Wants Town Talk by Betty

Congressman R. Ewing Thomson of El Paso has his first term from this, the 18th Texas district, faces opposition for reelection from another El Pasoan, Dan Jackson, attorney. Jackson announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination on a prohibition referendum platform. Thomson, always a dry, in an interview in Washington Tuesday with an El Paso Herald-Post correspondent, said: "If the Democratic national convention accepts a referendum plank I will give it my support. "Surely my record in congress is not to be measured alone by my vote on prohibition. "I believe it to be the highest duty of every representative to carry out the expressed will of his people. In 1917, when a member of the state legislature, I voted against prohibition; the people of El Paso county had voted on the question and I carried out their instructions. "I never have failed loyally and actively to support the Democratic party. In my recent votes on the liquor question I carried out my campaign pledge and nobody was deceived. "I have given active support to a balanced budget, economy, relief of unemployment and reconstruction. "I have aided in the securing of loans from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, including one to make a substantial payment to the depositors of the First National Bank. "I obtained a moratorium for the El Paso valley farmers; have fought for enlargement of Fort Bliss; the extension of Ft. D. A. Russell at Marfa; new federal buildings needed my district; a tariff on copper, a tariff on oil and Rio Grande rectification. "Notified of Mr. Jackson's announcement Rep. Thomson, a former speaker of the Texas house of representatives and mayor of El Paso, said: "This is the first I have heard of Jackson since the Republicans brought him to Washington nine years ago. I am curious to know his El Paso street address. The record here shows his residence to be 3029 Monument Ave., Richmond, Va. It is strange too, that he has paid no poll tax in Texas. "I am not going to leave my post of duty here until all important questions have been voted upon. I will then return to the district and make an active campaign. "To the meantime I urge my friends to organize in each county. "You're going to see folks all over Texas taking notice of Big Spring's "Carnival of Values" June 30, July 1, and 2. Most everything except a bull fight will be put on for entertainment of the visitors. Direct benefit to merchants, dur-

Refiners' Orders Increase As Date For Federal Tax On Gas Nears; Price Here 4 3-4 Cents

Belief that only refiners must pay the new government gasoline tax of one cent on and after June 21 is causing an increase of jobs' orders to refiners in Texas and other midcontinent states, according to local refinery officials. Further increase in orders is expected until June 21, said E. J. Mary, superintendent of the Corden refinery here. He added that he expected "just about the same old thing" after June 21. The orders are practically all for immediate shipment. Price of middle grade octane gasoline, which represents the steady movement, was 4 3-4 cents per gallon to refiners here Wednesday. Refiners are expecting a hearing to be held with the treasury department at Washington to rule that all gasolines sold to the public on and after June 21 must pay the extra one cent a gallon tax, regardless of whether it is in jobber or refinery tanks, according to advices from Tulsa. An appeal is going out to refiners to not lose their heads and keep runs of crude to stills in hand so that after June 21 no marked slump in demand may occur to wreck the wholesale refinery gasoline market.

Sheriff's Office Contains Nucleus Of Fine Museum, With Many Valuable Relics Of Early Days In West Texas

Besides boasting a force of officers feared by criminals, the local sheriff's office contains the nucleus of a fine museum. Historic relics combined with articles collected by department members in discharging their duties gives the main office an unusual atmosphere. Pistols, knives, daggers, sabres, rifles, "billies", saws, bullets bedeck the walls of the office. Some are rich in history, others shrouded in mystery, still others tell gruesome stories. Highly polished, a terrapin shell used one hundred and twenty years ago as a shaving mug, hangs amidst the varied collection. One rifle, the old army job, decorated the wall sixty seven years after it was turned out from the factory. It was discovered at Buffalo Gap, its stock rotted away and barrel rusted. Age of a British bull dog pistol, brought from England by the great grandfather of a Howard county citizen, is not determined. Another pistol was discovered on the old Slaughter ranch, minus a stock but with all other parts intact. Hanging over one of the doors is another revolver bearing marked resemblance to the old bone handle type. Close examination of the weapon proves it to be cleverly carved from wood. A broken, gnarled "riata" hangs stiffly from the wall. It is what is commonly referred to as the old time leather lariat. Near it is a faded portrait of Colonel William Cody, familiarly called Buffalo Bill. Underneath his picture is a bisected bison skull. To the right is a six-foot diamond back rattle snake skin and 31 rattles. Also reminiscent of the pioneer west is a leather bridle and one crudely woven of grass rope. All apparatus closely akin to an overgrown nut cracker is said to have served as a "de-horn" in years gone by. Bearing testimony to the days when bullets did not come in boxes but had to be made by the individual marksman, a rusted gadget used for moulding shells is nestled among the collection. Two stuffed birds lend a realistic air to the room. Almost out of place a pair of dainty Chinese slippers dangle in plain view. They were given by an old Chinaman to Harry Lee years ago. The former, then an aged man, told of how he wore the slippers when a child. Completing the varied collection articles set by officers clutter the wall. Razors, saws, black jacks, a "dope head's" equipment, hatchet, broken locks, antiquated handcuffs, assorted dice, game table cover, all appear in the mass. Standing aloof from the rest is a tall glass and a bottle, which once contained poison. A certain grave with a woman's name above it tells the story. Likewise a battered and twisted bullet mutely tells how the life of a man was snuffed out. History and mystery engulf the small museum. Many interesting tales are woven around different articles. Many more could be told, but it is all a matter of getting members of the sheriff's department to talk.

SPORTS ON PARADE

There is a happy look on the face of Lols C. Madison, the portly barber shop manager these days. No longer does he scowl at his implements of trade and regard a customer's ear with visible longing.

July 7, 8, and 9, as has been announced before and as will be announced again and again, have been set as the days for the "Carroll of Values" sportsdom will feature its choicest bargains also.

He plans a tournament with at least six local teams competing, the Tigers, Ackery, Coahoma, Forsan, Moody and a team of his own origination. There will be two games each day, with the championship decided on the third evening.

also passed down by the express office. The rotund former "Little Napoleon" of the city baseball league goes on to say that he would like for all veterans of that organization who desire to take part in the baseball contests to visit him and secure his orders and etc.

Bargain bills will be offered in three different sports. H. B. Dunagan, Jr., Magnolia Petroleum agent, and his trusted lieutenant, George Dabney, are working frantically on plans for the West Texas Tennis tournament.

Fred Stephens, president of the Big Spring Country Club, is in charge of plans for the exhibition golf match between four ranking West Texas, and predicts that it will be an epic farouche as far as Big Spring is concerned.

Frank Rose, one of the players to be brought here for the match, shot a 70 in a high wind over the Lamesa course against Snyder. Lamesa won 27 to 17.

George Zarfonetis, former Breckenridge and Texas A. and M. star, may be at McCamey next year, his younger brother, Billy announces. Great things in the way of local support is promised McCamey III if they secure an aide for the boyish Clyde Parks and Zarfonetis, a triple threat fullback that might have made All-conference had injuries and ineptibility not cramped his style.

"There was," a reader writes from Coahoma, "a rumor afloat that you would be a visitor in our city yesterday afternoon."

Night Flying Not New To Eighteen Men Who Will Pilot Ships On New American Airways Schedule Soon

Night flying will not be a new experience for the eighteen pilots and co-pilots who June 15 will begin flying planes of American Airways at night between the Pacific Coast and Texas.

"Flying at night will simply be a continuation of the work the pilots have been doing on each end of the Dallas-Los Angeles line since darkness usually overtake the westbound plane at Phoenix, Arizona, and the eastbound ship at Big Spring," Mr. Maxwell said.

Such flights, it was said, are possible through the completion of the elaborate night beacon and illuminated intermediate field system completed by the Department of Commerce last fall.

Forty per cent of the total amount of the air mail of the United States is flown at night, while better than twenty per cent of their passenger routes are covered between dusk and dawn, always statistics show. Night flights on routes other than American Airways include those from Los Angeles to Seattle, San Francisco to New York, Dallas to Chicago, Chicago to New York, Chicago to Miami, Atlanta to New York, St. Louis to New York and New York to Cleveland.

Congressman-At-Large Candidates Number 30 Few Hours Before Final Time For Filing Names On Ticket

DALLAS — Last minute filings added three candidates for Congress-at-large and one for governor, the latter and one of the former by petition as the Democratic primary ballot filing closed at midnight.

Friends of Wright Morrow, Houston, sent his application in as a candidate for governor by registered mail late in the day. He is in Houston and has not yet decided whether he will make the race.

If he decided to run he will bring the number of candidates for governor to 10 only one short of the record field of 1930.

B. D. Sartin, Wichita Falls, filed for Congress-at-large, Place 2, and A. H. King, Throckmorton, filed for Place 3. Friends of Cullen F. Thomas, Dallas, filed his name for Place 2. The three sent the number of congress-at-large candidates to 22.

Thomas said he would decide in a day or so whether to run.

While midnight was the deadline for filing, Albert Sidney Johnson, secretary of the state committee, said applications postmarked before that time would be accepted either here or by Chairman W. O. Higgins, at Houston.

DALLAS (UP)—Albert Sidney Johnson, executive secretary of the state Democratic committee, Tuesday received by mail a petition, registering Wright Morrow, Houston, as a democratic gubernatorial candidate. The petition bore twenty-seven names of prominent men in various sections of the state.

HOUSTON (UP)—A petition bearing the names of thirty-six citizens of Bexar county, asking that the name of Senator W. K. Hopkins of Gonzales be placed on the democratic gubernatorial ticket, was received Tuesday by Executive Committee Chairman W. O. Higgins.

DALLAS (UP)—Last minute filings sent the number of congress-at-large candidates to 30 and the number of aspirants for governor to eight Monday. Albert Sidney Johnson, secretary of the Democratic state executive committee, expected several more applications before filings close at midnight.

The applications of Frank Putnam, Houston, and J. E. Glenn, Copper, as candidates for governor were received Monday. The latter listed himself as a 55-year-old Bosque county farmer.

Earlier filers were: Gov. Ross Sterling, Houston; Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson, Austin; George W. Armstrong, Fort Worth; Tom F. Hunt, Wichita Falls; M. H. Wolfe, Dallas, and C. A. Frakes, Port Arches.

Twelve persons filed for congress-at-large, Place No. 1. They were: George E. Fayall, Alto; W. E. King, Williams, Fort Worth; R. B. Hood, Weatherford; Chesley W. Jurney, Waco; E. G. Senter, Arlington; Mrs. Alex L. Adams, San Antonio; Judah Leib Sobel, Liberty; F. O. Fuller, Houston; Ernest C. Ozro Cox, Austin; George W. Schleicher, Cuero; Lawrence Westbrook, Waco; Mrs. Ida M. Darden, Fort Worth.

Applicants for place No. 2 were listed as follows: Oscar F. Holcombe, Houston; J. H. (Cyclone) Davis, Sulphur Springs; W. H. Hawkins, Stephenville; Lamar Gill, Raymondville; C. J. Sulak, La Grange; Joe W. Bailey, Dallas; W. E. Myers, Fort Worth; John L. Meany, Houston; Mrs. Phebe Warner, Claude.

Nine persons also sought place No. 3. They were: Ben F. Harigel, Granger; Douglas W. McGreggor, Houston; Sterling P. Strong, Dallas; Mrs. Fred Real, Kerrville; V. Cargile, Houston; C. A. Mitchner, Harwood; Alfred William Sasse, Victoria; J. E. Boog-Scott, Coleman; Julian C. Hyer, Fort Worth.

Four had filed for the six-year abroad commission term. These were Commissioner C. V. Terrell, Austin; J. J. Patterson, San Antonio; Roy I. Tennant, Austin, and E. Satterwhite, Odessa.

Five were seeking the unexpired term of Commissioner Pat Neff, now president of Baylor University. They are: Ernest O. Thompson, Amarillo, recently appointed to the post; Ed T. Murphy, Livingston; C. A. Deware, Brenham; W. Gregory Hatcher, Dallas, and Olin D. Ibersson, Edna.

Commissioner J. E. McDonald, Waxahachie, and K. Terrell, Floydada, filed for commissioner of agriculture.

Clem Calhoun, Amarillo, filed for attorney-general and the application of Attorney General James V. Alfred was expected Monday night.

Lieutenant Governor Edgar Witt, State Comptroller George Sheppard, and State Treasurer Charles Lockhart were unopposed Monday morning.

The application of L. A. Woods, Waco, was the only one on record for state superintendent of public instruction, but one was expected from C. N. Shaver, now holding the post.

J. E. Hickman, Eastland, William Pierson, Austin, and Cole Spear, Austin, were the only candidates for associate justice of the supreme court.

F. L. Hawkins, Austin, had filed for judge of the court of criminal appeals.

J. H. Walker, Covington, was the only candidate listed for commissioner of the general land office.

A total of 59 candidates were listed today for offices upon which the state will vote. There were only 50 in 1930.

BERNARD — Rep. Sam Rayburn, Bonham, today had two opponents in his race for reelection. C. B. Randall, a former congressman and local business man, and Jess Morris, Greenville publisher and church worker, both have announced as candidates for the 5th district congress post.

line. Maybe he is too good. Maybe not. I won't say that of the criminal. Most men in the penitentiary are dissipated in one way or another, most of them were unprivileged, of subnormal intelligence and weak in many respects.

"Where do you learn right from wrong? From mother—and she is divine, of course, although I think she is a mother. From father when he's home. From the hired girl, the neighbors, from everybody. What do they know about it? They learned it from somebody else. If a man wants to do right he should do as he is told and then he will be able to sell prunes.

"Men are criminals because they can't help it. Should they be punished? Hinley, the great English poet, said, 'I am the master of my fate; I am the captain of my soul.' You aren't any such thing. You're not a deck hand on a raft.

"It may be necessary to restrain some men to protect society, but this should be done with kindness and care. When you think about equal punishment for everybody, you must think carefully. Everybody is different. Everybody's opportunity is different.

"See Hardness And Cruelty. 'I never have seen the time when people in power were so hard and cruel. They are spending more money than ever for prisons and making more laws to violate. They are spending the money for the victims of new crimes and poverty. Most of the victims have had no money, no chance. The people who go to prison are the poor. Only one out of every 100 in prison has been poor all his life.

"So long as we let a few rich men get all the wealth, there will be crime. Education? Why educate men in useless things. I learned all the state capitals. I never needed the information. I learned that Montpelier was the capital of Vermont and that it was on the Onion River. I never had use for the information except once. I was crossing a little ditch in a motor car. I knew I was at Montpelier. So I asked, 'How many of you know the name of this stream?' I alone knew it. I smiled it, too.

"Why waste a man's time. He wants to learn how to get along in the world. Teach him that. He is mis-educated, then the machine is put into competition with him. What chance has he? The machine should serve him. I like books. Most people don't. I lend books to my neighbors. They never read them and never return them. What's the use?

"Jail Instead of Help. 'Instead of bettering the human being's condition in life when he leaves the herd, we put him in jail. He departs from our ways because our ways are too hard.

"It is a mad world that permits poverty with the granaries full. No, I don't think the inmates of an insane asylum would do it. I don't know what to do. I am not clear on the matter. I do think we should have a more equal distribution of wealth. I don't know anything about Russia, but it seems to be the only country that is giving the downtrodden a chance."

"When Mr. Darrow had concluded, questions were asked. One of the first questions was, 'Do you believe in capital punishment?' Mr. Darrow simply said 'No.' A young man wanted to know why an able lawyer had spent his life keeping men out of jail when he himself had helped change the system.

"I suppose that means me," said Mr. Darrow. "I tried to change it when I was young. Nobody would listen. So I sought to snare a few unfortunates out of their plight. If today I thought I could do anything to change it, I would. I would seek even now to stir the mass, so sudden, so cruel."

Mr. Darrow will speak tomorrow night on "What I Have Learned in Seventy-five Years."

Darrow Talks On Crime And Punishment

Perfect Justification For Defending People Is Given

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—In the days of high stocks and agnosticism, Clarence Darrow, Chicago lawyer, would have filled the Community church. It was different here recently. Only half a crowd heard him deliver his perfect justification for defending anybody.

The subject, "Crime and Punishment," was a misnomer, perhaps. There were no criminals. There were merely exceptions to the type. There was no wrongdoing. There merely was expression of heredity and environment. There was no free will, no choice. Man was a carbon copy, nothing more.

There was not even an excuse for the restrained emotion with which Mr. Darrow sneered at the inevitable good man, the cruelty and ignorance of leaders of the day, at the futility of education and the church. He could not do otherwise, by his own philosophy. And those at whom he scoted his fine rillery were helpless, too. The wheels were turning, that was all. He had fought so long for the under dog that it seemed to him there were no other kinds of dogs.

Too Kindly to Be Satan. "Satan, himself," the Rev. Joseph Myers described him humorously in a recent introduction. He was too kindly to be that. But there was a diabolical upward twist of his eyebrows under the great dome of his head, a peculiar, knotted concentration between the eyes. His eyes, deepest in darkness, seldom glistened through. It was a face beaten by storms. Only the mouth was just and human and kind.

He moved his forefinger as he talked. His voice was thinner than of old and he coughed frequently. But otherwise he had not changed. His philosophy was unaltered.

"What do you know about crime?" he asked in a low voice. It is a word. It is a violation of law. Maybe it is the harmless crime of taking a drink, maybe the crime of murder. Perhaps murder is not always crime. Killing a bootlegger is considered a virtue.

"A crime for its name depends upon the place in which it is committed, the time, the prevailing ideas. It used to be a crime to be a Protestant. The picking to be 200 crimes punishable by death. One was the crime of icked pockets. The people who went to the hanging festival got their pockets picked.

Liquor Law Creates Crime. "In some federal penitentiaries, 85 per cent of the criminals are there for selling liquor. It wasn't a crime fifteen years ago. Most of the others are imprisoned for interstate transportation of stolen cars and interstate joy riding. Neither was a crime a few years ago. There are more people in prison than there ever were, but there are no more crimes being committed. More crimes are committed in winter than in summer and more in bad times than good times. Intelligent people starve before they starve and unintelligent people do the same thing by instinct.

There are many bad things not punished; many things not so bad that are. It still is a crime in some cities and states to violate the Sabbath. What's right for the Mohammedan is wrong for the Christian, if you can find one. The Mohammedans may have four wives. Is a thing right because the legislature says so? It doesn't know what's right and wrong and doesn't care. It wants votes. You may feel you're doing wrong when you're doing right. That's conscience, instinct. People say you're born with no knowledge at all and many of us die that way.

Animals Know Right. "Animals know it is right to herd—those that herd. The criminal animal is the one who gets out of the herd."

Shift In Poll Tax Payments May Hurt Jim

His Wife May Lose 75,000 Votes Because Of Changes

AUSTIN—Statistics that chronicle the inexorable rolling of Time's chariot this year plainly record that the Ferguson campaign for governor is due to lose over 75,000 votes from the physical shift in poll tax paying since 1930.

The story is in three brief chapters:

1. Counties carried by Mrs. Ferguson in 1930 this year paid 51,607 net fewer poll taxes than in 1930.
2. Twenty-four of the large number of counties carried by Governor Sterling in the second primary of 1930 paid 40,748 more poll taxes than then.
3. At least 80,000 new voters are casting their first ballots for governor since 1930.

Poll Declines Reported
Assume that Mr. Ferguson would share equally in the losses from the Ferguson counties—though the ratio of 1930 indicates his losses would be greater than his opponent's—and the figures show the Ferguson counties destined to lose 25,804 votes by reason of the decline in poll tax payments in the Ferguson counties.

In 27 counties giving Mr. Sterling substantial leads two years ago, and three of them showing poll tax declines this year, the same computation in these counties would give him an advantage of 18,957 votes in these few counties this year.

In the other 150-odd counties, where enough additional poll taxes were recorded to offset losses elsewhere Mr. Sterling's advantage factor would be about 20,000 votes.

His Wife May Lose 75,000 Votes Because Of Changes

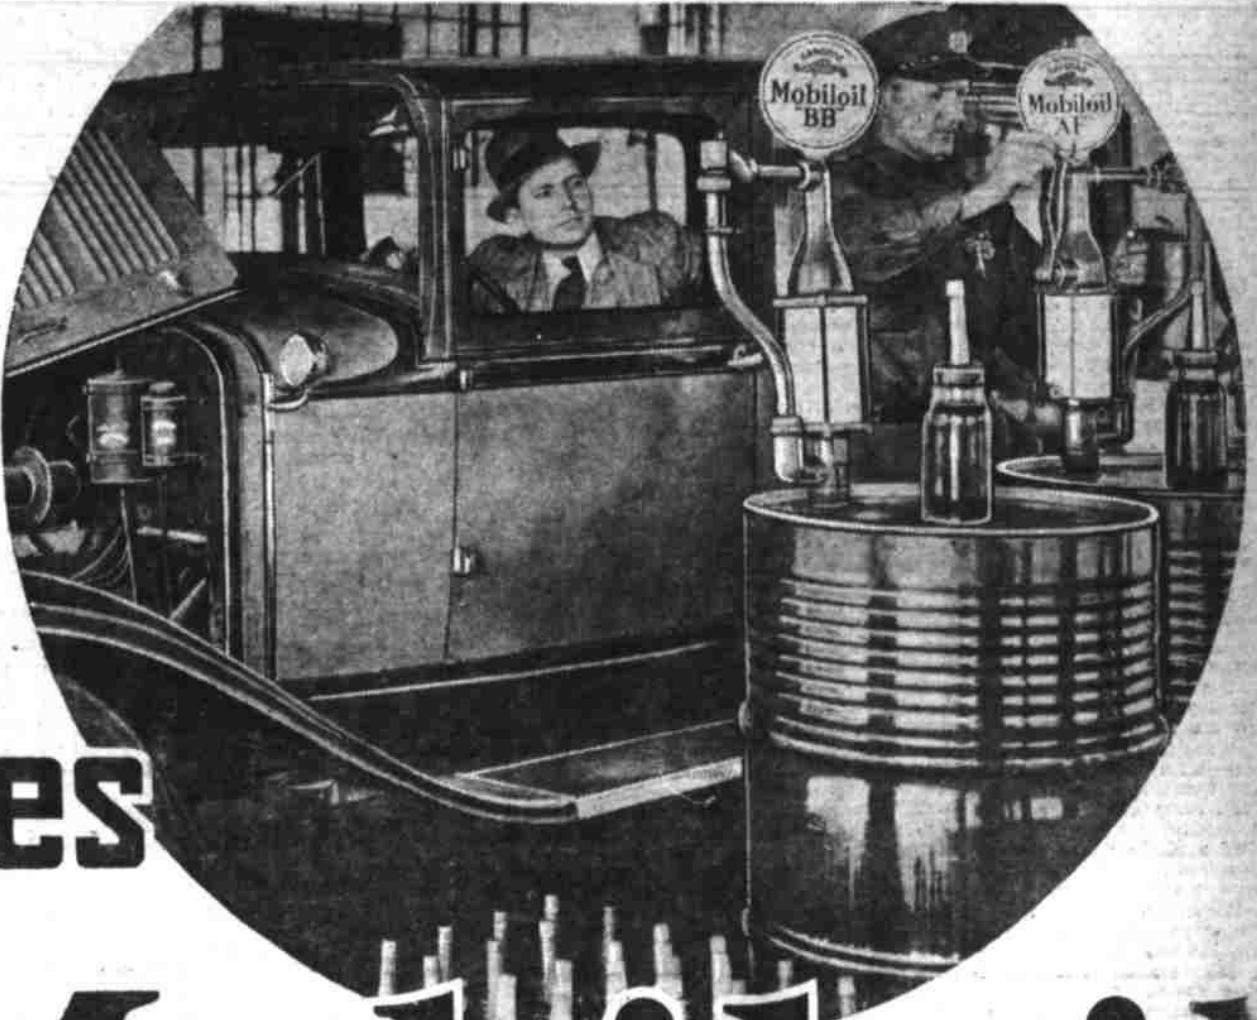

80,000 New Voters
Each year 40,000 new voters "arrive" for their first ballot, based on a 5-year-plus voting life. A liberal estimate would give Mr. Ferguson one vote out of four of this increment, under the present circumstances that he has neither been in or near power since these voters came to the age of the franchise. Out of the 80,000 votes then, there is a prospective loss

LEAD YEAR BRIDE

BEGIN HERE TODAY
 CHERRY DIXON, 19 and going to tell her mother she is getting to a club meeting but instead meets DAN PHILLIPS, newspaper reporter with whom she is in love. Her wealthy parents do not know she is acquainted with Dan. Cherry goes with him to interview a bank robber's sweetheart. She blunders into underworld headquarters and a bullet strikes her arm. Dan takes her to a doctor's office and then home. He is trying to explain what has happened when MR. DIXON appears. Dixon is very angry and brandishes a newspaper containing Cherry's picture and an account of the shooting. He orders Dan from the house.

Days pass and SARAH, Cherry's maid, discovers Dan has telephoned and been told the girl is out of town. Cherry steals out of the house, meets Dan and explains. He tells her he loves her. When Cherry arrives home her father is waiting and accuses her of having met the reporter. Cherry defies her father and he orders her to apologize or leave. She runs out of the house. Later that evening she finds Dan, tells him what has happened, and says, "Let's get married!"

They are married by a Justice of the Peace. Friends of Dan's find them and stage a celebration. Cherry and Dan manage to steal away from the party.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER X
 Cherry crossed the room and gave the window shade a tug. Bright morning sunshine was a fine thing, but too much of it was as bad as none. It blinded her. She tossed her head back, shaking the tangled mass of dark hair into becoming disarray. Then she sat down in the big chair, leaned back and surveyed the room. She made an amusing picture. Pulled about her and tied securely at the waist was Dan Phillips' old dressing gown. A strange purplish-red hue now, the dressing gown had once been a handsome brocade. It was many sizes too large. Cherry had rolled the sleeves back, but the shoulder seams reached almost to her elbows. Dainty lace trimmed lingerie showed where the dressing gown fell away. Her hooked pumps were tiny and narrow, her hose of the sheerest mesh.

Suddenly she jumped up and went to the dressing table. A sheet of paper lay there, a few words scrawled on it in pencil. Cherry picked up the paper and read. "Cherry—I love you. Be ready to have lunch with me. I'll call some time after 12—Dan."

She had read the words at least a dozen times. At first it had been a surprise to realize that never before had she seen Dan's handwriting. That was odd, and still it wasn't. There were so many things Cherry had yet to learn about this young husband of hers.

Her husband! The girl's smile became a dreamy sort of radiance. She caught a glimpse of herself in the mirror and stared, fascinated. Was that what love did to you? She seemed an entirely different person than she had been yesterday. Her worn-out dressing gown caught her eye and suddenly the smile became a rippling laugh. Of course she was a different person. Of course she was Mrs. Daniel Phillips!

"Oh, I'm so happy!" Cherry sang aloud. "I'm so happy!" She whirled in a dashing pirouette and flung herself on the bed.

Each morning at home Cherry had started the day with fruit, hot rolls and steaming coffee. Usually they were brought to her bedside on a tray. Sarah would be there to pour the coffee and ask if everything was as it should be. Sarah would bring a quilted satin breakfast coat and slip it about the girl's shoulders to keep her warm while she ate.

Sarah, bless her! Where was she and what was she doing now? What were Cherry's mother and father thinking of the way their daughter had run off the night before? Were the servants whispering and wondering what had happened? Did others outside the house know about it?

For an instant the girl felt a pang of guilt. Her mother would be worrying. Crying perhaps at this very moment. Cherry loved her mother. She loved her father, too—when he was not roaring out orders or frightening her. Perhaps she should write a note—

Cherry's chin raised and set in a firm line. No indeed! If she wrote they would imagine she was making for forgiveness. She could not do it!

The dainty platinum watch on the girl's wrist reminded her it was growing late. Almost 10:30. There would be an hour and a half at least before Dan telephoned.

"What about breakfast?" She decided not to go out for it; then almost instantly changed her mind. After all there was nothing to do until Dan called. A breath of fresh air and brisk walk would be good for her.

She discarded the dressing robe and hung it away. Dan's clothing crowded the tiny closet overflowing. As Cherry turned she realized what a really hideous room this was. Dark, dismal paper on the walls. Worn spots in the carpet. Two of the dressing table drawers were pulled out revealing garments tossed about. Newspapers and magazines in staggering piles littered the table and one of the chairs. The furniture was not only out of date; it looked as though it had not been dusted for days.

What a contrast to her rose and blue boudoir at home!

Cherry considered this a moment, then shrugged. "We won't stay here long," she told herself. "Dan said we could move and I'll begin looking at apartments right after lunch."

The beige crepe Cherry had worn the night before hung over a chair. She held it up, shaking her head. It was certainly not a costume to wear to breakfast in a restaurant. The tiny cap sleeves and becoming neckline were of lace, over which skillful French fingers had labored for long hours. Too elaborate, too distinctive in its rimple, unusual manner of cutting and sewing for the street.

Still there was no choice. Cherry slipped the frock over her head and snapped the fastenings.

Another note for her mental memorandum; she would have to buy some clothes.

With the polo coat pulled about her and the brown hat drawn down smartly Cherry set forth. Downstairs the hotel lobby, with its chandeliers still burning, looked exactly as it had the night before. A clerk she had not seen stood at the desk. Very self-consciously Cherry approached and left her room key.

She went out into the sunshine. The air was cool, bracing, but with that indefinable quality that never leaves any but a day of spring can last. Cherry breathed deeply, wondering why all the world was not out to enjoy the glorious morning.

She made her way to the restaurant, where she and Dan had gone the night before. At the corner she stopped and bought a newspaper. The want-ad pages might help her to find a place for her and Dan to live. Cherry had never read a want-ad, but she understood vaguely that people who had apartments to rent advertised them there.

An apple-cheeked waitress in a fresh yellow uniform smiled at Cherry and presented the menu card.

"Orange juice, coffee and toast," the girl ordered. She spread the newspaper to its full size and glanced at the first page hastily. A heading caught her eye.

MISS DIXON BRIDE OF NEWSPAPER REPORTER

It was only a paragraph. The brief report stated that Miss Cherry Dixon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Dixon of Sherwood Heights, and Daniel Phillips, reporter for the Wellington News, had been married the night before by Justice of the Peace Gunningham. The paragraph listed the schools Cherry had attended, adding that she was a popular member of the younger social set. Another sentence stated that Dan was on the News editorial staff and previously had been employed by the Sentinel.

Cherry was flushed and her eye bright as she read the last words. So everyone knew! Her father and mother must have seen that paragraph. Well, they would understand now that she had meant what she said!

Lost in these thoughts Cherry scarcely noticed when the waitress returned with her order. She remembered presently, drank the orange juice and coffee and nibbled at the toast. Then she paid her bill and departed.

She went directly to the hotel, anxious to hear from Dan. It seemed a long while before the telephone rang and his voice came over the wire.

"Hello, that you, Cherry?"

"Yes, Dan. I've been waiting for you."

"How are you, baby? Sorry I couldn't give you a ring earlier, but I've been chasing all over town. Listen, dear, we'll have to call off that lunch date."

"Oh, Dan!"

"It's bum luck, but there's no way out of it. I'm parked out here at the airport and there's no telling when we'll get away. Those two girl flyers were due half an hour ago and we'll have to wait till they land or word comes they've done. It wasn't supposed to be my assignment, but Grover is tied up at City Hall."

"But can't you—?"

"I can't do anything but stay here," Dan assured her. "I hate to disappoint you, honey, but I can't help myself. Try to find some way to amuse yourself and we'll make up for it with a bang-up dinner party tonight. Is that all right?"

Reluctantly she told him it was. Phillips said something that brought a quick smile to the girl's face and then the conversation was over.

Well—not only a long morning to herself, but the afternoon as well!

The newspaper in which she had intended to search for apartment addresses lay on the table, but suddenly Cherry's interest had waned.

She made up her mind to go shopping instead. There was less than $10 in her purse, but all her life Cherry had made purchases on charge accounts. Besides she simply had to have a dress. If she went to Maison Madeline she knew they would be glad to open an account for her.

She picked up purse and gloves and started for the door. On the way down in the elevator car Cherry revised her plans. She remembered Maison Madeline was expensive.

No, she would go to Stanley's, the big department store. Miss Lacy in the French room was always so pleasant and helpful.

Miss Lacy was equal to the emergency. She greeted Cherry effusively. Yes, she had seen the announcement of the marriage in the newspaper and thought it was romantic! An elopement of course. And what could she show the little bride today?

Cherry had set out intending to be economical. A practical woolen day dress was what she wanted. Something becoming, of course, but not fancy. Miss Lacy, beaming, whisked away to return with a frock of glowing spring green over her arm. Feather-weight to touch. Exactly right in size. The price was $65.

"I'm afraid," mumbled Cherry, "that's a little more than I wanted to pay."

Miss Lacy's brow lifted slightly. She said quickly that of course she had less expensive models. If Mrs. Phillips was interested in picking up a really remarkable bargain there was a little blue novelty intersu—

When Cherry departed almost an hour later not only the blue novelty mixture but a pointed silk buck and half a dozen dainty garments of flesh silk were being packed into a box to be delivered to the Bismark.

The bill totaled $92.70.

She stopped at a drug store to buy perfume soap and a jar of the face cream she always used at home. Four dollars and fifty cents on the cashier's check. Back in the hotel Cherry undressed, bathed and hurriedly made herself ready for dinner.

It was after five when she heard a quick rap at the door. Cherry rushed forward, beaming.

But it was not Dan Phillips at the other side of the door.

Secretary Mills advocated the president's proposal to expand reconstruction finance corporation capital $1,500,000,000 before the senate banking committee, and clashed with Senator Wagner (D., N. Y.) and others over merits of the democratic proposed public building program, charging it would be a drain on the treasury.

Earlier the senate banking committee approved the $300,000,000 section of the democratic relief bill for loans to states to prevent destitution, and continued consideration on the president's proposal to set up a system of home loan discount securities.

On the house side the rules committee voted to give the home loan discount bill preferred status and Chairman Poff predicted house action before adjournment.

Red Cross Relief The Fulmer measure to turn over to the Red Cross an additional 40,000,000 bushels of farm board wheat and 500,000 bales of cotton was approved by the house agriculture committee.

Secretary Mills said the way to "get relief is to start the private economic machine turning."

There's nothing wrong with the United States today except the worst case of nerves in history," he said. "We have got to restore confidence, but when you talk of breaking the depression with $300,000,000 for public works it is like telling a little boy to bring the Washington monument here."

Merchandisers' Bulletins

DAYTON—Matters affecting customers service do not rise to confront the manufacturers who have solved his major engineering problem by his attempts to market his product, says W. H. Newell, Frigidaire's vice president in charge of sales.

"When Frigidaire began the manufacture of electrically refrigerated ice cream cabinets, many years ago, it was forced to develop equipment which would provide constant zero temperature," says Mr. Newell. "Such a temperature is absolutely necessary for the proper storage of ice cream."

"This was a difficult problem because the electric refrigerator had been designed originally to supply considerably higher temperatures. Frigidaire solved it through use of a two cylinder compressor with reserve power sufficient to maintain a zero temperature the whole year round, twenty-four hours a day. Incidentally this compressor also combined the advantage of freedom from vibration with low operating costs. Consequently this company has always dominated this particular field where low temperatures are an absolute necessity."

"Since the two cylinder principle has proved its rugged dependability in extreme low temperature refrigeration, it has been designated as a fundamental feature of Frigidaire design. All this company's equipment, including the lowest priced household models, are equipped with a two-cylinder compressor, similar to those which meanlessly maintain zero temperatures in ice cream cabinets."

"Because this company solved a major problem first, Frigidaire users are sure of perfect refrigeration and an abundance of ice cubes, even in the hottest weather."

Richard Crooks has now been obtained for the arduous audience by the "Voice of Firestone." He will sing each Monday evening, starting June 6, over the nationwide NED Red Network and affiliated stations, at 7:30, E. S. T., and again at 7:30, Pacific Coast time. His engagement marks the second triumph of Firestone in signing a distinguished star of the musical world to appear for the first time on regular weekly broadcasts. The first achievement came when Lawrence Tibbett, the foremost baritone of the day, set a precedent for Metropolitan Opera singers by entering into a contract with Firestone for a prolonged series of performances on the air. Mr. Tibbett is about to receive on a three month trip to Europe, the first time, incidentally, that he has ever visited the Old World.

This is the second time within a week that public attention has been focused on Crooks. Just a few days ago, the Metropolitan Opera Company announced that it had been successful in obtaining him for next season. It also became known that the Metropolitan had been negotiating with Mr. Crooks for some years, but until now had been unsuccessful, due to the famous tenor's concert schedule.

Crooks is already a favorite with the large Firestone audience. During the winter and spring seasons, he made several appearances on this program as the guest artist, when Lawrence Tibbett was scheduled to sing at the Metropolitan. On these occasions Crooks won tremendous popularity. Thousands of listeners wrote in words of the highest praise.

In signing him as their regular artist, the Firestone company has endeavored to bring into American homes a voice as rich in tenor quality as the voice of Tibbett is in baritone excellence.

Crooks is extremely versatile and celebrated for his ability to sing popular and novelty songs with the same charm with which he renders the classics. His repertoire will have a wide appeal and include a song for everybody.

In ancestry and physical appearance, Richard Crooks is a typical well set up young American. He was born in Trenton, New Jersey, of American stock and stands six feet two. His career as a singer began at an early age. At eleven he was referred to as the "boy wonder soloist" of All Angels' Episcopal Church in New York. At twelve he shared honors with Schumann-Heink at a musical festival at Ocean Grove, New Jersey, where he sang before 14,000 and was quite calm until Schumann-Heink kissed him.

During the war he served with the 628th Aero Squadron and proved himself to be an excellent flyer.

Graduates At Mother's Day's Hostess Day In Girl Scout Little Houses Rotary Meet

Superintendent And Commencement Speakers Are Heard

"Our Graduates" was the theme for the Rotary Club program Tuesday noon, which was in charge of Grover Cunningham. Bruce Frazier presided in the absence of President R. T. Piner, who was reported ill.

Superintendent W. C. Blankenship of the Big Spring public schools delivered the formal talk on "Our Graduates," telling methods used in the public schools and other educational institutions designed to make it possible for the graduate to get the most lasting good from his schooling. As his guests for the day were two local graduates of the Big Spring High School of this year's class, Jarrell Pickle and Hudson Henley, who addressed the club.

Pickle used as his theme "Hearts Courageous," while Henley addressed the club on "International Health." These were the subjects the pair delivered at the annual commencement exercises several days ago. Another member of the class was present, L. A. Wright, Jr., who delighted the club with two violin solos, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Bruce Frazier. The numbers given were "Simple Anew," by Thome, and "Andante," by Gilek.

Emil Fahrkamp told of plans under way to celebrate inauguration of the night air mail planes Wednesday, June 15. He urged local Rotarians to lend their assistance by being at the airport Wednesday night at 9:30, where a celebration will be held. He also urged that everyone use the air mail service on that date, for both the morning and evening planes, so that Big Spring will have a good sized mail pouch for that particular day. He said that American Airways and U. S. postoffice officials would be on the evening plane, and that every one should turn out to greet them.

Visiting Rotarians for the day were B. J. Mims, Midland, W. A. Yeager, Midland, N. L. Peters, Lubbock, Mr. Broden of the Southern Ice & Utilities company, L. A. Wright, Houston, Henley, and Jarrell Pickle were guests of the day.

But the biggest benefit will be in future of the three-day program upon people of adjoining communities and counties.

If Big Spring has neglected anything it has been extension of her trade territory. Big Spring always has had more to keep her going within herself than most towns and hence has gone over and worked among people of other communities and counties far less than some of her neighbors.

Non-Competitive Awarding of Road Contracts Illegal

LITTLE ROCK, Ark (UP)—Road contracts numbering around 100 and involving an expenditure of some $3,000,000, issued on a non-competitive basis, were held illegal by the Arkansas supreme court.

Simultaneously Judge W. J. Waggoner, chairman of the highway audit commission, announced discovery of a new kind of "contract" which he called "extension agreement."

The audit commission chairman said he believed the supreme court ruling is broad enough to make these agreements illegal also. He said if they are found invalid the total of illegal contracts may be swelled to $6,000,000.

Rockefeller Personally In Statement Speaking On Pro Law

John D. Jr., Teetotaler Family, Favors Repeal

NEW YORK—John D. Rockefeller Jr., born and bred of teetotaler stock, has spurned the prohibition amendment and come out for its repeal.

His startling course, after years of moral and financial support of the dry cause, led anti-prohibition forces to see a tremendous impetus for a national referendum on prohibition, while drys charged him with erroneous conclusions on prohibition's effects and insisted they still would win.

Rockefeller made known his change of heart in a letter endorsing Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler's proposal for a repeal plank in the Republican national platform.

Head of the Standard Oil, prominent in church and philanthropic work, Rockefeller all his life has been an abstainer and an ardent worker for dry legislation. His father and grandfather were abstainers, and his mother, Rockefeller says in his announcement, was one of a band of ardent women who took prayer into the saloons to combat the evil of drink.

Reared in such tradition, he contributed to the Anti-Saloon League war chest and spoke for prohibition. Now, he sees prohibition as detrimental and favors its abandonment, leaving to later the working out of substitute plans.

Rockefeller had hoped, he told Butler, the 18th amendment would be generally supported by public opinion and the cause of temperance would be advanced.

"That this has not been the result," he wrote, "but rather that drinking generally has been increased; that the speakeasy has replaced the saloon, not only unit for unit, but probably two fold, if not three fold; that a vast army of lawbreakers has been recruited and financed on a colossal scale; that many of our best citizens, angered at what they regarded as an infringement of their private rights have openly and unabashedly disregarded the 18th amendment; that as an inevitable result, respect for all law has been greatly lessened; that crime has increased to an unprecedented degree—I have slowly and reluctantly come to believe."

The former ally of prohibition returned these further indictments against the 18th amendment with these suggestions:

"I am not unmindful of the blessings in the abolition of the saloon... but these benefits... are more than outweighed by the evils which have developed; evils which if not promptly checked are likely to lead to conditions unacceptably worse than they were before prohibition.

Prerequisite for repeal must be that all these evils be a prerequisite to the attainment of that goal."

If the 18th amendment is repealed, "sufficient time ought to be given before repeal became effective to permit the states by legislative action" to set up such safeguards and methods of control as will insure promotion of temperance.

Repeal should be submitted without alternative suggestions for control methods because "it will be so difficult for our people as a whole to agree in advance on what the substitute should be and so unlikely that any one method will fit the entire nation."

Rockefeller preceded his startling attack on the prohibition amendment with an explanation of the attitude of his famous father and himself, and an outline of the beliefs of his mother and grandmother which read:

"My mother and her mother were among the dauntless women of their day who, hating the horrors of drunkenness, were often found with bands of women of like mind, praying on their knees in the saloons in their ardent desire to save men from the evils that so commonly spring from these sources of iniquity."

Dry leaders generally held to the view that Rockefeller's desertion of their cause would not prevent their ultimate victory. Some regarded his action as that of "just another prohibitionist who changed his mind." Others however, by their denial of charges of failure made by Rockefeller, indicated they regarded loss of his support as serious.
