Vehicles pass under ash-covered trees in Tarlac, Philippines, near erupting Mount Pinatubo, as they travel at mid-day Monday.

Volcano spews ash as travelers crowd airports

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Mount Pinatubo blasted ash more than six miles high today, darkening the sky as thousands of U.S. troops and dependents who were ordered evacuated headed for home.

About 124 volcanic quakes were recorded during the past 24 hours, according to the Philippine Institute of Volcanology and Seismology.

Philippine officials said preliminary estimates showed Clark Air Base alone suffered $300 million in damage since nearby Mount Pinatubo began erupting June 9 for the first time in 600 years.

The government sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said they were given the $300 million figure by American officials, who told them talks on a new lease for U.S. bases in the Philippines must wait until surveys are completed.

The U.S. Embassy was closed today for a municipal holiday and U.S. officials could not be reached for comment.

The lease on Clark and the other U.S. bases expires Sept. 16. Talks on an extension had bogged down — before the eruptions — over how much Washington must pay and how long the installations can remain.

Pinatubo's eruptions have blanketed the countryside with deep ash and forced the evacuation of Clark, 10 miles east of the volcano, home to 15,000 Air Force personnel and dependents.

The Pentagon has ordered most of Clark's military personnel out of the country, as well as all military dependents, many of whom live at Subic Bay naval station 25 miles southwest of the volcano.

U.S. officials in Cebu said nearly 2,000 Americans evacuated from Subic aboard the aircraft carrier Midway left Cebu today on flights to Guam and the United States.

A few hundred Americans and Filipino wives remain in Cebu but should be departing soon, officials said. Many of them were visiting relatives in the countryside or were on leave when the evacuations began.

Today's eruptions spewed ash up to 33,000 feet high and it rained down over the rich farmlands of Pampanga and Tarlac provinces northeast of the 4,765-foot volcano.

Officials warned today that the tons of ash and debris on the slopes of Pinatubo pose a serious threat to areas east of the mountain, including Clark and President Corazon Aquino's sugar plantation in Tarlac.

"It is only waiting for a strong, sustained rainfall that can be delivered by the first typhoon that comes close to the Pinatubo area," said Kelvin Rodolfo, a geology professor at the University of Illinois-Chicago. "So if we have only a few typhoons, we will continue to experience (mudflows) for many years."

At least 296 people, including the 9-year-old daughter of a U.S. Air Force sergeant, have been killed since the volcano exploded to life. Twenty people are listed as missing.

Court rules press can be sued if confidential sources revealed

WASHINGTON (AP) — News organizations can be sued when they break promises and divulge the names of confidential sources, the Supreme Court ruled today.

By a 5-4 vote, the court ruled in a Minnesota case that reporters' promises of confidentiality are legally enforceable, despite the Constitution's free-press protections.

"The First Amendment does not confer on the press a constitutional right to disregard promises that would otherwise be enforced under state law," Justice Byron R. White wrote for the court.

White said Minnesota's highest court should restudy its ruling that threw out a $200,000 award against Minnesota's two largest newspapers won by a news source whose identity was not kept confidential.

In other action, the court: — Placed new hurdles in the path of convicted criminals — particularly death row inmates — who claim their rights have been violated and seek help from the federal courts.

In a 6-3 ruling, the court barred Virginia death row inmate Roger Coleman from challenging his murder conviction in the federal court.

In a separate 6-3 decision, the justices overturned a federal appeals court ruling that threw out the murder conviction and life prison sentence in California for Owen Duane Nunemaker.

The rulings, which are expected to speed the pace of executions, are the latest in a recent series by the high court that make it more difficult for convicted criminals to appeal in federal court.

— Ruled that Indian tribes may not sue state governments in federal court seeking monetary damages for violations of their constitutional rights.

The 6-3 decision in a case from Alaska said the Constitution's 11th Amendment, which shields states from being sued in federal courts by individuals and businesses seeking monetary damages, also shields states from tribal lawsuits.

— Upheld federal regulations that make it easier for coal mining companies to deny benefits to miners who claim to have black lung disease.

The 7-1 ruling in cases from Pennsylvania and West Virginia could affect $650 million in claims by miners and their families. Black lung benefits can exceed $185,000 per miner or family, federal officials said.

In the confidential source case, White was joined by Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist and Justices John Paul Stevens, Antonin Scalia and Anthony M. Kennedy.

Justices Harry A. Blackmun, Thurgood Marshall, Sandra Day O'Connor and David H. Souter dissented.

Writing for the four, Souter said, "The state's interest in enforcing a newspaper's promise of confidentiality (is) insufficient to outweigh the interest in unfettered publication of the information revealed in this case."

Public relations man Dan Cohen initially won a $700,000 award against the Star Tribune of Minneapolis and the Saint Paul Pioneer Press, formerly known as the St. Paul Pioneer Press Dispatch.

A state appeals court knocked down the award to $200,000 but Cohen's victory was overturned by the Minnesota Supreme Court.

The controversy stemmed from a report during the 1982 Minnesota political campaign that Marlene Johnson, a Democratic Farm Labor candidate for lieutenant governor, once had been arrested and charged with shoplifting $6 worth of sewing material.

Cohen, who was associated with the campaign of Wheelock Whitney, the Independent-Republican candidate for governor, provided the information on the condition he not be identified as the source.

Reporters for the two newspapers gave that assurance, but their editors ordered Cohen's name be published because, they said, the public should be told the information came from someone linked to Whitney's campaign.

The same day he was named as the source in the newspaper articles about Johnson's arrest, Cohen was fired from his advertising agency job.

"Minnesota law simply requires those making promises to keep them," White wrote today. Rejecting arguments that the news media should not be subject to laws that restrict their right to report truthful information, White added, "The First Amendment does not grant the press such limitless protection."

Elliott Rothenberg, Cohen's lawyer, called it "a landmark constitutional decision."

"This is one of the most important first amendment media cases in years," he said. "I think it's very important that the Supreme Court recognized that newspapers and other media organizations are subject to liability for breaking their promises and breaking their agreements like any other individual and business in society. They have no First Amendment right to make a voluntary agreement and then injure a private person by breaking that agreement."

John French, an attorney for both newspapers, had no immediate comment. "I've got to read this and talk to my client," he said.

News organizations contend the confidentiality of the reporter-source relationship is entitled to constitutional protection, but said decisions to breach the confidentiality are constitutionally protected as well.

The high court in 1972 ruled that the First Amendment's free-press protection does not shield reporters from having to divulge confidential information when subpoenaed.

But since that ruling, an informal reporters' privilege has evolved to shield them from having to testify unless attempts to get the information elsewhere are exhausted.

A group of news organizations submitted a "friend-of-the-court" brief supporting the Minnesota newspapers.

The brief argued that confidentiality agreements between reporters and their news sources are not legally enforceable because they typically do not involve a "meeting of the minds."

Sununu shrugs off criticism, says he won't step down as chief of staff

By RITA BEAMISH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Sununu, shrugging off criticism of his travel habits as "all part of the process," vowed today to stay on as President Bush's chief of staff at least until the start of a second Bush term.

Bush backed his embattled aide for the second day in a row.

"Yeah, I'm going to support him," the president told reporters.

Sununu's assertion that he would remain on the job were his first comments since new travel restrictions were slapped on him by the White House over the weekend.

Sununu told reporters he was not concerned about mounting criticism of his travel habits. "Look, I've been in Washington for awhile now to realize that it's all part of the process, it's part of being chief of staff," he said.

Still, Sununu added in jest: "I don't have any travel plans now."

Asked if he thought he would stay in the post through Bush's first term, which ends January 1993, Sununu said: "I intend to get the president's agenda done and help him get re-elected and finish up after his second term begins."

The president gave a thumbs up and answered "yes" on Sunday when asked if Sununu would keep his job.

Again today, Bush voiced his support for Sununu in a short exchange with reporters after an event in the Rose Garden.

The White House imposed new travel restrictions on the chief of staff over the weekend after Sununu allegedly misrepresented the circumstances surrounding his use of a corporate jet to attend a Republican event in Chicago two weeks ago.

Sununu also issued an uncharacteristically contrite statement expressing regret for errors he said he made in arranging trips.

However, Sununu did not express any regrets today in brief comments with reporters in Arlington, Va., where he gave a speech to a business group.

"I think I made my statement on Saturday," Sununu said today. "I think it speaks for itself."

Sununu spoke with reporters before and after he delivered a speech to the Privatization Council, a non-profit group dedicated to supporting private efforts to take over government services.

Sununu, who arrived at the event in a black chauffeur-driven limousine, did not refer to the controversy during the speech itself.

Jack Kemp, secretary of housing and urban development, voiced support for the chief of staff. "The president gave him the thumbs-up sign yesterday which I was glad to see," said Kemp, who also addressed the organization.

Asked if Sununu had become a liability, Kemp said: "Not in my view."

Kemp did joke: "This is my own car. I drove all the way in from Bethesda."

Bush was asked about Sununu upon his return from a weekend at Camp David, Md., on Sunday. He flashed a thumbs-up gesture and said, "Yes," when reporters called out to him, "Is Sununu staying?" and "Will you keep Sununu?"

He has kept silent on new disclosures that Sununu had furnished incorrect information to the White House legal counsel regarding his travel on a corporate jet and had solicited use of the plane in violation of the counsel's guidelines that he not do so.

Instead Bush left it Friday night to the counsel, C. Boyden Gray, to clamp yet another set of restrictions on Sununu's travel.

Administration officials say there is no sign the president will seek Sununu's resignation.

But Newsweek magazine reported in this week's issue that Bush was livid over the matter and was keeping his options open — hoping that if Sununu's ouster is inevitable it can at least be delayed until the furor dies down.

Arms makers' ads draw on Persian Gulf War's hi-tech success

(AP Laserphoto)

Defense contractors are shouting the success of their high-tech weapons in Operation Desert Storm through a postwar advertising blitz, as shown in these two ads.

By ROBERT BURNS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The guns of the Persian Gulf War have gone silent, but the companies that supplied them haven't.

Defense contractors are shouting the successes of their high-tech weapons in a postwar advertising blitz, and the themes are remarkably similar: our tools of war did so well in the gulf, surely you'll want to buy our new, improved versions.

"Now this star of Desert Storm is ready to dish it out in even bigger doses," McDonnell Douglas Corp. boasts in an ad for its F-16, an attack plane that the Navy and Marine Corps used to pound ground targets in Kuwait and Iraq. The company is producing a new, advanced version with longer range and more firepower.

"Mission Accomplished," trumpets a Litton ad that ticks off eight ways in which its products helped win the war. It says 80 percent of U.S. combat aircraft had Litton-built inertial navigation and radar warning systems — "which contributed to the lowest aircraft combat attrition rates of any major conflict."

"Battle Proven," declares a double-page ad for Westinghouse Corp. radars.

Operation Desert Storm, the U.S.-led offensive that crushed Iraq's occupying army in Kuwait, was a live laboratory for many high-technology weapons. So with Western defense budgets shrinking, it's not surprise that arms manufacturers are trying to bask in the glow of Gulf War victory and win new sales.

McDonnell Douglas, the nation's biggest defense contractor, is running a six-page special ad section in Jane's Defense Weekly and other specialized publications titled, "Allied Forces and McDonnell Douglas: The Winning Edge."

The ad quotes the financial weekly Barron's as saying the first month of the war was "basically McDonnell Douglas vs. Iraq."

Some of the postwar ads say it was the skill and courage of the allied soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines — not just their weapons — that carried the day against Iraq. But the stars of the ads are machines, not men and women.

Above the heading, "Riders of the Storm," an LTV Aerospace and Defense ad features three of its jeep-like Humvees rolling across the desert under a fading sun.

Drawing on the enormous publicity given to Iraqi Scud missile shoot-downs by the U.S. Army Patriot missile, Raytheon Co., maker of the Patriot, has a double-page ad that says "literally overnight the world suddenly became aware of the Patriot."

The ad is dominated by a photograph in which two thin, orange streaks in the black sky, seen from afar, are heading toward two glowing orange balls — Patriots to the rescue against incoming Scud warheads.

In a switch from the Cold War days, when arms makers' ads typically featured their tanks, missiles and aircraft in a northern European setting of cool, dark forests, the new background of choice is dusty desert under a simmering sun.

"Storm Warning," declares a United Industrial Corp. ad featuring a Pioneer drone aircraft skimming over desolate sand dunes.

Oshkosh Truck Corp. depicts its eight-wheel Army resupply truck rambling across the desert with a load of artillery rockets, leaving in the dust a caravan of camels. "The New Ship of the Desert," the ad reads.

American weapons manufacturers are not alone in striking the Desert Storm theme.

A double-page ad for tactical missiles made by the French company Aerospatiale features infantrymen sprawled on a rocky desert with antitank guns. It is titled: "Our Weapons Are Pinpoint Accurate. Just Ask Heroes of the Storm."

Minor accidents

The following accidents were reported by Pampa Police Department during the 72-hour period ending at 7 a.m. today.

SATURDAY, June 22

Unknown time — A vehicle went across the raised median in the 300 block of North Somerville and ran over two trees owned by the city of Pampa. Damage to the trees was estimated at $350.

3:10 a.m. — A 1991 Ford Pampa police vehicle, driven by Pampa Police Officer Allan Louis Smith, 41, Pampa, collided with a parked, unoccupied 1974 GMC pickup, owned by Wayne Topper, 845 E. Kingsmill, in the 800 block of East Kingsmill.

According to the police report, Smith was responding to a prowler call and was westbound on Kingsmill when he looked away. When he looked back, he was too close to the pickup to avoid the collision, according to the report. Citations are pending while the accident is under investigation. Smith was treated and released at Coronado Hospital.

2:40 p.m. — A 1986 Ford, driven by Darrel Eugene Adkins, 39, 1217 Mary Ellen, collided with a 1982 Ford pickup, driven by David Paul Budd, 22, 1508 W. Buckler, at Hobart and Randy Matson Avenue. Budd's vehicle was pushed into a 1984 Chrysler, driven by Kenneth Richard Imgarten, 62, 1017 S. Banks. Adkins was cited for following too closely. Budd and a passenger in his vehicle, Leslie Budd, 19, of the same address, were transported to Coronado Hospital by AMT Paramedic Service. They were treated and released.

Rockefeller reviewing presidential bid decision

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Jay Rockefeller says he believes in "getting things done, making things work" and he will decide in mid-August whether that includes running for president.

The West Virginia Democrat touched on his presidential aspirations in an interview Sunday on NBC-TV's Meet the Press program in which he pushed his proposal for universal health insurance coverage.

"I haven't gotten there yet as to whether I'll be a presidential candidate," he said. "It's a difficult decision. I'll make it in mid-August. That I've sort of set as a deadline for myself."

If he does run, he made it clear that health care would be one of his big issues.

"I tend to want to make things work," he said. "That's my nature. That's what I think leadership is all about. You take health care, for example."

Pampa city commissioners to consider bids on three delinquent tax properties

Pampa city commissioners are to meet in regular session Tuesday, June 25, at 6 p.m. in the City Commission Room, third floor of City Hall.

Agenda items for the meeting include consideration of bids on three delinquent tax properties at 700 N. Zimmers, 717 Octavius, and 709 N. Zimmers; approval of May disbursements; and consider final reading of an ordinance providing for a Gray County commissioner to be an ex-officio member of the Lovett Library board of directors. Commissioners also plan to meet

Rockefeller claimed he has "literally forced ... physicians and hospitals, insurance companies, labor, big business, small business and the government to the table" to forge the legislation he has proposed.

"It's on the table there waiting to be picked up by the president, by the Congress," he said. "I think it probably will be."

But others said prospects for action on health care legislation in this session of Congress are slim.

"Everyone recognizes nothing is going to happen in this area until at least next calendar year," Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., said on Cable News Network's Newsmaker Sunday.

Chafee said Republicans will outline a proposal of their own, countering Rockefeller's bill and several other Democratic measures, before the August congressional recess.

Dr. Sidney Wolfe, director of

Ralph Nader's Public Citizen Health Research Group, said neither the Republican nor Democratic proposals would pass but national health insurance would be enacted "before too long; four or five years."

Rockefeller, however, said that if action is not taken quickly the costs of health care will spiral out of control.

He said that on this and other issues President Bush has "turned his back on the future" and "raised unfairness to an art form."

"The average cost of the health benefit plan, for the average employee in this country today, is $3,200," he said. "If you go along Reagan-Bush style and do absolutely nothing, that same average cost, by the year 2000 ... will be $22,000 per employee."

Rockefeller said that if a plan such as his, which utilizes private health insurance companies, isn't adopted, the country will be forced to adopt a national health insurance program similar to Canada's, which he said would cost $325 billion.

"I'm trying to preserve the system we have, protect the taxpayers from having to pay that kind of a tab, which they surely will if we don't act now," he said.

When asked what message he brings as a potential presidential candidate, Rockefeller said, "I very definitely have a message, and it's getting things done, making things work."

"When you're a governor, and you have a prison break, for example, you can't go out and give a speech. You've got to do something about it," the former West Virginia governor said.

Lefors ISD school board to meet at 7 p.m. today

LEFORS — Lefors Independent School District Board of Trustees is scheduled to meet in special session tonight to discuss several items.

Discussion will include whether to have kindergarten for a full-day, as it is currently held, or a half-day. The school board is looking at ways to save money and the kindergarten program cut is one possible way.

The board will also discuss gym floor repairs and the hiring of professional personnel, for which an executive session has been scheduled.

The meeting, set to begin at 7 p.m. in the elementary school library, is open to the public.

LOCAL FORECAST

Tonight, isolated evening thunderstorms, otherwise mostly clear with a low in the mid 60s. The chance of rain is less than 20 percent. Tuesday, sunny and hot with a high in the upper 90s and southerly winds 10-20 mph. Sunday's high was 85; the overnight low was 67.

REGIONAL FORECAST

West Texas — Mostly fair tonight and sunny and hot most sections Tuesday. Highs Tuesday mainly in the 90s except from around 100 to 110 Big Bend. Lows tonight mainly in the 60s except near 80 Big Bend.

North Texas — Partly cloudy with widely scattered thunderstorms tonight. Lows tonight in the 70s. Partly cloudy with widely scattered thunderstorms in the east Tuesday, mostly sunny in the west and central. Highs in low 90s to near 100.

South Texas — Partly cloudy through Tuesday. Widely scattered mainly afternoon and evening showers or thunderstorms southeast and south central Texas. Highs Tuesday in the 90s, 100 to 105 Rio Grande plains. Lows tonight in the 70s, low 80s immediate coast.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Wednesday through Friday

West Texas — Panhandle, South Plains, Permian Basin: Partly cloudy. Highs in mid to upper 90s. Lows in upper 60s to low 70s. Concho-Pecos Valleys: Partly cloudy. Highs in upper 90s. Lows in mid 70s. Far West, Big Bend: Sunny days and fair nights. Highs near 100. Lows in upper 60s.

North Texas — West: Partly cloudy, warm and humid with a slight chance of afternoon and evening thunderstorms. Lows in mid to upper 70s. Highs in mid and upper 90s. Central: Partly cloudy, warm and humid with a slight chance of afternoon and evening thunderstorms and a better chance Friday. Lows in mid to upper 70s. Highs in mid to upper 90s. East: Partly cloudy, warm and humid with a slight chance of mainly afternoon and evening thunderstorms Wednesday and a better chance Thursday and Friday. Lows in mid to upper 70s. Highs in low to mid 90s.

South Texas — Hill Country and South Central: Widely scattered afternoon or evening showers or thunderstorms Thursday and Friday. Otherwise, partly cloudy with warm nights and hot afternoons. Lows in the 70s. Highs in the 90s. Coastal Bend: Isolated daytime showers or thunderstorms. Otherwise, partly cloudy with warm nights and hot afternoons. Lows in the 70s except near 80 coast. Highs from near 90 coast to the 90s inland. Lower Rio Grande Valley and Plains: Isolated daytime showers or thunderstorms. Otherwise, partly cloudy with warm nights and hot afternoons. Lows in the 70s, near 80 coast. Highs in the 90s except near 90 coast to near 100 inland. Southeast Texas and Upper Coast: Scattered mainly daytime showers or thunderstorms. Otherwise, partly cloudy with warm nights and hot afternoons. Lows in the 70s. Highs in the 90s, in the 80s along the coast.

BORDER STATES

Oklahoma — Partly cloudy tonight with widely scattered thunderstorms. Sunny and warmer Tuesday. Lows tonight 66 to 73. Highs Tuesday low 90s southeast to upper 90s west.

New Mexico — Mostly sunny days with fair skies at night through Tuesday. Isolated evening thunderstorms northeast and along the Texas border. Continued warm to hot afternoons with highs mid 90s to low 100s central and south, 80s elsewhere except some 70s northern mountains. Lows 50s and 60s lower elevations, 40s and 50s mountains except few 30s high mountain valleys.

State maintaining 600-plus separate bank accounts for funds

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writers

AUSTIN (AP) — State legislators, scrambling to save money and make government more efficient in the face of a $4.7 billion deficit, may try to untangle a hodgepodge of 600-plus separate state bank accounts.

Created by the Legislature and Texas Constitution, the funds range from the obvious to the overlapping to the outdated, officials say.

They include everything from the main state checking account, the General Revenue Fund, to a still-operating Confederate Pension Fund.

According to comptroller's office records, 651 different state funds were on the books as of April 1, 1991.

Of those, 538 were active and 113 inactive, said Andy Welch, director of tax information for Comptroller John Sharp. Sixty-two are part of the Constitution; the rest are creatures of the Legislature.

Why so many?
"If a legislator has a special bill that he wants to take care of something in his district, he can dictate a special fund (be established) and the comptroller's office has no option," said George Tamayo, manager of fund accounting for the comptroller.

"We don't like to create new funds."
Many accounts date back to more prosperous times and oil-fueled budget surpluses.

"As the state's economy has grown over the decades, coupled with the fact that our present Constitution was written in the Reconstruction era of the 1800s, we have accumulated quite a mishmash of operating funds," Welch said.

"As part of the larger picture of how government can operate more efficiently, it would undoubtedly be a wise decision to consolidate some of these funds. I wouldn't be surprised to see that take place," he said.

Examples of the scores of specialized funds include: The Abandoned Motor Vehicle Trust Account; All-Terrain Vehicle Safety Fund; Available Lunatic Asylum Fund; Bee Disease Control Fund; Brush Control Fund; the Circus, Carnival and Zoo Licensing Fund; Confiscated Liquor Fund; Fire Alarm and Detection Systems Trust Fund; Fish Farm Fund; Motorcycle Education Fund; Texas-Israel Semi-Arid Fund; and the Varner-Hogg State Park Account.

Each was created to handle monies for specific programs. But over time, some have become outmoded and others appear superfluous. Some that might seem to belong in one agency actually are administered by others.

Combining some funds and eliminating others could be among recommendations that a special team of auditors will make for consideration in the Legislature's budget-writing special session that begins July 8.

"I don't want to say it's like a garage sale, but you tend to accumulate things. Every now and then you want to look at it with a very critical eye," Tamayo said.

"Funds being a symptom of government in general; they tend to accumulate and get larger and larger," he said.

The Fish Farm Fund, for example, was created by lawmakers in 1989. Under the Texas Department of Agriculture, it takes in fees received from fish farmer and fish farm vehicle licenses. The money pays for the state program promoting commercial fish farming.

It is one of at least two dozen state funds related to agriculture and rural Texas. But many of those aren't administered by the agriculture department.

The Agricultural Trust Fund, for example, belongs to the Water Development Board.

The Feed Control Fund — which dates to 1905, administers the Pure Feed Law and provides for experiments in animal and poultry nutrition — is handled by the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

The Farm and Ranch Loan Security Fund is administered by the Agriculture Department, but the Farm and Ranch Finance Program Fund is run by the General Land Office.

Examiners; and the Farm to Market Road Fund, which belongs to the State Highway Department.

Tamayo said some funds might appear to be similar but have specific instructions from lawmakers that don't duplicate other government functions.

However, he added, "The evolution over the years can muddy the issue up. That is one thing the performance review team (auditing all state agencies) is looking at: There are a lot of funds. They have proliferated over the years."

And there's that Confederate Pension Fund, a constitutional account created in 1924 — 59 years after the Civil War ended.

According to the official Manual of Accounts, money in the fund comes from general revenues to pay "pensions for services in the Confederate Army and Navy, frontier organizations, and the Militia of the State of Texas, and for the widows of soldiers serving in such organizations."

The last Confederate veteran is long dead. Tamayo said the last Confederate widow died in 1979.

Today, the fund provides $80-a-month pensions to one retired Texas Ranger and 22 widows of lawmen whose service with the Rangers ended before 1947, when Rangers were included in the regular state retirement system, Tamayo said.

In 1990, the fund paid out $22,600 of the $30,000 given it by the Legislature.

Operation Yellow Ribbon

(AP Laserphoto)

Like placing Lady Liberty atop the State Capitol, the job of wrapping the dome with 320 feet of yellow ribbon and hoisting a 400-pound bow into place took longer than planned. Delayed by weather on Saturday, crews began at 7 a.m. Sunday draping the huge sail-like ribbon. However, as the crane was rented, the bow had to go up before the crews left for the day, leaving a half-wrapped dome. The work is expected to be completed today.

INS wants to crack down on illegal alien documents

By JENNIFER DIXON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Immigration and Naturalization Service wants to crack down on people who make phony documents available to illegal aliens seeking work.

So the INS plans to start issuing civil fines of up to $5,000 against anyone caught trafficking the bogus records.

The widespread availability of fraudulent documents has been blamed for undermining a 1986 law against the hiring of undocumented workers and for driving a surge in illegal immigration across the Southwest border after three years of decline.

Rep. Lamar Smith, R-Texas, who tacked the little-publicized civil penalties into a 1990 immigration law, said more than half of illegal aliens who have jobs used fraudulent documents to obtain work.

The 1986 Immigration Reform and Control Act made it illegal for employers to knowingly hire an undocumented worker, but aliens and employers have skirted sanctions with phony identification papers.

"It's not just a sieve, it's a gaping hole in law enforcement today," Smith said. "Individuals who are not supposed to be ... employed in this country, are able to be employed through the use of illegal documents. And if we don't stop the use of illegal documents, we're not going to stop the employment of illegal aliens."

The document fraud provisions were included in the 1990 Immigration Act by Smith and Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., during a House-Senate conference just before final congressional passage last fall.

The bill's provisions make it unlawful for anyone to make phony documents to violate immigration laws; to use, possess or knowingly receive the phony documents; or to use someone else's lawful documents. The scope of law applies to phony documents designed to circumvent employer sanctions and other areas of immigration law, including visa applications or legalization.

The fines would apply to anyone who uses, makes or knowingly accepts phony drivers' licenses, Social Security cards and other forms of identification. The fines range from $250 to $2,000 per document on the first offense, and from $2,000 to $5,000 on the second violation.

A staff member on the Senate immigration subcommittee says criminal penalties already exist for such violations. But because U.S. attorneys are busy prosecuting violent criminals and drug traffickers, "a lot of document fraud is going unprosecuted."

The INS can use the proceeds from the new fines to improve immigration enforcement activities, including the investigation of criminal aliens or the construction of physical barriers on the Mexican border.

The new law allows the INS to seek the civil fines before administrative law judges.

"It's a more certain avenue of enforcement," the staffer said.

The INS recently proposed regulations to implement the law and will begin enforcing the fines after the final regulations are issued, probably by late summer, said spokesman Duke Austin.

Dan Stein, executive director of the Federation for American Immigration Reform, said the fines have the potential of raising $4 million to $5 million in the first year, "if the INS wants to use the tool aggressively."

But he said he wasn't sure the agency has the chutzpah to actually move forward.

Quarrels more likely to result in violence

DALLAS (AP) — Society's shorter fuses are making this a long year for Texas homicide detectives investigating a record number of killings in the state's largest cities.

And bystanders are in more danger than ever, said San Antonio homicide Lt. Albert Ortiz.

"People are dying for frivolous reasons — walking across the wrong lawn or accidentally bumping into someone during a pool game," Ortiz said.

"People have to realize the days of getting into a fistfight for fun are over. If you get into a shouting match with someone now, you have to assume they're carrying a gun," Ortiz told The Dallas Morning News in Sunday's editions.

Texas had a bloody year in 1990 with 2,399 homicides, an 18.2 percent jump from 1989. The increase is largely blamed on deadlier days in Houston, Dallas and San Antonio.

Homicide, say police, has become a growth industry in Texas. San Antonio, with 218 homicides, and Dallas, with 447, registered all-time records in 1990. In Houston, there were 617 homicides, making 1990 the deadliest year since 1982.

San Antonio, Dallas and Houston, composing about a quarter of the state's population, accounted for more than half of the state's homicides last year.

And this year is quickly getting worse.

Before the weekend, Dallas had recorded 232 homicides, nearly 30 percent more than at this time last year. San Antonio's 102 homicides this year are about 20 percent higher than last year's. Houston's homicide count, 272, is about five percent higher than at this time a year ago.

An ominous sign is that the homicide rate is likely to rise even faster during the weeks in late summer when killings traditionally escalate, police said.

"We haven't seen the surge in homicides that we usually see in the summer months yet," Houston police Lt. Greg Neely told the Houston Chronicle.

In San Antonio, this year is the first time the homicide count has reached 100 before July Fourth.

"It's going to be a long, hot summer," Ortiz, the San Antonio homicide detective, said.

During one particularly bloody weekend, San Antonio recorded eight homicides in a 54-hour period from June 7-10, not including yet another slaying that occurred just outside the city limits in Bexar County.

The deadly escalation of violence is a troubling concern for newly elected San Antonio Mayor Nelson Wolff. In the wake of the deadly weekend in early June, Wolff publicly pleaded with citizens to "cool it."

San Antonio has responded to the violence by adding a six-officer police anti-gang unit and five new homicide detectives. The city also expanded swimming and library summer programs and launched a Police Athletic League program to provide city youth a recreational outlet.

With more than 70 percent of the 1991 homicides occurring in the pockets of poverty on the city's east and west sides, San Antonio leaders have beefed up police patrols in housing projects. Public housing officials have proposed measures to ban guns and public consumption of alcohol.

Police spokesmen in San Antonio, Dallas and Houston stress that illegal drugs play a role in 30 percent of urban homicides, making drugs the single most identifiable factor.

In San Antonio, prison gangs have begun to show a daily influence as well, Ortiz said, with 36 of 1990's 218 homicides related to activities of the Mexican Mafia, a gang originating from within the Texas prison system.

Houston, too, has been affected by an increasing number of prison parolees in the city. Several recent murders — including one of a woman shot to death at a stop light — have been attributed to parolees.

In a three-week period from May 23-June 13, more than 1,000 inmates were paroled to Harris County. Of that, 688 of the inmates were convicted of crimes elsewhere, The Houston Post reported.

Court to consider lengthier prison terms for juveniles

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today agreed to consider allowing lengthier prison terms for some juvenile offenders who violate federal laws.

The court said it will hear a Bush administration appeal seeking a longer sentence for a minor convicted of involuntary manslaughter in a fatal drunken-driving accident on an Indian reservation in Minnesota.

The minor, identified as RLC, was 16 when the car he was driving smashed into the rear-end of a car on the Red Lake Indian Reservation in Minnesota.

LaTasha Lynn Mountain, a passenger in the second car, was thrown into the front seat. She died from head injuries.

RLC was convicted in federal court of involuntary manslaughter for drunken and reckless driving that caused a death.

At the urging of federal prosecutors, the judge sentenced RLC to three years in prison at the Missouri River Adolescent Center in Chamberlain, S.D. The penalty is the maximum allowed for that crime under federal law.

But the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals overturned the sentence, and a judge then reduced it to 18 months in prison. RLC completed the sentence in March and was released.

The 8th Circuit court said that if RLC had been an adult, the maximum term he could have received would have been 21 months under federal sentencing guidelines that took effect in 1987.

The appeals court noted that the guidelines take into account the individual's criminal history. It said a three-year term for involuntary manslaughter only would be allowed if the adult had an extensive criminal record or the crime was particularly egregious.

Bush administration lawyers said the maximum penalty should be the one defined by law for the particular crime, not the guidelines.

The maximum term is the one

"authorized by the law describing the offense of conviction, not the top of the presumptive sentencing range defined" by the new guidelines, Justice Department lawyers said.

The 8th Circuit court said the government's interpretation would violate the intent of the sentencing guidelines to reduce disparities.

"Congress did not intend juvenile delinquents ordinarily to be subject to penalties harsher than those received by adults convicted of the same offense," the appeals court said.

The government's interpretation would be particularly unfair to juveniles, the appeals court said, because it could result in longer terms without the possibility of parole. The sentencing guidelines are intended to promote uniformity by eliminating parole.

Juggler-comedian to headline comedy show at Knight Lites

Juggler-comedian Robert York will return Tuesday to Pampa to entertain at another Comedy Night at Knight Lites, 618 W. Foster.

The show begins at 9 p.m. with comedian Alan Little as the opening act. Reservations are required and may be made by calling 665-6482.

Blending juggling — as many as seven items at one time — with comic adlibbing, York has performed at many colleges and convention shows in Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Missouri, Arkansas and Louisiana.

Critics have called his show "amusing and skillful" and noted that he is "almost as adept at clever adlibbing as he is at juggling."

Based at Tulsa, Okla., York performed at the University of Tulsa's Madrigal Dinner twice and at the university's Springfest and served as master of ceremonies at the Student Comedy Night.

York was Comedy Night emcee at Kansas State University in Manhattan, Kan., and has also performed at such universities and colleges as Oklahoma State University at Stillwater, Our Lady of the Lake University at San Antonio, Texas A&I University at Kingsville, Texas Lutheran College at Seguin, St. Edward's University at Austin, University of Arkansas at Fayetteville, Northwest Louisiana University at Natchitoches and University of Southwest Louisiana at Lafayette.

Convention shows have included performances for the Missouri and Oklahoma Retail Grocers, Oklahoma State Medical Association, STS, Chevrolet New Car Preview, Sun Oil, Getty Oil, National Indian Health Services, National Education Commission, Midwest Printers Association, American Association of Petroleum Geologists, International Conference of Ichthyologists and Herpetologists, and the Regional Convention of Association Executives.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP 'O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

It all just adds up to school failure

If the United States is ever to compete in the high-tech world economy, the American children will need to learn math. Alas, the U.S. Department of Education recently gave American schools a mediocre "C" grade for their teaching of mathematics. Students scored only 261 out of a possible 350 score, or 75 percent.

The states are not "cutting it," warned Education Secretary Lamar Alexander. The survey results are "an alarm bell that ought to ring all night." State legislators in Texas have cried for improvements in public school education for the past several years. Yet the legislators themselves are one of the main obstacles to improvement. In recent battles over the state budget, they have opposed cuts in the state's bloated schools budget, preferring tax increases instead, and placing the blame on court-mandated charges to make financing more equitable. But as many over-taxed parents are finding out, the problem with schools is not a lack of tax money, but the misallocation of the money in the system. Many private schools spend, per student, about half what the public schools spend, but they achieve much better results. How? They have few high-salaried administrators, better discipline and clearer goals.

Public schools in other states provide evidence of what works. The four states garnering the highest math scores were North Dakota, Montana, Iowa and Nebraska. Their systems are largely rural, with small school districts and strong parental control (perhaps the state education officials in Austin ought to heed that). And Minnesota, which came in at the No. 5 position, boasts a plan allowing parents to choose which school their children attend.

By contrast, Texas' public schools are more and more largely run from Austin, with a vast bureaucracy becoming more in charge with every year. Local school board elections, even in supposedly conservative counties, are electing trustees who think they have to bow to the powers in Austin. Some legislators, and even a few education officials, support a parental choice system for Texas, but they haven't pushed it hard enough. And any system most education officials might devise would preserve their own bureaucracies.

How can we help Texas school children excel in math, English, foreign languages, science, history, etc.? Let us count the ways:

1. Allow parents to choose the schools children attend.
2. Grant tax credits for tuition at private or parochial schools.
3. Abolish the state schools bureaucracy.
4. Involve the best people in the particular fields. As things now stand, a Nobel Prize physicist cannot pitch in, teaching math part time, without first taking a year of pointless and humiliating "education" courses. A choice system would allow these top people to teach and inspire the young directly. Many accountants, business leaders, scientists, writers and historians would be happy to teach one course a semester.

We can give our children an education second to none — if we choose to do so.

Why can't he leave us alone?

WASHINGTON — It seems to be taken for granted that a massive turnout of voters on election day is a good thing, a wholesome thing, an altogether splendid thing. Registering to vote is seen as a civic virtue. I view these assumptions as piffle. Therefore I rise to oppose Sen. Wendell Ford's bill to fix national requirements for voter registration.

The senator's bill (S.250) came out of the Rules Committee the other day on a largely party-line vote with all the Democrats in favor and all the Republicans, except for Mark Hatfield of Oregon, strongly opposed. The Republicans have the better case.

They advance four reasons for killing the bill. It tramples upon sound traditions of federalism. It carries a substantial potential for fraud. The bill would impose unwarranted costs upon the states and localities. Finally, there is no evidence that its provisions would in any way improve the quality of governance in the United States.

The bill would require every state to institute a uniform system of "motor-voter" registration. Every one who applied for a driver's license thereby would be registered as a voter unless the applicant specifically declined to complete a registration form. The bill also would require every state to accept a system of mail registration to be designed by the Federal Election Commission. Thirdly, the bill would require the states to make voter registration forms available at public offices, notably at local offices of public welfare.

The purpose of these procedures, as the committee report makes clear, is "to promote" the exercise of our right to vote. But why, it may be asked, should the right to vote be specially "promoted"?

James J. Kilpatrick

The government does not "promote" the exercise of free speech. Neither does it "promote" the right to free exercise of religion. Congress surely does not "promote" the right to keep and bear arms. Just as certainly as the right to speak embraces a right not to speak, so a right to vote embraces a right not to vote. Why won't Senator Ford just leave us alone?

The doctrine of federalism is the doctrine that views the states as laboratories of political experiment. No feature of our system is of greater value. The important point here is that the states are indeed experimenting with ways to enhance voter registration.

Michigan pioneered motor-voter registration in 1975. Ohio came along in 1977. Seventeen states and the District of Columbia now have some form of motor-voting in operation. Idaho, New Mexico and West Virginia will join the list this summer. Montana's new procedure becomes effective in October.

Procedures vary slightly in each of these jurisdictions, which is precisely the way it ought to be. The states must be permitted to tinker, to try this, to discard that, to see what works most efficiently. To impose a single uniform system before these experiments have been well-tested is to engage in folly.

The states individually also are experimenting with mail registration, with registration through satellite agencies, and with registration on election day. The notion that the Federal Election Commission possesses greater wisdom than the 50 states is a tough notion to swallow.

In the view of the Department of Justice, the uniform systems that would be imposed under Ford's bill would invite fraudulent registration. Ford denies this but the senator was born in Kentucky and he was not born yesterday. He knows the ingenious practices that distinguish voting in some of his mountain counties. Parts of Illinois are still more notorious, but no state is immune from the graveyard vote.

The Senate committee heard testimony from state witnesses that the costs of implementing a national system would be far greater than the $14 million projected by FEC Chairman John Warren McGarry. Illinois alone estimated its annual costs at $30 million, New Jersey and California at $20 million.

And all for what? The Congressional Research Service looked at the experience of 10 states that have tried motor-voting registration. As a percentage of voting age population, the turnout actually decreased in seven of the 10 after motor-voting became an available alternative. Only North Carolina, Ohio and Vermont reported increases.

This is puny evidence. It cannot justify a new federal program that would undercut a responsibility the states historically have borne. Go away, Wendell Ford! Let the voters be as apathetic or as contented as they want to be.

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Monday, June 24, the 175th day of 1991. There are 190 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On June 24, 1948, Communist forces cut off all land and water routes between West Germany and West Berlin, prompting the United States to organize a massive airlift of supplies into the city's western sector to counter the blockade.

On this date:
In 1314, the forces of Scotland's King Robert I defeated the English in the Battle of Bannockburn.

In 1497, the first recorded discovery of North America by a European took place as explorer John Cabot, on a voyage for England, sighted land, probably in present-day Canada.

In 1509, Henry VIII was crowned king of England.

In 1647, Margaret Brent, a niece of Lord Baltimore, was ejected from the Maryland Assembly after demanding a place and vote in that governing body.

In 1793, the first republican constitution in France was adopted.

In 1908, the 22nd and 24th president of the United States, Grover Cleveland, died in Princeton, N.J., at the age of 71.

More time out in Old West

SUPERSTITION MOUNTAINS, Arizona — Western movies are reverting to authenticity. Hopefully, Nashville will.

An 1850s cowboy might have traded his hat for something as precious as two fish hooks.

That characteristic bandanna or neckerchief for a modern rhinestone cowboy is decoration, nothing more.

But for old hermit Elijah Reavis, who first found his way to this spring-fed pasture in the sky, that wild rag was a sling for a busted arm when need be.

A tourniquet when a snake bit.
On scorching days soak it in the stream to air-condition your hat.

Over your nose it'll filter dust.
Use it to strain stream water.
To bandage a cut or hold a splint.
To blindfold a skittish horse.
To swab a gun barrel.
Or to tie your hair with or blow your nose on.
The neckerchief is a bib for eating and can be a diaper, too.
It'll dry dishes and rinse the salt sweat from your horse.

Paul Harvey

A tenderfoot learns fast that the wild rag will help shift a hot kettle on the campfire.

It'll wrap a trail lunch or, from a tree branch at night, hang edibles out of the way of the varmints.

For there are those in the Superstitions — mountain lions eight feet tip to tail.

Only the wily javalina has found a lion-safe hiding place inside and under a bush of Spanish thorn.

Deer — muley and white tail — are everywhere along the trail and streamside at eventide.

We took hot rocks from alongside the campfire, wrapped them in the neckerchief and stuffed them in the foot of the bedroll.

And crawled in.
Tomorrow morning there will be hot coffee in a black iron kettle and frying things and enough target shooting to let us make friends with our six-guns.

We shot nothing living, but there are more than enough crazy hermit prospectors left in the Superstitions, each of whom thinks he's nearing the dig of the Lost Dutchman. Also, on a steep trail, a Mojave rattler can spook the most disciplined mount, and it would be a long walk back to what the world calls civilization.

But that is tomorrow.
Tonight the full moon hangs high but cannot obscure a star-filled sky.

The stream is singing a lullaby.
Tethered horses are nickering.
The glowing coals of the campfire.
The breeze in the high branches.

Snug in my bedroll with my wadded jacket for a pillow, filled with good food, poetry and cowboy prayer — I postpone sleep for as long as I can.

Not for long.
But for a treasured interim, I'm back there with old hermit Eli Reavis, who went to sleep here and woke up in heaven and felt right at home.

What are the nation's 'real' issues?

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

One of the favorite complaints of Democratic propagandists is that the Republicans prefer to engage in demagoguery rather than confront the "real issues" facing the nation.

Anthony Lewis is only the latest to sound this theme. He recently told readers of The New York Times that George Bush "won in a landslide in 1988 by inventing such 'issues' as the Pledge of Allegiance and Willie Horton. The real problems facing the country were ignored." And E.J. Dionne Jr., in his recent book Why Americans Hate Politics, makes precisely the same complaint.

I credit the liberals (who for this purpose amount to the Democrats) with perfect sincerity on this one. They think it's as plain as a pike staff that "the real problems facing the country" are those being paraded before the public by Teddy Kennedy and other defenders of the liberal faith on Capitol Hill: health insurance for all, reversal of Supreme Court decisions in the field of civil rights, etc.

The idea that the case of Willie Horton might resonate deeply among millions of Americans — and not merely as the story of a black rapist, but as a symbol of a vast problem demanding immediate national attention — simply doesn't cross their minds. The thought that many Americans believe that recitation of the Pledge of Allegiance can serve a profoundly important purpose in a child's education would strike them as downright laughable if it occurred to them at all.

No; George Bush, in allowing his 1988 campaign to focus on such matters, simply had to be (so liberals sincerely believe) deliberately ducking the "real" issues.

Having credited the liberals with sincerity, however, I am in no hurry to disabuse them. They just don't know what is really bugging the American people these days, and as long as they don't they are unlikely to install one of their number in the Oval Office, which is fine with me.

Probably the biggest single problem on the American people's minds is crime: why there is so much of it and what can be done to reduce it. Of that problem, Willie Horton was the near-perfect symbol for a candidate running for president against Michael Dukakis. Horton, if you recall, was a convicted murderer under sentence of life imprisonment without possibility of parole. Under a policy firmly endorsed by Gov. Dukakis, however, Horton was free on his 10th "furlough" from prison when he raped a Maryland woman and brutalized her husband. Yet Dukakis wouldn't even see the couple when they came to Boston to protest.

Nothing there but racism? (Horton is black.) On the contrary, Massachusetts' treatment of Horton perfectly illustrates the indulgent liberal attitude toward criminals. How could a person like Dukakis, holding that view, be expected to lead a nation the overwhelming majority of whose citizens are coldly furious at such an attitude?

Behind and beneath the burgeoning crime statistics, however, most Americans believe that there is a more fundamental problem. They are convinced that a nation must command the respect of its citizens, and they believe that many of America's problems today are traceable to the fact that it no longer does: that contempt for this country and its ideals has replaced, in many minds, ordinary patriotism and civic pride, with devastating results.

They know very well that respect must be earned, but they believe that in America's case it has been, and they consider daily recital of the Pledge of Allegiance a fine way of keeping that essential respect well-honed in young minds.

A candidate who agrees with the voters on such key points is miles ahead of a rival who disagrees, but who offers expansive proposals for national health insurance and hidden job quotas.

Great and small rest in national cemeteries

By DONALD SMITH
National Geographic
For AP Newsfeatures

ARLINGTON, Va. — Moving with somber grace, eight soldiers in dress-blue uniforms ease a casket from a shiny black hearse.

With small, precise steps, they proceed to the grave site, where mourners, including an ashen-faced mother and father, are assembled.

A lone bugler stands a short distance away, almost unnoticed among the headstones, waiting to deliver his requiem.

Family and friends are gathered to bury Army Pfc. Robert L. Daugherty Jr., 20, of Hollywood, Fla., a Bradley fighting-vehicle mechanic with the 1st Infantry Division. He died in an accidental explosion in Iraq during the closing days of the Persian Gulf war.

Daugherty's is not the only funeral this bright, windy day at Arlington National Cemetery. Less than 50 yards away, a firing party bids its final farewell to an airman with a 21-gun salute.

Farther toward the Potomac River, an honor guard brings the cremated remains of a retired two-star Army general to their final place. A formation of jet fighters roars overhead in the "missing man" formation.

The three funerals are among the average of 15 conducted every weekday at Arlington.

National cemeteries have been in the news more than usual lately. But war deaths are a small minority of burials here.

This year alone, an estimated 63,000 people — more than the casualties from eight years of war in Vietnam — will be buried in the more than 100 national cemeteries, many of them in obscure places around the country.

Among them will be a few important government officials who were veterans, as well as a lot more ordinary Americans who served in the armed forces, or their dependents.

Arlington recently received the body of former Sen. John Sherman Cooper, a Kentucky Republican who had enlisted in World War II as a private at age 41.

Within a few steps of Cooper's grave are headstones that signal the egalitarian nature of national cemeteries. Here is Army Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, hero of World War II and later U.S. ambassador to Vietnam. A short distance away lie actor Lee Marvin and boxing great Joe Louis.

Surrounding them are more than 200,000 men and women whose names mean little except to those they left behind.

Except for Civil War dead, a minority of those occupying national cemeteries died while serving their country, and still fewer died in combat. And because of the small number of Persian Gulf casualties, burials of combat fatalities remain rare.

Far more numerous are burials of veterans, especially with the advancing age of the nearly 9 million who still survive from World War II. A soldier who was 18 years old in 1941 would be 68 this year.

Anyone who ever served in the armed forces and was discharged in conditions other than dishonorable is entitled, along with his or her dependents, to a grave in a national cemetery.

By the end of last year, 1.8 million people had been buried in 113 national cemeteries administered by the Department of Veterans Affairs in 38 states and Puerto Rico. The Army runs Arlington.

The Interior Department operates seven others, including the Civil War cemeteries at Sharpsburg, Md.; Vicksburg, Miss.; and Gettysburg, Pa.; and the Custer Battlefield National Monument in Montana.

In addition, 124,912 American dead lie in 24 permanent military burial grounds in foreign countries. They include World War I sites like Flanders Field in Belgium and Meuse-Argonne in France, whose 130.5 acres hold 14,246 Americans — the largest concentration of U.S. military dead in Europe. Among the largest overseas cemeteries from World War II is the one at Omaha Beach on the Normandy Coast of France.

National cemeteries originated during the Civil War. In 1861, President Lincoln ordered commanding officers to take responsibility for burying those who died while serving under them. The following year Congress made Lincoln's order the law of the land, establishing the cemetery system.

In the Daugherty ceremony at Arlington, the final words of the chaplain are nearly drowned out by the thunder of a dark-green UH60 Blackhawk helicopter taking off and landing from a Pentagon helipad a short distance away.

Seven riflemen fire three volleys into the air, and the bugler plays taps. A soldier presents a folded flag from the casket to Daugherty's father, who clutches it to him, shoulders bent.

Theresa Daugherty stands by her brother's casket for a moment and then slowly walks away, leaving behind her last gift: a single yellow rose.

If you are angry, there is something you should read

DEAR READERS: Over the years, I have written booklets on how to write letters for all occasions, how to have a lovely wedding, what every teen should know, how to be popular, and two booklets filled with favorite family recipes. But I completely overlooked one of the most important subjects of all — the anger in all of us and how to deal with it.

Anger is a normal emotion. We have all experienced anger in varying degrees. My mail bears abundant testimony to that fact. I receive letters from angry children, angry parents, angry spouses, angry lovers, angry neighbors, angry pet lovers — the list is endless.

Many people express their anger physically — at the expense of another. Others swallow their anger and have chronic indigestion or ulcers to show for it.

I discussed the subject of anger with my longtime friend and consultant, Dr. Judd Marmor, eminent psychoanalyst and past president of the American Psychiatric Association, and with his expert guidance, another booklet, "The Anger in All of Us and How to Deal With It," emerged.

Written in plain, everyday language, it's easy to read and easy to understand. Some comments from those who have read it:

"I can see myself in that booklet."

"I wish I had read it years ago."

"I want my children to read it." To order "The Anger in All of Us and How to Deal With It," send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby Anger Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

DEAR ABBY: Maybe you can help me with this. I called the Immigration and Naturalization office and couldn't get an answer to my question.

I am a white American female. My husband is Chinese, born in Vietnam. He has a permanent resident visa.

My question: What nationality does that make our children? Someone told me that they are white American, but to me that means that they are ignoring their Oriental heritage.

My daughter says she is half-Chinese and half-American. Please straighten this out, as we never know how to fill out the forms when this question is asked.

PUZZLED IN FLORIDA

DEAR PUZZLED: Your daughter's nationality is American because she is a natural-born citizen of the United States of America. As for the racial issue: She is half-Oriental and half-Caucasian (or white).

DEAR ABBY: I am writing in response to "Stuck in a Small Town," the teen-age guy who married his girlfriend because she was pregnant, only to find out later that the baby wasn't his.

I have a similar story to tell. "Jimmy" and I were seniors in high school. We went steady off and on for four years, and yes, I got pregnant. I had also been seeing a guy I'll call Stan for about three months, and Jimmy knew it.

I told both guys I was pregnant, and Stan said: "I will marry you, but after the baby comes, we are taking blood tests, and if the baby isn't mine, you are going to have to give me a divorce."

Jimmy said: "I love you and I want to marry you. I don't need a blood test because I don't care who the baby's father is. I will raise the baby as my own, either way."

Well, Jimmy and I were married the week after graduation, and our son is 2 years old now. Jimmy knows now that the baby isn't his because he looks just like the other guy, but that doesn't stop him from loving him.

I'm not recommending sex in high school. It's a big mistake, but I happen to be one of the lucky ones.

Preparing and packing food safely for outings

Summertime is a great time for picnics and outdoor cooking, but is also a peak time for food-borne illness. Food-borne illness is a big problem during hot, hazy days because bacteria thrive in temperatures above 60 degrees. More than 25 million cases of food poisoning are reported each year. Such illnesses can be prevented by taking proper precautions when food is prepared, stored, or transported.

Here are some tips for preparing and packing food safely for outings:

(1) Keep everything that touches food clean. Stop and wash utensils, bowls and countertops — everything that touches food — between working on each dish. To avoid cross-contamination, never handle raw foods and cooked foods together. When eating outdoors, using disposables is a good idea.

(2) Use a fork, not your hands to mix meat, macaroni, egg, tuna, or green salad. Your hands continually pick up germs that get into fingernails and skin creases. Only vigorous washing with hot, soapy water prepares hands to safely deal with food.

(3) Cook meat, poultry and seafood thoroughly to kill bacteria.

(4) Refrigerate foods prepared the night before. Store perishables — meat, poultry, or fish sandwiches, hard-boiled eggs — in the refrigerator until time to leave on your picnic.

(5) Give the ice chest a good washing. Use baking soda to eliminate odors.

(6) Use an ice chest to keep foods cold while traveling to the picnic area. Don't pack the chest too full; use enough ice to maintain a temperature of 40 degrees or below. Use shallow containers so food will stay chilled throughout. Keep the cooler in the shade, never in a hot car.

Homemakers' News

(7) If bags are used to pack food, use only new, clean ones. Bags that have been used to carry groceries can pass insects or bacteria to foods. Wet or stained bags carry germs.

When planning the menu, remember some foods are safer to take along than others. Certain "red flag" foods that need special care are moist, protein-containing foods such as dairy products, meats, eggs, poultry, and seafood. Fried chicken and hard-boiled or deviled eggs are two foods that pick up bacteria easily. Cream pies and custards also may be difficult to transport safely.

For outings, carry only what you plan on eating. Leftovers can be tricky. Eat as soon as possible upon arrival and never leave food out for more than two hours.

To prevent food-borne illness at the grill, follow these tips:

(1) If meat or seafood is frozen, allow plenty of time for thawing in the refrigerator at 40 degrees or below. Never thaw meat on the kitchen counter or at room temperature. Outer layers of the meat may reach a temperature that promotes bacteria growth before the inner layers are thawed.

(2) If you marinate the food, do it in the refrigerator. Do not use leftover marinade as sauce on the cooked meat. Marinade may have picked up bacteria from the raw meat that could contaminate the cooked meat.

(3) Be sure to wash with soapy water and sanitize cutting boards used with raw meats. Use different cutting boards for meats than for raw fruits or vegetables.

(4) Once the meat has been placed on the Grill, wash dirty dishes or utensils before using them again. Bacteria on dirty utensils can contaminate cooked meat. Cooking kills bacteria, but foods can be recontaminated.

(5) Always wash your hands after working with raw meat or poultry. Handle raw foods and cooked foods separately. Use clean dish towels or pot holders for handling cooked foods.

(6) Cook meats thoroughly to kill bacteria. If you like steak rare or medium-rare, remember that all bacteria may not have been killed if the food is not cooked thoroughly.

(7) After cooking, eat as soon as possible and refrigerate any leftovers.

For additional food safety information or answers to specific food safety questions, call USDA's Meat and Poultry Hotline at 1-800-535-4555. It is operated from 10:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. Eastern Time.

Selecting appliances which earn their keep

By KITCHEN AND BATH IDEAS
For AP Newsfeatures

Selecting the appropriate appliances for that remodeling project is no easy task. Today's appliances are available in an ever-increasing selection of types, sizes and styles — with price tags as far-ranging as the features, reports Better Homes and Gardens Kitchen and Bath Ideas magazine.

Once appliance selections are made, consumers will probably have to live with their decisions for a decade or more — whether or not they're happy with their purchases. These shopping tips will help consumers make choices they can live with well into the 21st century:

— Money matters. It's best to establish a realistic budget first. This step alone simplifies purchase decisions and can help folks sort out features that are really necessary.

— Check it out — at the library — first. Study consumer publications that give brand-name ratings, features available, and prices. Before going shopping, take notes and narrow choices to a few brands and models.

— Evaluate durability and serviceability. The quality of the basic components is more important than the number of novelty options. The power output of a microwave oven, the number of spraying arms in a dishwasher, and the capacity of a refrigerator-freezer are crucial to the appliance's value and dependability.

— Make sure it fits. When shopping for appliances, be sure to have a detailed list of the exact measurements allotted for each appliance. Remember the appliance will be in the kitchen for years, so consider any potential changes in family size, lifestyle, and kitchen design when making capacity decisions.

— Price plus consumption equals cost. The true cost of an appliance should be evaluated by both the sticker price and its energy consumption. Energy Guide labels — a bright yellow tag required on all refrigerators, freezers, and dishwashers — give an estimated yearly cost of operation based on a national average energy rate. The labels also share the highest and lowest estimated yearly costs of operation for similar models.

— Shop for the best buys. Don't assume that an appliance warehouse has the biggest bargains. It's true that they buy directly from the manufacturer, but it is also common for a group of smaller dealers to pool resources to buy bigger volumes at discounted rates from the factory, too.

— Consider the value of a warranty along with the price. Ask about the extent of the warranty: Which parts are covered? Does the warranty include labor? Will the warranty be honored by another dealer?

— Check on installation requirements. An icemaker on a refrigerator, for example, requires a water line. A downdraft fan on a cooktop eliminates the need for overhead ventilation; the vent pipe, however, requires outdoor access.

— Find out what is included in the price. If an appliance requires professional installation, ask if it's included in the purchase price.

English tradition holds true as weather aces Wimbledon start

By ROB GLOSTER
AP Sports Writer

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Fans huddled under umbrellas and players killed time in the cafeteria as Wimbledon got off to a soggy start today.

A steady rainfall wrought havoc with the opening day of a tournament at which miserable weather is as much a tradition as strawberries and cream.

"I'm disgusted with this rain," said Kenneth Jenkins of Woodstock, Vt. "We are tennis nuts and we came here to watch Wimbledon, and look what the weather has done to us."

In a strange scene that seemed eerily appropriate on a miserable day, a funeral cortege led by a solitary bagpiper passed along the rain-swept street outside Wimbledon at 7:30 a.m. EDT — the hour at which play had been scheduled to begin.

Three hours later, the rain had slowed but play had not yet begun. Twelve matches originally set to begin late in the day had already been postponed.

"It's pretty tough, but you expect it when you come here," said Aaron Krickstein, who was scheduled to play Stefano Pescosolido. "I don't really mind sitting around for a couple of days, but if it rains until Thursday it's going to be pretty hard to handle."

There have been 25 days completely washed out by rain since the grass-court tournament began in 1877, but only eight since World War I. The last total rainout was on opening day in 1987.

The abysmal weather was expected to affect play for several days, with the London Weather Center forecasting heavy rain Tuesday morning and periods of showers through at least Thursday.

The rain temporarily put on hold the quest by several players for some impressive achievements:

- Martina Navratilova is one victory away from her 100th Wimbledon singles triumph and one behind Chris Evert's record of 157 tournament titles overall.

- Jimmy Connors will become the first man to play 100 singles matches at Wimbledon if he reaches the second round.

- Boris Becker is seeking his fourth title and his sixth spot in the final in seven years.

(AP Laserphoto)

Hopeful tennis buffs sit under their umbrellas watching one of the tennis courts being covered today.

And there are some less impressive goals:

- Ivan Lendl will be making his annual bid for a first Wimbledon title.

- Andre Agassi, who plays Canadian Grant Connell in the first round, is seeking his first victory at the grass-court tournament.

- Navratilova, who won her record ninth singles title last year, enters the tournament after championships at grass-court events in Birmingham and Eastbourne, that gave her 156 career titles.

"I feel happy, the game is there, the desire is there and so is the experience and my mind," said Navratilova, seeded third this year behind Steffi Graf and Gabriela Sabatini. "I think it's going to be very exciting."

Graf, the only other former champion in the women's field, moved to top seed when Monica Seles dropped out Friday with an injury. She will be seeking her third Wimbledon title.

The men's field is full of former champions — Connors (1974, 1982), Becker (1985, 1986, 1989), John McEnroe (1981, 1983, 1984) Pat Cash (1987) and defending champion Stefan Edberg, who also won in 1988.

Connors, who has a first-round match against Veli Paloheimo of Finland, is twice as old as ninth seed Michael Chang — who at 19 years and four months is the youngest man in the field.

Agassi, playing at Wimbledon for the first time since a first-round loss in 1987, lost in the French Open final to Jim Courier and said he then suffered from tonsillitis and bronchitis.

"This is a tough task for me, and I may be flattering myself to think I can pull this off and perform well," he said. "This year I'm stronger and I think I'm more capable of meeting the challenge."

The tournament lost another player today before a single ball had been hit. Mats Wilander of Sweden pulled out because of a knee injury and was replaced by Martin Laurendeau of Canada.

But all the former champions and would-be champions may be undermined by the weather, which featured heavy rain and chilly temperatures on Sunday.

A forecaster at the London Weather Center said periods of rain were expected to plague Wimbledon through at least Thursday.

The lousy weather also has caused an increase in the price of strawberries and cream for the first time in five years, with a portion of 10 strawberries costing $2.70.

Officials at Town and Country Catering said English strawberries were poor this summer due to the bad weather, forcing them to import the fruit from France and Belgium.

Feds probe grant scam at University of Miami

LAUDERDALE LAKES, Fla. (AP) — A former University of Miami athletic official said he did nothing wrong by faking federal financial-aid forms for students who might not have otherwise been able to afford college.

"There's no question that to the government's way, to everyone else's way, what I did was wrong," said Tony Russell. "But in my heart, no one can tell me what I did was wrong. I did what I had to do to get kids where they wanted to go."

But Russell said he's glad he was caught because he didn't like that he began charging kickbacks in the past two years to support a cocaine habit.

"The first 10 years ... I believe in what I did," Russell told reporters Saturday at his home. "I helped a lot of kids. I have no problem with that. But these last two years, I didn't even like myself because I was taking the money."

Russell, who was an associated academic coordinator at Miami for two years before being fired in May, said he charged $85 to Miami students, mostly football players, to falsify aid forms. He said he did it for about 40 Miami students.

But he admits to faking as many as 60 applications a year for at least 12 years, meaning hundreds of students from around the country may have received money for which they were not qualified.

"I don't know how they're going to find them," Russell said. "A lot of the athletes are gone. Some are in the pros."

The FBI and the U.S. Department of Education Inspector General's Office are investigating Russell, who said he acted alone and kept his dealings secret from his superiors at UM.

The NCAA, which was notified by the school about the aid scheme, has said it will wait until the federal government's probe is over to investigate. The NCAA could punish Miami for lack of institutional control, among other things.

"This will be the largest thing the NCAA has ever seen," Russell said.

Sam Jankovich, Miami's athletic director from 1983 until leaving last December to become the New England Patriots' chief operating officer, said in a statement issued Saturday: "It's hard for me to believe this kind of thing could happen, given the structure of the financial aid system."

Russell said he used the federally funded Pell Grant, designed to help needy students, to get the students between $250 to $2,400 per year.

Although his job description did not entail handling financial aid, Russell said faking the forms was easy and no one ever questioned him about it. If the student's parents were at home and working, he would report they were separated and use one income to qualify the student.

"Sometimes it was one parent ... and the income was a little high. I may have shaved it a little bit," he said.

Before coming to UM, Russell was with the athletic departments at West Virginia State and Kentucky State, and before that was a prep coach known for helping students advance to college. He said only at Kentucky State was he not involved in financial-aid applications.

Russell, 43, was fired on May 28, a few weeks after being arrested in Fort Lauderdale on charges of cocaine possession.

Delahoussaye joins '100-million' club

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Eddie Delahoussaye has gained admission to an elite jockey club. Only winners of $100 million or more in purses need apply.

Delahoussaye became only the seventh member of that club Sunday when he rode Fowda to a nose victory in the $161,900 Hollywood Oaks at Hollywood Park.

"It's an honor to be just the seventh rider to ever do it," said Delahoussaye. "I'm glad to be part of it."

The 39-year-old rider joins Bill Shoemaker, Laffit Pincay, Angel Cordero, Jorge Velasquez, Chris McCarron and Pat Day as winners of $100 million or more.

The milestone comes at what may be the end of Delahoussaye's career, although he said he hasn't made up his mind yet about retiring.

"I said five years ago I'd ride until I'm 40, and I'm almost there," he said. "So, I'll wait and see what happens when I hit 40. If I feel good, I'll continue riding, and the way it looks right now, I'll continue riding."

Sunday's victory, worth $94,400, pushed Delahoussaye's earnings to $100,068,183 for his 22-year riding career. He has twice won the Kentucky Derby, with Gato del Sol in 1982 and Sunny's Halo the following year. In 1988, he won the Preakness and Belmont Stakes on Risen Star and has won the Hollywood Gold Cup three times.

He has 4,615 victories, 4,108 seconds and 3,830 thirds in his career. Two weekends ago in New York, he rode Festin to victory in the $500,000 Nassau County Handicap at Belmont Park. He piloted Roanoke to a win in the $310,600 Californian at Hollywood Park last Sunday.

Aboard Fowda, Delahoussaye went to the lead, then surrendered it before winning a stretch duel with Grand Girlfriend.

Favored at even money, Fowda responded to Delahoussaye's whip in the final strides to edge Grand Girlfriend, with Chris McCarron. Masake, under Martin Pedroza, finished third in the field of seven 3-year-old fillies going 1 1/8 miles.

Fowda won in 1:48 3/5, more than two seconds off the stakes record.

She returned $4, $2.80 and $2.10. Grand Girlfriend paid $4.20 and $2.60, and Masake $3.

Fowda, winner only of a maiden race and second in each of her other two starts, had earned just $41,800 before winning the Hollywood Oaks. The filly had never raced further than seven furlongs.

"She's a gutsy filly," Delahoussaye said. "She's honest and it's a thrill to ride one like her. I was surprised she hung on that good. Lundy and his crew have done a heck of a job with her."

The filly, trained by Richard Lundy, is a Kentucky-bred half-sister of the 3-year-old gelding Dinard, who won the Santa Anita Derby and was favored for this year's Kentucky Derby before being injured. Both were sired by Strawberry Road.

Each of the sophomores carried 121 pounds over the fast track.

Elsewhere Sunday, Nice Serve, $28.80, raced to a half-length victory over Super-Fan in the $113,600 Locust Grove Stakes at Churchill Downs; Queena, $3.80, edged Missy's Mirage by a nose in the $91,800 Vagrancy Handicap at Belmont; Bunka Bunka, $10, defeated Up Sail by 3 1/2 lengths in the $34,500 feature at Longacres; Gilded Youth, $21.60, posted a 2 1/4-length victory over Smart Alec in the $18,000 The Guy Purse at Pimlico; Slide Out Front, $21.80, defeated Runaway Fair Lady by 3 1/2 lengths in the $35,000 Lorelei Stakes at Louisiana Downs; Mr. Importance, $3, posted a 1 1/2-length victory over Three D. Boy in the $26,000 Big Bobcat Handicap at Arlington; and Archie's Laughter, $13.20, edged Bold Circle by a length in the $22,300 Americana Prep Handicap at Calder.

On Saturday, Whadjathink, $9, raced to a five-length victory over Freezing Dock in the $300,000 Arlington Classic at Arlington; Diablo, $14, defeated Sunny Blossom by 2 1/4 lengths in the $116,200 True North Handicap at Belmont; Wind Splitter, $3.80, defeated Reputed Testimony by a length in the $50,000 Broad Brush Handicap at Pimlico; Blissful Union, $8.80, posted a half-length victory over Fapany in the $40,000 Ribbon Stakes at Louisiana Downs; and Scottish Ice, $28.20, beat Chihuahua by 3 3/4 lengths in the $55,750 Hollywood Handicap at Calder.

Hulbert wins Busch Classic in playoff

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Mike Hulbert didn't let the pressure of a playoff at the Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic get to him for one simple reason: He wasn't even aware he was in it.

"I didn't know if I had won or lost. I really didn't," Hulbert said of his bogey on the 72nd hole of regulation that forced Sunday's playoff with Kenny Knox.

Knox, who was standing in the 18th fairway at Kingsmill Golf Club when Hulbert missed his par putt, was well aware of what was happening.

"When I saw Hubby make bogey, I really thought I was going to make par and win the tournament," he said.

Instead, Knox also bogeyed the 438-yard finishing hole, then did the same thing on the first playoff hole.

All Hulbert needed was a routine par for his third career victory.

It was his fourth Top 10 finish of the year, and the $180,000 winner's check boosted his 1991 earnings to $386,514.

"I've been playing well the last two months," Hulbert said. "It wasn't any flash in the pan. You never know when you're going to win, and you never know if you're going to win, but things just fell into place."

Hulbert and Knox both closed with 3-under-par 68s to wind up at 18-under 266, tying the tournament record Lanny Wadkins set last year.

Fuzzy Zoeller had a chance to also get in the playoff, but he missed a 3-foot par putt on the 18th.

His 65 left him at 267, where he was joined by Ian Baker-Finch, who had a closing 69.

Dan Pohl, who began the final round at 17-under, two shots ahead of Hulbert, Knox and three other players, faded to 77 for a 273 total.

It still was the best showing of the year for Pohl, who missed the entire 1990 season after undergoing major back surgery.

Pohl was one of several leaders who faltered in the final round, which was interrupted by a 2-hour, 20-minute rain delay and was completed as darkness descended on the rolling layout along the James River.

Knox, Hulbert and the late-charging Zoeller seemed to have less trouble in the wind, rain and poor visibility.

Zoeller had four back-nine birdies before taking himself out of it with the 18th-hole bogey.

Hulbert had two birdies and an eagle on the front nine, then reeled off eight consecutive pars after making the turn.

Knox carded six birdies, including three in a row at one stretch. Except for the 18th hole, his only problem was on the 396-yard 11th, where he missed the green on his approach, then three-putted from 12 feet for a double-bogey 6.

"I gave myself a chance to win the tournament. It just didn't happen," Knox said.

Knox, who was in the last group, said he would have preferred to have gotten a few minutes to collect his thoughts before the playoff.

Instead, with the light dwindling, both players were rushed to No. 16, a 427-yard dogleg right.

Amy Cockrell places in national rodeo

BOZEMAN, Mont. — Pampa's Amy Cockrell, representing Eastern New Mexico Junior College, placed seventh nationally in barrel racing at the College Rodeo Finals held last week.

Cockrell finished seventh with a 15.15-second score in the second go-round Thursday night, and advanced to Saturday's top-ten finals.

The barrel-racing star rounded the cans in 14.99 to win the Saturday final go-round and finish seventh nationally.

Bird recovering as planned

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The days are long and boring, but the pain that tormented him last summer is absent as Larry Bird recuperates from back surgery.

"Everything is going according to plan," Bird said Sunday at a news conference prior to Larry's Game, his annual benefit basketball game to raise scholarship funds for needy Indiana college students.

Bird, who normally spends his summers in his home state playing golf and basketball, is mainly limiting his athletic activity to walking these days.

"About seven miles a day. In a couple of weeks I'll pick it up," he said.

The sutures from his June 7 back surgery were removed last Tuesday and Bird isn't sure when he'll be able to play basketball again. He is leaving the decision up to the Boston Celtics and his doctors.

"It's going to be a long summer. I wish it was October now because I'm tired of sitting around," Bird said.

He has been in a swimming pool, however.

"Not swimming, just getting in the water and flopping around," said Bird, who plans to spend about three weeks in Indiana before returning to Boston for an examination.

"It's a pretty tough trip going back and forth, so you try to cut them down as much as possible," Bird said of trips between Boston and Indiana. "I sit on the plane. It really was no problem, but that two-hour drive home (to French Lick), I had to lay down there and had to lay down coming here. It's not that easy traveling around."

Bird served as an assistant coach for the White team in Sunday's fourth annual version of Larry's Game.

But, he and Indiana Pacers coach Bob Hill mainly served as spectators while the two all-star squad teams treated the crowd to an exhibition featuring little defense, frequent spectacular dunks and a 3-point shooting contest.

Williams signs

Pampa's Quincy Williams, District 1-4A's most valuable player, will attend Seward County Junior College in Liberal, Kan., on a baseball scholarship. Williams posted an 8-2 mound record in pitching the Harvesters to the district championship this season. He also batted .315 and hit four home runs.

Toronto's Carter wields hottest stick in majors

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

When baseball's biggest trade in years was made last winter, it was announced as a deal involving four all-stars — Fred McGriff and Tony Fernandez from Toronto to San Diego for Roberto Alomar and Joe Carter.

There was only one thing wrong. Carter, despite averaging 29 home runs and 109 RBIs for five seasons, had never been an all-star.

That, though, is likely to change next month when Carter's team, the Toronto Blue Jays, plays host to the game at the SkyDome.

Carter, the hottest hitter in the majors, connected for his major league-leading 17th home run and tied two team records Sunday as the Blue Jays beat Cleveland 3-1 for their fourth straight victory.

American League

In other games, New York stopped Minnesota 11-2, Oakland defeated Boston 4-2, Chicago rallied past Texas 6-5 in 10 innings, Milwaukee downed Seattle 5-2, Baltimore swept two extra-inning games from Kansas City, 11-8 in 10 and 9-8 in 12, and Detroit needed 10 innings to beat California 4-3.

Carter's solo shot in the first inning enabled him to match George Bell's mark for home runs in a month (11) and most home runs in four consecutive games (five).

"The records don't mean a thing," Carter said. "The bottom line is winning, and I'll give up the personal stats for a win anytime."

Carter, batting .312 with 20 doubles and 50 RBIs, has helped put the Blue Jays in first place in the American League East, one game ahead of Boston.

Carter homered off Tom Candiotti, who tried to surprise his former teammate with a fastball, rather than a knuckleball.

"I wasn't going to let a fastball get by me," Carter said. "He probably would have taunted me for years if I did. If he'd thrown a curve or a knuckleball, he probably would have struck me out."

Carter later doubled and Maquel Lee hit a sacrifice fly in the sixth inning that put Toronto ahead 2-1.

Bob McDonald (2-1) pitched 2 1/3 hitless innings for his first major league victory and Tom Henke worked the ninth to stay perfect in 11 save chances.

Candiotti (7-6) lost his fourth straight decision. The Indians have lost four in a row and 15 of the last 18.

"The last four games I've lost I've been throwing pretty well," Candiotti said. "If I'd won maybe two, I'd be happy. But to lose four, I'm about as frustrated as you can get."

"We're not a good team. We're a bad team and we're playing like it," he said.

Yankees 11, Twins 2

Roberto Kelly went 5-for-5, drove in three runs and stole three bases as New York sent visiting Minnesota to just its second loss in 21 games.

Kelly got his first career five-hit game. He capped a six-run second inning with a two-run homer in the Yankees' highest-scoring game of the season.

Scott Kamieniecki (2-0) won in his second major league appearance and helped stop the Twins' four-game winning streak. He gave up six hits, including Randy Bush's first two home runs of the season, in 7 2/3 innings. No Yankee rookie has won his first three decisions since Mel Stottlemyre in 1964.

Allan Anderson (4-5) lasted only 1 2/3 innings, his shortest outing of the season. The Yankees finished with 16 hits. Athletics 4, Red Sox 2

Bob Welch pitched seven strong innings before Dennis Eckersley relieved for his major league-leading 20th save as Oakland salvaged the finale of a four-game series at Fenway Park.

Dave Henderson, Terry Steinbach and Lance Blankenship hit solo home runs off Danny Darwin (3-4).

Welch (7-4), who shut out Boston two weeks ago, allowed only three hits in seven innings. Tony Pena tripled in the eighth and Ellis Burks homered, bringing Eckersley from the bullpen.

Tigers 4, Angels 3

Mickey Tettleton homered in the bottom of the ninth to force extra innings, and Tony Phillips and Rob Deer drove in the tying and winning runs in the 10th.

Paul Gibson (3-4) won it by getting the final two outs in the top of the inning after California had gone ahead 3-2. The loss went to Jeff Robinson (0-2), the fifth of seven Angels pitchers and one of four that California used in the 10th. It was Joe Grahe who surrendered Deer's bases-loaded single to left through a drawn-in infield.

Left-hander Jim Abbott no-hit the Tigers for 6 2/3 innings before allowing three singles and a run and taking the rest of the night off. Detroit's Frank Tanana allowed only one earned run in seven innings.

Brewers 5, Mariners 2

Teddy Higuera pitched one-hit ball for six innings and Greg Vaughn hit a two-run homer as Milwaukee beat Seattle at home.

Higuera (3-2) won his third straight decision. He struck out three, walked one and allowed only a bunt single by Edgar Martinez in the first inning.

Dan Plesac pitched the ninth for his fourth save. He has not given up a run in 13 games since April 27.

Willie Randolph hit a bases-loaded, two-run single in the fifth inning off Bill Krueger (4-3). Vaughn hit his 13th home run in the seventh off Bill Swift.

White Sox 6, Rangers 5

Relief ace Bobby Thigpen of Chicago and Jeff Russell of Texas each faltered as the White Sox won in the 10th at Comiskey Park.

Kevin Reimer hit a two-run single in the top of the 10th off Thigpen (4-2). But Chicago bounced back against Russell (1-1) when Frank Thomas led off with a single and Craig Grebeck walked.

A groundout moved the runners into scoring position, Lance Johnson hit a sacrifice fly and pinch-hitter Warren Newson singled home the tying run. Carlton Fisk followed with a fly ball that left fielder Juan Gonzalez lost in the sun for a ground-rule double, and Newson scored the winning run on Russell's wild pitch.

Orioles 11, Royals 8

Joe Orsulak singled home Cal Ripken in the 12th inning to give Baltimore a victory in the nightcap. The Orioles tied the opener on Chris Hoiles' grand slam in the ninth and won it in the 10th on homers by Tim Lulett and Brady Anderson.

Ripken, 6-for-11 in the doubleheader to raise his average to .350, drew a lead-off walk from Storm Davis (2-6) in the 12th and went to second on a single by Randy Milligan, who was 4-for-4 after entering the game in the seventh as a pinch-hitter. Orsulak's single scored Ripken and made a winner of Gregg Olson (1-3), who had failed to protect an 8-3 Baltimore lead in the ninth.

Olson fared better in the opener, pitching the 10th for his 12th save. Todd Frohwirth (2-1), the fifth Baltimore pitcher, got the victory.

It was the Orioles' first doubleheader sweep since Sept. 7, 1989, at Texas.

Cubs continue losing streak

By The Associated Press

The Chicago Cubs just keep getting worse.

This time, the Cubs couldn't hold a 1-0 ninth-inning lead. The San Francisco Giants beat Chicago 2-1 Sunday, sending the Cubs to their ninth consecutive loss.

"We're not getting blown out, but it's nine games in a row," Chicago manager Jim Essian said. "It's a devastating streak. You can look back at each loss and pick out a few stakes. We're making a myriad of mistakes."

Chicago's losing streak is the longest in the majors this season and the team's longest since a club-record 13-game slide from June 12-25, 1985.

Willie McGee opened the ninth with a single off Dave Smith (0-4) and scored when Will Clark tripled down the right-field line. Matt Williams and Mark Leonard were walked intentionally to load the bases and Robby Thompson hit a slow roller to shortstop Shawon Dunston, who forced Clark at home plate.

National League

Mike Felder, batting for pitcher Jeff Brantley (1-1), bunted a 1-0 pitch to the right side, but Smith was unable to throw the ball home before Williams slid in safely for the Giants fourth consecutive victory.

"Today, the bullpen screwed up," Smith said. "It's either that or the starting pitching breaks down or we're not hitting. It seems like one facet breaks down every game."

Allison downs Miller 400 field

By MIKE HARRIS
AP Motorsports Writer

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — Speeding toward a record-breaking victory, Davey Allison saw the No. 12 Buick in his rearview mirror and began to grin.

It wasn't the fact that he was ahead of the No. 12 in Sunday's Miller Genuine Draft 400 that made Allison smile, though. It was the memory of a day in February of 1988 when that car was ahead of him at the finish.

"I think everybody knows I ran second to that No. 12 at Daytona a couple of years ago," he said, referring to the day his father Bobby beat him in an emotional and dramatic duel in the Daytona 500.

"That is still the highlight of my career, even though we've won 11 races now," Davey said. "Dad's not in the car any more, but it's nice to see that car finish second."

Sunday's second-place finisher was Hut Stricklin, connected to Allison in just about every way but blood.

Stricklin, who turns 30 today, drives for Bobby Allison, is married to a daughter of Davey's uncle, Donnie Allison, and has been a friend of the 30-year-old Davey's since their childhood in Hueytown, Ala.

"Davey and I were having a blast out there," said Stricklin, whose runner-up finish was the best of his three-year Winston Cup career. "I was joking a couple of weeks ago at Charlotte about Davey and I finishing one-two. It didn't happen that day, but ... now I've got to fly all the way back to Alabama with him and listen to him talk about how good his car ran."

Allison wouldn't be telling any tall tales, either. His Ford Thunderbird was ahead on 107 of the 200 laps on the two-mile, high-banked Michigan International Speedway oval, leading 82 of the last 107 laps and beating Stricklin to the finish by a substantial 11.7 seconds.

"The car drove perfect, like it was on a rail out there, except when I was behind him," Allison said, jabbing his thumb at Stricklin. "The car really drove a lot better out front, so that's where I tried to stay."

Bobby Allison, retired from driving since a near-fatal race crash in June of 1988, was thrilled with his team's best finish since it was formed at the start of the 1990 season.

"We're looking forward to the day when we can get that Buick in front of that darned old Ford with Davey driving it," he said. "But it was a really neat day today."

"Davey has been a lot of pleasure to me along the way, and I've talked to Hut about that. I told him on account of that, I just want him to beat Davey by a little bit — but I do want Hut to beat him."

Donnie Allison, also a former driving star and now crew chief for rookie Stanley Smith — yet another member of the Alabama Gang — said, "Davey's my nephew and I love him. Hut's my son-in-law and I love him, too. I can't pull for one or the other. But, bumper-to-bumper, wheel-to-wheel, I might pull for Hut because he hasn't won yet."

In any case, Sunday's race, slowed by just one early caution flag for four laps, was virtually all Davey Allison as he averaged a track record 160.912 mph, breaking the mark of 157.704 set in August of 1989 by Rusty Wallace.

The sizzling show on the cool, sunny afternoon was viewed by a record MIS crowd estimated at 90,000.

It was Allison's third Winston Cup victory of the season — all of them coming since a non-points win in the Winston, a rich all-star event six weeks ago in Charlotte, N.C. He won $90,650 Sunday, giving him and car owner Robert Yates a total of $642,950 in prize money during that period.

He had won two races each of the previous four years.

"We've been hung up on this thing about winning two races every year," Allison said. "This was our third, so it's real sweet."

Unlike Allison, Stricklin had his hands full at the end, holding off Mark Martin for second place. Dale Earnhardt, the defending champion in this race and the series point leader, finished fourth despite a sick engine, and Ernie Irvan was fifth.

The only yellow flag of the day came out on lap 35 because of several pieces of debris in the second turn. It was the only thing that slowed Allison down Sunday.

Earnhardt, the defending and four-time Winston Cup champion, added 18 points to his lead over Ricky Rudd, who was eighth in the race, and now leads by 138 after 14 of 29 events. Allison remains sixth, trailing Earnhardt by 248 points, but is only 39 behind third-place Darrell Waltrip.

Yugoslavia appears on verge of disintegration as a nation

By ALISON SMALE
Associated Press Writer

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — While other European nations broke down barriers and drew closer, Yugoslavia's divisions have deepened. This week, it may become the first country in post-World War II Europe to disintegrate.

The question for Yugoslavs and the world is: can the country break up peacefully, perhaps even reuniting later in a different form, or will it descend into a maelstrom of ethnic violence?

"We worry, frankly, about history repeating itself," said Secretary of State James A. Baker III after talks with leaders of Yugoslavia's six republics. Ethnic strife in the Balkans led to World War I.

The northern republic of Slovenia and its neighbor, Yugoslavia's second largest republic of Croatia, seem determined to break away, regardless of U.S. and European warnings they will get no diplomatic recognition.

Slovenia has said it will declare independence by Wednesday and Croatia has vowed to take similar steps by June 30. Presidents Franjo Tudjman of Croatia and Milan Kucan of Slovenia met Saturday and pledged to recognize each other's independence and closely cooperate in defense, foreign policy and the economy.

Both have said, however, that are willing to continue talks with other republic leaders on making the Yugoslav federation a loose association of sovereign states.

Presidents Franjo Tudjman of Croatia and Milan Kucan of Slovenia have both threatened to declare independence before the month is out. The two met Saturday and pledged to recognize each other's independence and closely cooperate in defense, foreign policy and the economy.

Yugoslavia is split by history and nationalist politics. With six republics, four official languages, at least 24 ethnic groups and Muslim, Catholic and Orthodox religions, it has been fragile since first formed as the Kingdom of Serbs, Croats and Slovenes in 1918.

An AP news analysis

The Communist federation that emerged after World War II held together because of its strong founder, Josip Broz Tito, and Western support for his defiance of Moscow.

Since he died in 1980, rising nationalism has combined with the democratic wave that swept Communists from power throughout Eastern Europe and the end of the Cold War to undo Tito's state.

The process culminated last year in elections in all six republics. Nationalist leaders with irreconcilable aims came to power in each region, while the lack of nationwide elections weakened federal authority and the army, whose conscripts hail from all ethnic groups.

The divergent interests of the republics' leaders defy foreign warnings to stick together or risk diplomatic isolation and economic ruin.

If the politicians changed their positions now, they would lose power in their republics, where they have fed nationalist dreams and armed people prepared to fight for those dreams.

As law and order disintegrate, weapons are brandished often in public: by a nationalist leader on television, by newly formed regional armies, or at road blockades thrown up at will to pursue local ethnic interests.

The leaders of Slovenia and Croatia, Yugoslavia's two wealthiest republics, cite overwhelming popular votes for independence. They have ignored warnings from the federal government that the army may intervene to stop them.

European Community foreign ministers, meeting in Luxembourg, reiterated Sunday that the EC will not recognize any "unilateral" independence declarations by Slovenia and Croatia.

Slovenia borders Italy, Austria and Hungary, so its independence would alter Yugoslavia's external borders.

Croatia also borders Hungary, but its independence poses greater internal problems: The 600,000 ethnic Serbs on its territory would resist rule by a government they associate with the murderous Croatian Nazi puppet state of World War II.

Fighting between the rival Serbs and Croats, Yugoslavia's two largest ethnic groups, has killed at least 22 people in Croatia since early May, with shooting reported daily.

Many Yugoslav observers shrug off the Slovenian and Croatian plans as symbolic gestures.

Such attitudes have fed Western hopes that the Yugoslav crisis will not come to a head, and encouraged the West to back federal authorities with little say inside the country.

Slobodan Milosevic, Marxist leader of the largest republic of Serbia, was the first to tap nationalist myths with his campaign to reestablish control over Kosovo, an ancient Serbian heartland now dominated by ethnic Albanians.

His hard-line policy led to Western accusations of human rights violations and encouraged Slovenia and Croatia to seek ties to the West and stop financing Kosovo through federal coffers.

They bolstered their independence drives by invoking centuries of difference with the Orthodox Serbs, who lived under Ottoman rule while the Catholic Croats and Slovenes were part of the Austro-Hungarian empire.

The ghosts of history now threaten to overwhelm the present.

"We are trying not to get into this chain of events," said Alija Izetbegovic, president of Bosnia.

Yell 'UFO' or 'ghost' and watch Chip Denman arch an eyebrow

By ROBERT M. ANDREWS
Associated Press Writer

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — If you think you've seen Elvis recently, call Chip Denman immediately for a reality check.

Denman is Mr. Bah Humbug himself. He's president of the National Capital Area Skeptics, a 350-member society of debunkers and naysayers who claim to serve "at the front lines in the battle against gullibility and fraud."

They erupt in rib-poking laughter at rumors that Elvis Presley is still alive. Their eyebrows arch at mention of ghosts, UFO abductions or the wonders of astrology. Bigfoot sightings are dismissed as hokum, New Age mysticism as balderdash.

But Denman, 36, a pony-tailed statistician at the University of Maryland, hastens to squelch any suggestion that his colleagues are mere spoilsports.

"We're not a bunch of old fogies who sit around harrumphing and scoffing," he says. "We try to maintain a high level of good humor and a sense of fun about what we are doing."

The group publishes a quarterly newsletter titled Skeptical Eye and a monthly calendar of events called "Shadow of a Doubt." Members attend a "Seeing is Believing" film series and hear lectures on such topics as "Magic of the Gurus of India" and "Animal Quackers: Pseudoscience for Pets."

Denman and a magician friend staged a Halloween show titled Seance! or Things That Go Bump in the Night, a theatrical spoof of the clairvoyant's tricks of the trade.

For more than a year, the skeptics have offered a $1,000 award to anyone who can demonstrate psychic powers — mind reading, dowsing or levitation, for example — under scientific test conditions.

So far, Denman says, nobody has stepped forward.

'We're not a bunch of old fogies who sit around harrumphing and scoffing. We try to maintain a high level of good humor and a sense of fun about what we are doing.'

Led by Denman, the skeptics banded together four years ago to promote scientific inquiry based on hard evidence, and to combat "irrationality, superstition and just plain nonsense." They include scientists, educators, lawyers, doctors and other white-collar professionals.

"We all share the idea that the scientific process is a good strategy for working in the world and making decisions, no matter whether you are getting medical treatment or buying a used car," Denman says.

"We say, go kick the tires. Don't take the salesman's word for it."

Denman is not only a scientist but has been an amateur magician since childhood, when he was fascinated by his father's card tricks.

"As a scientist, I'm concerned with how things really work," he says. "And as a magician, I have come to appreciate how bright, well-educated, intelligent people can be fooled so easily."

Denman doesn't believe in ghosts. "To believe in apparitions would require a radical change in what we know about modern physics," he says.

Most people have had some "remarkable, compelling, personally spooky experiences" that defy explanation, he says, but mistakenly try to explain them as paranormal events.

"As a scientist, I'd much rather say I don't know what it was," he says.

Denman doesn't rule out the possibility of future contact with intelligent beings from an alien planet.

He finds that prospect much more plausible than speaking with the voice of a long-dead warrior from Atlantis, or willing your body to float in air, or bumping into an older, wiser Elvis somewhere.

"I can say with some degree of certainty that I've never seen Elvis walking around my neighborhood," Denman says. "I'm so skeptical that I can hardly believe it."

Heads of two major brokerage houses step down over stock scandal in Japan

By YURI KAGEYAMA
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — In a widening scandal, the presidents of two huge securities houses announced their resignations today after reports their companies arranged loans for a former organized crime boss and compensated top clients for investment losses.

Largely as a result of the turmoil, prices on the Tokyo Stock Exchange dropped sharply.

Yoshihisa Tabuchi, president of Nomura Securities Co., the world's largest brokerage, and Takuya Iwasaki, president of Nikko Securities Co., announced their resignations at separate news conferences.

However, both will stay on as a vice chairmen of their companies, with vice presidents taking over the top jobs in each house.

Analysts said the scandal could lead to changes in the way Japan's brokerages do business — albeit gradually.

The public outcry over favorable treatment of well-heeled clients "demonstrates that there's a kind of growing consciousness that some of the old rules are no longer acceptable," said Alicia Ogawa, a senior analyst at S.G. Warburg and Co.

"I will not comment on the individual cases, but responsibility should be taken by the president," a tense-looking Tabuchi told reporters. "I take seriously the fact that great distrust about the ... reliability of the securities market was given to the public."

It is not unusual for top Japanese executives to resign to take responsibility when their companies are linked to scandal. Both companies also announced that top executives would not receive their annual bonuses.

Mitsuru Hasegawa, a spokesman for the securities section of the Finance Ministry, said "all aspects" of the Nomura case were under investigation but refused to comment further.

Japanese business leaders and politicians have frequently been criticized as being too cozy, and in the 1989 Recruit Co. scandal the government of Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita was forced to resign after some of its members admitted to accepting underpriced stock in a company subsidiary.

The public anger that followed the bribery revelations shook Japanese politics and the long-governing Liberal Democratic Party but no top political officials were ever charged.

The mass-circulation Asahi Shimbun reported Friday that Nomura and Nikko arranged loans through their subsidiaries worth $258.9 million for Susumu Ishii, ex-leader of the Inagawa-kai underworld syndicate.

Kyodo News Service reported today that the stock exchange was investigating suspected stock manipulation in connection with huge purchases of railroad company stock by Ishii on loans from the subsidiaries.

An exchange official refused to comment.

In response to a question about the reported links to the Inagawa-kai, Tabuchi said, "There was an aspect in which we could not monitor the actual nature of the deal, but after some contact we began to understand the nature."

On Friday, a Nomura spokesman also acknowledged that $119 million paid to customers might be viewed as "compensation" for investment losses. A Nikko official said his company had paid roughly $122.3 million.

Today, Japanese newspapers reported that Nomura compensated a government-affiliated pension corporation for $32 million in bond market losses.

Nomura and Nikko spokesmen have said their companies did not promise to cover customer losses to woo clients.

Buybacks are not considered illegal unless the firms promise in advance to cover client's losses, according to the Finance Ministry.

The other "Big Four" Japanese securities houses — Daiwa Securities Co. and Yamaichi Securities Co. — have been accused by the media of similar buyback deals.

Robert Zielinski, an industry analyst for Jardine Fleming Securities, said that past stock scandals have had little effect on the economy or individual companies.

"My opinion is that there will be very little impact both on the stock market and Nomura Securities," he said. "I don't think people really care."

The 225-issue Nikkei average slid 2.10 percent in thin trading today.

Minnesota town turns back the clock to honor rock 'n' roller Eddie Cochran

By JEFF BAENEN
Associated Press Writer

ALBERT LEA, Minn. (AP) — This small town turned back the clock to pay tribute to its most famous son, rock 'n' roll legend Eddie Cochran.

"We should have honored this man a long time ago," said Dave Olson, president of the Eddie Cochran Historical Organization.

Cochran, whose hits included "Summertime Blues" and "C'mon Everybody," was born in this farming and meatpacking town in southern Minnesota, and moved with his family to California when he was 13. He died at 21 in a car accident in England in 1960.

About 200 people attended a picnic Saturday in the neighborhood where Cochran's boyhood home stood, and a plaque memorializing Cochran was unveiled Sunday.

A Saturday night dance featured a reunion of Cochran's band, the Kelly Four, with his nephew, Bobby Cochran, on guitar.

The late Buddy Holly's group, the Crickets, also performed for the capacity crowd of 1,100 at the National Guard Armory, which had vintage Fords and Chevys parked outside. The Crickets backed Cochran in his last recording session.

The dancehall was decorated with records hanging from the ceiling and photographs of '50s icons such as James Dean and Marilyn Monroe.

A photo of Cochran dressed in leather and strumming his Gretsch guitar, taken at a 1960 London concert, hung above the stage, with a spotlight shining on it. A few dancers sported a '50s look, wearing saddle shoes or cat-eye glasses.

Many participants hoped the festival would revive interest in Cochran, who was inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame in 1987.

"His music the last 30 years has been in limbo ... and now it's coming back," said 17-year-old Warren Anderson.

Cochran's 84-year-old mother, Alice, and other family members traveled from California for the festival.

"I am a very proud mother, I'll tell you that," said Mrs. Cochran, who was the first inductee into the town's Eddie Cochran Walk of Fame.

Residents said the bash gave a boost to the town of about 18,300, which is about 90 miles south of Minneapolis.

"There's people calling here from Canada and England and many of the states," said Jim Malepsy, who helped organize the picnic in Cochran's old neighborhood.

Mayor Marvin Wengen said the city hopes to make the celebration an annual event and establish a permanent display of Cochran memorabilia.
