HOME TOWN TALK

By Beddy

O. H. WELL, there's just one more week of it.

Good, level-headed farmer of our county said Friday he understood Ross Sterling's road financing and tax relief plan originally was designed to place a tax on property, but because it would have been an unpopular issue this was changed to a gasoline tax only.

The gentleman was misinformed. The one reason the so-called Sterling road plan was devised was to relieve property in the various counties from taxation for building state roads. That was the one object, and the only one, and always has been.

This bond plan is the most misunderstood, the most maligned, the state that has ever confronted the state. It is simple but susceptible of being misrepresented easily, principally because of the anticipation of the average voter to such a large bond issue as has been mentioned.

THE fellow who always has opposed voting of county road bonds seems to be the one who is most opposed to the state bond plan, when in fact it meets the principal objection he has had to voting county bonds secured by taxes on property.

And this tommyrot about damaging the school fund is absolutely baseless. It has nothing whatever to do with the school fund.

It is not equitable for a farmer to have to pay as much tax annually to pave that road as one who lives right beside it. As Mr. Sterling said here Friday, a state road is not a local institution, but should be financed by the state.

Furthermore, it should be financed by taxing the traffic and the traffic only. That is just what this Sterling plan would do.

The fellow who hesitates to vote for Sterling because of the bond plan is running from a ghost, and from nothing real. He is running from a ghost for two reasons; first, because the plan would reduce instead of raising his taxes, and second, because whoever is elected governor will have nothing to do with putting the plan into effect. The people have got to do that through an amendment to the constitution.

ANOTHER thing we heard a good, level-headed farmer say this last week was that, although he had taken no part in the recent flurry about the milk ordinance that has not yet really gone into effect, he believed the city commission and business men ought to ask the farmers to come in and meet with them and there go over the entire ordinance in a business-like manner.

Which sounds pretty blamed sensible to us.

THE GUY who said Ross Sterling or his supporters had spent $1,000 in Howard county for political advertising in newspapers ought to be ashamed of himself for spreading things he doesn't know anything about. We know he is misinformed because Ross Sterling has not and neither have his supporters spent half that much. They have spent about a fourth of that amount in all Howard county newspaper, together.

Ross Sterling himself has not spent a penny in this newspaper. Some of his West Texas supporters spent something like $150 or $200 worth in the first primary campaign but not one penny since then.

Lots of folks vote for Jim Ferguson just because they are easy prey to just such unfounded, wild-eyed statements as that.

JUDGE Jim Cunningham who speaks here Monday night for Mrs. Ferguson is a seasoned old political warrior and an attorney of widespread renown. He knows his stuff when it comes to speaking for Jim. The Ferguson folks picked a good one when they got him.

SOUTH SEA STEAMER IN DISTRESS

300 Aboard Waterlogged Vessel Off Islands

By The Associated Press

Approximately 300 men, women and children passengers and crew of the Union Line Steamer Tahiti which became waterlogged and disabled in the South Pacific 460 miles southwest of Rarotonga, Cook Islands, were anxiously awaiting Sunday the arrival of the Norwegian Freighter Penybryn, nearest of four vessels in that general vicinity rushing to render assistance.

Order Revoked

Reports received Saturday in San Francisco direct from Suva by the Associated Press and by the Matson Navigation Company from its steamer Ventura said it on board had taken to lifeboats and abandoned the Tahiti.

A report from Wellington, N. Z. at 7 a. m. Sunday, New Zealand time, (4 p. m. eastern standard time Saturday) said the mater of the disabled ship had countermanded the order to take to lifeboats and arrival of the Penybryn was expected Sunday afternoon, New Zealand time. Transfer of passengers and crew to the Penybryn was to take place before dark.

The Tahiti, one of the largest ships plying the Pacific, left Wellington for San Francisco August 12 with 175 passengers and a crew of 142. It was due in San Francisco August 29.

The vessel got into trouble when it lost its starboard propeller and was damaged by heavy seas. The cause was not ascertained. The number 4 hold began to leak early Sunday, New Zealand time, (9:30 a. m. E. S. T., Saturday) and Captain A. T. Totten and master of the ship ordered all aboard to lifeboats. It was this order that was countermanded, presumably when it was realized the vessel would remain afloat until the Penybryn could reach it. In addition to the Penybryn three other vessels were rushing to the Tahiti. They were the Matson liner Ventura, en route from Suva; the Tufao, diverted from the Fiji Islands, and the Tagne, en route from Mangia. The Ventura was expected to reach the Tahiti Sunday night, New Zealand time.

MARGINAL WELLS ARE CONSIDERED

Small Producers May Be Released From Proration

AUSTIN, Aug. 16. (AP)—Proposing to save thousands of small operators from the possible ill effects of the statewide oil curtailment order, effective Aug. 27, the state railroad commission today gave notice of a hearing here Aug. 25 on an order to exempt marginal wells from proration.

L. D. Parker, chief of the oil and gas division of the commission, drew up the order, which divides marginal wells into three classifications, all three based principally on the expense of obtaining the oil from the ground.

The order proposes that the following wells be classed as marginal producers:

Wells producing 6 barrels or less per day from 2,000 feet or less.

Producing properties which have well producing an average of twelve barrels a day or less from 2,500 to 3,000 feet.

Wells producing 20 barrels or less from below 3,500 feet.

It was also proposed that marginal wells be exempt from any curtailment necessary under the common purchaser law, by which a pipe line company is required to purchase in pro rata quantities from all producers in a field.

Marginal wells are those which have nearly depleted, so that any curtailment possibly would cause their extinction.

The hearing will be held in conjunction with the statewide proration hearing, scheduled for two days before the curtailment order becomes effective.

TOM SLACK DIES

OKLAHOMA CITY, Aug. 16. (AP)—The oil fraternity mourns the passing of one of its foremost and spectacular members in the death at Baltimore early today of T. B. Slack, known as the "king of wildcaters."

BALMORHEA MEN HERE

J. H. Walker, editor of the Balmorhea Valley News at Balmorhea, and nine other residents of that place, 240 miles west of Big Spring, motored here Saturday to attend the Sterling rally.

Others in the party were G. B. Finley, R. L. Boone, Ogden Wilson, J. R. Titus, E. A. Humphries, T. M. Delaney, C. R. Cross, Bill Moore, Lacy Pittman.

STERLING IS HEARD HERE IN ADDRESS

Senator Woodward Also Speaks; Crowd Is Large

Ross Sterling, candidate for governor, addressed one of the largest day time political gatherings in the county's history here Friday afternoon at the Ritz theatre and with frequent energetic cheering of his hearers in his ears went away with the expressed assurance of many local observers, supporters of both candidates, that his cause had been materially strengthened in this section.

Men and women of Big Spring and Howard county were joined in the crowd by voters from a number of other communities, including two carloads of men from Balmorhea, who drove 240 miles to hear the candidate. Sterling City, Stanton, Garden City, Midland, Odessa, Colorado, Sweetwater and other places were represented.

The crowd completely filled the theatre, which has a seating capacity of 1,200. Many stood both in the balcony and downstairs and from 75 to 200 stood in front of the building and listened to the addresses via the loud speaker equipment installed for the occasion.

Woodward Heard

State Senator Walter Woodward, whose vigorous espousal of the Sterling candidacy has made him one of the foremost political figures of the year in Texas, and Judge R. E. Taylor of Wichita Falls, former United States district attorney, were with Mr. Sterling, the former addressing a typical Woodward speech preceding the address of the candidate himself. F. P. Sterling, brother of the candidate, was on the stage. He was enroute to California with his son.

It was quite evident at the very outset of the meeting that the crowd not only was there to learn something of this man Sterling but that a large majority of those present were "with" him. Cheering broke out no less than twenty-five times during the 95 minutes of speaking.

As Garland Woodward of Big Spring finished his introductory speech for his brother, Walter, a man in the rear of the hall piped up with a "hurrah for Jim."

How many pardons do you want? Garland Woodward shot back.

Later, during Walter Woodward's address the same voice was heard again. That was the signal for a biting exhortation of the Ferguson record by the speaker, who told his heckler that he would silence him before he finished.

When Woodward had finished reciting data concerning pardons issued during Mrs. Ferguson's administration he challenged the vociferous one to "stand up like a man and yell 'hurrah for Ma' now if you still feel that way."

Only silence answered his challenge.

Throughout the remainder of the program it was a very attentive audience, which frequently cheered the speakers and occasionally

Ross Sterling's Bollworm Position Again Expressed

ABILENE, Aug. 16.—As governor of Texas, Ross Sterling would heartily favor legislation to compensate West Texas farmers for pink bollworm losses, he told the Abilene Reporter-News yesterday.

Asked for a statement of his attitude, Mr. Sterling, who spent an hour here, dictated the following: "I thought I made my position clear at Lamesa, but will say again that I believe the cotton growers in the regulated district of West Texas are entitled to compensation, and should have it without delay. They are entitled to relief as a matter of simple justice, since they have suffered these losses while protecting the balance of the cotton belt from the eastward encroachment of the pink bollworm. As governor of Texas I would heartily favor enactment by the legislature of proper and adequate relief measure carrying compensation. Similar relief, I recall, was given to hay farmers of the coast belt because of the ravages of the foot and mouth disease, and if it was right then and there it is right now and here in West Texas."

Candidates Catch Breath Today And Prepare For Final Speeches As West Texas Invasion Closes

BY R. W. BARRY

Associated Press Staff Writer

Within five days of the end of the long, winding trail—and the "pot of gold"—two weary but confident candidates for the democratic gubernatorial nomination had reached another breath-catching Sabbath preparatory to the final drive this week for the votes that will go into the ballot boxes next Saturday.

Only Ross S. Sterling of Houston and Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson of Austin of the eleven entries of last spring had survived the ordeal, the others having dropped by the wayside three weeks ago when the first primary eliminated all except the chairman of the state highway commission and Texas' first woman governor who was defeated for reelection in 1926.

Mrs. Ferguson had become a candidate after the state supreme court held that her husband, James E. Ferguson, a former governor, too, was ineligible to ever again hold office of trust and emolument because of the state senate's decree of 1917 removing him from office after a trial on impeachment charges. She had done little campaigning, but her husband had left no stone unturned for "Ma," as she became familiarly known during her tenure.

Both were claiming a majority of the votes of that section cast in overwhelming numbers for Senator Clint C. Small of Wellington, who was third in the first-primary free-for-all.

Leak In Reservoir Causes Temporary Water Shortage

Shortage of water in Big Spring Saturday morning was explained by City Manager V. R. Smitham, Saturday night.

He declared the huge reservoir had developed a leak in the bottom of the tank and it was necessary to drain the structure to make repairs.

According to Smitham between 20 and 25 gallons of water a minute was being lost through the leak.

The crack was repaired.

$250 TAKEN POLICEMAN CHASES MAN

Army Store Scene of Saturday Night Job

A lone bandit, neatly dressed and young, robbed the Army Store, 113 Main Street, Saturday night at 8:50 o'clock of $250 in cash and checks, and escaped after Night Policeman Mosely chased him through an alley between Main and Runnels Street. The youthful hijacker made his way to the Texas and Pacific yards and outdistanced the officer. No shots were fired by Mosely.

According to M. Preger, owner of the store, he was alone in the establishment and was preparing to close when the youth entered. He purchased underwear and tendered a five dollar bill in payment. As Preger opened the cash register the bandit told him to "put them up and I mean it."

The robber forced Preger to place the cash drawer on a counter. He took approximately $200 in cash and $50 in checks, Preger said.

After the robbery the youth went through the front door with the owner following. As he reached the sidewalk, Preger saw Mosely standing on the sidewalk and pointed out the bandit. The youth fled into the lighted alley with the night policeman giving chase. He threw away the bundle containing the underwear. It was later found by Sheriff Jess Slaughter and Deputy Andrew Merrick, when they were informed of the robbery 30 minutes after.

Preger described the bandit as being dressed in a blue suit, white shirt and necktie. He could not remember whether he wore a hat or cap. He weighed between 125 and 150 pounds, Preger said.

Mrs. Preger, who works with her husband in the store, had gone to a nearby grocery store at the time of the robbery.

BRILLIANT PAIR AT RITZ IN "MANSLAUGHTER"

MR. MARCH AND MISS COLBERT ARE FEATURED

Since its first appearance in 1922, Alice Duer Miller's best-seller novel, "Manslaughter," has become an American classic. Now it has been made into a thrilling, all-talking melodrama, with Claudette Colbert and Fredric March in the leading roles. "Manslaughter" will feature the Ritz theatre program today, Monday and Tuesday.

Tragedy, Love
Modern, up-to-date, "Manslaughter" is an introduction to the careless, carefree life of the wealthy; their gay parties, their nerve-racking sports, their light, laughing love affairs. But it is also a grim melodrama that shows how a beautiful daughter of wealth becomes a conscious woman by means of a great tragedy and a powerful love.

Claudette Colbert, who has established herself as a moving picture favorite in three previous successes, "The Lady Lies," "The Big Pond" and "Young Man of Manhattan," here has a role that calls for all her youth and beauty and great acting talent. "Manslaughter" is considered to be one of Paramount's outstanding pictures of the season.

Miss Colbert, as the petted society beauty, falls in love with Fredric March, young, handsome, ambitious district attorney, and attempts to twist him around her finger just as she has dozens of other suitors. March is of different stamp, however, and remonstrates with her against her thoughtless, selfish life. Arrested for speeding, she bites a traffic policeman. March tries to tell her that she is contributing to the ruin of the man by such action. She laughs at him.

Her maid is convicted of stealing and the society butterfly is too lazy to lift a finger to save the girl from a stiff prison sentence. Fast automobile driving is her greatest pleasure, but, when in one of these escapades, she kills a traffic policeman, she is partially awakened to a sense of responsibility. March, as district attorney, has to prosecute her for the crime and she is sent to prison. Her love for March turns to hate, but life in prison shows her the futility of her former life.

March, too has had a brilliant screen career since leaving the stage. He has appeared in more than eleven Paramount pictures, one of the most recent being Ruth Chatterton's "Sarah and Son." George Abbott, famous stage director, who directed and acted in one Broadway production of his own play, "Those We Love," during the past season, and who made such famous pictures as Moran and Black's "Why Bring That Up?" directed the picture.

CANBERRA (AP)—The cornerstone has been laid here for a Roman Catholic cathedral to cost $2,000,000. The ceremony was attended by Prime Minister Scullin and Commonwealth Treasurer Theodore, both members of the faith, and many church dignitaries.

A motor truck equipped with a vacuum device has been designed for removing ashes from large buildings without handling.

HARRY RICHMANN, BRILLIANT BROADWAY ENTERTAINER, TO APPEAR AT QUEEN THEATER

One of Broadway's most brilliant personalities comes to the screen world for the first time in "Puttin' on the Ritz," the United Artists all-dialogue musical extravaganza which opens its local engagement Wednesday at the Queen Theatre. That personality is Harry Richman, perhaps the most versatile of all the masters of song and comedy along the famous street of entertainment.

For three years the star of George White's "Scandals," Richman is celebrated in many ways. His golden voice has started many popular songs on the way to success. His phonograph records sell more copies, according to music houses reports than those of any other popular singer. His voice and his wit have made his night clubs the most exclusive afterhours resorts in New York City. He is a popular entertainer on the radio, and a headline attraction during his occasional brief engagements in vaudeville.

In "Puttin' on the Ritz," he adds another testimonial to his versatility by adapting himself to the medium of the talking screen. Although the media mix new, it was not particularly difficult for Richman to learn its technique. Before realizing that he was a singer as well as a pianist, Richman had considerable experience on the legitimate stage, playing on stock companies both east and west. "Puttin' on the Ritz," indeed combines two great popular musical personalities, for several of the songs Richman sings in the picture were especially written for him by Irving Berlin, who cut short a European trip on a call from Joseph M. Schenck, and travelled a good many thousand miles to lend a hand on the picture.

"Puttin' on the Ritz" is an original story by John W. Considine Jr. The dialogue was written by William K. Wells, prominent playwright who established himself among Hollywood's foremost dialogue writers with his work in "The Cock-Eyed World."

Considine's story, as a matter of fact, closely parallels Richman's own experiences in the world of the theatre, although it was not written with the star's background in mind. The plot traces the career of its principal character from an obscure vaudeville player to a musical comedy and night club favorite.

Into the picture has been woven the authentic atmosphere of small-time vaudeville, night clubs and backstage in the glittering New York musical revues—an atmosphere familiar to both writers of the story and the players in the picture.

James Gleason, noted as both stage star and playwright, plays a role of color and humor as the small-time vaudeville player, partner of the principal character. Gleason, whose brilliant dialogue sparkled through his "Is Zat So?" and "The Shannons of Broadway," added many original lines and comedy touches to his role in "Puttin' on the Ritz."

A complete revue, patterned after those made famous by George White and Siegfried, was staged as a background for Richman's scenes on the stage. Two complete dancing choruses were assembled and

JACK OAKIE TO PLAY AT RITZ

The happiness boy's all set to give you plenty of laughs for your money in "The Sap From Spracuse," the Jack Oakie starring vehicle which will be shown at the Ritz theatre here Wednesday and Thursday.

Poor but happy in this picture the grinning comic of the screen wise cracks and laughs in every scene. He inherits oodles of money, takes a boat to Europe and aims for sowing his wild oats.

But he is taken for a prominent engineer—that's where the fun begins and the laughs start in this Paramount New Show World success.

'Trigger Tricks' Is Gibson Play

Hoot Gibson lives up to his old reputation for riding slambang into all sorts of entertaining trouble in "Trigger Tricks," his latest western action picture for Universal, which opens at the Ritz Theatre Friday and Saturday.

This time Hoot takes it upon himself to settle a war between sheep men and cattle men. The fact that the principal sheep ranchmen and cattle men. The fact that the principal sheep rancher is a beautiful girl gives plenty of opportunity for romantic interest.

Hoot displays exceptional ability along the lines of strategy in bringing the sheep and cattle war to an end. What with riding and fighting and various clever schemes, he makes "Trigger Tricks" one of the outstanding pictures of his career.

There is plenty of good hearty comedy, of the famous Gibson brand. The picture is exceptional for its scenic beauty, as well as for the rapidity of its action and the dramatic qualities of the plot. Gibson's role is ideally fitted to his abilities, and he gives a splendid performance from start to finish. Charming Sally Eilers plays the role of the jail sheep rancher, to whose aid Gibson chivalrously rides. Miss Eilers is both beautiful and appealing in an excellent role.

Highly commendable performance also are given by the rest of the notable cast, which includes Robert Homans, Jack Richardson, Monty Montague, Neal Hart, Walter Perry and Max Asher. Reeves Eason did an exceptional piece of directing producing a smooth-running picture holding interest at all times. Eason also wrote the story and prepared it for the screen.

George O'Brien Is Lumberjack

For those who like action and plenty of it, in their film plays, "Rough Romance," Fox Movietone epic of the great outdoors directed by A. F. Erickson, is ideal! From the time when George O'Brien, as a stalwart young lumberjack, witnesses the murder of an old trapper by that heaviest of heavies, Antonio Moreno, to the final moment when his sweetheart, Helen Chandler, rests happily in his arms, "Rough Romance" is just one succession of thrilling, amazing incidents played against a background of snow-covered forests and roaring torrents which will delight all who love the color and beauty of open country.

"Movements of life!" declared A. F. Erickson, the director, in commenting upon his picture recently, "and if it is true that all pictures should be filled with swift, smooth-flowing action how much more so is it true of a picture like this, dealing with life as it is lived by sturdy, simple men whose workshop is all out-doors!"

Some of the high spots of "Rough Romance," which will be at the Queen theatre here Monday and Tuesday, include a thrilling race between two teams of malamute sled dogs, a rough and tumble free-for-all battle between loggers and trappers at a logging town "jam-boree," and a hair-raising gun-battle between O'Brien and Moreno.

'ARIZONA KID' ON RITZ BILL

In "The Arizona Kid" which will be shown Friday and Saturday at the R & R Ritz theatre we again see Warner Baxter in the role which won for him the award of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, that of O'Brien's Cisco Kid, formerly introduced to us in "In Old Arizona." And, while this production is not as good as its predecessor, the romantic figure of the Kid, played in the best Baxter manner, gives it more than sufficient charm, humor and interest. It takes the story a long time to get started, at least as far as its main action is concerned, but the irrelevant incidents are packed with funny dialog and situations. Especially prominent both physical and audibly, in these laugh-provoking sequences, is Mrs. Jimenez as Fulga, the Kid's housekeeper. Five thousand dollars reward is offered for the capture of the Arizona Kid, stage coach robber, dead or alive. He is very much alive in a small Utah mining town, where, with the help of two other Mexicans, he has been digging gold from an abandoned claim. His real identity is unknown to the sheriff and cattlemen, who have not yet received his photograph from Arizona, the scene of his former unlawful exploits. Lorita, a pretty Mexican entertainer at the saloon, is very much in love with him, and resents the intrusion of the blonde Virginia Hoyt, who seems to have usurped her place in his affections. Comes a day when the Kid, is followed to his secret mine by Nick, who pretends to be Virginia's brother but is really her husband. Nick kills the two Mexicans and places the blame on the Kid, whose identity he reveals to the sheriff. Loreta warns the Kid in time to make his escape, taking her with him. The entire cast supporting Baxter is to be commended upon a consistently capable performance. MANTUA, Italy (AP)—One of Vergil's ancient dramas is to be performed here in connection with "Mantua Week" as a part of the celebration of the 2,000th year of the old Roman poet. This city was Vergil's birthplace. Poland's coal resources are estimated at 62,000,000,000 metric tons, contained in an area of 5100 square kilometers.

Politicians Just Like Spoiled Kid, Says Will Rogers; Henry Allen's Victory Called Break For Hoover

A politician is just like a spoiled kid.

BY WILL ROGERS

Well all I know is just what I read in the papers. And outside of the thermometer reports, there just aint much in the newspaper nowadays. This heat thing accompanied by drouth has had everybody pretty bad scared up. Mr. Hoover didnt go away on his vacation as expected. He got right after it. Course there is not much a man can do when its heat that's bothering us. He can advise everybody to sit in the shade and avoid the sun as much as possible. Then if its rain they need why advise them to raise crops that dont need much rain.

Kansas had an election a week or so ago, and Mr. Hoover seemed mighty pleased when his backer from there was nominated by a big majority. It was thought Kansas on account of being a sort of an Amateur Farming State might go against the Administration because the heat had spoiled the crops, but they didnt, they voted for a good friend of mine, Henry Allen. (Well he is a friend of Hoover too.) Henry is an old Crony of William Randolph White, only Henry gets elected. Henry had been in Washington as a stop gap Senator and eventually did pretty good. He was about the best dressed Senator there. Course thats not much of an accomplishment, as he could be that and still be taken up for indecency among good Society.

So take it all in all it looks like Mr. Hoover is going into the late summer pretty well entrenched. Course the Southern Republicans have broke out against him, which would be expected, for there must be something the matter with a Southerner that would be a Republican, so they are naturally in the observation ward all the time anyway. There is some Guy down there named Mann, and he hasent got quite all the appointments that he expected for his Campaign Monday and he is out for the Presidents seal in 22. But by that time may by Mr. Hoover will appoint him on some Commission and he will be all O. K. again. A Politician is just like a spoiled kid. If he feels that his stick of candy is not the longest why he will let out a yap that will drown out the neighborhood.

Mr. Coolidge is still going along, knocking out his 150 words a day. I am sorry I ever started that idea of wiring in a little dispatch every day on current events. We will have everybody in the world trying it before long. But he has had some mighty nice reading and some sound advice. Not that anybody is interested in advice whether he sound or not. In fact the sounder it is the less it received. But he has done a good job for Mr. Coolidge, and I hope he keeps it up. Course it will be against him if he ever wants to run for anything, but there is no job that pays as good as it does, so why would anyone want to run for anything. No Columbian was ever elected to anything any time any place.

This conducting a column is considered a kind of a low grade type of human endeavor. Its not classed among what might be called the Arts. Its just a kind of a stop gap to keep the Coyote from the floor-step, and as a dignified profession its sorter null and void. Its just sorter in the papers to break your jump over to the advertising pages. But while it does not bring home the Literary praise it does fetch in some buck-wheat cakes accompanied by bacon. It can be smered at (ill meal time); then it has its good points.

There has been a good deal of trouble out in the Dakotas about the history that Mr. Coolidge was supposed to write on a rock. It was to run 500 words and give the history of America and still not go into details. Well 500 words dont allow you much history. Course we never had much history, but like all Nations we think we have. While we cant trace our Ancestors back any further than you can trust a Congressman, why we naturally think we are saturated with "Tradition" when as a matter of fact its only payments on objects that we are immersed in.

Well the Sculptor didnt like the history that our ex-president had cooked up, so he made as we say in the eighth art (the Movies), why he made some re-taken on the manuscript. It seems that Mr. Coolidge had with an eye to future campaigns given our History from a Republican standpoint. There had been democrats engaged in our history but only in the capacity of Villians. We had reached our present state of taxation by the far-sightedness of the Republican organizations. Well this Gutsom Borglum, who is a foreigner by birth, but an Atlanta, Georgian, by argument, he had studied his history of our land from the standpoint of Stone Mountain and Major Cohen and Congressman Upshaw. He believed that Lee, Davis and Jackson participated in our early escapades, while Mr. Coolidge took the view that we had reached our present indebtedness by the sole aid of the Grundys, the Reeds, the Lodges and the Vares. He had taken his history of America from the Congressional Record, while Gutsome wanted his from the Atlanta Constitution. Coolidge believed that Jefferson was a fictitious character, and that the income tax was entirely due to Alexander Hamilton (the inventor of a time lock safe).

Well, poor Dakota didnt know what it was all about, all the interest they had in the matter was to furnish the Mountain. They just wanted something that a Tourist could read, or have read to him. In fact the more controversy there would come to read. What constituted our early history didnt mean a thing to my old friend Beulow and his co-horts. The Dakotas just said: "We got the rock. Frier an Almee McPherson sermon on it just so somebody will burn out his break hands to come and see it." If they leave the Coolidge version on there, they should advertise "Come and see the Republican history of America in 500 words." (Copyright, 1930, by the McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

It is difficult to believe that Senator Pittman is serious in making such a proposal, but it is no more preposterous than the project he carried through congress in the war period. When the proposal was made to help England solve its exchange problems, with India by selling 300 million ounces of United States dollars to England for shipment to the orient, Senator Pittman persuaded congress to authorize the United States treasury to purchase enough domestic silver at a dollar an ounce to replace the silver dollars sold to England.

EVERYDAY QUESTIONS

Answered By
Dr. S. Parkes Cadman

Questions from readers are answered daily by the Rev. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, Radio Minister of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. Dr. Cadman seeks to answer inquiries that appear to be representative of the trends of thought in the many letters which he receives.

Pittsburgh, Pa.
Is it not true that capitalism is sure to fall and a more just system of economics prevail? I am a Socialist and insist that you face this issue. The old theory that workers must abolish the capitalist economic order is strenuously advocated by those who believe as you do. And I freely concede that Socialists have as much right to express their views in lawful ways as capitalists, industrialist or any other group.

But you overlook the fact that in destroying capitalism you would put an end to a most valuable instrument for human betterment. More, until now it has been an indispensable instrument. None will deny its follies and blunders. But as yet no other adequate medium of economic control and distribution has been found to take its place.

Nor is it true, as your letter contends, that all capitalists are corrupt, or that profits are their sole consideration. On the contrary, an increasing number regard public service as superior to private interests. It is our business to cultivate this temper and help to find a way to the souls of rich and poor alike, with the determination that wealth shall be wisely administered in behalf of the greatest good for the greatest number. This result cannot be accomplished without arbitrary responsibility and sagacious direction, two elements which are not any too common.

I personally believe that capitalism is neither senile nor outward, and that it has a splendid future, provided it is employed in the spirit I have indicated.

Buffalo, N. Y.
What do you think about women in business? I still hang on to the old-fashioned idea that they should be the home-builders and leave business to men.

You remind me of the philosopher who was so absorbed in his reflections that he did not know Napoleon's invading legions were thundering through his city. There are eight and a half million workers in the United States alone, and many millions more in other lands than ours. So what you say is simply lost in the rush of their economic strength. The great war gave a tremendous impetus to their employment.

They add vastly to the nation's wealth, productive power and industrial progress. Their earning capacity could not be obliterated without gravely disturbing the general welfare. In tasks not beyond their physical ability they show a skill and deftness which insure their permanency as self-sustaining units. It is useless for men to protest against their presence in the business world. They have a permanent place there because they have substantial economic values. But women have to cultivate the sense of equality in commercial relations, and insist that true womanliness means constancy in such relations as it does for those of the domestic hearth. No woman can succeed in business who uses her sex as a basis for securing concessions which would not be accorded to a man selling the same merchandise.

Read the pamphlet on "Woman in Business" by Doris E. Fishman. It is a reprint from "The Ladies Home Journal" for January, 1930. She treats the question with sound judgment, based on an intimate acquaintance with the facts. Clearly enough, the male monopoly in certain lines of business is shattered

After the invasion of female help has settled down, selective processes will begin. These can be trusted to weed out the fappers, the flirts and the ill-prepared. It is safe to predict a more efficient and reliable body of men and women workers once their co-operation is assured.

Marion, Ind.
We boast of American freedom, and yet try to dictate by law what our citizens shall drink. Great Britain is a monarchy and we are a republic, but Great Britain allows her people to do as they please about liquor. What have you to say about this?

Your statement about Great Britain is incorrect. She has statutory laws governing the sale of liquors and strictly enforces them. So do all other civilized and not a few backward nations. Moslem peoples are required to abstain from intoxicants.

The periods of Britain's greatest social economic and moral degradation synchronize with her encouragement of the drink traffic. Past experience demonstrates that she must restrain that traffic or it will cripple her.

Sir George Newman, Chief Medical Officer of the British Ministry of Health and of the Board of Education, has recently said that "he knows of no scientific evidence supporting the opinion that alcohol increases the natural powers of the body's resistance to infectious diseases, or that it in any way strengthens the tissues of the body. In spite of the high cost of alcoholic beverages, the lessened hours for their consumption, and the reluctance of sensible people to tamper with the drink that may ultimately drink them, Great Britain's wisest guides dread its deadly influence upon the character and progress of their nation. In conclusion, our solution of this problem will not come from our British friends. They are an example for us, but theirs is an example of warning, and not for our emulation. (Copyright, 1930, New York Tribune, Inc.)

Fifth Avenue Recluse Clings to Old Home In Skyscraper District

NEW YORK (AP)—Alone in Fifth Avenue's "house of mystery" 70-year-old Ella Wendel lives today—last of a line ruled by real estate for two centuries—sole holder of $100,000,000.

Until a few days ago two were cloistered in the only dwelling that clings to midtown Fifth Avenue, among its soaring skyscraper neighbors.

The other occupant, Miss Ella's sister, Mrs. Rebecca Wendel Swope, is dead and Ella is alone in the shuttered brick house.

The house, built in 1856 for $3,000 and now valued at $2,000,000 was one of the first links in the real estate chain begun by John Wendel, who laid upon his descendants the duty of buying the choicest of New York property and never thereafter letting it go.

For many years Miss Ella lived with five sisters and a brother, John Gottlieb Wendel. He refused to allow his sisters to marry on the ground that it would put portions of the precious property under other names than Wendel. He died in 1915.

Only one sister defied the brother's edict. Late in life Rebecca married Professor Luther A. Swope, a friend of the vicar of the Trinity church—and thereafter John Wendel discouraged his sisters from going to church.

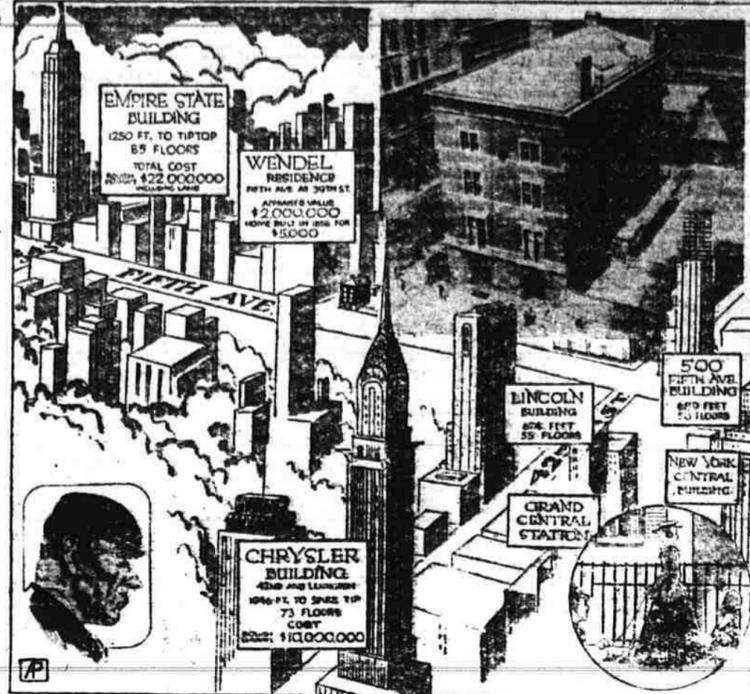

The sisters remained in the old house, lighted only by sputtering gas jets, without electricity, telephone, radio or phonograph.

They made their own clothes without the aid of a sewing machine, designed in the style of the 70's with full black skirts and tight bodices—and they wore them until they were shabby.

Not in 25 years has the front door been unbolted and the sisters never appeared in public.

But today is dead, the garden is bare and Miss Ella walks there in the dark no more.

Only after dark did Miss Ella

One of the few remaining "brownstone fronts" still standing, irreplaceable in the path of New York's progress—the $2,000,000 home of Miss Ella Wendel, 80-year-old recluse and sole heir to $100,000,000. Inset is her father, John Wendel, founder of the estate. Diagram shows the encroachment of skyscrapers.

ventured forth for a few moments to give the pool, Tobey, an airing in the high walled garden.

But Tobey is dead, the garden is bare and Miss Ella walks there in the dark no more.

Only after dark did Miss Ella received the house. Business men again donated funds for the enlargement of the building and to defray the expenses of moving it to a more distant lot. It was moved further from the business section into a quiet spot in the residence district. There it underwent repairs and an addition was made, which serves as a kitchenette at present.

This clubhouse consists of the kitchenette and a large card room or auditorium, where visiting women speakers or guests are entertained. The room is dressed on special occasions with colored paper and numerous costume parties are held there. Seasonal parties are held for Halloween, Christmas and New Year's.

The Women's Study Club and the Delphian society are owners of the cozy house and their club codes are hanging on the walls in the auditorium. Beautiful pictures are also hanging to lend the place a comfortable air.

The Lamesa Women's Study Club was organized here in 1922 and was entered as a member of the State Federation during the same year. The Delphian society was set up here in 1923 and was also admitted as a Federation organization. Between 75 and 100 women have access to the building for private receptions.

Lamesa Women Have Clubhouse

Valued At $2,000 Which Cost $200; Lights, Water, Fuel Furnished Free

LAMESA, Aug. 17.—Members of Lamesa's women's social circle have their own clubhouse for use in entertaining visitors and for their club members. The building was erected here in 1920 and served as a clubhouse for a group of Lamesa boys who called themselves Liontainers. The building they used was constructed with funds donated by business men and it was situated almost in the business section.

Equipment in the clubhouse consists of comfortable chairs, book shelves, wall seats, bridge tables and a piano. The kitchenette has an electric stove, china for serving sixty people and table silver and glasses. Trees and shrubbery has been planted and walks laid and the grounds are being improved each year. Lights, water and fuel are furnished by Lamesa utility companies free of charge.

According to one of the clubwomen, the house was purchased for about $200 from the original owners. At present, with the addition and with the equipment and lot, the clubhouse is valued at considerably more than $2,000.

House and grounds committees keep the place in order. Trees, lawn and shrubbery. The Liontainers organization disbanded and the women of Lamesa realize that a home was needed for their club work

"Never Mind," She Said After Police Search The County

Just to show that the Big Spring police department (the same that nab you when you "run" a red light) is Johnny on the spot when a feminine voice howls for aid let us relate the following little story.

One Big Spring society matron was visiting another Big Spring society matron during the morning. The visitor parked her big blue Buick sedan in front of the visitor's home and neglected to remove her keys.

The two Big Spring society matrons chatted together over a dish of ice cream. Then the visitor said her goodbyes and took her departure.

In a few moments she returned, waiting long waits. Her car, the big blue Buick sedan, was gone—gone from where she had left it, not an hour ago!

So she called the police, who promptly sent their large white hatted deputies to the scene of the crime.

The whole ponderous machinery of the department got under way. Phone calls were made to Stanton, Lamesa, Gail, Coahoma, Sterling City and Garden City (maybe a few others). Descriptions of the big blue Buick sedan were broadcast. Officers mounted the Scenic Mountain and trained powerful spotlights on the foothills and highways.

The sheriff's office was alerted. All of his good men were searching. His phone rang shrilly and repeatedly in the hot silence.

Much later one very warm deputy answered its wild clamor.

The lady who had lost her big blue Buick sedan said sweetly, "Never mind now. My husband had it."

Fourth Street Baptist Rev. A. E. Travis from Simmons University, Abilene, will present the morning service. He will be accompanied by a band of E. S. H. music as usual.

The pastor, Rev. S. B. Hughes, will preach at the evening service. S. C. Scott of Sweetwater will deliver the morning service at the Church of Christ today.

MRS. BOYKIN HAS GUEST

Indian Princess Is Purchased By Rich "Paleface"

GLEN HEAD, N. Y., Aug. 17 (NS)—A survivor of the vanishing race of first Americans, an Indian princess, has found a coveted place among the first society of the land here.

The princess today had no statement to make upon her sudden elevation into exclusive circles. Deaf, dumb and blind, her hair turned a silvery gray by sun and rain, she lives outdoors in the manner of the American aborigine. Casually she turns sightless eye to the shiny motor cars as they speed past on Cedar Swamp road in front of the home of Alfred H. Porter.

Mr. Porter has just acquired the princess. "She must be very, very old," he says. "I purchased her before she was 10 years in front of a cigar store. Then, like other cigar store Indians, she was abandoned to her fate, and has become a rarity."

$190,000,000 Is Spent Yearly For Penny Candy

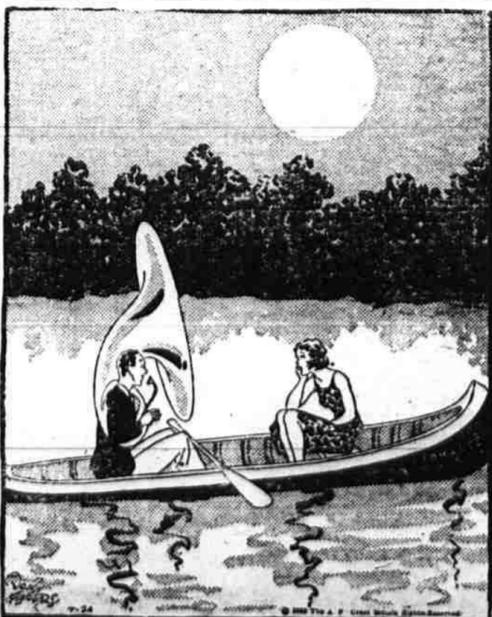

CHICAGO (NS)— Pennies passed across candy counters by American children amounted to the imposing total of $190,000,000. F. A. Bunte, Chicago candy manufacturer, declared in addressing a meeting of confectioners here.

More than 350,000,000 pounds of penny candies were purchased last year and there were more varieties of this type of candy placed on the market than ever before in the history of the confectionery business, Bunte said.

Penny confection sales, he stated, comprised 19 per cent of the year's business of confectionery men.

Boys and girls in small towns, the manufacturer said, buy the greatest amount of penny candy.

MODEST MAIDENS

BOOKS

And Bookmakers

By Ona Reagan Parsons
"THE SELBYS"
By Anne Green
(E. P. Dutton & Co.)

Anne Green, it seems, feels impelled to cheer a world downcast by her brother, Julian's, books. She has more than succeeded with "The Selbys."

Let me warn you in the beginning, that you can't get any clue to the story from the title. A dozen other titles would have been as apropos. What Anne Green meant by "The Selbys" was really "The Story of a Georgia Girl Who Went to Paris to Visit Her Aunt."

We are no judge of Europeans but we know Americans and especially southerners. We are ready to agree that this author also knows southerners, especially young girls. Barbara Winship, the young heroine, is so cleverly depicted that any of hundreds of girls from Florida to Texas could have been the original model. Here she is in a single short sketch:

Divine Judge
"I have purposely said nothing about Barbara's character because she had as little as one can do with... she played jazz on the piano by ear... made fudge divinely and indulged in the most delightful practical jokes. The crowning joy of (her) life was her total ignorance of any book learning and proud of it as her slogan put it... she thought she knew everything wicked and low in life and stood at nineteen a most innocent, sweet, shy creature, not clever but with as nimble a brain and empty a one as could be found anywhere."

The Barbara of the above paragraph is the Georgian edition. By the end of the book she is a different creature, but that's rushing matters. Heroine Has Competition
Barbara's competition, for the interest of her readers, is her grandmother, whose wit and charm and joy in living make us suspect that Anne Green wrote the book primarily to picture some old lady she liked, and that Barbara was dragged to make the plot go round.

Immediately the grandmother sets about making Barbara over when she arrives in Paris. She could bring out personality and she knew that a French school and a few French friends would tone down this young American considerably. She became so toned down in the end that when some of her American friends saw her she was called snippy—but you have the feeling that it was inevitable, so why worry?

Barbara had her suitors and the most interesting were the Frenchmen not the expatriate Americans. Barbara narrowly escapes a naughty affair with one. By the end of the book she is violently and obstinately loved by another, one of the few young men in Paris who was not out for a large dowry; but this time she has become so acclimated that one has no objections to the marriage.

Well Presented
We liked this book immensely. It entertains with the same kind of humor one sees in clever magazine articles nowadays but seldom in books. We enjoy having an author take us into her confidence as Anne Green does and laughing with her at the amusing way Barbara's grandfather and grandmother enjoy making up after tiffs; at the practical jokes of the one young American banker who is Barbara's chief confidante; at the seriousness with which Barbara's French schoolmates take life and matrimony; at everything in fact, these witty and adorable people do.

This book had eighteen printings before it drifted this far from the publishers. Duttons call it a prize book, we believe that after this we are going to take Dutton's word for their prize books and not wait until eighteen printings are out. We advise our readers to do the same. If all prize books compare with this one you will be missing a lot if you wait.
The August Kaleidoscope
The Kaleidoscope reminds us of a big family—it seems to have so much fun. Its latest frolic is trying out a composite poem. In case any of you are interested here are the details.
The title is to be "Flame."
The first line was submitted by Kate Randle Menefee of San Antonio as a dissonance.
"There is a flame that drives a poet."
The second line—must be the measure and rhyme—
"The idea is to build a twelve-line poem at the rate of a line a month. The poem will be written in couplet form in (Continued on Page Eight)

DAGGER

by Mary Dahlberg

SYNOPSIS: Blaine Howard, American adventurer, is rescued from some Mexican insurgents by Dagger Marley, niece of a Texas rancher. She falls in love with him, but Howard, unappreciably married, cannot respond. Later he is reported missing on the western front in France. Dagger, heartbroken, meets a flying ace, Captain Jack Vanearing, and when he is suddenly ordered back to the States she marries him. Vanearing's mother in New York dislikes Dagger, but his mother and sister Kitty highly approve of her. Meanwhile Vanearing is wounded in France. Then Dagger learns Dick Welling, now Lord Wenlock, a self-exiled Englishman who lived at her uncle's ranch, is to marry Howard's widow, whom he has always loved, and who was forced to marry Howard by a fortune-hunting mother. Dagger's husband returns, broken by heavy drinking and unable to take up any useful pursuit.

Your knee is well enough to ride." He scowled.
"Your idea, too, eh? Want to get rid of me. Well, I won't go. I'm financing this man, Olney, in building a big three-motor plane for transatlantic flying, and I want to stand by and see the job through."
"You can't be much use if you keep on drinking so heavily," Dagger pointed out. "It's that that worries us, Jack."
"Oh, don't be forever inhibiting me," he snarled. "You might think I couldn't look after myself."
"You can't," Dagger answered curtly.
And his mother wailed: "I wouldn't mind if it did you any good, Jackie; but you are so strange nowadays. And you drink all the time. Cousin Charles told me that two nights ago you were unable to leave the Stuyvesant Club."
Jack silenced her with a glare.
"What does me harm is being made to feel that you two are picking me over behind my back," he growled. "You might think I didn't do any work at all, and the truth is that this aviation business is more important than anything in front of the country today."
His dull eyes brightened, as they usually did when he launched up his favorite topic. "I tell you, the time's coming, and soon, when it will be an everyday occurrence to fly the Atlantic, and people won't think any more of hopping to Chicago or St. Louis than they do now of driving or going by train. There'll be money in flying stocks, and I'll be in a position to cash in."
He lounged to his feet, stretching his arms over his head, good humor restored. "Don't talk to me, you two! The family made their big wad in railroads. Won't you be proud of me when Vanearing Airways are launched, and you'll be dodging spare parts from my buses in the sky?"
Both women had to laugh. He was like a small boy, who has been caught out, but manages to produce a convincing excuse for his bad habits.
And Dagger, if not his mother, had a conception of the vicinity of his visions for the future. She went across the room to him, and dropped her hands on his shoulders.
"I love to hear you talk like that, Jack," she said. "And I do believe in aviation, just as you do. I won't begrudge you a moment you spend on the Olney ship or in this airways matter. It's because I want you to have plenty of energy for such important things that I ask you to cut down on your drinking."
He was touched.
"You're a sweet little thing. Not many girls would understand so well."
"I presume you relegate your mother to that class," complained Mrs. Vanearing.
He reached out, and patted her cheek.
"Now, mater darling! You're a peach. I'll have a photograph record made, with a declaration of my undying love and appreciation, and turn it on whenever you start that line."
"But you will cut down the drinking," insisted Dagger.
"I sure will," he promised easily. (Continued on Page Eight)

Chapter 19
NEW HOPE OF HAPPINESS
DAGGER wasn't a person to drift indefinitely or to shirk responsibility, and as Jack's drinking became increasingly pernicious she was moved to intervene.
However objectionable his habits, there remained in him, inseparable from his disposition, the underlying vein of affection he had inherited from his father.
Drunk of sober, he treated her with consideration, and his worst sprees were varied by spells of transient contrition and loving kindness. He wasn't, in plain words, a damned soul. His trouble was weakness, not viciousness.
Moreover, his mother had snubbed her pride, and thrown herself on Dagger's mercy.
"Alexandra, it's a bitter thing for me to say, but he will do more for you than he will for me." The white head was held high; the cold eyes met Dagger's unflinchingly. "Speak to him, please! Do anything. He's ruining himself, now."
Dagger knew what the plea cost Mrs. Vanearing; her instinct was toward generosity.
"I can't influence him alone," she answered. "But if you would help me—"
"Certainly," assented her mother-in-law, whose pride was assuaged by the compliment.
"You wouldn't mind if he went away? He'll never stop here, where there are so many temptations."
"I should consent to that very readily," Mrs. Vanearing agreed. "Poor boy, he is too popular for his own good in New York."
Old Jim Marley had been writing fretfully, asking Dagger if he was ever to see her again, and it was in her mind to carry Jack off to Texas, where he might spend the day in the saddle, riding and hunting in the open air. But when she suggested the plan next morning he wouldn't listen to her.
"Bury myself on a ranch, with Mexicans and cowpunchers for company? Not much! You can go if you want to."
"But it would be so good for you, Jack," begged his mother. "The exercise and the change of climate.

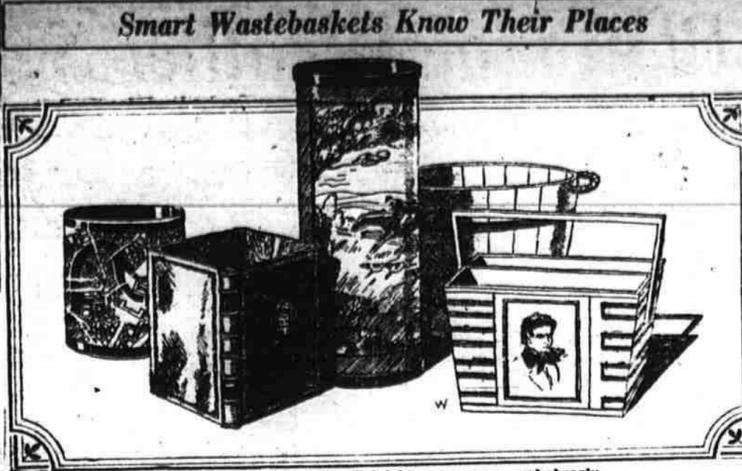

STYLE TALKS

Black and White Clock News Hat Hints Chic Coats Hear! Hear!

BY ADA E. LINGG

A few words from Elmo Wasson on the latest styles for men should be appreciated by their wives who will read this column. This is the first of a series of style talks written by Big Spring merchants prominent in this respect. Several of them are now at market and when they return your humble servant will endeavor to dig a few style hints from their minds surfeited with current style showings.

WORDS FROM ELMO WASSON
"Each season men become more interested in their wearing apparel, probably because they have learned to appreciate the fact that other men dress well and naturally have a greater desire to wear new clothes that are in good style when everyone else is wearing them."
"New clothes for the coming Fall season, which is only a couple of weeks ahead, offer the most reasonable styles and the finest fabrics we have had for many years."
"None of the showings for Fall will be loud in color or unreasonable in style. The suits are in gentlemanly good taste, the close fitting coat that men have always liked is here whole heartedly because it has been accepted by men."
"As for the colors, a few browns, a few grays, many blues and shades of blue running from a powder down to midnight, will be used. No prominent colors or contrasts are shown in the newer suitings."
"The character of the goods is brought out in the weave, the same color being woven at various angles to make it a very appreciative fabric."
"There are two styles in the cut of the coat being generally accepted. One is the close fitting coat at hip, being shown with or without the rope shoulder which is slightly raised and adds greatly to the appearance of any man. Then there is the semi-fitted coat worn among business men and the men who are more conservative."
"Trousers are plain. Quite a number have one-eighth top pocket which can hardly be detected from the regular pocket and does prevent the edge of the pocket from being worn so easily."
"As to hats—a few young men will wear a very narrow brimmed high crown hat with mapped or rolled brim. In this section of the country the narrow band, usually with cord and button and the bound edge, is generally accepted. This hat will be worn in gray with a black band and in a few shades of tan. The two and a half inch rolled brim hat is popular among men who do not wish to snap the brim. The wide band, two and a half inch brim hat with a raw edge is very popular. The last three styles will be worn universally with the narrow band a little in the majority."
"Shirts will be neat, many with solid colors, starched three and a half inch collars. Ties will carry out a color harmony."
"Polka dot socks, black socks with dot and various colors with a cross-cross design will be in the majority."
"Shoes have a tendency toward a narrower toe. They will of kid or light weight calf skin."
THE ULTIMUM MORIENS
"The hat is the ultimatum moriens of respectability," said Mr. O. W. Holmes in his "auto-gram of the Breakfast Table."
And the ultimatum moriens of respectability to a woman is a very new hat.
And the very new hats of today will be quite different from the hats that you wore last season.
In the first place they should leave your fair forehead as bare as a pancake, and in the second place they should contrive to make the most of the soft hair that grows around your face. They are coming in all shapes—tricornes, bicorns, and the ever good beret (the latter much puffed, plaited and disguised). They will be felt, soiled and the flatterest velvet.
Many are of soft crushable materials—knitted or of tweed. Agnes is turning them out by the trunkload (returning to America with the summer visitors to Europe) that look like just a hunk of cloth until they are arranged on the head—and then... oh, my dear!

Smart Wastebaskets Know Their Places

These wastebaskets will brighten any room—and cheaply.

By MARGERY TAYLOR
Interior Decoration Editor, McCall's Magazine. Written for The Herald.
Wastebaskets, too, must now "be long" in the rooms they help to keep neat.
Now that we have begun to see that even in the most carefully planned room, the smallest detail may spoil the whole picture, the wastebasket must be part of the picture.
Usually it is anything but a basket, although, in some rooms the woven straw or reed baskets in Indian patterns seem just right. But where there is the man with the pipe, it might be best to have a tight-fitting metal or other fire-proof container inside.
Anything from vulcanized fibre to hand-tooled leather seems to be a proper medium. Tin or other sheet metal and compo board are perhaps the most popular—but these materials don't begin to tell of all the fascinating disguises.

In the library or living room, serving silently near a desk, there may be the receptacle made from rare old leather book bindings. The covers of two volumes are used, properly held together with a quarter round wood moulding in each corner, the bottom being compo board.
Here and there, collectors of early American furniture have discovered old leather water buckets used by the brave volunteer fire ladders of a century ago.
Old turnings and prints are being sturdied into amusing containers for many kinds of rooms. For the bedroom or guest room, the copies of the old Godey prints which come ready-made for the purpose are very effective. Hunting prints, old maps or new ones (like the Lindbergh flight) are good company in the boy's room. Pages of old books and pictures of the authors, or pages of music with portraits of the composers, also find appropriate places.

Chints and wallpaper coverings will naturally harmonize with a room.
All these are easily made, being simply glued on tins or compo board containers and covered with clear varnish or yellow varnish for an antique effect. The latest idea is to glue a order of colored wools around the print.

DEMONSTRATE PLANE
LOS ANGELES, Aug. 15—(AP)—An airplane with flexible wings hinged to the fuselage and operated by air drums was demonstrated here yesterday by the inventor, Waldo Waterman, who claimed special safety features for his device.

The wings, he said, flexed automatically in response to air currents, made quick stopping after landing possible and could be tilted in flight to increase the plane's speed.
The wheels are attached directly to the lower wing and a skid drop from the front of the fuselage. Waterman flew his ship at a speed of 140 miles an hour. He said his device would be demonstrated at the National Air Races in Chicago.
Waterman who has been flying since 1909 was once associated with the late Glenn H. Curtiss.

DEPUTY RETURNS
Deputy Sheriff Denver D. Dunn returned Saturday night from Brady, where he went to take in custody Terrell Henderson of Big Spring.
Henderson is charged in Justice of the Peace Cecil Collings' court with theft of an automobile.

Dagger

"And after we find out if the Only can fly, we'll take a trip. How'd you like to go abroad? You never had a real honeymoon."

Honeymoon! No, she'd never really had one, Dagger reflected, for, in the sense she had anticipated, a marriage.

"I'd love that, Jack," she acknowledged soberly. "Let's do it." "After Christmas," he agreed. "If mother won't mind."

"I dare say I shall be able to amuse myself," Mrs. Vaneering replied stiffly.

In the last few moments the soggy, petulant expression Jack habitually wore at home had faded from his face. He was again the hard-bitten, jovial daredevil Dagger had met on the St. Anthony roof.

She was drawn to him as she hadn't been in months, drawn not by a handsome an inner voice of aspiration whispered that he'd made similar promises before. But this voice she throttled resolutely. It was unfair to doubt in advance of performance.

"Would you like to have a party with me tonight?" she asked. "Dine out and go to the theater?"

She looked questioningly at Mrs. Vaneering who hesitated and then finally indicated endorsement. Jack stared her, with a gravity beyond his wont.

"That's a swell idea, honey. And don't you worry about me. Maybe I'll get a few glasses over the top, but I'm the same old Jack."

At the end of these days, when this part of his knee gets to where it won't hold a damp weather, you'll be surprised what a model husband I am."

Day Dagger knew happily. In the morning, she went shopping, and lunched with an authoress whom she'd met at the Cosmopolitan Club; in the afternoon she attended a reception, leaving early to be in time to greet Jack, and have a talk before they went out to dinner.

She walked home up Fifth Avenue in the glow of an Indian Summer afternoon. The blood pulsed through her; her heart was glad; her feet seemed to tread the air. And she was amused and flattered to note from the corner of her eye how men turned and stared at her.

How glorious it would be about this hour on the prairies of the Figure 2. Pulsing through the din of the traffic she seemed to hear the lowing of the cattle, streaming down to the water-holes; the crooned "Oh along, little doggies" of the punchers, slouching low in their saddles after a day's hard riding. It was verging on dusk when she reached the Vaneering house, and she had begun to climb the steps before she observed a knot of men standing on the curb. They started toward her at the same moment, but a watchful policeman pushed them back—"Ain't you got no sense?" she heard him growl. "That's her."

An icy hand squeezed her heart. She caught her breath, and was about to speak to them when the front door opened, and James stepped forward, his ordinarily impassive features stamped with grief. (Copyright, 1930, Duffield and Company.)

Tragedy strikes swiftly and suddenly in the Vaneering household in Monday's chapter.

Of the poems contributed by Texans we liked best the following sonnet by Hazel Harper Harris of San Antonio, called "Miser."

"I, who was once so rich in hours with you
That I would squander them in idle ways,
Now search, like some poor wren an looking through
Old purses, all the years and months and days
To find what minted moments they reveal
Where love had stamped your face with cunning art.
I count them with a miser's hoarding zeal
And lock them in the vault that is my heart."

At twilight time my gnawing hunger makes Me spend a coin with Memory that will buy
Her sweets of yesterday in frosted cakes
I pray that this stale food will satisfy
My need of nourishment through years of drouth
And will not turn to ashes in my mouth."

A Tale of 65 Cities

Sixty-five cities and towns in West Texas, some of them large and some of them small, have one important advantage in common. They have ample electric power for future growth.

These 65 cities and towns of West Texas receive electric power from the transmission system of the Texas Electric Service Company, which assures not only sufficient power to care for the immediate needs, but also a power supply which is sufficiently flexible to care for unusual emergency demands, a situation which often occurs in a growing territory like West Texas.

The natural resources surrounding the 65 cities and towns served by the Texas Electric Service Company have formed the basis for substantial industrial development in the past, and point to a rapid growth in the future. Electric power has aided this development and the Texas Electric Service Company pledges itself to do everything necessary to maintain a class of electric power service which will continue to aid in bringing about this development.

Tune In Texas Electric Service Company Radio Program Over WBAP Every Tuesday at 8 P.M.

Some cities which receive electric service from the power transmission system of the Texas Electric Service Company have been going through periods of phenomenal growth, yet have always had ample electric service for both domestic and industrial purposes. One of the cities served by the company increased its population more than 300 per cent, most of the increase coming within the last four years, yet electric service from the power transmission system of this company was more than sufficient to meet this unusual demand.

The Chicago Cubs grimly hold on in the National League pennant race until the premier second baseman, Rogers Hornsby, is in shape to insert his heavy hitting in place of the less than .300 batting average compiled by "Footsy" Blair, his substitute.

BY PAUL MICKELSON
(Associated Press Sports Writer)
CHICAGO (AP)—Once again it's up to baseball's rajah, Rogers Hornsby.

He is a Phil Sheridan, expected to reach the line-up around August 20, so far as the National League champions, pushed into a tight spot by the Robins, are concerned.

Can the rajah, blasted out of the big skirmish since Memorial Day with a fractured left ankle and a sore right heel, come back?

Can his big bludgeon give the Cubs the punch it gave them in 1929 when they romped over the Pirates to gallop away with the flag?

If the answers are affirmative, it can set some more records.

Spike phone you this morning that we have decided to call it enough for this year. Spike had to play Thursday and that should be explanation enough, although he got on each time he came to bat. We did not have a market basket for Gould in right field and so we did not come out very well.

We have a few uniforms left, most of them with holes in, and a few broken bats. All in all, though, we had a nice time and all the boys got quite a kick out of it, even if we did have a hard time to keep a team lined up without a plain clothes man to help us.

Bode:

We sincerely agree that the presence of the aforementioned Spikol Henninger in the lineup would be enough to prove the last straw to any camel's spine.

Imagine this. We have a call from Texon for a couple of games in September. Of course that is nothing out of the ordinary. But the thing is, if we recall correctly, one Snipe Connolly in writing to Bloddy Cross, the athletic and inaccurate sports perpetuator, re-stated that Texon had beaten Big Spring. Such praise must be preserved. The Texon crew wants to play here Labor day and the Sunday before Labor Day. It would be a shame to whom them twice in a row, on a Sunday and a holiday. Especially so after Snipe Connolly has so stretched the truth as to say Texon has already taken Big Spring for a fast lacing. Whether the direction of the information? We crave to be informed.

And Doc Ellis of Midland also must be a fiend for punishment. He too desires to migrate to the metropol to the east of the Midland County abode and witness bloodshed. Of course the City League will have nothing to do with the frays after this Sunday, but competition will be provided a terror to pitchers in July and August during which, year after year, he has liked his batting mark to such dizzy heights that his all-time average for 15 years is placed at .362.

Hornsby's physician has promised his return as a regular by the middle of August. The bony growth on his head has disappeared and apparently it's all up to the ankle.

Gene Sarazen of New York, who topped the field yesterday with his record smashing 67, fell into a bad putting epidemic today but staggered in with a 74, which landed him in third place with a 142 total.

Tied with Sarazen was Otto Hackbarth, Cincinnati, Ohio, veteran. Hackbarth who landed second yesterday with a 68, had a fine chance to take the lead today but threw it away on the short 13th, where he took a five. He finished with two birdies, however, for a 73.

So many stars were bunched within easy striking distance of the lead tonight, that the championship, which will end tomorrow with two more 18-hole tests, appeared to be a toss up. Three scant strokes away from the high flying Manero were three of the best shot makers in the game, Horton Smith of New York, "Lighthorse" Harry Cooper of Chicago, and Johnny Goodman, the Omaha amateur.

Unperturbed by the treacherous wind that stopped most of the leaders, Manero today circled the course in 70 strokes, which added to his smart 69 of yesterday, gave him a great total of 139, five strokes under par for the 36-hole stretch. An eagle three on the 510-yard 12th was the bright spot on Manero's card today. A 30-yard pitch shot that sailed right into the cup was responsible for the piece of luck.

One shot behind him as the result of the best round of the day's play came "Sunny" Rouse, young Chicago professional. Rouse toured the course today in 68 strokes, four under perfect figures, for a 140 total.

It was reported Nick Borrelli, who has been playing with the Bloomington, Ill. club in the Three Eye League, would be sent to Dallas.

EARL'S JIM DANDY PROVIDES TURF UPSET, WINS 100 TO 1

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 16 (AP)—In the most sensational upset the turf has witnessed since the days of Man O' War, Earl's Jim Dandy, a 100 to 1 shot, galloped through the mud today to administer a sound beating to the twin contenders for three-year-old championship honors, the previously undefeated Callant Fox, winner of six consecutive races, and the almost equally famous Whitechone.

While a crowd of 40,000 spectators, including Governor Roosevelt, stood stunned by the astonishing spectacle, the California owned three-year-old, smartly ridden by Jockey F. Baker, whipped the Fox and Earl Sande by six good lengths and Whitechone and Sonny Workman by twelve lengths in the Travers stake.

Tigers Protest Game Which Decides Winner

Richardson Refinery, winners of the first half of the City League race, clinched the title for the second half, and incidentally the silver loving cup for the season's winners, Friday afternoon when they copped a fast and bickering tilt from the Mexican Tigers 8 to 5.

The game, as is usual when the loss or win means something, was protested by the Tigers in the fifth inning. Winters, Richardson's second baseman, was on the third sack when Lopez balked. Rainey sent Winters home, and called Hoeha, who had singled on the play, back to the plate. The Tigers walked off the field, but later returned and finished the hectic fray.

Lopez went the route for the Tigers, said route being a five and a half inning fray, stopped on account of darkness. Haley started for Richardson but was relieved by Crouch in the fifth inning after he had placed two men on bases. Each of the runners talked on a single off Crouch.

Richardson batsmen reached Lopez in the fifth inning and reaped five hits off the loping Tiger to tally four runs and clinch the tilt. Crouch struck out a pair in the sixth. Cruz going out to Hoeha in the first sack to end the tilt.

ABSURD SAYS HELEN ABOUT HUGE LEGACY

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 16 (AP)—Helen Wills Moody today branded as "perfectly absurd" the suggestion she would jeopardize her amateur tennis standing by accepting a $20,000 legacy bequeathed to her in the will of the late James D. Phelan, former United States senator.

The legacy was one of numerous bequests revealed when the former senator's will was filed yesterday, disposing of an estate estimated at $10,000,000.

Immediately the question arose in tennis circles whether Mrs. Moody, women's national champion, would endanger her amateur status by accepting the gift, which the will said was "in appreciation of her winning the tennis championship for California."

"It couldn't possibly have anything to do with my amateur standing, and I think the suggestion is in extremely bad taste," said Mrs. Moody. "I am very sorry that any such controversy should arise. There should be nothing said about it whatever. I do not wish it, and I am sure Senator Phelan would not have liked it."

refused to accept a palatial home tendered him by his Georgia admirers.

Louis B. Dailey, president of the U. S. L. T. A., said the question probably would be referred to the amateur rule committee.

"It's a poser," Dailey remarked, but refused to express an opinion. A prominent member of the rule committee headed by Hulcomb Ward of New York indicated that to compel Mrs. Moody to refuse the bequest upon pain of professionalizing herself would be "going too far."

HINES COPS TITLE

CULVER, Ind., Aug. 16 (AP)—Walter Hines of Columbia, S. C., won the singles of the national junior tennis tournament here today by defeating James Babbitt of Pasadena, Calif., 6-2, 6-1, 6-3.

Jay Cohn of Santa Monica, California, successfully defended the boys' singles title which he won last year by defeating Jack Lynch of Taft, Calif., 6-3, 6-3.

Babbitt attempted to use the same style of play that he employed in upsetting Karl Kamrath of Austin, Texas, seeded No. 1, in the semi-finals. He lobbed his shots over the net waiting for an opening, but Hines adopted a hard driving game that upset the Pasadena lad.

Lynch was off his game and never threatened Cohn in the contest for the boys' title. He sent many of his drives into the net and his timing was poor throughout.

Announced by General The Blow-Out Proof Tire

... Hailed as the greatest Safety advancement in modern motoring

THE amazing acceptance of the new Blow-Out Proof Dual-Balloon has no precedent in tire history. The answer is this: the blow-out proof tire is the only way to match the power and speed of today's cars and today's driving conditions.

At today's road speed if a tire blows out the best you can hope for is an open field with no ditch to stop you. It's a split second from blow-out to crash—with no time to think or act. You're off the road or head-on into approaching traffic before you can move. Don't risk it.

No matter what your speed or where you travel,

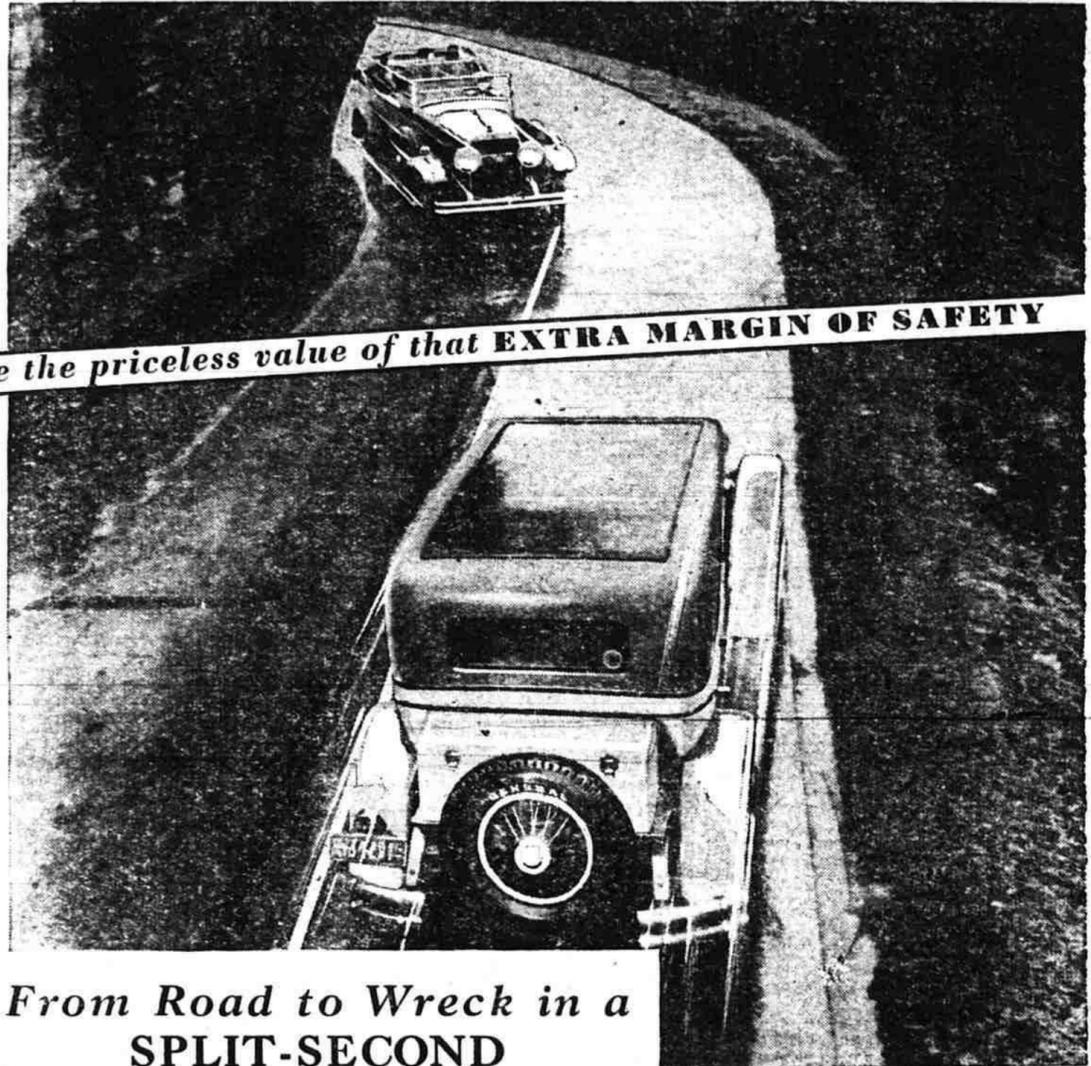

Split seconds that make you realize the priceless value of that EXTRA MARGIN OF SAFETY you need the protection of the New General Blow-Out Proof Dual-Balloon. It ends blow-outs—it minimizes every tire hazard. You can trust it on any road, in any weather, at any speed. Double safety in those split second emergencies when it's stop, turn-quick or crash.

Extra softness under the surface that lasts as long as the tire itself means closer-riding, skid-safe traction.

Lower pressure and built-in rubber shock absorbers give a new sensation of softer, easier riding on any road at any speed. Extra layers of soft cushion rubber prevent over-heating and inside wear . . . and this thicker cushioning absorbs the heavy impacts that cause blow-outs in stiffer tires.

That extra margin of safety in the Dual-Balloon is yours throughout the whole lifetime of its big mileage . . . mileage that outlasts your car.

From Road to Wreck in a SPLIT-SECOND

WHEN a front tire "blows" at high speed, you're into the ditch before you can reach the brake. No time to think—less time to act . . . Even at moderate speed you're off the road or head-on into approaching cars in a flash. Then—costly damage, permanent injury. It's a cruel penalty for a tiny temporary economy! Don't risk it . . . No longer need any motorist face the hazard of a fatal wreck through blow-out. Let us equip your car now with the tire that eliminates all the risk of blow-out.

Exclusive Features:

Of course the only thing for San Angelo to do in a case like that is boost the ante. But get him settled before the snows set in.

The Spirit of Hard Luck is again in shape after suffering severe injuries in a collision. An internal injury was thought first to have been serious, but it turned out to be nothing more than one of Gus Coleman's ears which was cut off and had lodged in the carburetor. Of course you can't appreciate that unless you've seen one of Coleman's receptive organs. Not only would it stop such a small automobile as ours, but if dropped just right would wreck the Limited, with two engines thrown in for good measure.

earnest Monday. According to the water hole press agent, whoever he may be, the Mountaineers will go into their initial huddle at that time. One sentence is extremely interesting. It reads, "Coach R. L. Moore of Fort Worth visited Mineral Wells Wednesday and during a conference with Supt. Brannan completed his plans for the two weeks of training for the boys before the opening of school." Just exactly the idea Bill Stevens had in mind. Yet, no money, no early practice, except at home. The Resort City scribe also adds, "Equipment at Memorial Field includes uniforms for the men, training field, playing field, park grounds, club house with steel lockers and hot and cold showers." The Mountaineers, had better find out to sure the location of showers. That's where the Steers will head them for September 19.

We didn't get to converse with Stevens Saturday about the camp. We don't know whether he is going or whether he isn't. All we do know is that we don't have enough of the often referred to filthy lace to send the boys on their way. If arrangements can be made, we presume the trip will also. If not, our sole assumption is that the Steers will have to be content with getting their daily dumpings locally.

However training at home has its advantages. Where would Doctor Wofford Hardy... Franklin Boyle and himself spend the afternoons now that it is nearing the time of the year generally accepted as Fall? With the City Leaguers having nothing to protest over, we won't have a thing to do in the classrooms. Of course the Ed might become imbued with the idea that we should do something, but argument can overcome the greatest of obstacles if used long and after enough.

If nothing else happens this year, well be glad when Mico Hicks decides where he is going to check or better, well be relieved when he informs the cotton baled one of the Goats where he is going. Of all the humans raised over one lead football player from such a village as Roscoe, we never had the misfortune to tune in on. Hicks belongs to Roscoe by birth and rearing, says Roscoe. Hicks belongs to San Angelo by choice, says one inhabitant of the sheep country. The former sounds more logical. He was a demon in Roscoe, there is no doubt. And he may prove thushy at San Angelo. At the present time, however, he seems to be floating around in space, with Roscoe having him and San Angelo wanting him. Of course the only thing for San Angelo to do in a case like that is boost the ante. But get him settled before the snows set in.

Five other run-off races were to be settled as follows: Lieutenant governor, Sterling P. Strong of Dallas and Senator Edgar Witt of Waco; attorney general, James V. Alfred of Wichita Falls and R. L. Bobbit of Laredo; treasurer, John E. Davis of Mesquite and Charles Lockhart of Austin; commissioner of agriculture, J. E. McDonald of Waxahatchie and A. H. King of Throckmorton; and railroad commissioner, Pat M. Neff and W. Gregory Hatcher.

Interest in absentee voting has been keen, according to reports from the population centers, indicating a heavy vote in the primary. San Antonio reported 220 absentee votes cast with two days to go against 562 for the entire period in the first primary. Travis county had accounted for 232 absentee ballots and the trend indicated there would be as many this time as on July 26. Tarrant county's preliminary votes numbered 712 against 942 for the first primary. The absentee voting will end next Tuesday. All absentee voters totaled 675 against 862 last month.

A plate lunch consisting of chicken salad, ham, potato salad, and punch was served.

Guests were Mesdames N. E. Springer, J. W. Johnston, L. E. Mullins, Bill Fox, H. White, Misses Estelle Hutto, Mary Hutto, Emily Guthrie.

general, will speak for Sterling Monday at Denton; Cone Johnson of Tyler, member of the highway commission, will speak Monday at Galveston and at Waxahatchie Wednesday. Former Lieutenant Governor T. W. Davidson of Marshall was to continue his speaking through the week.

Ferguson speakers were to be sent into many sections of Texas, R. B. Humphrey, head of the speakers bureau in Dallas, announced.

"Out of an abundance of political experience," Humphrey said, "I have never found such enthusiasm among political workers as I find among those in the Ferguson cause. All our workers are volunteer workers, and there are many of them, all eager to do their little bit."

Humphrey directed the speakers' activities for the Anti-Tammany Democrats of Texas throughout the 1928 campaign.

Woodward, Parrish
Senator Walter Woodward of Coleman, who accompanied Sterling on his tour out West, and Senator Pink L. Parrish of Lubbock, popular West Texas, were to smack their coats in a final Sterling offensive. It was probable Senator Small would make a speech or two for the Houston man.

Interest in the race seemed to be increasing. Friends of both candidates expressed hope there would be a "big turn-out." It was freely predicted the total would reach the record-breaking $33,422 counted in the first primary.

Five other run-off races were to be settled as follows: Lieutenant governor, Sterling P. Strong of Dallas and Senator Edgar Witt of Waco; attorney general, James V. Alfred of Wichita Falls and R. L. Bobbit of Laredo; treasurer, John E. Davis of Mesquite and Charles Lockhart of Austin; commissioner

Humphrey directed the speakers' activities for the Anti-Tammany Democrats of Texas throughout the 1928 campaign.

Woodward, Parrish
Senator Walter Woodward of Coleman, who accompanied Sterling on his tour out West, and Senator Pink L. Parrish of Lubbock, popular West Texas, were to smack their coats in a final Sterling offensive. It was probable Senator Small would make a speech or two for the Houston man.

Interest in the race seemed to be increasing. Friends of both candidates expressed hope there would be a "big turn-out." It was freely predicted the total would reach the record-breaking $33,422 counted in the first primary.

Five other run-off races were to be settled as follows: Lieutenant governor, Sterling P. Strong of Dallas and Senator Edgar Witt of Waco; attorney general, James V. Alfred of Wichita Falls and R. L. Bobbit of Laredo; treasurer, John E. Davis of Mesquite and Charles Lockhart of Austin; commissioner of agriculture, J. E. McDonald of Waxahatchie and A. H. King of Throckmorton; and railroad commissioner, Pat M. Neff and W. Gregory Hatcher.

Interest in absentee voting has been keen, according to reports from the population centers, indicating a heavy vote in the primary. San Antonio reported 220 absentee votes cast with two days to go against 562 for the entire period in the first primary. Travis county had accounted for 232 absentee ballots and the trend indicated there would be as many this time as on July 26. Tarrant county's preliminary votes numbered 712 against 942 for the first primary. The absentee voting will end next Tuesday. All absentee voters totaled 675 against 862 last month.

A plate lunch consisting of chicken salad, ham, potato salad, and punch was served.

Guests were Mesdames N. E. Springer, J. W. Johnston, L. E. Mullins, Bill Fox, H. White, Misses Estelle Hutto, Mary Hutto, Emily Guthrie.

Ferguson speakers were to be sent into many sections of Texas, R. B. Humphrey, head of the speakers bureau in Dallas, announced.

"Out of an abundance of political experience," Humphrey said, "I have never found such enthusiasm among political workers as I find among those in the Ferguson cause. All our workers are volunteer workers, and there are many of them, all eager to do their little bit."
