dam Project Will Be Transferred To CRMWA

Formal ceremonies transferring control of the Sanford Dam project from the United States Bureau of Reclamation to the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority will be held tomorrow at Lake Meredith.

Pampa will send a seven-man delegation to participate in the day long ceremony. The group will include Fred Thompson and Clinton Evans, the city's representatives on the CRMWA board of directors; Mayor Jim Nation, City Manager Charles Hill, and city commissioners Hugh Burdette, Joe Taylor and Clyde Carruth.

Delegations from other CRMWA cities will also be present. These include Amarillo, Borger, Plainview, Lubbock, Slaton, Tahoka, O'Donnell, Lamesa, Brownfield and Levelland.

All guests and officials will assemble at the Sanford-Yake

Marina at 6 a.m. for an inspection of Lake Meredith by boat.

A buffet-style luncheon will be served at noon on the Promenade Deck of the marina.

The formal ceremony transferring control from the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation to CRMWA will be held at 1:30 p.m. at the Headquarters Building.

A business meeting of the water authority board of directors will be held at 2 p.m.

After the business meeting, an open house at the Headquarters Building and other facilities will be held until 5 p.m.

Contractual arrangements between the Bureau and the water authority provided transfer of control of all facilities when construction was completed. The CRMWA assumed operation maintenance responsibilities on July 1.

The transfer of control from federal authority to the authority of the 11 Texas cities involved marks the conclusion of the $85-million project which started in 1960. The reclamation project was approved by a 30 to 1 vote of the people.

Impounding of water at the Sanford Dam began in 1965.

The 322-mile aqueduct facilities were completed in 1967.

Cost of the total project is to be repaid to the government by the participating cities in yearly installments for 50 years.

Pampa's annual payment the first of which falls due next year, is in excess of $130,000. Pampa's overall share of the cost is approximately $5,500,000.

Pampa has the water from the lake piped to its west city limits. It will not begin taking water, however, until a $750,000 water treatment plant is completed. Plans and specifications for the plant, authorized in an overall $2,900,000 bond issue in March, 1966, are now near completion.

Ex-Pampan Injured In Viet Combat

Specialist 4 Russell L. Head, a former Pampa resident, was recently wounded in combat in Vietnam and now is hospitalized there. He has been in Vietnam since December, 1967.

1st Payment On Canadian River Dam Project Falls Due In 1969

Pampa's first annual payment on the cost of the Canadian River Dam Project will be $130,050 and it will fall on Sept. 1, 1969.

The figure is less than the first estimate of approximately $200,000 for the initial payment. This is due to the fact that total cost of the project was approximately $8,000,000, less than the original estimate.

The annual payments will be made over a period of 50 years through the year 2019.

Pampa's payments will increase annually for the first 19 years until they reach $223,570 in 1989. They remain at that fixed figure for the next 30 years and the final payment of $223,750 in 2019 for total payments of $10,240,830.

It is expected that Pampa's $750,000 water treatment plant should be near completion by the time the city's first payment on the water project is due on Sept. 1, 1969.

In a statement to the 11 participating cities it has been pointed out by George Finger, president of the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority, which will take full control of the project ceremonies at the lake tomorrow, that Pampa is entitled to receive 7.163 per cent of the normal water supply from the lake or 7,378 acre-feet annually.

The revised cost allotted to member cities reflects repayment of an estimated project construction cost of $84,830,440 with an allocation to the City of Pampa of $5,491,431 (including interest during construction).

Finger's statement in a letter to mayors of the CRMWA cities stated:

Minor Incidents Mar Welcome By 100,000

By FRANK SWOBODA

SAN SALVADOR (UPI) — President Johnson arrived to tumultuous cheers as well as some paint bombs and splattered eggs Saturday for a weekend "little summit" meeting with five Central American presidents in the capital of El Salvador.

He got a warm and enthusiastic welcome from an estimated 100,000 Salvadorans marred only by minor paint and egg throwing incidents while riding in a bubbletop limousine through city streets to the conference site.

The paint missed his car and splashed Secret Service men but at least two or three eggs splattered against the bullet-proof glass of Johnson's car.

Weak Followup

The incidents were a weak followup on earlier leftist student threats to give Johnson a "rock and eggs" greeting.

Crowds lining the streets of the city Saturday to see the Presidential motorcade wind its way to the Inter-Continental Hotel on the northwestern outskirts were overwhelmingly friendly. They ranged from naked native babies clutching tiny paper American flags to wealthy matrons.

At several points during the trip the crowds engulfed Johnson's car, forcing it to a complete stop. Motorcycle police escorts drove at the people in the streets time and again to force an opening for Johnson's car, which had been flown in from Washington.

After the motorcade, Johnson met with his Central American counterparts from Costa Rica, Nicaragua, Honduras, Guatemala and El Salvador in formal session of the Organization of Central American states (OCA).

He announced U.S. loans of an additional $65 million for the further development of the bloc.

Red China Frees 47 Fishermen

HONG KONG (UPI) — China Saturday freed 47 Hong Kong fishermen who were kidnapped by Communist Chinese boats from the harbor six days ago. At least 20 others still were missing.

Police at nearby Yuen Long quoted the fishermen as saying the Communist authorities indicated they had been seized because they had ventured into the Chinese side of deep bay in the western harbor region.

The police said the men, women and children seized from the fishing boats were forced to attend daily Communist lectures during their week-long detention.

UPI correspondent Peter Wong, who went to the bay as the fishermen returned, said they were too frightened to tell much of their experience.

Hong Kong officials believed the Communists soon would free the remaining fishermen who were aboard the 14 sampans towed away by Red gunboats.

Meanwhile, two more rope-bound and battered bodies drifted into Hong Kong waters from Communist China Friday.

Marine police said the two-week total of corpses that have floated down the Pearl River from reportedly riot-torn Canton was 63.

Both Reds, S. Viets Are Suspected

By JACK WALSH
SAIGON (UPI) — Survivors of an ambush on a California pop-music quartet said Saturday they played dead to escape highwaymen who killed two teen-aged performers and wounded a third and a soldier in a hail of gunfire. It was the first time American entertainers had been killed in Vietnam.

One who lived through the attack 18 miles east of Saigon said he thought the four assailants were Viet Cong. But a spokesman for the quartet said he asked military authorities to investigate the possibility South Vietnamese troops may have been involved.

The ambush hit a truck carrying the Los Angeles troupe known as "Brandi Perry and the Bubble Machine" Friday night as U.S. soldiers were escorting the young people from Saigon to Vung Tau on the coast 40 miles from the South Vietnamese capital for an appearance. An American sergeant in the escort was wounded.

The Americans who were killed were identified as Phil Hill, 17, a piano player, and Curt Willis, 18, a drummer. The surviving members of the troupe giving details of the ambush were Paula Levine, 20, a singer whose stage name is (See TWO, Page 3)

Homes Spared But Pilot Dies In Plane Crash

GRAND PRAIRIE, Tex. (UPI) — A Navy pilot practicing takeoffs and landings was killed Saturday when he rode his faltering plane to the ground in an attempt to miss a heavily-populated area.

The pilot was identified as Navy Lt. Gary Gretter, 31, a reserve pilot who worked as a field engineer for Ling-Temco-Vought, manufacturers of the F-4A Crusader Jet fighter he was flying.

The plane landed in a vacant field and slid into two houses, setting them afire. Neighbors said the residents of one of the houses were on vacation and the other family was at work.

Witnesses said the pilot made an obvious attempt to miss a house development as the plane crossed the main street of Grand Prairie at a low altitude. The backyards of the on-story frame houses faced the runway, which was about one-half mile from the point of impact.

Firemen quickly squelched flames scorching the first home, but fought the second blaze for 20 minutes. The second home, also unoccupied, was completely destroyed.

Benny Hicks, a neighbor, said he heard the crash and ran to the first house to shut off the gas inside the house.

Gary Huckleby, 19-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Huckleby, who live next door to the two houses, ran through a plate glass window when the plane hit, and was slightly cut. He said he wanted to save his mother who was asleep in a bedroom. The flames did not touch the Huckleby home.

Pampa Youth Saves Boy From Drowning

By JEFF HOLLADAY
Daily News Staff Writer

A Pampa Boy Scout is credited with saving his young cousin from drowning last Monday in the rain-swollen Brazos River near Freeport.

Mike Cook, 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jodie Cook of 437 Hill St., was visiting his grandmother, Mrs. Fred Smith, in Freeport at the time of the incident.

Mike's cousin, Eugene Smith, 3, also visiting his grandmother, was playing near the Old Brazos River. The Smith home backs up onto a levee of the river and has a pier that extends into the water for several feet.

Mike's cousin, who can't swim, had been playing on a raft attached to the pier.

Mike had gone upstairs when he heard Eugene's cries.

He ran back outside to help. His cousin's head was going under the water. Mike jumped in to save him.

Somehow, the boy had fallen out of the raft.

The tide in the rain-swollen river had carried him 15 or 20 feet from shore before Mike reached him.

Was Mike scared?
"I didn't have time to be," he said.

Mike, who will be a 7th grader at Pampa Junior High this fall, is a First Class Scout and reluctantly admitted, after some prompting, that he hopes to get the coveted Boy Scout life saving award.

Real Reason

What really brought him to Central America for the ODECA meeting, Johnson told his fellow presidents, was the need for regional economic unity by the underdeveloped nations of the world.

He said he considered the 8-year-old Central American Common Market (CACM) to be a showcase display of his own foreign policy call on underprivileged nations to start doing more to help themselves.

would serve as an example for Africa and Asia. He added he hoped they could accomplish through their own regional plans what the tiny Central American nations have done through CACM.

Johnson warned, however, that despite what has been done "the gap between what exists and what ought to be is still unacceptably wide." "But," he said, "the gap could be closed only by working 'together.'" with unseasonably mild temperatures.

City officials said they had no way to estimate how many persons had actually evacuated their houses since many of them went to homes of relatives.

But one spokesman said a conservative estimate of evacuees would be in the hundreds.

There was no early damage estimate for either El Paso or Juarez.

"The water is mostly waist deep in the Del Camino section," said Ann Barber, a nurse who helped assist the evacuees adobe houses were falling down.

Nowhere To Go

Heavy rains struck El Paso and Juarez on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, and when the rains fell again early Saturday, there was nowhere for the water to go.

Soon after the rains began, water began cascading down streets heading for the low sections of East El Paso.

Trash, garbage cans, tree limbs and whole trees flowed down the streets, settling in people's homes.

The rains caved in the roof of the home of Henry Moore, a wheelchair invalid. An Army truck nearby rushed to the house and took Moore to the YMCA shelter.

The flood reservoir near the Southern Pacific freight yards overflowed, sending water gushing across the railroad tracks.

Water flowed into the basement of Thomason General Hospital, but power was not lost there.

Standing water covered about half of the Eastwood Park area of El Paso, although it was on a higher level than other, more hard-hit areas of town.

The city put up "no swimming" signs in the Eastwood Park edition.

High water forced the closing of Interstate 10 south of El Paso for two hours early Saturday. The road was covered with small frogs jumping up and down on the highway.

Scores of persons were forced into the streets in Juarez. Many were seen walking down streets with as many belongings as they could carry.

Water was reported 20 feet high in some parts of Juarez, where adobe houses crumbled like cookies.

Burglaries Are Reported

Burglaries and thefts dominated police activity Friday night and Saturday.

Jerry Coley 1118 Neel Rd., reported a burglar used a rock to break out the window of the Gate Valve Shop & Supply, 120 W. Tuke, and took a pellet gun valued at $20. The burglary was reported Saturday morning.

Lige Lindsay of 1513 Evergreen reported the theft Saturday of a tool box valued at $60 from his pickup. The theft

John Saviesen, an American who identified himself as the Saigon booking agent for the group, said the attack occurred 100 yards from a South Vietnamese troop compound and that one of the four highwaymen was wielding a U.S.-made M16 automatic rifle.

Too Dangerous Bone said South Vietnamese militiamen had turned the group back before the attack, saying darkness made it too dangerous to complete the drive to Yung Tau along the lonely highway.

Bone said a burst of automatic weapons fire suddenly blazed out of the jungle, hitting one of the musicians in the elbow and forcing the pickup truck to roll over in a ditch.

"We stopped to see if it was our side by mistake," Bone said. "The girl remained inside on the floorboard while the others got out, put up our arms and said, 'We are Americans.'"

"There were four guys standing five feet away. They were in civilian clothes, and they stopped firing."

"They took our ID cards, wallets and a couple of suitcases from the rear of the truck. They had all our instruments in them. Then they left."

Bone said the attackers returned about 30 minutes later and opened fire again.

"The three of us who were still alive played dead," Bone said.

The quartet arrived in Vietnam June 12.

Warnings Given On Death Toll For Holidays

Americans were dying Saturday at a rate of one an hour below last year's record-setting traffic fatality pace. But the National Safety Council warned the closing hours of the long Fourth of July holiday "can be most deadly."

Last year's rate, when 732 persons died in the nation's worst holiday period, was 6.25 per hour. Saturday the rate hovered around 5 per hour, foreshadowing a total by the midnight Sunday end of the holiday period well below the estimated toll of 700 to 800.

A United Press International count at 3 p.m. EDT showed at least 384 persons had been killed in traffic accidents since the holiday period began at 6 p.m. local time Wednesday.

A breakdown of accidental deaths showed: Traffic 384, Drownings 131, Planes 12, Miscellaneous 77, Total 604.

California led the nation with 29 highway deaths, Ohio had 21, Texas 20, and New York 19.

Four states and the District of Columbia had no traffic fatalities. The states were Alaska, Hawaii, Nebraska and Vermont.

Parts Of State Are In 'Disaster Area'

SAN SALVADOR (UP)—President Johnson Saturday declared parts of his home state of Texas as a major disaster area as a result of rain and floods from May 7 through June 23.

The President announced a $300,000 fund was being set up to enable hard-hit areas to rebuild flooded and damaged facilities.

Hardest hit in the spring storms, including tropical storm Candy, were the Gulf Coast counties of Aransas, Refugio, San Patricio and adjacent area. Up to 10 inches of rain fell at one time in some places.

is thought to have occurred Friday night or Saturday morning.

Pope Defends Doctrines

VATICAN CITY (UPI)—Some theologians feel the Roman Catholic Church should expand change to allow married priests and women clergy. But Pope Paul has rebuked Catholics who show "a passion for change and novelty."

The pontiff defended the doctrines of papal infallibility and the virgin birth along with celibacy of priests in addressing 50,000 persons at a Mass recently.

It marked the start of his sixth year in office and the end of a Catholic "year of faith." The ceremony began at twilight and ended in floodlighted darkness in St. Peter's Square.

John Patrick Cardinal Cody of Chicago was among cardinals who celebrated Mass with the Pope. Patrick Louis Cardinal O'Boyle of Washington and Archbishop Terence James Cooke of New York were among church dignitaries who attended.

The Pope's sternest words were in a "Credo of the People of God" in which he criticized Catholics who "allow themselves to be seized by a kind of passion for change and novelty."

Catholic sources suggested his defense of doctrine appeared intended mainly for liberal churchmen in Holland and other countries who have come up with ideas regarded as heretical by conservative Catholics.

Vatican observers said the Pope appeared to be perpetuating that the liberals stop suggesting their ideas or face disciplinary action.

He touched on such doctrines as have been called into question: "The real presence of the body and blood of Christ in the Eucharist."

"The infallibility of the Pope. The pontiff urged priests to remember their situation 'will always be paradoxical and incomprehensible to those who have no faith.'"

PARIS (UPI)—President Charles de Gaulle's regime Saturday pressed ahead with plans for Pacific Ocean nuclear tests expected to culminate in the explosion of France's first H-bomb despite official protests from two nations.

Four Die In Plane Crash

LISBON, Portugal (UPI)—Three Americans and a Rhodesian were killed in the crash of a plane loaded with 10 tons of emergency supplies for starving Africans in the breakaway Western Region of Nigeria, informed sources reported Saturday.

The Lisbon informants said the plane, a four-engine U.S.-built Super Constellation, crashed in rebellious Biafra about two miles from a road converted into an airstrip to handle similar supply flights.

A three-man British team, headed by Sir Edmund Hillary, the conqueror of Mt. Everest, arrived in Lagos, the Nigerian capital, Saturday, the first anniversary of the Nigerian civil war, to study relief needs of war victims.

The crash victims were identified by sources as Augustus Martin, 44, of New York City; his wife Gladys; Jesse Mead, 40, of Alameda, Calif., and Thomas J. Brown, a Rhodesian.

Martin was said to have been flying the plane with Meade acting as co-pilot. All four were reported to have been buried last Tuesday by Biafrans with full military honors.

Reception Mixed As Actor Calls For Gun Controls

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Sports fans gave Warren Beatty a mixed reception Saturday when he appealed for gun control legislation.

The movie actor, who portrayed a gun-happy gangster in the film "Bonnie and Clyde," appeared at home plate before the San Francisco-St. Louis baseball game at Candlestick Park. He also got in the ring after the Sonny Liston-Henry Clark fight at the Cow Palace.

At both places loud boing greeted Beatty when he asked that guns be treated with the same care as automobiles, by registering them. The actor appeared on behalf of the Emergency Committee for Gun Control, a presidential group headed by former astronaut John Glenn.

The boos and catcalls brought on cheers from fans who agreed with Beatty, and the shouting match seemed to be a standoff between anti and pro-factions among the fans when he finished his pitch.

A man climbed into the ring with Beatty at the fight to take him on verbally on the gun issue, but he was ejected by police. Beatty had permission to make his appeal.

At the ballgame he was accompanied by actress Julie Christie.

Beatty was drowned out several times when he asked baseball fans to write congressmen asking for strong gun control.

Prairie Trails & Pioneer Tales

By TRACY D. CARY
Chairman, Gray County Historical Survey Committee

Eight members of the Gray County Historical Committee were in attendance at the June meeting of the McLean-Alanreed Historical Society for a program paying tribute to the late Mr. & Mrs. J. R. Hindman, better known as "Ma and Pa Hindman" to a host of weary and hungry travelers who enjoyed the frontier hospitality and board of the Hindman Hotel which they operated for many years. Committee delegates included Mrs. Marvin Hall, Alanreed; Mrs. Vera F. back & John Haynes of McLean; Mrs. J. C. Pattello, Mrs. C. E. Cary, Miss Alice Gordon, Joe W. Shelton and the Chairman, all of Pampa.

John Haynes, president, introduced the speakers and topics: "My Early Childhood" by Ma Hindman, read by Loree Barker. "Hindman's Life in Gray County" as given in a paper to the late Sherman White in 1936 read by Mrs. Fern Boyd; and "Shall We Have A Museum?" presented by Paris Hess.

The Hindman Hotel in McLean was located at first in a half dug out approximately where the Marie Foundation Factory stands today. Though its first accommodations may have been considered primitive to some of the city-folk who chanced to travel through the area, Ma Hindman's delicious board of fare soon acquired such a reputation among the railroad people operating the early day trains through McLean that the conductor would have the engineer pull to a halt near the Hindman's dugout and invite the passengers to get off and have a meal they would never forget. Though the tables were board planks laid over boxes, there were spotless white table cloths over these and heaping dishes of "just good plain food." The warm congeniality of the Hindmans provided hospitality no Harvey House could rival. Ma Hindman said that many of the passengers fresh from the east would look askance when the conductor invited them into the dugout, but once partaking of her culinary skill they eagerly awaited the McLean stop on subsequent trips.

Those attending the meeting answered the roll call with personal accounts of their memories of the Hindmans & the hotel. J. R. Hindman was Mayor of McLean at the time of his death in 1926.

We enjoyed our visit with two former Gray Countians who had not lived here for forty-nine years, Mrs. Mabel Faulkner Wilson of Hereford and her sister Mrs. Winnie Faulkner Steele of Albuquerque. Both are daughters of the late Mr. & Mrs. Francis Marion Faulkner and nieces of the late Siler Faulkner, Gray County's first District & County Clerk and also County Judge from 1913 to 1914. Among the many interesting pictures they had with them was of a group of cowboys who in early days worked on their father's ranch near McLean. In the group was J. Sid Denson, Gray County's first County Attorney, and in later years Sheriff. Their aunt Mrs. Edna Faulkner lives here as does their cousin, Mrs. E. L. Green.

The Pioneer Mail Call - We look forward to the postman's stack of mail each day as the stories of the Pioneers are coming in to the Committee for the Gray County Book. Included are the following additions:

From Mr. & Mrs. Luther Petty of McLean, a very fine history of the Francis and Petty Families. Coming to McLean in 1909, Mrs. Petty began teaching there in 1913 and with her husband, Luther, has been active in all areas of community life in the southeast quadrant of the county. Their daughter, Mrs. Zora Petty Billingsley of 1003 West 48th Ave. Amarillo, has compiled an excellent volume of the genealogy of her forebears, "THE PETTY AND FRANCIS FAMILIES AND ALLIED LINES" with many interesting pictures and stories of her ancestry. It contains a blue and gold color reproduction of the Petty Coat of Arms granted to William Petty, Physician-General to the Army of Ireland, and Surveyor-General of the Kingdom of Ulster on the 20th of March 1656.

From Mrs. Alma Totty Seitz of Miami we have received some very interesting notes and clippings regarding the County Seat election of Friday March 9, 1928 to change the County Seat from Lefors to Pampa. Mrs. Seitz is a member of the pioneer Totty Family who came to the Laketon area in early days. A teacher in the Miami schools, she and her pupils had a very narrow escape when the tornado struck Miami and demolished the school on May 6, 1968. Mrs. Seitz is a new member of the Pampa Genealogical & Historical Society.

Young, now 96, lives at the Gray County in 1907 has been received from their daughter Mrs. Homer B. Taylor. Mrs. Young now 96, live at the Casa Del Nursing Home and her residence at 629 E. Browning is one of the oldest in Pampa. Homer Taylor came to Gray County in 1912 with his parents Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Taylor, and together with his family has been engaged for many years in one of the larger agricultural enterprises in our area. Mrs. Taylor writes, "Gray County has been home for all of us. It has been very good to us, we love every inch of it." Thanks for a very fine addition to the book:

So many have requested an extension of time in which to prepare their stories for the History that the Committee has moved the deadline up and we are asking all who are members of pioneer families who came to Gray County during the first 50 years of its history 1876-1926 to search their scrapbooks, Bible records, photo albums, trunks, attics and the "keepsake boxes" for the details of their family's contribution to the Gray County Story and send the data in for publication.

There is no charge for submitting material to be included in the book, so please begin compiling your data now. We don't want anyone to be left out. Send Pioneer histories and pictures to: Gray County Historical Survey Committee, Box 676, Pampa.

Some Truths About Sun Tan Products

Medical specialists agree too much sun is not good for the skin. Some people are so affected that serious bodily harm can result. True blonds and redheads often are so sensitive to the sun it is a constant problem.

There are two types of sun protectives. One has a screening ingredient which filters out some of the harmful ultra-violet rays. The other does not. If you are the sensitive to the sun type you should only use the screening ingredient type. Do not expose yourself too long until you have acquired a tan. We will show you both types and will be glad to help you make a choice.

Highway Patrol Has New Benefits To Offer Qualified Young Men

A training school for 120 new patrolmen with the Texas Department of Public Safety will start July 30. Major Luther Moore, Regional Commander, announced recently.

"We have several new benefits to offer qualified young men," Moore said. "For instance, the pay during training is $500 per month and upon graduation this is increased to $571."

"Also, our selection methods are more liberal in that an applicant is not required to live in Texas for one year prior to employment, and the entrance examination is given every day at our larger offices."

To qualify for employment in the uniformed services of the DPS, a man must be between the ages of 20 and 35, not less than 5 feet 8 inches tall, have a high school education or its equivalent, be in sound physical condition with good vision and must be a citizen of the United States.

"Among the many benefits that patrolmen enjoy," Moore pointed out, "are two weeks annual vacation, all holidays provided for by the Legislature, modern liberal retirement systems and group hospitalization and life insurance plans, traveling expenses and longevity pay, and uniforms and all the necessary equipment to perform their duties."

For complete information concerning the position of patrolman, training and benefits, Moore asked those in the Pampa area who are interested to contact the Highway patrol office in the Gray County Courthouse.

"In return," he said, "they will receive complete information in regard to the application and examination."

Information Freedom Law Used Sparingly By Media

By DANIEL RAPOPORT
WASHINGTON (UPI)—The federal freedom of information law has entered its second year today amid some concern that the news media are not making it effective enough.

The act, designed to open more federal records to the public, has been used to bring out information that government agencies had been reluctant to disclose.

But there has been criticism—including some from the press itself—that implementation has been left, to too large an extent, to special interest groups.

Congress enacted the measure in 1966, after 10 years of clamor from the press, members of Congress and some in the federal bureaucracy. It took effect last July 4.

Law "Rusty" Samuel Archibald, who as staff director helped a house committee draft the law now looks upon this "tool" from his standpoint as director of the Washington office of the University of Missouri's Freedom of Information Center and finds it "rusty."

"It has been used almost exclusively by special interests who seek private gain from public records," is the way he put it.

"Seldom has a reporter pressed a demand for public information using the administrative process set up under the law. Not once has the press gone to court to enforce the public's right to know."

"The law is an excellent tool but it may lose its edge unless it is used, as intended, for the general public welfare."

The Freedom of Information committee of the American Society of Newspaper Editors expressed this view in its annual report April 17:

"The new law is not having the impact in Washington and around the country that its backers hoped it would have. And the reason is not having such an impact is more the fault of the press than anyone else. Indeed, there is much evidence that many reporters do not even know of its existence."

Sen. Edward Long, D-Mo., Senate sponsor of the bill, had this comment:

"I feel certain that if more people were aware of the act, especially newsmen, we would see more demands for information being made on the agencies."

On the other hand, Rep. John Moss, D-Calif., longtime chairman of the House government information subcommittee, says the press has made use of the law in quiet ways that have not drawn public notice.

Moss says most reporters do know about the law, and cite it to get results from reluctant federal officials. And he says the mere existence of the act tends to loosen government sources.

Under the law, all federal records except those exempted for national security and other overriding reasons are to be open to "any person."

Red Cross News

By MRS. LIBBY SHOTWELL
Executive Secretary

There will be a meeting in Amarillo at the Chapter House, 1800 S. Harrison, Monday morning at 10 with Claud Payne in charge of the meeting.

Payne tells us he is being transferred to Temple and we will certainly miss him. He has been good for our chapters and as a Field Representative he has been tops! Jack Skelly and Mrs. Shotwell plan to go to the meeting.

Archie Williams, Red Cross Representative on the Blood Program with Payne, was in our chapter Tuesday of this week. They had visited Canadian, Miami and Wheeler chapters regarding the blood program in the Panhandle.

Our swim program is in full swing with Judy Fugate and Mrs. Carl Williams, WSI, in charge of the City Pool, and Mrs. Wayne Jones, WSI, and Judy Everett in charge of the Youth Center Pool. The boys and girls at the City Pool have progressed well even though the weather has been very cold. At the Youth Center Pool the weather is no difficulty and the children go hot or cold, rain or shine. Aides for the swim program have been excellent and without them we could not carry on the program each week during the summer.

There will be a Nursing Class to train instructors in Nursing Service at Denton at the Texas Women's University beginning July 15 to 19. The course may be taken for credit or just to help in our Red Cross work. Housing and food facilities are available in the University dormitories at nominal cost. Anyone interested in this work should immediately call our Red Cross office.

We have received our 3rd quarterly payment through the United Fund office and we are grateful for their promptness. Mrs. Emmett Gee, the office secretary, is always efficient and prompt with her work.

We are very sorry to hear that Mrs. Teresa Humphries, Red cross Volunteer for hospital work, is leaving to teach school on an Indian Reservation.

Q—May I meet with my draft board to discuss the classification given me?
A—Every man after his classification is determined by his board (except a classification determined upon an appearance before the board), must have an opportunity to appear in person before the members or purpose if he files a written report within 30 days after the board has mailed him a Notice of Classification (SSS Form 110).

Q—A recent news item said the National Security Council made recommendations about occupational and student deferments. What is this council and what part does it play?
A—The National Security Council consists of the President, the Vice President, the Secretaries of State and Defense, and the Director of the Office of Emergency Planning. Section 4 (g) of the draft law authorizes the council and directs it periodically to advise the Director of Selective Service about the identification, selection, and deferment of professional and scientific personnel and those engaged in, and preparing for, critical skills and other essential occupations.

Q—I've got my induction order next month. I now find I'm eligible for the I-S student deferment. Will my board cancel my order, or must I report?
A—Supply the facts to your board. If these facts qualify you for class I-S, your board will reopen your case, and your induction order will be cancelled.

'Methodone' Being Used Effectively To Combat Addiction To Narcotics

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — A dollar drink served daily in a mid-town clinic is beginning to dent the multi-million dollar heroin habit here.

A prominent judge is confident the same methodone-juice drink can eventually wreck the heroin business in this seaport.

Early this year, the Nix Clinic embarked on an experimental program to provide 30 tough heroin addicts with methodone on an unusual outpatient basis.

Programs in other cities started with expensive, six-week inpatient treatment.

Today, six months later, a clinic spokesman says he has lost only two of the original 30 patients.

"About 96 per cent of them are now working citizens," Dr. James Nix Sr. told United Press International. "None of them has been booked with any crimes committed since they started the program."

Judge Andrew Bucaro of New Orleans Municipal Court is trying to use the experimental program to convince the Louisiana Legislature to establish a narcotic commission.

The Nix Clinic experiment is being conducted under the watchful eyes of state and federal narcotics officers. Dr. Nix said, "there is no consensus of medical opinion on it yet."

But Judge Bucaro is particularly impatient with people who want to compare the program to a substitution of bourbon for scotch among alcoholics.

The judge, who confronts addicts daily in his court, said the methodone program is the best, cheapest answer he has seen yet to the narcotic-crime problem.

Methodone, Dr. Nix said, is a narcotic, but does not have certain narcotic qualities.

Bucaro said the treatments can help put the addict into the "mainstream of our society."

The Panama Daily News

A Watchful Newspaper

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

The Panama News is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. Only when man is free to control himself and all he produces, can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government. Freedom is neither license, nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself. No more, no less. It is thus consistent with the Human Relations Commandments, the Golden Rule and the Declaration of Independence.

Government Agencies Never Die

Thirty-three years ago the Rural Electrification Administration was brought into being by congressional action and was charged with the specific task of electrifying the American farm. That task has long since been accomplished. The Journal of Commerce has summarized the history of the REA and its present status in a revealing editorial which shows how government agencies seldom die — they just get bigger, and the REA has become an outstanding example of the rule rather than the exception.

Long ago, the REA extended its operation to telephone services, and its power empire has spread from the farm into towns and communities. Low-cost loans have been made by the REA to finance local cooperatives for the purpose of discouraging extension of commercial utilities. It lends funds from the federal treasury at 2.5 per cent, for which government and the taxpayers now pay 6 per cent. Although 98.4 per cent of farms are served by central station electric service, and one would think the REA requirements would taper off, the reverse is true. The REA is asking for new capital from the taxpayers ranging up to a rate of $700 million a year during the next 15 years, compared to the 1967 level of $353 million.

As the Journal of Commerce concludes: "So what started out as a simple government-financed effort to get electricity to the American farms has now become a government-financed effort to keep commercial power producers from getting there. Thus the demand for more funds grows as the number of American farms steadily diminishes." And still our legislative representatives claim that federal spending has been cut to the bone.

An Interesting Question

The interesting question was raised recently by a letter to the Secretary of the Interior from a Brownwood, Texas school teacher.

The teacher, a woman, wants to visit Washington with her children, and asked the secretary for a permit to camp on public park land in Washington during a week in August.

The teacher said she and her youngsters had limited funds and so they would like to stretch a tent alongside their car in a downtown park.

She wrote Stewart Udall, "I was delighted to learn you are now issuing camping permits for the area bordering the reflecting pool in Washington. I believe we can borrow a tent from the Boy Scout troop at our church now that campsites are available and so convenient to downtown Washington." She added, "I feel sure that you will want to be fair and impartial about this matter and will not discriminate against me because of my race (white)."

Rep. O. C. Fisher who received a copy of her letter, said he has written Udall to remind him of the precedent he had established and to urge him consideration of the woman's request in keeping with his current policy.

Recently, the secretary issued a permit for 3,000 to pitch camp in a public park in the heart of Washington.

We would be interested in learning of Udall's action on the school teacher's request.

Why Violence Grows

President Johnson recently convened a commission to explore, among other questions, whether there is "something in the environment of American society" that produces violence. We can say definitely that there is. But we doubt very much whether any government commission will put a finger on it.

Why then is there an increase in crime, in riots, in murder, etc? This increase parallels another increase. That other increase is the growth of government as a factor in the lives of Americans.

When government was small, crime was less of a factor in our lives than it is now that government is big.

Is there a cause and effect relation between the growth of government and the growth of crime? We think there is.

Government itself is based on force. Taxes are collected from unwilling taxpayers by threat of violence. The violence seldom needs to be exerted but it is there just the same. Try not paying your taxes and see what happens.

"When 'leading citizens' endorse more and more government force (violence) as a factor in our lives, it is just a question of time until secondary citizens learn by example that violence is a way of life and resort to it to accomplish whatever they seek.

There is "something in the environment of American society" that produces violence. That something is political government itself.

The Two-Sided Coin

The U.S. has carried the idea of individual freedom farther than any people have ever done before—so far that we seem to be in danger of forgetting that the back side of the coin of freedom carries a crest which reads "responsibility."

"In no other country do young people have the degree of freedom allowed in the U. S. today," Mr. Robert C. Guinness, president of Standard Oil Company (Indiana), told members of Tulsa Junior Achievement at their Annual Meeting. But, he said, "your personal freedom—if unbridled—is an intrusion on your neighbor, who also has rights of his own."

When you go to college, he said, "... I would suggest that you do not make it your first order of business to try to reshape the place according to your own ideas at the moment. Let me recommend a decent regard for the fact that the institutions you will attend are the product of time, money, and thought contributed over a long period by a large number of people—many of whom were at least your equals in intellect and wisdom.

"None of man's institutions is by any means perfect, and one of your jobs will be to improve on those you inherit. But I would hope that you will go about the job in responsible fashion. There are legitimate avenues of protest in a free society. Your real challenge is not to sit-in but to build-up."

Without the tremendous productivity of the American economy, Mr. Guinness pointed out, we would not be debating the merits of universal higher education or how to preserve freedom in the world, rebuilding our cities, trying to eliminate poverty, going to the moon, or warding off world famine because we couldn't afford to undertake such tasks.

It's Up To You

By HOWARD KFRSHNER

How Bureaucracies Grow
For one year I served the UN as a volunteer, for all I know the only person who ever worked for that organization without salary. Before that, as Director of the International Commission for Refugee Children in Europe, I had direct personal contact with some twenty governments who assisted in financing the operation. Later I had contact with more than twenty governments in the process of negotiating contributions for the Children's Emergency Fund of the UN. In these capacities I have studied the way bureaucracies operate at both the national and international levels.

I am a witness to the accuracy of Parkinson's Law of Bureaucracies which is, in simple words, that they tend to increase in numbers constantly year in and year out.

The salary of a section chief or a bureau head is in large part governed by the number of people working under him, and the amount of money he is in charge of spending. Every person he can add to the payroll, therefore, tends to increase his salary.

There comes a time when the section or bureau seems to need duplicating equipment for its releases and public relations men to issue them. Later they need a lawyer or two to advise them. Soon an accountant is useful. As new projects are undertaken more personnel can be used and so bureaucracy grows—and grows and grows. Near the end of the fiscal year there is always great scramble to spend whatever part of the appropriation of the previous year remains on hand. The first law of bureaucracy is to spend all available money in order to prove that it needs more next year.

As an illustration of what I am saying I call attention to a fact recently pointed out by the scholarly writer and lecturer, Dr. Russell Kirk, that the University of Missouri has a larger administrative staff today than the British Colonial Office possessed at the height of the British Empire. The University of Missouri is dealing with a few thousand professors and students, while the British governed a fourth of the world.

Wit and Whimsy

Mr. Clark was stretched out in the hammock when he saw a large moving van drive onto his property.

Mrs. Clark (whispered)—It's the furniture people. They've come for the piano.

Mr. Clark — Confound it, I gave you the money for the next installment a week ago.

Mrs. Clark — I know, dear. I intend to pay them as soon as they get it downstairs. I've decided to have it in the living room.

A woman tourist in Maine came to a fork in the road where signs to Portland pointed both ways. She called to a native who was standing nearby:

Mrs. King — Does it make any difference which road I take to Portland?

Zeke (the native)—Not to me.

Judy (the co-ed) — I'm sorry you don't like my new short skirt, Grandma. But when you were a girl, didn't you have to set your cap for the right young man?

Grandma Brown — Well, maybe, but never my knee cap.

A teen-age athlete ordered a whole pizza for lunch.

Sally (the waitress) —Should I cut it into six or eight pieces?

Jerry — Better cut it in six—I'd never be able to eat eight pieces!

Every woman has a correlated affinity for some man and no woman so correlated can resist that man.

In 1898 "Teddy" Roosevelt and his famed Rough Riders took San Juan Hill in the Spanish-American war.

In 1932 Franklin D. Roosevelt was nominated by the Democrats for the first time to run for president. He was elected to four terms.

A thought for the day: American writer John Phillip Marquand wrote "It is worthwhile for anyone to have behind him a few generations of honest, hard-working ancestry."

The False Prophets

By PAUL HARVEY

Oregon's Sen. Wayne Morse said, "Bombing North Vietnam will start World War III." He made that dogmatic and dire prediction before 900 students at Fairleigh Dickinson University in Teaneck, N.J., April 28, 1966.

For this and similarly undisciplined utterances his own party almost dumped him in his own state in 1968. Predictions are fun in a carnival sideshow but can be fatal for professional politicians.

So often, reaching for a headline, the orator will presume to predict the future.

Unfortunately, many Americans still accept "they say" guestimates as gospel. "It's going to happen," the naive insist. "I read it in the paper!"

How many American investors ran scared because Yale economist James Tobin, in February, 1967, predicted an immediate recession?

Elliott Janeway, in 1966, said, "The stock market has only begun to retreat; in 1967 it will be a shambles!"

Similarly, a University of Chicago professor, Milton Friedman, Feb. 14, 1967, predicted recession that year.

They were all wrong.

So were the hundreds of Danes who crawled into caves last Christmas Eve because their cult leader, Knud Weiking, had seen "a vision that there will be an atomic war before midnight."

Many Americans assume, because Ohio's Cyrus Eaton is so often entertained and applauded by Moscow that he has an "in" with the Russians. His utterances are given attention out of all proportion to their credibility. As when he said May 25, 1965, "Russia is ready to enter the Vietnamese war; unless something occurs in the next month mankind is doomed."

It wasn't. Some of these self-appointed modern wise men are unduly optimistic. Dr. Glenn Seaborg, Atomic Energy Commission chairman, Oct. 19, 1964, was confident: "Red China is five years away from the capability of a thermonuclear reaction."

They had it the next year. Then-Defense Secretary Robert McNamara told President Johnson in November, 1966, that "draft calls may be cut in half next year." They were increased, instead.

Newsweek Magazine, Nov. 30, 1964, said, "J. Edgar Hoover is on his way out as FBI director." He wasn't; hopefully still isn't.

London Times said Nov. 27, 1964, "The United States will go to war with Red China by the end of the year or soon thereafter."

False. Florida's Sen. George Smathers, Sept. 12, 1964, predicted the "downfall of Cuban Premier Castro will come in 1965."

It didn't. British philosopher, Bertrand Russell, who knows everything about everything, announced Feb. 23, 1959, "I am going to die June 1, 1962."

He hasn't yet. "Playwright Tennessee Williams gave the human race '10 more years of existence' 11 years ago.

One of our nation's most respected news magazines last May published articles three weeks apart affirming that "the dollar is doomed" and "the dollar is the world's strongest currency and getting stronger."

What "they say" may be interesting, but don't bet on it.

Question Box

(We invite questions on economic and the proper functions of government which will not require answers.)

QUESTION: If Article II, Section 4, of the U.S. Constitution has any authority, and Article III, Section 3, has any meaning, how does foreign aid to countries who support the Viet Cong and the restricted military action in Vietnam support and uphold our Constitution?

ANSWER: Before attempting to answer these questions, it might be more interesting to the reader to have reproduced Article II, Section 4 and Article III, Section 3.

Article II, Section 4 reads as follows: "IMPEACHMENT: The President, Vice President and all Civil Officers of the United States, shall be removed from Office on Impeachment for, and Conviction of, Treason, Bribery, or other high Crimes and Misdemeanors."

Article III, Section 3, reads as follows: "TREASON, PROOF AND PUNISHMENT: Treason against the United States shall consist only in levying War against them, or in adhering to their Enemies, giving them Aid and Comfort. No person shall be convicted of Treason unless on the Testimony of two Witnesses to the same overt Act, or on Confession in open Court. The Congress shall have power to declare the Punishment of Treason, but no Attainder of Treason shall work Corruption of Blood or Forfeiture except during the Life of the Person attainted."

With these articles so explicit, it would seem that those responsible for foreign aid to countries who support the Viet Cong should be impeached. They are certainly adhering to our enemies, giving them aid and comfort, by making them loans that will never be paid back, and making treaties with them to which they will pay little or no attention.

However, with a Democratic Congress, and the Amendments to the Constitution, it would be difficult to convict. It certainly wouldn't be hard to get two persons to testify as witnesses of the same overt act of our Presidents, and even of the Congress that supports the President. But with a Congress that is supporting the President, it is difficult to imagine Congress impeaching the President or itself.

Certainly they should be removed, and it is hoped that in November of 1968 they will be removed from office, even if not impeached.

Your Taxes Make The Difference

By WILLIS E. STONE

The main idea of the American Constitution is to sustain the principle of equity and justice under law. Our bureaucratic practices appear to be wrecking that Constitution and the principles involved through the administration of inequity and injustice—and your taxes make the difference.

A new development of this kind was discovered in the "Answer Line" column of the Los Angeles "Herald-Examiner" of May 21, 1968, which published an inquiry by a person who did not want to sell his property "because I am retired and need some monthly income." He then said: "I have heard that some agency makes arrangements with homeowners whereby they lease property to senior citizens. What is this agency, and what does it do?"

The answer—"The Los Angeles Housing Authority has a program called 'Leased Housing Program' which is applicable only within the Los Angeles city limits." (It also applies in other cities.)

"Essentially" the column continues, "the program is one in which the Authority continually seeks to lease privately owned apartments and houses that are moderately priced. When acceptable units are leased, owners are encouraged to enter into long-term leases with the Authority. Under the terms of the lease the Authority pays the owners directly the monthly negotiated rent."

"After all arrangements are made with the owners, the Authority subleases the premises to qualified senior citizens and families, who are then referred to as 'tenant families.' These tenant families sign leases with the Authority and pay monthly rent directly to the Authority."

"Answer Line" continues by saying, "The amount paid by the tenant family IS LESS THAN THE AMOUNT PAID BY THE OWNER. THE DIFFERENCE IS PAID BY THE AUTHORITY FROM FUNDS PROVIDED BY THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT."

Your taxes make the difference. Everybody is supposed to get some of the plunder—except the taxpayer. He pays it all.

It doesn't take much imagination to see the progression of this plundering device. Can a "senior citizen" in good political standing now lease his home to the Housing Authority at a substantial rent because he is worthy? The plan says yes. Now can this same "senior citizen" in good political standing and needing a home (because he has just leased his home to the Authority) also rent a home, perhaps that home, at low rent from the Authority? Of course he can. That is the function of the Authority, to be both lessee and lessor, and at an intended loss.

Perhaps the plunder in a single case may be small, but the vast potential of this system threatens fantastic damage. In the first place, the moment the Housing Authority leases the property, it comes off the tax rolls and surrounding property is compelled to pay more to make up the difference. The business of the Authority is to expand the system as swiftly as possible, with the taxpayers underwriting the costs of this alien practice—plus paying for the engineered losses that come from buying high and selling low.

We already know how that works: The Rural Electrification Administration, borrowing our money at above four per cent and lending those dollars to tax exempt REA Co-ops at two percent, has already cost the American taxpayers more than a billion tax dollars.

We can be sure this plundering of our people will continue to get worse until we make it better and protect ourselves by putting the Constitution back to work and outlaw these schemes of plunder.

The means for restoring the Constitution to force and effect is the Liberty Amendment already approved by seven states and now pending before Congress as H.J. Res. 23. It provides that:

"The Government of the United States shall not engage in any business, professional, commercial, financial or industrial enterprise except as specified in the Constitution."

Now it comes out that the office of lax-economic opportunity (OLEO) has been bribing the gangs in Chicago with a million dollar project. I can't see where that has anything to do with poverty. The Rangers and Disciples gangs can steal their own money.

But the OEO set up a project and let the gangs run it themselves. There was 84 trainees and the gov't spent $12,338 each to train them. I don't know what kind of training they got, but 37 of them have already been indicted for crimes.

Alan Beals (one of the Beals boys), director for the Great Lakes region and Jerome S. Bernstein, official of the manpower division wasn't too concerned about drinking, drug use, gambling and other disciplinary problems at the training centers. Their idea is that boys will be boys.

Last July the Chicago project flew five members of Los Angeles gangs to Chicago to have a meeting with the Chicago hoods. They checked into the Pick Congress hotel. The hotel gunshoe got suspicious and called police, who found the "best" representatives with two revolvers, 30 rounds of ammunition and some marijuana.

Why, in the old days, whenever the gangs had meetings, they at least paid their own transportation. Today the government does it.

On June 14, 1967 I wrote "the Action Centers in Newark and Detroit was the cause of the riots there because they was nothin but meetin places for gangs. But the OEC is good at keepin secrets. This is the first proof we have had along that line. And if the gunshoe in the hotel hadn't called the police we wouldn't have it yet."

I would like to say something about the Eikini question. But there ain't enough left of them to say anything about. They have gone about as far as they can go.

If brevity is sweet the new Eikinis will give everybody diabetes. One designer says "the Bikini can never vanish entirely." I ain't too sure. Another designer in the exposure explosion race has come up with a see through vinyl suit and he only covers up the areas covered by law.

Community, Leadership And Progress

The New Individualist Review
SVETOSAR PEJOVICH
(Associate Professor of Economics at Texas
A&M University)

Let us begin our discussion with a few observations of basic characteristics in every human community. First, the members of a community are unequal with respect to both the distribution of their abilities as well as the hierarchy of their wants and aspirations. Secondly, we can distinguish between two forms of social life in every community: the communitarian forms of life and the contractual forms of life. The former we define as the accepted principles of behavior, such as justice, truthfulness, and love, which each member of the community is expected to observe. The latter serves the purpose of harmonizing, or equilibrating, different interests of the community members through exchange. Thirdly, the relationship between the two forms of life is one of mutual interdependence. The communitarian forms of life determine the quality and content of contractual agreements; that is, the quality of contractual agreements is constrained in a specific way by the prevailing communitarian forms of life. At the same time, any deviation of contractual agreements from the principles of behavior would, if that deviation is accepted by the community, force the communitarian forms of life to adjust in order to embrace the novelty. Consider for example the history of the institution of marriage in a number of European communities. For some time the communitarian forms of life had prescribed that a mature girl must show an unquestionable obedience to her father including, of course, the acceptance of the man whom he selected to be her husband. When in the course of time young people had begun to choose their own partners, the quality of contractual agreement with respect to the institution of marriage changed and its acceptance notwithstanding the resistance of the prevailing communitarian forms of life—brought about changes in the accepted principles of behavior. It became possible for a girl to reject her father's choice of mate without fear that it could result in her eventual alienation from the community.

Inter-Action

Finally, the interaction between the communitarian and contractual forms of life in a community leads to the emergence of a number of social institutions. Some of those institutions are impartial, that is, they serve the purpose of reducing social conflict created by the confrontation of all the different interests and aspirations of the community members (e.g., open-market competition, democratic elections), while some others are founded with the explicit purpose of promoting the self-interest of specific groups in the community (e.g., trade unions, government sheltered monopolies).

Consider a community as it moves along through time. If there were no changes in the quality of contractual agreements, the community life would flow through time undisturbed. The role of its rulers would be limited to the supervision of contractual agreements and to keeping them in agreement with the prevailing principles of behavior. A number of communities in Africa and Asia, where life has not changed for centuries, offer a good example of this type of communitarian life. It is true, of course, that the years of accumulated experience must contribute to some improvements in the execution of contractual agreements. Those improvements, however, would only introduce changes in the data of the system but not add new phenomena. In other words, only some quantitative changes could be expected to take place within the firmly established framework of a "routine" life community. The meaning of time in a "routine" life community, as it emerges from our discussion, is an objective one: the sequence of events is independent of the action of the actor; man's activity can be predicted, i.e., it is given to him objectively from without. Life in a community of this type is unimaginative and uninspiring.

If our concept of progress—social changes voluntarily accepted by the community—is a sound one, then we can conclude that human progress depends on the rate at which free agents are able and willing to suggest changes; and the number of suggestions must, obviously, depend on the number of the people who are given freedom to make them. It follows that the central problem of human progress is to find the social organization, or environment, most conducive for carrying out innovating actions.

The latter are wants—let us call them potential wants—which someone would like the community to become aware of, try them out, accept, and thus include in the sphere of "existing" wants. For example, the concept of equality before the law had not belonged to the sphere of "existing" wants in medieval Europe, but its later acceptance by the majority of European communities indicates that it was a definite potential want.

Vision Not Impaired

It appears that human progress is triggered by a group of men whose vision is not constrained by the prevailing forms of life, and who are capable of overcoming the inevitable resistance of the prevailing social institutions. The fact that the action of these men—let us call them free agents—means an injection of something new into the community's life implies that the outcome of their action can only be anticipated, not predicted. The free agent, therefore, must knowingly and willingly accept the risk of seeing his ideas and, consequently, himself rejected by the community.

While wear and tear of time and the passivity of matter naturally dissipate the things of this world and the energy of history, the creative forces which are characteristic of the spirit and freedom are also their witness and which normally find their point of application in the effort of the few—thereby destined to sacrifice—constantly revitalize the quality of this energy. Thus, the life of human societies advances and progresses at the price of many losses.

Thus, in a "progressive" community a new meaning for time emerges: the sequence of events becomes dependent on the action of the free agent. In Western Europe free agents emerged from the ranks of the small traders, bankers, artisans, and craftsmen, i.e., from the ranks of the rising middle class. The middle class wanted to distinguish itself from the lower classes of wage and farm labor, while at the same time it was envious of all the honors, privileges, and status enjoyed by the nobility. The members of this class turned their attention to commercial activity and the accumulation of wealth, and in doing so they re-organized the social structure of the West.

True Leaders

So far we have discussed two types of communities: the "routine" life community and the "progressive" community. The former is leaderless, that is, there exists no man in that community capable of disrupting the circular flow of life by offering something new to its members, something which they have not known or tried before. A "routine" life community has its own elite and rulers, to be sure, but those people are not its leaders; their job is to preserve peace and order within the existing social framework. The "progressive" community has its true leader: the free agent. He is the man who injects into the community's life, usually at a great risk to himself, something essentially new, something which is not an outgrowth of the past. He provides his community with an energy capable of disrupting its routine life and with a choice between new and old forms of life.

If our concept of progress—social changes voluntarily accepted by the community—is a sound one, then we can conclude that human progress depends on the rate at which free agents are able and willing to suggest changes; and the number of suggestions must, obviously, depend on the number of the people who are given freedom to make them. It follows that the central problem of human progress is to find the social organization, or environment, most conducive for carrying out innovating actions.

The acceptance of social changes instituted by the government is coercive rather than voluntary. It may well be that the government sponsored changes do not mean the actualization of people's potential wants and, hence, progress. While it is often argued that an important advantage of the "changing" community is that it helps its members to break away from the old forms of life, the fact remains that this type of community is promoting change rather than progress. Consequently, there is no reason to believe that social changes which people are compelled to accept represent the pattern of social development preferred by them.

The conclusion of this paper, of course, is that progress cannot be legislated from without, or suppressed altogether from within, although it can be impeded. It depends on the presence of free agents, a group of people not constrained in a specific way by prevailing forms of life and who are willing to accept the risks of carrying out their vision; it accelerates when the right of each to act as his own exclusive agent is protected; it grows in the absence of social institutions promoting some specific interests; and because it depends on the community's freedom to accept or reject proposed social changes, it depends on the existence of impartial social institutions. Only those social changes which the community voluntarily accepts can be properly called progressive, and social restrictions on the non-conforming lifestyle of free agents represents as mistaken an approach to society's optimal welfare as forced adoption of changes from outside.

The trouble is, of course, that in the absence of impartial social institutions such as open-market competition and democratic elections it becomes quite difficult if not impossible to ascertain whether social changes imposed by the government have been voluntarily accepted and, thus, considered superior to the old forms of life by the community at large. Steel Imports And Basic Principles

By WILLIAM B. BOYD
(The Freeman)

Mr. Boyd is President of the Chapin & Bangs Company of Bridgeport, Connecticut and a director of the Steel Service Center Institute. This article is from his statement to the Board of Directors of the Institute in October, 1967.

Of course, I am as vitally concerned as anyone in the import troubles of the steel industry, but these troubles are only a part of a much greater problem and I think we must lift our gaze above the morass of statistics and political maneuverings—above and beyond the steel industry itself—to see what is really happening here. We must take a look at the basic principles involved.

I know we can all agree that the proper way to solve a problem is first to find its cause and then to remove that cause. The people of the American Iron and Steel Institute assume that their troubles come from foreign governments and producers, low foreign wage rates, and our State Department. Certainly these are contributing factors, but I believe that by far the most important cause is the actions and interventions of our own government—all departments and all levels—and of the labor unions to which government has given such great powers and privileges. Consider how our costs are skyrocketing because of high taxes, depreciation of our money, harassment, controls, regulations, strikes, union-imposed uneconomic wage levels, and inefficient work practices. These are the results of government actions, and they are forcing us to price ourselves right out of the market.

Murdered by Government

If you don't believe it is our own government that is at fault, consider an industry which is little if at all affected by foreign governments, foreign producers, and foreign wage scales. Take the railroads—the New York, New Haven & Hartford in particular.

This road has been murdered by our own government and its creatures, the railway unions. It has been heavily taxed by all levels of government its rates have been controlled, its operations have been regulated, it has suffered from strikes, featherbedding, and uneconomic wage rates, and on top of this, government has built competing highways along its tracks and subsidized competing modes of transportation. It has been ruined by its own government. And this will be the fate of many more industries if the present trend is not reversed.

Wit And Whimsy

Economy in words: The telegraph operator was asked by a religious lady to send a birthday telegram to a friend and end it with the word "Mirph." Mr. Keys (the operator) — What kind of word is that? Mrs. King — It's from the Bible and it means "The Lord watch between me and thee when we are absent from one another." The operator shook his head and said: "Mr. Keys — All right, Madam, I'll put it in, but you're certainly getting a bargain from the telegraph service."

Equality?

By EDWARD Y. BREESE
(The Freeman)

Mr. Brees has taught Industrial Management at Georgia Tech and headed the Department of Humanities at Embury Riddle Aeronautical Institute in Florida. At present he is a freelance writer.

Liberte, Fraternite, Egalite, the Jacobins proclaimed; and set about oiling the brains of guillotine. These were stern and practical men when it came to the daily mechanics of revolution. Some of their professed ideas might take their heads into the clouds, but their actions instinctively conformed to the realities of a troubled time.

They knew, without troubling to theorize, that political equality in their time could only be had by the knife. The man who wants to level a forest can't possibly jack up all the immature or stunted trees. It's a lot more practical to try cutting the tops out of those which tower above the rest. This way, equality of a sort can ultimately be achieved.

In the end, of course, it will have to be equality at the level of the smallest and weakest trees.

Equality among people in their relations with each other is also likely to be at their lowest common level.

Spartans, Amazons

It is only in the ancient, pre-Christian era that we find examples of people who sought equality by pruning out the weaker growth rather than the stronger. The Spartans eliminated at birth the weak, obviously not grow up to be warriors, or the breeders of warriors. So, according to report, did the Amazons.

There are occasional reports of other primitive tribes living at such marginal levels that all who could not "pull their weight" had to be ruthlessly eliminated to ensure the survival of the group.

If equality is really desirable per se—and I'm not trying to say that it is—this cutting away of weak and defective units would seem the logical method for humanity to follow. It would improve the norm of achievement and the available breeding stock at a progressive rate as the generations passed. It is logical.

Fortunately, or unfortunately, as you wish, I doubt that it is practical in the twentieth century of the Christian ethic. We have been taught too long and too thoroughly that it should be "women and children first in the lifeboats."

A full generation of political and economic socialism and monolithic statism in our own day has capped the process of indoctrination.

This is why I am continually puzzled by the current semantics of "equality." In a day and age of careless and sloppy usage, it's hard to tell just what is meant by the word.

The professed intellectuals and "liberals" appear to mean an equality of humanity at four levels: economic, political, educational and social. But they have not explained why equally at all four levels would be desirable for humanity as a whole.

They are less frank—and considerably less clearheaded—than were the Jacobins or Spartans. None of them come right out and say the equalizing should be accomplished by beheading the tall trees. Some of them may not realize that this is the only way it could be done.

There also seems to be a high level of confusion as to just how this alleged latter-day paradise is to be brought about. They are agreed upon certain a priori assumptions as to the desirability and necessity of teaching their goals. Question these, and they're promptly labeled bigot and enemy of the race. But their own thinking as to pragmatic implementation of the Four Equalities is both primitive and fragmentary.

Educational Equalization

I have heard it seriously advanced that equality of education at the highest level can be reached by requiring the top universities to lower their admission and scholastic requirements even to the point of abolishing competition and grades. If this is only done, its advocates hold that even the educationally and mentally "disadvantaged" can receive a top level education (?) at Princeton or M.I.T.

The question mark (?) above is mine. There is no question in the minds of the proponents of this absurd doctrine. Specifically, I question what, if any, could possibly be obtained at an institution which had obligingly adjusted itself downward to the lowest common level.

I won't try here to pursue this thought further or to question equality at the social and political levels. But, I want to examine some of the possible results of fuzzy thinking about "economic equality."

First of all, any such thing is manifestly impossible. Even its greatest advocates are presently admitting this in practice, if not in theory. Any economic system—no matter what it may be called—has to embody three classes of people.

There must be primary producers (i.e., workers) who use synthetic or extractive processes for the alteration of raw material into finished goods or who provide services. Some of these will be better rewarded than others, if for no other reason than the differing utility of the products.

There will be drones—some, through no personal fault, as with the very old and very young. Others will seek support out of laziness or antisocial tendency. In any case there will be drones in even the most efficient organization.

Finally, there will have to be a class of entrepreneurs or managers. This is one human function which cannot be built into a cybernetic machine or delegated to even the most sophisticated of robots.

Grant this and it becomes obvious that "economic equality" in any society must be stratified in at least these three levels. It may be possible, though I doubt it, to force all workers to labor for one wage. But they may never be expected to work for an income no better than that of the drones, for they, too, would become drones in this case. Nor will the managers exercise their specialized abilities without tangible and measurable reward.

In Contrast To Russia

Let any doubter study the present managerial class within the Soviet Union. Let him especially ponder the results of surveys which show the "communist" class nearly psychologically, temperamentally, and motivationally identical with their Western counterparts in the "executive" ranks.

Yet, this impossible leveling process is inherent in any such proposal as a "guaranteed annual income" for all Americans. Put such a system into operation, and more and more individuals will stoop to take advantage of it.

As the drones increase, so will the burden upon the backs of the remaining workers and managers. More and more of their produce will be diverted to the nonproducers. This process has its own built-in breakdown factor. The end has to be disaster for all.

Opportunities Earned

What about "equality of economic opportunity"? Of all things this sounds the most possible, the most beneficial to all, and the most nearly in line with the ideals of a free society. Up to a point, it certainly is.

"Equality of opportunity," however, cannot be given, any more than can freedom, education, courage, or status. It has to be earned or made for oneself by the individual concerned. Neither liberty nor intelligence can be legislated. Nor can equality of any sort except at a dead end on level.

Attempts to work out an elaborate legal or social system to ensure any sort of equality are inevitably self-defeating. Humanity could save itself endless struggle, suffering, and frustration if this truth were recognized.

Once the issue is seen clearly, there is something we can do about equality of opportunity. We can strive to establish a system which will enable each individual to advance to the limit of his own capacity and ability. We can thus aid each one to be and become and achieve to the upper limit of his potential. This is what Plato defined as "justice." And this is the only way in which those at every level can be raised.

There's really no mystery about how such a favorable climate can be attained. It has been done—right here—only a little while ago as history runs. Our Founding Fathers opened American life to the freest economic system yet attempted by any people.

As long as we held to the free, competitive economy our people, as individuals and as a whole, made giant strides. Our society was both vertically and horizontally mobile and fluid. The net result was growth, progress, achievement.

Only when we attempted to accelerate or improve the process by coercive legislation did our troubles begin. A free economy can no more operate within a tight framework of regulatory law than can a man bound in a strait-jacket. The natural beneficial processes of open competition are fatally inhibited by controls.

Individuals must be free to help themselves if mankind is to be elevated.

BRANCH HEAD BILL SAYS:

The Blame Is Whose?

By BILL KENNEDY

"I am mindful of the war in Vietnam.

"I am mindful of the race riots in the cities and across the country.

"But the greatest threat to this country during all the time I have known anything about it is neither of these. It is a generation of young people raised up to believe that they do not have to respect authority of any kind."

These are words told me recently by an 80-year-old retired school teacher who is keenly aware of current events, domestic and abroad. He was stirred by these comments by recent student sit-ins, look-ins and boycotts at Tuskegee Institute and Columbia University coupled with rumblings here and there from other college campuses and street riots.

"When the day comes—and it has—when high school and college boys and girls can defy the supervisors and administrators of the school, are allowed to 'confer' with them and make demands and deals as equals, and nobody—not even the courts—will stand behind the school authorities, then we are gone down the river," my Dad continued. "I dread the thought of what will happen when this thinking prevails in adult society."

It is not as if "my old man" is not aware that the race issue and the college riots are connected. He simply points out that the threat is the loss of an entire generation, not just the lawless elements of the Negro race.

There is a generation gap, no doubt about it. And it is more than the usual parent-child misunderstanding. Get a group

'Excessive' Market Power

(Wall Street Journal)

An increasing number of economists argue that current antitrust policy is not nearly as aggressive enough, that it should be directed toward the break-up of companies that have achieved "excessive" market power.

One who has argued this view is Donald F. Turner, who leaves his post as the Justice Department's antitrust chief on June 1 to return to the Harvard Law School faculty. His book (co-authored by Carl Kayser, director of the Institute for Advanced Studies at Princeton) is considered critically in an essay in "The Economics of Antitrust" (Prentice-Hall).

Questions Gaid

The author of the essay, New York University economist Simon N. Whitney, does not question that the industrial system has serious faults. But he does question whether the nation will gain from cutting up big firms into smaller ones even through the careful surgery that Messrs. Kayser and Turner propose.

A key problem is how to determine that a company's market power is excessive or unreasonable. The Kayser-Turner approach concedes difficulties but does not regard them as insuperable.

The first proposed criterion of unreasonable power is a persistent failure to reduce prices to reflect a decline in demand, costs or capacity utilization. As Professor Whitney notes, however, a decision not to cut prices in such circumstances may stem from many factors other than a company's control of its market.

It may, for instance, result from swiftly changing technology. The Government thus might find itself in the ridiculous position of saying to an aircraft propeller maker, "Jet planes are replacing propeller planes; you switched to other products instead of reducing propeller prices to persuade airlines to abandon the jet idea."

The second Kayser-Turner criterion is the persistence of high profits in relation to risk and capacity. Yet high profits frequently reflect superior management, not market dominance. Medium-sized steel companies in recent years have often outperformed the giants, and it would be hard to argue that the little firms are bullying the big ones.

Finally, Messrs. Kayser and Turner contend that the failure of new firms to enter a profitable industry indicates the existing companies hold unreasonable power. In fact, a new company may shut an industry simply from fear that it will be unable to compete effectively; the industry may be composed of 100 small or medium-sized firms rather than a few large establishments.

Other Fears

It's possible, too, that management may hang back from fear that existing companies in the industry could attack it with discriminatory price-cutting in its particular product or geographic market. This fear might be eased, as Professor Whitney comments, by breaking up one or more of the existing firms. But he adds that discriminatory tactics can already be and often are, attacked with existing law.

That, of course is the way antitrust law was supposed to work. Congress intended the target to be not size, as such, but the methods of acquiring size and the ways it is used. All too often, though the enforcement target now appears to be bigness alone.

The Kayser-Turner book stresses that an effort to break up excessively powerful firms would require that "the level of knowledge in the relevant areas of economics and industrial engineering available to the Government in such proceedings be far higher than it is now in the typical presentation of an antitrust case." We would suggest that the Government could put this greater skill to better use in more intelligent analyses of business conduct.

While that conduct isn't always perfect, the present system, as Professor Whitney says, "has on the whole succeeded in its function of producing goods for a growing population." In the circumstances it seems neither wise nor necessary to let "experts" start carving it up to suit themselves.

Rookie Ties Trevino In Third Round Of Golf Open

Horn Fires Torrid 67 In Michigan Tourney

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (UPI)—Rookie Rod Horn riddled the Warwick Hills golf course with a five-under par 67 Saturday to move into a tie with U.S. Open champion Lee Trevino after the third round of the $125,000 Buick Open.

Trevino, the mid-point leader at six-under par, shaved another two strokes off par 72 to wind up with Horn at 208, eight-under par for 54 holes.

Horn and Trevino had only a one stroke edge on another rookie on the PGA tour, Mike Hill, who shot a 67, for a 209. Only two strokes back was Johnny Stevens, a former freshman basketball player, at Wichita State, who tallied a 70 for a 210 total.

Johnny Pott and Tom Weiskopf, the second leading money winner, were at 21, and Bert Greene, who also had a 67, and Fred Marti were at 212.

Dean Refram, Charley Sifford and Rocky Thompson were at 213, while Miller Barber, Jim Colbert, Frank Beard, Steve Spray and defending champion Julius Boros came in at par 214.

Horn, who has played in 10 tournaments, has earned only $116 for a tie for 26th place in the Magnolia Classic. He was a late starter in pro golf because he "couldn't afford to turn down job opportunities when he finished college." But he turned pro, "because I didn't want to think back and wonder if I could have made it."

150 Sunday Golfers Tackle Lee Trevino's Former Haunt

DALLAS (UPI)—A field of 150 "Sunday" golfers, many with dreams of following past winners Bob Lunn and R. H. Sikes onto the pro tour, tackle the former haunt of U. S. Open champ Lee Trevino, this week in the 43rd annual USGA Amateur Public Links championship.

A wild scramble is expected as usual when the nation's top municipal course golfers tangle, but a couple of local players are given a good chance of dethroning defending champion Verne Callison of Sacramento, Calif.

The Dallas golfers are being picked by many because of their familiarity with a course Trevino once called "the hardest golf course I've ever played."

That would be Tenison Memorial Park golf course where Trevino played in quest of an occasional dollar before moving on to El Paso, Tex., and eventual overnight success on the tour.

And if Trevino thought the course was tough when he was playing it a few years ago, he should see it now.

The USGA, just as it does for its Open tournament, has let the bermuda grass alongside Tenison's fairways grow into thick, tangly rough.

Fishin' Roundup

In spite of what you may have heard, the walleye perch are still biting at Lake Meredith. Alvin Day went over two days last week and caught 10 limit both days in about 12 hours during the morning.

He used Hellbenders, Bombers, and spinners, all in light color. R. J. Hilton, 717 N. West, was trolling with a magnet-dig lure last week and caught one walleye perch measuring 20 3/4 inches and weighing about 3 3/4 lbs. and three walleye measuring about 18 more inches each.

Don and Barbara Burke, 3005 Rosewood, and Barbara's brother, Timmy Epps, 10 years old of 1909 Duncan, caught a total of 18 1/2 lbs. of channel cat at Lake Getting east of Pampa, using waterdogs for bait.

Last Wednesday, Ray Glazebrook, 401 S. Finley, caught one 2 lb. and one 4 lb. bass at a lake near Wheeler.

Roy Bourland went fishing at a farm pond east of Pampa. He was using a Mepps gold spinner, and gold and black Rapala and caught 19 bass a 11 weighing between 1 1/2 to 4 1/2 lbs.

After putting 3 of them back and arriving home with 16 of them, he began looking around for someone to give his fish to. Catching Frank Culbersop at home he asked him if he wanted some bass.

Frank said, "Sure," and went into the house to get something to put them in.

Roy quickly laid out the 16 bass in the garage and took off!

When Frank saw there was 30 to 40 lbs. of fish, he yelled at Roy, but too late! Roy later heard from Frank's wife that he was still cleaning fish at 11:00 o'clock that night.

Reports from "beautiful" Lake McLellan show the channel cat biting real good. Alvin Adams, Pampa, caught 10 lbs. of channel cat on blood bait. They averaged 1 1/2 lbs. each.

Gary Hale, Amarillo, caught one 4 lb. bass using a purple worm. Glenn Wilkie, Pampa, caught a nice bass, and 3 channel cat.

Shorty Floyd, Lela, Lake, caught 18 lbs. of channel cat using dead minnows dipped in "Phew." Mr. and Mrs. F.A. Floyd, Lela, Lake, caught 23 channel cat with a total weight of 36 lbs., also using "Phew."

Happy fishing, everyone!

King Captures Third Straight Tennis Win

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI)—American Billie Jean King, the queen of international tennis, swept to her third consecutive Wimbledon women's singles championship Saturday with a hard-earned 9-7, 7-5 victory over Australia's Judy Tegart.

The 24-year-old bespectacled star from Long Beach, Calif., thus joined a handful of women players who have captured three straight singles crowns. Tired, but happy, Mrs. King strode off the historic center court and proclaimed:

"That's it. I'm going home to my husband, Larry, and I don't want to hear about tennis for at least a week."

She also announced she would play tennis professionally for one more year and then called it quits.

Victory was worth $1,800 and Mrs. King made it a sweep for the pros in the first Open Wimbledon. Rod Laver of Australia won the men's title on Friday. Both Mrs. King and Mrs. King were never in danger of defeat in Saturday's final and despite a tremendous

Gibson Hurls Shutout

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Bob Gibson, striking out the side after the bases were loaded in the sixth inning, posted his eighth straight win of the season Saturday by pitching the St. Louis Cardinals to a six-hit, 3-0 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

Gibson struck out nine in pitching his sixth shutout in his last seven starts. He has given up only one run in the last 57 2/3 innings he has worked.

Matson Will Take Physical At Amarillo

Randy Matson, world record holder in the shot put, will travel to Amarillo on July 11 for an Army physical examination, it was learned from his father Saturday.

Matson, who was graduated from Pampa High School and visits here frequently, is a leading candidate for the 1968 Olympic team.

All-Stars Say Infield Tough

HOUSTON (UPI)—All five members of the National League starting infield in the All-Star game do not like playing conditions in the Astrodome, but the outfielders say it doesn't bother them, a survey by United Press International showed Saturday.

First baseman William McCovey of the San Francisco Giants and third baseman Ron Santo of the Chicago Cubs were the most outspoken.

"It's not a true field," McCovey said. "Fielding ground balls is strictly a luck thing. Just when you think you are in the right spot to grab the ball, it goes off in another direction. I would just as soon not say what I really think about it."

"The only good thing I can say about it is that it eliminates playing in 100-degree heat," McCovey said.

Santo criticized the dirt as much as the plastic grass. "It's not a smooth dirt," he said. "It's a clay type. Every time you move your foot, you get a divot. I have to play in closer than I normally do because I would rather get them (grounders) off the turf than off the dirt."

"The grounders to your left and right are through before you can react," Santo said. "They also bounce over your head more often. They don't bounce true. The ground under the turf is not even."

Shortstop Don Kessinger of the Cubs and second baseman Tommy Helms of the Cincinnati Reds both said they play back a step or two because the ball comes off the Astrodome so fast.

"It shoots off," Kessinger said. "I prefer to play on regular grass. I don't particularly like the dirt here either."

Helms said he thinks the ball bounces true on the Astrodome and it is easier to pick up off the bat than in San Francisco or Chicago, but it is harder to field because it is moving so fast.

"You got to get seven to 10 more errors a year here," Helms said. "I play back three steps on the double play here instead of cheating. "I think it's going to surprise the American Leaguers who have never been here before," Helms said.

Catcher Jerry Grote said the white ceiling makes it harder to catch pop flies.

"You have to watch them all the way," he said. "It's harder to pick them up."

Pete Rose of the Reds, one of the outfielders, said he did not have any trouble because the section of the roof the outfielders look up into has been painted brown and provides a good background.

"I love it here," Rose said. "It is just beautiful...it's cool and you can see the ball good. It might be a disadvantage to the American League. I know when I was a rookie and first came in here I was amazed. It took a while to adjust."

Hank Aaron of the Atlanta Braves also said he had adjusted.

"I don't have as many problems now as I used to," he said. "And I'm glad the All-Star game is going to be played at night. It is tougher to line up high fly balls in the daytime."

Orioles 5, Yanks 1

NEW YORK (UPI)—Dave Leonhard pitched a three-hitter and the Baltimore Orioles scored two runs in the second inning while getting only one ball out of infield Saturday to score a 5-1 victory over the New York Yankees.

Leonhard, who scored his fourth victory of the season against three losses, yielded the Yankees' run in the third inning on pitcher Steve Barber's walk, a double by Horace Clarke and Roy White's sacrifice fly.

Oakland Wins, 4-1

DETROIT (UPI)—Reggie Jackson drove in two runs with a pair of singles Saturday as the Oakland Athletics snapped a seven-game losing streak with a 4-1 triumph over the Detroit Tigers behind the six-hit pitching of Chuck Dobson.

Solon Blasts Television

AUSTIN (UPI)—U. S. Rep. Jake Pickle of Austin said Saturday, "it's unfair for high school footballers to play against their professional counterparts."

However, Pickle wasn't talking about pitting high school athletes and professional ball players on the football field — but rather on the television screen.

He said he will challenge recent developments that could allow local telecasts of pro football games at times which conflict with normally-scheduled high school and college contests.

The problem first came to light with the publication of the 1968 schedule, which lists two American Football League's Friday night games — one on Sept. 6 with Kansas City at Houston and the other on Oct. 11 with Buffalo at Miami.

Traditionally, Friday nights have been high school football nights, just as Saturday afternoons and evenings have been reserved for college gridirers.

Pickle said he had brought the matter to the attention of the House Judiciary Committee and "protested vigorously that the two telecasts break the spirit of the law."

"I realize there will be some need for some slight variation in scheduling from time to time," he said, "but I don't want to see a wholesale disruption of the custom of Friday and Saturday for high school and college football."

The last time the issue was considered in Congress was in 1966, when a law was approved regarding the professional football merger.

Local Blackouts That law includes provisions for local blackouts of pro games which conflict with high school and college contests, but it also contains some "loopholes" in regard to the date when the blackout rule becomes effective and whether the league or the individual teams negotiate the contract for the telecast of the game.

Because of these "gaps" in the law, Pickle said, televising the two games in question is apparently legal.

He expressed hope, however, that the networks "will reconsider the telecasts in the spirit of good sportsmanship."

Porter, 37, with offices in Oklahoma City, is executive secretary-treasurer of both the Amateur Softball Association of America and the ISF.

As such he is the Pete Rozelle (or Bill Eckert) of softball, except he travels more. During 1967 Porter logged 150,000 air-miles on worldwide errands.

"A group of us were chatting during a break at the 1962 women's world tournament in Stratford, Conn.," he recalls. "One man, Jiro Iwano, who came with the Japanese delegation, asked, 'How can this be called a world tournament when there are 17 teams from the United States, one from Japan, and one from Canada?'"

"That got me, and others, to wondering. Three Australian women were also at the tournament, as onlookers, and they returned home and organized the first truly world softball tournament which was held in Melbourne in 1965."

FOREIGN NEWS COMMENTARY Uruguay A 'Sick' Country

By WILBUR G. LANDREY
BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — If there is a country in South America that can be said to be "sick," it is Uruguay, caught up in an agony of devaluations, strikes, student problems and cabinet crises.

President Jorge Pacheco Areco has called up army and police reserves and declared a virtual state of siege in a tough test of strength with the Communist-led unions trying to force wage increases in a climate of galloping inflation.

Partial and general strikes regularly paralyze normal economic activity. In recent weeks, students have several times battled police in the streets.

Inflation estimated at 48.7 per cent in the first five months of the year, and the Uruguayan peso has been devalued no less than five times in the past two years—from 80 pesos to 250 pesos for one U.S. dollar. On the black market, it is still slipping.

The country owes $400 million in debts abroad and its budget deficit of 170 million equals its exports for one year.

In the past 16 months, there have been seven cabinet crises, the latest last week. More than one-third of the 850,000 working force in Uruguay is on the public payroll. In its advanced welfare state, retirement comes at 55 or even earlier, and no fewer than 290,000 persons are drawing pensions.

Heavy Burden
For a country slightly smaller than the state of Tennessee with a population of only 2.8 million that is quite a burden.

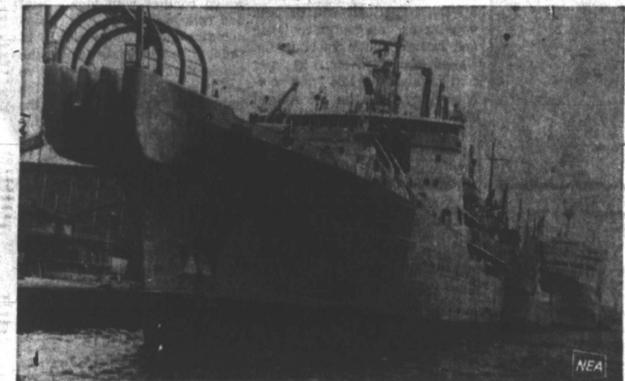

So far no way out has appeared. Pacheco Areco, 48, who came to office by way of the vice presidency when the president died last December, has been trying to impose austerity. As yet, few observers think that the country's institutions are in danger. The armed forces have a tradition of political neutrality, and the last coup occurred in 1942.

pearl earrings by the bridegroom.

ATTENDANTS
Matron of honor was Mrs. Maxann Simpson Collin, formerly of Odessa. Bridesmaids were Misses Jane Hill, Odessa; Nancy Mattiza, Lake Charles, La.; Christina Avery, Austin; Becky Houston, Dallas and Colleen Phelan, Driftwood.

Attendants were dressed in A-line scooped necked gowns of light aqua with empire waistlines accented with dark aqua velvet ribbons tied in front bows atop a back inverted pleat.

White crocheted lace cap sleeves were adorned with dark aqua velvet band inserts. Their chapel veils were aqua net circles bordered by two-inch bands of crocheted lace accented with several dark aqua velvet bows connecting the lace and net.

They wore matching aqua slippers and carried single white roses with cascading greenery and large avocado green bows. Two of the matron of honor's three roses were presented to mothers of the couple after the ceremony.

Tommy Rice, the bride's brother, and Tony Phelan, the bridegroom's brother, were best men. Groomsmen were Don Hickam, Houston; Kenny Baird, and Steve Van Vliet, both of Amarillo; and Jamie Muhl, Waco.

Ushers were Leroy Gullory, Freeport; Frankie Lloyd, Dallas; Reid Wood, Navasota; Vic McNallie, Temple and Dan Burleson, Killeen.

Grant Goss, Waco, and Jack Shubert, Houston, carried rings on matching white satin pillows.

Misses Leslie Simmons and Stacy Simmons, of Houston, flower girls, were dressed similarly to bridal attendants in white gowns with white lace chapel veils and carried white baskets of long stemmed white roses and cascading greenery.

Vows were exchanged on a prie dieu beneath an altar framed by six palm trees and six holy candles in three-foot gold candle holders.

Mrs. Larry Smith and Mrs. Kenneth Baker, the bride's sister, both of Houston, sang "One Hand, One Heart," for the pre-nuptial selection. Mrs. Baker sang "The Lord's Prayer," during the ceremony.

The bride's mother was dressed in a street-length dark aqua satin dress with matching coat, hat and accessories. The bridegroom's mother chose a light blue sleeveless A-line

Karlin, Bill Truitt, Bob Lawrence, Harold Gosnell, R. E. Mosley and R. T. Davis. Another courtesy was a come and go shower for the bride in Weatherford.

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Huggins, parents of Richard Huggins, Weatherford, hosted a dinner at Harvester Pit Barbecue in Pampa for Miss Beverly Heaton, and their son Richard, and members of the house party after the wedding rehearsal.

RECEPTION
The reception was held in St. Peter the Apostle Parish Hall after the ceremony.

A white silk organza skirt topped with a lace cloth covered the bride's table. A garland of greenery draped under the lace and fell below it. White mums and roses arranged with greenery were placed in a large silver vase for the centerpiece.

White satin bells with pearled rims topped the four-tiered cake, with each tier separated by cupid columns.

Set in aqua lace, net and satin, the cake was decorated with small aqua lace hearts. The first layer was accented with white roses and greenery.

A red and white checkered table cloth covered the bridegroom's table from which were served wine coolers, breadsticks and cheese.

The couple toasted wine from silver goblets engraved with their names and the wedding date, gifts from the bride's parents.

For a honeymoon to New Orleans, La., the bride chose a baby blue A-line sleeveless skimmer with a floral crocheted blue lace coat. She wore a navy hat and accessories and the orchid from her bouquet.

The bride, a 1965 graduate of Permian High School, has finished her junior year at the University of Texas. She was Miss West Texas of 1965, was Little-Sister of the Shield and Diamond, and a member of Pi Beta Phi Sorority and the Varisty Singers.

The bridegroom graduated from Houston schools and is a 1968 U.T. graduate. At the university, he received a BBA degree, was a member of Pi Kappa Alpha Fraternity, Silver Spur and Alpha Kappa Psi Insurance Society. He was sophomore business class president and is employed with a life insurance company in Austin.

Pampans attending were Mrs. Earl Maddux and Mrs. James Earl Rice Sr.

DEAR ABBY: There is a 10-year-old boy living next door to us who has just started taking violin lessons. Now that summer is here, we keep all our windows open, and we can hear this kid practicing night and day. I have heard "Santa Lucia" for two weeks now, and there hasn't been any improvement.

I saw his father in the yard and said, "Your Joey sure practices a lot. I hear him night and day."

Joey's father said, "Don't complain. You are getting a concert for free. One day you will have to pay for a ticket to hear him."

I don't want to hurt anybody's feelings, but this Joey is making me crazy with his violin. Any suggestions?

THE MAN NEXT DOOR DEAR MAN: If "mother love is blind," father love is deaf, so buy an air conditioner and keep your windows closed during the summer until it's time to "buy that ticket."

DEAR ABBY: Thanks to your column I realized that I wasn't the only woman in the world who was married to a man who had "lost interest" in her at a much too early age.

I tried all the tricks. Trimmed myself down, new clothes, new hair-do. I even fell for that bit about blondes having more fun. (They don't. They just have bigger beauty parlor bills.) I teased and flirted and even begged. At first I felt cheap, then humiliated. Then I finally realized that there was nothing wrong with ME, it was HIM. I asked him to try to get to the root of his problem, but he insisted that he had no problem.

So that is where things stand. If he won't get help, there's nothing I can do. It's helped me a lot to be able to "talk" about it. And as you know, a lady doesn't talk to her friends about things like this. Thanks for being you.

"A LADY" DEAR "LADY": I received many letters from both husbands and wives who are married to icebergs, cold tomatoes, etc. Emotional temperatures differ. It's too bad these glaciers don't marry each other.

DEAR ABBY: I have two sons. One is 15 and the other is 14. My neighbor has two daughters. One is 15 and the other is 13. My husband works nights, and I work days. The problem is that our two boys like the neighbor girls. They are nice girls from a good family, but when we are gone, the sisters will come over to see our boys. They don't date or anything like that because we feel they are too young.

But now that it's summer vacation, the girls have been spending a lot of time here, and I don't think it's right with no adults at home. Besides you know how neighbors gossip. How do I tell these girls not to come over here unless my husband or I are home?

WORRIED DEAR WORRIED: You shouldn't tell the girls anything. Tell your sons that they aren't to have the girls in the house unless you are home.

DEAR ABBY: The people of this country (and I blush to admit that I am no exception) have absolutely no GUTS when it comes to refusing to tip waiters, cab drivers, and others who do only their job (for which they are paid) and nothing more.

There is no more reason to tip a cab driver for driving you from one place to another than the bus driver who does the same thing—unless, of course, he handles your luggage or does something extra for you. Most cab drivers don't even bother to open the door of a cab anymore. And when you DO tip them, they don't even say, "Thank you."

'Hofheinz Hideaway' Makes Hernando Feel Like A Piker

By DARRELL MACK
HOUSTON (UPI)—There is a "Hofheinz Hideaway" among the girders of the Astrodome that would make Hernando feel like a piker and would make some of the luxury hotels look second-rate.

The Hofheinz hideaway begins Roy Hofheinz offers its guests air-conditioned golf and target shooting along with other sports and, if they happened to look out a bedroom or patio window Tuesday night, they would see the annual major league all-star baseball game.

The hideaway built by Judge five stories above the green turf of the Astrodome baseball diamond and stretches through the domed stadium superstructure another five stories up to the Carribbean Room, where the guests are almost 100 feet above the outfield.

When Hofheinz talks about the presidential suite, he does not mean a couple of large adjoining rooms which anyone can rent if they want to pay the price.

The presidential suite in Hofheinz' hideaway is for President and Mrs. Johnson, done in her favorite colors and equipped with telephone hook-ups for White House hotlines—the only place outside the LBJ Ranch, Camp David and the White House which has the secret connections.

The presidential suite—which includes a four-room bath with golden fixtures—has not been used and Judge Hofheinz said it will not until President Johnson, a close personal friend for more than 30 years, comes to the dome.

The suite consists of a reception room, a sitting room containing 200-year-old French antique furniture with its original tapestry and a bedroom done in gold and dusty turquoise in addition to the magnificent bath. It was designed by Academy Award winners Randall Duell and Harper Goff of Los Angeles.

Between the reception and sitting rooms is a staircase spiraling around an ancient marble statue of the goddess Minerva. The staircase leads to another elegant bedroom, this one for the President's daughters.

Luci and Pat Nugent and their son Lyn have visited the suite, but the President has not. Hofheinz built it in hopes the national Democratic convention would be held in the dome.

The suite is adjacent to the box seat area from which Hofheinz watches Astro ball games. On the other side of the box is the living area in which Hofheinz now resides. He has not gone back to his Yorktown Estate since his wife died in December, 1966.

The five levels of the "hideaway" have a target range, a bar in which the bar stools rise automatically and beer mugs are guided by hidden magnets, a directors' room with zebra-upholstered chairs, a puppet showroom, nursery, beauty parlor, and laundromat.

If one has a chance in the midst of all that, he can look out a window and see the ball game.

In 1787 English historian Edward Gibbon completed the writing of "The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire."

In 1776 the Continental Congress formally approved a resolution which became the Declaration of Independence from Britain. The document was signed two days later.

'Slow' Children Find That Learning Is Fun

LUBBOCK, Tex. (UPI)—Youngsters who show signs of slow development are discovering at the Milam Children's Training Center that learning is fun.

Motor development and other physical activities are receiving more than the usual emphasis this summer to teach children that "we learn by doing," said Mrs. James Valentine, executive director of the center.

"The physical training carries over into academic fields. It's part of the total development of the child."

Thirty-two youngsters, who are mentally retarded, or just slow learners, are enrolled in the summer program. They range in age from 3 to 15.

"We go swimming four mornings each week," Mrs. Valentine said. "In addition to being a lot of fun, this gives the students experience in dressing themselves. They learn how to operate buttons, snaps and zippers. The swimming itself is good training."

Another part of the learning program are exploration walks. The students go for short hikes and are encouraged to pick up rocks, feel leaves and otherwise explore their surroundings.

"Many of these children lead over-protected lives and they are unaware of the world around them," the director said. "A first step in any child's learning process is to see, touch and know the world in which he lives."

A paid staff of six and 13 teenage volunteers see to it that each student gets individualized attention.

Furthermore, playground improvements have been made possible through the Lubbock Association for Retarded Children. Mrs. Valentine said she is particularly enthusiastic about the role the playground equipment is filling in the summer educational program.

Body coordination and other physical factors have a direct relationship to mental development, she said.

All this is designed to help the training center fulfill its mission of preparing slow learners for public schools. Language development and other academic subjects round out the program.

the Drama of DRUGS

By Joe Tooley

The seventh leading cause of death by disease in the United States is diabetes; and of the two million persons who suffer from it, a million of them don't even know they have it!

One reason for this is that there are two types of diabetes. One type strikes the young so violently that its victims seek out medical care almost immediately. The other, however, attacks older people and is not discovered until they take a routine physical examination.

Many are not conscientious about getting regular physical check-ups, feeling that if there were something wrong, they'd notice it before it got serious.

Nothing could be further from the truth. Disease, especially diabetes, long continued deteriorates the body and hastens death.

Richard Drug helps keep you healthy by maintaining complete stocks of fresh medicines. Also the skilled, licensed pharmacists merit your confidence.

It's Indy All Over Again In Colo. Race

CASTLE ROCK, Colo. (UPI)—Indianapolis 500 winner Bobby Unser is the pre-race favorite to win the premier Rocky Mountain 150 Sunday—but he will have to beat his Indy rival Joe Leonard in the revolutionary four-wheel-drive turbine car designed by Andy Granatelli to do it.

A victory by Leonard, whose car is now owned by Parnelli Jones, or Art Pollard in the other Granatelli-owned turbine would be the first time the "silent screamers" have won a United States Auto Club championship race.

Leonard appeared to have a safe lead in this year's Indy 500 over Unser. But with only minutes to go his car failed and Unser, in a turbo-Offenhauser, roared past to victory.

The shorter mileage and the higher altitude are thought to be an edge to Leonard in the rematch. But Unser, top USAC point winner with five championship division wins this year, is certain to be a formidable opponent.

The race is far more than a turbine-User rematch, however. The 26-car field includes Lloyd Ruby, three-time Indy winner A.J. Foyt, Mario Andretti, Gordon Johncock, Bobby's brother Al Unser, Billy Vukovich, Roger McClusky, Jim Malloy, Lou Sell and Jack Eiteljorg.

Only Sell, Ruby and Eiteljorg have raced the 2.66-mile Continental Divide Raceways track before. Sell, driving the car owned by TV comic Dick Smothers, won the Colorado Grand Prix May 26 on the CDR track.

Qualifying runs will begin at 1 p.m. Saturday with drivers racing against the clock. The race will start at 1:30 p.m. Sunday after drivers have practiced for an hour, beginning at 11 a.m.

The race could be one of the few remaining chances for the four-wheel-drive turbines, because new USAC rules threaten to outlaw them completely in 1970 and cripple them next year. The four-wheel-drive, also under USAC attack, is expected to aid them on the twisting course.

Leonard and Pollard will also be watching the thermometers and hoping to avoid the kind of extremely hot weather which hurts the efficiency of their engines.

Capt. Weaver received the Air Force Commendation Medal for meritorious service as chief controller, radar approach control, 1918th Communications Squadron, Scott A.F.B., Ill. The citation covered the period from October, 1966, to January, 1968.

FT. GORDON, GA.—Army Private James A. Steidle, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Steidle, Canadian, completed nine weeks of advanced infantry training June 21 at Ft. Gordon, Ga. His last week of training was spent in guerrilla warfare exercises.

During his guerrilla training, he lived under simulated Vietnam conditions for five days, fighting off night attacks and conducting raids on "enemy" villages. He was taught methods of removing booby traps, setting ambushes and avoiding enemy ambushes.

Other specialized training included small unit tactics, map reading, land mine warfare, communications, and firing the M-14 rifle, M-60 machine gun and the 3.5-inch rocket launcher.

Polio Death Reported HOUSTON (UPI)—Doctors in Texas say one person died recently of polio and another possible case was being treated. A Baylor University doctor warned parents against being lax in immunizing their children.

Television In Review

By RICK DU BROW
HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Proof that regular television series are mere filler is found in next season's three-network schedule. Only 20 new series will be attempted by the major broadcasting organization, most of them the usual run-of-the-mill stuff. More and more energy is being directed, instead, at future and fresher forms of television.

Well, that's the optimistic way of looking at it. Until the inspirations for these never-forms finds full flower, we must steel ourselves over the summer for the annual fall deluge. Here are 17 new series we can expect:

—The Phyllis Diller Show. Weekly hour of variety.
—"Adam-12" Half-hour program about the experiences of two squad car policemen of the Los Angeles force.

—"Julia." Diahann Carroll as a young widow, a registered nurse in the health office of an industrial corporation. She has a six-year-old son. Half-hour.
—"The Outsider." Darren McGavin as a private eye. One hour.

—"The Name of the Game." 90 minute series revolving around the activities of a vast publishing empire. With Robert Stack, Anthony Franciosa, Gene Barry.

—"The Ghost and Mrs. Muir." Half-hour comedy about a young widow's adventures with her children and housekeeper in a home still inhabited by the spirit of its former owner, a formidable clipper ship captain. With Hope Lange and Edward Mulhare.

—"Land of the Giants." Hour program about space travelers who are suddenly flung into a land in which everything is mammoth in size and they are tiny.

—"The Outcasts." Story of the relationship of two men, one white and a former Virginia aristocrat, the other black ex-slave who becomes a bounty hunter, in the West following the war between North and South. One hour weekly, with Don Murray and Otis Young.

—"The Mod Squad." Three young people, working for the police, penetrate the world of crime effectively because of their knowledge of the contemporary turned-on scene. One hour.

—"That's Life." Robert Morse in a musical comedy series tracing the lives of a young couple from courtship to wedding to honeymoon and the first married years. One hour.

—"Here Comes The Brides." Comedy about respectable and marriageable women who are imported to make a civilized community of a previously all-male Seattle logging camp in the old west. Hour.

—"The Ugliest Girl in Town." Half-hour comedy, filmed in London, about a boy who is in love with a girl, but is transformed by circumstances, into "Timmy"—the model of the mod, mod world—with an assist from Beatle-ish wig and a "super-mini outfit."

You, Your Child and School

By DAVID NYDICK
UPI Education Specialist
NEW YORK (UPI)—Have you parents found these beginning days of the summer vacation to be extremely difficult? It could get worse but difficulties can be avoided.

The summer vacation should be devoted to another part of your child's education which is often neglected.

Children are normally exposed to a strenuous academic program throughout the school year. In many cases they have only limited time to pursue special interests, social activities, and recreation.

During the school year, the child has a highly structured schedule. Even his recreation is usually at a scheduled time.

Suppose we approach the summer with one basic idea: Your child needs a change of pace. He needs to relax and participate in the many activities which are not available during the school year.

There are many things from which a child can profit during the summer.

The young child needs to learn how to play without constant supervision and adult organization. Let him learn to organize his own games and take responsibility for such things as coming home on time.

Plan a few major activities such as a trip to the zoo, museum, movie, etc. It is always a good idea to spread these kinds of activities throughout the summer. Try to plan trips to the beach, lake or other swimming facilities.

Children usually enjoy camping, fishing, sightseeing or other similar activities. They also get a big thrill out of going to work with their fathers, if possible.

Depending on the age of your child, talk over your plans with him.

Try to find out what he would like to do. Look in your local newspapers. There are usually many free and inexpensive activities for children of all ages.

Schools and local parks authorities often run recreation programs at no cost or very small fees.

Family time is another very important area. The summer usually provides many opportunities for the family to do things together.

CORPSMEN CRITICIZED
NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI)—A report charging American Peace Corps members "go about half naked" was issued by the Kenya Teachers Union Thursday to coincide with U.S. Independence Day.

The report also criticized the Peace Corpsmen for wearing beards. It said their conduct was "demoralizing" to students the corpsmen teach.

Thomas Crown Affair' Jobs Business

By DON ROYAL
NEW YORK (NEA) — On the heels of his Academy Award-winning "In The Heat of the Night" comes Norman Jewison's new film, "The Thomas Crown Affair," a major summer release in color from the Mirisch Corporation and United Artists.

"The Thomas Crown Affair" is about a big Boston bank robbery, the millionaire who masterminds it and the girl who tracks him down. It combines romance and suspense (with a twist-ending to boot), and is a deft job at big business conventionality and conformism. Says director Jewison: "Banks and insurance companies, you can't get much more Establishment than that."

Backing-up Jewison in perpetration of this sophisticated caper are Steve McQueen and Faye Dunaway as its stars. Michel Le Grand, man of many notes, composed the music. The ladies will recognize the name Thea Van Runkle, costume designer of "Bonnie and Clyde" renown; and Haskell Wexler is cinematographer.

McQueen plays Thomas Crown, and one of the big surprises in store for audiences is his usual rough-and-ready roles. McQueen plays a millionaire Bostonian, who dresses impeccably, lives in posh Beacon Hill and drives a Rolls Royce.

"I thought of changing my screen image for more than a year," says McQueen. "I felt it was time to get past these tough, up-tight types. When Norman showed me the Crown part, I grabbed it."

McQueen says he fidgeted at first in the conservative $350 Glen-plaid suit designed by Ron Postal. For accessories he wore a $2,000 watch and a gold Phi Beta Kappa key.

"I could not get used to the key, either," adds McQueen. "My fraternity emblem should be a couple hub caps hanging from a tire chain."

Eventually McQueen got comfortable in his $10,000-worth wardrobe, and even took his tussle with a Harvard accent in stride. "I just could not make it Bostonian," he says, "so we got around that by having me born somewhere else."

For the role of Vicky Anderson, the cool and calculating insurance investigator, Jewison cast the hottest actress in films today, Faye Dunaway. In fact, Jewison, who is always after new talent, had spotted Faye long before she exploded on the screen in "Bonnie and Clyde."

Michel Le Grand has composed the musical score, which includes the ballad "The Windmills of Your Mind," sung by Noel Harrison.

Thea Van Runkle started the whole Bonnie fashion craze and just wait till you see clothes she's designed for Faye—the look of the '60s or as Thea herself calls it, "The Entire Look."

Haskell Wexler is the young experimental cinematographer who won an Oscar for "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" One of the film's highlights is a new photographic process, the multiple-screen image, which permits a director to show several actions simultaneously.

Others in the cast include TV's Paul Burke, Jack Weston, top fashion models Astrid Heeren and Judy Pace, Todd Martin and Yaphet Kotto.

And the man responsible for all this is producer-director Norman Jewison, who came to the attention of screen audiences the world over primarily through the success of his first film for UA, "The Russians Are Coming, The Russians Are Coming," in which he introduced Alan Arkin. His next picture, "In The Heat of the Night," for which he was nominated as Best Director, placed him firmly in the forefront of today's young filmmakers.

"The Thomas Crown Affair," the first movie script by a practicing Boston attorney named Alan R. Trustman, was shot almost entirely on location in Boston, where the lively art of sticking-up a bank has flourished since 1950 when seven masked gunmen hit a Brink's counting house for $1.2 million in cash.

Jewison filmed the opening caper at a downtown branch of the National Shawmut Bank, using concealed cameras. "The guards and bank people were hep, but nobody else was," says he. "Our heisters scared a lot of customers and pedestrians, who thought they were seeing a real robbery. But oddly, no one tried to interfere. I think they were afraid to get involved."

Beacon Hill was the setting for Thomas Crown's home and Vicky Anderson's fashionable apartment. In the course of filming their love affair, Jewison took McQueen and Dunaway to atmospheric old Copp's Hill cemetery, the Commons, the outdoor markets of Little Italy at the north end of Boston, Anthony's posh Pier 4 restaurant, and the dunes near Crane's beach and Provincetown.

The society art auction was staged in the St. James ballroom of the Jordan Marsh mansion, 46 Beacon Street. Boston bluebloods and serious art collectors acted as extras, socializing between scenes with the professional filmmakers and contributing their collective pay check to a medical fund.

Norman Jewison was after realism, so whenever possible he employed people working at their regular jobs. But he also used over 2,000 extra, most of whom answered a newspaper ad offering $16 a day for atmosphere players. Many turned out to be business executives skylarking. They arrived on location in chauffeured cars. One brought his secretary and dictated between scenes.

Italians Raise Outcry Against Movie Portrayal of Columbus

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI HOLLYWOOD CORRESPONDENT
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The spaghetti and meat balls have hit the fan.

The Americans of Italian Descent, Inc. (AID) are furious with Hollywood director Edward Dmytryk, who will film a biography of Christopher Columbus depicting him as a bungler, lecher and cheat.

In a recent interview, Dmytryk told me his years of research in Europe uncovered facts, documents and books proving that the Italian explorer was one of the great losers of his time.

The UPI dispatch came to the attention of the Americans of Italian Descent, Inc., whose motto is "Truth—Fairness—Integrity."

Deep Disaffection
Plainly, AID doesn't believe Dmytryk possesses any of these qualities. Their disaffection, in fact, borders on animosity for Dmytryk, who claims Columbus was more a Spanish hero than an Italian idol.

No word has come in from the Americans of Spanish Descent, Inc., if, indeed, there is such an organization.

Headquartered in New York City, and under the leadership of Joe Jordan (who explains he is only half Italian, on his mother's side) AID is sending a letter of protest to all involved in the Columbus movie.

"We are writing to Dmytryk, the Italian ambassador to the United States, the Motion Picture Association of America and its counterpart in Italy, ANICA," Jordan said.

He also is writing to Marcello Mastroianni (of "La Dolce Vita" fame) who will star as the Genoese navigator.

In a letter to me, Jordan wrote "for your information, more than 1,000 members of our organization who attended a general meeting at the Waldorf Astoria... were aroused to fever pitch by the news of the proposed film... you may be sure we will corral the resentment of 22 million American-Italians."

The heat is on. At that meeting Supreme Court Justice Michael A. Musmanno of Pennsylvania waxed indignant at news of the planned movie.

In an impassioned speech he described Dmytryk as a "wildly egotistic cinematic mangler."

The justice—who must be of 100 per cent Italian heritage—said:

"If Dmytryk announced he proposed to produce a motion picture showing Abraham Lincoln as a liar, bungler and cheat, suitable action would be taken to prevent him from assassinating Lincoln a second time."

Cheers and Applause
Encouraged by the response of his audience, he went on:

"Dmytryk should be on his knees thanking the memory of Columbus for discovering the land which has given Dmytryk the opportunity to make millions, instead of plunging a knife into the back of his benefactor, the noble Genoese."

Cheers. Applause. Wild renunciation of Dmytryk, who is of Russian extraction.

"If Dmytryk goes through with his fiendish plan, devoid, as it is reported, of morality, decency and propriety, he will not debunk history but will add his name to the disgraceful history of mountebanks and ingrates who have traduced American decency, truth and justice," Musmanno continued.

To show his impartiality, Dmytryk is having screenwriter Enio Dicencini—who wrote "Divorce, Italian Style"—script the picture.

Since announcing his life of Columbus, Dmytryk has flown to London to complete work on another picture. But his wife has been getting threatening letters in Hollywood.

Country Music Still Endures

By WILLIAM D. LAFFLER
NEW YORK (UPI)—Country-style singing is about as old as the Republic and just as enduring.

In the old days this type of singing was mistakenly called hillbilly music even though most of the vocalists lived in flat country all their lives.

A typical hillbilly song had to be sung with a nasal twang and the singer invariably was a born loser — his sweetheart had two-timed him or run away with a city slicker or died just before the wedding.

During the Great Depression this kind of music kept the record companies which were in existence at that time alive when other big business was failing. These records all ways were in demand, especially in the South, Southwest and even in some of the eastern states.

The hillbilly concept began to die after polished singers such as Eddy Arnold, Ernie Ford and Jimmy Driftwood popularized what came to be known as country and western music.

These artists had either excellent voices or imagination or a combination of both.

Glen Campbell belongs to a new breed of country and western songsters. His voice is 1968, but sometimes it throws back to the 1930s, or even before then.

Panhandle Water District News

A check of nearby states reveals that the oil and gas industry in Texas has moved faster than any in taking remedial steps to prevent further pollution to underground and surface waters.

A report was recently issued on the Water Development Board — Texas Agricultural Experiment Station study on evaporation from brine solutions under controlled laboratory conditions. This study result is issued under the title of Report No. 77 and copies may be obtained by writing to the Texas Water Development Board in Austin.

The report outlines guidelines on what can be expected from brine evaporation pit use in the oil industry. The report also gives some ideas on how the new U.S. Corps of Engineers projects on the upper Red River will work out when they get into operation.

Cooperation between the various state agencies in eliminating causes of pollution has been excellent since 1960. Much credit can also be given to the oil and gas industry in setting up safeguards for the fresh water of the state.

The Texas Railroad Commission has a state-wide no-pit order in effect for Jan. 1, 1969. In some instances where immediate pollution damage was clear, the Commission has issued orders for earlier dates for eliminating unlined pits. The Railroad Commission has called a hearing for August 7 regarding elimination of all salt water pits from all oil and gas field operations in Eastman County.

Water Distributed Unevenly
It is estimated that at least one-fourth of the people in this country are at this minute up against either water shortages or substandard water, or both. As time goes by and populations increase further, the problem is expected to grow more acute. Pure water, in the very near future, may become a luxury unobtainable by most people, unless decisive action is taken now to correct the situation.

An average of 30 inches of water falls on every square foot of this country each year—4,300 billion gallons per day. The average amount of daily run-off is estimated to be 1,160 billion gallons. This is the amount of water that runs off the surface into rivers. Even when our population grows to 200 million people, that surface water runoff would be enough to give each person 5,000 gallons of water a day after irrigation withdrawals. The average person drinks less than 3 pints of fluid a day, only part of this being water. Why, then, is the extra 4,99,9625 gallons per day not enough for his other needs?

If water were distributed evenly, we would all have plenty. But unfortunately, the need and the supply are sometimes widely separated. Arizona is a state that uses, annually, twice as much water as falls on it from the sky.

While water has been rationed in Odgen, Utah, in recent years, Salt Lake City, at the other end of the Great Salt Lake, has more than it can use. Northern California has 98 per cent of the state's water; southern California uses 75 per cent of the state total. Los Angeles must bring in water from 450 miles away. One-fifth of the world's fresh water supply flows past Ohio's borders, yet much of the state's "fresh" water is unusable.

Back in the days before every home had running water, the average individual subsisted on about 3 to 5 gallons of water each day. Families settling in the backwoods, in pioneer days, chose a spot with a spring for their homestead. The spring water was cherished and conserved—it meant the difference between maintaining the homestead or being forced to move on. It was carefully protected from pollution, and sometimes its water was stored for use in dry weather.

Agriculturally Speaking

By FOSTER WHALEY
County Agriculture Agent
During the summer months we often have as many as 15 or 20 calls a day about various household, garden, and yard insect problems. In many cases we are able to tell people by telephone a simple control measure without even looking at the insect after determining the type of injury.

We have a specialist at Lubbock that can identify insects and make control recommendations on special problem type insects. We can give you the name of this specialist and mailing instructions, or we can send these insects off in special mailing cartons if they can be brought to our office. We are very happy to do this. We also have a long list of bulletins that have excellent control recommendations. Some of them have pictures of the common insects.

Lady Demands...
Last Friday I had a telephone call from a lady that pretty well demanded that I come out and chase down some insects that had devoured a portion of her garden.

She was quite disgusted with me when I asked her to bring some of the insects to the office. She didn't have time; she was about to depart on a vacation. At the time she was talking to me, I had these telephone notes and a list of "must" activities that needed doing the day before:

—A telephone call to return to Paul Bowers concerning a problem with some seed wheat he was putting up.
—A long distance call to return to Johnny Rex McClellan, McLean, concerning his judging our County 4H horse elimination contest here Monday.
—A long distance call to make to a specialist in Amarillo in an effort to get his help at a meeting we are to have in McLean next Tuesday.

—A long distance call to McLean to James Cliett concerning that area obtaining a quarter million dollar dehydrating plant.

We won't burden you with the rest of the list, such as the harvesting of our wheat test plot, the problem of working with several specialists on the D. W. Swain farm on an experimental test plot, and others.

The point we would like to make is this: We welcome your calls and we do have many services to offer the urban resident. But we do ask you to realize we could spend full time running from one side of town to the other just on insect problems. We ask your cooperation by helping us to help you.

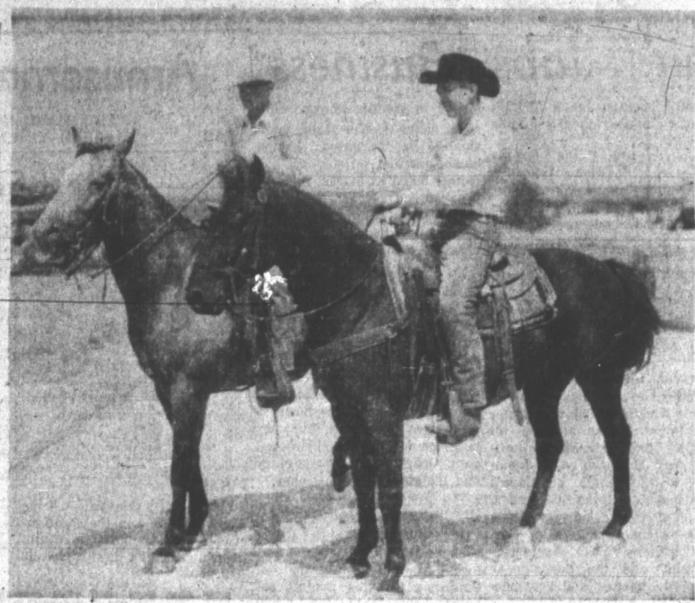

McLean Alfalfa Plant
Last Tuesday we met with a group of McLean alfalfa growers in an effort to start work in obtaining a dehydrating plant for that area.

About two years ago several meetings were held in the McLean area in an effort to encourage the development of alfalfa production. A written production guideline was developed that has been helpful.

Since then acreage of alfalfa has increased tremendously. It is believed there is sufficient acreage to justify a plant at present.

John Siepert, farm management specialist with the Extension Service headquarters in Lubbock was present to give some excellent data.

We have set a tentative date of July 10 to take a group of interested farmers to Plainview to visit a dehydrating plant

4-H HORSE SHOW — Ted Reeves, 14, left and his brother Jim, 18, at right, will be among the 25-30 youths competing in the Gray County 4-H Horse Elimination Show to be held in the rodeo arena at Recreation Park tomorrow. They are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Reeves, who lives seven miles south of the city.

Gray County 4-H Horse Elimination Set Tomorrow

The Gray County 4-H Horse Elimination Show is slated to begin at 7 p.m. tomorrow, according to Jesse Hoermann, assistant county farm agent. An estimated 25-30 youngsters are expected to compete in the event which precedes the District I horse competition here July 16. Only the top 15 individuals in the county competition will be eligible to compete in the District contests. District I covers the 22 northern counties in the Texas Panhandle.

The elimination show will feature classes in halter and performance. Youngsters will be eligible to compete in the halter classes and two of the performance events, which include barrel racing, pole racing, western pleasure and reining.

Plastic Pipe Use
The problem of getting water to a part of the pasture or range which is undergrazed may be solved through the use of a plastic pipeline, suggests B. J. Ragsdale, Extension range specialist. Conventional float-controlled water troughs or the newer automatic fountains can be used to control the flow of water in such an installation, he says. The plastic pipe should be placed below the soil surface to prevent deterioration from sunlight but it isn't necessary to bury the pipe below the frost line if the pressure is to be removed during the winter, he says.

Wheat Price Assurance —Secretary of Agriculture Freeman has moved to assure farmers participating in the wheat program a price at least as high as the local Government price-support loan rate for their wheat. Any wheat delivered by farmers under this price support procedure will be moved to available storage at other points by the Department and added to Commodity Credit Corporation stocks.

Market Service Moves
—The national headquarters of USDA's grain market news service has been moved to Independence, Missouri from Hyattsville, Md. The move is a part of Government's continuing program of decentralizing Federal activities.

USDA's Consumer & Marketing Service said the market news covers both grain and grain products.

Treated Wood Suggested
—Wood used in outdoor projects such as patios, picnic tables or fences should be protected by the use of preservatives, suggests W. A. Smith, Texas A&M University Extension forester. The best treatment is the pressure process. Pressure treated lumber is readily available. A paintable preservative should be requested if painting is required or if the wood will be in contact with clothing or the skin, advises the forester.

Somehow I had the notion that grass seeds were less expensive than semi-precious stones. So I paid a visit to a grass seed broker I was in for a shock.

The salesman, who was wearing a white smock and had a jeweler's loupe in his eye, asked me how many carats of grass seed I wanted.

"Gimme a couple of dollars worth," I said. I thought that would be enough for a half-acre at least.

The salesman consulted the into the vault and presently emerged with a velvet tray on which was mounted six grass seeds.

"Will there be anything else, sir?" he said.
I said, "I may need more than that. Can I get a discount if I buy them by the ounce?"
The salesman consulted the ticker behind the counter and jotted down the latest quotations. "You're in luck," he said. "The Dow-Jones grass seed average is off 1.04 points this morning. It's a good time to buy."

I made some rapid calculations and figured out that if I fasted every Wednesday, took out a second mortgage on my house and sold one of my children to a passing gypsy, I could afford enough grass seed to cover two and a half square feet.

Before I let my kids step on it I make them go in the house and wipe their feet on the carpet.

The Lighter Side

By DICK WEST
WASHINGTON (UPI)—I have a friend, a botanist by trade, who does part-time work as a turf consultant.
The other day I asked him to stop by and take a look at my lawn, which has been giving me some trouble this year.
"This is amazing," he said. "I counted 39 different botanical species in your lawn and none of it is grass."
"Oh, yeah," I said, thinking he was being a wise guy.
"Well, what's that patch of green stuff over there?"
He said, "That is a rare variety of chickweed hereto first found only on a remote island 76 miles south-southeast of Madagascar."
My friend wrote out a prescription for some grass seed and left, still shaking his head in disbelief.
"I don't know if you have brought any grass seed lately but if you have you are aware that the price range roughly follows the London gold exchange. I wasn't aware of that."

GUARDING OUR BORDER against agricultural pests, U.S. Department of Agriculture inspectors examine all fruits, plants, vegetables and seeds entering the country by mail, truck, rail or individual traveler. Few realize that foreign produce could hide insects or plant diseases that would seriously damage U.S. crops, forests or shrubs. One piece of fruit, a vegetable, a plant or a package of seeds is all it takes to give a "hitchhiking" pest the lift it needs to cross mountains or deserts and start an outbreak. Five Medfly outbreaks in the last 40 years have cost taxpayers more than $21 million. To prevent this from happening again, all agricultural items must be presented to inspectors at the border for clearance when entering the United States.

RODEO ANNOUNCER — State Senator Clem McSpadden of Claremore, Okla., will announce this year's Top O' Texas Rodeo July 24-27. It will be his first appearance in Pampa. Born near Oologah, Okla., birthplace of his uncle, Will Rogers, McSpadden has been a member of the Oklahoma State Senate 14 years, presently serving as President Pro Tempore an unprecedented third term. He was named "Rodeo Man of the Year" in 1967 by the International Rodeo Management Commission and represents the contact members on the Rodeo Cowboy Association's board of directors.

Instructor Says Those Who Pursue Music Should Make Lifetime Of It

LUBBOCK (UPI) — A part-time music theory and violin teacher at Texas Tech said today she does not expect any more from her students than she expects from herself. But that is asking a lot.

Mrs. Blair Cherry Jr. has a great deal to say about the demands music makes on its subscribers.

Chosen from a small number of American musicians to participate in master violin classes this summer under Franco Gulli in Siena, Italy, Mrs. Cherry thinks "those wishing to truly pursue music must devote an entire lifetime to it."

She said she is looking forward to the hard work that will be expected of her under the Italian master.

"Great demands should be made upon those seriously considering music," she said. "I found terrific demands were made upon me by Benno Rabino, a former teacher of mine who is now in New York, and by Erno Valessek, with whom I studied at the University of Texas at Austin."

She said Valessek was "Always kind, but very demanding." She was often required to prepare scales, exercises and large portions of solo material by memorizing a whole concerto in one lesson time during the year, and for juries required that I prepare at least three sonatas and one concerto," she said.

Such demands have apparently paid off, because Mrs. Cherry has launched an active career both as teacher and performer. She has solos with symphony orchestras in Monterrey, Mexico, Austin, Odessa, Midland, San Antonio, Odessa, Midland, San Antonio, Abilene, Denver and Dallas. She won the Odessa symphony youth contest at age 14 and in 1963 was a finalist in the Eric Sorantin and Abilene symphony solo competitions. She was later recipient of the Midland-Odessa young artist competition.
