End O' rodeo for 1991

Adverse conditions Saturday didn't stop several Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association stars from breaking into the Top O' Texas Rodeo final standings.

"You've just got to get down to it and do it," said 1985 and 1990 World Champion Steer Wrestler Scott "Ote" Berry shortly after he turned in a 4.2-second time in Saturday's go-round.

Berry's time, clocked in the muddy arena, was good for second-place money and was one tick off Rick Bradley's winning 4.1-second score taken Thursday before the rains hit the Recreation Park arena.

Bob Logue, seven-time National Finals Rodeo qualifier, swept in with the rain to ride Beutler and Gaylord's "Big Bertha" for a 74-point score Saturday night. The ride gave the 31-year-old, who has career earnings of more than a half-million dollars, a split for second- and third-place money in the finals.

Logue, who is recuperating from major neck injuries, said concern always exists when weather conditions are adverse.

However, after his Saturday ride, Logue said, "Actually, the footing's not real bad out there. It's getting a little worse now after the barrel racing, but during the barebacks it was pretty good."

Concerning his performance, Logue, who came down to Pampa from the Calgary (Canada) Stampede Rodeo said, "It was a good horse and I ended up splitting second and third, so I was pretty happy. "I'm having a pretty good year (ranked 10th in the world in barebacks as of July 8) and if I can finish near my brother (Chuck Logue, 1990 World Champion Bareback Rider), I'll be all right, I think," said Logue. "He's up at Calgary getting all the money."

Berry, 28, is a big man in a big man's event, standing 6-foot-3 and weighing 235 pounds.

He glided off his horse and pounced on the steer yards past the chute Saturday night.

"The conditions aren't near as bad as they look," he explained. "The arena's got a lot of sand in it and it's not near as slick as you'd think it would be."

Berry added, "The horses had good footing and with Beutler's (and Gaylord's) good steers here, the conditions probably aren't as bad as they appear."

Robert Etbauer, 1990 World Champion Saddle Bronc Rider, rode Beutler and Gaylord's "Fortune Hunter" to a 74-point score two days after his 30th birthday in the rain Friday night.

The first-place Friday finish held up to give Etbauer, who is currently battling for the No. 1 position in world standings in the event, top money in the final saddle bronc standings.

Following are the final standings of the Top O' Texas Rodeo held Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Barebacks: 1. Shawn Wright, Weatherford, Okla., 76 points; 2. (tie) Bob Logue, Greeley, Colo. and Randy Slaughter, Belen, N.M., 74; 4. (tie) Tony Hecksher, Snyder and Jeff King, Clarendon, 71.

Announcer forms vital link between riders, spectators

By J. ALAN BRZYS
Staff Writer

"We're having a mudeo tonight," said a smiling Clem McSpadden over the public address system during the Top O' Texas Rodeo's Friday night performance.

The 1986 Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association Announcer of the Year has participated in rodeo more than four decades and continues to be the main link between performers and spectators.

When rain dampened spirits during Friday and Saturday night performances, the ProRodeo Hall of Fame inductee from Chelsea, Okla. brought the crowd to life with witty chatter, interesting anecdotes and a wealth of valuable information from his encyclopedic bank of knowledge.

McSpadden talked with The Pampa News concerning his rodeo career shortly before the Friday night Top O' Texas Rodeo performance.

The News - How did you get started in this line of work?

McSpadden - I was ranch raised and any ranch-raised kid, you know, had idols. My first idols were cowboys.

My dad was an old-time steer roper. I didn't want to play professional football or basketball, I just wanted to be a cowboy.

I roped and bulldogged professionally for several years when I was a kid. I went to my first professional rodeo as a contestant when I was 15 years old in 1941.

Then the service came along and I went into World War II (in the Navy). I was commissioned and later discharged in 1946.

It was the following year, 1947, when an announcer didn't show up at a rodeo we were competing at in Iowa. Somebody convinced the producer of the rodeo that he had a kid (McSpadden) from Oklahoma that could announce, (but) I had never announced. So I announced that rodeo and also won the calf roping. They paid off in cash and I won $381 in calf roping and got $100 -

Clem McSpadden in true form.

$25 per performance -for announcing.

So I had $481 and that was a lot of money in 1947. So I kept competing for another two or three years and announcing some rodeos and I found out I had to make a choice.

In the early '50s I quit competing. I was still a young man then. I emphasized the announcing and I have certainly enjoyed it."

The News - Over the years, how has it changed for you?

McSpadden - I think every sport changes. It's always fun and you're always a little jittery before the first performance.

The News - You!

McSpadden - Oh, you have to be. Announcing is like riding a motorcycle. When you think you've got it mastered, you get bucked off or have a wreck. So I think you have to be a little bit jittery by the first performance. I still enjoy doing it. When it ceases to be fun, I'll quit.

The News - Not soon!

McSpadden - No, no, no, no. Not for a while.

The News - What's best part of rodeo for you... the hardest part?

McSpadden - Hmm, that's kind of a hard question. A rodeo like this isn't that difficult because you have such good personnel. If I would liken myself to a baseball announcer doing a Texas Rangers-Oakland A's game; you've got good personnel, the best in that particular sport.

It's when you go to a small, average rodeo and you don't have the personnel, you don't have the contestants; then you have to think (and) create much more excitement than you normally do. You really have to, as they say in the business, bear down.

And I don't have any favorite events. Bull riding... and barrel racing is easy to sell, but being an old-time-event man, I still like the calf roping and bulldogging a lot.

The News - Is your interplay with the clowns spontaneous?

McSpadden - Ninety percent of it is spontaneous, although we pretty well know the gag lines. You get to know these guys... and their personalities.

I thoroughly enjoy banter with Rick Young. First of all, you can come at him from left field and he'll answer. There aren't very many funny men left in the business. Most of them want to be bullfighters.

Well, that's good. We need bullfighters. Our's is a family-oriented sport and there are a lot of kids in the stands. They want to see something funny.

Rick Young (who performed during the Top O' Texas Rodeo) is one of the three or four funniest clowns I have seen in more than 40 years of announcing rodeo. I wouldn't want to say who is one, two, three or four, but he (Young), Quail Dobbs and the late John Lindsey; these guys come to mind and they are really funny.

As long as Rick Young can walk across an arena, if I were a rodeo producer, I'd hire him.

The News - Who are some of the rodeo people who stand out in your mind?

Board of Criminal Justice names prison after Sheriff Rufe Jordan

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Following recommendations from the Pampa Industrial Foundation and Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce, the Texas Board of Criminal Justice voted late Friday to name the new minimum security prison currently under construction here the Rufe Jordan Unit.

Jordan, who served as Gray County Sheriff for 38 years, died in his sleep at his home on June 18.

The Houston Chronicle labeled Jordan the "Dean of Texas Sheriffs" in an extensive 1988 profile.

A 1984 Texas Monthly feature on legendary Texas lawmen also featured Jordan in a two-page picture spread with his poodle Honey.

"The question of a name for the prison had been on their agenda for some time. Some months back, the Chamber and Industrial Foundation had made the recommendation of naming it after Rufe Jordan," Bill Waters of the Industrial Foundation said today.

"As far as I know, he never knew the recommendation had been made. We are pleased and delighted, though, because his was a name synonymous with law enforcement."

David Nunnelee, spokesman for the Texas Department of Criminal Justice, said board member F.L. Stephens of San Angelo recommended the 1,000-bed unit be named after Jordan and the motion was unanimously accepted.

Lee Barnett, administrative manager for Harbert Construction, the general contractor for the Jordan Unit, said hiring of construction workers for the project still appears about two weeks away.

"We weren't quite ready to get started, so the rain didn't hold us up too much," Barnett said of heavy weekend showers. "The only thing the rain has delayed was getting electricity to the office trailers (at the prison site). They weren't able to do any dirt work Friday and probably won't be able to do any today."

Barnett said only six people are currently working at the prison site, with four of them being managers for Harbert Construction.

"We're saying that we will probably start doing some hiring in two weeks, but that's only a guess," Barnett explained.

In other action from Friday's TBCJ meeting in Austin, Nunnelee said the board voted to name the chapel at the Clements Unit in Amarillo after James Hawthorne, who had served as a prison guard at the unit for one year prior to dying in combat in Kuwait in January.

Hawthorne, 24, was a veteran of the United States Marine Corps 2nd Division and was recalled to active duty when the Gulf War broke out.

Gov. Richards tells legislators to allow vote on state lottery

By SCOTT ROTHSCHILD
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - Gov. Ann Richards today told lawmakers they should allow Texans to vote on a state lottery. She also called for a reorganization of state government, including unprecedented powers for the governor to hire and fire state agency chiefs.

On the oft-defeated state lottery, Richards said, "It is the rarest of creatures; a popular way to generate revenue."

Opening a budget-writing special legislative session, Richards said lawmakers' first priority will be consideration of State Comptroller John Sharp's audit of state government that recommends numerous cost-savings.

"The message is that no agency of government is a sacred cow... and no one is exempt from the duty to find ways to save money in hard times," she said in prepared remarks.

Lawmakers face a projected $4.8 billion deficit to pay for an approximately $57 billion budget that would continue the current level of services for 1992-93.

And they have less than eight weeks to solve the problem before the new budget period starts Sept. 1.

Sharp's proposal has become the centerpiece of the session. It would produce $5.2 billion - $4 billion of which he says could be applied to the $4.8 billion general revenue deficit.

Since unveiling the report last month, Sharp's plan of cuts, layoffs, agency mergers, and fee increases has been slammed hard by agency chiefs, higher education officials, and human service representatives.

But Richards today presented a 22-page "blueprint" for the budget session that embraced most of Sharp's plan and directed lawmakers to appropriate the funds needed to pay for education reforms, additional prisons, and ballooning social service loads.

After writing a budget that provides services at an affordable price, Richards said, "Then and only then - after all alternatives are exhausted - we consider the revenue side."

Richards rejected calls for creation of a state income tax. A blue-ribbon committee said such a tax system would produce the necessary revenue to avoid budget crises and be fairer, since many experts say the sales tax hits the poor harder than the rich.

But Richards said, "We are now beginning a session where there is not even a remote possibility of an income tax."

Aside from a state lottery - which is expected to produce about $450 million in the first year of operation - Richards said she wants lawmakers to restructure the state's major business tax, called the franchise tax, which is based on capital investment.

"Conceived in 1907, it has remained fundamentally unchanged. There is widespread agreement within the business community that it is unfair and a true impediment to growth," she said.

She also asked for more power in controlling major functions of state government, saying governors should hire - with Senate OK - the day-to-day directors of agencies.

Richards said many agencies now are unaccountable to state leaders and the taxpayers.

"Right now, we have a state government that is like a huge complex of fun house mirrors. When you try to navigate or get anything done, you meet yourself coming and going," she said.

Despite Sharp's proposals, key lawmakers have said the most that is politically possible to pass is $3 billion worth of the plan.

And some lawmakers also say that bridging the projected deficit to continue current services is not enough. The "real" shortfall, they say, is between $6 billion and $7 billion to pay for additional programs. Texas already ranks among the lowest in the nation in most human service categories.

In addition, a push for the lottery, as in the past, may be in trouble.

The game, if approved by voters, is estimated to generate nearly $500 million the first year for state government. But the House repeated has defeated lottery proposals.

Rep. Talmadge Heflin, R-Houston, who is president of the Texas Conservative Coalition, today said, "I think there are ways to get there without a tax bill or a lottery."

Pampa school board to meet Tuesday

By BEAR MILLS Staff Writer

Teachers with the Pampa Independent School District will learn Tuesday who has achieved placement on the Career Ladder during a 6 p.m. school board meeting at Carver Center, 321 W. Albert.

Teachers reaching level II, based on performance evaluations, will receive a bonus of $1,500. Teachers on level III will receive $3,000.

Dr. Dawson Orr, superintendent, said, "101 teachers will make level II and 64 teachers will make level III. The criteria is based on their performance through the appraisal system and requires a three-year record. It has to do with their performance over more than one school year and shows their ability to demonstrate effective teaching."

Orr said teachers who made Career Ladder will be notified after the board approves the list Tuesday night.

"We waited to calculate our final average daily attendance," Orr said of why the PISD waits so late in the year to pay for Career Ladder compared to other districts.

Orr said other than that, the agenda for Tuesday's meeting is very routine.

"In the past there have been times we haven't even met in July," he said. However, one item of interest to the community will be opening of bids for the McNeely Field House concession stand project.

"The board has been in discussion about this for several months," Orr said. "Tuesday afternoon the bids will be opened. We set a limit of no more than $73,000 to spend on this and we are trying to limit the impact of this. The athletic booster club has guaranteed $50,000 to help pay for this."

Other items on the agenda include the sale of delinquent tax property, consideration of an honors debate class at the high school, bids to remove an underground storage tank, bids for milk, bread and snack items and computer equipment and supply bids.

Orr is also scheduled to brief the board on any new developments in County Education District 14, which is now responsible for setting the property tax rate for basic school funding in Gray, Hutchinson, Ochiltree, Lipscomb, Hemphill and Roberts counties.

McSpadden

McSpadden — I'm so lucky in that, when I was a kid starting out, I got to announce people like Ken Roberts, Gerald Roberts, Bob Crosby, Everett Shaw, Clyde Burke and Toots Mansfield and many of that era.

Also the Jim Shoulders-Casey Tibbs-Jack Buschborn era. I knew Dean Oliver before he became a professional and won the calf roping worlds title.

I just came along at a proper time and have been fortunate enough to be hired long enough to see all these people come along.

Your next question, I know, is comparing athletes. That's difficult to do.

Bye and large, the reason competition is so much better today is that the young kids are better prepared. Just like the (Top O' Texas Kid Pony Show) we have here Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. These kids are starting now when they're seven or eight years old.

Horses are bred better for the timed events; you have better horses. It's like basketball or Little League baseball. These kids learn the basics at a much earlier age.

If you want to learn to rope or ride bulls, you can go to a rodeo school put on by worlds champions.

When I started, it was like the rookie-of-old in baseball. You went three or four years and nobody told you anything. You had to pick it up yourself.

I think, as a whole, the talent is much better now than it was 30 years ago. Now ... certain individuals - like a Dean Oliver or a Ken Roberts or a Casey Tibbs - sure they could win today. But there wasn't the depth of competition then as there is now.

The News — Do you think Ty Murray and a few others have begun another era?

McSpadden — Ty is probably starting a Tom Ferguson and Larry Mahan-type era. There's no reason why this man (Murray) shouldn't be the world's champion all-around cowboy four, five, six or seven times. He's only 21 years old now and he's already won it twice. He's a super, super young man.

The News — What about the trend toward better-educated rodeo cowboys?

McSpadden — I've worked the National High School Rodeo Finals and the collegiate finals. Today, they will have almost 40 states and three Canadian provinces that will send teams; with 1,300 or 1,400 contestants. That was unheard of 30 years ago.

The News — Is rodeo, as an industry, healthy?

McSpadden — Yes, very healthy. I think the attendance figures nationwide will back that up. We're having a several-percentile increase almost every year. Yes, it's alive and healthy. It's good for a community. It brings money into the community.

The one thing that fans, I think, really believe without saying it - and I'm completely sold on this - is the fact that these guys are not guaranteed anything. Because Ty Murray wins more than $200,000 last year, it doesn't mean he'll win 15 cents this year.

Then you see these pros (in other sports) trying to buy out their contract or renegotiate a contract; or some college All-American getting a million-dollar bonus for signing when he's never played one minute of that sport as a professional.

I just wish those kind of people could match wits with our people in the arena like this. I think that's why people, in the back of their mind, still look up to a rodeo man - a cowboy - kind of like, maybe, the knights of England.

The News — Do rodeo association members make or break a rodeo?

McSpadden — Oh, Lord, do they ever. They're overlooked because the average person thinks rodeo just happens - they think you just advertise and have a rodeo and boom, there it is.

It's certainly a far cry from that. The rodeo committee has to be a pretty different breed of cat, because he's got to work year round, give of himself and take from his own line of work. They don't get a dollar a year. Yes, they're very dedicated people.

The News — How long have you been doing the Pampa rodeo?

McSpadden — Altogether, maybe 12 or 15 years. I enjoy it thoroughly.

One thing about this committee (the Top O' Texas Rodeo Association), you don't work for them, you work with them.

And that's a big, big difference.

Officer says he had no choice but to strike suspect 28 times

FORT WORTH (AP) — A police officer videotaped striking a handcuffed car theft suspect 28 times with a nightstick believes he will be cleared of an assault charge, saying he had no other way to gain control of the man.

"I did what I was trained to do," Officer Edward J. Parnell III told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram in a copy-right story Sunday. "I did what I thought I was supposed to do."

The interview marks the first time Parnell has spoken at length about the July 3 incident.

Parnell had arrested Ernest Alvin Anderson on suspicion of car theft and was driving him to a police station when Anderson kicked out a rear window and tried to jump out onto Interstate 30.

Anderson, 21, said he was only trying to loosen his handcuffs. But Parnell said he had already adjusted the handcuffs. Later, Anderson threatened suicide, Parnell said.

Parnell stopped the car, removed Anderson and began beating him with a baton. A woman videotaped the beating from a home nearby.

Parnell, 32, admitted he repeatedly struck Anderson, but he said he had no other choice.

"I don't have control of the situation. And as far as I'm concerned, I'm losing because he's still coming out of the vehicle," Parnell said.

"I then took my nightstick with two hands, brought it back and swung with as much force as I can muster. ... I needed him back in the car, either through pain or fright."

Parnell said he is not sure how many times he hit Anderson. But, he said: "I never hit him above the upper arm. I never hit him on the shoulder, the neck or on the head. I know those can cause serious bodily injury."

Anderson was treated for cuts and bruises to his left arm, right leg, chest, back and head, police said. It has not been determined which injuries were caused by the nightstick and which were caused by Anderson's smashing the window.

Since the broadcast of the videotape, shown nationwide, Parnell has been charged with assault with a deadly weapon. He has been placed on detached duty with pay, pending a grand jury hearing.

"I feel I'll be found not guilty of all charges brought against me," Parnell said.

Parnell is required to stay at home during business hours Monday through Friday and must check in with the department every weekday at 8:30 a.m.

The officer said he believes the episode would not have received as much attention if Los Angeles police officers had not been videotaped March 3 beating Rodney King.

Parnell said the circumstances in the two events cannot be compared.

"I've been trained in the academy to not let a felony prisoner escape. I've also been trained not to let somebody commit suicide," he said. "I've been trained to use whatever force is necessary to not let either happen."

An Explorer Scout, Michael Tobey, 20, was with Parnell when Anderson was arrested. Tobey said he also tried to calm Anderson. But when Anderson began banging his head and feet against the rear window, Parnell radioed for help and requested a nurse stand by at the jail.

He said a police supervisor radioed back and denied his request to turn on his emergency lights and siren.

"It's about 5 o'clock, there's rush-hour traffic. I'm weaving in and out of traffic trying to get to the jail as fast as I can," Parnell recalled.

And then Anderson shattered the back window with his feet.

"He starts crawling out of the window while we're on I-30 going 55 (miles per hour)," Parnell said.

"I don't like fighting. I've never really had a serious fight in my life," he said.

After viewing the tape Police Chief Thomas Windham said Parnell used excessive force and improperly used the baton. Windham said the overhead swing that the videotape shows Parnell using is against departmental policy.

Two elderly sisters killed by tractor trailer; Texas man held by authorities in deaths

NEW YORK (AP) — Two elderly sisters holding hands as they walked home from Sunday dinner were mowed down and killed in Washington Heights by a tractor-trailer truck driven by a Texas man. The driver was arrested minutes later.

The sisters, Betty Rosen, 83, and Claire Muller, 86, were killed at 4:16 p.m. Sunday just blocks from their home at 17 Fort George Ave. in Washington Heights, said Sgt. Tina Mohrmann, a police spokesman. They lived in separate apartments.

The driver of the huge rig barreled on, crossing the George Washington Bridge into New Jersey. Seven minutes after the fatal accident, Port Authority Police pulled the driver over in Fort Lee, N.J., and placed him under arrest. He was identified as Harold Heitzman, 34, of Hurst, Texas.

Manhattan District Attorney Robert Morgenthau declined to prosecute, possibly because of a lack of evidence, Mohrmann said.

Heitzman was expected to be arraigned early today in New Jersey on charges of eluding police and driving while under the influence of a controlled substance. He underwent chemical test at Holy Name Hospital but the results of the tests were not available until this morning, said Port Authority spokesman Terry Benczik.

Port Authority police became involved in the incident after a man ran into the George Washington Bridge bus station and said there were two dead people outside, Benczik said.

"The bodies were all pulled apart," said Roberto Reyes, 24, who witnessed the accident. "The truck kept going without hesitation."

The accident occurred near the bus station that is at the intersection of Broadway and 179th Street in Washington Heights.

A police lieutenant in the bus station notified Port Authority Police at the bridge about the truck and two officers on the bridge spotted it and got the driver to pull over in New Jersey at the Route 80 and I-95 split, Benczik said.

Student drivers find self-immolation victim beside highway

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A group of student truck drivers today found a 20-year-old man who apparently set himself ablaze along an interstate highway, authorities said.

Paul Cadena was in critical condition at the burn unit of Brooke Army Medical Center, said hospital spokesman Ray Dery.

The student truck drivers said they sought help after discovering Cadena about 1 a.m. near the intersection of Interstate 37 and Loop 410 lying in a burned area along the road. A car, partially filled gas can and a cigarette lighter were found nearby.

"He was burned real bad," said driving student Michael Meehan. "He had leather boots that were just singed."

Meehan described the man's burned legs as "flaps of skin." He said Cadena talked about having had an argument with his girlfriend.

The self-immolation is the second in San Antonio in the past six weeks.

On June 4, a man poured gasoline on himself and set himself afire in front of the Alamo as tourists witnessed the event.

On June 28, a man who complained his medical benefits were cut started himself on fire outside a veterans hospital in Amarillo.

He died a few days later at Brooke Army Medical Center, where he had been transferred for treatment.

Houston's medical industry becoming haven for medical garbage haulers

HOUSTON (AP) — The city, with its 10,000 medical facilities, is becoming a haven for the medical waste business.

Within the last two years, about a dozen companies that dispose of medical waste have come to Houston, enticed by hospitals, clinics and a host of surgery and emergency centers that can't meet new waste regulations without a professional waste disposal service.

Previously, Browning-Ferris Industries seemed to have a hold on the market for years.

"Business is growing," said Mike Archer, BFI's manager for the southwest region. "There is somewhere in the neighborhood of 700 customers in the Houston area."

Among the new waste service arrivals is National Medical Waste, formed in Nashville, Tenn., in 1989. The company began operating in Houston in February.

Houston dentist Jerry Argovitz started Complete Compliance Corp., known as 3CI, two years ago. Another Houston company, MedCon, has been operating since 1987.

Hospitals produce about 95 percent of medical waste, according to federal statistics. According to a study by Dallas-based HDR Engineering, each occupied hospital bed produces 22 pounds of medical waste a day. Of that, about four pounds are infectious.

With more companies coming to Houston, the costs for hauling services are being held down. But hospitals are having to spend the savings on additional record-keeping and packaging before the waste leaves their facilities.

"Our costs have remained fairly constant, and with ever-increasing regulations, they will escalate," said Joe Lamendola, vice president of Memorial Healthcare System, which has three hospitals in Houston.

Memorial City Medical Center, the University of Texas M.D. Anderson Cancer Center and other facilities burn their own waste in on-site incinerators.

"It wasn't a financial decision. It was one based on control," said Bill Huntsinger of Metro National Corp., Memorial City's parent company.

In fact, since 1989 the Texas Air Control Board in Austin has received 14 applications for incinerators, most of them planned near Houston.

But although state and federal agencies are beginning to aggressively regulate medical waste disposal, more enforcement is needed, experts say.

"They (Houston officials) have had a couple of serious incidents," said Leonard Mohrmann, chief of the special waste branch of the Texas Department of Health's Bureau of Solid Waste Management. "At the time they happened, there weren't state regulations in place. They are now in place, and the city can bring action under them."

Medical waste transporters had until July 1 to register with the Texas Health Department or face fines of up to $25,000 per violation per day. By July 9, only two medical waste haulers in the Houston area and nine statewide had registered.

"We were expecting about 100 haulers to register, but we could be wrong," said Manik Naik, the state health department's chief of registrations. "With a new rule, it takes a while for people to know what to do. We really don't know how many (haulers) there are."

Within the last two years, medical waste has been found dumped across the street from an elementary school, outside a grocery store and mixed in with regular garbage. Houston health officials, fed up with the illicit dumping of waste, are pressing for an ordinance that would give them considerable regulatory power.

Marilyn Byrd, chief of the Bureau of Occupational Health, Radiation and Noise Control in the Houston health department, says the ordinance is needed because there are too few state and federal inspectors in the Houston area.

Five state health department inspectors must cover 16 counties.

Ms. Byrd says her office has investigated 98 such complaints since early 1990, when the city began responding to improper waste disposal complaints and unsafe office practices.

Women recount relationships that reportedly led to pastor's resignation

DALLAS (AP) Several women who said the pastor of a Richardson church made sexual advances toward them have detailed the incidents that reportedly prompted the minister to resign.

Darrell Gilyard, considered by many to be a rising star within the mostly white Southern Baptist Convention, resigned Wednesday from the 800-member Victory Baptist Church.

Although Gilyard, who is black, did not mention his reasons for leaving his church, a longtime supporter and friend, Dr. Paige Patterson, said last week that Gilyard admitted having several adulterous affairs with women he was counseling.

In a copyright story in Sunday editions of The Dallas Morning News, one woman said Gilyard had had sex with her in the pastor's study. Another said she received lewd phone calls and, most recently, a woman said he raped her.

The women who talked to the newspaper asked to remain anonymous.

Gilyard told The Associated Press on Sunday that he had been advised not to comment on the allegations.

"The toughest thing for me to do right now is not to comment," Gilyard said. "There are some things I want to say."

Gilyard, 29, was a frequent guest on Jerry Falwell's weekly evangelical television program. Wednesday's resignation was the fourth time in four years Gilyard had been pressured to walk away from a congregation, The News reported.

Victory Baptist, though not officially affiliated with the Southern Baptist Convention, embraced the principles of the group and looked to the organization and its largest church, First Baptist, for support.

Patterson, president of Criswell

College, located in the First Baptist complex, was Gilyard's former teacher and mentor.

Patterson said he knew of the allegations of sexual misconduct, which began as long as four years ago when Gilyard was removed as assistant pastor of Concord Missionary Baptist Church in Oak Cliff. But he said he didn't believe those allegations.

"I was unwilling to call anyone guilty until I had demonstrable evidence that these allegations were true," Patterson said.

One woman said the pastor, who has been married since 1985, began asking her to lunch and she accepted. The woman said the minister followed up with late-night phone calls asking her to meet him at her garage, where her husband wouldn't see them. She said she refused.

"I was afraid to tell anybody," she said. "I knew what he said about friends of mine, how he spread rumors about them and told me (their) secrets."

She said the calls persisted for three or four months, until finally she told him to stop.

"He would go and preach every Sunday against adultery and premarital sex and fornication," she said, "and then afterwards, he'd call and beg me to meet him at a hotel."

Another woman, a student at Criswell College in 1988 when Gilyard preached at the school, said Gilyard was arrogant outside church.

"One time I remember something good happened at the church and I said, 'Glory be to God!' and he said: 'God? Glory be to me. I did it, not God.'"

Patterson said he has withdrawn all support from Gilyard and has asked that the pastor and his wife attend a two-week rehabilitation session.

Patterson also said he asked Gilyard not preach or pastor a church for two years, and then only if he can prove he has been rehabilitated.

"In retrospect, Darrell should have been in counseling all along," Patterson said.

OH, MY ACHING BACK

If you're like a lot of people, you may have occasional or persistent back pain and wonder what caused it. You try to think of some incident in which you may have strained your back, and come up with nothing. But there must be some reason why you have back pains. The truth is that even the simplest of incidents may be the cause, such as reaching high on a shelf to get something. Or stooping suddenly to pick up something that has fallen. Or maybe you need some tips on good posture.

Dr. Mark Ford

Whatever the cause, the problem may be that your spinal column is out of alignment. No pain-killing drug can cure the CAUSE. It can dull the pain for awhile and give you temporary relief. But if your back is out of alignment, the pain will probably not go away unless you get the treatment you need. No symptom can be more depressing than persistent back pain. Don't delay treatment when help is readily available.

Houston march held in protest of fatal gay bashing incident

HOUSTON (AP) — More than a thousand people angered by the attack on three gay men took to the streets this weekend during a demonstration in the heart of the city's gay community.

The demonstrators marched on a busy intersection in the Montrose neighborhood Saturday night to protest the July Fourth gay-bashing incident that left one man dead. Police said no arrests were made during the raucous, but non-violent, demonstration.

"Hey, hey, ho, ho, homophobia's got to go!" the crowd chanted. "No more hate! No more hate!" others yelled.

"An attack on one of us is an attack on all of us," declared a banner carried in the march. It was signed by "fags, dikes, people of all colors and sexualities created as one."

The march came after two more men were charged in the beating attack on three men outside a gay bar. Paul Broussard, 27, was killed in the attack.

In all, three men have been charged with attempted murder and one faces a murder charge.

"We do not seek revenge, but we demand justice," gay rights activist Ray Hill told the cheering marchers, who blocked traffic at the busy intersection for almost an hour.

Houston City Councilman Vince Ryan, who represents the Montrose area, marched in the protest, which was organized by the lesbian-gay rights group, Queer Nation.

"Nobody ought to be killed just because they're gay," Ryan said.

"We for a long time forgot we need to be sensitive to hate crimes," he said. "Things like this (gay bashing) happen every day in Montrose."

Several signs and chants attacked police statements that Broussard's killing was not considered a "hate crime." Police, however, reversed that stance Saturday without explanation.

Broussard, a homosexual, and two gay friends were walking to their car from Heaven, a gay nightclub in Montrose, when two carloads of young men pulled up and asked for directions to the club.

After a brief conversation, the men in the cars attacked the three with boards and a knife. One of the three men fled, another was beaten and Broussard was killed.

"The reason for this attack was because this person was gay," said homicide detective Ken Vachris. "I haven't been able to determine any other motive."

Police said the investigation into the attack was continuing. The four men charged so far in the attack are from The Woodlands, a north Harris County suburb about 30 miles from downtown Houston.

Paul Chance Dillion, 22, and Leonardo Edmundo Ramirez, 17, were charged Saturday with attempted murder in Broussard's death. Also charged with attempted murder is Derrick Jan Attard, 17. Jon Christopher Buice, 17, has been charged with murder.

Opinion

It's a cynical dodge regarding honoraria

If you've ever doubted that money talks mightily in politics, consider the United States Senate.

Last year, 61 senators received payments totaling $1.41 million from various special interests, ranging from bankers to dairy farmers to defense contractors. These were not campaign contributions but personal payments to senators for giving speeches or simply making appearances before interest groups with a big stake in legislation.

Typically, a senator is paid $2,000, plus expenses, for showing up before a lobbying organization at its annual convention in, say, Hawaii. He usually finds time for some tennis or a round of golf—at the favor-seeker's expense, of course—before returning to Washington.

This routine bribery is a bipartisan scandal. The Senate's two biggest recipients last year were Minority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., who collected $30,400 in speaking fees, and Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, who collected $30,000.

Ohio's senators, John Glenn and Howard Metzenbaum, ranked low on the honoraria scale. Glenn reported accepting no honoraria and Metzenbaum collected $10,400, giving all of it to charity. In the House, Ohio representative Michael Oxley collected $29,500 in honoraria and donated $2,650 to charity, keeping the legal limit of $26,850.

Three dozen members of the Senate have pledged not to accept speaking fees, although the House voted to ban such payments beginning this year, in exchange for a pay increase to $125,100.

Shamed by the House's action to prohibit speaking fees, the Senate also voted, 72 to 24, to bar them, starting next year. But the Senate's move was really a cynical dodge because it was attached to campaign finance legislation that stands almost no chance of being enacted by the full Congress. That means senators can sanctimoniously declare their opposition to the fees even as they continue to haul in the cash.

The Senate soon will have another opportunity to get on the right side of this issue.

Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., has attached an amendment to the legislative appropriations bill outlawing speaking fees for Senate staff aides. The Byrd amendment has wide support among senators. But if payments from special interests compromise staff aides, how can they fail to corrupt senators themselves?

Voting to ban speaking fees for staffers while exempting senators would be a hypocritical outrage. The payments indeed should be outlawed—not only for congressional aides but for senators as well.

Let's go back to the moon

WASHINGTON — By one of those nice coincidences that come along now and then, two publications dealing with the exploration of space recently turned up in the same mail. One was the report of a study group headed by Thomas P. Stafford, a retired Air Force general. The other was an article by Gregg Easterbrook in The New Republic for July 8.

The two pieces should be required reading for all members of Congress before they appropriate funds for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA). On June 6 the House agreed to throw another $2 billion into Space Station Freedom. This would amount to an irrevocable commitment to keep this indefensible project alive.

Of particular interest is this remarkable fact: The Stafford commission ignores Space Station Freedom almost altogether. The report mentions the space station in one paragraph on page 102, and recommends its program in a single sentence on page 113. That is it. If ever a costly project were damned with faint praise, the space station surely qualifies.

NASA's people say their space station is a must. The Stafford people say their lunar base is a must. There is not money enough in the federal treasury to finance both undertakings. Writing from a low orbit of ignorance, I am bound to say that the Stafford approach makes more sense to me. For Congress to put more money into Freedom is to support a job-saving boondoggle. It is pure folly.

Gregg Easterbrook writes with what someone once described as the bell-like ring of authority. His criticism of Space Station Freedom is cogent, concise and devastating.

James J. Kilpatrick

When NASA proposed the space station in 1984, the project was to cost $8 billion (about $11 billion in 1990 dollars). It was to serve as a kind of garage for satellite repair. It would refuel outbound spacecraft and undertake environmental studies. There would be new opportunities for astronomy. The station would house eight astronauts for months at a time. Under the heading of "life sciences," the project would accumulate data on the long-term effects of zero gravity. The crew also would study manufacturing under conditions of microgravity.

The grand plans of 1984 have shrunk. The pending design would house only four persons. All missions except microgravity and life sciences have been eliminated, and microgravity is about to go.

Largely because of design changes mandated by Congress, the cost has soared into orbit. Now NASA itself concedes a basic construction cost of $30 billion. The General Accounting Office says $40 billion. When the necessary expense of shuttle missions is figured into the calculus, realistic estimates of this venture rise to more than $100 billion. Easterbrook identifies problems that are almost bound to result in disaster. The space station would have to revolve in a low orbit, a condition that will require periodic reboosting. The complex components must be assembled in space. This will require 23 to 26 shuttle flights for delivery.

"Suppose another shuttle fails during the construction period, and launches undergo the kind of lengthy suspension that followed Challenger. The Freedom design can withstand one to two years of flight suspensions without falling back into the atmosphere. Downtime after Challenger was three years."

Merely to keep the station in orbit will require "an unprecedented degree of maintenance." By one informed estimate, Freedom will need 3,700 man-hours a year.

"So far American astronauts have accumulated about 400 total hours walking in space, and they found the experience profoundly exhausting. Under the current estimate, each member of Freedom's four-person crew would spend two hours per day space walking with wrench and hammer. In other words, the main purpose of being on the space station will be to maintain the space station."

It needs to be said that the Stafford group offers no cost estimates whatever for its series of lunar missions, but over the next 20 years—the anticipated life span of the space station—the Stafford program clearly offers the taxpayers a better bargain.

NASA's defenders place great reliance upon the "inspiration" that a space station would provide for youngsters who will be the space engineers of the next century. This lofty rhetoric strikes me as so much hooey. If youngsters are to be inspired, and earthly jobs are to be preserved, let's go back to the moon.

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Monday, July 15, the 196th day of 1991. There are 169 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
Twenty years ago, on July 15, 1971, President Nixon announced he would visit the People's Republic of China to seek a "normalization of relations."

On this date:
In 1606, the Dutch painter Rembrandt was born in Leiden, Netherlands.

In 1870, Georgia became the last of the Confederate states to be readmitted to the Union.

In 1918, the Second Battle of the Marne began during World War I.

In 1948, President Truman was nominated for another term of office by the Democratic National Convention in Philadelphia.

In 1958, President Eisenhower ordered U.S. Marines to Lebanon, at the request of that country's president, Camille Chamoun, in the face of a perceived threat by Muslim rebels.

In 1964, Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona was nominated for president by the Republican National Convention, meeting in San Francisco.

Corporations need exercise

Scripture, Shakespeare and the most modern medical science confirm the inevitable life cycles of all living organisms. They are born, grow, age and die.

Dr. Ichak Adizes is convinced that corporations have this same predictable behavioral pattern.

As modern medicine seeks to diagnose and treat the human condition, extending our vigorous middle years, Adizes believes that corporations must intelligently manage change or prematurely perish.

When one sees a venerable American institution such as Sears struggling to survive and a grand organization such as IBM top heavy and teetering, it suggests perhaps we'd better pay attention to corporate lifecycles.

"First the infant, mewling and puking in its mother's arms ..."

The Adizes theory traces a corporation's evolution as follows:

- First courtship, conception and infancy ...
- Adolescence merging into the prime time ...
- Then we have the stable, established, prosperous organization.
- But next comes "aristocracy" ...
- Then early bureaucracy ...

Paul Harvey

And ultimately suffocating bureaucracy — and death.

But along the way there are treatments for corporations — as for us — that can extend the life span.

As surely as the human body loses agility, the corporation loses flexibility — unless each responds with remedial exercise.

Reading Adizes' book, Corporate Lifecycles, anybody can recognize the onset of senility, when the bureaucracy becomes so constipated leaders couldn't lead if they wanted to.

Executive decisions must first be filtered through a legion of lawyers whose job security is best protected by saying "no" to everything.

If any junior executive in the ranks has an innovative idea, however worthy, he has first to sell it through echelons of supervision to where more time and effort is spent on "internal marketing" than on "external marketing."

Entrenched upper-echelon managers, approaching retirement, dare not make mistakes. That can compound constipation eventuating in paralysis.

Further, if the CEO has to fight for his life every quarter, he is likely to show an improved bottom line at the expense of essential research and development of future expansion.

Noteworthy exceptions prove the rule: Roger Smith at GM and Bob Galvin at Motorola.

An individual or an organization can stretch the years of peak performance by recognizing early symptoms of atrophy and responding appropriately.

With improved medicine, sanitation, nutrition and exercise, we are adding to the human life span 16 weeks every 24 months.

Industry's best bet for extending its vigorous years involves a similar prescription. For corporate executives to read Corporate Lifecycles is a good place to start.

Do whites need affirmative action?

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

The San Francisco Examiner has come up with a story containing implications that ought to keep psychologists, sociologists and (last, but hardly least) politicians busy for years to come.

It seems that next fall, for the first time in history, Asian students will outnumber whites and thus become the largest ethnic group in the freshman class at the University of California's flagship campus at Berkeley — and almost certainly at the University of California at Los Angeles, too.

The problem is that, according to the 1990 census, the population of California is 68.9 percent white, 7.4 percent black and 9.5 percent Asian. (The remaining 14 percent includes all other categories, such as American Indian, plus those who did not check a box for ethnic origin. Also, 25.8 percent, in the white and black populations, classified themselves additionally as Hispanics.)

So either the Asians are the beneficiaries of the greatest affirmative-action program in history, or they are running rings around the whites — and everybody else — on the basis of merit. In either case, the implications are immense.

To be sure, Berkeley does seem to attract many Asian students, while admission applications of whites have dropped by a third over the past three years. The explanation may be that Asian students are trained to stoically disregard their surroundings, while many whites are increasingly turned off by Berkeley's famous leftist political bias and its sheer physical appearance. I walked through the central campus recently, and much of it looked like an urban slum (which can't be said for privately owned and similarly left-inclined Stanford University, across the bay).

Anyway, the proportion of white freshmen at Berkeley this fall will be around 48 percent lower than the proportion of college-age whites in California, whereas the proportion of Asians will be nearly triple the statewide percentage of Asians of college age.

The upshot is that 30 percent of Berkeley's freshman class will be white, but 31.5 percent will be Asian. (The proportions of blacks and Hispanics, interestingly, will be very close to the actual college-age percentages of these populations in the state as a whole.) Efforts to get similar comparisons of next fall's freshmen from the authorities at UCLA ran into a stone wall, but Examiner staff writer Carl Irving states that "campus documents as of April indicate that Asians will make up about 37 percent of the class, compared with 32 percent for whites."

So what's going on? There's no affirmative-action program for Asians at the University of California, even if they needed one. Berkeley's chancellor credits the Asians' high-school grades and test scores, and points out that in California, Asian high-school students are more than twice as likely as white students to meet the university's academic standards.

Apparently, then, we whites must face the fact that the Asian students applying for admission to California's great public universities are simply, on average, smarter than our youngsters. You can talk all you want about motivation and parental encouragement, but that can hardly be the whole explanation for a difference as large as this one.

And anyway, what's so impossible about the idea that Asians, as an ethnic category, are smarter than whites? They are clearly different in all sorts of other respects, from their skin color to the epicanthic fold of their upper eyelid; why shouldn't they be better endowed (again, I am talking about averages) with those little gray cells in the cranium?

If so, and if the Asian 3 percent of the American population slowly pushes its way to the forefront in our universities, and in those other areas of our society where superior intelligence is the critical factor, will America's whites, and for that matter its other racial categories, acquiesce in the consequences? Or will the whites start joining the blacks in demanding affirmative action — or even heaven forbid, quotas? © 1991 NEA

Police banner offers blanket of security to single driver

DEAR ABBY: Last year, my sister gave me a large plastic PLEASE CALL POLICE banner, which I kept in the glove compartment of my car. She said it could be a lifesaver if I ever had car trouble on the road, because I could get help without putting myself in danger by having to leave my car to seek assistance. I took my car in for service a couple of weeks ago and had my banner folded in the glove compartment. When I went to pick up my car, the banner was gone. When I asked my sister where she got hers, she said she had sent for it after reading a letter in your column from a woman whose car had broken down on a highway as she was rushing to the side of her critically ill child. She had placed her PLEASE CALL POLICE banner over her windshield, and it took only minutes for a state trooper to come to her aid.

I would like to replace that banner. Please tell me where I can get one. I am single and commute 300 miles every weekend.

CHARLOTTE B., LAS VEGAS, NEV.

DEAR CHARLOTTE: Write to WCIL-BANNERS, P.O. Box 66955, Los Angeles, Calif. 90066. You will receive one PLEASE CALL POLICE banner as a premium for a $5 contribution to WCIL, and another banner with each additional $4 contribution. (Many people want two, one for the windshield and one for the rear window.)

Make your check or money order (U.S. funds only, please) payable to WCIL-BANNERS. Allow eight weeks for delivery. The Westside Center for Independent Living is a not-for-profit organization that helps disabled people live independently.

DEAR ABBY: Please help! My 17-year-old son, who just graduated from high school, has been invited to accompany his girlfriend's family on a month-long vacation across the country. As the girl's parents did not consult me before inviting him, I am now in the position of being the mean mom if I refuse to let him go.

As a registered nurse in the obstetrical unit that provides services for about 100 unwed teen-age girls a week, I am very much aware of the dangers of allowing teen-agers to spend large amounts of time together unsupervised. His parents will be there, but I'm very uncomfortable about the closeness this kind of vacation will provide. Secondly, we have a 15-year-old daughter, and I can't afford to set this kind of precedent for a similar situation involving her.

And finally, our son has a summer job to pay for his clothes and books for college this fall, and a month's absence would significantly decrease his contribution to college financing.

Needless to say, our once-quiet household is being torn apart by this situation. Please rush your reply.

CONCERNED MOM

DEAR CONCERNED: Remind your son that he agreed to work this summer to help with his college expenses, so he can forget about accompanying his girlfriend on her family's vacation trip. And don't be apologetic when you tell him. His girlfriend's parents should have consulted you before inviting him. At 17, he is still a minor.

Ramses the great began building and baby booms

By DONALD J. FREDERICK
National Geographic
For AP Newsfeatures

Go down the list of legendary pharaohs, and one name symbolizes the grandeur of ancient Egypt's monuments: Ramses the Great.

Assuming the crowns of Upper and Lower Egypt in 1279 B.C., the "king of kings," Ramses II, reigned for more than 60 years. He sired at least 90 children, brought his empire prosperity and peace, built more colossal structures and had his name carved on more stone surfaces than any other pharaoh. He is linked also with the exodus of the Hebrews.

Painstaking research and new archaeological interpretations are helping to see beyond the once cruel and romantic views of Ramses. "As this scholarship enriches our knowledge of ancient Egypt, it is rounding out a more human portrait of this towering figure," Rick Gore writes in National Geographic.

Evading destruction for 3,000 years, Ramses' mummy lies inside an unmarked case in Cairo's Egyptian Museum.

James Harris of the University of Michigan led a team that X-rayed and examined the mummy before it was removed from view and put in an airtight case to protect it. He described the physical Ramses to Gore.

"He was about 5 feet 8 inches in height — one of the taller pharaohs. He had a strong jaw; a beaked nose, a long thin face. That was not typical of earlier pharaohs."

Ramses II was about 8 when his father, Seti, became pharaoh. "Seti must have filled his son with romantic tales of war," Gore writes. Seti infused his son with his own two great dreams: to reclaim the lands lost to the Hittites, Egypt's archenemies to the northeast, and to build colossal monuments to his own godliness in the style of the great kings of earlier dynasties.

Seti also wanted Ramses to create life. He selected a harem for him. The message was clear: start procreating.

Ramses wasted no time. His principal wife, the lovely Nefertari, quickly produced a son. His second favorite wife, Istnofret, soon delivered another. Within 10 years, each wife had borne at least five sons and several daughters. His other wives may have accounted for another five to 10 sons and as many daughters.

When Seti died at about age 50, Ramses, still in his 20s, became king. The new pharaoh immediately began a building boom.

He completed his own temple at Abydos. He built a great city in the Nile Delta at his old family home, calling it Pi-Ramses, House of Ramses. He finished the colonnade hall at Karnak, commissioned the mighty rock temples at Abu Simbel and raised other temples in nearly every important Egyptian city. He also took credit for many structures built by his predecessors, chiseling out their names and substituting his.

In the fifth year of his reign, Ramses decided to retake the strategic city of Kadesh. He marched into Syria with an army of 20,000 men, provoking a superpower showdown with Muwatallis, the Hittite king.

"If Ramses had lost the Battle of Kadesh, you would never have heard of him," says Egyptologist Kenneth Kitchen, University of Liverpool. "He would have been an obscure king who ruled four and a half years."

And lose it he almost did. Muwatallis countered with an army of 40,000 men. Poor reconnaissance let Hittite chariots catch Ramses' main force off guard, and Egyptian troops scattered in panic.

Finding himself abandoned, Ramses supposedly leaped into his chariot and charged six times back into the fray, until Egyptian reinforcements finally arrived.

"The next day brought reality to both sides. Neither army was likely to displace the other, so Ramses declared a great victory and went home," Gore writes.

Ramses also may have had to deal with a troublesome people at home — the Hebrews.

Most likely they had migrated centuries earlier into the Nile Delta, the biblical land of Goshen, to escape famine. When Ramses began to build Pi-Ramses, they were forced into labor. The Old Testament relates that Moses persuaded the pharaoh to let his people go.

By the time Ramses reached his mid-40s, he had given up his annual campaigns against the Hittites, but not his mania for building. Shortly after returning from Kadesh, he began planning his greatest monument, Abu Simbel, and a monument to honor his wife Nefertari.

Little is known of Ramses' other wife, but Kitchen speculates: "Nefertari had the looks. He was obviously proud of her, showing her off all the time. But I think Istnofret had the brains. Her offspring wielded the most power as Ramses aged."

A younger son of Istnofret, Merneptah, inherited the throne.

Sport of bicycling benefits health and environment

By JOE MCGOWAN JR.
Associated Press Writer

DENVER (AP) — Americans by the millions are finding what Europeans have known for generations — bicycling can be fun and an activity for people of all ages.

And there are two other factors that are adding to the swift-growing popularity of the two-wheel sport: Physical fitness and environmental consciousness.

An estimated 80 million Americans regularly ride bicycles and another 3 million are reported to be taking up bicycling every year.

"Bicycling is a good form of exercise because it is traumatic; it does not involve any pounding of the knees or other joints," says Dr. Rob Gleser, who operates the nationally known HealthMark Clinic in Denver.

Some of the country's top young male and female bicyclists live and train in Colorado Springs, headquarters of the U.S. Cycling Federation. But Steve Penny, media and public relations person for the federation, notes that bicycling isn't just for international competition and the Olympics.

"Cycling is used as much for conditioning for our athletes as anything else. But what we stress is that it is something that the entire family can do as a basic recreational fitness thing."

"How easy it is for father, mother and children to get out and take a casual bike ride. Cycling helps different muscle groups and is a means not only of physical fitness but also recreational fitness."

Gleser, on the other hand, points to the benefits of more intense workouts on a bike. "Bicycling needs to be done with the usual guidelines if you are to achieve cardiovascular benefits. You need to get the heart rate up to the target zone and keep it there 30 minutes."

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Some young bikers and skateboarders may resist wearing bulky safety helmets, so Allegheny General Hospital has launched a campaign to give helmets a "cool" image. Posters and flyers show professional athletes from the Pirates, Steelers, and Penguins, along with a typical neighborhood biker and a skateboarder — all wearing helmets. Facts about injuries and helmet wear are carried under the headline, "Helmets...All the Pros Wear Them."

The campaign, co-sponsored by the city's professional sports teams and the Pittsburgh Board of Public Education, points out that of 50,000 children injured in bike-related accidents last year, 1,200 died and one third faced lifetime disabilities. It's estimated that helmets can cut the risk by 85 percent, for both children and adults.

Tips for selecting a helmet are covered in the flyer: — Hard outer shells give the best protection because they spread impact over the entire helmet. Softer shells made of foam, however, may be more appropriate for young children whose neck muscles are still developing and cannot support the weight of hard helmets.

— A helmet should have a protective liner, safety strap and fastener. The liner will absorb energy from the fall, shielding the head from traumatic injury. The strap and fastener should keep the helmet in place; check that the buckle cannot be easily opened or destroyed by bending the safety tab.

This can be a bit difficult on an outdoor bicycle because you go up and down hill, and the heart rate will vary.

"You can get a real good workout on an exercycle. But if you want to ride outdoors, you should ride intensively enough to get your heart into the target zone. That zone is between 65 and 85 per cent of 220, minus your age. Or if you are over 40, apply any risk factors such as heart disease, and family history as determined by a treadmill stress test."

Using the heart target zone formula for maximum cardiovascular benefit, a 30-year-old person would want to keep his heart rate (pulse) between 113 and 157 for 30 minutes of exercise.

Even if a person rides for leisure and doesn't stretch for cardiovascular benefit, bicycling still will burn calories and help keep him trim and fit.

The modern instruments for this fitness look similar to the first ones developed in the 19th century. Today's bicycles still have two wheels, handlebars and a triangle-shaped frame, just as bikes have had for generations. But the similarity ends there.

It is nothing for a bicycle today to have 18, 21 or more speeds and high-tech thumb shifting as effortless as driving a car with an automatic transmission. There is, however, no reverse gear so far.

New metal alloys and graphite construction have made possible bicycles which can take enormous punishment and still weigh half as much as the old single-speed bikes.

Until recently, THE bicycle to ride was the lightweight, high-speed road racing model with ultra-thin tires pumped up to about 100 pounds pressure per square inch. (The old single-speed bikes had wide balloon tires with about 28 pounds pressure.)

Bicycle helmets should be well designed for best protection

— Fit should be comfortable but tight enough not to move while on the head. Since helmet sizes vary by make, try on several brands for the best fit. The helmet should also be well-ventilated.

— Check the helmet for certification from either the Snell Memorial Foundation Standard or the American National Standards Institute (ANSI).

— Helmets cost from about $25 to $65 and are available in sporting goods and bicycle stores.

Farmers' market offers fresh produce beginning July 20

DON'T BAG IT

This spring I assisted in helping organize a community-wide "Don't Bag It" program in cooperation with Clean Pampa, Inc. and the City of Pampa.

We are interested in having some idea of how many homeowners are practicing some or all of the "Don't Bag It" principles. I would appreciate a phone call to the Gray County Extension Office, 669-8033, to let us know your name and address if you are practicing "Don't Bag It" with your lawn clippings.

FARMERS MARKET TO OPEN

Fresh, home grown vegetables will be available once again starting July 20. Our local Top O' Texas Farmers market will be open next Saturday at the M.K. Brown Auditorium parking lot - same location as last year. Days and hours of operation will also stay the same - Saturday and Wednesday mornings.

A good selection of garden produce should be on hand. The garden fresh vegetables always seem to taste a little better - my tomatoes have started producing real well and are no comparison to what we had to eat about 3 or 4 months ago.

LEAF SCORCH

These hot dry winds are causing leaf scorch or several different kinds of plants - trees, shrubs, are transpiring water at a faster rate than the roots can take the water up. Good, slow soakings every week or so are needed. However, too frequent and too much water can be almost as bad as not enough. There is a happy medium of adequate watering.

The trouble with too much water is that roots need oxygen just like most all living organisms. If the soil in a plant's root zone is too saturated with water, then all of the oxygen is crowded out and the roots are not able to take up needed oxygen.

Therefore, watering 3 or 4 times a week is generally not a good practice. Slow, soaking waterings once every week or so should be adequate if you have indeed soaked the area of the tree's root zone. Soil mulches also help to reduce soil surface evaporation.

I have received calls during the last week or so where homeowners have not watered enough as well as from those having watered too much.

LANDSCAPE IRRIGATION TIPS

Our usual hot and dry summer weather has arrived and that means homeowners must give careful attention to watering their yards and gardens.

Here are some tips on getting the most from irrigation water so as to keep plants and lawns healthy while keeping water cost down.

1. Practice slow, deep watering to allow roots to penetrate deeper so that plants become more stress-resistant.

2. Soaker hoses and drip irrigation systems work well on trees and shrubs. It's more efficient to water at night or early in the morning because evaporation is less. However, night-time watering can promote more disease problems.

3. Too much water can be detrimental or even worse than not enough. The rate at which water is applied should be no more rapid than the rate at which the soil can absorb it. Never fertilize landscape plants when soil is dry. It's best to water the area one day, apply fertilizer the next day, and then water again. Fertilizer will do no good unless it is dissolved and moved down into the soil.

4. Shrub and trees near foundations, under eaves or on southern and western exposures need frequent watering because they often get less benefit from rainfall and have to deal with heat reflected from walls.

5. Plants on mounds or slopes suffer from drought stress more easily than those on level areas, so these require more frequent watering.

6. Use an organic mulch of cottonseed hulls, straw, hay or grass clippings to reduce irrigation needs.

7. Treat water as a valuable resource. Use it to water plants when needed but do not waste water. Although considered a renewable resource, good water supplies are becoming scarce in Texas.

Mallon fires 4-under-par 67 to win U.S. Women's Open

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Not so long ago, a smiling, friendly, light-hearted 28-year-old named Meg Mallon was just another freckle-nosed face on the LPGA Tour, a fair golfer with a nice swing and no victories.

Today she's the U.S. Women's Open champion and a budding superstar.

"It's overwhelming," Mallon grinned after she gunned down two of the game's premier players in a tense Sunday showdown and escaped with her second major title in two weeks. It was her third LPGA victory of the year.

"When you're on a roll, you're on a roll," she said after firing a 4-under-par 67 in the final round to overtake Pat Bradley and Amy Alcott and secure the $110,000 top prize by two shots.

"No one is more surprised than me at how things have turned out."

The 67 matched her closing round two weeks ago, when she won the LPGA Championship at Bethesda, Md., in a similar shootout with Bradley and Ayako Okamoto.

Sunday's victory shoved her into second place on the money list with $420,773.

"It was an excellent battle," sighed Bradley, who led or shared the lead all weekend and entered the final nine a shot ahead of Alcott and two in front of Mallon and Laurel Kean. "It was up for grabs."

Bradley, the 1981 Open champion, and Alcott, the 1980 Open winner, matched Colonial's demanding par-71 while Kean finished with a 70.

Bradley earned the runner-up $55,000 prize at 285 while Alcott was third at 286 and Kean fourth at 287. Joan Pitcock, the co-leader with Bradley after three rounds, fired a 75 and fell back to 289.

Mallon, playing ahead of Bradley and Alcott, caught the leaders with a 21-foot birdie putt on the 11th hole, kept pace with a 25-foot birdie at No. 14 and moved ahead with a 30-footer at 15.

At the 16th tee, she said, she did not know whether she was ahead or behind and did not want to know for fear of adding to the pressure.

"I made a conscious effort not to look at the scoreboard," she said. "Then some little kid told me I was a shot ahead. ... When I heard that, I got a little nervous."

She rescued par on the par 3 16th with the "putt of the tournament," a sidehill 3 1/2-footer, easily parred the last two holes and watched via the national telecast as neither Bradley nor Alcott could mount a rally.

"I have nothing to be ashamed of," said Bradley, who retained her position as the year's leading money-winner. "I played well, played steady, all week. Somebody made a few more birdies, but that's just the name of the game..."

"They haven't seen the last of me yet."

Like Bradley, Alcott pointed out that she played well and certainly gave away nothing: "Meg shot a great round of golf. She definitely went out and won the golf tournament."

Mallon, a resident of Ramona, Calif., attended Ohio State University and is a former Michigan amateur champion. She's in her fifth year on the tour.

Alcott described Mallon as a "happy, light-hearted person, a good person, who deserves to win. ... She thinks she can win, and that's a big part of it. She's in that period of her life when it's time — the transition from contender to winner."

Betsy King, whose bid for a third consecutive Open crown flamed out early, closed with a 3-under-par 68 for 294, 11 shots behind the new champion.

Beth Daniel, with a record 5-under-par 66 Sunday, never seriously challenged the leaders but wound up respectfully at 291.

Favorites fare well in U.S. Olympic Festival events

By OWEN CANFIELD

LOS ANGELES (AP) — America's top figure skating team survived a late fall Sunday to win the U.S. Olympic Festival gold medal, while a new scoring system for boxing left two competitors puzzled.

The second day of the festival featured competition in 19 sports, ranging from freestyle wrestling to rhythmic gymnastics. The festival continues through July 21 at sites in and around Los Angeles.

Natasha Kuchiki of Canoga Park, Calif., and Todd Sand of Costa Mesa, Calif., won as expected in figure skating. The pair, who finished third in the World Championships earlier this year, overcame a fall by Sand in the final moments of their free skating routine.

"Our performing level was very good today," Kuchiki said. "The only glitch was the double flip" when Sand fell.

Calla Urbanski of Chicago and Rocky Marval of New Egypt, N.J., won the silver medal, with the bronze going to Tristen Vega of Torrance, Calif., and Richard Alexander of Simi Valley, Calif.

The ladies' title went to 13-year-old Nicole Bobek of Chicago, who held onto the lead she had taken during the original program Saturday night. Bobek had suffered a concussion during a practice 11 days ago.

"I felt really good out there and went out and tried everything," she said.

Tonia Kwiatkowski of Broadview Heights, Ohio, won the silver medal. The bronze went to 12-year-old Joanna Ng of Woodland Hills, Calif.

In boxing, the winner and loser questioned the new electronic scoring after Kenneth Friday of the Air Force beat Julian Wheeler of the Navy 10-9 in a 125-pound semifinal.

Wheeler called the result "weird," adding, "I just don't understand the scoring."

Friday said he felt both fighters landed more punches "and I know it felt like I took more than that."

With the new system, being used for the first time in the United States, all five ringside judges press a button when they see a boxer land a scoring blow. In order for a point to be counted, three of the five judges must recognize the same punch and push their buttons within one second.

Asked why he thought he had lost, Wheeler said, "I should have moved less and thrown more punches."

Two national champions were beaten and four advanced to the finals Tuesday night.

U.S. champion Vernon Forrest of Augusta, Ga., lost to Terron Millet of St. Louis in a 139-pound match. Millet came out with a flurry of punches and dropped Forrest at the 2:10 of the first round. The fight was stopped by the referee after a standing eight count.

The victory avenged a loss to Forrest in a second-round fight in the U.S. Championships earlier this year.

At 178 pounds, reigning champion Terry McGroom of Chicago lost to John Ruiz of Chelsea, Mass., 24-18. Ruiz has been fighting only two years.

The national champions who advanced were Tim Austin of Cincinnati at 112 pounds, Ivan Robinson of Philadelphia at 125, Raul Marquez of Houston at 156 and super heavyweight Larry Donald of Cincinnati.

Marquez used his jab constantly in beating Kevin Bonner of the Army 90-11 in the most lopsided victory of the weekend.

"The jab did it. It's easy to score," Marquez said. "Boom, you press the button. Boom, you press the button. No problem."

In basketball, Joey Brown of Georgetown and Dickey Simpkins of Providence scored 15 points apiece in leading the East (1-1) to a 95-81 victory over the West. Juwan Howard, who's bound for Michigan, led the West (1-1) with 16 points.

On the women's side, Katrina Colleton of Maryland and Sonja Swopes, a freshman-to-be at Purdue, scored 10 points apiece in leading the East to a 70-54 victory over the West. Seven players scored seven or more points for the East, which improved to 1-1. The West is 0-2.

Fleisher wins N.E. Classic

By DAVE O'HARA
AP Sports Writer

SUTTON, Mass. (AP) — Last Thursday, after firing a 7-under-par 64 that gave him the first-round lead in the $1 million New England Classic, Bruce Fleisher introduced himself in the interview area, only half in jest.

After equalling Pleasant Valley's 36-hole record of 131 on Friday, the 1968 U.S. Amateur champion insisted he was just trying to have fun and build some confidence.

Fleisher struggled to a 2-over 73 on the rain-soaked 7,110-yard course on Saturday, but felt he hadn't embarrassed himself and, "I got my bad round behind me."

On Sunday, starting four strokes back, Fleisher surprised everyone — including himself — with a remarkable comeback round of 64 that gave him his first PGA Tour victory at the age of 42.

In a bogey-free final round, Fleisher, winless in 11 years on the tour before he quit for the security of a Miami club pro's job in 1983, fashioned an eagle-3 on the fourth hole and added five birdies to complete 72 holes at 268, 16 under regulation.

Then he waited while as Australian Baker-Finch and 1986

Pleasant Valley champion Gene Sauers, the 54-hole leaders, fell one stroke back and fought to get back into a tie. Baker-Finch made it with a birdie-4 on the 72nd hole. Sauers didn't, failing to become the first two-time winner at Pleasant Valley since the PGA Tour's first visit in 1965.

On the seventh hole of the longest playoff on the tour since the 1983 Phoenix Open, Fleisher, the last alternate to gain a tournament berth, hit the jackpot. He sank a 40-foot birdie putt that Baker-Finch couldn't answer.

Fleisher survived dangerous situations with shots out of bunkers and rough and Finch-Baker lacked a knockout punch, missing birdie putts of seven and 15 feet on the first two extra holes.

When Fleisher's long putt fell, he claimed the winner's prize of $180,000.

"This is crazy. I've been away from the tour for more than seven years," Fleisher said after boosting his PGA career earnings to $514,000. "I'm tired and hungry, and still nervous. I played well today, but in the playoff I was uptight, erratic. I didn't make too many good shots."

"I never really thought about winning. It's almost sad someone had to lose, but someone had to win." "It was a huge effort by Bruce. It was fantastic," said Baker-Finch, the 30-year-old farmer's son who has one victory and four seconds since joining the U.S. tour in late 1988. "Something good comes out of something like this. I felt great during the playoff, but it would have been nice to hole one of those putts."

Baker-Finch, off to the British Open which begins Thursday, had the consolation of banking $108,000 to move into 10th on the money list with $468,850. He has won over $1.3 million in his brief career.

Sauers, who beat Blaine McCallister in a three-hole playoff at Pleasant Valley five years ago, finished with a 69 for a 269 total.

Ted Schulz, the Los Angeles Open champion, was along at 272. Another stroke back at 273 were local favorite Brad Fazon, runnerup here two years ago, Ed Dougherty, Charles Bowles and Barry Jaekel.

Despite the appearance of only four of the top 35 money-winners as most of golf's big guns prepared for the British Open, par-mania 71 took a beating in the tournament. There were 296 rounds of par or better. Of the 74 players who survived the 36-hole cut,

LeMond leads 'Tour' in 2nd week

By SALVATORE ZANCA
Associated Press Writer

RENNES, France (AP) — Greg LeMond started the second week of the Tour de France the same way he started the first — as the leader.

It's also the way he usually ends the race, although two weeks remain in this year's bid for a third consecutive title.

LeMond started this year's race with the yellow jersey as the defending champion. He gave it up immediately to Thierry Marie of France, who won the prologue.

LeMond got it back the next day after the first stage, but held onto it for just an afternoon before Rolf Sorensen of Denmark claimed it for the next four days.

"Since the beginning of the Tour, everybody's been attacking. That's why the lead has changed so much," LeMond said.

After Sorensen went out with a broken collarbone and Marie got it back for a second time, LeMond again took the lead — and the yellow jersey — by placing second in Saturday's time trial.

He held it for a second consecutive day on Sunday by finishing in the pack, 53 seconds behind stage winner Mauro Riberio of Brazil.

For LeMond, two days is the longest stint he's had wearing the yellow jersey since the middle of the 1989 race.

He usually wins it just in the nick of time — like the final-day time trial two years ago that enabled him to nip France's Laurent Fignon by eight seconds, or his come-from-behind effort on the next-to-last day last year to overtake Claudio Chiappucci of Italy.

LeMond wouldn't mind losing the jersey again — just as long as he wears it at the end of the race.

"I ride to win the Tour overall. So tactically I don't care what happens day after day," LeMond said. "I don't know if I can control everyone."

He can control himself, as he did Saturday in making up more than 90 seconds on favored Erik Breukink in the last 6.2 miles of the 45-mile time trial.

LeMond was second to Miguel Indurain of Spain, but finished more than a minute ahead of Breukink.

Breukink, seven seconds behind

LeMond at the start of the time trial, is now 1:13 back and second overall as the race approaches the midway point.

After the 11th stage, there is a plane transfer on Wednesday from Nantes to Pau. The riders then encounter two stages in the Pyrenees.

"From the Pyrenees on is when the race is going to take shape," LeMond said. "It is sure going to be in the Pyrenees to find out where I really stand on the Tour."

The 13th stage, from Jaca, Spain, to Val Louron, France, is marked by two first-category climbs and two others rated "out of category" in the Tour de France's rating scale on degree of difficulty.

Horses 'bashed' at Belmont

ELMONT, N.Y. (AP) — A Belmont security guard accused of bashing three horses in the face with a stick and throwing bleach that damaged one animal's eyes has been arrested on a charge of cruelty to animals, police said.

Terrance Knight, 18, told police at the time of his arrest Sunday he was petting the horses and they nipped at him, said Nassau County detective Dennis Aylward.

The injured animals — Slew's Ghost, West Texas Wind and Lord Charles — were placed under the care of a veterinarian. The seriousness of their injuries was not immediately known, Aylward said.

Each of the animals sustained injuries to its face, as the result of being hit with a stick. Slew's Ghost also had bleach thrown in his face, causing chemical burns and damage to his eyes, Aylward said.

Knight was charged with cruelty to animals and was expected to be arraigned today at First District Court. He was employed by Wack-enhut security company as a guard at the track.

The injuries were discovered after a groom noticed Knight raising a shovel, threatening to strike a horse, Aylward said. The groom called out and Knight dropped the shovel and returned to his post, police said.

Rangers snap Blue Jays' win skein; Red Sox clip Twins

TORONTO (AP) — The Texas Rangers survived two homers and three RBIs by Joe Carter and a late Toronto rally to avoid a sweep with an 8-6 victory Sunday night, snapping the Blue Jays' six-game winning streak.

Ruben Sierra singled, doubled and drove in two runs, Brian Downing had a pair of doubles and scored twice, and Juan Gonzalez hit a two-run homer to key a three-run fifth inning for Texas. The Rangers, who beat Jimmy Key (10-4), had lost the first three games of the series.

But Toronto, which had won 11 of 12, made it difficult by scoring three runs in the eighth. Carter homered with one out off John Barfield (4-3), his second of the game and 21st of the season.

Jeff Russell, the fourth Texas pitcher of the inning, got its final out and worked a perfect ninth for his 18th save.

relieved and gave up Kelly Gruber's eighth homer, then left for Kenny Rogers.

After getting an out, Rogers walked Pat Borders and hit Derek Bell. On came Russell, who allowed a game-winning homer Saturday to Gruber. Russell got Rene Gonzalez on a fly to left.

Barfield allowed five runs on six hits in 7 1-3 innings, struck out two and walked two. Key worked 4 1-3 innings, giving up eight hits, six runs and striking out three.

On a high-scoring day in the American League, Kansas City beat Detroit 18-4, Oakland beat Baltimore 3-2, Seattle beat Cleveland 14-3, Boston beat Minnesota 5-3 and California beat New York 10-2.

Mark Knudson (1-3) allowed six hits and six runs in three-plus innings. Chicago had 15 hits in all and had its highest run total this season. Part of the problem was that Milwaukee pitchers issued nine walks.

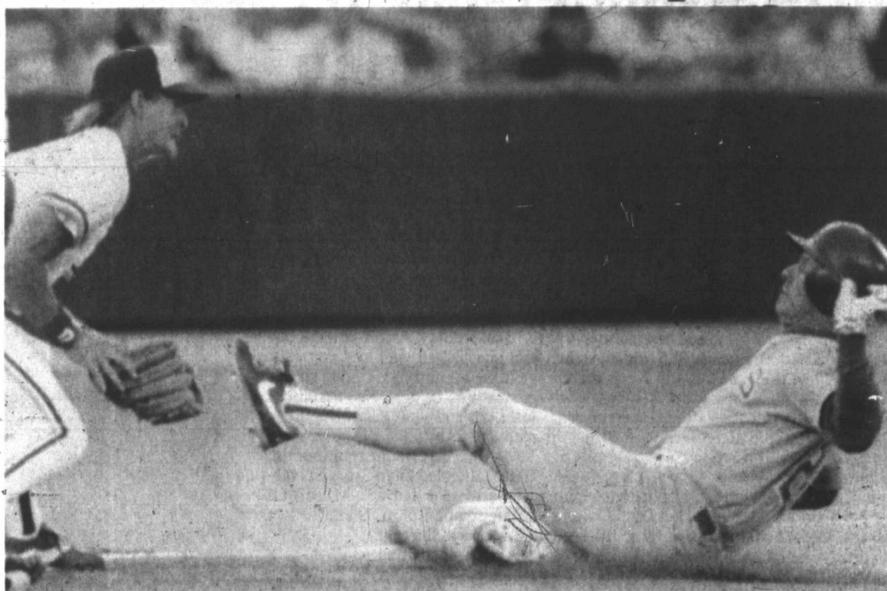

"We got hammered. We didn't throw strikes," Milwaukee manager Tom Trebelhorn said. "Then we got hammered a little bit more. People were screaming to change pitchers, we changed pitchers. Then they screamed to change pitchers again, but there's only so far you can go."

Royals 18, Tigers 4
Brian McRae and Mike Macfarlane each hit two of Kansas City's club-record six home runs. The visiting Royals had a season-high 21 hits as George Brett and Todd Benzinger also homered.

McRae drove in six runs, four with his first grand slam, in the first multiple-homer game of his career. Macfarlane also had his first multi-homer game and matched his career high with five RBIs.

Tom Gordon (5-7) was the winner and Luis Aquino got his second save. Bill Gullickson (11-5) was the loser.

major league manager. The visiting Orioles took a 2-1 lead in the 11th on Chris Hoiles's two-out, RBI single off Todd Burns (1-0).

Gregg Olson (1-4) blew his fifth save in 24 chances as pinch-hitter Jamie Quirk and Rickey Henderson singled with one out and moved up on a two-out wild pitch before Canseco's hit.

Mariners 14, Indians 3
Edgar Martínez and Scott Bradley had four hits each as Seattle prevented visiting Cleveland from winning consecutive games for the first time since June 1-3. The Indians have lost 28 of 34.

Henry Cotto drove in four runs and Pete O'Brien had three hits and drove in three runs for the Mariners, who finished with 20 hits.

Rich DeLucia (8-5) allowed seven hits in 7 1-3 innings. Mike York (0-2) gave up 10 hits and six runs in five innings.

Red Sox 5, Twins 3
Joe Hesketh won as a starter for the first time since June 28, 1986, when he beat Pittsburgh for Montreal. Luis Rivera had three hits and scored three runs at the Metrodome as Boston stopped a four-game losing streak.

Hesketh (3-1), making just his fourth start since 1986, allowed seven hits in seven innings and Jeff Reardon pitched an inning for his 22nd save.

David West (1-1), making his second appearance this season following three months in the disabled list, gave up four runs and six hits in four innings.

Angels 10, Yankees 2
Bobby Rose hit a two-run double in the fourth as California got 15 hits and stopped a seven-game losing streak.

The Angels, who had scored just one run in 41 innings, tied the score 1-1 in the bottom of the first and went ahead in the third.

Chuck Finley (13-4) became the American League's first 13-game winner, allowing both runs and nine hits. Wade Taylor (4-4) gave up five runs and five hits in 3 2-3 innings and walked seven. The visiting Yankees dropped back to .500 at 41-41.

American League

Downing led off the Texas fifth with his second double and scored on Sierra's RBI double. One out later, Gonzalez hit his second homer of the season for a 7-3 lead.

Downing doubled to start the game and scored one out later on Sierra's RBI single. Julio Franco singled, and both baserunners scored one out later when Steve Buechele tripled.

Carter's 20th homer scored Devon White, who led off the Toronto first with a double.

Palmeiro had an RBI single in the second. But Texas shortstop Mario Diaz made an error in the bottom of the inning, enabling Toronto to pull to 4-3.

Texas made it 8-3 in the seventh on consecutive doubles by Franco and Palmeiro.

After Carter's second home run gave him his third multiple-homer game of the season, Pat Tabler singled to finish Barfield. Rich Gossage

Expos take two from Dodgers; Giants rout Phillies

By The Associated Press

The two best teams in the National League West still haven't won a game after the All-Star break.

The first-place Los Angeles Dodgers lost four straight in Montreal, including a doubleheader on Sunday, while the Reds lost four in a row to Pittsburgh at Cincinnati. All this means the Dodgers still have their five-game lead over Cincinnati.

While the Dodgers and Reds are 0-8 since the start of the second half, the Pirates and Mets are a combined 7-1.

Pittsburgh, first in the East, completed its sweep by rallying for a 10-6 victory on homers by Barry Bonds and Bobby Bonilla.

run homer in the ninth off Don Carman.

"Those three guys in the middle, I don't think collectively they've had a series like this one," Reds second baseman Bill Doran said. "When all three get hot, I don't care who they're playing, that team is going to be in trouble. All three did a job on us."

The teams split their 12-game series last season, which also included a four-game Pirates sweep at Riverfront Stadium in August. The Reds went on to win the NL playoff in six games.

Elsewhere in the NL it was Montreal 3, Los Angeles 2 in the first game and Montreal 7, Los Angeles 4 in the nightcap; Atlanta 2, St. Louis 1; Chicago 4, Houston 3; San Francisco 17, Philadelphia 5; and San Diego 2, New York 1.

Bob Walk (7-1) allowed three runs and six hits in 6 1-3 innings to lead the Pirates to their fifth consecutive win. Walk also singled home a run to complete the five-run sixth, when Pittsburgh batted around. Kip Gross (2-1) took the loss.

"We've just been playing extremely well," Bonilla said. "We've been playing consistent baseball — a good team with a lot of talent playing well as a unit."

The Pirates' flight to Pittsburgh had to be diverted to Columbus when Pirates manager Jim Leyland complained of chest pains. Leyland was taken to a hospital for tests Sunday night for what an airline spokesman called "some discomfort in his chest."

Expos 3, Dodgers 2
Expos 7, Dodgers 4
Delino DeShields had three hits and scored twice as the Montreal beat slumping Los Angeles in the second game to sweep the doubleheader. It was the first time the Expos have ever swept a four-game series from the Dodgers.

Oil Can Boyd combined with two other relievers on a seven-hitter to lead Montreal in the opener.

Brian Barnes (1-3) gave up six hits in six innings to win for the first time since last Sept. 29 as the Expos won all six games against the Dodgers at Montreal this season. Barry Jones, who also finished the first game, pitched 1 2-3 innings for his seventh save.

Padres 2, Mets 1
San Diego right-hander Greg Harris stopped the Mets on one hit — a leadoff double by Mackey Sasser in the eighth — in 8 1-3 innings as the Padres snapped New York's 10-game winning streak.

Harris, bidding for the first no-hitter in the Padres' 23-year history, lost it when Sasser opened with a clean double to the gap in right-center field.

Still, Harris (2-1) and reliever Craig Lefferts wound up with San Diego's 14th one-hitter and ended the visiting Padres' five-game losing streak.

Fred McGriff snapped a 1-1 tie in the sixth with his 17th homer against Ron Darling (5-6).

Braves 2, Cardinals 1
All-Star game starter Tom Glavine pitched a six-hitter for his 13th victory as Atlanta completed a four-game sweep of visiting St. Louis. The slumping Cardinals have lost seven of their last eight games and seven in a row to the Braves.

Glavine (13-4) walked none and struck out eight, including the side in the third inning, as he recorded his seventh complete game and became the only 13-game winner in the NL.

The Braves took the lead in the third with two runs off Bob Tewksbury (6-5).
Giants 17, Phillies 5
Will Clark drove in seven runs, including a grand slam, and had five hits as San Francisco routed Philadelphia. Clark's seven RBIs and five hits tied his career highs.

Matt Williams added two homers and four RBIs and Kevin Mitchell hit a three-run homer as the Giants banged out 22 hits. The 17 runs were the most ever scored by an opponent at Veterans Stadium and the 22 hits tied a stadium record by the opposition.

Kelly Downs (5-4), who relieved starter Mike Remlinger in the third inning, pitched 4 2-3 hitless innings for the victory. Danny Cox fell to 3-3.

Cubs 4, Astros 3
Part-time starter Mike Bielecki won his team-high 10th game on as Chicago took three of four from Houston at Wrigley Field.

George Bell's double capped a three-run third inning off Darryl Kile (3-3), giving the left fielder seven RBIs in the four-game series.

Bielecki (10-6) improved to 7-3 as a starter, giving up 10 hits in 5 2-3 innings. He has made 14 relief appearances.

Dave Smith pitched 1 1-3 innings and Paul Assenmacher finished for his eighth save.

National League

Bonds hit a two-run homer — his third of the series — and sparked a five-run sixth inning with an RBI double that tied the score at 3. Mike LaValliere followed with a two-run double off reliever Randy Myers to send the Reds to their season-high sixth straight loss.

Marinovich signs with Raiders

By The Associated Press

Quarterback Todd Marinovich, a mixture of talent and trouble throughout his college career, in which where a combination has spelled success in the past — in the uniform of the Los Angeles Raiders.

Marinovich, the Raiders' first-round pick, signed a three-year contract Sunday and reported to their camp at Oxnard, Calif.

The quarterback from Southern Cal, drafted 24th overall, became the seventh first-round NFL pick to sign a contract. Financial terms were not disclosed.

Earlier in the day, safety Eric Turner, the No. 2 pick overall, signed a four-year, $6 million contract with the Cleveland Browns that includes a record signing bonus of $3.15 million.

Marinovich said he wanted to get to work as early as possible.

"I didn't want to miss camp," Marinovich said, although he was not there a week early with other rookies. "I wanted to be here with the veterans."

Marinovich was on the field for a walk-through with the team's veterans Sunday morning, then participated in the afternoon practice. He ran the offense for a limited number of plays as the fourth-string quarterback.

"I'll just try to learn as much as I can," Marinovich said. "There's a lot to be learned in the classroom and on the field."

Coach Art Shell took a low-key approach to Marinovich's first practice with a team on that has thrived on the play of many players considered unwanted or too unconventional for many NFL teams.

"He's a rookie," Shell said of Marinovich. "There were some good things, and some bad things."

The same could be said for Marinovich's two years at USC. Though he often showed flashes of potential greatness, the 21-year-old had been in trouble on and off the field.

Marinovich was arrested in January on misdemeanor charges of cocaine and marijuana possession.

Earlier that month, he was suspended indefinitely from the team for missing a meeting and failing to register for classes.

In April, Marinovich agreed to spend a year in a drug counseling program. If he successfully completes the program, the charges against him will be dropped.

The Raiders have signed eight of their nine picks. They selected Raghbir "Rocket" Ismail on the fourth round, knowing that Ismail had already signed a contract with the Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League.

Browns
Turner's contract included a record $3.15 million signing bonus. None of the money is deferred.

Turner will earn $550,000 this season, followed by $600,000, $700,000 and $1 million in 1994, the final year of the deal. According to a source familiar with the negotiations, Turner's signing bonus is the richest in the NFL and the total package is among the highest for a rookie defensive player.

Turner, who played at UCLA, was the highest defensive back picked in the draft in 35 years.

"I'm looking forward to becoming a football player again."

The Browns open camp today.

Giants
New York also opens camp today with a new coach and a quarterback controversy as the Giants take the first step in defense of their second Super Bowl title in five years.

Coach Ray Handley, who replaced Bill Parcells two months ago, is anxious to get to work.

"I've really been looking forward to this," said Handley, an assistant under Parcells. "I'd characterize myself as nervous only in the sense that it's like an opening kickoff. I'm looking to get the butterflies out."

Who will be the quarterback? Will it be Jeff Hostetler, who led the team in the playoffs after Phil Simms was injured? Or will Simms — who led the Giants to their first Super Bowl victory, in 1987 — reclaim his starting job? Simms has the advantage right now — Hostetler hasn't signed and isn't in camp.

Redskins
Washington opened camp with quarterback Mark Rypien absent and still not under contract. Coach Joe Gibbs said he considers Rypien his starter, but made it clear he's ready to turn to backup Stan Humphries.

Rypien and the Redskins were reported to be close to reaching an agreement.

49ers
San Francisco reached agreements with four veterans, leaving offensive tackle Bubba Paris and linebacker Bill Romanowski as the only holdouts.

Census decision will toss question back to courts

By TIM BOVEE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's decision today on correcting the census is far from the last word on whether to scrap last year's count in favor of population estimates.

The next step for the politically charged question is the place it began — under the stern gaze of a federal judge.

It was a judge who ordered Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher to decide by today if the government will use estimates instead of the actual census count to determine how many representatives each state sends to Congress.

The government has never jettisoned official census numbers in the 200 years that it has been counting Americans.

More than 30 governments, organizations and individuals representing big cities and populous states have filed suit in New York to force federal officials to correct the 1990 census. By the Census Bureau's own estimate, the count of 248.7 million is too low by 5.3 million people.

Other lawsuits, like one filed by Wisconsin, ask the courts to forbid any adjustment of the census numbers.

Under a court order in the New York suit, Mosbacher could correct the census if the government could prove the population estimates were more accurate than the census count, not just for the nation as a whole but for small cities and even neighborhoods.

The estimates come from a survey of 165,000 households conducted by the government about the time of the census.

Attorneys on either side are poised to demand a quick judicial response, whichever way Mosbacher decides.

If he decides to keep the census count, "we'll go back to court," said David Goldin, assistant corporation counsel for New York City, an advocate of correcting the numbers. "We'll ask the court to order that the census be corrected."

There's a lot at stake for the cities and states. A low population count translates into a loss of billions of federal dollars and a decade of diminished political clout.

The year before the census was taken, for example, 45 federal programs distributed more than $17 billion in aid based on the count, congressional auditors said.

The programs cut across the range of American life. They provided money to feed, educate and house the poor, build and fix highways, run mass transit systems, control air pollution, and treat alcohol and drug addictions.

Moreover, the census numbers are used to draw political districts for big governments and small, from the U.S. House of Representatives down to state legislatures, city councils and town boards.

The 1990 census not only miscounted Americans, it miscounted them unevenly.

People in inner cities, blacks, Hispanics and southerners were more likely to be overlooked. People in smaller communities, whites, Asian-Americans and midwesterners were less likely to be missed.

Critics of the census argue the numbers should be corrected because of their racial, ethnic and class distortion. They say the estimates are more accurate.

Traditionalists say the Constitution forbids using estimates as the census, no matter how accurate. They say the solution is to improve counting methods in time for the next census in 2000.

Correcting the census numbers would change House representation in four states, transferring one seat apiece from Pennsylvania and Wisconsin to California and Arizona.

Pennsylvania's and Wisconsin's congressional delegations are split almost evenly between Democrats and Republicans. California's delegation is predominantly Democratic, and Arizona's is mainly Republican.

An expert in redistricting and voting rights issues, Allan Lichtman of American University, said a census correction would tend to add people to districts that vote for Democrats.

But whether that would actually increase Democratic power in state legislatures "depends on who's drawing the lines," he said.

State legislatures began drawing new districts as early as January, when the Census Bureau began releasing computer tapes containing detailed population counts.

The Census Bureau prepared new tapes containing the revised numbers for overnight shipment to the states in case of a decision to correct the census.

Sloppy ride

Saddlebronc rider Kenny Taton's 'sloppy ride' had nothing to do with his abilities. Two days of heavy rains had left the Top O' Texas Rodeo arena a squishy, slippery mess that made it hard for both man and beast at the Saturday night performance of the Top O' Texas Rodeo. Taton was granted a re-ride after his bronc, Hell Again, slipped in the mud and rolled throwing the rider into the mess, as well. Fortunately, neither the horse nor the rider were injured.

Congress to tackle issue of fetal tissue research

By DEBORAH MESCE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Is medical research on fetal tissue a step forward in health care or an inducement to abortion?

The debate over fetal tissue research — a controversy that mixes science and ethics — is coming before Congress this summer for the first time, on the heels of another abortion-related vote.

Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., notes that many House members who oppose abortion voted to permit abortion counseling at federally funded family planning clinics. "I expect the same to happen when the issue of fetal tissue transplantation comes up," he says.

Waxman, chairman of the House Energy and Commerce health subcommittee, helped win his panel's approval of a measure to overturn the administration's ban on federally funded research using tissue from elective abortions.

The Bush administration imposed the indefinite ban because of concern that such experiments would lead to more abortions. Abortion foes are counting on the president to veto any congressional effort to reverse the ban.

But with scientists saying that fetal tissue could be useful in research on Alzheimer's, Parkinson's and other diseases, some members of Congress view the subject as more than another vote on abortion.

"This issue continues to evolve and we continue to be tested," said Rep. Frederick Upton, R-Mich., who personally opposes abortion but does not stand solidly in either the anti-abortion or abortion-rights corner.

"These are very gut-wrenching issues," he said.

For Upton, the fetal tissue research question takes on a personal tone. He said he thinks about his grandfather with Alzheimer's disease, a favorite physics teacher just diagnosed with Parkinson's disease and a former colleague, Morris Udall, the Arizona Democrat also stricken with Parkinson's who resigned his House seat in April.

"I don't really see it as an abortion issue," Upton said.

The fetal tissue question follows last month's House approval of a measure to reverse the ban on abortion counseling at federally funded clinics.

The counseling ban, called the "gag rule," was upheld recently by the Supreme Court. But opponents argued that it was an issue of free speech and medical ethics — not abortion.

The fetal tissue matter, part of a bill to reauthorize the National Institutes of Health, tentatively was scheduled to be considered on the House floor later this month.

"People are starting to look at these issues more carefully, rather than simply blindly following some recommendation from the so-called right to life lobby, because the issues are different," Waxman said.

"Both of these issues are not about abortion," Waxman said. "In the case of the 'gag rule' the question is one of free speech and full disclosure of information that a patient should have in making her decision for dealing with a pregnancy."

"With fetal tissue, we're not talking about whether people should have an abortion, but about after the abortion has taken place whether fetal tissue should be buried or cremated or used for transplants that could save people's lives," he said.

But Rep. Christopher Smith, R-N.J., one of the leaders of the House anti-abortion lobby, vigorously disputes this line of reasoning.

"Let's be very clear about it. The consequence of what they support is that babies will die by way of abortion," he said. "The medical ethics is that you're killing the life in the first place. You can't get past the fact that the baby is being killed."

Smith conceded that he and other "gag rule" supporters didn't have the votes on the House floor to kill the amendment to reverse the counseling ban. Instead, they have pinned their hopes on Bush's promise to veto any legislation that weakens current abortion regulations.

When the fetal tissue question comes up, "we will have a number of amendments that will put the issue in sharp focus, and I believe we'll win, but I don't know where in the legislative process, perhaps with a veto," he said.

More than 40 health groups, including the American Medical Association, have endorsed legislation lifting the fetal tissue research ban. But lawmakers have not felt as much pressure from constituents on this issue as they did on the "gag rule," several House members and staff said.

The amendment to block the "gag rule" was added to a bill to appropriate $203 billion for the departments of Labor, Health and Human Services and Education. The measure was passed overwhelmingly by the House and sent to the Senate, where a bill to lift the counseling ban won Labor and Human Resources Committee approval and is awaiting floor action.

Iraq delivers new, more detailed list of nuclear facilities

By KATHY EVANS

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — On a day President Bush and French President Francois Mitterrand hinted that Iraq had better tell all or face attack, Iraq released a new, more extensive list describing its nuclear program.

Sources close to a U.N. team that has been trying to get a complete picture of the Iraqi program said the list, which the Baghdad provided Sunday, was the most detailed yet offered.

But the head of the 37-member U.N. team would not say whether the list satisfied all demands made by the United Nations in the cease-fire agreement that ended the Persian Gulf War.

Iraq has been under strong pressure to meet the U.N. demands — both to win an easing of crippling economic sanctions and to avoid a threatened military strike.

Under terms of the cease-fire resolution, Iraq must disclose all of its nuclear, chemical and biological weaponry and cooperate in their destruction. Baghdad has repeatedly been accused of submitting incomplete lists and playing hide-and-seek with U.N. inspectors.

U.N. team leader Dimitri Perricos said the latest Iraqi list provides information in all areas requested: research and development in the field of uranium enrichment; manufacture and production of uranium; storage and burial; and the use of nuclear material.

He was expected to report to the International Atomic Energy Agency in Vienna and the United Nations in New York today, when the Security Council was to hear an assessment by U.N. officials of Iraq's nuclear declarations.

Perricos said a decision on whether the list satisfied U.N. requirements would be made by the atomic agency, which has sent three teams to Iraq on the U.N.'s behalf.

Pressure on Iraq to cooperate has come from the Security Council, Arab leaders and most recently — and ominously — the United States and France.

During a meeting Sunday with Bush in France, Mitterrand said military action would be "just" if Baghdad continued development of nuclear weapons or threatened Kurds or other segments of its population.

Bush said, "We are together in the way we are looking at this situation in Iraq, the situation being Saddam Hussein's continuation of lying and trying to go forward with some nuclear capability."

Iraq is seeking the easing of economic sanctions imposed after its invasion of Kuwait. It also wants foreign governments to free Iraqi assets frozen after the invasion.

Baghdad has asked the U.N. Sanctions Committee for permission to sell about $1 billion worth of oil in order to buy food and other necessities.

A special U.N. envoy, Prince Sadruddin Aga Khan, said last week that his team would recommend that Iraq be allowed to use its own funds to buy urgently needed supplies. He said his team would recommend, however, that it be ensured Iraq would not spend the money on weapons.

On Saturday, Saddam received a letter in which Arab leaders urged cooperation with the U.N. inspectors. The letter came from Egypt's President Hosni Mubarak and was delivered by PLO chairman Yasser Arafat.

A day earlier, the five permanent members of the U.N. Security Council — the United States, Soviet Union, France, Britain and China — told Iraq it would face serious consequences if it did not disclose its nuclear capabilities by July 25.

The United States has accused Baghdad of trying to develop a nuclear weapon, which Iraq denies. Iraq has said it had three secret programs to enrich uranium but insists they were peaceful.

The initial list Baghdad provided to the United Nations included 24 facilities. The U.N. Special Commission overseeing destruction of Iraq's weapons later acquired intelligence indicating there were more sites.

Iran insists on role in post-war Gulf security

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran reiterated today that it must be part of any post-war security arrangement for the Persian Gulf, a message clearly directed at an Arab conference convening in Kuwait.

Iranian Vice President Hassan Habibi told reporters enforcing security in the waterway "is impossible without Iran's presence."

His remarks were carried by Tehran radio and the Islamic Republic News Agency. Both reports were monitored in Nicosia.

Habibi spoke as foreign ministers of the six-state Gulf Cooperation Council and their counterparts from Egypt and Syria gathered in Kuwait today to discuss regional security. Iran was not invited to the session. Egypt opposes Iranian participation in a gulf security force.

Habibi said it was not possible to divide gulf security.

"The Persian Gulf and the Sea of Oman are a single body. Therefore, security of the southern waters cannot be delegated to the southern littoral states and that of the northern waters to Iran," he said.

After the ouster of Iraqi troops from Kuwait in February, the Gulf Cooperation Council nations, Syria and Egypt agreed to formation of a 100,000-member Arab security force for the gulf. But the plan ran into difficulties when Egypt began withdrawing its troops in anger over Kuwaiti preference of Western troops.

Iran rejected an agreement under which Egypt and Syria were to contribute up to 54,000 troops to the security force.

Habibi indicated Iran has dropped its opposition to the presence of Egyptian and Syrian troops in the region, saying the argument "is not over presence of the others, but rather on the necessity of Iran's contribution to maintaining tranquility in the region."

The Gulf Cooperation Council groups Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Qatar, the United Arab Emirates, Oman and Bahrain.
