President meets with allied defense chiefs

By MORT ROSENBLUM
AP Special Correspondent

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Allied warplanes blasted an Iraqi convoy in central Kuwait overnight, and demolished a government ministry in Baghdad today that is led by Saddam Hussein's cousin.

American pilots on "Scud patrol" claimed they destroyed up to four Iraqi missile launchers in western Iraq, U.S. officials said. Still, Israel was hit with one missile early today launched from that region.

In an unusual step, Iraq also disclosed nearly 100 air raids on military targets in southern Iraq and Kuwait. Normally, such attacks are not mentioned in the daily military communiqués read on Baghdad radio.

President Bush said Monday that the allies will continue the air assault, taking "whatever time is necessary" to lay the groundwork for a land war.

Four explosions rocked the center of Baghdad during the night, jolting people from their beds and shattering windows in residential areas, AP correspondent Salah Nasrawi reported from the Iraqi capital.

Rockets from allied aircraft ripped through the ministry building, which is in charge of governing Kuwait, killing six people, including one child, and wounding 17 people, Iraqi civil defense officials said. Reporters taken to the site six hours later saw flames rising from the wreckage.

The Local Government Ministry is headed by Ali Hassan al-Majid, a cousin and close aide to Saddam. Al-Majid did not appear to be in the complex.

The Baghdad government claimed that civilian targets including a maternity hospital and nursery were hit in the latest round of allied raids.

Peace activist Ramsey Clark, a former attorney general who visited Iraq last week, says allied bombs have killed an estimated 6,000 to 7,000 Iraqi civilians. He told a New York news conference Monday that his figures came from the head of Iraq's Red Crescent, the Muslim equivalent of the Red Cross.

Iraq has said thousands of civilians have been killed. Allied commanders have provided no casualty estimates.

U.S. aircraft inflicted heavy damage on the Iraqi convoy of 25 to 50 vehicles it blasted overnight in central Kuwait, American military officials in Riyadh said on condition of anonymity. They also said an Iraqi helicopter was shot down overnight near Mosul, in northern Iraq.

Allied bombing missions have been zeroing in on Iraqi ground forces and their supply routes, and the hardships of war are apparently driving more and more seasoned Iraqi troops to desert.

Today, eight Iraqi soldiers from the same unit surrendered to an Egyptian armored division after crossing the border from Kuwait — and braving a journey through their own minefields.

"Fighting, fighting, fighting, and for what? Nothing," said one.

President Bush met today with the defense chiefs of Britain and France, principal allied partners, though White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the gathering in Washington did not signal that a ground offensive was imminent.

Meanwhile, Soviet envoy Yevgeny Primakov, was to meet with Saddam in Baghdad today about a Kremlin initiative to end the war.

The four mobile Scud missile launchers believed destroyed were hit by U.S. pilots overnight in western Iraq, U.S. officials said. The pilots reported seeing what appeared to be one Scud blowing up as it was being launched.

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir hinted today the Jewish state might not hold its fire indefinitely in the face of Iraqi missile attacks.

But he said Israel was mindful of the interests of the United States — which has discouraged Israeli involvement in the Gulf War because it could alienate Arab nations in the allied coalition.

An urban neighborhood in Israel was hit by a Scud early today, and Israel's army reported six injuries. Another Scud aimed at Israel hit an uninhabited area Monday night, the authorities said. For security reasons, the Israelis refuse to specify where missiles hit.

U.S.-supplied Patriot missiles destroyed an incoming Scud near the Saudi capital, Riyadh, Monday night, but falling debris injured two people.

With clear weather as an ally, the coalition's stepped-up air war caused a skyborne traffic jam on Monday. "It's like a freeway," one

Today, low clouds hung over northern Saudi Arabia, but bomb-laden Saudi Tornado air-to-ground fighters took off into the hazy skies, heading north to Iraq and occupied Kuwait. France said its Jaguar fighters hit two Iraqi artillery positions in southern Kuwait today. Italian Tornado fighters also flew another mission against Iraq.

A Pentagon official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Iraq's Republican Guard and the strategic southern city of Basra remained key targets.

Saddam met with his inner circle today for a second time since Sunday. Iraqi radio did not say what was discussed.

Iraq's parliament speaker, Saadi Mehdi Saleh, said Iraq "had managed to maintain its lethal developed weapons" despite the allied bombardment. He also urged allied forces to pull out of Saudi Arabia.

Lefors Council enters agreement concerning grant for water well

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

LEFORS — Lefors City Council entered into an agreement Monday evening with the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission for the administration of a $150,000 grant for the drilling of completion of a new water well.

The Texas Community Development Program grant will allow the city to drill an additional water well southeast of the city on water rights donated to the city by Malouf Abraham Sr. of Canadian.

Jon Sessions with PRPC said the city's grant will pay for the administration services, estimated to cost $13,118.

"The only two things we can't do for you is make the decisions and write the checks," Sessions told the City Council.

Sessions will solicit requests for proposals from engineering firms in the Amarillo newspaper through advertisement.

In order to get the project moving quicker, the City Council has tentatively called a special meeting for 6 p.m. Feb. 26, during which an engineer is expected to be chosen from proposals submitted.

In unrelated business, the Council met with representatives of Southwestern Bell Telephone regarding problems recently encountered when the city was putting in new gas lines in a three-block area. Several telephone lines were cut during the process.

The problem is compounded because following the Lefors tornado in 1975, Southwestern Bell expediently worked to get telephone service restored to the city, and by doing so put lines in the ground that sometimes look like "snakes," Gary Stevens with the telephone company said.

When the city begins working on a gas line, it is not easy to determine where the telephone lines are, and therefore, some get cut, Mike Steele with the city said.

"We recognize it's a problem," Stevens said.

Following discussion, the Council agreed that prior to putting in more gas lines, the city will notify the telephone company in advance. The telephone company will have someone come to Lefors and spot and expose any lines that cross the city utility. If any cuts occur during the work, the telephone company would be notified immediately.

Telephone company representatives pointed out that although their equipment is as accurate as possible at spotting lines, some lines will be missed and probably cut during the process.

The Council, in other business, voted 4-1, with Councilman Larry Fulton voting against, to rotate the vehicle fuel purchases each month with three suppliers — Curley's Station, Taylor Petroleum and Vernon Bell. The motion also included allowing Steele to purchase other vehicle supplies at the places he determines to be the best for the price.

Council members took no action on the donation of land at 2nd and Court streets by the Ben Diehl Estate to the city. The property has some old gas tanks buried on it, and the Council took no action, pending talking with the Texas Water Commission to determine what is involved in the procedure of removing the tanks and testing of the soil.

In other business, the City Council:

- Heard from Mayor Gene Gee about a letter regarding executive sessions sent to the Council by The Pampa News. Gee said, in response to the letter, that it has been the intent of the City Council and the administration to document in executive session all decisions made by the council during a closed session.

- Gee said there is no intent by the City Council to hide anything from the public. He said the Council intends to meet the "letter of the law" when it schedules an executive session.

- Heard from Gee, that although it is apparently not in any minutes, that the mayor pro tem is Ben White.

- Read a letter from the Pampa Fire Marshal's office commending Lefors City Marshal Travis Howell for help in a recent arson case.

- Paid current bill and approved minutes of a prior meeting, following some amendments.

Police arrest youth on charge of beating 16-year-old with pipe

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

A Pampa High School student has been charged in connection with the alleged beating of a teen who had been reportedly assisting police in a theft investigation.

Guy Conley Savage, 18, who listed his address as 1813 N. Zimmers, was arrested at 5:20 p.m. in the 1500 block of North Nelson on charges relating to the assault of a 16-year-old with a pipe earlier in the day.

Police incident reports show that the juvenile was allegedly attacked with a four- to six-inch piece of metal.

Authorities said the attack left the victim with scrapes, abrasions and swelling on both sides of his face and one knee.

Deputy Police Chief Ken Hall explained, "Our detectives are working on a criminal case and the named suspect allegedly took it upon himself to threaten and then assault the complainant. Subsequent charges were filed and the suspect was arrested."

Hall noted, "Our detectives are still in the process of investigating the earlier case" which led to the alleged assault.

Police said the original case involved a theft in the city, but declined to give further details.

Savage was transferred to Gray County Jail following his arrest. He was later released on bond.

Hall also reported this morning that police are still determining the value of 19 recovered American and Texas flags that were stolen last weekend.

Three suspects, ages 16, 17 and 18, have been identified by police in that case.

Hall said once the exact values of the flags was determined, police would know which court to file the case in. Once that occurs, he said, arrest warrants will be issued for the 17- and 18-year-olds.

The 16-year-old, because he is still legally a juvenile, will be handled through juvenile court.

All three suspects are reportedly students at Pampa High School.

Hall also said prosecutors are working with police in deciding whether to treat the 19 thefts as one crime or separate offenses.

District Attorney Harold Comer said he is planning to treat the thefts as one case, constituting a felony.

"None of the original thefts reached $750, which this would have to be to be a felony," Comer said. "But we believe the total value of the flags will exceed $750. We are inclined to charge it as a felony if possible because of the nature of the offense."

Comer added, "To do something like this at this time, it doesn't coincide with the attitudes of the times. I don't know how they could have missed that. It wasn't a national holiday. The flags were out to support our troops. They had to know that. This shows such disrespect for the men and women overseas and the fact that they are over there defending these people's freedom."

Police said charges against the teenagers could be filed as early as this afternoon, though no deadline has been set.

Det. Donny Brown, Sgt. Ken Hopson and Officer Stephanie Raymond, working from tips to Crime Stoppers, solved the weekend flag-stealing spree Sunday afternoon and all of the stolen flags were recovered.

However, Hall and Brown said other flag thefts in the city, which occurred prior to Friday, remained unsolved by the naming of the three suspects.

Police are believed to also be working on cases involving the other flag thefts, which also are thought to involve juveniles, concurrent with the other now-solved case.

Brown said the juveniles in the weekend case were hanging the stolen flags in their rooms and using them for curtains.

Bush: Recession causing 'genuine economic distress'

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush acknowledged today that the country is in a recession that is causing "genuine economic distress," but he continued to forecast a short and mild downturn.

Bush used his second "Economic Report of the President" to preach the gospel of free-market economics instead of reliance on big government programs to get the economy growing again.

But he struck a more somber tone than he did in last year's edition, in which he had proclaimed the economy to be "in excellent health" with no recession on the horizon.

"The events of 1990 were a reminder that even a healthy economy can suffer shocks and short-term setbacks," Bush wrote in the introduction to this year's report, which was prepared by his three-member Council of Economic Advisers.

CEA Chairman Michael Boskin said the basic theme in this year's economic review was that the nation needed to "stick to policies that enhance long-term growth" and not try to battle the recession with temporary fixes that would make the deficit worse.

The administration has repeatedly voiced opposition to Democratic proposals for job-creating public works programs or cuts in the Social Security payroll tax.

Boskin, at a briefing on the 411-page report, told reporters that one major drag on the economy — higher oil prices — had already been eased with the drop in prices that accompanied the onset of the Persian Gulf War.

"Our outlook is that the economy, after a relatively brief and mild recession, will rebound by the middle of the year and resume its growth," Boskin said.

Asked if the administration were satisfied with the Federal Reserve's performance on interest rates, Boskin noted that rates had come down shortly after Bush called for lower rates in his State of the Union address on Jan. 29.

"We've been pleased that the Federal Reserve has begun to take some stronger steps to mitigate the downturn," Boskin said.

The economic report blamed the recession on the oil shock and consumer uncertainty that followed Iraq's invasion of Kuwait on Aug. 2.

Even before the invasion sent oil prices surging, the United States was enduring sub-par growth, the report said. It blamed this on a worldwide increase in interest rates, tightened lending conditions in the United States and tight-money policies pursued by the Federal Reserve to battle inflationary pressures.

The GNP dropped at an annual rate of 2.1 percent in the October-December 1990 quarter. The administration said it expected a further decline in the current January-March quarter before growth resumes in the spring.

However, private economists said this view may prove too optimistic, especially if the Persian Gulf War drags on, further depressing consumer spending.

The economic report, in stressing traditional Republican themes of reliance on private initiative and market forces, provided the economic rationale behind the domestic programs outlined in Bush's recent State of the Union address and his fiscal 1992 budget.

Among other points, the economic report:

- Urged passage of legislation reducing the tax on capital gains.

The administration said the change would boost the country's long-term competitiveness, but Democrats in Congress have labeled it a tax giveaway for the wealthy and strongly opposed it.

• Again listed as the administration's top trade priority the completion of global talks to overhaul the rules governing world trade. Those discussions, known as the Uruguay Round, broke down last December over an American demand for sharp cuts in expensive farm subsidies.

• Recommended rapid movement toward private enterprise in the newly emerging democracies of Eastern Europe and in Latin America as well. "The reforms should ... be implemented as quickly as politically and socially possible, since delays only prolong the pain and disruption of the transition period," the report said.

• Said the administration's proposal to overhaul the U.S. banking system would help alleviate the current credit crunch by eliminating such unnecessary restrictions as prohibitions on interstate banking activities.

Besides questioning the assumptions about a short, mild recession, many private analysts took issue with the administration's long-range economic assumptions, which put GNP growth above 3 percent annually from 1992 through 1996.

Using that assumption, the administration is able to project that the federal budget deficit, which is expected to hit a record $318.1 billion this year, will decline rapidly and be in balance by 1996.

Boskin said the administration's long-range forecast was in line with the average performance in the same period following the nation's eight other recessions since World War II.

Groups sponsor 'Buckle Up For Love' week

Child Passenger Safety Awareness Week, sponsored by the Texas Department of Health and American Medical Transport is being observed this week with the theme "Buckle Up For Love." Gene Weatherall, chief of the health department's Bureau of Emergency Management, said that in 1989, more than 700 Texas children died of injuries that could have been prevented. The good news is that child safety seats prevented 28,000 injuries and about 200 deaths in children four years old and younger in this country last year.

"Trauma is still the number one killer of children," said Rick Fry, community services director for AMT, "and children are most vulnerable to trauma when they ride in motor vehicles."

According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, child safety seats are 71 percent effective in preventing fatalities.

Texas law requires children under the age of two to ride in a safety seat; from age two to four, children may ride in a safety seat or buckled by a safety belt. Everyone in the front seat, no matter what their ages, must ride buckled up, according to Texas law.

"We hope that during Child Passenger Safety Awareness Week that the residents of Pampa will become more aware of the positive aspects of buckling up and they will take that extra few seconds to do just that," organizers said.

Court upholds Bakker's convictions, but throws out 45-year sentence

By JEAN McNAIR
 Associated Press Writer

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A federal appeals court today upheld former televangelist Jim Bakker's fraud and conspiracy convictions, but threw out his 45-year sentence because of remarks made by the trial judge.

A three-judge panel of the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said Bakker was fairly tried and convicted of 24 counts of wire fraud, mail fraud and conspiracy in 1989 but must be resentenced by a different judge.

The founder of the PTL Network was sentenced to 45 years in prison and fined $500,000 for defrauding followers who bought partnerships in PTL's Heritage USA vacation park and retreat in Fort Mill, S.C.

But the appeals court said U.S. District Judge Robert D. Potter of Charlotte, N.C., abused his discretion and violated Bakker's due process rights with his remarks at sentencing.

During the hearing, the judge said Bakker "had no thought whatsoever about his victims and those of us who do have a religion are ridiculed as being saps (for) money-grubbing preachers or priests."

The appeals court said judges cannot punish defendants for offending their personal religious beliefs.

"Whether or not the trial judge has a religion is irrelevant for purposes of sentencing," said the opinion written by Judge J. Harvie Wilkinson III and joined by Judges J. Dickson Phillips Jr. and John D. Butzner Jr.

"Regrettably, we are left with the apprehension that the imposition of a lengthy prison term here may have reflected the fact that the court's own sense of religious propriety had somehow been betrayed," Wilkinson wrote.

Bakker has been serving his sentence at a federal prison in Rochester, Minn. A Bakker lawyer said a motion would be filed to get him freed on bail pending the resentencing.

Bakker's wife, Tammy Faye, has lived in Florida since her husband went to prison. A spokeswoman for New Covenant Ministries near Orlando, where she conducts services, said today that Mrs. Bakker was not available for comment.

Bakker's appeal was argued last October by Alan M. Dershowitz, a Harvard University law professor who joined the case after Bakker was convicted.

Dershowitz had also argued that Bakker's sentence exceeded federal sentencing guidelines that took effect Nov. 1, 1987. But the court said the guidelines do not apply because the conspiracy began in 1982.

George T. Davis, one of Bakker's attorneys, said the next step in the case probably will be a court hearing in Charlotte to set a date for resentencing. At that hearing, "counsel would have an opportunity to make a motion to have him released on bail until there is a new sentencing," Davis said.

In a telephone interview from his office in San Francisco, Davis said he was not surprised that the sentence was thrown out.

"I said from the day the sentence was given, that that sentence was an outrageous abuse of process by the judge," he said.

"I'm surprised that the conviction wasn't reversed," Davis said. "The next real step is to go and take that matter up before the U.S. Supreme Court."

In Charlotte, Scott Phillips, Potter's law clerk, said the judge was out of the office because of surgery.

"He didn't give any statements during the trial and he's not going to give any now and our office won't have any comment," Phillips said.

Gramm wants Kuwait, Saudi Arabia to recognize Israel

By MICHAEL GRACZYK
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Kuwait and Saudi Arabia should be pressured to recognize Israel as a nation in exchange for help from the United States in the war against Iraq, said U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas. "Countries like Kuwait and Saudi Arabia are going to owe their existence to us," Gramm said Monday in an appearance at a Grumman Houston Corp. aircraft plant. "We've got to put this victory and the influence and power it will bring to some great and noble purpose. And I believe that purpose is trying to get a lasting peace in the Middle East."

"I think we have the right to ask Kuwait and Saudi Arabia to recognize Israel."

Gramm, who continues his tour of Texas defense plants today in Garland, said the United States should use its position as the leader of the allied forces in the Persian Gulf war to help settle the Arab-Israeli conflict.

The Texas senator said a U.S.-led victory in the Gulf and continuing troubles in the Soviet Union would leave the United States as the only superpower in the world.

"I think we've got to put that power and influence to an important purpose, and I think trying to find a permanent peace in the Middle East is a big part of that purpose," he said.

Gramm said he believed the idea was realistic despite the long and bitter Arab-Israeli antagonism. But he added, "I'm not claiming it's going to be easy."

Gramm made the comments as he visited the Grumman plant Monday to thank workers for their skills in assembling the aircraft "that we see every night on television, planes that are taking the war to the Iraqis and are saving American lives."

The plant turns out hundreds of components that are used in the assembly of aircraft that include the A-6E Intruder, a Navy and Marine Corps attack plane, and the F-14 Tomcat, a Navy fighter plane.

"We appreciate the fact you take pride in your work. We appreciate the fact those weapons systems work. And you're an important part of the victory we're winning in the Middle East," he said.

"We owe a lot to the craftsmen who work here in Houston to build those weapons and put quality into every part."

Earlier Monday, Gramm visited San Antonio-based Fairchild Aircraft Co., which has unveiled a complex cooling system manufactured for the Air Force to cool thousands of military personnel in the Middle East.

Today, he was to visit Garland's Imo Industries Electro-Optical Systems Group, a company that deals in the so-called night vision technology.

Study indicates women less likely to survive heart attacks

By ROD RICHARDSON
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — A new study shows that women who suffer heart attacks are almost twice as likely to die before leaving the hospital than men admitted with the same condition.

Heart attack, the leading killer of American women, tends to strike females when they are older and have more health problems, said Dr. Phillip Greenland, whose study appears in the February issue of the Dallas-based American Heart Association's journal "Circulation."

Greenland spent last year at Tel Aviv University analyzing data compiled by Israeli researchers who studied more than 5,800 heart attack patients hospitalized between 1981 and 1983.

The study, released Monday, involved 4,315 men and 1,524 women who had suffered heart attacks, and found that 23 percent of the women and 16 percent of the men died during their initial hospital stay.

After researchers made adjustments for the ages of men and women studied, they found no significant differences in death rates when comparing heart rhythm and whether the patients had previous heart attacks.

But women with diabetes tended to have a greater chance of dying than men who also had diabetes, said Greenland, an associate professor of medicine at the University of Rochester School of Medicine.

"We understand that diabetes can lead to changes in the heart muscles, but what's very peculiar is why this can lead to such difference in women as opposed to men," he said.

The women in Greenland's study also had a higher incidence of heart failure than the men.

"We know that heart failure at the time of heart attack is usually a consequence of cumulative heart damage," Greenland said.

Some evidence suggests that women and diabetics are more prone to "silent ischemia," a recently discovered condition in which part of the heart muscle starves for blood and yet doesn't cause pain.

"One theory is that the women with heart failure had had previous heart attacks without feeling them," Greenland said.

Greenland said the study is more significant than previous efforts — which produced contradictory conclusions — because a larger statistical sampling was used.

Dr. Richard Becker, associate director of the Coronary Care Unit at the University of Massachusetts, said the new study is credible because of the large sampling and the researchers involved.

Becker also said the report is consistent with some recent studies conducted in the United States.

"When we looked at a more recent sampling, we had similar findings even with state-of-the-art treatment," Becker said.

Critics have said government-funded research typically focuses too heavily on middle-aged white men, overlooking knowledge about women's health.

"Because all of the studies have been designed to look at slightly different things, it's not surprising to me that most of them reach different conclusions," said Dr. Nicholas Fiebach of Yale University School of Medicine.

But all agree that the new report should generate more interest in studying specific differences between men and women who have heart attacks.

Tuition refund bill clears Senate

(AP Laserphoto)

State Sen. Rodney Ellis, D-Houston, left, confers with Sen. Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin, prior to a vote on Ellis-sponsored legislation Monday in the Senate chamber. The bill, passed unanimously by the Senate, would allow tuition refunds or course credit for student reservists called to active military duty.

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill that would allow student reservists called to active military duty to get a tuition refund or college course credit has cleared the Senate.

The measure was passed to the House 28-0, without debate, Monday.

Bill sponsor Rodney Ellis, D-Houston, said the need for such legislation was brought to his attention by a constituent attending the University of Houston.

Sen. Ellis said the student was in one of the first reserve units called up for the crisis in the Middle East, and hundreds of Texas student reservists have been called up since then.

"The intent of this bill is not only to relieve these students of a financial hardship, but also to let them know that we are concerned about them and that they will not be penalized for serving their country," Ellis said.

His bill would allow tuition and fee refunds, grant students an incomplete grade, or authorize course credit if the student has finished at least one half the semester and the professor says the student has demonstrated sufficient proficiency to justify a passing grade.

It is retroactive to the fall semester.

Current law states that colleges cannot refund tuition and fees in full after the 12th class day of a semester.

Lottery foe says he has votes to block measure

AUSTIN (AP) — Lottery supporters say they are not discouraged by word that there are enough House votes against the gambling measure to keep it off a statewide ballot.

"We're real close. We're still working" on getting support, said Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, sponsor of lottery legislation.

A two-thirds vote is needed in the 150-member House and 31-member Senate for the proposed constitutional amendment establishing a lottery to be put before voters.

"We only need 51 (votes), and we've got more than that," said Rep. Glenn Repp, R-Duncanville, a leading lottery opponent.

Gov. Ann Richards has designated the lottery as emergency legislation, touting it as a way to meet part of an estimated $4.6 billion budget shortfall through fiscal year 1993.

"I know the governor is apparently twisting some arms... Whether she can change enough votes, I have my doubts," Repp said Monday.

Bill Cryer, Richards' press secretary, said, "I don't know what he means by that (twisting arms)... We are talking to members of the House, trying to encourage them to vote for the lottery."

"We feel pretty good about it," Cryer said.

The Senate State Affairs Committee has scheduled a Wednesday hearing on lottery, while its House counterpart plans to consider the legislation Feb. 18.

Wilson said he expects the full House to take up the measure before the Senate does. The Senate in a previous legislative session approved a proposed lottery amendment, but the measure died in the House.

For a lottery proposal to go on the May 4 general election ballot, the secretary of state's office has said it would be preferable for the Legislature to pass it by Feb. 19.

But some lawmakers have said they were told there would be time to get the measure on the ballot if it were passed by the beginning of March.

Elderly man pleads guilty in beating death of live-in girlfriend

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — An 80-year-old man says he beat his 70-year-old live-in girlfriend to death because she refused to put on her clothes.

Rogelio Herrera entered the guilty plea Monday to a murder charge in the death of Amelia Perales, a woman he had lived with for nine years.

Herrera asked District Judge Sid Harle for probation. Harle said there will be a pre-sentence investigation.

No sentencing date was set. The maximum sentence would be life in prison, but if the judge sentences Herrera to 10 years or less, he could be eligible for probation.

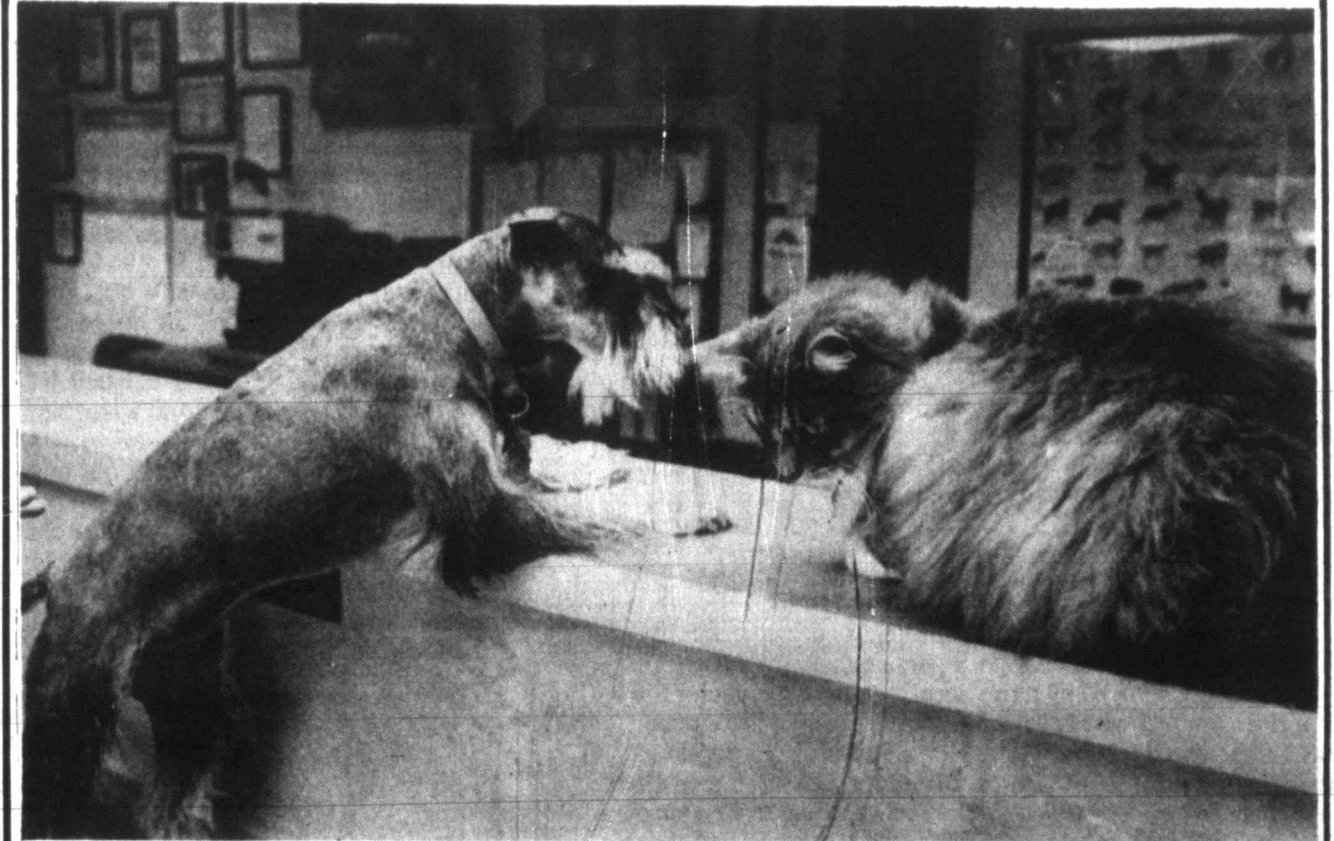

The elderly man told police Ms. Perales walked naked into the kitchen of their home on Jan. 11, 1989.

He said he told her to put some clothes on, but she said it was too hot, became angry and told him to leave.

Herrera told police he went to the back porch, got a piece of iron he had used to drive some nails and walked back into the kitchen with it. He said he hit the woman on the left side of her head with the piece of iron.

She died instantly, he told investigators. He said he dragged the woman's body to the garage, cleaned up the blood on the floor and left to run some errands and have lunch, police said.

Pleased to meet ya!

Speaker: Statewide property tax no longer an option for revenue

AUSTIN (AP) — A statewide property tax for schools is so unpopular it is no longer being considered in the House to reform public education funding, Speaker Gib Lewis said.

But the school finance alternatives being considered are variations on the same concept, Lewis said Monday. Other proposals would set a minimum local property tax rate and redistribute some of the revenue from rich to poor school districts.

"Whatever we have will be some variation" on the statewide property tax, said Lewis, D-Fort Worth. "It's not a subterfuge. You just try to find out what's going to be able to sell."

A statewide property tax to replace local property levies for schools initially was backed by state leaders as the top option to meet a Texas Supreme Court order to provide equitable funding to poor school districts.

However, groups including the Texas Association of School Boards opposed the idea.

Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock said that does not mean the statewide property tax is dead.

"I don't think anything's dead at this point. Not until there's been a consensus on another proposal, and there has not been, to my knowledge," he said.

School finance proposals under consideration likely would require a constitutional amendment, just as a statewide property tax would, Lewis said. To be put on the ballot, a proposed constitutional amendment must be approved by two-thirds of the Legislature.

Lewis said he would like to see the House consider a school finance reform measure within two weeks. Bullock said he hoped a Senate bill could be ready this week.

The Supreme Court set an April 1 deadline for lawmakers to devise a new school finance system.

"We need to move as quickly as we possibly can," Lewis said.

The school finance system currently relies on state aid, local property taxes and some federal money. Unequal property wealth results in funding disparities.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

'Butcher of Baltics' could be next role

Mikhail Gorbachev won the Nobel Peace Prize last year. This year he threatens to become the Butcher of the Baltics.

The New York Times described the brutality of the recent invasion of independent Lithuania: "A Soviet colonel in Vilnius, enraged at being sprayed by a fire hose ... showed his young Lithuanian tormenters just who is who. He shot one young man in the face." As the occupation by intimidating Soviet troops continue, others may be added to the number of people who have been killed and wounded as Gorbachev seeks to keep a tenuous hold upon a nation longing for its freedom, freedom that seemed to have been proffered them through Gorbachev's own perestroika policies. Lithuanian protesters shouted "Freedom!" and just this past weekend voted overwhelmingly to continue to seek independence. President Vytautas Landsbergis announced, "This is war."

Is it surprising that Gorbachev is presiding over this invasion? Not when we look at his past. Gorbachev is the protégé of Yuri Andropov, who masterminded the 1956 Soviet invasion of Hungary, then went on to head the KGB during its most ruthless days in the 1970s, and in 1982 succeeded Leonid Brezhnev as Soviet dictator. In an eerie parallel, Andropov used a Middle Eastern crisis, the 1956 Suez Crisis, as a cover for the invasion of Hungary.

Gorbachev claims that he didn't order the crackdown in Lithuania. But he waited a full day to say he wasn't responsible, has not lamented the killings and has even endorsed the action. His denial of responsibility is further undermined in myriad ways: Crack Soviet paratroops with direct orders from Moscow were used in the invasion. Last year Gorbachev was given vast new "presidential" powers, including control of the armed forces and KGB. In December Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze resigned to protest a burgeoning "dictatorship." And though the Soviet Constitution currently allows "republics" to secede, Gorbachev has been pressing for a new Constitution that would allow secession only with Moscow's approval — that is, never. And yet the man has the gall to continue to talk of peace — a peace defined by his terms.

President Bush has condemned the invasion and White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater says the February Moscow summit with Gorbachev is "up in the air." The summit may be even further away with Gorbachev's recent announcement that the current war in the Persian Gulf may be exceeding U.N. sanctioned actions. With all that in mind, the administration needs to do more. Bush should cancel the summit, cancel the $1 billion in farm credits now going to Moscow (paid for with U.S. taxpayers' money), work with our NATO allies to cancel aid they are giving, and recognize the ambassadors from the Baltic republics.

Whatever the U.S. response, the Baltic states' struggle for freedom will continue, as will that of the other Soviet republics, no matter how much Gorbachev may continue to strive to keep the Red Empire together. It took neighboring Poland a decade to go from slavery to freedom.

Marching onto cracking ice

Nations bent on war, like couples eager to marry, don't like being told they are making a terrible mistake.

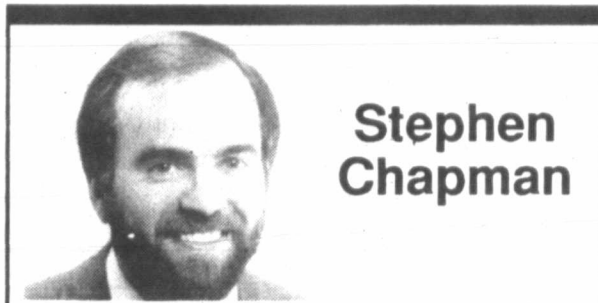

Once they have made up their minds, they want only warm endorsements — sincere or not, wise or not. Contrary advice is resented as the foul offspring of malice and presumption. Nor will vindication bring forgiveness: The only thing more offensive than a mistaken warning is an accurate one.

Those who vainly opposed the U.S. decision to go to war with Iraq, a group that includes me, haven't seen their stock rising in the last few weeks. Counsel against military intervention, disdained before the war, is even less welcome now that it has begun.

Continued objections are treated as an obstacle to victory, a gift to Saddam Hussein, a betrayal of our soldiers, a token of disloyalty and a symptom of flabby moral fiber. Having performed their dissenting role, critics are informed that they now have a new and even more important duty: to get on board or shut up.

Patriotism is now in bloom — how many news stories have we seen about the surge in sales of American flags? — and in this conflict, as in its predecessors, patriotism is neatly equated with militarism. Rallies have been held to show support for our troops in the Persian Gulf, rallies at which it seems that the only way to support our troops is to endorse the policies which put them there.

Like the flag, the soldiers have been claimed as the sole property of those who favor the war. The assumption is that backing the troops is like backing a football team: How can you be for them if you think they shouldn't be playing the game at all?

Left forgotten is that football players are on the gridiron by choice. If the decision on going to war had been made by a vote of the men and women who are facing the Iraqi guns, we would have been out of Saudi Arabia weeks ago. Opponents of the war support our troops in a uniquely helpful way: by trying to keep them all alive.

Distinctions like this, however, are rudely trampled in a wartime atmosphere. Tolerance for differing opinions hasn't vanished, but if the war should go badly, it may yet. In his State of the Union address, President Bush adopted a magnanimous posture toward opponents, acknowledging "the undeniable value of thoughtful dissent" — though he also went out of his way to portray some unnamed critics as "reckless."

Earlier the administration had dispatched Dan Quayle to suggest that dissenters hold their tongues and that the news media ignore those who insist on speaking up. Anti-war demonstrators have had to get used to jeers and obscene gestures.

A lot of Democrats in Congress have made sudden reversals. House Speaker Tom Foley and Sen. Sam Nunn, who had opposed giving Bush the authority to go to war, aligned themselves solidly behind the president when the fighting began. The prevailing position among onetime skeptics is that once the decision has been made, all Americans have a solemn responsibility to unite behind it. "It's time for America to stand together," declared Nunn.

Nonsense. Anyone in search of the miracle of transubstantiation should look in the Catholic mass, not the Pentagon. A war that was stupid the day before it started has not become suddenly wise through the dropping of bombs and the shedding of blood.

It might be easier for the administration to wage this war if it didn't have to cope with the unwanted carping of opponents, but why should anyone want to facilitate a task that shouldn't have been taken on in the first place? Fighting the Vietnam War would have been easier without critics, too. Without the critics, we might still be fighting it.

No responsible American who still rejects this policy is hoping to see the U.S. forces lose. That is not what it means to oppose the war. What it means is trying to head off carnage that can still be avoided — by opposing a ground war, by opposing a continued air war, by opposing a policy which makes the fate of Kuwait, or Iraq, the urgent responsibility of the American people.

Standing together is a fine idea when we're assembled on solid ground. When the majority marches onto cracking ice, there's no virtue in making the mistake unanimous.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, Feb. 12, the 43rd day of 1991. There are 322 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On Feb. 12, 1809, Abraham Lincoln, the 16th president of the United States, was born in a log cabin in what is now Larue County, Ky.

On this date:
In 1554, Lady Jane Grey, who had been queen of England for nine days, was beheaded after being charged with treason.

In 1870, women in the Utah Territory were granted the right to vote.

In 1892, President Lincoln's birthday was declared a national holiday.

In 1907, more than 300 people died when the steamer "Larchmont" collided with a schooner off Block Island in New England.

In 1908, the first round-the-world automobile race began in New York. (It ended in Paris the following August.)

In 1909, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, America's oldest civil rights organization, was founded.

A 'private' military expert

Every network covering the war — ABC, NBC, BBC, CBS, TBS, PMS, CNN, FNN, ESPN, L&N, DUI, DDT and even the Disney Channel — has a military expert to comment on how the fighting is going.

Not to be left out, this column finally has found a military expert of its own. Unfortunately, all the good ones have been taken, but, as Commander in Chief Bush reminds us, "it's never easy in wartime."

So, allow me to introduce you to Pfc. Arnold "Mophead" Duckworthy, currently assigned to the Tactical Custodial Strike Unit at the Pentagon.

"Welcome to the column, Pfc. Duckworthy."
"Make it fast. Got an overflow commode coming down."

"Pfc., what do you think of those Iraqi Scuds being fired at Israel and Saudi Arabia?"

"They're scudzy, them Iraqis, I'll agree with that. Scud's harder to mop off a floor than dog poop."

"Do you think the Patriots are doing a good job?"

"The Patriots? What were they, 2-14? They're worse than the Falcons."

"We seem to be having a bit of a communication problem here, Private, but let's go on to another question. What's your opinion of the Stealth bomber?"

Lewis Grizzard

"I never seen one."

"Private Duckworthy, as you know, the Allies have launched heavy bomb strikes into Iraq. What do you think Saddam Hussein is saying to his aides?"

"What the hell was that?"

"I also know you can't tell us all you know to keep Saddam from getting information on Allied strategy, but what role has Diego Garcia, one of the first bases involved, played thus far?"

"Diego Garcia ain't no first baseman. He's the best outfielder Cleveland's had since Larry Doby. I thought you wanted to talk to me about the war."

"I do, Private. What can you tell us about chemical weapons?"

"All I know is what we use at the Pentagon. If Drano won't unclog it, then we strike with Liquid Plumr. That don't work, we still have a couple of options. There's Janitor in a Jar and Two Thousand Flushes. Pinesol Mist is used only for cleaning up purposes."

"Most interesting, but there are still more unanswered questions. Do you think Peter Arnett of CNN was correct when he said the Allied planes hit a powdered milk factory, or was it a chemical weapons plant as the administration claims?"

"Probably a 7-11. You knock them out and you paralyze the entire country. Where are you going to buy the necessities of life like Fritos and bean dip?"

"Most reports say we are controlling the skies over there. But exactly how much damage have we done to Iraq?"

Valentine's Day is a lonely holiday

By SARAH OVERSTREET

For a gag gift recently, I received a little voodoo doll and a booklet called VooDoo It Yourself, all about white voodoo magic. That's the good stuff, as opposed to the black hexes, which require pins and other people's surrogate body parts.

I had to laugh when I came to the section on love. If I'd had this book back in high school, I'd have tried every spell in there in the hope of getting a boyfriend, or even just one boy to at least hang around me during the month of February.

Most of the spells call for either a personal article of the intended hexee or a lock of his hair — "Scuse me, Billy Ray, mind if I snip just a teeny-tiny piece of your hair, maybe back here on your neck where it won't show much? How 'bout your back, then? No? Then could I borrow one of your gym socks there for a week or two?" — so I probably wouldn't have been able to perform them. But I'd have tried.

I might have been able to stand the rest of the year without a boyfriend if it hadn't been for February and Valentine's Day. First, there was the Sweetheart Dance to worry about, where all the cute girls whose sweaters and skirts were exactly the same shade of light blue or eggshell and who got up two hours early every morning to sculpt their hair into perfect flips with a coat of Dippity Do and Aqua Net were either wearing a boy's senior ring the size of a golf ball and had an automatic date, or were asked to the dance by some other salivating boy the first day of the month.

Next, those girls would then show up at school a couple or three days before Valentine's Day with huge, three-tiered boxes of Valentine's candy to show off, opening them seductively for us candyless girls, letting us ooh and ahh over the lace and bows and actually get close enough to smell the candy.

They never let us eat any. I don't know why they never gained any weight or sprouted any pimples after eating all that chocolate, but they didn't. The rest of us got them.

Our lack of boyfriends on this all-important day might have been more bearable if at least we had been able to attend the Sweetheart Dance, if we'd been able to shop for strapless tulle formals that would have scratched our armpits as we stood in a gaggle in the corner of the gym by ourselves, still keeping alive the hope that one of those boys standing by themselves in the other corner might ask us to dance or at least talk to us when we went to get punch.

But the administrators at my school didn't let dateless girls and boys attend the Sweetheart Dance. Perhaps they thought kids would be more manageable two by two, easy to herd onto an ark if there was trouble or to keep them from gathering on the schoolyard and maybe starting a fist fight.

I suspect most of us girls who stayed home on Sweetheart Dance night didn't form much fondness for St. Valentine or his day. Since a lot of us eventually ended up with guys who never understood what the big deal about Valentine's Day was, anyway, the FTD truck doesn't usually pull up at our offices with bouquets too big for one delivery man to carry by himself.

Those land on the other women's desks, and they compete with each other much in the same way they did decades before when they were comparing cardboard hearts full of candy.

So to my fellow Valentine's Day dance stay-at-homers, may this month be filled with the true love of folks who don't care if your sweater matches your skirt or your hair can execute a perfect flip.

And may all of us — the girls who stayed home and the sweet, tender boys too scared to risk asking one of us and having to learn how to dance — believe that if we hadn't been too shy or too awkward or just a little too late in blooming, we'd have met at the Sweetheart Dance and waltzed away together.

Winnie Mandela, wife of African National Congress leader, Nelson Mandela, is escorted by bodyguards today when she arrived at the Rand Supreme Court to face charges of kidnapping and assault. The court was adjourned Monday after it was learned that a key state witness had been kidnapped.

Two key witnesses refuse to testify in assault trial of Winnie Mandela

By BARRY RENFREW
Associated Press Writer

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Prosecutors said today that two key witnesses in Winnie Mandela's trial on kidnapping and assault charges have refused to testify because they fear for their lives.

Prosecutor Jan Swanepoel told the court that the witnesses, Kenneth Kgase and Tabiso Mono, refused to come to court after a third witness, Gabriel Mekgwe, was allegedly kidnapped Sunday.

All three testified at a previous trial that Mrs. Mandela, wife of African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela, beat them with a whip.

Swanepoel told reporters it would be difficult to continue the case without the witnesses.

"They're scared because their friend has been kidnapped," he said. Meanwhile, The Star newspaper of Johannesburg, the country's largest daily, reported that Mekgwe was last seen leaving a Methodist Church manse in the Soweto township on Sunday night in the company of three ANC members.

The newspaper, citing unidentified sources, said it was not known if Mekgwe left with the men voluntarily.

The trial was adjourned for several hours today to give prosecutors time to try to persuade the witnesses to come to court.

The witnesses must show the court they have good reason for not testifying or they can be sentenced to two years in prison, Swanepoel said. But the prosecutor said he was reluctant to charge the two witnesses.

Mrs. Mandela looked calm when the prosecution said the witnesses had refused to appear in court. She conferred quietly with her lawyers, but had no comment.

The latest development came after the trial was forced into adjournment Monday when prosecutors said Mekgwe had been abducted.

Earlier Monday Mrs. Mandela pleaded innocent in the Rand Supreme Court along with three co-defendants to eight separate counts.

Prosecutors say members of Mrs. Mandela's former bodyguard, the Mandela United Football Club, abducted four youths, took them to Mrs. Mandela's home in the Soweto township and beat them for several days in December 1988.

One of the youths, Stompei Seipei, 14, was later found dead.

Prosecutors allege the bodyguards were motivated by accusations that the four had sexual relations with a Methodist minister and that Seipei was a police spy.

Prosecutors said there was no question of political persecution against Mrs. Mandela.

Officials may have purposely misled Vietnam MIA families

By PHILIP BRASHER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sharon Walsh clung to a tiny thread of hope for 22 years that her husband had survived being shot down in Vietnam. As it turns out, that hope was based on a commander's well-intentioned lie.

The commander admits he was certain that Lt. Col. Richard Walsh of Minneapolis had died. But he reported Walsh missing in action rather than killed, following what he describes as his squadron's unofficial policy and what he knew to be Walsh's wishes.

The Air Force officially denies that could have happened, and the lie came as a shock to Mrs. Walsh. "It had never occurred to me," she said.

But disclosures surrounding the Walsh case, which was first described by the Star Tribune of Minneapolis, indicate that some pilots during the Vietnam war were reported as missing rather than killed in action to protect the emotional and financial well-being of their survivors.

Families of MIA pilots qualify for substantially higher benefits than survivors of those listed as killed.

As of Monday, 27 U.S. military personnel — nearly all of them pilots or air crew members — were listed as missing in action in the Persian Gulf war.

For benefit purposes, the status of almost 2,400 Vietnam War MIAs was changed to presumed dead in the late 1970s.

The Air Force and Navy say a downed pilot is listed as missing in action if there is reason to hope he may have survived. But officials maintain that pilots are never asked beforehand how they want to be reported, and commanders have never been known to lie about an airman's status.

"I think that would be totally inappropriate," said George Atkinson, chief of the Air Force missing persons division. "We don't base those kinds of decisions on the druthers of the person."

"I find it abominable if an individual would have that knowledge ... that they're withholding it from the families," said Mary Currall of the National League of Families of American Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia.

An Air Force historian, speaking on condition of anonymity, said that pilots in Vietnam routinely were asked about their preferences for casualty status. Most selected "MIA," he said.

That was the basis for the hope that led Mrs. Walsh to France and Vietnam to question diplomats and North Vietnamese officials about the fate of her husband after he disappeared on a 1969 rescue mission.

She didn't learn that her husband apparently had asked to be listed as missing rather than killed in action until a Star Tribune reporter recently contacted the squadron commander, retired Lt. Col. Walter Stueck of Georgetown, Texas.

Stueck, who was flying near Walsh, reported to superiors at the time that there was a chance Walsh could have escaped alive. Stueck said then that he looked away momentarily as the plane tumbled into the jungle.

"I flat-out lied," Stueck told the newspaper. "This is what he (Walsh) wanted."

He said he actually watched the plane all the way to the ground and was certain Walsh died, but felt bound to report him as missing.

That, he said, was because Walsh and other pilots in the squadron had signed forms saying how they wanted their casualty status reported if they were shot down and their bodies not recovered.

Stueck said he also asked the men to discuss the matter with their next of kin, so they would know what was written between the lines of official communications.

Walsh, 41, chose to be listed as MIA, but Mrs. Walsh said he never told her about his squadron's unofficial policy.

Czech: Gorbachev wants to discuss Warsaw Pact

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Mikhail S. Gorbachev has proposed the elimination of the Warsaw Pact's military role by April, the state CTK news agency reported.

The Soviet president suggested Warsaw Pact foreign and defense ministers meet to take up the issue later this month, the news agency said Monday.

It said President Vaclav Havel had accepted the suggestion, contained in a letter.

Hungarian Prime Minister Jozsef Antall announced today that the meeting to scrap the alliance's military role would be held in Budapest on Feb. 25.

Czechoslovakia and Hungary — both invaded at one time by Soviet-led pact forces to crush reform movements — have for months sought dissolution of the pact's military structures by June and abolition of the alliance early next year.

Poland, which led the 1989 democratic reform movement that overturned four decades of Communist rule throughout most of Eastern Europe, also supports dissolving the pact, which was created to counter NATO.

Romania and Bulgaria, the other Warsaw Pact members, also want to dissolve its military role.

CTK did not give a specific date and place for the conference.

Hungary and Romania acknowledged receiving the proposal, which was not reported Monday by Soviet media.

Dissolving the 36-year-old pact's military role would officially end the era in which two opposing military structures faced each other across Europe.

Under the pact, the Eastern European countries shared some weaponry and military command.

The reported initiative surfaced four days ahead of a summit of Poland, Czechoslovakia and Hungary. That meeting, scheduled for Friday in the Hungarian city of Visegrad, also is to deal with the future of the Warsaw Pact.

Earlier Monday, Havel suggested Czechoslovakia cooperate more closely with the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

"The dramatic developments in the Baltics, the Persian Gulf War ... the whole present situation strengthens the reasons for a closer cooperation with NATO," Havel said. "Changes in the Soviet Union are of great concern to us. ... Instability in one part of the world exudes instability elsewhere."

"We are in (the) direct neighborhood of this colossus, undergoing very dramatic changes," he said.

Military, media wrestle over right to cover war and security concerns

By FRED BAYLES
Associated Press Writer

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia (AP) — The media and the military, never the best of friends, are engaged in an escalating battle over the journalists' rights to cover the war and the military's concerns over security.

In the past two weeks at least a dozen reporters and photographers have been detained by military personnel after trying to gather stories outside the official press pools, groups of reporters traveling under military escort.

These incidents range from the whimsical to the terrifying. In one case, an Associated Press writer and photographer were held six hours by a unit of the 1st Cavalry Division. They were given dinner, shown B-52 air strikes and provided with other glimpses of camp life that generated a story.

In a grimmer incident, Wesley Bocxe, a photographer on assignment for Time magazine, was held for 30 hours by members of the Alabama National Guard. At times during his captivity, Bocxe was blindfolded and interrogated.

"They were very, very scared soldiers and they didn't recognize my press credential," said the 30-year-old New Yorker.

On Sunday, New York Times reporter Chris Hedges was detained for six hours and his credentials were temporarily lifted after he tried to ask officials at a military

"I was told I could lose my credentials, have my visa revoked and be asked to leave the kingdom..."

— Chris Hedges
New York Times

hospital for permission to conduct an interview.

"I was told I could lose my credentials, have my visa revoked and be asked to leave the kingdom," he said. His credentials were returned the next day.

Hedges' case is more typical of incidents reported over the past week in the areas of Khafji and Hafr al Batin, where reporters, chafing under the tight controls of the pool system, have begun to venture out unescorted in search of stories.

CBS newsman Bob Simon and three crew members disappeared two weeks ago while traveling unescorted near the Kuwaiti border. They have not been seen since.

Hedges said he was in an area to interview Saudi shopkeepers before he was taken into custody by a military policeman from the Alabama National Guard.

"I was told I violated the agreement (the military ground rules) by coming into a front line area unescorted," said Hedges. "It's true I talked to soldiers. But I was in a civilian area doing a story about the local economy."

"They took it upon themselves to detain me when I was working in a civilian area, on Saudi soil and tried to revoke a Saudi-issued card," he said.

The Hedges case isn't likely to be the last incident. With nearly 800 journalists vying for a mere 126 spots on the various press pools, many reporters and photographers have struck off on their own to find something to photograph or write about.

The alternative is to rely on reports written by the pools.

In the developing jargon of the conflict, these independents are known as "unilaterals," a name that is a badge of courage or shame depending on your point of view.

The military contends that according to ground rules set by U.S. authorities, reporters and photographers cannot interview military personnel unless escorted by a public affairs officer.

Officials say that without these controls, reporters would be wandering around in insecure areas at a time when fear of terrorism is high. There are also concerns that unescorted reporters might give away troop positions or plans through their stories or their actions.

"The battlefield would be quickly overwhelmed if all 800 reporters converged on it," said Col. William Mulvey, director of the Joint Information Bureau in Dhahran.

Names in the News

NEW YORK (AP) — Shirley MacLaine says she loves her elusive brother, Warren Beatty, more than she likes him.

"I don't know him. But I'd like to," the 56-year-old actress added when asked about her famous sibling, three years her junior.

In an interview in the March issue of Vanity Fair, MacLaine said that even she hasn't been able to crack Beatty's armor-tough persona because, "His phone always rings. I've been on hold for 30 years."

MacLaine said she believes the publicity-shy Beatty keeps his emotions and thoughts bottled tight because he never had children.

"Having had the typical middle-class American experience of having children would have forced him to share himself," said MacLaine. "Warren can't even commit to dinner," she said.

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles and Princess Diana visited a naval base in southwest England one day after a London newspaper accused the royal family of "upper class decadence and insensitivity" toward the Gulf War.

They weren't the only members of the royal family to pay lots of war-related official visits on Monday.

Princess Anne, the daughter of Queen Elizabeth II, was in Germany visiting families of British servicemen in the Persian Gulf.

And the Duke of Gloucester, a cousin of the queen, inspected military installations at Gosport.

Some employers say ribbons, flags too political to display

By MARY MacVEAN
Associated Press Writer

Like many employers, the Union City, Calif., Fire Department frowned on its workers showing support for troops in the Persian Gulf with flags on their uniforms or equipment. But Mike Brown was determined: He had a full-color U.S. flag shaved and dyed into the back of his head.

"I wanted to display the flag, and now they can't tell me not to," said Brown, a 38-year-old captain, who spent 3 1/2 hours in a salon. "It's a show of support for the troops and a way of saying I'm proud to be an American citizen."

Union City's decision to supply workers with a "uniform" yellow ribbon has been a common way out of such disputes, which have arisen along with the proliferation of buttons, flags and ribbons since war broke out Jan. 16.

At issue is whether such displays are partisan political statements, and whether such statements can or should be regulated.

In New Orleans, police made big bows out of plastic yellow crime scene tape and hung them on light poles, trees and flagpoles outside headquarters.

"We've got to do something for these guys," said spokeswoman Carmine Menchel. "We're the soldiers here, and they're the soldiers over there. We wear blue, and they wear sand brown."

New York City, however, refused to let police sew flag patches on their uniforms. Finally, in a compromise, officers are wearing small U.S. flag pins.

United Parcel Service changed a long-standing policy of not allowing workers to wear pins or buttons on uniforms because some drivers and customers were unhappy about it.

It ordered 230,000 pins featuring the flag surrounded by a yellow ribbon. They are meant to say "we're American and let our troops come home safely," said Alan Caminiti, a UPS spokesman.

The American Civil Liberties Union "thinks that yellow ribbons or flag pins are really indistinguishable from any other kind of political button," and Americans have a right to those forms of expression, Ira Glasser, the ACLU's executive director, said last week.

Still, the ACLU might make a couple of exceptions.

"In certain professions, the function of the uniform is special. It indicates and emblemizes government neutrality when government neutrality and the appearance of government neutrality are very important," Glasser said.

Imagine, say, if a police officer wearing a peace button is assigned to patrol a rally in support of Operation Desert Storm. And arrested anti-war activists might wonder about a fair trial from a judge wearing a flag on his robe.

But even outside those professions, it may not be illegal to ban ribbons or flags. What would be illegal, he said, is to permit American flags but not anti-war banners.

"Then you're making a content distinction," he said.

Glasser said ACLU affiliates are beginning to get complaints, but he knew of no lawsuits.

The ACLU says it is considering action against the Virginia Department of Motor Vehicles for refusing to allow a plant decorated with doves and peace signs in the lobby of DMV headquarters in Richmond.

The lobby already contained plants with yellow ribbons and flags - after the state gave in to employee dissatisfaction over a ban against such patriotic displays. When the "peace plant" was presented, however, the donors were told only state employees could put up displays.

Disputes over political expression are not a Persian Gulf War phenomenon. During the Vietnam War, Glasser said, some teachers were fired and students suspended for wearing black armbands in opposition to the war. But this time, there's a twist.

"You don't expect repression of support of government policy," he said, adding that bans on ribbons and flags often are motivated by a desire to avoid controversy rather than opposition to the sentiment expressed.

State attorney general accuses spas of failing to obtain securities

AUSTIN (AP) - Two Dallas-area health spas have been sued by the Texas attorney general, who accuses them of failing to obtain securities required to protect members if the spa goes out of business.

Monday filed a lawsuit in Travis County district court against Fitness Surveys Inc. of Denton, doing business as Workout America Family Fitness Center in Irving.

A separate lawsuit was filed against Metro Athletic Club Management Inc. of Denton. The Texas Health Spa Act requires health clubs to file with the Texas Secretary of State a surety bond, certificate of deposit, letter of credit or other approved measure in the amount of $20,000 per facility.

Detroit's police chief indicted in fund theft

DETROIT (AP) - A federal grand jury indicted the police chief and a former business partner of Mayor Coleman Young on charges of stealing nearly $2.6 million from a secret police fund. Police Chief William Hart, a "cop's cop" who joined the force in 1952, says he'll fight back.

The grand jury on Monday indicted Hart, 67, on seven counts and Kenneth Weiner, a former deputy chief, on five counts, according to U.S. Attorney Stephen Markman. The indictments followed an 18-month investigation.

Young, the target of the grand jury probe when it began, was cleared of any wrongdoing, Markman said.

"We had no credible evidence as the basis of any kind of indictments for the mayor in connection with the secret service fund," said Markman, who criticized the city for what he said was its "tepid at best" assistance in the investigation.

Norman Lippitt, Hart's attorney, said he expects his client to arrange a temporary suspension while he fights the indictment, despite calls by city council members for his resignation.

"I've been a police officer for 39 years and I've devoted my life to the protection of the city of the City of Detroit," Hart said in a statement. "I intend to defend myself vigorously against these charges."

The two will be arraigned on the charges this week. Hart will remain free until then, Markman said. Weiner is in custody in a separate federal case.

Charges against Hart, whose annual salary is about $90,000, include embezzlement, income tax evasion, conspiracy and trying to get a witness to testify falsely before the grand jury. Weiner was charged with conspiracy, embezzlement and tax evasion.

The charges of embezzlement and obstruction of justice carry a penalty of up to 10 years in prison; conspiracy brings a maximum of five years; and tax evasion carries three years.

Hart joined the police department in 1952. He worked undercover for many years and was widely considered a "cop's cop." Young appointed him chief in 1976 and has resisted calls for his dismissal. Hart was removed from supervision over the fund in 1989 when the city began an internal investigation.

Markman said 54 checks totaling $1.29 million were drawn from the police department's secret fund in 1986-88 and deposited in businesses Weiner controlled. Both men had access to the fund, which was used by police to pay informers, make drug buys and conduct undercover investigations.

Hart also was charged with stealing another $1.29 million from the fund with 98 checks written to cash in 1982-89.

Officer Allene Ray, a police spokeswoman, said the department had no comment on the indictments. Young declined comment Monday night, saying only "it's a sad day for Detroit."

In a separate and unrelated federal case, Weiner, 44, was convicted last month of 40 felony counts in a multimillion-dollar investment fraud scheme.

Brandon Shane Wood

Brandon Wood wins Air Force Association contest

The Panhandle Chapter No. 181-Air Force Association announces that Brandon Shane Wood, Pampa High School, is the 1990 winner of the chapter's Earle North Parker Essay Contest for high school seniors. Wood is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gary Wood.

His essay was chosen from among 109 submitted to the AeroSpace vice-president, Mrs. Wanda Jones. The subject chosen by the state committee was "Is the Soviet Union Still a Threat to the United States?"

Wood is active in band and Explorer Scouts. He plans to major in engineering at Texas Tech University in the fall.

Wood's essay follows:

"Is the Soviet Union Still a Threat to the United States?"

The Soviet Union has changed radically in the past few years. We have seen an opening in the Iron Curtain not foreseeable ten years ago. Fewer restrictions on travel and press coverage are prime examples of this. Another example is the Glasnost Policy. Even with the leaps in agreements and talks, the Soviet Union is still striving and succeeding in a battle for a stronger, more powerful, country.

Activities in the espionage area have given the Soviets valuable technological data. Information on stealth aircraft has passed into Soviet hands. Acquisition of information concerning production of propellers for submarines was acquired by the Soviets from Toshiba, a Japanese firm. This gave the Soviets a jump in their submarine technology by building quieter submarines, thus making them harder to track and destroy. The Soviets have been able to steal secrets for super computers such as the Cray units. The Strategic Defense Initiative program utilizes these computers. The Soviets aren't able to product such equipment; therefore, they rely on stolen secrets to meet their needs.

During the Vietnam War, we learned that a single bomb with a laser guidance system could destroy a bridge where a conventional ordnance had failed, proving brain over brute. Soviets have taken note and are adapting. The aircraft now being produced include sophisticated radar and better armament. The Mig-29 "Fulcrum" is a prime example of stolen data being adapted to produce a high quality fighter. The Army is now receiving the T-80 main battle tank equipped with laser range finding equipment for better accuracy. This allows fewer tanks built that still get the job done. The Soviet Navy is one of the largest afloat, but consists of numerous second-class ships. This is quickly changing. Kirov class battlecruisers and the new Kremlin class carriers are giving them an offensive punch of reasonable reckoning. Numerous submarines are being phased out in favor of more capable submarines such as the Akula class. Soviets have learned that small numbers of advanced equipment compensate for masses of unsophisticated machinery.

New proposals for arms agreements make the news daily. Recently, the United States and U.S.S.R. signed the medium-range nuclear weapons agreements phasing out nuclear weapons of the class. The Soviets strived hard for this since these tactical nuclear weapons were the most feared. These weapons would be relied on to roll back a Soviet breakthrough of N.A.T.O. lines during a war. The Soviets are pushing to have Strategic Defence Initiative bargained for. This would make the Soviet ballistic missile system obsolete. Soviets most fear our fleet of ballistic missiles carried on Ohio class submarines. Soviets would be able to destroy missile silos in war, but not submarines. American submarines are not able to track the Ohio class constantly, thus proof of effectiveness. Soviets have proved successful in tracing an Ohio less than ten times. This explains the Soviet's willingness to trade equipment for systems such as S.D.I. and the Ohio class.

If we are led to believe that the Soviets are no longer a threat, they have won half of a critical battle. Arms agreements can be signed, talks can continue, and Glasnost will proceed to hide the true Soviet goal until it is too late. Larger opening in former Communist countries may materialize, but the Soviet Union will never change it's goal of world domination.

Life on a dairy farm is fulfillment of dream

By DANA ALLEN
The Paris News

TAYLOR TOWN, Texas (AP) — As the rest of the world worries about the oil crisis, Melody Holland concerns herself with a different liquid: milk.

The recent recipient of the Lamar County Farm Homemaker of the Year Award, Ms. Holland owns and operates a small dairy in Taylor Town. Her parents, Ben and Dorothy, and one employee, Jay Yoder, help her operate the business. However, as she puts it, she's "pretty much the ramrod" around the dairy.

At 27, Ms. Holland looks as if she would be more comfortable milling through department store aisles than through a herd of cows. But appearances can be deceiving; after graduating from Prairieland High School in 1982, where she was a member of 4-H and FFA, Ms. Holland went straight to work with her Holsteins.

"I've been around them all my life," she said, noting that her father raised beef cows prior to building the dairy in 1984. "I've lived right here all my life."

After milking cows for the Hickman and Satcher dairies outside of Paris, Ms. Holland said she came up with the design for her own dairy. It now occupies 110 acres, and there is additional land for calves and dry cows, she explained.

"I wanted to stay on the farm, and we didn't have enough land to make it cropping or farming," she said. "This dairy was the way I could stay on the farm and still make it."

Although she gets the cows up for milking seven days a week, Ms. Holland said that 2:45 a.m. still comes early. She hooks the 185 milk cows up to the machines 12 at a time; five hours later, she feeds the calves, milk cows and heifers. At 3 p.m., she prepares the cows for milking again and starts the process over.

"We're milking about 10 hours a day now," she said. "And all in between, you have to worry about feeding hay, weaning, doctoring sick ones, vaccinating, working them, breeding heifers, or just whatever else there is."

The job would be full-time for anyone. But Ms. Holland says she hasn't had any problems.

"A woman should be able to do anything a man can do," she said. "I just get in there and do my job and don't think anything about it. Sometimes I think it's better for a woman, because I have a lot more patience than a lot of the menfolks I've had working out here."

Ms. Holland hates wet weather; she likes to bake bread and homemade cinnamon rolls. She doesn't watch television, preferring to relax around her house instead. And although she said she likes working with cows, she doesn't get as attached to them as she used to.

"In my old original group I started out with, every time I would get rid of one, I would just hate it a lot," she said. "Now it's nothing — just a process. I guess it's just business."

Still, Ms. Holland will name some of the cows if their personalities strike her or, she said, "if they act like someone I know."

"They've all got different personalities, different spots or different bag," she said. "It's a lot easier if we have them named, because that way I can tell them if they need something done."

Most of the cows that she buys cost between $1,000 and $1,400; at the World Dairy Expo in Wisconsin in October, she bought 35 new cows. Among these were two brown Swiss cows, whom she named Ding-a-ling and Ring-a-ting; for her birthday, she received a matching pair of Swiss cow bells for each, she said.

Ms. Holland has had her share of bruises and sore spots from being kicked by cows, gotten over batches of tainted milk and survived all the tribulations that can occur during a calf's birth. But she said despite the problems, she wouldn't trade anything for it, she said.

"It's wide open out here and you don't have to be in one place all day, and you can just go here and there," she said. "It's hard work, but someday it's going to pay off — if the milk price doesn't go down."

With a new feed wagon and storage shed, Ms. Holland said she hopes she can overcome the upcoming milk surplus and start to show a profit by 1992 or '93.

"We just get by now, that's all," she said. "That (a profit) is what I'm working for. If it wasn't for that, I wouldn't stay going out here."

Military wife asks friends to lend an ear and a hand

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Please address the following issues in your column soon. My husband, a physician, will be deployed to the Persian Gulf any day as a part of a fleet hospital unit for the U.S. Navy. It is a very stressful time for us, made even more stressful by some of the remarks we hear from friends and acquaintances.

Abby, please tell people not to ask those who are headed for the Persian Gulf whether they think we should be there. My husband is a reservist and he must follow orders. We have to believe that our experts in Washington know what they are doing and their decisions are based on information that the general public is not privy to for security reasons.

Second, it is all right to ask me how I plan to manage without my husband home. We haven't been apart for more than two weeks since we were married 32 years ago, and it will not be easy for either one of us, but with God's help, we will both survive. So, ask me, because I need to verbalize my feelings, fears and plans. Then be prepared to listen to what I have to say.

Offer to help me shovel my driveway, do some home repairs, or fill a lonely afternoon or evening. Also ask me for his address so you can write to him. Our men and women in the service love to get mail from home.

Abby, please pass this along to your readers. Military families need all the help they can get.

MILITARY WIFE IN LUBBOCK
DEAR MILITARY WIFE: Thank you for an important letter. I hope it will be heeded — particularly your suggestion to ask for the addresses of friends and neighbors in the military. Mail from home is a tremendous morale booster for service members who are far from home.

DEAR ABBY: In a recent column, you said that the U.S. Constitution specifies that no person born on foreign soil shall be eligible to hold the office of the presidency. That is incorrect.

The Constitution states that a candidate for the office of president must be a natural-born citizen of the United States, which could be interpreted to mean that an individual born of U.S. citizens in a foreign country is eligible to run.

This question was raised in the early 1960s when Michigan's governor, George Romney, was a candidate for the presidency. Gov. Romney was born in Mexico of missionary parents who were both citizens of the United States.

RICHARD F. CZUBAJ,
ROCHESTER HILLS, MICH.

DEAR MR. CZUBAJ: You are indeed correct. An alert editor caught my error and I sent out a correction, but alas, my goof had already gone to press in some areas. Mea culpa Numero Uno for 1991.

Museum exhibit shows Route 66 photographs

A photographic exhibit entitled "That Ribbon of Highway: Through the Texas Panhandle on Route 66" will open at the Panhandle Plains Historical Museum in Canyon on Feb. 15 and will remain on display until January 1992.

Millions of people have the 2400 mile concrete slab from Chicago to Los Angeles, which includes the 178 mile stretch of road through the Texas Panhandle. Travelers crossed the Oklahoma border into Texas near the small community of Benonine and exited the state at Glenrio on the Texas-New Mexico line. Photographs in this exhibit provide a backward glance at some of the sights along this well-known highway.

The exhibit is located in the Photographic Gallery on the first floor of the museum. Museum hours are 9-5 Monday through Saturday and 2-6 on Sunday.

Levelland tops Pampa in bi-district playoffs

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Editor

CANYON — Levelland's switching defense and 23 points by all-state post Twilana Harrison resulted in a 52-32 win over the Pampa Lady Harvesters Monday night.

In the Class 4A bi-district game at West Texas State Fieldhouse — Pampa's first post-season action ever — Levelland jumped quickly to an 8-0 lead as the Lady Harvesters missed their first eight shots from the floor.

"We played well," said Levelland coach Dean Weese. "Pampa has a good ballclub. They played us hard."

The Loboettes never trailed and the Lady Harvesters were never able to cut the deficit to less than eight.

"Their big girl (6-1 Amber Seaton) hurt us on the boards early, but we were pretty effective on changing our defense around and I think that hurt Pampa a little bit," Weese said.

Seaton led Pampa scorers with 15 points, including 11 of Pampa's 16 points the first half.

Pampa trailed by only 9 (24-15) at halftime, but Levelland starting pulling away in the third quarter. The Loboettes outscored Pampa, 14-6, in the third quarter and led by 17 going into the fourth period.

Harrison, who hit 11 of 19 field goal attempts and pulled down 14 rebounds, was a problem for the Lady Harvesters on both ends of the court.

"She is some kind of athlete," PHS coach Albert Nichols said of Harrison. "We found out we couldn't handle them with a zone. They would keep passing the ball around until they got Twilana or somebody else open for a good shot."

The Lady Harvesters didn't have one of their better shooting nights, hitting only 14 of 48 tries from the floor for 29.1%. They were 4 of 8 from the foul line.

Levelland was 45.2% (19-42) from the floor and 13 of 18 from the foul stripe.

Amy Arp added 14 points for Levelland, which boosted its record to 28-3. The Loboettes advance to the Area round to meet San Angelo Lakeview.

The Loboettes were ranked sixth in Class 4A going into last night's game.

Nikki Ryan chipped in 10 points for the Lady Harvesters, followed by Christa West with 3 points, Bridgett Mathis and Sheila Reed, 2 points each.

The Lady Harvesters finished their season at 18-2, placing second behind Randall in the final District 1-4A standings.

"I told the girls after the game that we can use this playoff season to build on," Nichols said. "It's a good start."

WLAFL conducts first draft session

Raleigh-Durham club makes first selection

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Raleigh-Durham Skyhawks coach Roman Gabriel drew the first choice in the first-ever World League of American Football selection system in ceremonies Sunday.

The San Antonio Riders drew the seventh choice.

A matrix featuring 10 player positions was devised by WLAFL officials to ensure that each club will have equal access to the player talent pool for start-up league.

The Skyhawks, opting to place an early emphasis on offense, selected the player matrix (position "H") that included rights to the No. 1 wide receiver, No. 2 running back, No. 3 tight end, No. 4 quarterback, and No. 5 offensive lineman.

"We decided as a staff to go offense first and 'H' gave us the best opportunity," said Gabriel, a former all-pro NFL quarterback, who couldn't believe he drew the first pick. "All of a sudden I felt like I was playing again. And I'm still nervous."

The second team to choose a position in the matrix was the Birmingham Fire, followed by the Frankfurt Galaxy, the New YorkNew Jersey Knights, the Montreal Machine, the Barcelona Dragons, the Orlando Thunder, the Riders, the London Monarchs and the Sacramento Surge.

"This was the most exciting draft I've ever been involved with, and the kind of innovative approach that will become the hallmark of the World League, said WLAFL President Mike Lynn, who put numbers in a WLAFL helmet for the 10 teams to select.

The World League, which launches its inaugural season in five countries on March 23-25, will stage its 1991 draft Feb. 14-24 in six phases by player position groups.

Choosing second, Birmingham decided to take the matrix position that includes rights to the No. 1 quarterback, No. 2 offensive lineman, and No. 3 defensive back. Frankfurt, which chose third, will pick the first running back, second tight end and third quarterback.

However, the WLAFL's No. 1 draft choice on Thursday, which features only offensive linemen, belongs to the New YorkNew Jersey Knights, who drew the fourth position in Sunday's draft matrix. The Knights will follow with the No. 2 corner back, the No. 4 defensive line and No. 5 defensive linebacker.

Barkley: A stout, but sensitive soul

By JIM LITKE
AP Sports Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Pro basketball's most ruthless competitor is also one of its most sensitive souls. Its smallest big man and its biggest small man. Its resident critic and conscience, and is there any doubt any more, its hardest-working?

Charles Barkley, a stout 6-foot-4 and 250 pounds, is all of those things, and as of 4:30 p.m. Sunday, he was one thing more: The most valuable player in the NBA's annual Show of Shows.

And it seemed fitting somehow that the man who planned to skip this game altogether outplayed the rest of the best because he was not playing at all. Barkley's 17-point, 22-rebound performance Sunday — replete with the usual trash-talking, pushing and shoving and knocking people down — let it be known that the phrase "it's only an exhibition" does not appear anywhere in his considerable vocabulary.

"I hate Charles," Magic Johnson said within earshot of Barkley, taking pains to smile when he said it, "because he throws everybody out of the way and complains to the ref if somebody just nicks him.

"He's a manchild. He controlled the inside. That's what kept us from getting into our transition game," Johnson added. "Charles set the tone for the way the game was played."

That is the short answer to the question of how Barkley's East beat Magic's West squad 116-114 in the lowest scoring All-Star game since 1975. For the longer version, we turn to the round mound of contradictions himself, whose relentless banging under both boards influenced people, but won him few friends.

"Actually," Barkley said, "I kind of enjoyed this. The game was a little more interesting because people were playing defense for a change. It wasn't like, 'Get out of the way and let this guy dunk, get out of the way, let that guy dunk.' I don't play that way."

It is worth noting that, but for a midweek call from NBA commissioner David Stern ordering his appearance in Charlotte, Barkley would not have played at all.

A little more than three weeks ago, he suffered a stress fracture, then twisted the ankle of the same left foot and sat out seven games to let the injuries begin healing. Barkley was back in the 76ers lineup for the four games before the break and, despite being voted a starter, Barkley planned to go home to Leeds, Ala., and let his mother and grandmother dote on him and his foot over the long weekend instead. Then came the phone call.

Barkley and Stern, it turns out, talk often and get along well, considering that almost all of their conversations end up costing Charles more than the toll charge.

Last season, the commish slapped him once with a $5,000 fine for engaging in friendly wagers with the Knicks' Mark Jackson, and a second time for $20,000 after a 76ers-Pistons brawl in which Barkley tried to separate Bill Laimbeer from his senses with a looping left hook.

Barkley and Stern had another talk Sunday just before the All-Star game.

"He came into the locker room and said, 'I'm glad you're here, we needed you.' We had a nice conversation," Barkley recalled. "It was nice of him to do that."

Arkansas and the eight little stepbrothers

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) — The basketball version of the Arkansas Razorbacks is handling its farewell tour of the Southwest Conference far better than its football counterparts handled the league last fall.

The Razorbacks' 112-105 loss to top-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas Sunday was only the second setback of the season for No. 2 Arkansas, which hasn't lost any games in conference play.

Arkansas' football team lost eight straight SWC games before winning its finale against Southern Methodist.

In basketball, the Razorbacks are 23-2 for the season and looking ahead to postseason play. The only other defeat was at the hands of Arizona in another non-conference contest.

It's been Arkansas and the eight little stepbrothers in the SWC, with only the Texas Longhorns of Tom Penders showing enough flash and firepower to impress the NCAA Tournament Committee.

Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson has been on a mission, and he hasn't let his players forget it for one minute. He didn't want to leave the SWC for the Southeastern Conference on a load of losses like the football team suffered last fall.

After Arkansas got revenge recently for a road loss to Texas Christian in Fort Worth last year, senior Ron Huery said:

"We came to Fort Worth to make a statement. We're going to the SEC and hopefully we're going to leave smooth. But if they want a war, we're going to bring a war to them. We're on a mission to leave this conference in stride."

Richardson wanted big revenge against TCU because he claimed that Moe Iba said the Hogs shouldn't be allowed to play one more season before they leave for the SEC.

Then came the Baylor game where, once again, Arkansas wanted revenge against the Bears, who defeated them in Waco last year.

Arkansas edged the Bears by five points and after the game Richardson said: "I'm so happy to get out of this conference, I don't know what to do."

Richardson was upset at what he perceived to be a slow clock operator in the final seconds of the game.

"Ray Charles could have looked up at the clock and known something was wrong," Richardson said. "I'm happy I never have to come back here again."

The biggest danger remaining to Arkansas' hopes of sweeping through the SWC undefeated will come in Austin March 3 in a nationally televised (ABC, 3 p.m. CST) game at the Frank Erwin Center. It likely will be the last regular-season game the Hogs will play in the SWC.

Texas could be double-tough by March 3. The Longhorns are fast improving, just like they did last year when they came on strong at the end of the season. Texas eventually met and lost to Arkansas in the finals of the NCAA Midwest Regional.

Texas had three road victories last week and a different star emerged every night. On Saturday, it was Guillermo Myers and Benford Williams, who helped Texas overcome a 10-point deficit to defeat Southern Methodist 76-73 in Dallas.

Dexter Cambridge, the national junior college player of the year, has finally started adjusting to bigtime college basketball. His bench play helped stave off a Texas A&M upset bid recently.

"It's a good sign that Dexter is coming on," Penders said. "He could be important to us at playoff time."

Texas has 16 victories and appears on its way to a 20-victory season. The Longhorns have played a tough schedule, which fits well into the NCAA computer rankings. The Longhorns have nine consecutive victories, the most ever under Penders.

Houston has been somewhat of a disappointment. When Craig Upchurch injured his back before the season began, coach Pat Foster indicated it would take time to find the correct combinations.

The Cougars have played poorly against top-notch non-conference competition and are in a battle with TCU and SMU for third place. Houston recently lost to SMU and Rice.

Huskies' defense shuts down Hoyas

By The Associated Press

The Connecticut Huskies had the perfect game plan for the Georgetown Hoyas. The East Tennessee State Buccaneers also had one for the Furman Paladins. Only theirs didn't work.

"One of the things we said in our scouting report was not to let Hal Henderson have a good night," said East Tennessee State coach Alan LeForce, "but he was the difference."

With Henderson scoring a career

College basketball

high 29 points, Furman upset the 10th-ranked Buccaneers 104-93 in a key Southern Conference game on Monday night. The result left the two tied at the top with 9-2 records.

Connecticut, meanwhile, followed through on their plan to collapse on Georgetown's two big inside men — Dikembe Mutombo and Alonzo Mourning.

Mutombo had three field goals and Mourning none as the Huskies' defense shut down the 18th-ranked Hoyas en route to a 61-55 Big East victory.

"As the game wore on we got more confident because we knew they weren't going to hit it from the outside. Some of them weren't even looking to shoot it," Connecticut center Rod Sellers said. "That made us collapse even more."

In other games involving ranked teams, No. 2 Ohio State defeated Michigan 81-65; No. 9 Southern Mississippi beat McNeese State 81-62 and No. 12 New Mexico State defeated UC-Santa Barbara 67-64. Furman 104, No. 10 East Tennessee State 93.

Henderson, whose previous career best was 24 two seasons ago, hit eight of 10 shots from the field, including six of seven 3-pointers. He also made seven of nine free throws and had seven assists.

Bruce Evans added 19 points and Tracy Garrick and Derek Waugh 18 each in a balanced attack for the Paladins (17-6). Keith Jennings scored 33 for the Buccaneers (21-3). Connecticut 61, No. 18 Georgetown 55.

While Connecticut was shutting down Georgetown's inside game, Chris Smith scored 27 points for the Huskies.

Smith's layup with 41 seconds left, following a blown slam dunk by Mutombo, gave the Huskies a 57-49 lead. Smith made two free throws with 14 seconds left to give the Huskies the 61-55 lead.

Connecticut (15-7, 6-6 in the Big East), coming back from a six-game losing streak, won its third straight and took sole possession of fifth place in the conference. Georgetown (15-7, 7-4) lost its share of first place.

No. 2 Ohio State 81, Michigan 65. Jim Jackson scored 21 points and reserve Chris Jent sparked the Buckeyes with 14 points as Ohio State improved to 20-1.

Ohio State, which won the first meeting between the teams 67-57 in Ann Arbor, won for the 15th straight time at home. The Buckeyes are 12-0 at St. John Arena this season.

No. 9 Southern Mississippi 81, McNeese St. 62.

Clarence Weatherspoon had 23 points and 15 rebounds while playing three-fourths of the game and Southern Mississippi used all of its players in wearing down McNeese State.

BYU's Detmer wins O'Brien Award

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Ty Detmer, Heisman Trophy winner from Brigham Young University, accepted the Davey O'Brien Award as the nation's top collegiate quarterback and said he plans to be fully recovered from two separated shoulders by next fall.

Detmer said during Monday night's award ceremony that after seeing the medals of former BYU quarterbacks Jim McMahon and Steve Young on prominent display on campus, "It's nice to have one of my own."

"It was a great year for us. I'm thrilled to be here. Things really worked out well," Detmer said.

Detmer, who was born in San Marcos, Texas, and set high school passing records while quarterbacking for his father-coach in San Antonio, separated both shoulders during the Cougars' 55-13 loss to Texas A&M in the Holiday Bowl.

Detmer said he will miss spring training, but will be at full speed for BYU's season opener Aug. 29 in the Pigskin Classic against Florida State.

"I should be ready just after the spring. I'm going to throw all summer, and I'll be ready when the season starts. Our last two losses to Hawaii and A&M left a bad taste in my mouth," he said.

BYU coach Lavell Edwards, who was on hand for the Davey O'Brien ceremony, said he doesn't think Detmer's missing spring practice will hurt the Cougars next year.

"We just made up our mind not to use him this spring, and we'll work in our younger players," Edwards said.

"It was unusual that Ty separated both shoulders in the same game, but we believe he will bounce back and be OK."

Detmer has broken 42 NCAA passing records and tied 5. His career total of 11,000 passing yards at BYU ranks him second on the all-time list. Last season, he became the most prolific passer in the history of college football by throwing for 5,188 yards.

Detmer received a $10,000 scholarship check in honor of BYU at the 14th annual awards dinner, which was held at the Fort Worth Club.

Runnerup Craig Erickson of the University of Miami was unable to attend the ceremony because of a knee injury he suffered during practice at the Hula Bowl.

Earnhardt pounds field in Busch Clash

By MIKE HARRIS
AP Motorsports Writer

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — He has the look of Popeye with a lifetime supply of spinach; Superman with no kryptonite in sight; or the proverbial 5,000-pound gorilla.

Dale Earnhardt is looking mighty strong — again. He flexed the muscle on his black Chevrolet Lumina in Sunday's Busch Clash, not only winning the race for the previous year's pole-winners, but at one point driving from last place in the 14-car field to the front in less than two laps on Daytona International Speedway's 2.5-mile oval.

Even Earnhardt was surprised by his showing, saying, "I didn't really believe that anybody could do that, but I was really having a good time out there."

He had a real good time for 499 of 500 miles here a year ago when the four-time NASCAR Winston Cup champion pounded the field into submission until a shredded tire halfway through the final lap relegated him to a fifth place finish and kept the dominating Earnhardt from winning his first Daytona 500.

Even Earnhardt was surprised by his showing, saying, "I didn't really believe that anybody could do that, but I was really having a good time out there."

Even Earnhardt was surprised by his showing, saying, "I didn't really believe that anybody could do that, but I was really having a good time out there."

He wound up winning nine races, four poles and more than $3 million on the way to the 1990 championship. But that was last year.

Everybody is starting with a clean slate, right? The smile on Earnhardt's face Sunday and again on Monday was enough to sour the stomachs of more than a few people in the Daytona garage area.

Darrell Waltrip, the 1989 Daytona 500 winner, said, "I learned something watching that race that I already knew. Earnhardt's got a lot of horsepower — a whole lot of horsepower."

Geoff Bodine, who won the 1986 race, said, "I'm disappointed to see Dale run so good. He's had the handle on the superspeedways the last year, and it looks like he has it again."

Bill Elliott, winner of the 1985 and 1987 Daytona 500s, was even more adamant, saying, "I don't see anybody beating Earnhardt. ... Anybody that can come from last to first in two laps, I mean, you've got to understand, he's BAD!"

They don't call Earnhardt "The Intimidator" for no reason. And he likes that psychological advantage. Richard Childress, a former driver and now the owner of the team for which Earnhardt drives, said, "I don't think anybody else could have done what he did (Sunday). He has that natural ability of being able to put that car where it needs to be."

"I can remember back when I was driving and saw some of the things that Dale did on the race track. Some other people had it, but not many."

Still, Earnhardt's performance in the Clash didn't convince everybody he is again the man to beat.

Rusty Wallace, Earnhardt's friend and one of his toughest competitors, said, "Earnhardt did well. He's a good driver. He's pretty lucky, too. While everybody was messing around with each other, he shot past them."

Another dissenting voice was Kyle Petty, who said, "Earnhardt's pretty stout. But he came up through that pack because the No. 11 (Bodine) wasn't going anywhere (at the front) and neither was the No. 18 (Greg Sacks), and all of us were hung up side-by-side. "It's a whole lot easier to draft up on a pack like that. But, after he got back up front, he couldn't do anything."
