Injunction issued against Sunday beer sales ban

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

A temporary injunction stopping the ban on Sunday beer sales outside the city limits of Pampa in Gray County was granted this morning by 223rd District Judge Lee Waters following a one-hour hearing.

A final hearing on the matter has been set for 10 a.m. July 25.

Betty Wilson, doing business as the Sadie Hawkins Store, and Convenience Beverages Co., a corporation licensed to sell beer in Texas for Allsup's convenience stores, filed the petition for the temporary injunction about 5 p.m. Friday.

The plaintiffs alleged in the petition against Gray County that they would be damaged by the ban of Sunday beer sales and that the Gray County Commissioners Court had no authority to enter a minute order prohibiting the sales under Texas Alcoholic Beverage Code 109.32 (b).

The Commissioners Court held a public hearing on May 31 on whether it should act to disallow the beer sales in businesses outside Pampa city limits. The majority of those speaking at the public hearing were in favor of the Sunday beer ban. The city of Pampa currently has an ordinance which prohibits Sunday beer sales inside the city limits.

Following the May 31 public hearing the Commissioners Court voted 4-1, with Precinct 4 Commissioner

Ted Simmons voting against, to ban the Sunday alcohol sales, effective July 1.

Attorney Tracey Warner, representing the plaintiffs, told the court this morning that Section 109.32 (b) of the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Code refers to counties with "only one" incorporated city or town and therefore the Commissioners Court had no authority to enter the minute order.

Both parties to this morning's hearing stipulated that Gray County has more than one incorporated town or city.

Warner also said that the commissioners could not enter the minute order because the city did not have a valid ordinance prior to Jan. 1, 1957. She said the current ordinance of the city of May 1971 repealed the city's January 1946 ordinance which originally prohibited the Sunday beer sales.

County Attorney Bob McPherson argued that the "only one" in Section 109.32 (b) refers to a county having the majority of the population in one city or town. He also said that the only change in the city's May 1971 ordinance was to change the fine assessed for violating the Sunday beer sales ordinance.

The 1935 statute reads: In a county that has only one incorporated city or town that has a majority of the population of the county, according to the most recent federal census, and where the city or town has shortened the hours of sale for beer on Sundays by a valid charter amendment or ordinance before January 1, 1957, the commissioners court may enter an order prohibiting the sale of beer on Sundays during the hours it is prohibited in the city or town. The order may apply to all or part of the area of the county located outside the city or town. The commissioners court may not adopt the order unless it first publishes notice for four consecutive weeks in a newspaper of general circulation in the county published in the county or a nearby county.

Waters, agreeing with Warner's interpretation, said, "I do find the plaintiffs' interpretation of the subject statute is probably correct."

He said he was not going to rule at this time on whether the county could issue a minute order on the city ordinance question.

Waters went on to say that as the judge of the state District Court he is bound to interpret law without consideration of his or anyone else's moral or religious convictions.

"That I have done," he said.

Waters said the "only one" phrase in the statute appeared to modify the incorporated city or town. He said that to rule otherwise would be to rewrite the statute, inserting "any one" town or city in place of "only one incorporated city or town."

One judge who carried that argument further and to the extreme, if the county's interpretation of the state law was upheld, the Commissioners Court could prohibit the sale of beer inside the city limits of both McLean and Lefors (if the two cities were wet).

"I doubt this was the intent of the legislation," the judge said.

"None of us would condone the sale of alcohol to anyone to the detriment of anyone or to our family or friends," Waters said, but added that the question of the sale of alcohol was one "more appropriately left to the voters than the courts of the state."

The judge instructed both Gray County and the plaintiffs' attorneys to file written briefs on their positions and to include a legislative history of the subject statute a week prior to the July 25 hearing date.

Testimony in this morning's hearing included Ray Chambers, district manager of Allsup's Inc. Chambers said that disallowing Sunday beer sales at the store's Price Road/Texas 152 location would definitely hurt the business. He said the Sunday beer ban, if implemented, would also require the store to dismiss two to four people.

Betty Wilson and Jim Osborne, co-owners of the Sadie Hawkins Store at 1301 S. Hobart, both testified that the ban of Sunday beer sales would cause the closure of the store on Sundays.

Osborne testified that the store sales about 500 cases of beer a week, with 200 cases of beer being typically sold on a Sunday.

The plaintiffs also said the ban of Sunday beer sales, if implemented, would cause a loss of customer "good will and relations."

County OKs drug, alcohol testing policy

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

Gray County Commissioners Court unanimously approved an optional drug and alcohol testing policy for county employees during a regular meeting Monday.

The Commissioners Court took the middle ground in the new requirements under the law regarding the implementation of a policy. Some employers have chosen a non-testing policy, while others have chosen a mandatory testing policy.

Precinct 3 Commissioner Gerald Wright, during the discussion phase, said, "I'm kind of leaning toward optional testing, so if the county ever did have a case, it gives the county certain rights that we need. I think it would be a good tool for the county to have that option."

County Treasurer Scott Hahn urged the commissioners to implement the optional policy at least. He said that anyone who believes, in this day and time, that there are not alcohol and/or substance abuse problems in the work force is not thinking accurately.

Hahn said that it was his opinion that of the 125 county employees at work Monday there would be at least one case of someone being under the influence of either drugs or alcohol.

"Today there is no chance in the world that 125 people are clear ... To ignore the issue is sticking your head in the sand. I guarantee there's somebody out there somewhere drinking right now," Hahn said.

Precinct 1 Commissioner Joe Wheeley said, "I'd almost argue with you on that."

"Don't be ostriches. Understand this is 1991 and out of 125 people this is going on somewhere," Hahn said.

Each county employee will be asked to read the policy and sign a sheet showing that the employee has read and understood the new county policy. The signature sheet will be kept in the employee personnel file.

In unrelated business, the county commissioners continued to look over a safety policy manual. Wright, who also serves as loss control coordinator for the county, urged commissioners to make changes in the proposed manual and bring the changes, deletions or additions to the next Commissioners Court meeting on July 15 for discussion.

Commissioners, in other business, heard from Gray County Appraisal District Chief Appraiser Pat Bagley who answered questions regarding the disposition of the Hoechst Celanese tax lawsuit.

Following the discussion with Bagley, the Commissioners Court

Rash of accidents investigated in Wheeler County

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

Five vehicle accidents, two of which were serious, have occurred in Wheeler County during the last few days, Wheeler County Sheriff Jimmy Adams said today.

An Elk City, Okla., man was transported to an Amarillo hospital for severe head and arm injuries, Adams said, following an accident about 7 p.m. Monday, 1.2 miles east of Allison.

Department of Public Safety Trooper Don Lundy, who investigated the accident, said William Smith, 37, of Elk City, Okla., was driving the GMC pickup when he lost control and rolled the vehicle on a county dirt road. He said the investigation shows the vehicle was traveling too fast for the road conditions. A passenger in the vehicle, Gary Blankenship, 30, also of Elk City, Okla., received minor injuries.

Citations will be issued in the accident, Lundy said.

In another Monday accident, a man driving a motorcycle was transported to an Amarillo hospital following the 1:30 p.m. accident at 11th and Main streets. The motorcycle and a pickup collided, the sheriff said.

Texas Department of Public Safety Trooper Kevin King investigated the accident. He was off work today and names and details of the accident were not available.

Sheriff Adams said that his office investigated a 10:30 p.m. Sunday accident between two minor teenagers, which totaled two vehicles. He said the accident occurred on Main Street when one vehicle had stopped to talk to some people and the other crashed into the back of the stopped vehicle.

One person received a busted lip in the accident, he said. No other injuries were reported.

In another, unrelated accident, a BMW reportedly lost control on Interstate 40 Monday afternoon. No further information was available from the DPS.

An accident reported at 11 p.m. Saturday involved a minor female driver and a pedestrian.

Trooper Lundy said the accident occurred on Main Street when the female driver, reportedly 14 years old, stated she did not see the 19-year-old male pedestrian and the County holds hearing on precinct lines

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Gray County Commissioners heard no opposition during a public hearing Monday afternoon at the Gray County Courthouse to a plan calling for adjustment of precinct lines to more evenly distribute population.

Susan Tripplehorn of the Gray County Republican Party, the only citizen to appear at the hearing, said after examining commissioners' plans, "This is really the only thing they can do."

Under the proposed plan, which was not voted on during the meeting, precinct lines will be "moved north," according to Commissioner Joe Wheeley, to accommodate growth in the northern area of Pampa.

Commissioners pointed out that federal law requires all persons equal representation, which means precinct lines must be adjusted with the new census count each decade.

In addition, commissioners must be able to prove they have not drawn precinct lines in such a way as to dilute the minority vote in Gray County.

County Judge Carl Kennedy said the proposed plan meets that requirement.

Precinct 1 will lose 1,451 persons in Pampa, while Precinct 2 will pick up 1,046 citizens.

Likewise, Precinct 4 will see a decrease of 890 people, while Precinct 3 will pick up 1,288.

Countywide, that will mean the total census population will be represented within the guidelines mandated by federal law, the Commissioners Court stated.

If the plan is voted in by commissioners at their next meeting, the county population breakdown will be: Precinct 1: 5,985; Precinct 2: 6,003; Precinct 3: 5,972; Precinct 4: 6,007.

That will accommodate the official census count for Pampa of 19,959 and for Gray County of 23,967.

Commissioners said they now need to get maps printed that will outline the new precinct lines. They said those copies will be available when ready through the County Clerk's office.

In other business, commissioners agreed, pending approval by the Pampa Independent School District, to hold a joint election on Aug. 10.

Dr. Dawson Orr, superintendent of schools, said today the election will include "three constitutional amendments dealing with (statewide) tax exemptions as well as if the voters of the Pampa ISD want to have those exemptions also."

Voters will be asked by the Legislature to approve the following measures:

1. The exemption of 20 percent of the market value of the residence homestead from ad valorem taxation in Gray County.

2. The exemption of $10,000 of the market value of the residence homestead of an individual who is disabled and of $10,000 of the market value of the residence homestead of an individual who is 65 or older from ad valorem taxation in Gray County.

3. The taxation of all tangible personal property, other than manufactured homes, in Gray County that is not held or used for the production of income.

If the third measure passes, personal property such as boats and motor homes will be taxed to raise money for education in the state.

In other business, commissioners toured the new Gray County Jail and talked with construction supervisors about progress on the facility.

Problems with growing prison populations and new jail and prison construction around the nation have made it difficult to purchase security doors that meet state specifications, commissioners were told.

It is uncertain how long it will take to secure the doors, construction supervisors said.

Commissioners also used their afternoon session to approve tuition for Michael Blackmon, a safe driving instructor for those convicted of driving while intoxicated, to attend a certification renewal seminar in Waco.

Approval was also given to sale of tax property at 717 Octavius and a routine renewal of contracts with the Risk Management Interlocal Fund of the Texas Association of Counties.

Democrats to look closely at views of justice named to replace Marshall

By STEVEN KOMAROW
 Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democrats promised today to scrutinize Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas' views on abortion and other divisive issues. But Republicans said he should not divulge his feelings about controversies that might come before the court.

"I'm satisfied that this man will pass muster," President Bush declared Monday in naming Thomas to succeed retiring Justice Thurgood Marshall. Conservatives applauded the selection and predicted liberals would have trouble opposing the black judge.

But Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, said the Senate Judiciary Committee, in confirming four justices without learning how they felt about abortion, has "given them a free ride" and should be tougher in ferreting out Thomas' views.

"The failure to give an answer may cause me and others to be unwilling to vote for his confirmation," Metzenbaum said on CBS This Morning.

Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., noted that Metzenbaum did not press Justice David Souter during confirmation hearings about his position on abortion. "I do not think it is appropriate to ask a nominee the ultimate question as to how he is going to decide a specific case," Specter said.

"I will not support yet another Reagan-Bush Supreme Court nominee who remains silent on a woman's right to choose, and then ascends to the court to weaken that right," said Metzenbaum, the only member of the Judiciary Committee who voted against Thomas' nomination to the Circuit Court of Appeals to the District of Columbia.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said on NBC's Today show that "literally nobody nominated for the Supreme Court should give his or her views with regard to cases that might come up in the future."

But Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt.,

Judge Clarence Thomas

said "in the past few months alone the Supreme Court is throwing out past decisions, and I think it is legitimate to ask Judge Thomas, what do you think of settled law, like Roe vs. Wade (legitimizing abortion), what do you think of a woman's right to privacy, free speech issues, issues of freedom of religion."

"Anybody who takes him on in the area of civil rights is taking on the grandson of a sharecropper," said Hatch, who predicted an easy confirmation.

Still, civil rights groups have opposed Thomas on grounds he was insensitive to the concerns of minorities and the elderly as chairman of the federal Equal Employment Opportunities Commission in the 1980s.

"The fact that he is an African-American should not be a basis for avoiding very careful scrutiny of his civil rights record," said Julius L. Chambers, director of the NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund.

While some Democrats immediately blasted the nomination, the party's biggest guns held their fire.

Judiciary Committee Chairman Joseph Biden, D-Del., Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, and Sen. Edward M.

Kennedy, D-Mass., all promised a thorough review of the nomination. Confirmation hearings are expected to begin after Congress' August recess.

Thomas, 43, would strengthen the 6-3 conservative majority on the nine member court. An unabashed conservative, he would succeed the court's leading liberal — and first and only black justice.

Bush rejected suggestions that he chose Thomas because he wanted to keep a black in that seat.

"I kept my word to the American people and to the Senate by picking the best man for the job on the merits. And the fact he's minority, so much the better," Bush said at a news conference outside his vacation home in Kennebunkport, Maine.

Potential opponents of the nominee promised in their statements to ignore Thomas' race when they examine his record.

"The background of Judge Clarence Thomas is less important than his views and what they mean to protecting our constitutional rights," said Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill.

When head of the EEOC during the Reagan administration, Thomas "seemed to go out of his way to find ways to weaken some of the basic civil rights protections," said Simon, a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

On a number of occasions Thomas has expressed objections to racial quotas. In a 1985 statement, Thomas said "federal enforcement agencies... turned the statutes on their heads by requiring discrimination in the form of hiring and promotion quotas, so-called goals and timetables."

In a 1987 article for the Yale Law & Policy Review he referred to affirmative action as "social engineering."

"I don't want my vote to contribute to an increasingly large and conservative anti-choice majority on the Supreme Court," said Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif.

Thomas, who was raised by his grandparents in Pinpoint, Ga., in a house without indoor plumbing, told reporters "As a child, I could not dare dream that I would ever see the Supreme Court, not to mention be nominated to it."

Standing by Bush's side, Thomas said, "Only in America could this have been possible."

Thomas said he looked forward to the confirmation process "and to be an example to those who are where I was, and to show them that, indeed, there is hope."

Thomas declined to answer questions about his legal views until his hearings.

- Unanimously approved the purchase of a piece of property in McLean for a price of $9,000;
- Discussed but took no action on providing financial assistance for employee dependants on the county medical insurance policy. Wright had asked for the item to be placed on the agenda, saying that with the recent increase in insurance rates, many employees are going to have to drop their dependant insurance coverage.

Hahn pointed out that if the county contributes to employees who have dependant insurance coverage, it would be unfair to those who do not have their dependants on the county's insurance policy.

Wright said that he hopes that in the budget sessions the Commissioners Court can find some money to at least give the employees a raise to help offset the increased insurance costs to dependants.

Freelance photographer arrested in Gandhi assassination

MADRAS, India (AP) — Police arrested a freelance photographer today and said he helped the killers of former Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi.

Subha Sundaram, who owns a photo studio in Madras, was brought before a city magistrate who ordered him to remain in police custody 30 days.

"We have vital clues about his involvement," said a senior police official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Sundaram is the eighth person arrested in connection with Gandhi's assassination by a suicide bomber at a May 21 election rally in Sriperumbudur, a town 25 miles southwest of Madras. Three of those arrested are Sri Lankan Tamils and the others are Indian Tamils.

The police investigation into his assassination has centered on the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam, the most powerful group fighting for a Tamil homeland in Sri Lanka.

Police said Sundaram was involved with Sri Lankan Tamil militants.

In 1987, when Gandhi was prime minister, he sent Indian troops to Sri Lanka to enforce a cease-fire between the Sri Lankan army and the Tamil Tiger rebels. But the Tigers reneged on Indian-brokered peace plan, and resumed fighting.

Indian troops were recalled in March 1990 by the government of V.P. Singh, who replaced Gandhi as prime minister.

Heavy fighting erupts between Slovenian, federal Yugoslav troops

By DUSAN STOJANOVIC
Associated Press Writer

OTOCEC, Yugoslavia (AP) — The federal army battled Slovenian militiamen with tanks and artillery today on the borders of the renegade republic in fierce fire-fights that shattered Yugoslavia's fragile truce.

Jets screamed overhead and fired into the ground and black smoke from burning trucks clouded the sky as a federal armored unit tried to burst through a Slovenian blockade to free another unit pinned down by Slovene fire.

The trapped tank unit had tried to move through an encirclement of Slovenian forces when the two sides began trading fire before dawn, witness reports said.

Slovenian radio said half the army tanks were destroyed, but gave no figure.

The army said seven troops were killed and 13 were wounded in the clash in the Krakovski forest, near Otocec not far from the Croatian border. Associated Press reporter John Daniszewski counted one dead and two wounded among the federal troops that went to the aid of trapped soldiers.

Slovenia's Information Ministry reported militiamen and federal soldiers were killed, but gave no figures. Slovenian radio said there were "many victims."

Police in southern Austria also reported new fighting at the Slovenian border with Austria. The federal army said Slovene units attacked a post controlled by national forces at the Italian border.

No details were available on any casualties at the international borders.

Ljubljana, the renegade republic's capital, briefly lost radio and television service after transmitters outside the city came under air attack, the Information Ministry said.

Residents fled to bomb shelters and basements as explosions reverberated across the Slovenian capital. Witnesses said the blasts were sonic booms created by warplanes streaking over city.

Information Minister Jelko Kacin said Slovenian defense forces fired two surface-to-air missiles on federal warplanes, but scored no hits.

He later went on television and proposed a cease-fire be called at 3 p.m., but the federal military offered no reply and the deadline passed.

Slovenia and Croatia declared independence a week ago and the army intervened in Slovenia after the republic took over international border posts. In three days of combat that began Thursday, Slovenia said at least 63 people died and 142 were wounded.

A European Community delegation had worked out a cease-fire agreement that halted the combat Saturday. The accord called for the federal troops to return to their barracks and put the two republics' independence moves on hold for 90 days. But Slovenia insisted the army disarm before moving and said it would not give up the border posts with Austria and Italy.

The federal Defense Ministry said it used air strikes to provide support for the trapped troops. The ministry issued a statement accusing the Slovenians of "rudely violating the cease-fire agreement."

Croatian television said today the airport in its capital, Zagreb, was closed at 10:45 a.m. because the fighting in Slovenia was not far away. The nuclear power plant at Krsko, about 15 miles from the fighting, was shut down as a precaution, media reports said.

Slovenian Information Minister Jelko Kacin said that while the fighting continued, the republic "cannot concede to a fully armed withdrawal on Slovenian territory."

Earlier, German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher met with Slovenia's president, Milan Kucan, in the southern Austrian city of Klagenfurt. But Genscher, who is trying to mediate and end to the crisis, canceled a trip to Ljubljana for security reasons.

The 35-member Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe, meeting in Vienna, issued a declaration urging troops on both sides to withdraw.

Croatia said its representative on Yugoslavia's eight-member federal presidency, Stipe Mesic, would travel to Ljubljana to try to defuse the crisis. And the federal presidency planned an emergency session.

The European Community sent an urgent message, meanwhile, to federal Premier Ante Markovic warning it would immediately freeze aid to Yugoslavia unless federal troops returned to barracks.

In Ljubljana, a defiant Kucan told reporters the army crackdown on Slovenia means Yugoslavia "cannot be put back together again."

The army, dominated by Serbian officers, had issued a harshly worded statement Monday threatening a "massive and rigorous military strike," unless Slovenia allowed federal troops to move.

Lt. Gen. Konrad Kolsek, a Slovene who commanded last week's military intervention in his home republic, was replaced Monday by a Serb, Lt. Gen. Zivota Avramovic.

It was unclear whether ethnic backgrounds were a factor in the change in command. Observers have said commanders were inept in fighting the lightly armed Slovene forces.

The federal army has deployed less than 5 percent of its 180,000 troops and 2,000-plus tanks in Slovenia, facing Slovenian militia trained in guerrilla warfare.

Slovenia last week cut power and water to federal army bases in the republic and widespread desertion was reported. Many troops reportedly were short of food and water.

Serbia's hard-line Communist leaders want a strong central government. Slovenia and Croatia want a loose federation of sovereign states. Slovenia has pursued independence more aggressively than Croatia.

Carswell AFB closing creates concerns for economic loss

FORT WORTH (AP) — Carswell Air Force Base might have survived a federal base-closing commission's axe except for ambitious expansion plans at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, a suburban mayor said.

Grapevine Mayor Bill Tate blamed the decision to close Carswell on the DFW Airport Board, contending that DFW's plans for new runways and increased air capacity ultimately did in the facility.

"We have been saying all along that there will be a downside to DFW expansion, and this is the first example," Tate said. "DFW's ambitious multibillion-dollar expansion plans may have cost us Carswell, one of our most vital economic assets."

Tate said that DFW's expansion plans "closed in" Carswell's airspace, making it a likely target for closure.

Carswell was one of three Texas installations that got unfavorable news from Sunday's deliberations of the commission in Washington. Among the 35 installations nationally that apparently will close are Bergstrom Air Force Base in Austin and the Beeville naval station. Kingsville's naval station and Goodfellow Air Force at San Angelo were spared.

Gov. Ann Richards said Monday she is disappointed in the loss of the three Texas bases and is asking a state task force on economic transition to coordinate local, state and federal assistance to those targeted communities.

"This task force will ensure that there is a centralized approach to bringing the assistance they are entitled as a result of the base closures," Richards said.

The head of the commission that made the decisions on which military bases should be shuttered or left open brushed aside suggestions

Chamber announces Krazy Kash winners

Winners of the recent Krazy Days Krazy Kash promotion have been announced by the Retail Trade Committee of the Greater Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce.

A drawing to determine the winners was held at the Chamber of Commerce office Monday.

Winners and the places where they registered for the drawing are as follows:

- L.L. Childers of Pampa, $500, Alco;
- Stephanie Logue of Pampa, $200, ClothesLine;
- Debbie Hendrick of Pampa, $100, Watson's Feed & Garden Center;
- William Adair of Pampa, $100, Mr. Muffler; and
- Mark Russell of Skellytown, $100, Balfour Optical.

Krazy Days sales and activities took place Thursday, Friday and Saturday, with merchants participating from throughout the city. As part of the activities, merchants held a drawing for winners of $1,000 in Krazy Kash, which can be used to buy the equivalent amount of merchandise from participating businesses.

that politics played a key role in the panel's recommendations.

Beeville city officials say they have been in contact for more than a year with companies interested in locating an industrial complex on the land Naval Air Station Chase Field occupies.

City councilman and former mayor John Ybanez said the proposed closure will have little immediate effect on the city.

Mayor Carlos Salazar agreed.

"It's been 18 months since this thing started," said Salazar, who is also a civil service worker at Chase Field. "I don't think the impact will be much different. We've already seen a big slowdown here in business."

James Courter, head of the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Commission, denied the contention of some that Carswell would have been spared if former U.S. Rep. Jim Wright of Fort Worth were still Speaker of the House.

Courter noted that the commission voted to close Loring Air Force Base in Maine even though Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell is from that state.

Courter said Carswell was hurt by its proximity to DFW Airport, its inability to expand and its "poor strategic location."

In Fort Worth, city leaders began mapping their strategy for the future of Carswell.

Fort Worth Mayor Kay Granger met Monday with Rep. Pete Geren of Fort Worth, Rep. Joe Barton of Ennis and others to begin assembling a task force to study alternative uses for the base, Carswell public information officer Pat Svacina said.

Some of the suggested uses for Carswell include turning it into an industrial park, relocating Meacham Airport there or creating an international trade zone. Citizens also have suggested turning the base into a recreation area.

"None of those options have been explored yet and that's what the task force will do," Svacina said. "That's a huge chunk of land. It's not in any form that can be converted to civilian use immediately."

Part of the task force's goal will be to minimize the economic loss to the region. An Air Force study found that the base pours $212 million into the regional economy every year and affects 12,000 jobs.

Mother of drugged stillborn sentenced to 12 years

HOUSTON (AP) — A woman sentenced to 12 years in prison for possessing cocaine found in her stillborn infant plans to appeal the precedent-setting conviction, her attorney says.

Alex Bunin, who represented Traci Jackson, said Monday's sentencing by State District Judge Woody Densen followed a jury's verdict that Bunin argued unconstitutionally discriminated against women.

"I don't think it should stand, but that's for the appellate court to decide," said Bunin, who took the case on a voluntary basis on behalf of the American Civil Liberties Union.

The 20-year-old woman was convicted Thursday by a jury after a four-day trial.

Attorneys said the case marked the first time in Texas that a woman has been tried for possession of cocaine based on evidence which showed the presence of the drug in the woman's child.

During her sentencing Monday, Ms. Jackson also pleaded guilty to a theft charge and to a charge of violating her probation by committing an earlier theft. Densen sentenced her to two 10-year sentences for those two charges. The three sentences will be served concurrently.

Prosecutor Casey O'Brien disagreed with Bunin the conviction discriminated against women.

"It doesn't at all discriminate," O'Brien said. "The offense is one that anyone can commit. The only aspect of this case that is different from a standard case is the evidence necessary to prove the offense is particular to women."

Testimony showed Jackson spent July 9, 1989, in a Houston crack cocaine house smoking crack for several hours before going into a bathroom, apparently to deliver her baby.

Another woman testified she later found the 3 1/2-pound, stillborn fetus wrapped in a plastic bag in a remote bedroom.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

There's two wrongs in civil rights bills

Congress continues to debate the so-called Civil Rights Bill, which, in its effect, would put heavy pressure on American businesses to use racial and ethnic quotas in their hiring practices.

The Bush administration opposes the bill, and is using the quota issue as a way to hammer Democrats before the 1992 presidential election. Most Americans strongly oppose quotas, rightly fearing that they would force the nation into an apartheid-style system of racial segregation, in which some races are given preference over others by law.

But there's something funny here. The Bush administration's alternative bill would have much the same effect.

The Bush bill has been proposed in Congress by House Minority Leader Robert Michel. The bill is written in language that only a lawyer could love, language that contrasts sharply with the simple, clear language of our Constitution and Bill of Rights. But bear with us.

The bill, in amending Section 703 of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, states that "an unlawful employment practice based on disparate impact" — that is, racial percentages different from those in the local population — "is established only when a complaining party demonstrates that a particular employment practice caused a disparate impact on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, or national origin, and the respondent" — the employer — "fails to demonstrate that such practice is justified by business necessity." This last section is the key: It is "the respondent," the employer, who must prove that his hiring policy "is justified."

This section, and a similar section in the Democratic bill, depart from our ancient tradition of law by shifting the burden of proof from the state's prosecutors to the defendant. It is not the state that must demonstrate the discriminatory nature of hiring practice, but the employer who must prove its benign nature.

Under this burden, employers, especially smaller businesses, in order to avoid expensive litigation, would be under heavy pressure to simply make their workforce comply with population characteristics, whether it made business sense or amounted to reverse discrimination.

So the Bush bill is no improvement over the Democratic bill. Our congressmen should carefully consider the bill that will emerge from conference after the Senate enacts its version. This land of liberty should not be turned into a bureaucratic nightmare of racial and ethnic legal preferences.

Devils are hard to give up

Watching the religious militance and strife that grip societies around the globe, you get the impression that people maintain their religions not so much because they need gods as because they need devils. Plenty of believers are lax at loving the people they are supposed to love but rigorous in hating the people they are supposed to hate, which is why we have no heavens on earth but plenty of Tehrans and Belfasts.

Unfortunately, this psychological phenomenon appears in the political arena as well as the spiritual. Enemies are cherished possessions, not to be relinquished lightly. As a result, we are about to have a grand political fight over whether to lift the U.S. economic sanctions against South Africa.

The sanctions, enacted in 1986, were designed to bring about the dismantling of apartheid. With last month's repeal of the last law enforcing South Africa's official racism, that dismantling has been accomplished. In legal terms, it is as dead as slavery.

That doesn't mean South Africa has made all the changes it needs to make. But racial integration — in the workplace, hotels, restaurants, public transportation and even residential housing — is an established fact of life.

The fiercest proponents of sanctions, however, are still using their 1986 calendars. Like conservatives who for years refused to acknowledge that the Soviet Union was changing for the better, liberals are loath to admit that South Africa no longer deserves to be treated as a pariah.

That position is getting hard to defend. The Bush administration says that of the five conditions South Africa must meet to get the sanctions removed, four have been met — ending the state of emergency, lifting bans of opposition political parties and allowing free political expression, agreeing to enter negotiations with representative black leaders, and scrapping apartheid laws.

Some 1,000 political prisoners have been released, including Nelson Mandela. All that remains is for the government to free the 1,000 remaining political prisoners, which the White House expects to happen within weeks.

So what, exactly, is the problem? The African National Congress would like the sanctions kept to put pressure on the government to negotiate reasonably about the country's future. But who is going to put pressure on the ANC to negotiate reasonably?

In the United States, those who want to continue sanctions grump that the conditions actually haven't been met. True, South Africa's parliament did junk the Population Registration Act, which served as the foundation of apartheid by classifying every person according to race. But, says Anne Griffin, legislative director of the U.S. lobby group TransAfrica, "We don't feel the repeal changed much." Oh? So why have we been demanding it for five years?

Griffin also insists there is no free political expression in South Africa, a view that is hard to square with the mass rallies held by the African National Congress and the fact that people no longer go to jail for criticizing the government.

Other objections include the fact that blacks still lack a meaningful vote and that police can still detain people without charge. But the sanctions law didn't include these conditions. Adding new demands would mean renegeing on a promise to reward South Africa if it fundamentally altered its racial policies.

Denying that South Africa has done that is about as plausible as denying the Sylvester Stallone is a movie star. The Pretoria government has not built an Eden, but it has allowed the country to escape the hell known as apartheid, with President F.W. de Klerk repudiating it in both word and deed. He has also accepted the principle that non-whites will have an equal say in governing the country, essentially conceding ultimate control to the black majority.

Though De Klerk has often been likened to Mikhail Gorbachev, the comparison is faulty. It was his predecessor, P.W. Botha, who filled the Gorbachev role in South Africa by starting a serious but cautious process of reform. De Klerk is more like what Boris Yeltsin appears to be: a radical bent on destroying the old order, not making it function better.

The question now is whether the United States should cooperate in that attempt or not — whether, when asked for bread, to give a stone. Economic sanctions may be a defensible policy toward a stubbornly repressive and racist government, but not toward a regime committed to building a liberal, democratic system.

What makes sense for our Soviet policy should make sense for our South Africa policy. But some devils are harder to give up than others.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, July 2, the 183rd day of 1991. There are 182 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On July 2, 1881, President James A. Garfield was shot by Charles J. Guiteau, a disappointed office-seeker, at the Washington railroad station. Garfield died the following September.

On this date:

In 1566, the French astrologer, physician and prophet Nostradamus died in Salon.

In 1776, the Continental Congress passed a resolution saying that "these United Colonies are, and of right, ought to be, Free and Independent States."

In 1890, Congress passed the Sherman Antitrust Act, designed to prevent restraint of interstate trade or commerce with foreign nations through trusts.

In 1926, the United States Army Air Corps was created.

Below par for the old course

A lady a decade-and-a half younger than yours truly accompanied me recently to Winston-Salem, N.C., where I participated in the highlight of my golfing year, The Crosby.

The tournament came east from California several years ago. They play some of Bing's old records in the clubhouse at Bermuda Run Country Club and various celebrities and corporate types play for a purse totaling $1.5 million.

What money you win, you don't keep. You designate a charity where you want your winnings sent. The Crosby is all about helping others.

I told the lady as we left for the tournament, "You'll get to see a lot of famous people at The Crosby."

First day of the 54-hole tournament we arrived at Bermuda Run and she said, "OK, show me somebody famous."

"There's Dale Robertson," I said.

"Who?" she replied.

"Dale Robertson. He was in Tales of Wells Fargo, all those years. Remember his horse's name?"

"How could I remember his horse's name if I don't remember him?"

"Good point," I said, "but just for the record, his horse was named Jubilee and Pall Mall sponsored the show."

I looked around for somebody else famous.

Lewis Grizzard

"There's George Blanda," I said.

"I never heard of him, either."

"He holds the record for scoring the most points in the National Football League."

"I thought that was Joe Montana," the lady replied. "Where's he? He's a lot cuter than George What's-His-Name."

"Joe Montana's not here," I said. "But there's Johnny Mathis."

"He's a football player, too?"

"Of course not," I explained, becoming somewhat frustrated. "He had a lot of hit songs like 'Chances Are.' I know you remember that. 'Chances are, as I wear a silly grin ...'"

"Nope."

"OK," I said, bent but not broken, "there's Willie McCovey over on the practice tee hitting balls. He played for the Giants. And there's Dr. J., the former basketball star. And there's Jim Taylor. He played for the Packers."

"I don't keep up with sports that much," said the lady. "Any movie stars?"

"There's Don Murray," I said.

"I remember him. He used to be on Saturday Night Live."

"You're thinking of Bill Murray. Don's a little older. There's Kathleen Sullivan. She used to be on the news for CBS."

"And there's McLean Stevenson. He used to be on MASH. And there's Bobby Hull. He used to play hockey."

"I've come all this way to see a lot of stars," the lady said. "I thought Madonna and Tom Cruise and Kevin Costner might be here. And why didn't they invite Vanilla Ice?"

Just then Bob Hope came riding past us in a golf cart.

"There's Bob Hope," I said. "You can't tell me you've never heard of Bob Hope."

"Of course I've heard of Bob Hope," she said. "My grandmother used to think he was really funny."

Gerald Ford, who used to be president, came by on his way to the first tee. When he was in office, my companion was 12.

I said, "Wait here. I'm going to the locker room to change shoes."

What about personal responsibility?

By SARAH OVERSTREET

Several years ago, when I was doing research for an article on Premenstrual Syndrome, medical experts told me the disorder is due to fluctuations in hormone production that occur in many women of child-bearing age.

This imbalance, they said, can cause unpleasant physical symptoms, as well as mood swings that range from mild irritation to suicidal tendencies. I talked with women who said their lives have been changed by treatment for PMS.

I thought at the time that the discovery of the malady and its treatment was a mixed blessing: Sufferers would be helped, but this new knowledge would be a ready tool in the hands of anyone who wanted to use it against women either individually or collectively.

However, I didn't expect it to become a tool for women to use to excuse illegal behavior. Silly me. If Dan White could use a "Twinkie defense" — he claimed he wasn't responsible for killing Supervisor Harvey Milk in San Francisco because of a sugar imbalance brought on by eating too many sugary foods — than any extenuating circumstance is fair game.

Dr. Geraldine Richter, an orthopedic surgeon from Centerville, Va., recently used PMS as an excuse for kicking a state trooper, according to an Associated Press reporter. The AP account is an interesting one:

Richter doesn't seem like such an ogre when you realize that while the trooper was arresting her on suspicion of drunken driving, he reportedly was talking about taking her three children into protective custody. Most mothers are terrified of having their children taken from them.

But the AP reported that Richter's blood-alcohol level was found to have been 0.13 percent (0.10 is legally drunk in Virginia), and for crying out loud (no pun intended), her defense was that she was suffering from PMS.

Fairfax General District Court Judge Robert Smith found her not guilty of any offense in the case.

Personally, unless the trooper is physically hurting a citizen, I don't think there's any defense for kicking a state trooper. If there is, it sure isn't PMS. But that's just one example of the ridiculous alibis defense attorneys have presented for their clients in the last few years.

Federico Macias' attorney attributed his client's crime — killing a couple with a machete — to a cleft palate that left Macias unable to nurse at his mother's breast. Then there's the guy who says he killed two bank tellers because he grew up in the Depression and didn't want his children to suffer the deprivation he did.

Or the fellow who claims he was only acting out the traits of his Hispanic culture — "male machismo," his lawyer called it — when he killed a Dallas police officer. Or the guy who says he killed because of "TDC stress syndrome," which was brought on by his having spent most of his adult life in the Texas Department of Corrections. Or the killer who blames his crime on post-traumatic stress disorder from the Vietnam War, although his service during the war was on a ship that never made it near Vietnam.

I guess you can't fault an attorney for trying anything that might aid a client. But if the courts hadn't acquitted or given reduced sentences to some defendants because of these so-called extenuating circumstances, the attorneys wouldn't be trying it. In our effort to be just, our court systems have allowed defenses that are just stupid.

And PMS? I'm afraid Judge Robert Smith has opened the door to a rash of hormone defenses, because I don't think it will be long before researchers establish that men suffer from hormonal swings, too. My friend has an "X" marked on her calendar every six weeks, so she'll be ready for her male boss' regular-as-clock-work tirade.

Pretty soon in addition to machismo, post-traumatic stress disorder and physical deformity, some lucky fellow will be able to plead the hormonal ravages of "NMS" — no menstrual syndrome — as a defense.

Actor Michael Landon loses his battle with cancer, dies at age 54

By DEBORAH HASTINGS
AP Television Writer

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — Michael Landon lost a battle with cancer three months after he was diagnosed with the disease, saddening millions who knew him as Little Joe on Bonanza and an angel on Highway to Heaven. He was 54.

Landon succumbed to liver and pancreatic cancer Monday at his ranch, his wife, Cindy, at his side, said publicist Harry Flynn.

"I think he fought the fight about as well and courageously as it could be fought," said Brandon Tartikoff, former NBC entertainment president.

The boyishly handsome actor with a luxurious mane he regarded as a Samsonian source of strength called NBC home for 28 years — 14 with Bonanza, nine with Little House on the Prairie and five with Highway to Heaven.

Karen Grassle, who played Landon's wife on Little House, said he was blessed with a sense of humor and an ability to defuse trouble. "He believed in miracles," she said. "And in some ways, that was his message, his legacy."

His determination to fight the disease drew admiration. Landon received more than 50,000 pieces of mail after announcing April 8 that he had been diagnosed with inoperable cancer. Liver and pancreas cancer is almost always fatal.

In his last TV appearance, on The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson on May 9, he exuded optimism and joked about his cancer treatments, which included included coffee enemas and injections of drug-dispensing fat bubbles.

He asked the studio audience if anyone had ever taken a coffee enema and someone said yes. Landon replied, "You must be fun to have breakfast with."

Carson, a longtime friend, lost a son in an auto accident June 21. He said in a statement Monday that Landon called him to express his sympathy.

"The courage and sensitivity he showed in our conversation, in comforting me while he was in great pain, attests to the quality of this man and his character," Carson said.

Landon also wrote, produced and directed TV shows. He said he favored non-violent, humanistic dramas that looked at life, death, family and calamity because he had a miserable childhood, including enduring anti-Semitic taunts from other children.

"It was filled with religious prejudice, a judgmental upbringing and lots of silence," he said a few years ago. "My parents went for weeks without speaking. I created family relationships where people stay together because they communicate."

Born Eugene Maurice Orowitz to show-business parents Eli Orowitz and Peggy O'Neill in New York City, he selected his stage name from a phone book.

Landon was a national champion javelin thrower in high school and set a record with a toss of 211 feet, seven inches. He attended the University of Southern California on a scholarship.

After several fellow college athletes gave him an unsolicited haircut, he claimed his javelin tosses slipped 50 feet.

After college, Landon took a variety of odd jobs. His acting career began while he was unloading freight cars and a co-worker, an aspiring actor, asked him to help him prepare for an audition.

After the audition, Landon — not his co-worker — was asked to join the Warner Bros. acting school. Landon made his movie debut in 1957 in I Was a Teenage Werewolf. He became Little Joe Cartwright on Bonanza two years later.

The series — in which Lorne Greene played the widower patriarch of a frontier family — ran from 1959 to 1973. It was No. 1 from 1964 to 1967 and was seen weekly in 87 countries by an estimated 400 million viewers.

With Landon's death, the only original cast member still alive is Pernell Roberts. His manager, Brian Rix, said Roberts was "deeply grieved by Michael's death."

Landon began writing in 1963 with a Bonanza script. He later wrote most episodes of Little House on the Prairie, which was based on children's books about a pioneer family by Laura Ingalls Wilder. It ran from 1974 to 1982.

In Highway to Heaven, Landon played angel Jonathan Smith, who returns to Earth to help people in trouble. The series ran from 1984 to 1989. He said in April that the role helped him face his condition.

"I think you have to have a sense of humor about everything," Landon said. "I think Highway to Heaven helped me with that since I played a dead guy anyway."

His film credits include God's Little Acre, The Legend of Tom Dooley, Maracaibo and The Errand Boy.

In 1976, he wrote, directed and acted in The Loneliest Runner, a TV movie about a teenage athlete based on Landon's bed-wetting traumas. Landon made another autobiographical film, Sam's Son, in 1984.

He was set to start work on the new CBS series US when he was diagnosed with cancer on April 5.

Landon is survived by his third wife and nine children.

Funeral services will be private. A public memorial service was being arranged.

Hubble repairs in 1994 will cost about $20 million

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — It will be four years late and cost an extra $20 million, but by early 1994 the Hubble Space Telescope should finally work the way it was supposed to.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration is quietly moving to correct last year's great embarrassment: the discovery that a giant lens on the $1.5 billion telescope had been ground improperly, causing it to be nearsighted.

Although no formal announcement has been made, a NASA contractor is building corrective lenses that will be installed by spacewalking astronauts late in 1993 or, more likely, early in 1994. A replacement for the Hubble's jitter-causing solar arrays also is in the works.

"The new Hubble will do everything the original could ever do," Charles Pellerin, director of NASA's astrophysics division, said in a recent interview. It will have, he said, "a couple of very tiny shortfalls, but it will be able to fulfill 97 percent of its complete scientific promise."

That promise was spectacular. "The Hubble Space Telescope will gather light from objects 25 times fainter than today's best telescope," one pre-launch blurb proclaimed. "It will see several times farther into space, and view objects with 10 times the clarity of the best Earth-based instruments. The telescope's optics are the finest ever created."

But a "spherical aberration" of the lens prevents the telescope from seeing the faintest light, which originated billions of years ago when the universe was young.

The Hubble's problems have been magnified by comedians and NASA detractors, but Pellerin said it is still "the best telescope in the world, bar none." He said the telescope is making a discovery about every week.

Its accomplishments, all at relatively close distances, include pictures of a remarkable storm on Saturn; seeing a star "incredibly rich" in platinum; finding a galactic jet stream of gas moving at hundreds of thousands of miles an hour; and showing that some fuzzy points of light actually are complexes of distinct stars.

NASA has not announced a final decision on the Hubble repair but the manufacturing is under way, Pellerin said. Plans are being drawn to train two astronauts to make three spacewalks each.

The first day, they will replace the Hubble's solar arrays that provide the telescope with electrical power for instruments and transmitters. The present arrays, provided by the European Space Agency, have two problems.

Every 90 minutes, when the telescope moves from darkness behind the Earth to the daylight side, the abrupt temperature change causes rods framing the solar array panels to bend.

"At the tip end, the motion is about 11 inches," Pellerin said. "It shakes the telescope."

As the telescope moves from the 212-degree Fahrenheit (the boiling point of water) sunlit side of the Earth to the chilled dark side, 180 degrees below freezing, the solar blankets contract. This movement is supposed to be compensated by rollers, but one of the rollers sticks and the result is another case of the shakes every 90 minutes.

Both problems will be fixed with the new arrays, Pellerin said.

On the second day, the astronauts will replace the Hubble's Wide-Field Planetary camera. They also will install a 700-pound box called COSTAR.

This device contains the mechanism to place pairs of mirrors the size of postage stamps in front of two spectrographs and a faint-object camera.

COSTAR, which resembles a telephone booth, will fit into the space on the Hubble now occupied by an instrument that measures the brightness of light. The acronym stands for Corrective Optics, State Telescope Axial Replacement.

The wide-field camera gathers images of planets and other bodies in the solar system and distant objects such as galaxies and quasars that hold clues to the early history of the universe. The camera had been scheduled for replacement in 1993 anyway. The new one was modified to cancel out the mirror faults.

The fact that a repair mission had been planned from the start helps hold down the added cost for COSTAR and other fixes to about $20 million, Pellerin said.

On the third spacewalk day, a new set of gyros will be installed in the Hubble, which has four sets of two. A few months ago, one of the gyros developed an electronic noise and it was shut down. The gyros are the instruments that tell controllers what movements the telescope is making.

Some troops pull out of Algiers after crushing unrest

By RACHID KHIARI
Associated Press Writer

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — Some troops withdrew from Algiers today after crushing the latest outbreak of Muslim fundamentalist unrest in the capital, but witnesses said soldiers were called to a western city to quell an anti-government riot.

Prime Minister Sid Ahmed Ghazali was quoted in newspapers today as saying the leaders of the Islamic Salvation Front would have to "answer for their actions" in court for urging violent protests in this North African nation.

Some tanks and other armored vehicles were withdrawn from intersections and streets in Algiers today, and soldiers surrounding the Islamic Front's headquarters were replaced by police.

The troops moved into the capital over the weekend to arrest leaders of the leading opposition group and drive fundamentalist protesters from the streets. Officials closed mosques considered centers of agitation against the government.

The leaders of the Islamic Front had warned Friday that they would call for a "holy war" against the government if it did not lift a four-month state of emergency aimed at crushing fundamentalist protests.

A military communique issued at midday today said troops had seized rifles, pistols and ammunition from four mosques in different communities. It also reported four deaths, 44 injuries and 340 arrests in clashes with fundamentalists the past 24 hours.

By official count, nearly 1,100 people have been arrested in a three-day crackdown on anti-government protests and agitation.

Eight people, including a policeman, a soldier and six civilians, were reported killed and 39 injured over the three days.

The communique did not specify the locations of the latest violence, but new unrest was reported today in Mostaganem, in western Algeria.

After dawn prayers, loudspeakers repeated the "holy war" threat and fundamentalist supporters took to the streets, witnesses said. Traffic was disrupted by piles of tires set afire in the streets, they said.

Shots were fired when soldiers arrived to take control of key intersections, the witnesses said.

Abassi Madani, president of the Islamic Front, and his vice president, Ali Benhadj, were arrested in the capital Sunday, the army said, for "fomenting, organizing and carrying out an armed conspiracy" against the state.

In comments reported in today's newspapers, Ghazali said they would be tried. Madani "is a liar who lives only by and for lies," Ghazali said.

He also said recent violence underscored the need for the state of emergency imposed June 5 by President Chadli Bendjedid.

Louisiana approves clean air legislation

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — A compromise bill dealing with toxic air emissions is headed to the governor, following final legislative approval by the Senate.

The Senate voted 31-0 Monday to concur with House amendments.

Figures released by the Department of Environmental Quality showed the state ranked No. 5 in the nation in air pollution.

State environmental officials had said approval of the original bill by Sen. Willie Crain, D-Monroe, could greatly delay efforts to reduce air pollution in the state under clean air legislation passed in 1989. That law set a goal of 50 percent reduction of air toxics in Louisiana by 1994.

The amended bill gives industry until Dec. 31, 1996 to comply with the regulations.

First mercantile building once housed sheriff's office, bank, undertaker, churches, dances

The first mercantile building in Pampa was constructed in 1902 by John F. Johnson of Canadian. The Johnson home in Canadian was an outstanding two-story brick home especially noted for Mrs. Johnson's paintings. Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. H.E. Hoover were sisters.

In 1885 Johnson came from his native Tennessee to Kiowa, Kansas, where he soon entered the general merchandising business. He and his brother-in-law, H.E. Hoover, were operating a store in Kiowa at the same time the Southern Kansas R.R. was being constructed across the Texas Panhandle. Johnson followed the railroad by opening stores in Woodward, Indian Territory, and in Higgins, Canadian, Miami and Pampa.

Johnson bought 12 lots on 25 foot frontage (Block 15, lots 13-24). These were the first lots sold for business purposes in Pampa. The Johnson Mercantile Company store, located at 105 North Cuyler, is said to have housed "everything from lockets to caskets." Its valuation of $10,000, as recorded in the Gray County Commission Court Records, 1, p. 51, indicated that there was a sizeable amount of merchandise.

Postmaster Thomas H. Lane became district roadmaster for the railroad on April 22, 1902. The post office was moved from his home to the Johnson building and John F. Johnson was appointed postmaster on September 18, 1902. After Johnson declined the appointment, Bruce Waterfield was appointed postmaster on November 22, 1902.

The Johnson building also housed an office of the law. Presumably this was first occupied by T.J. "Tom" Crawford, Jr., the first sheriff of Gray County, Crawford took office on August 3, 1902, 55 days after the county was organized.

J. N. Duncan Hardware and Furniture opened for business on Feb. 1, 1907, the day before this picture was taken. The building, at 105 N. Cuyler, was constructed in 1902 by Johnson Mercantile Company. That name and the date appear above the Duncan sign.

He was adept with a branding iron as well as with the shooting irons of his trade.

Some of the first dances in Pampa were held at the Johnson building. Later the building housed an undertaking establishment and the First State Bank (First National Bank) when it was first organized. Some of the early denominational churches met in the building before they acquired buildings of their own.

At Christmas time decorated Christmas trees were kept in the Johnson building. Just before Christmas men took turning plows around the streets and laid out fir trees around all the blocks. Then they held services in the schoolhouse.

J.N. Duncan, who came to Pampa in 1906, bought the Johnson

Mercantile Company and the name of the building was changed to J.N. Duncan Hardware and Furniture.

The second store in Pampa, also built in 1902, was Harland and Crump at 101 North Cuyler.

In 1902 Charles McCarty, pumper for the railroad, installed the first telephone in Pampa. He ordered one telephone from a mail order house in Chicago but two telephones were received.

McCarty installed one telephone in his home and the other at the pump house. He installed the telephones himself, piping the wires underground.

S.S. (Sam) Thomas, a native of Virginia, organized one of the first water well drilling companies in Gray County when he came to Pampa in 1902. He was a city councilman on Pampa's first legislative body and engaged in farming and other business.

On January 17, 1912, Sam Thomas married Eula Duncan, daughter of J.N. Duncan. Their children were Yvonne and Jerry. The family lived at 203 East Browning.

Charles L. Thomas also came to Gray County in 1902 and joined his brother, Sam, in the drilling of water wells for White Deer Lands.

In 1914 he purchased a farm of 1,160 acres seven miles north of Pampa on present SH 70. Six hundred acres were planted in wheat, and he had a good orchard of apples, cherries and peaches.

C.L. Thomas was a president of the Gray County State Bank in Pampa, a director of the Texas Wheat Growers Association and a member of the zone board of Texas and Oklahoma wheat growers.

On April 30, 1911 he married Ouida Talley, daughter of J.W. Talley, one of the early ranchers in Roberts County. Their children were Charles Lee and Dorothea (Mrs. Alfred S. Graham).

Son Charles Lee, who was outstanding in drama and art, initiated the idea of the Nativity Scene with life-sized figures to be set up in Central Park in Pampa during the Christmas season.

On August 21, 1943, Frederick W. Brook and Virginia Line were married at the Pampa Army Air Force Base chapel before it was finished. Captain Maurice Garner performed the ceremony and his daughter, Nancy, played the piano and was the bridesmaid. Nancy and Virginia were former roommates.

Possibly other couples were married at the base before the chapel was completed, but James and Beadie Baird, who married on September 10, 1943, were the first couple to be married in the PAAFB chapel after it was finished.

Marvin Daugherty's Hoover Mercantile Store was built of rocks and situated closer to the road than the present store.

On July 27, 1946, Joe and Juanita Massengale bought the Green Lake school building (Roberts County) and moved it to Hoover to house the store.

Now managed by Tom Lively, the store is owned by a co-op out of Panhandle.

Mom struggles with sentence of silence while dad's in jail

DEAR ABBY: Do you believe that a child who is 6 1/2 years old should be told the truth, regardless of what it is?

Here is the situation: Dad is in jail for one year. Please understand, my husband didn't steal anything, nor did he commit a violent crime. However, he was found guilty of driving drunk — it was his third offense. If you think our son should be told the truth, how do you feel about my taking him to visit his father in jail? Or do you think it would be better to tell him that Daddy is away "on business" and he may be gone for quite a long time?

I can't describe the humiliation our family has endured. It was reported in the newspaper, but this is a large city and not everyone is aware of it.

WITHHOLD MY NAME, PLEASE

DEAR WITHHOLD: I think you should tell your son the truth, and tell him now, before someone else does. I also believe that you should take the boy to visit his father — for his sake as well as for his father's. These are troubled times for your family. But it is not the end of the world. And this too shall pass.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing this letter without my wife's knowledge. She wears makeup all day, and she never takes it off before going to bed. Instead, she washes her face in the morning, then applies her makeup for that day.

She has a very nice complexion, but I wonder if she is doing damage to her skin by sleeping in her makeup every night.

HER HUSBAND

DEAR HUSBAND: I consulted Dr. Arnold Klein, top-notch Beverly Hills dermatologist, who said (much to my surprise), "Sleeping in makeup does no more damage to the skin than wearing makeup all day. Many women feel that in the interest of cleanliness they need to scrub their faces daily with the same vigor they would use in scrubbing their kitchen floor. And please, tell your readers that exposure to the sun without a sunscreen, plus the ordinary pollutants in the air, do far more damage to a woman's skin than cosmetics."

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter from the director of the Elder Health Program at the University of Maryland. She advised people to take responsibility for their own health care.

I work in a doctor's office, and you would be amazed at the number of people who call in for refills on their medicines and don't even know the names of them. They ask for "blood pressure pills," or "the little yellow ones." Granted, we have their medications recorded on their charts, but that won't help them if they're in an accident and unable to speak.

Everyone who takes medication, elderly and young alike, should write down the names and dosages on a piece of paper and keep it in their wallets. And every time the doctor changes the dosage or adds a new medication, the patient should make note of it on the paper he or she carries. Also write down any allergies on the same paper.

Help us health givers keep you healthy.

Edberg, Courier advance in Wimbledon Tournament

By ROB GLOSTER
AP Sports Writer

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Defending champion and top seed Stefan Edberg used a couple of short streaks to bounce John McEnroe out of Wimbledon today.

Edberg beat McEnroe, a three-time champion, 7-6 (7-4), 6-1, 6-4, and moved into the quarterfinals.

Edberg ran off 15 straight points midway through the second set and then won 16 of 20 points in a third-set spurt.

The Sweden won the tie-breaker to end a first set that went entirely on serve. The 16th-seeded McEnroe seemed to sag after the tie-breaker.

Also advancing to the quarterfinals was French Open champion Jim Courier, who defeated 14th seed Karel Novacek 6-3, 6-4, 6-2.

The fourth-seeded Courier, whose best previous Wimbledon performance was reaching the third round last year, now has lost only 13 games in his last two victories.

"It's kind of unexpected to me, because I'm not a natural grass-court player," Courier said. "I'm pleasantly surprised to be in the quarterfinals."

Three other Americans — Andre Agassi, David Wheaton and Tim Mayotte — won matches on Monday, joining Derrick Rostagno in the fourth round.

Agassi, Wheaton and Mayotte have taken Wimbledon by storm, rolling through the tournament with hardly a care in the world.

The three wild and crazy Yanks have been checking out tourist sites, blowing kisses to girlfriends and showing off their new threads — and playing some excellent tennis on the side.

And they're having a heck of a time.

"The excitement of Wimbledon speaks for itself. Just being here at Wimbledon and having such a warm response is something more than anyone really deserves," said Agassi, a crowd favorite who used a day off Sunday to tour the town.

"Yesterday I just went sightseeing all day and saw a bunch of things that I don't remember the names to. But I enjoyed them."

Agassi, who defeated Dutch teenager Richard Krajicek 7-6, 6-3, 7-6, stuck with his traditional all-white outfit but added designer sunglasses for a few games Monday.

Wheaton, showing off his stars and stripes bandana on Centre Court, wiped out third seed Ivan Lendl. The Minnesotan boomed 16 aces in a 6-3, 3-6, 7-6, 6-3 defeat of the two-time Wimbledon finalist.

But Wheaton was not yet ready to party.

"You can do that if you beat him in the finals of the tournament, but when you're in the middle of the tournament you're still trying to win the whole thing," he said. "It's not just one match. It's not like a boxing match where you knock the guy out and go celebrate."

Mayotte, who smiled through the last three sets of his first-round comeback victory over Michael Chang and then blew kisses to his girlfriend, laughed his way to another victory Monday.

The unseeded Mayotte, playing in his first tournament since April, defeated Patrik Kuhnen 3-6, 6-2, 7-6, 6-4.

The Americans said they draw inspiration from each other. Wheaton said he was spurred on by Courier's recent victory in the French Open.

"It kind of gave me the feeling that I could win a Grand Slam also," said Wheaton, a grass-court specialist who also reached the fourth round at Wimbledon last year. "I guess it did in a way fortify me a little bit."

Four Americans also reached the women's quarterfinals, led by defending champion Martina Navratilova.

Navratilova, playing in her record 112th Wimbledon singles match, won 6-1, 6-3 over Catarina Lindqvist to set up a clash with ninth-seeded Jennifer Capriati. The 15-year-old Floridian rallied to defeat Brenda Schultz of the Netherlands in three sets.

Mary Joe Fernandez and Zina Garrison also advanced to the quarterfinals. Garrison's victory set up a quarterfinal battle against top seed Steffi Graf, who lost to Garrison in the 1990 Wimbledon semifinals.

Yankees overpower Tribe

AL roundup

By The Associated Press

Now Greg Swindell knows what the pitchers on "Home Run Derby" must have felt like.

Swindell served up back-to-back upper-deck blasts to New York's Jesse Barfield and Kevin Maas on Monday night. But unlike the pitchers on the old TV show who were supposed to give up home runs, all Swindell got for his effort was another loss as the Yankees beat the Cleveland Indians 6-2.

Barfield's two-run blast in the fifth inning made the upper deck in left field and gave the Yankees a 5-2 lead. One pitch later, Maas connected for a shot into the upper deck in right field.

"I don't usually watch 'em, but I watched the one Maas hit. It went a long way," Swindell said. "The pitch to Barfield was the old cement mixer, a hanging slider that rolled over real slow. Maas got a hanging curve."

It was the second time in three days that Barfield and Maas hit consecutive home runs. But no one knew the last time two hitters took turns reaching the opposite upper decks at Yankee Stadium.

"I've gone up there in batting practice, but never in a game. That was a pretty impressive shot," Barfield said.

Barfield reigned as the home-run king for just a moment, until Maas connected.

"I think Kevin was trying to show me up," he said. "Seriously, both of them had some mileage."

In other American League games, it was Boston 6, Milwaukee 0; Toronto 4, Seattle 3; Baltimore 10, Detroit 2; California 6, Texas 2; Chicago 5, Minnesota 4 in 10 innings, and Kansas City 7, Oakland 3. The Yankees, returning home after a 5-1 road trip, spotted the Indians 1-0 and 2-1 leads before scoring twice in the third off Swindell (4-7) to go ahead to stay.

Steve Sax, who had three hits, singled with two outs. Roberto Kelly followed with a double and Sax scored on the play by colliding and jarring the ball loose from catcher Sandy Alomar Jr., who was charged with an error. Don Mattingly followed with an RBI single.

Red Sox 6, Brewers 0
Roger Clemens, who had his scheduled start moved back a day by food poisoning, allowed five singles in seven innings as the Red Sox won at County Stadium.

Clemens (10-5) struck out eight and walked one for his first victory since June 14 and only the second in eight games for the struggling Red Sox. He is now 11-4 lifetime against the Brewers.

Rookie Mo Vaughn provided the offense with a two-run homer and four RBIs off Jaime Navarro (7-5).

Blue Jays 4, Mariners 3
The Blue Jays sent a holiday crowd at the SkyDome away happy by rallying for three runs in the bottom of the ninth.

Seattle starter Randy Johnson had a two-hitter and 11 strikeouts through eighth innings, but allowed a leadoff double to Mookie Wilson and threw wildly on Devon White's comebacker, putting runners on second and third. Roberto Alomar's double off Mike Jackson (4-3) tied the game.

Alomar stole third, and after two intentional walks, Rance Mulliniks grounded to shortstop. Omar Vizquel's throw to catcher Dave Valle was in time, but Alomar was ruled safe by umpire Ken Kaiser, who said Valle's foot came off home plate too soon.

Cubs rally past Pirates

NL roundup

By The Associated Press

Just when things appear out of reach, along comes Ryne Sandberg.

Thanks to Sandberg's bat, the Chicago Cubs overcame a 5-2 deficit and beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-5 in 13 innings Monday night. Because of that comeback, the Pirates had their lead in the National League East reduced to five games over second-place St. Louis and to 5 1/2 over third-place New York.

St. Louis beat Philadelphia 1-0 and New York shaded Montreal 4-2 in the only other NL games Monday.

The victory also kept the fourth-place Cubs at least within hailing distance of the leaders, 11 1/2 games out of first.

Sandberg's two-run homer in the eighth cut a 5-2 Pittsburgh lead to one run, and Jerome Walton's solo shot in the ninth tied it. Sandberg won it in the 13th with a single to right to score Damon Berryhill from second.

"It was a great ball game," Pirates manager Jim Leyland said.

As for Sandberg, Leyland said, "He's a tough out. That's why Sandberg is Sandberg."

"It was a good game all around. We kept chipping away," Sandberg said. "We had a couple of rallies and then the crowd got into it."

Cubs manager Jim Essian called it "a great emotional win. The guys were excited and cheering in the clubhouse."

With Andy Van Slyke slapping four hits, including a fifth-inning homer, the Pirates built a 5-2 lead for starter Bob Walk, who was attempting to run his unbeaten record to 7-0. But the bullpen couldn't protect the lead.

Sandberg homered off Vicente Palacios in the eighth and Walton went long off Bill Landrum, who failed for the first time in 16 save opportunities.

Stan Belinda (3-2) had two out in the 13th when he hit Berryhill with a pitch and walked Mark Grace. Sandberg battled Belinda before punching a single to right.

"With two outs, you think you're out of the inning," Leyland said. "Then a guy gets hit with a pitch, then a walk and Sandberg fought off a good pitch."

Bob Scanlan (3-3) got the victory as the Cubs stretched their winning streak to three games and snapped the Pirates' five-game winning streak.

Cardinals 1, Phillies 0
Bryn Smith (7-4) allowed three hits over seven innings, then gave way to Kris Carpenter and Lee Smith as St. Louis won its fourth game in a week over Philadelphia.

The Cardinals, who swept the Phils at St. Louis last weekend, won the opener of this four-game set on the strength of Todd Zeile's bases-loaded single in the fifth that scored Tom Pagnozzi.

Carpenter pitched the eighth before giving way to Lee Smith, who got his 21st save. He has saved six of the Cardinals' last nine victories.

Bruce Ruffin (1-1), recalled from the minors June 8, gave up 10 hits, struck out seven and walked two in eight innings.

New York 4, Montreal 2
Howard Johnson, with 57, moved atop the NL RBI heap as the Mets made the most of second baseman Delino Deshield's fielding blunder.

Daryl Boston hit a made-to-order grounder to Deshields with two out in the third, but Deshields threw the ball away. Garry Templeton followed with a bloop double to left.

Bulls will try and retain championship team members

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

The Chicago Bulls aren't about to break up the team that won the franchise's first NBA championship.

The Atlanta Hawks, who haven't advanced past the first round of the playoffs since 1988, will have a completely different look.

On Sunday, the Bulls exercised an option to keep reserve forward Cliff Levingston, and on Monday they announced their intention to try to re-sign starters John Paxson and Bill Cartwright and backup center Scott Williams.

"It is our intention to sign Cartwright and Paxson," Bulls vice president Jerry Krause said. "We have no timetable. Now it's just a negotiating process."

Cartwright's agent, Bob Woolf, said he has been contacted by another team but declined to say which one.

"We must look into all alternatives, but I know Billy likes Chicago and wants to stay in Chicago," he said.

The Bulls also have the right to match any offer made to Williams, who will undergo surgery on his right shoulder this week and may have an operation on his left shoulder later in the month.

Moses Malone, the seventh player in NBA history to score 25,000 points and the leading career scorer from the free-throw line, is a free agent for the third time.

Malone, who signed big free-agent contracts in 1982 with Philadelphia and 1988 with Atlanta, had his Hawks' career officially ended Monday when they traded for Blair Rasmussen and put him on the roster in Malone's place.

The Hawks thus made Malone an unrestricted free agent ineligible to return to Atlanta for a year.

Malone, a 15-year veteran, lost his starting job early in the 1990-91 season and averaged a career-low 10.6 points. He still managed to lead all NBA reserves with 8.1 rebounds per game.

The Hawks gave up veterans Doc Rivers and Spud Webb and the rights to first-round pick Anthony Avent in three deals over the past week. They have added Travis Mays from Sacramento, Rasmussen from Denver and the draft pick they used to select Stacey Augmon.

"I wouldn't say we're cleaning house," coach Bob Weiss said. "That implies that we didn't like what we had, and that's not true. We see a need to get younger without making the talent base deteriorate."

Elsewhere, Rick Mahorn became a free agent after the Philadelphia 76ers decided not to sign him to the $1.6 million option year in his contract.

"The decision will allow us greater flexibility, but does not preclude us from signing Rick at a later date," said Gene Shue, the team's general manager.

Although he could sign with the 76ers, Mahorn is free to strike a deal with any team in the NBA.

The 76ers spent last month shopping Mahorn around the league, but found little interest. The Philadelphia Inquirer reported that Philadelphia was close to trading Mahorn to Detroit in return for Pistons center

James Edwards, but Mahorn's salary was too high to fit under the Pistons' salary cap.

The New York Knicks tendered a qualifying contract offer to guard John Starks on Monday and allowed forward Kenny Walker and guard Greg Grant to become unrestricted free agents.

Starks, who averaged 7.1 points in 61 games after being signed early last season, becomes a restricted free agent. He can sign with any team, but the Knicks retained the right to match any offer.

Walker, the Knicks' first-round pick and the fifth selection overall in the 1986 draft, averaged a career-low 4.3 points in 1990-91. Injuries kept him behind Kiki Vandeweghe and Brian Quinnett among small forwards.

Walker's career scoring high was 10.4 points in his rookie year of 1986-87.

"This gives us the salary cap situation we need to have the money to sign our first-round draft pick (Greg Anthony)," Knicks vice president Ernie Grunfeld said.

Script altered in Rose movie

NEW YORK (AP) — Pete Rose's ban from baseball caused producers of a television movie about Babe Ruth to alter the film in which Rose portrays Ty Cobb.

The producers of the film, which is to appear on NBC on Oct. 6, sought permission from major league baseball to use team logos and uniforms.

"Usually, when we grant rights, we demand to review the script so as not to portray baseball in a negative light," Rick White, president of Major League Baseball Properties, said Monday. "In the original script, there was no allusion to Rose."

When the producers decided to use the career hits leader to play Cobb, the man whose record he broke, baseball set the guidelines.

"We told them, 'We don't want you not to employ Pete Rose, but if you do, he can't appear in a uniform because he is on the disqualified list,'" White said. "They suggested using him in civilian clothes to solve the problem. They probably changed a marginal scene or two."

The film's executive producer, Larry Lyttle, and its producer, Frank Pace, were not immediately available for comment.

Rose agreed to be placed on baseball's ineligible list in August 1989 after an investigation into his gambling activities. Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti said he believed Rose had bet on games involving the Cincinnati Reds, the team he managed. Rose later served five months in prison for failure to pay income taxes.

A rule also was passed banning him from the Hall of Fame ballot.

In his first in-depth interview since his release, Rose appears Sunday with Jane Pauley on NBC.

"It took me some time to find out that I had a gambling disorder," he said. "I'm having no problem with that right now, but there's always a possibility that can come back so I have to guard against that."

"The whole situation saved me, because, you know, I might have ended up gambling everything. I don't think I would have, but I might have and that's scary to me."

Mitchell dashes to victory at BNP Grand Prix meet

By STEPHEN WILSON
AP Sports Writer

VILLENEUVE D'ASCQ, France (AP) — The night was supposed to belong to Carl Lewis and Ben Johnson. Dennis Mitchell had other ideas. Mitchell ran away with the 100 meters at the BNP Grand Prix meet Monday night, leaving Lewis in second place and Johnson far behind in seventh.

So much for the much-acclaimed rematch between Lewis and Johnson, their first head-to-head confrontation since the 1988 Olympics in Seoul.

Lewis finished nearly three meters ahead of Johnson in 10.20 seconds. Johnson was clocked in 10.46.

But neither was any match for Mitchell, who led from nearly start to finish and crossed the tape in 10.09. Third place in the eight-man field went to Olapade Adeniken of Nigeria in 10.22.

There was a sense of poetic justice for Mitchell, who has been one of the world's top sprinters for several years but who always seems to languish in the shadow of the heavyweights.

Mitchell finished fourth in the 100 at the 1988 Games, and placed third behind Leroy Burrell and Lewis at the U.S. championships last month. But he also had a win over Lewis on May 30 in Spain.

His time of 10.09 Monday night was impressive considering the weather conditions — cool and rainy.

"Every track meet I've been to, it's been Carl and Ben and Leroy (Burrell)," Mitchell said. "That's the way it is, and it doesn't bother me. I just show up and do my thing. It's the story of my life. I'm an unsung hero."

In fact, it was Lewis and Johnson whom most of the 30,000 fans and hundreds of journalists had come to see in this town outside Lille near the Belgian border.

The last time they faced each other, Johnson beat Lewis in the 100 final in Seoul, only to lose the gold medal and world-record time after testing positive for steroids.

Johnson, running in his fifth 100 meters since returning to action following a two-year suspension, stayed even with Lewis for the first 50 meters, then faded.

"That's his race, to run the best 50 he can," Lewis said. "But we're running the 100."

Johnson said, "At 45 to 50 meters I tried to change gears, but I didn't have enough energy."

In his four previous 100-meter races this year, the Canadian clocked 10.54, 10.69, 10.41 and 10.40 — a far cry from his 9.79 in Seoul.

Johnson had agreed before the meet to give back 25 percent of his pay check if he failed to break 10.17. Both runners were reportedly offered $250,000 for the race.

"I'm tired," Johnson said. "I've been running seven weeks in Europe. Now it's time to go home and rest."

Lewis, who was running on his 30th birthday, blamed the weather conditions for his own modest performance.

"I just felt very tight," he said. "I didn't feel really loose. I started well, but I just

Florida State joins Atlantic Coast Conference

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — It's official: Florida State is the newest member of the Atlantic Coast Conference.

"It's kind of like buying stock in General Motors," said Florida State president Bernard Sliger after handing ACC officials an entry fee check of $500,000 on Monday.

Florida State is expected to lend its football powerhouse reputation to the basketball-wealthy ACC, which will in turn boost the hoops prestige of the Seminoles.

Ten new television markets have already committed to the syndicated ACC football package handled by Jefferson-Pilot, eight of them in Florida. "Florida State has obviously helped us," said Ken Neal, a producer at Jefferson-Pilot. "In terms of overall impact, it's made the league more competitive, which makes our schedule more competitive."

The Seminoles, football independents for the past 40 years, will not be eligible for the ACC title until the 1992 season because of scheduling conflicts. But the team's entry into the league has helped a proposed bowl deal that could net all the schools millions of dollars.

The ACC is involved in an alliance between the Big East, the major New Year's Day bowl games and Notre Dame that could thrust ACC schools into bigger bowl games in the 1990s.

Lebanon army troops drive PLO out of two villages

By RODEINA KENAAN
Associated Press Writer

SIDON, Lebanon (AP) — The army drove Palestinian guerrillas out of two Shiite Muslim villages in southern Lebanon today, moving to assert government authority in the region for the first time in 16 years of civil war.

Army commandos, advancing behind a fierce barrage from tank cannons, pushed the guerrillas from the hilltop villages of Kfar Hatta and Mjaidel, southeast of the provincial capital of Sidon, in a lightning 90-minute assault.

The two villages were used by the Palestine Liberation Organization fighters as a rear-guard base to protect their tiny enclave just over a mile to the west.

Army gunners also pounded guerrilla positions on the fringes of refugee camps east of Sidon and advanced on the PLO enclave.

A police spokesman, speaking on condition of anonymity, said one Lebanese officer was killed and 47 people were wounded in the fighting, which began at dawn.

The wounded included two soldiers, 15 guerrillas and 30 Palestinian civilians, the policeman said. Two deaths and seven injuries had been reported from Monday's fighting.

The thuds of shell explosions shook Sidon, 25 miles south of Beirut, as hundreds of the city's 300,000 residents fled.

The soldiers stormed guerrilla positions in Kfar Hatta, shouting to civilians to stay indoors.

The army blasted sandbagged PLO positions in the village with jeep-mounted 106mm cannons and chased guerrillas in narrow alleys.

Kfar Hatta's estimated 1,000 residents, weary of continued violence in their region, emerged cheering from basements to welcome government troops.

Village women served coffee and sweets to the soldiers, as other troops began mopping up in nearby Mjaidel. The army, backed by U.S.-made M-48 and Soviet-designed T-55 tanks, continued north, advancing on the guerrilla stronghold to force the PLO fighters back into their refugee camps.

The PLO's political representative, Zeid Wehbeh, accused the army of a "massacre against the Palestinian people in Sidon," and demanded a cease-fire.

"We are not fighting the Palestinians. We are deploying on our land. They are shooting at our troops," said Defense Minister Michel Murr in a statement broadcast by the state-run Radio Lebanon.

He said the army would continue its advance "irrespective of the price."

Smoke billowed from the Palestinian refugee camps of Mich Mieh and Ein-el-Hilweh on Sidon's eastern edge as the army blasted away at the PLO gun positions on the fringes of the shantytowns.

The barrage started at dawn and gained in intensity, with 20 shells per minute fired at times. Army gunners did most of the shelling. The guerrillas occasionally fired 120mm mortars.

Hundreds of Lebanese civilians stuffed their cars with mattresses and household goods, closed their shops and left Sidon, while Palestinian women and children fled the two camps to the perceived safety of the city.

About 5,000 guerrillas are based around Sidon.

Police had said after the army deployment began Monday that two Sunni Muslim militiamen were killed and five wounded, and two Lebanese soldiers had been injured. The army said it arrested 76 guerrillas and militiamen.

The Syrian-backed government of President Elias Hrawi has succeeded in bringing peace to the capital and northern Lebanon, where militias have been surrendering their weapons after a civil war that claimed the lives of 150,000 people.

But PLO leaders and militias in the south have refused to lay down their weapons, saying they are needed for defense and to fight against Israel.

Wehbeh, in a statement released by the PLO's press office in the Ein-el-Hilweh refugee camp, said the PLO will not withdraw until it gets an agreement with the government on the status of the 500,000 Palestinian refugees living in Lebanon.

The army sent 3,500 additional troops to Sidon overnight, including the commandos, to support the 6,500 soldiers who moved south on Monday.

The Lebanese troops completed the first phase of their deployment plan in the region before dawn after storming through PLO lines in the highlands east of Sidon.

Carnegie Commission honors 18 people for heroism

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Stephen Lopez knew it was a matter of life and death when he saw a woman lying in the path of a train at a subway station. He'd have to live with himself if he watched her die.

"It flashed through my mind that I was going to see this woman dying," he said. "I knew that probably I could do something about it. All of a sudden, I was down on the track."

Lopez, 26, of Scarborough, Ontario, was among 18 people recognized as heroes Monday by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission.

In all, 7,561 Americans and Canadians have been honored by the commission since its founding in 1904 by Pittsburgh industrialist Andrew Carnegie.

Each winner or a survivor gets $2,500, a leather-bound certificate and a medal. The winners are recognized for risking their lives to try to save others.

Lopez was waiting for a train in Toronto on Nov. 23 when he saw a woman throw herself onto the tracks and heard others gasp as an approaching train sounded its horn. He jumped from the platform onto the tracks.

"I pulled her basically on top of me," he said. "I rolled her into my lap and we both rolled back under the platform. Within a few seconds, the train went by."

Lopez said the woman, who was not seriously injured, later told him she had thrown herself onto the tracks because she was despondent.

"I feel good about what I did, he said. "I think I saved someone's life. If that's what makes someone a hero, then I guess I'm a hero."

Others recognized Monday were:

- Timothy A. Maloney, 27, and Ricardo Narvaez, 29, both of Arlington, Texas, and Freddie E. Brimmer Jr., 30, of Pilot Point, Texas, who helped save a woman from a burning pickup truck in Arlington on June 18, 1990.

- Frankie J. Curtis, 50, of Columbus, Ohio, who rescued two neighbors from their burning home Oct. 20.

- James S. Waterhouse III, 36, of Norwood, Mass., who tried to rescue a woman neighbor from a burning house Dec. 22, 1989. Waterhouse collapsed, and firefighters pulled him and the woman from the house. She died six weeks later.

- Willis Cooley, 28, of Laurel, Miss., and Jerry T. Kitchens, 40, of Myrick, Miss., who died trying to save a co-worker trapped in a 15-foot-deep pit that collapsed in Laurel on July 18, 1990.

- Michael L. Astin, 31, of Riverdale, Ga., who rescued a police officer struggling with a woman who had grabbed the officer's gun in a hospital emergency room June 24, 1990.

- Larry R. Stanton Sr., 50, of Fountain, Mich., who helped save an 8-year-old boy floundering in Round Lake in Fountain on July 23, 1990.

- Dwayne E. Smeltzer, 28, of Windsor, Pa., who saved a 1-year-old boy from a second-floor bedroom in a burning house in Windsor on Aug. 27.

- Terrence McGee, 27, of New York, who died after re-entering a burning group home for teenage boys to search for residents in the Brooklyn borough Oct. 25, 1989.

- Ronald L. Dunsing, 21, of Eugene, Ore., who rescued a man who was struggling with an intruder who had stabbed him twice in his home in Eugene on Oct. 20.

- Kenneth J. Delacruz, 36, of North Stonington, Conn., who rescued an 11-year-old girl and tried to rescue her 3-year-old sister from a burning house in North Stonington on Dec. 21.

- Donald E. Arthur, 32, of Uniontown, Pa., who saved a woman overcome by smoke in her burning apartment March 1, 1990.

- Jackie L. Hennessee, 43, of Decatur, Tenn., who drowned trying to save three men in a fishing boat that capsized at Watts Bar Dam on July 12, 1989. One of the other men also drowned.

- Jon K. Thomas, 22, of Vancouver, Wash., who saved two neighbor boys trapped in a burning apartment Jan. 6.

- Robert E. Martin, 15, of Kushla, Ala., who died one day after he saved a 10-year-old girl from drowning in the Chickasaw Creek in Kushla on April 1, 1990. The girl survived.
