McLean residents prepare for opening of Devil's Rope-Old Route 66 Museum

By J. ALAN BRZYS
Staff Writer

McLEAN - The Devil's Rope Museum-Texas Old Route 66 Exhibit opens Saturday, highlighting the historical significance of barbed wire and the importance of "The Mother Road" - Old Route 66.

The invention and use of barbed wire played an important role in the taming and development of wide expanses of land across America.

Fabled Old Route 66 cut through America's mid section from Chicago to Santa Monica, California.

It is the marriage of the histories of barbed wire and Route 66 that makes this newest of area museums unique.

The 14,000-square-foot museum complex is located at the intersection of Old Route 66 and Kingsley Street. The building, owned by the city of McLean, formerly housed a brasserie factory. It is leased to the museum.

The building's interior has been divided into exhibit spaces, a lobby area, a store in which souvenirs will be sold, a nursery area for children, and a 3,000-square-foot Western Heritage Community Room.

"Few people realize the long term impact this facility can have," said Delbert Trew, the museum's agent and curator, during a Thursday four of the complex.

Trew said the ambitious community-backed project "needed to be done."

"The beautiful part is ... so much has been given to us," he said. "We've done about $30,000 worth of renovations and only spent $8,000 in cash. All our bills are paid."

Delbert Trew, agent and curator of the Devil's Rope Museum-Texas Old Route 66 Exhibit, describes a machine for making barbed wire. It is one of several demonstration exhibits planned.

"There will be at opening day, 2,000 individual items that can be viewed in the barbed wire portion of the museum ... strictly barbed wire and tools," Trew said. "Six-hundred and forty wires were patented, but many were not manufactured. We think we'll eventually have 590 of the 640."

"Approximately 2,020 patents were issued on barbed wire fencing tools," Trew explained. "We think we'll have 1,000 examples in the next few months."

Trew admitted other institutions like the Smithsonian Institution may have larger collections, but said, "We think we have the largest display of fencing tools known."

Trew is especially proud of the "beginnings" of a research library on barbed wire and fencing tools.

Established entirely with donated funds and labor, the grand opening is the culmination of a 1 1/2-year effort to establish a national barbed wire museum and to provide the Texas Old Route 66 Association with space for exhibits.

According to Trew, the major financing has come from barbed wire collectors all over the country who pledged specific amounts each year for five years, and from memberships sold by the Old Route 66 Association.

Activity at the museum has been at a frantic pace in preparation for the grand opening.

Garth Thomas, president of the Old Route 66 Association of Texas; Ruth Magee, president of the McLean chapter; and Charlie Marie Shurley, vice president of the state association were busy last week putting finishing touches on the Route 66 exhibit. Trew was busy with mechanical improvements.

A map has been painted on the walls of one room "from Chicago to Santa Monica, California," and a black "highway" will be painted on the floor to guide people through the exhibit. Signs indicate major towns along the route.

The highway was officially designated in 1926, according to Thomas.

Magee said, "All the signs you see in here came off Old Route 66."

Thomas and Magee agree many "greasy spoons" and roadside attractions, including reptile ranches, dotted sections of the highway.

Magee said, "We're inviting other towns in Texas to participate in this."

Included in the collections are historical artifacts from several of the major spreads established in the Texas Panhandle including the XIT, the Fryling Pan and the RO ranches.

"It's going to be free as long as we can afford it," said Trew. He hopes revenue from the store and the community room will make the complex self-supporting. Catered meals, banquets, proms, art shows and other events are planned for the community room.

The museum staff already has booked a bus tour from Bakersfield, Calif., on opening day.

Celebrities from along Old Route 66, national collectors, organization dignitaries, local club members and area elected officials are expected to participate in the grand opening ceremony.

The museum opens at 9 a.m. Saturday, and ribbon cutting ceremonies for both exhibits are set for 2 p.m.

Early returns show strong support for Soviet unity

By ANN IMSE
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) - Mikhail S. Gorbachev appeared today to have won strong endorsement for his efforts to preserve the Soviet Union, but referendum results showed him losing on an issue that could strengthen his chief rival.

Soviets voted Sunday on whether to back Gorbachev's efforts to keep the deeply divided country together under his leadership.

In the Russian republic, citizens also voted on whether to make the presidency a popularly elected office; parliament now appoints the president. Preliminary returns from Moscow, Leningrad and other parts of the Russian Federation showed overwhelming support for this measure.

If confirmed, the result would be a victory for Gorbachev's political rival, Boris Yeltsin, who leads Russia, the largest of the 15 Soviet republics.

Gorbachev, speaking to reporters after he cast his ballot Sunday, described the plan to change how the Russian president is elected as "very dangerous."

"We cannot talk about the preservation of the union ... if we accept this proposal," Gorbachev said. He also said, however, he would "respect the opinion of the Russians" on the issue.

Although Yeltsin often is described as the Russian president, he is actually chairman of the Russian Federation parliament. But he would be a favorite in any popular election for the presidency.

Hanging in the balance in the first nationwide referendum in Soviet or even Russian history was not only the fate of the vast country and its more than 100 ethnic groups, but also Gorbachev's future.

The White House had no comment on the voting. "We've got to wait a little longer to analyze it and see what it all means," presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said in Washington today.

Early returns indicated strong support for preserving the union in 90 percent of the country, although the governments of six small republics refused to back the measure and boycotted Sunday's vote.

But the question also appeared to have been defeated in Leningrad and the Ukrainian capital of Kiev, where sentiment was strong for reform and reducing the power of the central government.

The vote totals for Kiev and Leningrad confirmed the results of earlier elections and public opinion surveys that showed greater support for radical reforms in big cities than in the countryside.

"It's quite natural for Leningrad to vote this way," said Leningrad lawmaker Sergei Berezovsky.

"At least here, people have more information and have maybe more freedom to express their real views than somewhere in the village district," he added.

The day after the referendum, it remained unclear what political capital Gorbachev might try to make of his apparent victory in the national voting.

The Soviet president had lobbied heavily for approval and predicted victory in the referendum, which asks citizens whether they want to stay together in a renewed federation.

With all 15 republics having endorsed some sort of independence, Gorbachev wanted to appeal directly to the people to restore a national unity shattered by sometimes violent ethnic, legal and political disputes.

Sunday's election was marred by scattered violence and charges of irregularities. In some districts of the Ukraine and Russia, officials lured voters to the polls by selling such scarce goods as beer, fruit and sweets.

On Sunday, Gorbachev repeated his warning that if the national referendum fails and the union breaks up, civil war could erupt. "I don't think our people are suicidal," he told reporters after casting his ballot.

Pro-democracy reformers tried to turn the referendum into a vote of no-confidence for Gorbachev and his fellow Communists, saying they feared a vote backing the union would be used to suppress separatists with violence.

The Soviet leader has said republics voting "no" in the referendum may pursue secession under Soviet law.

However, the law requires a lengthy waiting period and says any secession must be approved by the national parliament. Independence-seekers say it would be nearly impossible to achieve their goals by that route.

Unofficial tallies showed the Ukraine, the nation's agricultural and industrial heartland with 52 million people, approved the referendum by a small margin. But a spokesman for the election commission in the Ukrainian capital of Kiev said 52.8 percent of Kiev voters cast ballots against the union.

The spokesman, Valentin Danilyuk, said 78.2 percent of Kiev voters approved a second ballot question, added by the republic's legislature, favoring Ukrainian sovereignty.

Berezovsky said preliminary results showed 70 percent of voters in the country's second-largest city opposed remaining in the union.

In Turkmenia, a republic of 3.5 million bordering Iran and Afghanistan, 95 percent of voters chose to retain the union. It was the first republic to report final counts.

In Khabarovsk, a city in the Soviet Far East, 66 percent of voters backed the union, election officials said.

Four districts of Kazakhstan in Central Asia said early returns favored the union by margins of at least 94 percent.

Lawyers ready assault on Iraq's treasury

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - U.S. law firms are beginning to prepare cases for clients who hope to recover billions of dollars in business and property lost after Iraq invaded Kuwait last August.

At stake is the right to frozen Iraqi assets and future profits from that nation's rich oil reserves.

Iraq has accepted in principle a United Nations resolution requiring it to pay for destroyed property and lost business in Kuwait and other countries.

President Bush has said he intends to see that Baghdad sticks to that agreement, but it remains uncertain how vigorously the United States and its allies in the Persian Gulf War will pursue claims against Iraq.

"It's the question of the day, isn't it?" said Carol Welu, a Washington lawyer, who said several clients with Kuwaiti business ties have contacted her firm.

The amount of money available for war claims by the victorious allies and their citizens could depend on Saddam Hussein's future as president of Iraq, she said.

"If Hussein is toppled, I imagine the United States would be much more willing to take a magnanimous view and expend funds for the reconstruction of Iraq," Ms. Welu said.

Meanwhile, the Treasury Department is taking preliminary soundings on the extent of claims against Iraq by American businesses and citizens.

Department spokeswoman Barbara Clay said the survey, compiled "for informational and planning purposes," is nearly complete. Lawyers have been advising clients, many of whom lost out on contracts with Kuwait's government, how to respond to the survey.

"President Bush has said Iraq is going to pay and I hope he meant it," said Washington lawyer Bruce Claggett. He added that Iraq might even be forced to pay for the destruction caused by allied troops.

"There is no reason why it wouldn't include damage by the allies," Claggett said. "It was a clearly legal war against an illegal action" - the invasion of Kuwait.

Some international law specialists warn against impoverishing Iraq, citing the lessons of World War I when a defeated Germany was forced to pay heavy reparations. Many historians believe the postwar treatment of Germany contributed to Adolf Hitler's rise to power.

A more recent historical example - the settlement of the Iran hostage crisis a decade ago - suggests that claims may be settled without bitter upheaval.

Iran has paid billions of dollars in claims and repaid loans to U.S. banks as part of a bargain it made in 1981 to end the crisis. In return, the United States agreed to unfreeze Iranian assets in this country and help Iran's government obtain the fortune of that nation's deposed shah and his family.

Resolving claims against Iraq could prove more complex.

Legal observers say one complication is how Iraqi assets would be divided between the nations that suffered losses. Another is how the money would be apportioned between governments and private citizens.

For example, thousands of immigrant workers in Kuwait from other gulf countries fled that nation when war erupted, leaving behind all their worldly goods.

"It's going to be very, very difficult," said Arthur Rovine, a New York City lawyer. Unlike the Iranian hostage situation, he said, "here you have a lot more than two countries involved ... and an enormous number of small claims."

The United States and its allies hold a distinct advantage because Iraq's military defeat was so thorough, legal experts say. They note the allies have the power to seize Iraqi oil exports, with military force if necessary.

Iraq claims revolt crushed in southern cities

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) - Iraq claimed today it had crushed the revolt in the south, but rebel leaders contended the uprising was growing and travelers said the army had set up checkpoints around Baghdad and was searching for weapons.

The rebel leaders, speaking in Syria, reported new fighting near al-Kut, 100 miles southeast of Baghdad and Kurdish guerrillas said they were holding on to gains in the northern Iraq.

Neighboring Iran declared today a day of mourning for what it called the destruction of Muslim shrines by Saddam Hussein's loyalists.

Iran supports the Shiite Muslim rebels in Iraq's predominately Shiite south, and its official news agency on Sunday quoted Iraqi refugees as saying Saddam Hussein's Republican Guard was using napalm to crush the southern rebellion.

None of the claims could be verified independently.

The travelers from Iraq said the army had set up checkpoints around

Baghdad and every mile or two on the highways south of the capital. They said soldiers had also begun to search houses and cars in Baghdad for weapons.

A spokesman for a rebel faction claimed in Damascus today that Saddam was trying to regroup his forces in the capital and isolate rebels in the suburbs of al-Doura and al-Taji.

The spokesman, Bayan Jabr of the Shiite Supreme Assembly for the Islamic Revolution, also claimed that rebels in al-Kut had repulsed an attack by loyalists, shooting down two government helicopters.

The army newspaper Al-Qadisiyah reported today that anti-government riots had been crushed in the southern cities of Najaf, Karbala, Hilla, Amarra and in Dhi Qar province.

Al-Thawra, the ruling Baath Arab Socialist Party newspaper, also claimed the southern rebellion had been crushed. It characterized the unrest as sectarian turmoil that aimed at "destroying Iraq and ...

turning it into another Lebanon."

The newspapers claimed the rebels had killed men, women and children and left towns and cities in ruins.

Salam al-Shama, writing in the government newspaper Al-Jumhuriya, said that when he toured the Muslim holy city of Karbala he saw bodies stacked in hospitals and blood everywhere.

"Blood was painted on the streets and the walls of the city. It was all blood, blood, blood," he wrote. Rebels have said that loyalist army units shelled the city last week, killing hundreds.

Al-Qadisiyah said a soldier captured by the rebels in the other key southern holy city, Najaf, told the newspaper that he and other soldiers were held for 14 days without food or water in the basement of a school run by a Shiite cleric.

Iraq's government said it sent top officials to tour cities recaptured from the insurgents over the weekend.

Supreme Court agrees to hear case on prayers at high school graduations

By RICHARD CARELLI
 Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today agreed to decide whether prayers should be allowed as part of the graduation ceremonies at public schools.

The court said it will review rulings that barred guest speakers from delivering invocations and benedictions at high school and junior high school commencement ceremonies in Providence, R.I.

Lower courts said such prayers violate the constitutionally required separation of church and state.

In the appeal acted on today, Providence school officials said acknowledging God at such times does not amount to a governmental endorsement of religion.

The Rhode Island chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union sued on behalf of a Providence family that objected to prayers at their daughter's junior high school graduation.

"I'm very disappointed," said Steven Brown, the chapter's executive director. "I think agreeing to hear this case opens up the distinct possibility that the principle of separation of church and state may get a drubbing."

But school board attorney Joseph A. Rotella said the issue was ripe for Supreme Court review.

In other orders today, the Supreme Court:

— Ordered the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals to restudy its ruling that the manufacturer of Buster Brown shoes was guilty of illegal racial bias when it fired a white supervisor at a Missouri warehouse while keeping a black supervisor who had less seniority. The order appeared to suggest the appeals court consider limiting the scope of a key civil rights law enacted primarily to protect freed slaves after the Civil War.

— Sent back to lower courts for further study seven disputes over punitive-damages awards, including cases of damages won by former members of the Hare Krishna religion and the Church of Scientology. The court told lower courts to restudy each of the seven cases in light of its decision on punitive damages earlier this month in which the justices refused to set constitutional limits on punitive damages in personal injury lawsuits.

— Refused to let Connecticut authorities file new manslaughter charges against a drunken driver who had pleaded guilty to the lesser charge of vehicular assault for running over a 13-year-old boy two years ago. Susan Nelson pleaded guilty to the lesser crime in April 1988. The victim, Eric Zimmerman, died the following October.

— Refused to reinstate a libel lawsuit against the Corpus Christi Times in Texas by a former state social worker, Elda Villarreal, who says a false 1985 article destroyed her life. The court let stand rulings that defeated her suit, rejecting her argument that she was wrongly found to be a "public official" who could win the suit only by proving the article was published with knowledge or reckless disregard of its falsity.

In the prayer at graduation ceremonies case, the high court since 1962 has banned organized prayer sessions from public schools. But Providence school officials and the Bush administration told the justices that prayers at graduation ceremonies are different.

The school officials' appeal called such prayers part of "the longstanding and broad tradition of official acknowledgement of religious values in the public life of the nation."

The appeal noted that invocations and benedictions are recited in state legislatures across the nation and in the Congress, and that all Supreme Court public sessions begin with the invocation "God save the United States and this honorable court."

Justice Department lawyers urged the scrapping in some cases of a three-part test the court has used repeatedly since 1971 in deciding whether a governmental practice violates that part of the Constitution banning "an establishment of religion."

Under the test, the governmental practice is struck down if it does not have a secular purpose, advances or promotes religion, or fosters excessive entanglement with religion.

The government lawyers said the court should "jettison the framework erected by (the three-part test) in circumstances where, as here, the practice under assault is noncoercive, ceremonial acknowledgement of the heritage of a deeply religious people."

"Whatever special concerns about subtle coercion may be present in the classroom setting — where inculcation is the name of the game — they do not carry over into the commencement setting, which is more properly understood as a civic ceremony than part of the education mission," the government lawyers said.

The prayers in Providence were challenged two years ago by Daniel Weisman when his daughter, Deborah, was a student at Nathan Bishop Junior High School.

Weisman, who practices Judaism, objected when Rabbi Leslie Gutterman was scheduled to give an invocation and benediction at his daughter's graduation ceremony.

Weisman's lawyers said he is "opposed to and offended by inclusion of prayer in public school ... graduation ceremonies."

A federal judge and the 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled for Weisman.

Weisman, a Rhode Island College professor, was on sabbatical in Olympia, Wash., and could not immediately be reached for comment. His wife, Vivian, said she was concerned about the high court's decision but was optimistic the family would prevail.

Miss Texas contestants accept big list of no-nos

FORT WORTH (AP) — First of all, sports are out. Too risky. Dating is okay, but like personal phone calls, they are restricted. Curfews, weekly weigh-ins are a must, as is "good moral character."

The rules sound like those for a strict boarding school.

Instead, they are just some of the stipulations enforced upon the wearer of the Miss Texas crown, who must be unmarried, never been pregnant and between the ages of 17 and 26. Before entering, contestants must sign a 5,000 list of dos and don'ts.

Among the rules listed are the obvious — "Contestant has always been a female."

And there's those bordering on the prudish, like the ban on pantsuit wearing in public, unless "business manager or travelling companion consents."

Then there's the downright peculiar. On the list, contestants are barred from participating in 59 sporting activities, including the seemingly benign, aerobics, and the male-dominated sports of boxing and cricket.

The Texas pageant is one of few state contests requiring the state queen to move in with a chaperon. But the contract rates nary a second glance from the contestants who think a year of restrictions is worth the most enviable title in the state.

"To give up those things for one year is nothing if it means accomplishing a dream you wanted ever since you were a little girl," said Nicki Anselmo, the 20-year-old reigning Miss Fort Worth.

Miss Texas executive director Barry Hall says the sports clause makes a lot of sense.

"We're not trying to be unreasonable," Hall said.

"Appearances are booked a year in advance. You can't have a dancer sprain her leg. You can't have a pianist break her hand."

"If you are going into it with your eyes open, it's not so bad," said Leah Kay Lyle, Miss Texas 1989, who was nearly stripped of her crown after taking an ski trip during her reign. "Restrictions go with the job and help you focus on the role."

However, at least one Miss Texas crown-wearer had second thoughts.

"If I were a contestant again," said Miss Texas 1985 Jonna Fitzgerald, now a Dallas film producer, who earned $30,000 during her reign, "I would have certainly have a lawyer look at this contract before I signed. Some consider the Miss Texas pageant contract the most restrictive in the country."

Once the Miss Texas crown is cinched, only 15-minute phone calls are allowed, no friends, family or boyfriends are allowed to accompany the winner during public appearances and she must agree to surrender medical and hospital records upon request by pageant officials.

An East Texas contestant was once stripped of her local title when pageant officials learned she had an abortion the year before.

The Texas queen must also stay within 5 pounds of her contest weight. If she doesn't, she has two weeks to drop it or gain it back.

Also, contestants must never have been married, pregnant or "cohabitated with a male."

Some rules, like the 1 a.m. curfew and the phone call limit, are negotiable, say pageant officials.

Colorado woman slain; husband arrested in Vega

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — A woman was found stabbed to death in her apartment here Sunday morning and her husband was arrested later in the day in Texas after he made a 600-mile motorcycle ride, authorities said.

Peter Ray Caraway, 40, was held without bond late Sunday for Colorado authorities at the Oldham County Jail in Vega, Texas, authorities said.

Vega is 30 miles west of Amarillo, where Caraway apparently was headed.

Caraway was arrested on a warrant for investigation of murder. No formal charges had been filed Sunday.

The victim was Herta Tate Caraway, 29. She was stabbed several times with a knife, said police spokesman Bob Hayden. He said Peter Caraway's mother called police about the killing shortly after he stopped by her house Sunday morning.

Police said they found a knife in the apartment that may be the murder weapon.

Caraway left Colorado Springs on his motorcycle and was arrested about 600 miles away in Vega, where he stopped at a convenience store about 6 p.m.

Authorities said a store clerk called them and said the man was "acting funny." A routine check found the Colorado Springs warrant for Caraway's arrest.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the covenanted commandment.

Congress needs a 'mucking out'

Is Congress incapable of policing itself? The Senate Ethics Committee's handling of the Keating Five scandal certainly raises that question. The panel loaded blame exclusively on Sen. Alan Cranston of California — who certainly deserves a dressing-down while covering everybody else with a thick coat of whitewash. Cranston had already announced his retirement, so, in effect, nobody's long-term career was damaged.

Just another signal that "Congress as an institution is suffused with hypocrisy, irredeemably corrupt," writes Andy Ferguson of Scripps Howard News Service. "Consider that several years ago, in high dudgeon, (Congress) passed a special prosecutor law, giving itself the power to install teams of lawyers to root out corruption in the executive branch. Careers have been needlessly ruined by these freelance 'prosecutors,' but that, according to Congress, is the cost of good government."

That cost doesn't include applying the special-prosecutor law to Congress itself. Instead, lawmakers dogged by hints of scandal can turn things over to an ethics panel of their colleagues, where secrecy, delay and other manifestations of professional courtesy are apt to prevail. (But, then, Congress is well known for making laws for others while excluding itself from having to abide by the same laws.)

Doesn't this kind of circle-the-wagons chumminess argue for structural reform — specifically, for imposing term limits on Congress? In the latest issue of Reader's Digest, columnists Rowland Evans and Robert Novak explode the primary arguments against such reform. For instance, opponents claim that term limits would:

- Restrict voter choice. "But how much choice do voters really have?" ask Evans and Novak, pointing out that, in terms of financial contributions and party registration, only 35 House races this past election could be considered even remotely competitive.

- Deprive Americans of experienced legislators. A cost worth paying to rid us of time-serving mediocrities, answers Hendrick Hertzberg of the New Republic. Besides, lawmakers could run for other offices, or offer service in the private sector.

- Shift power to lobbyists and Congressional staffs. Nope, answers the Wall Street Journal's John Fund. "It's the most senior members who are most dependent on staff and lobbyists, not the freshmen. And there is nothing to prevent a reduction in the growth of staffers from accompanying term limits."

Congress is a stable long overdue for "mucking out," as Andy Ferguson puts it. The only way to do the job may be to bar the occupants from wearing out their welcome.

What right to keep arms?

WASHINGTON— The U.S. Supreme Court looked up the other day, saw a gun-control case coming, and ducked. The most immediate consequence is that J.D. Farmer Jr. of Smyrna, Ga., cannot keep his machine gun.

Now, this is not a consequence that is likely to break many hearts, but the constitutional questions that gave rise to Farmer v. Higgins have abiding interest. It would be useful to have a definitive statement from the high court on exactly what the Second Amendment means. This case offered an excellent opportunity, but in accordance with its policy of pusillanimous presence, the court refused to hear it.

The circumstances may be quickly stated. In 1986 Congress amended the Gun Control Act of 1968. One change made it unlawful for anyone to possess a machine gun without the consent of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

Farmer applied for permission to own and register a machine gun. Stephen E. Higgins, director of the bureau, turned him down. Farmer then brought suit in U.S. District Court, where he won his case. The government appealed to the 11th Circuit, where he lost it.

A few weeks ago the Supreme Court declined to review the matter, so the decision of the 11th Circuit stands. Farmer is free to collect stamps, antique cars, matchbooks or old masters, but not the machine guns. Into every life some rain must fall.

The Second Amendment is a marvel of ambiguity. It says, "A well-regulated militia, being necessary to the security of a free state, the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed."

The Supreme Court has noticed the Second Amendment only nine times in 200 years. Eight of the nine cases are of little interest. (Four of them, decided in the 19th century, held that the amendment restricts Congress but not the states. Four others, of more recent vintage, upheld a federal law prohibiting felons from owning guns.)

The one remaining case dates from 1938, when Jack Miller and Frank Layton were convicted of violating the National Firearms Act of 1934. They were charged with transporting a sawed-off double-barreled shotgun from Claremore, Okla., to Siloam Springs, Ark.

In an opinion by Justice James McReynolds, the court looked at sawed-off shotguns, and looked at the concept of a well-regulated militia, and held that the one had nothing to do with the other:

"In the absence of any evidence tending to show that possession or use of a 'shotgun having a barrel of less than 18 inches in length' at this time has some reasonable relationship to the preservation or efficiency of a well-regulated militia, we cannot say that the Second Amendment guarantees the right to keep and bear such an instrument."

The Second Amendment, said McReynolds, "must be interpreted and applied with that end in view." "A sawed-off shotgun is not part of 'ordinary military equipment.' Its use could not contribute to the security of a free state.

Johnny Killian, editor of the government's officially annotated Constitution, comments that the Miller opinion "does little more than cast a faint degree of illumination" on the large question of gun ownership generally. Professor A.E. Dick Howard of the University of Virginia, one of the nation's foremost constitutional scholars, says Miller raises the "disconcerting possibility" that the private ownership of truly military weapons is protected by the Second Amendment.

Which brings us back to J.D. Farmer Jr., the gun collector who wanted to keep, if not to bear, his very own machine gun. It would appear indisputable that machine guns are indeed relevant to a well-regulated militia. Our armed forces were using them in the Persian Gulf earlier this month.

A persuasive argument may be made that such weapons are the lineal descendants of colonial arms. In the 18th century, New York required every man between the ages of 16 and 45 to provide himself, at his own expense, with a musket or firelock and 24 cartridges.

Massachusetts had a similar law. By an act of 1785, all free males in Virginia had to own "a good clean musket carrying an ounce ball, and three feet eight inches long in the barrel." A man could be sent to jail if he didn't keep and bear arms.

Well, those days may be gone forever, but the Second Amendment lingers on. In terms of today's efforts at gun control, what does the amendment mean? No one really knows, and the high court won't say.

It's time to run scared again

In competition with the rest of the enlightened world — especially Japan — we are trailing in education, innovation and production. We don't have to.

An American educator has demonstrated that Americans still have what it takes.

Educator Jaime Escalante has taken students other teachers have given up on and taught them calculus!

Dr. Amar Bose, an MIT professor whose Bose Laboratories acoustical products outsell competitive Japanese products — even in Japan — says it's "shocking to see how much less the United States is doing than what it could do."

Our functional literacy rate is about 80 percent. Japan has a functional literacy rate close to 98 percent.

Make a list of the top 10 nations of the world in terms of standards of mathematics among graduating high school students ...

Measure the mathematics proficiency of the world's top 10 nations and the United States does not even appear on the list!

Or ...
Calculate the mathematics scores of the top 5 percent of American students — and 50 percent of

Paul Harvey

Japanese students score just as high.

And South Korean students score even better than the Japanese.

This, says Prof. Bose, is the "war we are losing."

The New York Telephone Company interviewed 23,000 applicants for entry-level jobs. They were given a very simple exam, basically to determine if the applicants could be trained to handle the jobs. Eighty-four percent failed.

Last year, 700,000 of our nation's high school graduates could not read their diplomas!

That same year, approximately that same number, 700,000 students, dropped out of school — so they had no diplomas to read.

Prof. Bose says, "If our nation does not fundamentally restructure our educational system, within 40 years the United States will be a country of unskilled laborers working for foreign-owned corporations."

Research the last five years — trends in education and corporate ownership — and one can foretell a grim future.

If the United States intends to be a major player in the next century, we'd better change course quickly.

There is yet another factor in the lopsided education. In Japan the annual number of hours worked per person averages 2,189.

The average number of hours worked by Americans is 200 to 500 less.

And so dynamic is the Japanese economy that Japan right now needs 9.2 million additional workers.

The United States supports a legion of unemployed.

Once upon a time Americans, running scared from the Soviet Sputnik, were sufficiently motivated to excellence to win the race to the moon.

It's time to run scared again.

Now Democrats are domesticated

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

The congressional Democrats and their defenders in the Washington press corps are thoroughly upset over reports that the Republicans intend to hold them responsible in the 1992 campaign for how they voted on authorizing President Bush to use force in the Persian Gulf.

Just why this should be considered dirty pool is unclear. The vote was one of the most important they will ever cast. If they had won (and in the Senate they came very close), we would now be in the eighth month of U.N.-decreed economic sanctions against Iraq, and Saddam Hussein would still be in undisturbed possession of Kuwait.

Does anyone in his right mind seriously think that economic sanctions alone, even if they were scrupulously observed, would have been enough to drive the Iraqis out of Kuwait?

And if not — if it slowly became clear that sanctions were simply a diplomatic way of doing nothing — would military action still have been a viable option? Could the United States have kept several hundred thousand of its crack troops twiddling their thumbs in the Arabian desert for 18 months, then expect them to launch a devastating attack against a well-prepared Iraq if Sam Nunn and his cronies finally got around to admitting that an attack was necessary?

Yet 45 Democratic senators voted for exactly that scenario. No wonder they don't want to discuss it.

Their media defenders sniff that the Republicans will be callously partisan if they raise the subject. But the vote authorizing President Bush to use force if necessary was, for both Republicans and Democrats, as partisan a vote as the rules of Congress permit. In the House, just 86 Democrats out of 267 slipped the leash; in the Senate, only 10 out of 56. And yet the Republicans are accused of partisanship!

Democratic opposition to the authorizing resolution takes its place in a lengthening line of actions suggesting that the Democratic Party, under its present leadership, is fundamentally incapable of mapping a sound or even a safe course for the country in matters of defense and foreign affairs.

Don't forget, this is the party that less than three years ago thought the man to lead America was Michael Dukakis — and persuaded 10 states to agree.

So the Democrats in 1992 will seek to stress domestic issues — summed up by one liberal recently as "weakening productivity, a deteriorating environment, collapsing infrastructure and third-rate education system."

One wonders, though, why anyone should consider any of those issues Democratic strongpoints. Since when has anybody identified the Democratic party with productivity? It has overregulated the economy to the point of strangulation, and is now making disguised racial job quotas a permanent feature of its program, but what do these do for productivity?

They have spent billions upon billions of taxpayers' dollars on environmental nostrums, yet tell us the environment is still "deteriorating." Is there something wrong, maybe, with their way of improving it?

And what, precisely, causes a "collapsing infrastructure"? More often than not, it is the crooked contractors who, hand in hand with crooked local politicians, fob off on the public bridges and other "improvements" made of crumbling concrete, which then collapse in a few years. Will the congressional Democrats join in a really major attack on such municipal corruption?

As for our "third-rate education system," why are the Democrats so bitterly opposed to giving parents vouchers worth a specific amount toward their children's education, and then letting them pick the school, public or private, to send them to? Is it because they share the fear of their cronies in the National Education Association that many public schools couldn't face the competition?

All things considered, the Democrats might do better to try criticizing Mr. Bush's performance in the Gulf War.

"I've got a wacky idea! How about coming up with an ENERGY POLICY?"

Cause of jet crash stumps investigators

By SANDY SHORE
Associated Press Writer

DENVER (AP) — Investigators are looking at a little-known phenomenon known as wind rotors for clues to why a jetliner went into a nosedive and crashed, killing all 25 people on board.

Wind rotors occur when winds curl under and form unidirectional currents flowing in the opposite direction.

"Our investigators are looking at this rotor wind condition, which we have not seen before in commercial accidents ... at least we have not documented before," said Brent Bahler, a spokesman for the National Transportation Safety Board in Washington.

The theory has come up in the investigation of the March 3 crash of United Airlines Flight 585. The plane's landing approach was normal until its last six seconds, when it pitched out of control and buried itself more than 15 feet in the ground.

Investigators have set aside, at least temporarily, some other possibilities. They believe that neither the pilot nor the co-pilot suffered an incapacitating injury; there was plenty of fuel; there is no sign of sabotage or a major collision with a bird, and the engines were running normally.

They've also shelved an earlier theory that the crash was caused by a phenomenon known as wind shear, a sudden shift in wind speed and direction.

Although the Colorado Springs Municipal Airport had issued wind shear alerts the day of the accident, none was in effect when the crash occurred, said John K. Lauber, who is heading the NTSB investigation. Winds were 23 mph with gusts to 32 mph.

Investigators said the crash is among the most frustrating and complex they have ever tackled.

They are working with no survivors and varying witness reports. The crash left investigators with little more than small pieces of the Boeing 737-200 and a swath of scorched grass in a park three miles from the airport.

"All accident investigations have frustration associated with them to one degree or another," Bahler said. "This one, however, has left a lot of our people scratching their heads longer and deeper than others in the recent past."

Investigators have begun reconstructing the plane and have sent pieces to a San Francisco laboratory for tests. Bahler said it could take up to a year to sort out what happened.

One theory investigators are examining closely is weather — specifically whether a wind rotor caused the plane to drop out of the sky.

"The evidence appears to suggest that we're not looking at a classic wind shear because normally you would have a drop in (the plane's) air speed," Bahler said.

Instead, the jet's speed jumped from about 184 mph to 245 mph in its final seconds, investigators said.

The Colorado Rockies are notorious for severe winds created when air flowing from the west hits the range and breaks into crests and troughs as it races down the eastern side, just as water in a brook bubbles over rocks, said Richard Fritz, an atmospheric physicist at the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration office in Boulder.

Fritz, who specializes in wind patterns, said wind rotors are normally "rather benign." The more dangerous winds in Colorado are wind shears and downbursts or microbursts, which are more severe forms of wind shear, he said.

Normally, wind rotors aren't fast enough to affect planes, said Fritz and Al Uhalt, chief instructor at Aerotech Flight Services Inc. in Colorado Springs.

"I cannot conceive of even the strongest of rotors that I've ever experienced or heard of affecting a 58-ton airplane to the degree that this one was upset," Uhalt said.

Rotors usually just mean a bumpy ride, Uhalt said. He said, "It's the kind of thing they don't like to serve lunch with or pour coffee over."

Nevada celebrates 60th anniversary of gambling

By TOM GARDNER
Associated Press Writer

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Sixty years ago this Tuesday, the roulette wheels and faro tables came out of the back rooms and players risked their money in the open. Legal gambling, outlawed in 1910, had returned to Nevada.

"I certainly didn't know much about it, but I felt that if we legalized it, the tax revenue would be beneficial to the state," Assemblyman Phil Tobin later said of sponsoring the 1931 law.

Tobin, a rancher who died in 1976, said he rarely ever gambled himself and never played blackjack. But millions of others flocked to Nevada to do just that.

In the beginning, Reno was their destination, but a Los Angeles mobster known as Bugsy Siegel changed that after World War II when he opened the Flamingo, Las Vegas' first major gaming resort.

Last year Las Vegas accounted for three-quarters of the record $5.24 billion taken in by Nevada's casinos. The state's cut was $317.3 million in gambling and sales taxes, half its total revenue.

Las Vegas was little more than a wide spot in the road in 1931, while in Reno the Bank Club was being joined by such major gambling halls as Harolds Club and Harrah's, which continue to dominate the city's gambling industry.

Eastern socialites were also beginning to flock to Reno to take advantage of Nevada's quickie divorce law, signed by Gov. Fred Balzar on the same day gambling was legalized.

Sign promoting bus service dials wrong number

ASPEN, Colo. (AP) — It's not enough that Gary Gleason phones his mother. Lately, he's had everyone in town doing it.

Gleason, marketing director for the Roaring Fork Transit Agency, thought a banner fluttering over Main Street promoting the company's bus service and offering its phone number would mean increased

The law allows a person to file for divorce after residing in the state for only six weeks.

Las Vegas was growing slowly, boosted in the late 1930s by the arrival of gambler Guy McAfee.

The onetime Los Angeles police vice squad officer bought the Pair-O-Dice Club, renamed it the 91-Club after the highway on which it was located, and renamed the area "The Strip," after Hollywood's famous Sunset Strip.

Siegel arrived from Los Angeles in the mid-1940s, and with $1 million borrowed from fellow mobsters he built the Flamingo.

Jimmy Durante was the headliner when the Flamingo opened on The Strip in December 1946. It closed two weeks later after heavy losses but reopened in March 1947. Three months later, Siegel's Southern California colleagues terminated his partnership in a hail of gunfire.

"As a Nevada pioneer, he ranks far in front of explorers and trappers like Kit Carson, Jed Smith and Peter Ogden," Nevada author David Toll has written. "Bugsy Siegel invented Las Vegas."

Despite legalization of gambling in Atlantic City 14 years ago and the rise of low-stakes wagering in the Midwest and the lottery in California, the state's economists expect the lucky streak to continue for Nevada's casinos.

"We're a specialty store. Our gambling is a specialty product. People go out of their way and make plans to go to specialty stores," said William Thompson, professor of management and public administration at the University of Nevada at Las Vegas.

interest in the service.

But it has meant many increased phone calls to Gleason's mother, Mary. That's because the 2-foot-high phone number on the banner is her's, not the RFTA's.

"When I was writing the copy for the banner I wrote the phone number I thought was the right one at the time," Gleason said.

Spring breaks loose in Daytona Beach

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The bikinis may be a little skimpy and the music a little louder, but spring break 1991 isn't a whole lot different from the romps on the sand of the early '60s.

The same scene that NBC newsman Chet Huntley described in 1962 exists today on "the world's most famous beach."

"Did you notice, as I did, a determined and defiant pursuit of fun — as though it might at any time become outlawed or out of style?" he said then.

This beachside community began making a concerted pitch for spring break business in 1962 after the successful beach movies of the era, including "Where the Boys Are" with Connie Francis and endless frolicking by Annette Funicello and Frankie Avalon.

Sun-starved northern college students came to Daytona Beach for free beer, endless parties and free music.

Twenty-nine years later, the formula still works.

Even in the early '60s there was the stigma of perceived immorality with New York World Telegram columnist Inez Robb calling the goings-on in Daytona Beach "a national scandal" promoted by "adult delinquents." A local ministerial alliance blasted a "twist" dance contest as immoral.

Thirty thousand students showed up in 1962. This year, the figure is expected to top 400,000, with revelers spending $160 million. And the twist has long since given way to wet T-shirt contests.

The primary daytime activity in Daytona Beach is getting sunburned and ogling the opposite sex while listening to pounding rap music. Strict enforcement of the laws that prohibit drinking on the beach and the Spring Break Festival Task Force theme of "Party Smart" keep most breakers sober on the sand.

Nighttime finds students partying, going to nightclubs or seeking romance.

On a recent day on the beach, guys, and even some girls, armed with video cameras took in the sand scenery.

"I like the guys coming up and videotaping you in your bathing suit," said 22-year-old Deanna Maltby, who was convinced that a day at the beach with Vanilla Ice and MTV was better than a day of classes at St. Augustine Technical Center.

With the atmosphere of an outdoor festival, thoughts of the recession and the recently ended Persian Gulf War were a million miles away.

Most students on spring break said the economy had not prevented many from coming because their trips were often planned months in advance. But many students were saving money by bringing camping equipment, staying with friends or crashing in less-than-desirable motels.

Chris Boucher, 19, and Jen Frederick, 19, both were drinking a cold beer outside a beachfront hotel, not caring to explain how they circumvented Florida's 21-year-old drinking law.

The University of Rhode Island students said they were having a great time on a shoestring budget.

"We're staying at a cheesy hotel, hitting the free drinks from six to nine and just hanging out," said Ms. Boucher, from Warwick, R.I.

Most northerners conceded that the sun was the main attraction in coming to Florida, although there are other lures.

The cable music station MTV was one of the prime attractions. It was taping Club MTV with performances from Vanilla Ice, C&C Music Factory, Cathy Dennis, Escape Club and Gerardo.

Several volleyball and basketball games were under way and new cars, Nintendo games, tourist locations and other products were being pushed.

Kathy Kaulbach, 18, a student at Westminister Secondary School in London, Ontario, rode in a car for 24 hours to get to Daytona Beach.

"It's cold up there with snow on the ground," she said.

Athens police confirm arrest of man convicted in Achille Lauro hijack

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Greece has detained an Arab convicted in absentia by an Italian court for helping plan the 1985 hijacking of the Achille Lauro cruise ship, a senior police official confirmed today.

Abdullah Khaled was arrested March 7 along with three Greeks when a police search turned up dynamite and a gasoline bomb at the home of one of those detained with him, the official said on condition of anonymity.

A security police spokesman, also speaking anonymously, said the man, Petro Floros, had been linked to the Achille Lauro case, but acquitted of giving Khaled his passport so he could board the cruise ship.

The police official said of the 56-year-old Khaled: "He was arrested for something else a while ago and then we found out who he was."

He said Italy had not yet requested Khaled's extradition. On Sunday, the Italian news agency ANSA quoted unidentified sources in the prosecutor's office in Genoa as saying the government would ask for Khaled.

Khaled was convicted and sentenced in absentia to life in prison by an appeals court in Genoa in 1987 for the hijacking, during which Leon Klinghoffer, an elderly wheelchair-bound man from New York, was shot to death and his body thrown overboard. Khaled, a Yemeni, is considered a colonel in Abul Abbas' Palestine Liberation Front terrorist group. Khaled was sentenced to seven years in jail by a lower court in 1986 before the Achille Lauro case was appealed.

He was accused of helping plot the hijacking. He is believed to have left the cruise ship at Alexandria, Egypt before the hijackers seized the ship.

He was also accused of using Floros' passport to make a trial run of the cruise to plan the hijacking. Floros claimed in the 1986 trial that his passport was stolen on the Athens subway and never recovered.

Abbas was convicted in absentia as the ringleader and sentenced to life imprisonment. He was among those arrested after the crisis, but was let go by Italian authorities who said they had no evidence to hold him.

Klinghoffer's family recently protested the early release of two convicted Palestinian accomplices in the hijacking who were let out of an Italian prison as part of a Christmas reprieve and expelled to Algeria.

The Greek security police spokesman said police were investigating how long Khaled had been in Greece and were trying to determine if Floros and the other two Greeks worked for Abbas' group, or were part of a local terrorist organization cooperating with the Arabs.

Report: Texas leads in investigations of police brutality cases

DALLAS (AP) — More Texas law enforcement officers have been investigated and prosecuted for alleged brutality than officers in any other state, a new study says.

A copyright story in The Dallas Morning News on Sunday said that Texas, the nation's third most populous state, had 2,015 investigations of alleged police brutality between 1984 and 1989.

Second on the list was California with 1,294 investigations, followed by Louisiana with 1,050. Vermont was last, recording just three investigations during the five-year span.

The newspaper cited figures from records obtained from the U.S. Justice Department under the Freedom of Information Act.

Records also showed that 50 cases, involving about 125 officers accused of civil rights violations, were prosecuted in the state between 1980 and 1989. Texas cases accounted for 19.2 percent of the total civil rights cases filed against police nationwide.

The next highest was Louisiana, with 21 civil rights cases, or 8 percent.

Records obtained by the newspaper didn't include a state-by-state breakdown of convictions.

Texas had the fifth-highest rate of investigations into police on a per-capita basis. Louisiana led the nation with 25 investigations per 100,000 people, the report said. Texas had 14.1 per 100,000 residents.

Law enforcement officials said the high rate of alleged brutality in Texas is caused by inadequate training, education, pay and background checks.

"If you look at the whole state of Texas, we are still not putting the type of money into police to get the type of product you would like," said Ronald G. DeLord, president of the Combined Law Enforcement Associations of Texas.

"I'm a big supporter of training and standards. I wish they were 50 times tougher than they are."

The Justice Department last week announced a nationwide review of police brutality. That announcement was triggered by the March 3 beating of Rodney King, 25, by Los Angeles police officers.

A bystander's videotape of the beating prompted a public outcry, local and federal investigations of the incident and a Justice Department review of six years of police brutality complaints nationwide.

Suzanne Donovan, director of the Texas Civil Liberties Union, said the records obtained by The Morning News demonstrate the need for the Justice Department to focus its review on Texas.

"I would think, just given the volume, that (U.S. Attorney General Dick) Thornburgh should turn his attention first to Texas in investigating cases," Ms. Donovan said.

The Morning News also reported that few rural police agencies have internal affairs departments or resources to conduct extensive background investigations of applicants.

The Texas Commission on Law Enforcement Officer Standards and Education, the agency charged with licensing police, is not staffed to investigate complaints against officers, the newspaper reported.

The Morning News said its study was part of a statewide investigation of police brutality. The newspaper said it examined records of more than 600 Justice Department investigations during 1987 and 1988.

Survey: Ninja Turtles inspire violence at school

By EVE EPSTEIN
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Those lean green fighting machines known as Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles are bringing violence to the classroom, say teachers from around the country who responded to a survey.

"The Turtles encourage violent and anti-social behavior among young children and have a disturbing effect on learning, behavior and play," said Diane Levin, an associate professor of education at Wheelock College who was co-author of the study.

Some adults may think the four turtles, named for Renaissance painters, are more likely to spark a child's imagination than run-of-the-mill musclebound superheroes.

The study's general conclusion from the 73 educators from 19 states who responded to the survey was that youngsters emulate the turtles' karate chopping and pizza chomping, but little else.

Ninety-five percent of the respondents provided examples of aggressive behavior linked to the turtle characters, Levin said Sunday.

"The way the Ninja turtles work out their difficulties is by socking each other and knocking each other," said survey respondent Hanne Sonquist, a member of the board of the National Association for the Education of Young Children.

"It's totally programmed and scripted so that many children who watch a great deal of that kind of programming have less access to the imagination," said Sonquist, who runs a workshop for parents and young children in California.

Levin, who has written books on children's fascination with war play, conceived the survey after parents and teachers asked her to examine turtle mania. She conducted the study with Nancy Carlsson-Paige, an associate professor of education at Lesley College in Cambridge.

"When the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles came out, we immediately began to get telephone calls from teachers and parents telling us how kids were going crazy," she said.

The story of the turtles' birth certainly strays from the superhero script. They started out as aquarium pets, but mutated after falling into a pool of radioactive glop in a New York sewer. They were raised by a rat, Splinter, who taught them Ninja skills to fight crime.

Artists Peter Laird and Kevin Eastman, who dreamed up the characters, did not respond to a request for comment on the study.

In an interview last year, Eastman and Laird took a more tranquil view of their creations.

"I think they're appealing for a number of reasons," Laird said. "The turtles live their lives with the philosophy that they don't want to hassle anybody and they don't want to be hassled themselves. But when trouble comes, they're able to handle it."

Eastman speculated children are attracted to the turtles because of "the family attitude with the four brothers and Splinter playing the father figure and the teacher."

Levin acknowledges the Ninja turtles aren't the first superheroes to beat up on the enemy. But the intense marketing of everything from turtle toys to lunchboxes has provoked an obsession with the creatures among children between the ages of 18 months and 10 years, she said.

Superman had friends, and a life outside crime fighting as his alter-ego, Clark Kent. "The generic hero kids could try to emulate," she said.

Not the turtles. "Mostly what they do is fight," she said.

Some teachers noted that they had used the turtles to try and inspire children to learn about other subjects. One teacher said she was able to involve more boys in an art project by asking children to make turtle masks.

"But in some cases, trying to link the Ninja turtles to classroom projects backfired."

"We have one case of a turtle being killed by being thrown against the wall," Levin said.

Costner wins Directors Guild award

NEW YORK (AP) — First-time director Kevin Costner won the Directors Guild of America award for best director of 1990 Saturday night for his epic Western, Dances With Wolves.

Costner also starred in the film, a three-hour account of a U.S. cavalry officer living with American Indians. The film won him the Golden Globe award as best director earlier this month.

"It means a great deal to me, and it was impossible to create a speech — it seems out of place and inappropriate considering the men who had been nominated," he said Saturday.

In Saturday's competition, Costner beat out veteran director Francis Ford Coppola, who was nominated for the fifth time for The Godfather, Part III. Also nominated were Barry Levinson for Avalon, Martin Scorsese for GoodFellas and Giuseppe Tornatore for Cinema Paradiso.

Costner said the fact that the movie, with subtitles and unconventional heroes, has taken in more than $100 million at the box office "was a complete shock to me."

"But I was never surprised the movie could be liked," he said. "I think it covered all the parameters of a film I'd like to see."

Directors were also honored in several other categories Saturday, including television shows and commercials.

The other awards presented to:

— James Burrows for best director of a comedy series for "Woody Interruptus," an episode of the NBC series, Cheers.

— Peter Smilie for best director of commercials.

— Jeff Margolis for directing the best musical variety show, the 62nd Academy Awards program that aired on ABC.

— Robert Fishman, for directing major league baseball's American League 1990 championship series fourth game for CBS Sports.

— Elena Mannes for best documentary for Amazing Grace.

— Michael Zinberg for "Vietnam," an episode of NBC's Quantum Leap, for best nighttime series.

— Lynn Hamrick for Testing Dirty, an ABC Afterschool special, for best daytime dramatic series.

— Roger Young for NBC's Murder in Mississippi, for best dramatic special.

The 43rd annual Directors Guild of America awards were presented during ceremonies in Beverly Hills, Calif., and New York. The guild's 9,300 members picked the winners.

Tomatore's film won an Oscar last year for best foreign language film and arrived in U.S. theaters in February 1990, qualifying for the guild award.

Last year, Oliver Stone won the guild award for his Born on the Fourth of July. Levinson won in 1988 for Rain Man.

Coppola's previous four nominations were for Apocalypse Now, The Conversation and the previous two Godfather films.

Scorsese received his third nomination; previously he was nominated for Raging Bull and Taxi Driver.

Loving A Soldier

Loving a soldier isn't always easy,
And loving him is a high price to pay,
It's loving him with nothing to hold,
It's being young, yet feeling old.

It's having him whisper his love to you,
It's whispering back, you love him too,
Then comes a kiss, a promise of love,
Knowing your watched and approved from above.

Reluctantly, painfully, letting him go,
While you're dying inside from wanting him so,
Watching him leave with eyes full of tears,
Standing alone with hopes, dreams and fear.

It's sending a letter with an upside down stamp on it,
To a far away love in a far away place,
It's going to church to kneel and to pray,
And really meaning the things that you say.

Days go by and no mail for a spell,
You wait for some word to hear he is well,
Then a letter arrives and your given it's joy,
You become like a child with a shining new toy.

With fingers a trembling and heart beating fast,
You tear open his letter and read it at last,
And it's filled with the love you wanted to hear,
Weeks are a month and months are a year,
Your waiting for the day you'll have no more fear.

Time passes slow, yet has gone very fast,
You are barely aware it's here till it's passed,
Yes loving a soldier brings bitterness and tears,
Loneliness, sadness, and dependent year.

Loving a soldier won't bring him closer,
But, it's well worth the wait when the battle is over,
Remember he's thinking of you every day,
He's sad and he's lonely from being away,
So love him, miss him and try to be bolder,
And always be proud at loving a soldier!

National nutrition month will focus on lean meat

March is National Nutrition Month. For the next few weeks, this column will focus on Lean Meat—the Consumer's Choice.

Over the past few years, consumers have questioned the safety of the food supply. Related to meat products, consumers have questioned the use of pesticides, pharmacological agents, antibiotics, and hormones. Yet it is often said that the United States to assure a safe meat supply.

First, assuring safety of the meat supply begins at the ranch or farm. Livestock owners have the most to lose if meat from their animals is found unsafe for consumption, not only because of the fines and jail terms, but also from a public opinion standpoint. Safety violations potentially could lead to decreased meat consumption. Therefore, farmers and ranchers take their responsibilities seriously when administering pharmacological agents. Many producers are utilizing diagnostic tests to determine if antibodies have been eliminated from the animal before marketing. Additionally, several of the major livestock associations are offering a program that will assist farmers, ranchers, and feeders in verifying that they have used pharmacological agents properly and allowed the proper withdrawal time before shipping livestock to market.

The next line of defense is in the hands of two federal agencies, the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) and the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). Both help test the safety of new drugs before allowing them on the market. No drug may be legally used in the United States unless it is approved by the FDA for either human or animal use. This keeps unsafe drugs out of the market place. In addition to examining the pharmacological agent for safety, the FDA also determines the proper dosage and the time required for the drug to be eliminated from or reach safe levels in the animals. FDA and EPA weigh the risks and benefits of each pharmacological agent or chemical before it is approved. The FDA and EPA, at the request of the USDA Food Safety and Inspection Service, also investigate the misuse of pharmacological agents in the market place. The EPA is involved in monitoring pesticide regulation, storage and handling.

Homemakers' News

The third line of defense is found at the packing plant. The USDA Food Safety and Inspection Service (FSIS) is responsible for ensuring that the American Food supply is safe and wholesome. Cattle, hogs, and sheep are examined before, during, and after the slaughter process for healthfulness and FSIS inspector. If wholesomeness is questioned at any time, the inspector will retain the carcass for further testing. Live animals that appear ill are tagged and suspect and their carcasses are now closely examined for signs of disease and drug residues. All carcasses are usually inspected for wholesomeness during the slaughter process. Inspectors view organs and lymph nodes and other tissues for abnormalities. If a carcass is found to be unsafe, it is condemned and placed in a separate area until it can be properly disposed. If misuse of various compounds is found, the carcass is traced back to the source of error. Besides legal action against the producer, future animals marketed from the establishment where the misuse or error occur are closely monitored until the problems is completely corrected.

The meat industry is highly regulated to maintain a safe, wholesome meat supply; but what if an illegal residue does find its way through the safeguards and into the food chain? Fortunately, the human body has the ability to destroy and eliminate toxins that enter the body. Residues become harmful if taken in very high concentrated doses of if the body is constantly in contact with residues at levels above those generally considered safe.

The biggest threat to the safety and wholesome of meat is bacterial contamination. More than five million cases of food-borne illnesses are reported yearly. Of the food-borne microbial disease outbreaks reported to traced to food service establishments, 20 percent to homes and 3 percent to allowing the product to be stored at a higher than recommended temperature (28F to 40F), cooking to a lower than recommended temperature product too long before consumption, and poor worker hygiene. Proper handling would eliminate the majority of food-borne illnesses.

For more information on meat wholesomeness and safety, contact your Gray County Extension Service.

HORSE PROJECT SET TO BEGIN

With the beginning of spring just

4-H Corner
Joe Vann

around the corner a number of youth around the area are beginning to shape their horse up for spring and summer activities. In conjunction with these activities the Gray County 4-H horse project will hold an organizational meeting. This meeting will take place on Tuesday Mar. 19, 1991 at 7:00 p.m. in the Annex.

There are endless possibilities for a well organized and managed horse project. I hope that we have an excellent crowd as we begin to plan for 1991. Some activities to be discussed include the County Horse Show, Playdays, Ridding Clubs, Trail Rides and Horse Shows.

I would encourage all current youth, parents and anyone else interested in organizing and assisting with the 4-H Horse Project to mark your calendars and plan to attend Tuesday evening at 7:00 p.m. in the Annex.

RODEO MEETING

The 1991 Gray County 4-H Rodeo is set for Aug. 16 and 17. In order to be making plans for this years rodeo an organizational meeting has been set for Thursday Mar. 21, at 7:00 p.m. in the Annex. The Gray County 4-H Rodeo serves as our primary fund raiser for the year. We also strive to involve as many 4-H families as possible in planning the workings of this rodeo. This years rodeo could be in for some major changes, so we need all the help and input we can get.

Last year more than 200 youth from Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico participated in this event. Mark your calendars and plan to attend Thursday Mar. 21, at 7:00 p.m. at the Annex.

FARM ANIMAL PETTING ZOO

Gray County 4-H in conjunction with Pampa Wal-Mart will hold a petting zoo at the Pampa Wal-Mart location Saturday, Mar. 23, 1991 from 1:00 to 4:00 p.m. Gray County 4-H'ers will have a number of farm animals on hand for children to pet.

A number of Gray County 4-H youth will be on hand to talk about the animals and to lead youth through the animals. This is going to be a great opportunity for our 4-H youth to show off their projects, while giving area youth the opportunity to see and touch a number of farm animals up close.

I hope all of you will plan on coming out to Wal-Mart on Saturday, Mar. 23, from 1:00 p.m. to 4:00 p.m. to see these animals and see what 4-H is all about.

"Why do some children survive?", study asks

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Why do some children survive very troubled backgrounds without many scars, while others are permanently crippled?

The question is one psychologists at the University of Rochester are beginning to answer as they study highly stressed urban school children.

By comparing the characteristics of well and poorly adjusted children, researchers are finding that "survivors" tend to have better opinions of themselves, more ability to empathize with others' problems, more skill at solving social conflicts, and better judgment about which problems they have control over and which they don't.

Prevent a tragedy by putting poisons in their proper place

DEAR READERS: Spring is here—and so is National Poison Prevention Week. This year's theme is a reminder to parents: Put poisons in their place!

It is estimated that 2 million children will swallow a poison before the end of 1991. Poison centers report that 60 percent of the calls they receive are related to children 5 years of age and younger. A few simple precautions could prevent many tragedies:

MEDICATIONS: Keep all non-prescription and prescription medications in locked cabinets and return to safe storage immediately after use. The same non-prescription drug that brings welcome relief to an adult with a headache can cause grave illness and even death if it is swallowed by a small child. Familiar containers of aspirin, acetaminophen and antihistamines are often kept in unlocked medicine cabinets, women's handbags or left standing on bedside tables or windowsills. Young children are curious and will eat or drink almost anything—even if it doesn't taste good.

USE ONLY CHILD-RESISTANT COVERS ON MEDICATIONS: Although this may pose an inconvenience to senior citizens, it could save a grandchild's life.

KNOW THE NAMES OF THE PLANTS IN YOUR YARD AND WHERE YOUR CHILD PLAYS: The bright-colored berries, leaves and flowers of a wide variety of common, colorful plants can be poisonous. A child learns with his eyes and ears—and mouth!

GARDENING AND SPRING

CLEANUP PRODUCTS: We should always be mindful of the extremely dangerous products we use to kill insects, rodents, snails and weeds. These products are also toxic to humans and are capable of killing. Keep them well out of reach of children and use them with extreme care. Keep them in their original containers, with the labels attached, and use them only as directed.

THE KITCHEN, THE BATHROOM AND THE GARAGE ARE THE MOST COMMON SITES OF ACCIDENTAL POISONINGS: Many common household products, such as carpet and upholstery cleaners, rust removers, furniture polish, oven cleaner, kerosene, paint remover and thinner, room deodorizer and mothballs, are poisonous. Never store household cleaning products in unlabeled soda bottles or in jars.

WHEN POISONINGS HAPPEN: Call your local poison center's 24-hour hotline immediately, before following the first aid instructions printed on the product container, if your child becomes ill or exposed to a poisonous substance. Keep syrup of ipecac on hand if there are young children in the home. But use it only when recommended by a trained health-care professional.

And remember, the best antidote for poisonings is poison prevention. Parents and grandparents should be aware that every time they replace the child-resistant cap on a medicine bottle or household cleaner, or return a dangerous product to a safe place, they are saving the lives of their loved ones.

BOSTON (AP) — Those lean green fighting machines known as Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles are bringing violence to the classroom, say teachers from around the country who responded to a survey.

"The Turtles encourage violent and anti-social behavior among young children and have a disturbing effect on learning, behavior and play," said Diane Levin, an associate professor of education at Wheelock College who was co-author of the study.

Some adults may think the four turtles, named for Renaissance painters, are more likely to spark a child's imagination than run-of-the-mill musclebound superheroes.

The study's general conclusion from the 73 educators from 19 states who responded to the survey was that youngsters emulate the turtles' karate chopping and pizza chomping, but little else.

Ninety-five percent of the respondents provided examples of aggressive behavior linked to the turtle characters, Levin said Sunday.

"The way the Ninja turtles work out their difficulties is by socking each other and knocking each other," said survey respondent Hanne Sonquist, a member of the board of the National Association for the Education of Young Children.

"It's totally programmed and scripted so that many children who watch a great deal of that kind of programming have less access to the imagination," said Sonquist, who runs a workshop for parents and young children in California.

Levin, who has written books on children's fascination with war play, conceived the survey after parents and teachers asked her to examine turtle mania. She conducted the study with Nancy Carlsson-Paige, an associate professor of education at Lesley College in Cambridge.

"When the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles came out, we immediately began to get telephone calls from teachers and parents telling us how kids were going crazy," she said.

The story of the turtles' birth certainly strays from the superhero script. They started out as aquarium pets, but mutated after falling into a pool of radioactive glop in a New York sewer. They were raised by a rat, Splinter, who taught them Ninja skills to fight crime.

Artists Peter Laird and Kevin Eastman, who dreamed up the characters, did not respond to a request for comment on the study.

In an interview last year, Eastman and Laird took a more tranquil view of their creations.

"I think they're appealing for a number of reasons," Laird said. "The turtles live their lives with the philosophy that they don't want to hassle anybody and they don't want to be hassled themselves. But when trouble comes, they're able to handle it."

Eastman speculated children are attracted to the turtles because of "the family attitude with the four brothers and Splinter playing the father figure and the teacher."

Levin acknowledges the Ninja turtles aren't the first superheroes to beat up on the enemy. But the intense marketing of everything from turtle toys to lunchboxes has provoked an obsession with the creatures among children between the ages of 18 months and 10 years, she said.

Superman had friends, and a life outside crime fighting as his alter-ego, Clark Kent. "The generic hero kids could try to emulate," she said.

Not the turtles. "Mostly what they do is fight," she said.

Some teachers noted that they had used the turtles to try and inspire children to learn about other subjects. One teacher said she was able to involve more boys in an art project by asking children to make turtle masks.

But in some cases, trying to link the Ninja turtles to classroom projects backfired.

"We have one case of a turtle being killed by being thrown against the wall," Levin said.

Costner wins Directors Guild award

NEW YORK (AP) — First-time director Kevin Costner won the Directors Guild of America award for best director of 1990 Saturday night for his epic Western, Dances With Wolves.

Costner also starred in the film, a three-hour account of a U.S. cavalry officer living with American Indians. The film won him the Golden Globe award as best director earlier this month.

"It means a great deal to me, and it was impossible to create a speech — it seems out of place and inappropriate considering the men who had been nominated," he said Saturday.

In Saturday's competition, Costner beat out veteran director Francis Ford Coppola, who was nominated for the fifth time for The Godfather, Part III. Also nominated were Barry Levinson for Avalon, Martin Scorsese for GoodFellas and Giuseppe Tornatore for Cinema Paradiso.

Costner said the fact that the movie, with subtitles and unconventional heroes, has taken in more than $100 million at the box office "was a complete shock to me."

"But I was never surprised the movie could be liked," he said. "I think it covered all the parameters of a film I'd like to see."

Directors were also honored in several other categories Saturday, including television shows and commercials.

The other awards presented to:

— James Burrows for best director of a comedy series for "Woody Interruptus," an episode of the NBC series, Cheers.

— Peter Smillie for best director of commercials.

— Jeff Margolis for directing the best musical variety show, the 62nd Academy Awards program that aired on ABC.

— Robert Fishman, for directing major league baseball's American League 1990 championship series fourth game for CBS Sports.

— Elena Mannes for best documentary for Amazing Grace.

— Michael Zinberg for "Vietnam," an episode of NBC's Quantum Leap, for best nighttime series.

— Lynn Hamrick for Testing Dirty, an ABC Afterschool special, for best daytime dramatic series.

— Roger Young for NBC's Murder in Mississippi, for best dramatic special.

The 43rd annual Directors Guild of America awards were presented during ceremonies in Beverly Hills, Calif., and New York. The guild's 9,300 members picked the winners.

Tomatore's film won an Oscar last year for best foreign language film and arrived in U.S. theaters in February 1990, qualifying for the guild award.

Last year, Oliver Stone won the guild award for his Born on the Fourth of July. Levinson won in 1988 for Rain Man.

Coppola's previous four nominations were for Apocalypse Now, The Conversation and the previous two Godfather films.

Scorsese received his third nomination; previously he was nominated for Raging Bull and Taxi Driver.

Loving A Soldier

Loving a soldier isn't always easy,
And loving him is a high price to pay,
It's loving him with nothing to hold,
It's being young, yet feeling old.

It's having him whisper his love to you,
It's whispering back, you love him too,
Then comes a kiss, a promise of love,
Knowing your watch and approved from above.

Reluctantly, painfully, letting him go,
While you're dying inside from wanting him so,
Watching him leave with eyes full of tears,
Standing alone with hopes, dreams and fear.

It's sending a letter with an upside down stamp on it,
To a far away love in a far away place,
It's going to church to kneel and to pray,
And really meaning the things that you say.

Days go by and no mail for a spell,
You wait for some word to hear he is well,
Then a letter arrives and your given it's joy,
You become like a child with a shining new toy.

With fingers a trembling and heart beating fast,
You tear open his letter and read it at last,
And it's filled with the love you wanted to hear,
Weeks are a month and months are a year,
Your waiting for the day you'll have no more fear.

Time passes slow, yet has gone very fast,
You are barely aware it's here till it's passed,
Yes loving a soldier brings bitterness and tears,
Loneliness, sadness, and dependent year.

Loving a soldier won't bring him closer,
But, it's well worth the wait when the battle is over,
Remember he's thinking of you every day,
He's sad and he's lonely from being away,
So love him, miss him and try to be bolder,
And Always be proud at loving a soldier!

National nutrition month will focus on lean meat

March is National Nutrition Month. For the next few weeks, this column will focus on Lean Meat - the Consumer's Choice.

Over the past few years, consumers have questioned the safety of the food supply. Related to meat products, consumers have questioned the use of pesticides, pharmacological agents, antibiotics, and hormones. Yet it is often said that the United States to assure a safe meat supply.

First, assuring safety of the meat supply begins at the ranch or farm. Livestock owners have the most to lose if meat from their animals is found unsafe for consumption, not only because of the fines and jail terms, but also from a public opinion standpoint. Safety violations potentially could lead to decreased meat consumption. Therefore, farmers and ranchers take their responsibilities seriously when administering pharmacological agents. Many producers are utilizing diagnostic tests to determine if antibodies have been eliminated from the animal before marketing. Additionally, several of the major livestock associations are offering a program that will assist farmers, ranchers, and feeders in verifying that they have used pharmacological agents properly and allowed the proper withdrawal time before shipping livestock to market.

The next line of defense is in the hands of two federal agencies, the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) and the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). Both help test the safety of new drugs before allowing them on the market. No drug may be legally used in the United States unless it is approved by the FDA for either human or animal use. This keeps unsafe drugs of the market place. In addition to examining the pharmacological agent for safety, the FDA also determines the proper dosage and the time required for the drug to be eliminated from or reach safe levels in the animals. FDA and EPA weigh the risks and benefits of each pharmacological agent or chemical before it is approved. The FDA and EPA, at the request of the USDA Food Safety and Inspection Service, also investigate the misuse of pharmacological agents in the market place. The EPA is involved in monitoring pesticide regulation, storage and handling.

The third line of defense is found at the packing plant. The USDA Food Safety and Inspection Service (FSIS) is responsible for ensuring that the American Food supply is safe and wholesome. Cattle, hogs, and sheep are examined before, during, and after the slaughter process for healthfulness of and FSIS inspector. If wholesomeness is questioned at any time, the inspector will retain the carcass for further testing. Live animals that appear ill are tagged and suspect and their carcasses are now closely examined for signs of disease and drug residues. All carcasses are usually inspected for wholesomeness during the slaughter process. Inspectors view organs and lymph nodes and other tissues for abnormalities. If a carcass is found to be unsafe, it is condemned and placed in a separate area until it can be properly disposed. If misuse of various compounds is found, the carcass is traced back to the source of error. Besides legal action against the producer, future animals marketed from the establishment where the misuse or error occur are closely monitored until the problems is completely corrected.

The meat industry is highly regulated to maintain a safe, wholesome meat supply; but what if an illegal residue does find its way through the safeguards and into the food chain? Fortunately, the human body has the ability to destroy and eliminate toxins that enter the body. Residues become harmful if taken in very high concentrated doses of if the body is constantly in contact with residues at levels above those generally considered safe.

The biggest threat to the safety and wholesomeness of meat is bacterial contamination. More than five million cases of food-borne illnesses are reported yearly. Of the food-borne microbial disease outbreaks reported to traced to food service establishments, 20 percent to homes and 3 percent to allowing the product to be stored at a higher than recommended temperature (28F to 40F), cooking to a lower than recommended temperature product too long before consumption, and poor worker hygiene. Proper handling would eliminate the majority of food-borne illnesses.

For more information on meat wholesomeness and safety, contact your Gray County Extension Service.

HORSE PROJECT SET TO BEGIN

With the beginning of spring just

4-H Corner
Joe Vann

around the corner a number of youth around the area are beginning to shape their horse up for spring and summer activities. In conjunction with these activities the Gray County 4-H Horse project will hold an organizational meeting. This meeting will take place on Tuesday Mar. 19, 1991 at 7:00 p.m. in the Annex.

There are endless possibilities for a well organized and managed horse project. I hope that we have an excellent crowd as we begin to plan for 1991. Some activities to be discussed include the County Horse Show, Playdays, Ridding Clubs, Trail Rides and Horse Shows.

I would encourage all current youth, parents and anyone else interested in organizing and assisting with the 4-H Horse Project to mark your calendars and plan to attend Tuesday evening at 7:00 p.m. in the Annex.

RODEO MEETING

The 1991 Gray County 4-H Rodeo is set for Aug. 16 and 17. In order to be making plans for this year's rodeo an organizational meeting has been set for Thursday Mar. 21, at 7:00 p.m. in the Annex. The Gray County 4-H Rodeo serves as our primary fund raiser for the year. We also strive to involve as many 4-H families as possible in planning the workings of this rodeo. This year's rodeo could be in for some major changes, so we need all the help and input we can get.

Last year more than 200 youth from Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico participated in this event. Mark your calendars and plan to attend Thursday Mar. 21, at 7:00 p.m. in the Annex.

FARM ANIMAL PETTING ZOO

Gray County 4-H in conjunction with Pampa Wal-Mart will hold a petting zoo at the Pampa Wal-Mart location Saturday, Mar. 23, 1991 from 1:00 to 4:00 p.m. Gray County 4-H'ers will have a number of farm animals on hand for children to pet.

A number of Gray County 4-H youth will be on hand to talk about the animals and to lead youth through the animals. This is going to be a great opportunity for our 4-H youth to show off their projects, while giving area youth the opportunity to see and touch a number of farm animals up close.

I hope all of you will plan on coming out to Wal-Mart on Saturday, Mar. 23, from 1:00 p.m. to 4:00 p.m. to see these animals and see what 4-H is all about.

"Why do some children survive?", study asks

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Why do some children survive very troubled backgrounds without many scars, while others are permanently crippled?

The question is one psychologists at the University of Rochester are beginning to answer as they study highly stressed urban school children.

By comparing the characteristics of well and poorly adjusted children, researchers are finding that "survivors" tend to have better opinions of themselves, more ability to empathize with others' problems, more skill at solving social conflicts, and better judgment about which problems they have control over and which they don't.

Prevent a tragedy by putting poisons in their proper place

DEAR READERS: Spring is here — and so is National Poison Prevention Week. This year's theme is a reminder to parents: Put poisons in their place!

It is estimated that 2 million children will swallow a poison before the end of 1991. Poison centers report that 60 percent of the calls they receive are related to children 5 years of age and younger. A few simple precautions could prevent many tragedies:

MEDICATIONS: Keep all non-prescription and prescription medications in locked cabinets and return to safe storage immediately after use. The same non-prescription drug that brings welcome relief to an adult with a headache can cause grave illness and even death if it is swallowed by a small child. Familiar containers of aspirin, acetaminophen and antihistamines are often kept in unlocked medicine cabinets, women's handbags or left standing on bedside tables or windowsills. Young children are curious and will eat or drink almost anything — even if it doesn't taste good.

USE ONLY CHILD-RESISTANT COVERS ON MEDICATIONS: Although this may pose an inconvenience to senior citizens, it could save a grandchild's life.

KNOW THE NAMES OF THE PLANTS IN YOUR YARD AND WHERE YOUR CHILD PLAYS: The bright-colored berries, leaves and flowers of a wide variety of common, colorful plants can be poisonous. A child learns with his eyes and ears — and mouth!

GARDENING AND SPRING

CLEANUP PRODUCTS: We should always be mindful of the extremely dangerous products we use to kill insects, rodents, snails and weeds. These products are also toxic to humans and are capable of killing. Keep them well out of reach of children and use them with extreme care. Keep them in their original containers, with the labels attached, and use them only as directed.

THE KITCHEN, THE BATHROOM AND THE GARAGE ARE THE MOST COMMON SITES OF ACCIDENTAL POISONINGS: Many common household products, such as carpet and upholstery cleaners, rust removers, furniture polish, oven cleaner, kerosene, paint remover and thinner, room deodorizer and mothballs, are poisonous. Never store household cleaning products in unlabeled soda bottles or in jars.

WHEN POISONINGS HAPPEN: Call your local poison center's 24-hour hotline immediately, before following the first aid instructions printed on the product container, if your child becomes ill or exposed to a poisonous substance. Keep syrup of ipecac on hand if there are young children in the home. But use it only when recommended by a trained health-care professional.

And remember, the best antidote for poisonings is poison prevention. Parents and grandparents should be aware that every time they replace the child-resistant cap on a medicine bottle or household cleaner, or return a dangerous product to a safe place, they are saving the lives of their loved ones.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Opportunities today could be of a fleeting nature, especially those that affect your finances or career. Indifference could deprive you of them.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) In order to advance your self-interests today, you might have to improvise in a manner that could confuse others. However, the important thing is that you understand what you're doing.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) There is a possibility that you might get involved in a joint venture at this time which will be conducted along unconventional lines. In fact, the entire endeavor may be unique.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Circumstances might bring you into a partnership with an individual today, someone usually in opposition to your positions rather than in support of them.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If there is an important objective that you've been unable to achieve, discard unproductive tactics and try a new approach today. Your failure could be due to a lack of imagination.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Strive to be open-minded and unbiased today, especially if you meet someone who has certain characteristics you do not find appealing. You may misjudge a potential friend.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Chance could play an important role in your affairs today, especially in matters that are financially meaningful. Be alert for peculiar opportunities.

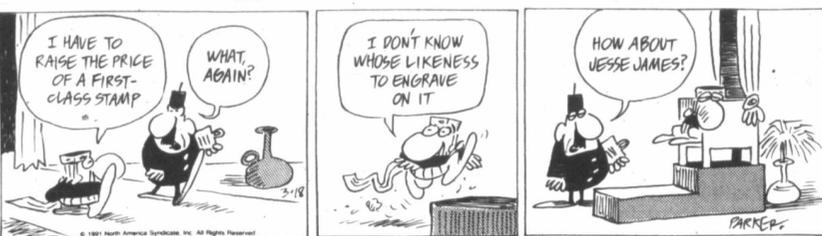

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) It could prove helpful to discuss things with your mate today before making decisions. Your partner might be able to offer suggestions that you fail to perceive.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If you must have some special service performed for you at this time, be sure the person or firm you choose can supply references. If they can't, keep looking.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Oddly, you could be more fortunate today seeking business favors from your social contacts rather than from your business contacts.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) The fulfillment of your expectations might not come until the last minute today, so don't give up prematurely. Better late than never.

Top NCAA seeds win, lead dance to 'Sweet 16'

By RICK WARNER
AP Sports Writer

UNLV passed its toughest test of the season Sunday, surviving a brutal battle against Georgetown to advance to the final 16 of the NCAA tournament.

The top-ranked Runnin' Rebels beat the Hoyas 62-54, extending their winning streak to 43 and reaching the West Regional semifinals for the fifth time in six years.

"It was a really tough game, one of the toughest games I can remember being in," said UNLV coach Jerry Tarkanian.

It was the second-closest game this season for UNLV, but this one was even more competitive than the Rebels' seven-point victory over Arkansas on Feb. 10. The Rebels led Arkansas by 23 points before a late Razorback rush closed the gap.

Georgetown (19-13) never folded, fighting back from UNLV surges that would have put away most teams.

"We're not in the moral victory business at Georgetown," said Hoyas coach John Thompson. "But that's a great team Vegas has, and in all probability they'll win it."

The Rebels (32-0) move on to Seattle, where they play Utah on Thursday. Utah made it to the final 16 by beating Michigan State 85-84 in double overtime.

In the East, North Carolina beat Villanova 84-69 and Eastern Michigan edged Penn State 71-68 in overtime.

Arkansas downed Arizona State 97-90 and Alabama defeated Wake Forest 96-88 in the Southeast, while Ohio State beat Georgia Tech 65-61 and St. John's topped Texas 84-76 in the Midwest.

On Thursday, UNLV plays Utah and Arizona faces Seton Hall at Seattle. At Charlotte, N.C., Arkansas plays Alabama and Indiana meets Kansas.

On Friday, North Carolina plays Eastern Michigan and Temple meets Oklahoma State at East Rutherford, N.J. At Pontiac, Mich., Ohio State plays St. John's and Duke faces Connecticut.

UNLV played most of the game without starting center George Ackles, who sprained his foot in the opening round. But the Rebels used their speed and ferocious defense to overcome Georgetown's giants, 7-foot-2 Dikembe Mutombo and 6-10 Alonzo Mourning.

Larry Johnson led UNLV with 20 points, while Greg Anthony had 15 and Anderson Hunt 14 for the defending national champs. Mutombo led the Hoyas with 16 points.

After the Rebels opened a 44-29 lead with 6:04 left, the Hoyas responded with an 11-0 run to make it 44-40. But Hunt's three-pointer and breakaway dunk helped put UNLV ahead 53-42 and Georgetown never got closer than five after that.

East
No. 4 N. Carolina 84, Villanova 69
At Syracuse, N.Y., North Carolina reached the final 16 for a record 11th straight year.

George Lynch had 19 points and 10 rebounds and the Tar Heels used a 7-0 run to pull away from the Wildcats in the second half. North Carolina made its move after Villanova cut a 15-point Tar Heel lead to 66-59 with 8:24 left, a spurt that featured two 3-pointers by reserve Lloyd Mumford.

After calling timeout, North Carolina (27-5) responded with a 7-0 spurt that started and ended with baskets by Lynch.

Lance Miller scored 17 points and Greg Woodard 15 for Villanova (17-15), which shot only 41 percent from the field.

E. Michigan 71, Penn St. 68, OT
Lorenzo Neely scored five points for the Hurons in overtime as Eastern Michigan advanced to the regional semifinals for the first time.

The game was close throughout. There were 20 lead changes and eight ties and neither team led by more than five points.

The Hurons (26-6) were first-round losers in their only previous NCAA appearance, in 1988. Penn State (21-11) hasn't advanced beyond the second round since 1954.

Penn State had several opportunities to win, but James Brown missed two free throws in the final 63 seconds of regulation and Freddie Barnes missed a pair 3-pointers in the final four seconds of overtime.

Southeast
No. 19 Alabama 96, Wake Forest 88

At Atlanta, Melvin Cheatum,

Gary Waites and Latrell Sprewell each scored 21 points for Alabama (23-9).

Waites scored 19 points in the first half, including five 3-point baskets, as Alabama took a 48-45 lead. Then Sprewell and Cheatum took over in the second half. Sprewell scored 16 in the second half, including six straight free throws in the final 1:30, and Cheatum added 13.

Chris King scored 29 points for Wake Forest (19-11), which was making its first NCAA appearance since 1984.

Alabama built its biggest lead, 61-51, on a free throw by James Robinson before Wake Forest rallied to cut it to 76-73 with 6:23 remaining.

No. 2 Arkansas 97, Arizona St. 90
Arkansas started quickly, then held off Arizona State to set a school record for victories in a season.

The Razorbacks (33-3) took a 12-0 lead in the first four minutes as the Sun Devils missed their first eight shots. Arizona State rallied to tie it at 30 and later went ahead by one point, but Arkansas took the lead for good shortly before halftime on a free throw by Ron Huery.

Oliver Miller had 19 points and 10 rebounds for Arkansas, while freshman Jamal Faulkner led Arizona State (20-1) with 29 points.

Midwest
No. 5 Ohio St. 65, Georgia Tech 61
At Dayton, Ohio, Perry Carter had 19 points and 18 rebounds as Ohio State held off a late charge by Georgia Tech.

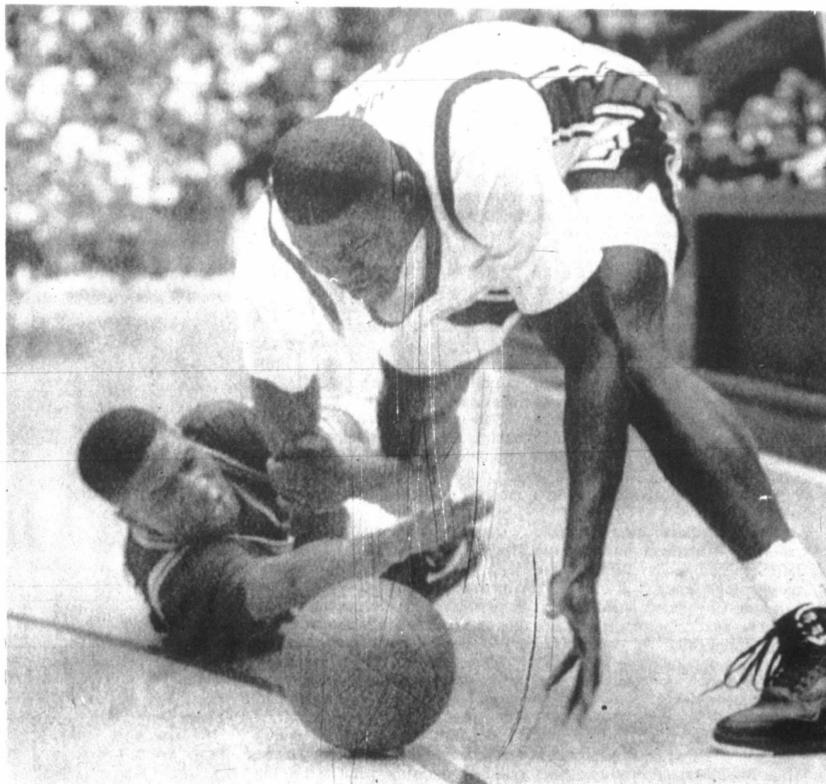

Jim Jackson added 16 points for the Buckeyes (27-3), including three free throws in the final 17.4 seconds.

Ohio State, plagued recently by poor free-throw shooting, hit seven of its last eight from the line against Georgia Tech. For the game, the Buckeyes were only 15 of 27 from the line.

Kenny Anderson had 25 points and six rebounds for Georgia Tech (17-13), but hit only 8 of 28 shots from the field. It may have been the last college game for the sophomore guard, who is considering entering the NBA draft.

No. 20 St. John's 84, No. 23 Texas 76

ing to wear down Texas.

In their previous four NCAA tournament appearances since 1986, St. John's had failed to make it past the first two rounds. The Redmen (22-8) broke the slump with a game that showcased their patient, half-court offense.

Texas (23-9) tried tight man-to-man coverage, half-court traps, even an uncharacteristic full-court press. But nothing worked against the Redmen, who overwhelmed the Longhorns with their balance and 61 percent shooting from the field.

Billy Singleton led St. John's with 21 points, while Joey Wright paced the Longhorns with 32.

West
No. 10 Utah 85, Michigan St. 84 (2 OT)

At Tucson, Ariz., Josh Grant scored a season-high 29 points and the Utes overcame frigid free-throw shooting to reach the final 16 for the first time since 1983.

With Michigan State trailing 75-73 in the first overtime, the Spartans' Mike Peplowski was fouled underneath with 6.6 seconds left. After missing his first free throw, Peplowski intentionally missed the second. Teammate Jon Zulauf grabbed the rebound and made a short jumper with four seconds remaining to force the second overtime.

Walter Stays put Utah (30-3) ahead to stay at 81-79 on a dunk with 1:34 left in the second overtime. A free throw by Watts with 10 seconds left gave Utah an 85-81 lead, giving the Utes enough cushion to withstand Steve Smith's 3-pointer with three seconds remaining.

Smith, whose jumper at the buzzer beat Wisconsin-Green Bay in the opening round, led Michigan State (19-11) with 28 points.

Bo may know playing future today

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) - Bo Jackson's matchless career as one of the world's most celebrated athletes will make one more bid today for a medical reprieve.

Amid growing reports that a hip injury is threatening to keep him on crutches for at least nine months, Jackson was scheduled to be examined in Birmingham, Ala., by Dr. James Andrews, an orthopedic surgeon.

He has already been examined by Dr. Steve Joyce, team physician for the Kansas City Royals, and a team official said the two would issue a joint diagnosis.

The Royals also said an announcement would be made regarding Jackson on Tuesday. But sources in Kansas City said Sunday night an announcement could come as early as today for the only man to win football's Heisman Trophy and baseball's All-Star MVP award.

News cameras captured a hobbling, uncommunicative Jackson boarding a plane in Kansas City Sunday night and then getting off in Orlando, Fla., near the Royals' spring training complex.

"You'll have to wait and see tomorrow," Jackson brusquely told reporters in Kansas City. "Don't mess with me now. Don't mess with me now."

Reports first surfaced on Friday that Jackson's career as one of the NFL's top running backs with the Los Angeles Raiders and an All-Star outfielder with the Royals was in jeopardy.

The San Diego Tribune quoted unnamed medical sources as saying Jackson might be suffering from avascular necrosis, a condition that prevents blood from getting to the hip bone, causing the bone tissue to die.

Jackson

Jackson injured the hip Jan. 13 when he was tackled from behind by linebacker Kevin Walker at the end of a 34-yard run in the Raiders' 20-10 playoff victory over Cincinnati.

Sunday night, WDAF-TV in Kansas City quoted an unnamed source as saying the Royals have already told their slugging left fielder he would not play this season.

"Bo Jackson's hip injury is much more serious than anyone first thought," WDAF-TV sports director Frank Boal said. "So serious, according to our source, the Royals' doctors who examined Bo have already told Bo he will not play at all this season, and that all Bo's athletic activity, including football, should cease for the next 9-12 months."

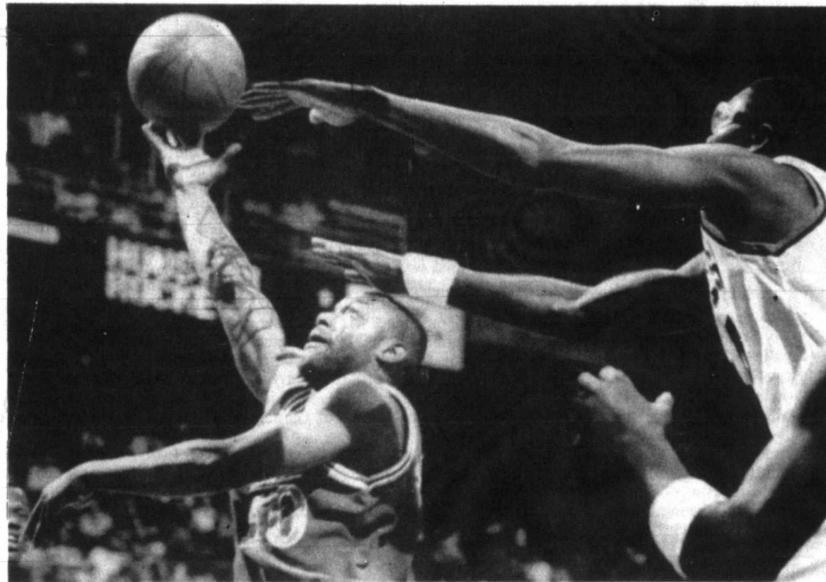

Royals officials have refused to confirm or deny the reports pending their final medical statements.

"Nothing has changed in terms of the timing of this process," general manager Herk Robinson said Sunday night in Florida.

"Our evaluation process has been to have Bo examined by Dr. Joyce and then Dr. Andrews. That's when we feel we'll have a proper diagnosis and we hope to tell everyone as much as we know about his condition on Tuesday.

Medical experts say avascular necrosis generally does not arise from a sudden injury but is more often a progressive condition, taking years to develop.

It can occur at any age and is not life-threatening.

Golden State Warrior Tim Hardaway eludes Rocket defender Hakeem Olajuwon.

Hot Rockets extend win streak

HOUSTON (AP) - The Houston Rockets almost let their eight-game winning streak slip away, but Hakeem Olajuwon wasn't worried.

The Rockets All-Star center scored 25 points and grabbed 13 rebounds as Houston blew a 19-point third-quarter lead and still managed to defeat the Golden State Warriors 123-119 Sunday.

"When a team can shoot as well as they can, they can always get back in the game," Olajuwon said. "We were struggling, but we still have a great deal of confidence in ourselves now."

Houston, currently the hottest team in the NBA, has its longest streak since winning the first eight games of the 1984-85 season. The franchise record is nine consecutive games, set in March 1977.

"Whether it's a close one or a blowout, we feel like we're going to win every game," said reserve guard Sleepy Floyd.

Golden State managed to stay close, mainly because backup center and ex-Rocket Jim Petersen had season highs of 25 points and 9 rebounds while playing against Olajuwon.

"We needed an inside threat," Petersen said. "It's a matter of asserting myself because I've played against Hakeem so much. I've played one-on-one against him before every practice for four years."

Houston coach Don Chaney felt that Olajuwon didn't assert himself enough against Petersen.

"Petersen and Hakeem were playing buddy-buddy defense tonight," Chaney said. "They must have had some kind of pre-game arrangement where they would let each other score and not play any defense."

Chaney also thought the Rockets emphasized offense too much.

"We are getting caught up the last couple of games, trying to outscore people," he said. "We need to concentrate more on defense and stop watching the game."

The Warriors' Chris Mullin, the sixth-leading scorer in the NBA, said the Rockets played well.

"They controlled the game the whole way, but we hung around because of our shooting," said Mullin, who had 21 points and 7 rebounds. "They made their own breaks, especially when we pulled within two points."

Houston guard-Vernon Maxwell, who scored 23 points, said the Rockets don't need to worry about the game as much as the outcome.

"We came up with a big win, period," said Maxwell. "As long as we keep playing hard and playing together, the point-spread doesn't matter."

Golden State coach Don Nelson thought the game was a spectator's delight.

"Everyone had a good time tonight and it was a real good game to watch," he said. "The Rockets are the hottest team in the NBA. In my mind, they are the most feared team to play at this time."

Chaney could even agree with Nelson about that point.

"We want to win so badly that we just refuse to back down and lose," Chaney said. "We are on a heck of a roll and we want to continue to get the job done."

Lady Harvesters win Hereford track meet

HEREFORD - Competing in poor weather conditions, the Pampa Lady Harvesters' track team still dominated the field at the Hereford Invitational last Saturday.

The Lady Harvesters racked up 208 points and nine first-place medals in winning their third track meet of the season in as many outings.

Second-place Hereford trailed Pampa by 17 points.

"I was real pleased with the way the girls performed, considering the weather conditions. It was raining and icing up, but they went out and had some good performances," said Pampa head coach Mike Lopez.

Two Lady Harvesters' had their best meet of the season.

Nikki Ryan won the triple jump with her best leap of 36-51/2 and Kelly Winborne turned in her best time (48.06) in the 300-meter hurdles. Ryan also won the long jump.

Other individuals with first place finishes were Jennifer Bailey, high jump; Shanna Molitor, 100; Christie Jones, 400 and Bridgett Mathis, 200.

Both of Pampa's 800 and 400-meter relay teams raced to victories.

Pampa's junior varsity team scored 146 points to win the JV title.

Pampa's next meet will be at the Berger Invitational on Thursday, March 28.

Injured players return to highlight exhibition baseball weekend

By The Associated Press

Jim Leyland has a message for Pittsburgh fans who are booing Barry Bonds: Stop!

"Maybe I'm sticking my nose in someone else's business but fair is fair," Leyland said after Sunday's 7-0 loss to St. Louis. "I think it's gone on long enough and I don't see anything positive coming out of booing Barry Bonds."

The outfielder's unpopularity soared when he and Leyland argued loudly during a March 4 workout.

"I'm not trying to be a pioneer or a martyr," Leyland said. "I just stood up to the situation. It didn't matter who it was. If it was a minor league player getting into it with one of the coaches, I would have handled it the same way."

It was a quiet weekend on the baseball front, with many players more focused on NCAA basketball games than on exhibition games. The highlights were several players coming off injuries.

Seattle outfielder Ken Griffey Sr., limited to just two at-bats this spring, will undergo a magnetic resonance imaging test to determine the extent of the back injury he incurred in a March 3 traffic accident. He is expected to miss at least the next seven games.

"We can't have this thing keep recurring," Mariners manager Jim Lefebvre said Sunday. "Then we're never going to know."

Kansas City pitcher Mark Gubicza made his first exhibition appearance of the spring, allowing two hits and one run in one inning as the Royals beat the New York Mets 4-3 at Port St. Lucie, Fla.

Gubicza, who had rotator-cuff surgery last August, pitched in a "B" game last week. Royals starter Mike Boddicker allowed two runs and five hits to New York in his fourth game this spring.

At West Palm Beach, Fla., Mark Gardner pitched in Montreal's "B" game, his first start since a slightly torn muscle in his right shoulder was surgically repaired in November.

"He threw some fastballs with pop — 40 to 50 percent of them had good pop," Expos manager Buck Rodgers said. "All we'd seen when he was working on the sidelines was ten percent, so this was a big improvement. If he's able to throw in an 'A' game Thursday or Friday, he'll be right on schedule."

Atlanta first basemen Nick Esasky, who has been out of action almost a year with vertigo, is expected to play in today's "B" game against the Montreal Expos.

Esasky, who could see action as a designated hitter Monday, began suffering various ailments, including lightheadedness and dizziness, after playing only nine games for the Braves in 1990.

"We're going to give it a go," Braves manager Bobby Cox said. "We'll see if he feels good in the morning, it's up to him."

Meanwhile, Roger Clemens made only one complaint after his third exhibition start: He's throwing too many strikes.

"My control is there, but my worst habit is throwing the ball around the middle of the plate," Clemens said after allowing seven hits and two runs in five innings in Boston's 4-0 loss to Cincinnati.

In other exhibition action:

Dodgers 6, Brewers 1

At Monterrey, Mexico, Fernando Valenzuela allowed two hits in five innings and added a run-scoring single as he pitched in his native country for the first time in nine years.

The game, watched by 27,000 fans at Monterrey, Mexico, was billed as a matchup between Valenzuela and Milwaukee's Ted Higuera, a pair of Mexican left-handers. But Higuera was scratched this week after doctors said he had a torn rotator cuff in his pitching shoulder.

Valenzuela allowed one run, struck out four and walked none. John Weteland and Zakary Shinnall finished the combined three-hitter for the Dodgers.

Astros 9, Dodgers 5

At Vero Beach, Fla., Karl Rhodes drove in three runs and Ramon Martinez was hit hard again, giving up five runs in four innings. Houston had 17 hits, including a triple and seven doubles, as the Astros improved their exhibition record to 7-1.

Brewers 6, Indians 2

At Chandler, Ariz., Paul Molitor

snapped a tie with a run-scoring single and Robin Yount added a two-run single in Milwaukee's four-run seventh inning. Outfielder Dante Bichette, acquired last week from California for Dave Parker, went 3-for-3 and drew a walk. He had an RBI and threw out a runner at the plate in the ninth.

Cardinals 7, Pirates 0

At Bradenton, Fla., Felix Jose hit a three-run homer and Ken Hill, Kris Carpenter, Scott Terry and Juan Agosto combined on a four-hitter. Jeff King of the Pirates, batting 11-for-27 this spring, extended his hitting streak to eight games.

Twins 6, Rangers 4

At Port Charlotte, Fla., Jarvis Brown's seventh-inning sacrifice fly off Jeff Russell gave Minnesota a five-run lead and proved to be the game winner.

Tigers 3, Rangers 1

At Lakeland, Fla., Frank Tanana became the first Detroit pitcher to go five innings as the Tigers snapped a five-game losing streak.

Twins 13, Phillies 4

At Clearwater, Fla., Pedro Munoz drove in three runs and Greg Gagne and Shane Mack had four hits. Jack Morris retired the first nine Phillies for his first spring victory.

Yankees 7, White Sox 6

At Sarasota, Fla., Steve Balboni hit a bases-loaded sacrifice fly in the 11th inning as New York rallied from a five-run deficit to win for the fifth time in six games. Chicago, which fell behind 6-5 after giving up three runs in the sixth and three more in the seventh, tied the score in the ninth on Frank Thomas' home run off Rich Monteleone.

Expos 2, Braves 0

At West Palm Beach, Fla., Ivan Calderon hit a two-run homer in the fourth inning and Bill Sampen, Kent Bottomfield, Bill Long and Scott Ruskin combined on a three-hitter.

Orioles 3, Blue Jays 2

At Dunedin, Fla., Ernie Whitt, in Baltimore's camp as a non-roster player, hit a two-run homer off his former teammates.

Athletics 2, Giants 1

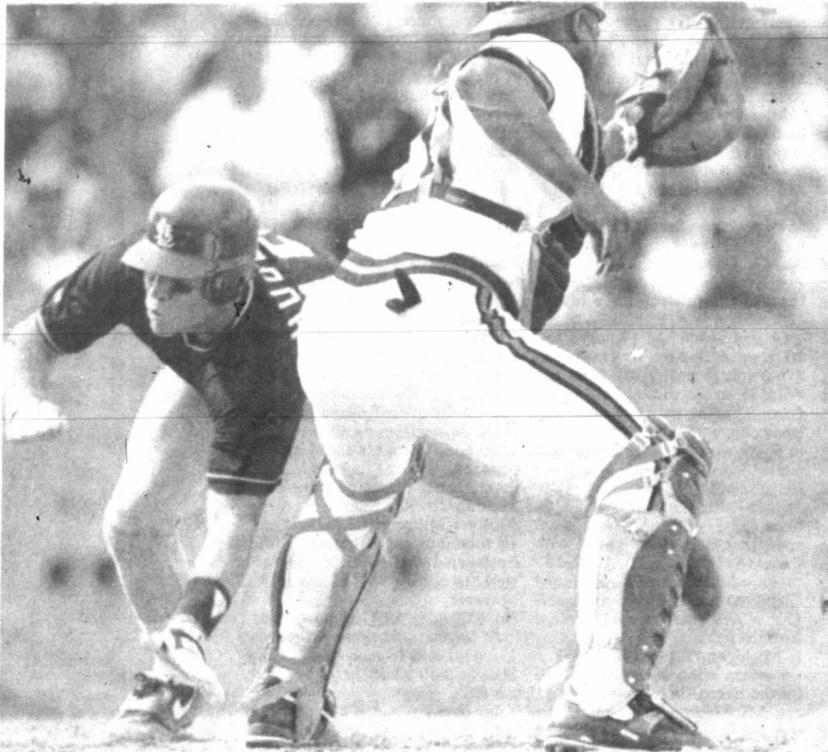

At Scottsdale, Ariz., Willie Wilson drove in the go-ahead run with a sacrifice fly in the ninth inning for Oakland, which has beaten the Giants in 18 of the last 20 games between the two Bay Area rivals, including a four-game sweep in the 1989 World Series.

Mariners 2, Padres 1

At Tempe, Ariz., Edgar Martinez broke a seventh-inning tie with a run-scoring single.

Angels 9, Cubs 6

At Mesa, Ariz., Dave Parker had two hits, scored twice and drove in a run in his first game with California. Dave Winfield hit his second home run and George Bell had four hits for Chicago, including a two-run homer in the ninth.

Cardinals Rex Hudler heads for the plate behind Pirates catcher Lloyd McClendon to score during Sunday's game in Bradenton, Fla.

Fly So Free early Derby choice

By The Associated Press

The score for the Eclipse Award winners over the weekend was three wins, one second and two on the road to the Kentucky Derby.

Fly So Free, the 1990 2-year-old champion, and Meadow Star, the 2-year-old filly of the year, both won impressively on Saturday as they point toward the Derby on May 4 at Churchill Downs.

Unbridled, the 1990 Derby winner and 3-year-old of the year, made his 4-year-old debut the same day with an impressive victory over sprint champion Housebuster.

Fly So Free completed a sweep of Gulfstream's triple crown, adding the Florida Derby to earlier victories in the Hutcheson and Fountain of Youth. Fly So Free held off a late bid from Strike the Gold to win his fifth straight.

Fly So Free's time for 1 1/8 miles was a sluggish 1:50 2-5, but jockey Jose Santos had an explanation: "He's still waiting for his competition."

Fly So Free, who paid $2.80, goes next in the Blue Grass on April 13 at Keeneland.

At Aqueduct, Meadow Star won her 3-year-old debut, the Queen of Stage Stakes. Off as a 1-10 favorite, Meadow Star was timed in 1:23 for seven furlongs and finished 3/4 lengths in front of Nany's Appeal. She paid a winning mutuel of $2.20 for her eighth victory in eight career starts.

Meadow Star now goes to the Comely Stakes, followed by the Wood Memorial on April 20 at Aqueduct. Trainer Leroy Jolley then will decide whether to send her to the Derby.

Unbridled, who won the Breeder's Cup Classic winner to cap off his 3-year-old championship year, began his 4-year-old campaign by beating Housebuster in the Deputy Minister Handicap at Gulfstream over seven furlongs.

Unbridled started slowly, falling 15 lengths behind before making up ground around the turn. He passed the leaders with 75 yards to go and beat Housebuster, last year's sprint champion, by three lengths.

"He has one style of running," jockey Pat Day said. "He's a long-striding horse that likes to settle early and make one big run."

Unbridled was timed in 1:21 4-5 and paid $8.20.

At Santa Anita, Lite Light, $3.20, owned by rap singer M.C. Hammer, hustled through horses in the stretch to win the $212,100 Santa Anita Oaks for 3-year-old fillies by a length over Garden Gal. Ifyoucouldseemenow, a stablemate of Garden Gal, was third.

It was the fourth time in five races that Lite Light has defeated Garden Gal. Queen's Gray Bee, $11.60, split horses in the stretch and rallied to win the $250,000 Remington Park Derby at Remington Park.

Elsewhere, Silver Tango, $3.20, remained undefeated, winning the $43,050 Forsythia Stakes at Pimlico; Timber Ribbon, $10.60, won the $59,000 Pippin Stakes at Oaklawn, and Deuces Deuces, $3.40, captured the $43,800 Mata Hari Breeder's Cup Stakes at Sportsman's Park.

On Sunday, Devil's Orchid, $4.20, set a stakes record in winning the $111,800 Distaff Handicap at Aqueduct by 8 3/4 lengths. She covered the seven furlongs in 1:21, three-fifths of a second faster than Cicada in 1963 and Ride Sally in 1986.

Tong Po, $64, making only the third start of his career, scored an eight-length victory in the Federico Tesio Stakes, Pimlico's big Triple Crown prep race.

Sea Cadet, $12.60, won the $214,200 San Felipe Stakes for 3-year-olds by three lengths over Scan at Santa Anita. Ridden by Chris McCarron, Sea Cadet covered 1 1-16 miles in 1:41 4-5, while Split Run, the 7-10 favorite, finished fifth.

Cahill Road, $2.80, a full brother of 1990 Kentucky Derby winner Unbridled, romped to an eight-length victory in a $19,000 allowance race at Gulfstream Park.

Cahill Road's time of 1:42 3-5 for 1 1-16 miles was almost two seconds faster than the winning time of Fly So Free in the Fountain of Youth

Magee wins rain-shortened Nestle

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) - Andrew Magee couldn't care less about all the weather problems that disrupted and eventually shortened the Nestle Invitational.

"They have my name on the trophy, and that's all that matters," Magee said after he survived a series of delays — and a decision by Arnold Palmer — and became a winner for only the second time in a seven-season PGA Tour career.

Palmer, the 61-year-old host of this event, huddled with other tournament officials for hours Sunday before reluctantly deciding his flooded Bay Hill Club course was unplayable.

"I'm disappointed the rain shortened the tournament," Palmer said after the event was curtailed to three rounds — spread over four days — and 54 holes.

But Magee wasn't. "I'm not at all unhappy," he said. "It's the highlight of my career, no question about it."

The victory was accompanied by more than the usual amount of mental gymnastics, conferences, discussions and possibilities. Magee was among the 18 players delayed by rain and eventually stranded on the course Saturday night.

"I thought about it maybe being cut to 54 holes that night," he said.

He was one stroke off the pace with three holes to go when he returned Sunday morning to complete third-round play. Magee promptly vaulted into the lead with an eagle-3, a 3-iron second shot setting up a 30-foot putt in a heavy rain.

He parred in, finishing off a 66 and posted a three-round total of 203, 13 under par.

And then he sat and waited and wondered. For almost three hours. Shortly after Magee finished, play was halted again. This time four men were still out there.

One of them was Tom Sieckmann, the overnight leader. After a bogey on No. 16, he was 11-under with two holes to go. A birdie-birdie finish would tie him with Magee.

While the rain pounded down, Magee was waiting in the locker room and mentally going through the possibilities. Maybe Sieckmann and the other three players couldn't finish and they'd all have to come back Monday.

Maybe Sieckmann would finish third-round play, the tournament would be cut to 54 holes and Magee would win outright. Maybe Sieckmann would birdie in for a tie, the tournament would be cut to three rounds and they'd have a sudden death playoff.

Maybe the rain would let up and they'd be able to play the fourth round in the afternoon.

"Paul Azinger came by and said to stay mentally alert and ready to go," Magee said. "That kind of snapped my thinking about 54 holes and a win."

But the rains did not let up, just a pause long enough for Sieckmann to play two more holes. He did not birdie in.

And, with the decision to abandon the fourth round, Magee became a 2-shot winner over Sieckmann, who played the last 18 holes — spread over two days — in 70.

Magee collected $180,000 from the total purse of $1 million and boosted his season's earnings to a career-high $301,904.

Steve Pate, winner of the weather-disrupted Honda Classic a week earlier, came on with a 68 and tied for third at 208 with Mark Calcavecchia.

Calcavecchia, who also scored an eagle on the 16th hole, closed with a 71.

Mark O'Meara was next at 70-207 and Jay Don Blake followed at 70-208.

Ruddock, Tyson predict knockouts

By ED SCHUYLER Jr.
AP Boxing Writer

LAS VEGAS (AP) - Mike Tyson predicts a good time for everybody at his fight tonight at the Mirage.

Well, not everybody.

"Come, because you will have a good time," said Tyson, who will fight Donovan "Razor" Ruddock. "I'm going to enjoy it very much."

Enjoyment for Tyson would mean pain for Ruddock.

No title is a stake, as it would have been if Tyson had not pulled out of a scheduled Nov. 18, 1989, fight against Ruddock because of illness.

The match, however, is important in that the winner will be in line for a title shot against the winner of the fight between heavyweight champion Evander Holyfield and George Foreman April 19 at Atlantic City, N.J.

Holyfield won the title from James "Buster" Douglas, who upset Tyson with a 10th-round knockout Feb. 11, 1990. Douglas got his chance after the Tyson-Ruddock match was called off.

There will be two title fights on the undercard featuring welterweight champions Simon Brown and Maurice Blocker, against each other, and junior welterweight champion Julio Cesar Chavez. Also fighting will be Roberto Duran.

Both Tyson and Ruddock are predicting knockout victories, and most people in boxing figure the fight will end inside the 12-round limit.

Some boxing observers feel that the 6-foot-3 Ruddock has the physical tools and style to beat the 5-11 1/2 Tyson. Ruddock's power punches go up, and that's the best way to punch against a shorter opponent who fights out of semi-crouch.

"For some outrageous reason he thinks I'm scared of him," Tyson said.

The question, however, seems to be whether Ruddock has the mental toughness to withstand Tyson's intimidating assaults.

"I don't care what he's got. He's going to have to use it all," Tyson said.

Ruddock's all won't be enough in the opinion of the most. Tyson was a 5-1 favorite.

Ruddock's decision to stop sparring with a 10th-round knockout Feb. 11, 1990. Douglas got his chance after the Tyson-Ruddock match was called off.

The 27-year-old Ruddock said he stopped sparring 17 days before the Dokes fight.

Tyson, 24, weighed in officially at 217 pounds Sunday. Ruddock weighed 228.

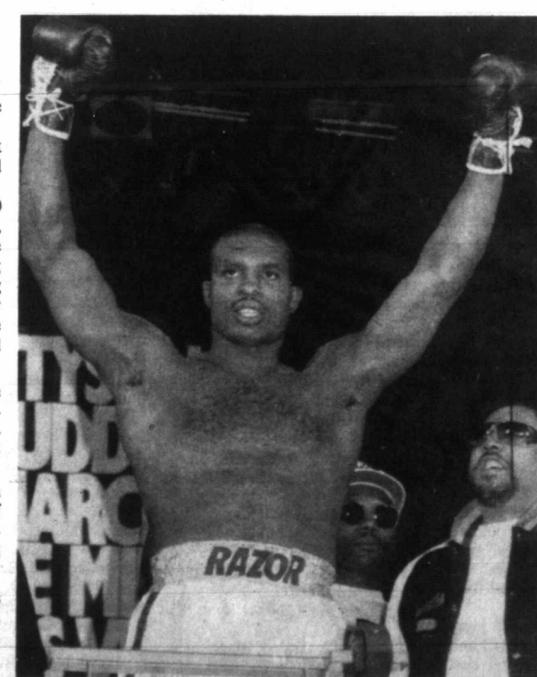

Ruddock, who quit boxing for 10 months in 1985-86 because of asthma, is ranked second behind Tyson by the World Boxing Council, World Boxing Association and International Boxing Federation. Since being shunned by Tyson, Ruddock has scored three straight knockouts to make his record 25-1-1 with 18 knockouts.

Tyson has fought twice since the upset loss, scoring first-round knockouts of Henry Tillman and Alex Stewart. He has a 39-1 record with 35 knockouts.

The welterweight title fight between Brown and Blocker will be a battle of best friends. Brown holds the IBF 147-pound title, while Blocker is recognized as champion by the WBC.

Chavez, who has a 73-0 record with 60 knockouts, will defend the IBF and WBC 140-pound titles against John Duplessis.

The 39-year-old Duran, who has held world titles in four weight classes, will fight Pat Lawlor in a 10-round super middleweight bout.

Canadian boxer Donovan "Razor" Ruddock raises arms after weighing in at 228 pounds Sunday.

Red Army forces going home, but leaving few friends behind

By DEBORAH SEWARD
Associated Press Writer

MUKRAN, Germany (AP) — The Soviet bloc collapsed with a speed that astonished the world, but ridding Eastern Europe of the Red Army soldiers who enforced the coalition takes longer.

As tens of thousands depart, they leave behind an environmental mess, bitter memories among Eastern Europeans and fervent hopes that the troops never return.

Some would rather not go home. In the Kremlin, a Soviet leadership caught up in economic, political and ethnic turmoil must wonder what it will do with the returning soldiers.

Nearly half a million Soviet troops remain in the satellites that became democracies. Most are in newly unified Germany, east of a vanished frontier that once was expected to be the first battle line of World War III.

WHERE THE SOVIET TROOPS ARE LOCATED

BERLIN (AP) — Here is a look at the status of Soviet troops in Eastern Europe:

EASTERN GERMANY — In 1990, there were 388,000 Soviet troops in former East Germany. The Soviets have said they will withdraw about 30 percent each year in 1991, 1992 and 1993, with the remainder to leave in 1994. The pullout already has fallen behind. Only half the 27,000 Soviet troops scheduled to leave in January and February have gone.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA — The withdrawal was agreed upon Feb. 26, 1990, to be completed by June 30, and is on schedule. About three-fourths of the 73,500 Soviet soldiers have left.

HUNGARY — Of the 60,000 Soviet troops in Hungary, about 10,000 were removed in 1989 and three times that number in 1990. The remaining 19,000 are to be gone by June 30.

POLAND — Negotiations continue on an agreement for withdrawing the 50,000 Soviet troops in Poland.

Soviet troops have begun leaving the former East Germany, but the withdrawal is behind schedule. They also are pulling out of Hungary and Czechoslovakia. Poland still is seeking a firm departure date for the 50,000 soldiers there.

The mess the Red Army is leaving behind will take years to clean up.

Eight barrels of napalm were found in a former garrison north of Budapest. The soil at military airports is soaked with gasoline and subsoil waters are polluted.

Part of Hungary's Kiskunsag National Park was used for war games and tons of military debris litter the forest, including unexploded ammunition.

Czechoslovakia said only 12 of the 227 sites evacuated by Soviet forces were clean, and estimated the damage at the equivalent of $8.6 million.

CTK, the official news agency, reported in January that schoolchildren in Rokytice, 90 miles north of Prague, found live detonators, flares, smoke bombs and ammunition in garbage cans outside a Soviet barracks.

Poland's environmental agency said inspection of nine garrisons last year revealed that the Soviets were releasing untreated sewage into surface water.

In what many Eastern Europeans consider an added insult, the Soviets are demanding compensation for the buildings they erected, many of which are in poor condition and will cost a great deal to repair.

But problems plague the troops' departure. Red Army soldiers who do not want to return home often desert, especially in eastern Germany.

Soviet authorities have appealed to the German government for better cooperation in returning deserters, most of whom are in hiding or have requested political asylum.

The Soviets planned to route some departing troops and materiel through Poland, but the Poles refused, forcing greater reliance on sea and air routes, which the Soviets contend are more expensive.

Heavy fog reduced visibility to less than 10 feet at times this winter, making it hard to load the freighters docked in Mukran harbor, 150 miles north of Berlin.

Bad winter weather in the Soviet Union often grounded the transport planes carrying soldiers and their families home.

Only half of the 27,000 Soviet troops scheduled to leave eastern Germany in January and February did so, and just 70 percent of the assigned equipment was moved out.

Still, "We are determined to complete the withdrawal on schedule," said Col. Viktor Bistritsky, who runs the Soviet command post in Mukran.

When 1990 began, there were 388,000 Soviet military personnel, 184,000 dependents and hundreds of thousands of civilian support personnel in eastern Germany. The two countries' agreement requires the troops be gone by 1994.

Germany's government and banks have committed the equivalent of $19.5 billion to cover troop relocation costs and help start a market economy in the Soviet Union.

"It is complicated, but in the end, the task must be completed," said Heerwart Schindler, director of the ferry complex completed at Mukran in 1986. "The Soviets must be out by 1994."

Mukran is the only German port that can accommodate Soviet railway cars, which have a wider gauge than European trains.

Empty Soviet cars are ferried from Klaipeda, Lithuania, to Mukran and rolled into a railway yard. They are loaded with military equipment that arrives on the German railroad line, then rolled back on the ferries for the 340-mile return trip to Klaipeda.

Lutz Reimann, director of the German shipping company in charge of the sea operation, said 200 train cars loaded with light vehicles, weapons and ammunition were handled every day.

In Poland, officials are linking permission to cross their territory with a firm date for completion of the troops' withdrawal.

Czechoslovakia also does not want the Soviet soldiers in Germany to use it as a route home, although the Czechoslovaks could earn about $600 million in transport fees.

Nearly three-fourths of the 73,500 Soviet soldiers in Czechoslovakia have left and the rest are to be gone by June 30. The remaining 19,000 in neighboring Hungary also are to be repatriated by that date.

Southern Baptist chaplains defend wartime evangelism

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Southern Baptist chaplains and ministers who were busy "winning souls" during the Gulf War were only following the Bible's message in preaching the Gospel, a church official said.

But they have come under fire for their zeal in converting soldiers to Christianity or away from other denominations.

"I'm sure I don't need to remind fellow Protestants that the Great Commission and evangelism are an inextricable part of our New Testament faith," said the Rev. Richard Land, head of the Christian Life Commission, the Southern Baptists' Nashville-based ethics agency.

"It would be an unreasonable and novel interpretation to say that chaplains of whatever faith were to be restricted to pastoral functions only," he said.

Southern Baptist chaplains and ministers serving with National Guard units during the war have not been timid in publicizing their successes.

The Rev. James Townsend, associate general secretary of the Nashville-based United Methodist Division of Chaplains and Related Ministries, said he is hearing of chaplains trying to convert people who hold other theological beliefs.

That's a common problem since the military chaplain's post was opened to wider denominational representation, he said. "During the Korean War, there were only 32 Protestant denominations in the chaplaincy, and now there are 260, many of whom have no tradition working in an ecumenical community," Townsend said.

Lew Burnett, director of military chaplaincy for the Southern Baptist Home Mission Board, told the Baptist Press that Southern Baptist chaplains recorded at least 1,200 professions of faith in the Gulf.

Church and State magazine said in its March issue that some religious groups crowded about their effectiveness in winning new converts.

A Southern Baptist Marine chaplain who baptized 24 Marines in a metal coffin, the only container large enough for complete immersion, according to the article.

Another Southern Baptist chaplain reportedly went tent to tent in Saudi Arabia talking to soldiers.

Of the 2,741 Protestant chaplains in the war, Southern Baptist accounted for 194. Other religions were represented by 687 Catholics, 53 Jews, one Buddhist and 52 others.

"We have chaplains of different faiths to maintain a balance in our pluralistic society," Land said. "All are free to express their faith and to share their faith with soldiers of like faith or with others who have been invited to services with their buddies."
