More than 1,200 of the stateless Arab Bedouins are stuck in the camp, unable to return to homes in Kuwait because of the government there.

Public confession may end Japanese financial scandal

By MICHAEL HIRSH
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's top brokerages today disclosed the names of nearly 200 major clients they repaid for stock losses, and analysts said the public confession could quiet a long-simmering financial scandal for now.

All day long, television news programs recited a litany of major Japanese companies — including such famous names as Toyota, Nissan and Matsushita — that were compensated a total of $930 million to soften the sting of their stock-market setbacks.

In a country where such public rituals of shame often substitute for prosecution, the monthlong scandal likely will end here, observers said. Most experts agree it would be difficult to prove the paybacks were illegal.

But Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu and other government officials have been embarrassed by the latest evidence that Japan's economic practices are unfairly weighted to the nation's corporate giants. On Monday, they pledged anew to clean up the financial system.

Kaifu, in his strongest statement yet, said he would try to set up a watchdog body to oversee stock transactions, Kyodo News Service reported. In Parliament, legislators are now discussing tougher securities laws.

Oversight is now the role of the powerful Ministry of Finance, which has been widely blamed for looking the other way as the payments were made. It maintains close ties with the securities industry.

"Japan is criticized for having its own sense of rules in the global marketplace," said Vera Sinn, a senior analyst for Baring Securities. "Tokyo is the third leg of the tripod, together with London and New York, and it's weak."

"If they're going to play by global standards, they've got to have a market that's run fairly," she said. "Increasingly they'll find they cannot resort to gentlemanly solutions under the table."

After weeks of resistance, Japan's "Big Four" brokerages — Nomura, Daiwa, Nikko and Yamaichi — bowed to growing political pressure to name investors they had favored with compensation.

Other top Japanese businesses listed as receiving compensation were the trading firms Marubeni Corp., C. Itoh and Nissho Iwai; Showa Shell Oil Co., Nippon Oil Co., Kawasaki Steel Corp. and Sumitomo Metal Industries.

No foreign firms, still outsiders in Japan's close-knit business circles, were named. Nor were any smaller investors among the favored.

Finance Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto had urged the securities houses to release the names, and Kaifu had threatened parliamentary action to force the disclosures if they were not made voluntarily. The brokerages claimed their clients had a right to confidentiality.

Despite Hashimoto's apparently successful pressure tactics, the scandal may hurt his political career, analysts said. He had been viewed as a possible successor to Kaifu in elections this fall.

Still brewing are several other scandals that have called into question the close relationship between the Finance Ministry and its corporate charges.

Nomura Securities, for example, also is being investigated to see whether it violated securities laws by manipulating the price of shares of Tokyu Corp., a major railway company.

And Japan's banking circles have been rocked by allegations that employees at three major banks issued fake certificates of deposit that later were used as collateral to obtain loans.

Investor confidence also has been rocked. The 225-issue Nikkei Stock Average has dropped about 20 percent since the scandals began, and trading volume has dwindled. On Monday, the Nikkei fell 75.49 points, or 0.32 percent, closing at 23,443.58.

The brokerages' earlier reluctance to name compensated clients had fanned speculation about possible involvement of political or underworld figures. But the lists released Monday by the brokerages included neither.

At news conferences, the securities houses said no politicians or mob figures were involved.

Hideo Sakamaki, president of Nomura, the world's largest brokerage, said he had agonized over the disclosure decision, but public opinion and pressure from Kaifu and the Finance Ministry prevailed.

Local educators taking a 'wait and see' attitude

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Potential eleventh hour changes in the state education code by lawmakers less than four weeks before the start of the 1991-92 school year are leaving many teachers in the Pampa Independent School District concerned and angry.

Issues such as Career Ladder, which can mean as much as $3,000 a year to some teachers, and how many days of school will be required appear far from resolved.

Last week the House undid many changes from this past spring's education bill. However, Senate approval of the revisions remains questionable at best.

Dr. Dawson Orr, superintendent of Pampa schools, said teachers in the Panhandle should maintain a stand-by mindset.

"Our understanding was that the called special session was to deal with the state's critical funding crisis," Orr said. "Perhaps what we're struggling with is that this is not what we expected. In one sense it's not radically different than past years. But we thought they'd had the opportunity to deal with these issues in the spring and the decisions had been made to leave Career Ladder alone."

"Teachers around the state reacted to 180 days of instruction versus 175 during the spring, but the decision was made to leave the new law alone, so people thought it was going to stay."

Orr said the PISD invested hundreds of hours of teachers' time through committees designing a new calendar that reflected the need for five extra days of school.

Now, he said, it appears all that work was for naught, pending action by the Senate.

"People thought that was a closed issue," Orr said. "At this point the way to look at it is to be patient and cautious. The House has chosen to act on it. It's hard to get a read on if the Senate will be as aggressive."

While early reports indicated Career Ladder was abolished, Orr said lawmakers are promising those currently on Career Ladder will continue to be paid supplements of either $1,500 or $3,000 as long as they work in their current district.

Then, upon their retirement or departure, that money could be given to other eligible teachers or dispersed in other ways.

That, however, creates the problem of an elite group of teachers who are "haves" and a lesser paid group of "have nots," possibly for years to come," Orr acknowledged.

"We have for years tried to modify Career Ladder," he said. "I guess this is one of those situations of 'be careful what you pray for because you may get it.' We didn't expect this to be addressed."

"The Legislature has struggled with ever funding the system. They postponed funding Level IV year after year. The House is starting to accept the fact they never will fund the system they devised. Once you reach that point, you're tempted to say, 'Let's change it.'"

Orr said while he cannot fault the Legislature for "wanting to improve a flawed system," it is too close to the beginning of school to deal with the issue this year.

"We're going to be opening school potentially with a situation where teachers are feeling a great deal of anxiety about a very important part of their compensation package," he stated.

For Pampa teachers on the top level of Career Ladder, who also teach during Summer Academy, the loss of both programs could result in as much as a $9,000 drop in annual income.

Summer Academy is a federally-funded program that some district officials say may not be funded again next summer.

Orr said he is attempting to learn from the Texas Education Agency if House cuts in the at-risk program could mean Pampa will also lose the Pampa Learning Center, a re-entry program for drop-outs and teenage mothers.

"I'm trying to find out what this means," Orr said. "Is this a planned increase that won't go into effect or is this actually a cut? If it is a cut in current funding, I think it's irresponsible and there is no other way to put it."

He said without it, the future of the PLC is in serious jeopardy.

"At-risk funding also causes us to receive additional money that keeps class sizes lower," he said. "In order to keep those class sizes low, without that money, we would have to stop doing something else."

"I would find a cut in compensatory education money harmful, not only to Pampa but to the state."

"But that was a total of over $300 million dollars they were talking about cutting for at-risk, so we're still trying to find out exactly what they would mean to Pampa."

Personal income, consumer spending rises

WASHINGTON (AP) — Personal incomes and consumer spending both rose 0.5 percent in June, the government said today in a report analysts saw as a sign the economy will continue to grow during the third quarter.

"It gives consumer spending quite a bit of momentum going into the third quarter," said Laurence H. Meyer, head of a St. Louis economic forecasting firm. "It's another piece of data that the third quarter is locked in as fairly solid," although he added the recovery will be weaker than normal.

Meyer said there's "a significant risk" the economy will slow even more in the fourth quarter. He said a double-dip recession is possible, although a subdued recovery is more likely.

The Commerce Department

report said personal incomes in June totaled $4.80 trillion at a seasonally adjusted annual rate, up from $4.78 trillion a month earlier. It was the fifth straight monthly gain.

At the same time, it said consumer spending totaled $3.83 trillion at an annual rate, up from $3.81 trillion in May. It was the second consecutive gain. May's revised 1.2 percent increase also was slightly larger than the 1.1 percent in the first estimate.

The department reported last week that consumer spending from April through June rose at a 3.6 percent annual rate, the first quarterly increase since the July-September period of 1990.

That helped boost the gross national product at a 0.4 percent annual rate, the first advance after two quarters of decline — the classic definition of a recession.

Disposable incomes — incomes after taxes — rose 0.5 percent in June, slightly less than the 0.6 percent increase a month earlier.

The difference between incomes and spending meant Americans' savings rate remained at 3.5 percent, the same as in May but down from the 4.1 percent rate in April.

A key component of the income category — wages and salaries — jumped $26.6 billion following a $17.2 billion gain the previous month.

The spending and income figures were not adjusted for inflation. When adjusted, spending rose 0.4 percent, just half of May's 0.8 percent gain.

Disposable incomes, when adjusted for inflation, rose 0.4 percent, doubling the 0.2 percent advance in May.

Police investigate sexual assault, arson reports

Pampa Fire Marshal's Office has been called in to help in the investigation of a reported arson, which caused minor damage to Lamar Elementary School on Sunday.

In an unrelated case, Pampa police are continuing an investigation into an alleged sexual assault on Saturday. A man has been arrested in the case.

The fire marshal's office has been asked to continue a preliminary investigation begun by Pampa police into the fire at the school, which burned grass and part of a door frame, said Police Deputy Chief Ken Hall.

The fire was out upon arrival of Pampa police and the fire department was not called, Hall said.

In the reported sexual assault case, a 19-year-old woman reported she was assaulted in a bathroom at Randy's Food Mart, 401 N. Ballard, about 4:15 p.m. Saturday. The woman was treated at Coronado Hospital.

Arrested on a warrant for sexual assault was Charlie Walker III, 19, 638 S. Somerville. Walker was transferred to Gray County Jail where he was released on a $2,000 bond.

Superpower summit comes amid transformation of Soviet Union

By DEBORAH SEWARD
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Mikhail Gorbachev today made a powerful gesture to the cantankerous Soviet republics, issuing surprise invitations for local leaders to participate in this week's summit with President Bush. Bush hoped the meetings would shift relations out of the shadows of the arms race and cement an era of cooperation.

Even before Bush's arrival, Secretary of State James A. Baker III huddled with Soviet officials to settle the details of Middle East peace talks. Soviet Foreign Minister Alexander Bessmertnykh said "the time is ripe" as diplomats awaited Israel's decision on whether to participate.

The summit meetings will be the fourth between Bush and Gorbachev, and the first without arms issues at the center of discussion. Negotiators in Geneva today put their initials to a treaty reducing long-range nuclear arsenals, and Bush and Gorbachev are to sign the pact on Wednesday.

Bush departed for the Soviet capital today after a relaxing weekend. He heralded the summit in advance with an embrace of the "astonishing transformation" of the Soviet Union.

Jack Matlock, nearing the end of his tour as U.S. ambassador to Moscow, told reporters "we are no longer adversaries." He said Bush would discuss Gorbachev's plans to move the Soviet Union toward a western-style market economy, the very antithesis of communism's command-economy.

The Middle East is Bush's major concern, but Gorbachev is just as interested in peace with the Soviet republics. As Bush was in flight from Washington, Soviet officials announced that Boris Yeltsin, president of the Russian Federation and a sometime rival, would participate in summit talks along with Kazakhstan President Nursultan Nazarbayev.

Yeltsin and Nazarbayev, the two most important republican leaders, will be the first heads of government of any of the 15 Soviet republics to participate in a superpower summit. The invitation marks a significant step toward sharing power between the central government and the republics.

Kazakhstan is the second largest Soviet republic and site of the country's main nuclear weapons testing facility.

"President Yeltsin is invited to what is a really historic summit along with President Nazarbayev and other comrades," said Kremlin spokesman Vitaly Ignatenko. "A meeting like this should have appropriate representation."

Gorbachev's invitation matches Bush's own gesture: Bush meets with Yeltsin on Tuesday and will travel — without Gorbachev — to the Ukraine for what White House officials called a "major address" in Kiev. It would be the first time a U.S. president has traveled to a republic outside Russia since World War II.

U.S. officials said Bush would seek to walk a fine line in promoting reform within the Soviet Union without seeming to undermine Gorbachev or appearing to tamper in internal Soviet affairs.

Gorbachev is pushing the republics to approve a new Union Treaty, and he seeks Western aid to help introduce a market economy. Political and economic problems have emerged from the breakdown in Soviet communist authority and the republics have been reaching for greater autonomy.

"All those taking part in the negotiations have the opportunity to discuss freely any subject, that is, full fledged participation in these talks. And that is why these outstanding statesmen have been invited to attend," said Ignatenko.

Perhaps the hallmark of the new cooperation is joint sponsorship of Middle East peace talks. Secretary of State Baker arrived early and headed into meetings with Soviet Foreign Minister Alexander Bessmertnykh. "We are working together on the same platform, the same basis," the foreign minister said.

In Jerusalem, Israeli officials raised the possibility that Baker would make a sixth trip to the Middle East in the next few days. "I suppose that it will be possible to conclude during his visit all the things which are delaying opening the conference," Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said.

The showcase of the summit is the signing of the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty, the first pact to reduce the number of nuclear-tipped intercontinental missiles. The 600-page pact would cut such arsenals by 30 percent.

"The signing of START will be very important, but it will be a symbol," Bush told reporters Sunday. "... We've accomplished a first. A significant reduction in these strategic arms offers hope," he said.

"This is the first post-Cold War summit in a sense," Bush said.

Bush said, "Our main task on this trip is to chart a course for our relationship in the 1990s, at a time when the U.S.S.R. is going through an incredible economic and political transformation."

"The U.S.S.R. is in the midst of an astonishing transformation, as is our relationship to this great state," Bush said.

Bush told reporters there had been "some technical hiccups" in giving the Soviet Union most-favored-nation status, which would lower tariffs on exports to the United States.

Despite the warmth that both sides exuded before the Moscow summit, some areas of tension remained.

"We continue to urge President Gorbachev to engage in good faith and peaceful negotiations" with the secessionist states of Lithuania, Estonia and Latvia, Bush said. Gorbachev opposes independence for the Baltics.

Dam collapses in northeastern Romania; 66 killed

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — A dam collapsed following heavy rains in northeastern Romania, killing at least 66 people, an official said today. Thirty others were missing.

The weekend rains damaged hundreds of homes, and transport and communications were interrupted in many parts of the country, state radio reported.

About 10,000 people were forced to evacuate their homes near the northeastern county of Bacau after the Belci dam broke, the radio quoted Gabriel Sahagian, a Bacau official, as saying.

Laurentiu Rebecnicu, a local official, said 66 people were killed when the dam burst late Sunday. He said 30 other people were missing.

Some of those killed were standing outside their homes in a nearby valley when floodwaters swept them away, he said. Many victims were older people and children who did not know how to swim, Rebecnicu said.

Floods demolished at least 500 houses in the area and damaged 1,500 others, the state radio report said.

As many as 27 bridges were destroyed and flooding continued to threaten many villages, it said. Train traffic was halted.

The dam broke after heavy rains swelled the Tazlau River, the Ministry of Environment said.

Prime Minister Petre Roman said army troops rescued some villagers and were protecting bridges downstream. He did not say how many troops were sent to the affected area.

Heavy rainfall also caused problems in the far north and south of the country.

American tourists receive information from a Cuban woman about the history of the old La Habana, Cuba, on Sunday. More and more tourists are arriving to this city one week before the Pan Am games.

Cubans: keep the capitalism — but bring those big bucks

By ANITA SNOW
Associated Press Writer

HAVANA (AP) — Now it's Yanqui come here.

Cuba is welcoming visitors who bring dollars from the country that has been its nemesis for more than three decades.

It needs the money, now that Soviet aid is drying up and Moscow's former allies in eastern Europe demand payment for their goods in hard currency.

Americans who get around the U.S. travel ban will be among the 10,000 visitors expected for the the Pan American Games, which begin this week.

Those who want to visit the communist island 90 miles from Florida can do so easily by traveling via third countries like Canada, Mexico or Jamaica.

No figures are available, but Cubans say relatively few Americans visit the island. An estimated 340,000 foreigners came to Cuba in 1990, most of them from Canada and Europe.

Diana Nairn of Marazul Charters in New York said Americans exempt from the travel ban will be among more than 2,000 people her company sends to the games Aug. 2-18, including the U.S. baseball team and journalists.

She said her agency "won't touch" Americans covered by the ban, "but they'll find a way to go anyway."

Under the Trading with the Enemy Act, only American journalists, professional scholars, Cuban-Americans visiting immediate family and fully sponsored guests may spend money in Cuba. It is part of a trade embargo imposed 30 years ago when Washington broke relations with Fidel Castro's government.

"If Americans are going to Cuba through a third country, they're going there illegally," said Robert Levine, a U.S. Treasury Department spokesman.

He said anyone prosecuted under the act could face maximum penalties of 12 years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

"I don't see the political pressure easing up for a while on Americans who want to visit Cuba,"

— Diana Nairn
New York travel agent

Levine says no Americans have been prosecuted for visiting Cuba through a third country, but a Texan recently was sentenced to 90 days in federal prison and fined $5,000 for organizing a fishing trip to Cuba.

Nairn said the government may get in touch with Americans planning to visit Cuba if their travel plans become known.

Federal officials questioned several medical students in one of her travel groups, and some of their parents, about their reasons for going there, she said. As students examining Cuba's health care system, they qualified for the exemption and were allowed to go.

"I don't see the political pressure easing up for a while on Americans who want to visit Cuba," Nairn said.

Most Americans who visit Cuba from a third country travel from Canada, Nairn said. Other Americans go through Mexico.

In addition, charter flights are available on a variety of Caribbean islands, including Jamaica, the Caymans and Bahamas.

All an American needs to enter are a tourist card and a passport, which Cuban officials won't stamp if asked not to.

The travel ban appears an effective deterrent. A visitor spending a week in Cuba saw only three other Americans, all of whom had traveled via Canada.

Many Cubans, even in Havana, say they have met no Americans, or only a few. They seem eager to practice their English and criticize U.S. foreign policy. Some also whisper about their own government's failings.

Ordinary Cubans resent the fact that only tourists, diplomats and high Cuban officials are allowed to possess dollars, the sole currency in hotels, better restaurants, nightclubs and "dollar stores."

"It's humiliating that I, as a Cuban, cannot buy a drink at the Havana Libre Hotel," said a journalist in his 50s, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

"Before the revolution, they wouldn't let blacks drink there," he said. "Now they discriminate against all Cubans because we don't have dollars."

Americans are welcome, but a billboard in downtown Havana is a reminder that the politics haven't changed.

It depicts a man in fatigues standing on an island and defiantly shouting at Uncle Sam: "Imperialists, sirs: 'We don't have a single fear!'"

Senate OKs formation of new transportation department

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate approved a bill that would merge the current Department of Highways and Public Transportation and Department of Aviation into a new Texas Department of Transportation.

The bill was approved Sunday on a 24-6 vote. The legislation, which had been approved by the House, was returned to the House with amendments Sunday night, after 5 1/2 hours of debate on 28 proposed changes.

The Motor Vehicle Commission and Texas Turnpike Authority also would be placed under the Department of Transportation, with the move of the Turnpike Authority subject to passage of a constitutional amendment. Operations of the High-Speed Rail Authority, which is charged with constructing a high-speed train connecting the state's major cities, would be transferred to the Texas Railroad Commission on Sept. 1, 1995.

Scott Royder of the Sierra Club's Lone Star Chapter said the bill made some improvements. But he said the Senate had caved in by accepting much of the House bill.

Royder said lawmakers are "guilty once again of pandering" to the highway department's "self-perpetuating needs to continue to spend taxpayer dollars to build new roads when they should have taken the opportunity to shift" the department's "responsibilities toward public transit and environmental protection."

Like so much other legislation in the 30-day special legislative session, which reached the halfway mark today, the transportation bill could end up in a House-Senate conference committee.

Senators, for example, on Sunday accepted a request by the House for a conference committee on a measure that would reorganize state health and human services agencies.

The Senate, with the House in adjournment, also approved a bill that sponsor Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, claimed would bring in $500 million a year in federal funds for Texas hospitals that serve a disproportionate share of patients on Medicaid.

The concept is to reward those hospitals and to provide an incentive to others to do more, so access to health care will be improved. Currently, 24 hospitals meet the criteria for the federal matching funds, according to figures compiled by Brooks' staff.

The proposal was sent to the House on a 30-0 vote.

Under the transportation bill, the three-member board overseeing the new department would be selected by the governor, which is the practice now for the state highway commission. The governor would designate the chairman, but the board would appoint the executive director.

Senators added an amendment, 17-13, that would require one of the three new commissioners to be chosen from a rural area. An amendment that would increase the commission from three to six members was rejected 24-7.

U.S. Highway 59 from Houston to Laredo would be designated as the Sen. Lloyd Bentsen Highway, honoring Texas' senior U.S. senator.

Another provision of the bill would allow restaurants to open at highway rest areas. The Senate, however, eliminated a House provision to charge motorists up to $2 a ride for the use of ferries, which are now free. A Senate amendment also deleted a provision that would authorize the department to place a lien on a motorist's car for failure to pay toll road fees. Instead, the motorist could be fined $100.

The bill would require the Department of Public Safety to reduce the number of commissioned officers at driver's license facilities, with a cap at 100, and would phase out use of troopers for motor vehicle inspection by 1995.

Brooks tried three times to retain troopers in the program, losing on votes of 20-9, 16-15 — with Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock casting the tie breaker — and 19-11.

Since police enforcement of a ban on drinking alcohol on Galveston's famed seawall along the Gulf of Mexico, officials and shop operators report an increase of families and individuals taking advantage of the seawall.

Alcohol ban on Galveston seawall leaves great taste and less trouble

By MICHAEL GRACZYK
Associated Press Writer

GALVESTON (AP) — City leaders and shop owners are elated by renewed enforcement of an alcohol ban along the Galveston seawall.

"Galveston always has been seen as a place to let your hair down and do what you want," says Mayor Barbara Crews. "We want people to enjoy and relax but there are limits to the kind of behavior that will be tolerated. We want people to know there are limits."

The 10-mile-long seawall, built after the 1900 hurricane to prevent future tidal surges from ravaging the island, has been at the center of one of Texas' most popular tourist destinations. More than a quarter million beachgoers can jam the resort island about 50 miles southeast of Houston on busy weekends.

But in more recent years, the seawall has attracted what the local folks call "beach bums" who camp out on the wall guzzling beer and harassing the free-spending and, in some cases, scantily-clad tourists.

The Galveston City Council passed the ordinance in 1988 banning alcohol on the seawall, but it wasn't until this summer that officials decided to enforce the ban beginning after the July Fourth weekend.

Since then, municipal court records show about two dozen people have been ticketed for violation of the ordinance, a Class C misdemeanor that carries penalties ranging from $100 to $500.

"The alcohol ban has been very positive so far," says police Capt. Rick Boyle. "The feedback we're receiving from citizens and business has been very favorable."

"I have noticed a very big change," Mayor Crews agrees. "What I have seen are more families and individuals who seem to be really taking advantage of the seawall, strolling, riding bikes, running, walking and just enjoying the sights. It's just more pleasant."

"It's been a 100 percent improvement," says Carl Schutz, who's been running on the seawall several times a week for 20 years. "It's the best thing they've ever done. You don't get all the groups that sit around — and no bums. It was a despicable situation."

"At least it's a lot calmer than it used to be," adds Elizabeth Taylor, 21, who works at a seawall clothing store called Surf Styles. "You don't see as many people drinking. It had gotten pretty scary here. I had to call 911 a couple of times."

Charles Walker, who operates a bicycle rental and facepainting shop on the seawall, says the prohibition also has helped keep the boulevard and sidewalks clean.

"People would walk with a bottle of wine in a bag and leave it or break them," he says. "I didn't like that at all."

About the only recent opposition to enforcement of the alcohol ban came from beer distributors who feared it would put a dent in their sales.

"Just a select few were the root of the (drinking) problem," says Gene Van Over, president of the Galveston Wholesale Beer Distributors Association. "I never saw a lot of problems myself. Anytime you have a situation and someone abuses it, there's going to be a problem. I think this was a case of a few individuals doing what they shouldn't have been doing and this was just the city council's answer."

Special SSI rules apply to earnings of summer workers

Young people who take summer jobs such as farm work, service jobs involving tips, and sales jobs involving commissions should note that there are special rules designed to ensure that their wages are reported for Social Security purposes.

Unlike regular wages, which are reported by employers for Social Security credit, persons earning tips and sales commissions must report their own earnings to Social Security.

If you are a farm worker, be sure to keep a record of your wages. That is because your employer only needs to report your wages if he or she paid you at least $150 in cash. You also should ask Social Security for a free statement of your earnings every three years to verify that your wages have been properly reported.

If you work at a job where you earn tips, you must report them if they exceed $20 or more a month from one employer. The tips must be reported within 10 days after the month ends. The report is given to the employer in writing and should include your name, address, Social Security number, employer's name and address, total tips, and the period earned. The employer is then required to report those tips to Social Security along with other wages you received.

Persons earning sales commissions may be treated as self-employed workers under Social Security law. Self-employed workers, and employees who are treated as self-employed, must have earnings of at least $400 a year before the earnings are covered by Social Security. If you make that much, you must file a federal income tax return and pay any federal taxes due and the Social Security tax.

For more information on income from farm work, tip, sales commissions, or other self-employment work, contact any Social Security office or call the toll-free telephone number 1-800-234-5772. The Pampa Social Security office is located at 125 S. Gillespie. Office hours are 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday, except on national holidays.

Man found in Big Bend Park was beaten to death

DALLAS (AP) — An Irving man whose body was discovered in Big Bend National Park had been badly beaten before he died, a Dallas newspaper reported.

Donald Tate, 26, whose partially clothed body was found July 19 near the Rio Grande, was beaten with a baseball bat or club, a source close to the investigation told The Dallas Morning News.

The badly burned body of Tate's 5-year-old daughter, Boston Michelle Tate, was found late Tuesday inside Tate's burned-out van. The van was three miles from where Tate's body was found.

Tate's skull was smashed, all his ribs were broken, his left hip was dislocated, his right leg was fractured and his neck was broken, the unnamed source said. The broken neck is the official cause of death, the newspaper reported Sunday.

Investigators, who are treating the case as a double homicide, believe the child died in the car fire and that she had not suffered any other injuries, the source said.

Dr. Ralph Erdmann, who performed autopsies on both bodies, plans to give his reports to the FBI this week.

Tate, an avid camper, left July 11 with his daughter for a camping trip in Big Bend. They were expected back in Irving on July 19.

Investigators have said they do not have a motive in the killings.

Texas horse races successful amid slumps in other states

DALLAS (AP) — Texas is celebrating an apparent horse racing boom, while many tracks across the country appear to be facing financial ruin, experts say.

Weak attendance and slow betting has some of the industry's most familiar institutions, including track and breeding farms, near collapse. Several new ventures never made it.

Meanwhile, groups of investors are fighting for rights to build Class 1 tracks in Dallas-Fort Worth, Houston and San Antonio, which rank among America's 10 largest cities.

"The way things are going now, I wouldn't consider building a track anywhere in the country, unless it was Texas," says real estate developer Jerry Carroll of Florence, Ky., an investor in a proposed San Antonio-area track.

After years of struggling for reasons, track operators still haven't reached a consensus on why racing fails while other sports in their towns prosper.

Some explanations for the slide are:

- Competition from other gambling, legal and illegal.
  - An aging fan base combined with a failure to attract new generations.
  - A revision in tax laws to restrict writeoffs for horse owners.
  - High pari-mutuel takeouts.
- The Birmingham Turf Club in Alabama and Iowa's Prairie Meadows are in bankruptcy. Minnesota's Canterbury Downs and The Woodlands in Kansas City are struggling against a discouraging bottom line.

New indictment returned in 13-year-old case

ROSENBERG (AP) — A 13-year-old murder case is back in the courts system thanks to the persistence of a Dallas couple.

Tommie Adrian Simpson, 50, has been charged with the murder of Penny Simpson on Jan. 27, 1978. He has been free on $10,000 bond and was to be arraigned on the charge today.

Mrs. Simpson, 24, was four months pregnant when she drowned in the frigid waters of the Brazos River.

Fort Bend County prosecutors dismissed a 1979 indictment against Simpson in 1980 because of a lack of evidence. But Mrs. Simpson's parents, Nell and Howard Lee, asked investigators to review the case two years ago and Simpson was re-indicted June 26.

"The reason they dismissed the case was the guy didn't commit a crime," Simpson's attorney Robert Bennett said. In a motion for bond reduction for Simpson, Bennett called the drowning "an automobile accident, pure and simple."

But Detective Brad Rollins, a patrol officer at the time of the drowning, still questioned details of the case.

"There were two things I can remember about that night," he told the Houston Chronicle. "One was how severe the cold was. The second thing was, I remembered the man came out of the water, and I remember thinking how strange it was this man wasn't suffering from hypothermia."

"After reviewing and working on this case the last two years, I'm at a loss to explain why it wasn't prosecuted," Rollins said.

Simpson, a Houston tax attorney who has since remarried, told police in January 1978 that he drove his wife of four years and their dog to the river bank shortly before midnight to search of a fishing spot they could use later. It was 36 degrees that night.

As the couple left the fishing spot, Simpson said, the car lurched forward instead of backward, rolling down an embankment and into the water.

"The car seemed to be floating in the water, and my wife asked me what to do," he told officers. "I told her to roll the window down and climb out the window. Just before I started to struggle to get out of the window, I attempted to help my wife get out of the car by pushing her up."

Simpson and the dog escaped, but the car sank. He said he stayed in the water calling and looking for his wife for some time, then ran for help, he told police.

Authorities recovered his wife's body the next afternoon. The cause of death was ruled a drowning, police said.

Accident reconstruction specialists said that the car had been traveling at high speed when it went over the bank and was airborne before it hit the water. The Lees, who suspect their daughter was dead when the car went into the river, said she was a good swimmer and would have taken off her heavy overcoat to free herself.

But former Fort Bend County District Attorney Bill Meitzen said allegations that anyone tried to protect Simpson by dropping the case are ludicrous.

"If I had wanted to protect him from prosecution, all I had to do was go to trial and lose the case," Meitzen said. "I had a great deal of suspicion that he somehow had managed to cause the death of his wife. I just felt like we didn't have the facts to prove it."

dropped by one-third when the city's casinos opened.

Across the Texas border, Louisiana Downs in Bossier City, La., may soon face competition from riverboat gambling. State lawmakers recently approved such operations. Soon, a boat could be cruising down the Red River between Shreveport and Bossier City.

Ak-Sar-Ben in Omaha, Neb. is another once-prosperous track conquered by the competition. Ak-Sar-Ben — Nebraska spelled backwards — grew rapidly in the 1970s and peaked at $1,998,246 in average daily betting in 1983.

But then Bluffs Run Greyhound Track opened in 1986 seven miles away in Council Bluffs, Iowa, a lottery was legalized in Iowa, and two other nearby tracks moved in.

Ak-Sar-Ben is handling $475,860 in on-track bets this year, a decline of 76 percent during the past five years. Executive director Don Drew resigned last week.

With various forms of legal gambling on the increase around the United States, experts say horse racing's share of the wagering action will probably continue to fade.

But there's still hope in Texas. "Texas is going to have first-class racing and quality horses, as long as the Legislature doesn't see government getting involved with gambling," Drew says. "All the rest of the tracks will suffer a little bit more. But that's life."

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Ending sanctions is the right move

Now that South Africa has broken entirely with its apartheid policies, President Bush correctly has ended the U.S. economic sanctions against the country. Bush called the march away from apartheid "irreversible." South African President F.W. de Klerk, who has pushed forward the revolutionary changes, recently freed all political prisoners and stopped registering people according to race.

Two other recent acts have brought South Africa back into a normal position in the world. The International Olympic Committee lifted its ban on South Africa's participation in the 1992 Olympiad in Barcelona, Spain.

And South Africa promised to sign the Nuclear Non-Proliferation treaty, even though it denies the widely held belief among intelligence experts that the country possesses nuclear weapons.

Predictably, some American commentators attacked Bush's decision, Randall Robinson, head of TransAfrica, called it "a distressing, saddening thing." Charged Rep. Ron Dellums of California: "In the rush to lift sanctions, the administration risks all the progress that has been made to date." Both critics ignore the fact that the sanctions have mostly hurt poor, black South Africans by forestalling economic opportunity.

Michael Johns, Heritage Foundation foreign policy analyst for African and Third World Affairs, said, "Black unemployment and underemployment is in excess of 40 percent. This is one of the major barriers to success for blacks. So, as the United States resumes trade, we will help establish the groundwork for a viable political and economic system." Moreover, by dropping sanctions, "we are listening to the voices of South Africans." The latest Gallup Poll shows that 82 percent of South African blacks oppose sanctions.

The ending of sanctions was also supported by Zulu Chief Mangosuthu Buthelezi, president of the Inkatha Freedom Party. Even Nelson Mandela of the African National Congress, though he opposed the lifting of sanctions now, conceded that he would have preferred to wait only a while longer.

Despite the end of the sanctions and of apartheid, South Africa faces many difficulties. As we in the United States know too well, dismantling racial barriers is only the first step toward harmony among races. And South Africa could even end up trying to force the matter, as our government has done, through the mirror-image apartheid of affirmative action.

But perhaps South Africa can learn from our mistakes — and our successes. With the demise of both apartheid and sanctions, both nations should join in advancing free trade. It is freedom and property rights, not apartheid or affirmative action, that bring prosperity and equality.

The Indians deserve one, too

WASHINGTON — George Armstrong Custer has been dead these 115 years, but his belligerent spirit marches on. On July 25 a Senate subcommittee started hearing witnesses for and against a bill to honor the Indians who killed him and his men in the Battle of Little Bighorn. Such bills ordinarily get a free ride. This one won't.

It figures. Custer was born in Ohio in 1839 and reared in Michigan. Every biographer agrees on this much: He was born to fight. Following his graduation from West Point in 1861, Custer fought as a second lieutenant in the Battle of Bull Run. At the tender age of 23 he was a major general in command of Union volunteers. In 1865 he pursued Lee to Appomattox and accepted the Confederates' flag of truce.

In the history of the U.S. Army, few officers have aroused such passions. After the Civil War, briefly reduced to his permanent rank of captain, he began a legendary career as an Indian fighter. In 1867 he was court-martialed for disobeying orders, found guilty and suspended from the Army for 10 months. Later he got in trouble with President Grant over charges brought by Custer of corruption in the Indian Bureau.

Writing in the Encyclopedia of American Biography, Richard A. Bartlett describes Custer as "the epitome of the military personality that looks upon war as a game." He possessed "raw humor, power to make quick decisions, lust for battle, impetuosity, a massive ego, romanticism, driving ambition and determination."

More to the immediate point: In the spring of 1876, as a lieutenant colonel of cavalry, Custer received orders to herd various tribes of hostile

James J. Kilpatrick

Sioux and Cheyennes back to their reservations. Gold fever was in the western air. Settlers and prospectors wanted the Indians cleared out.

The big-sky country of Montana was then Indian country. The Indians had been terribly victimized by graft and corruption. They had heard the forked tongues of white men who breached the Treaty of Fort Laramie. Through the brutal winter of 1875-76 they faced starvation. They loved their land and their heritage.

Custer did his duty, but he did it his way. He took his regiment of 700 men into what is now Montana, divided them into five companies and reconnoitered an Indian settlement on the south bank of the Little Bighorn River. His intelligence served him poorly. Instead of finding a few hundred warriors, Custer found an estimated 2,500 to 3,000, armed not only with bows and arrows but with repeating rifles also. Other thousands of Indians led by Chief Sitting Bull and Chief Crazy Horse were in the area.

Every schoolboy knows the rest of the story. On the morning of June 25, Custer deployed one body of men under Maj. Marcus Reno and another under command of Capt. Frederick Benteen. Then Custer attacked, only to be overwhelmed. In barely an hour of fighting, Indians massacred Custer and his entire command. Reno panicked. Benteen dallied. It was the last major engagement of the Indian wars.

In 1879 Congress designated the site as a national cemetery. In 1881 a monument was erected on Last Stand Hill to honor the troops who died there. Eventually the cemetery was redesignated as the "Custer Battlefield National Monument." Every other battlefield site within the park system is named for the scene of the fighting. Only the Custer National Monument is named for an officer. Indians have resented the snub for many years.

Under the bill now pending in the Senate, the monument would be named anew as the Little Bighorn Battlefield National Monument. An advisory committee would conduct a design competition for a memorial to the Indians who "gave their lives defending their families and their traditional lifestyle."

The bill passed the House on June 25, over a vigorous protest from Rep. John Dingell of Michigan. His Monroe County constituents want the name unchanged. Montana's two senators, Max Baucus and Conrad Burns, support the bill, but there are indications that opposition will develop. A similar bill went back and forth last year between House and Senate, and died in the rush to adjournment.

I say, let's hear it for the Indians. Custer was only doing his duty. Absolve him. But no contemporary bills, resolutions or memorials ever can rewrite the shameful history of our treatment of the Indian people. The bill is a small gesture of atonement. God knows we have much to atone for.

Open season on celebrities

When your congressman comes home for campaigning, see him personally if you can — tell him how you feel about things — but do not expect to see him "alone."

Why? Surely you have no intention of hurting him. Yet he no longer dares take that chance.

Because if you were intent on embarrassing him politically or blackmailing him financially, it would be so easy.

You enter his office of his hotel suite alone. Talk to him about whatever for a few minutes.

Then — jump from your chair, muss your hair, shred your garments and run from his office screaming, "Rape!"

Whether you or he are male or female makes no difference anymore.

If he pays you to shut up or relies on a public denial, you've got him either way.

Either you collect a payoff from him or cash from some sleazy tabloid.

So do not expect a "private visit" with any person of prominence anymore.

Before Billy Graham enters his hotel room his longtime associate T.W. Wilson enters the room ahead of him to make certain there is no blonde in the bed with a photographer in the closet.

It's not entirely a recent threat. Actor John Wayne rarely traveled without Ward Bond riding shotgun. But recently the threat of blackmail has been multiplied by Supreme Court decisions that "public persons" are fair game and without recourse.

A public person who tries to defend himself against libel is required to prove "malice," which scores of court contests have demonstrated is practically impossible.

As surely as Americans are having to bolt their doors against intruders to a degree never before necessary, Americans are having to be wary of Blackmailers.

Nor is it just celebrities who are targets.

There is no way to know how many workaday American husbands have paid some form of blackmail to somebody who threatened to tell the wife: "He tried to rape me!"

The accusation need have no validity whatsoever, nor is there any assurance such payoffs would ever end.

A behaving man with a trusting wife would seem invulnerable — but not if the accuser screams loud enough to make the local news.

If this menace is ever to be brought under control, it will require a degree of journalistic discipline which increasingly competitive media are disinclined to demonstrate.

Yet until that happens, you'll have to choose even your companions carefully. Liberate thought his personal bodyguard was adequate protection. Now his personal bodyguard wants his money.

A global trend toward new bigotry?

By CHUCK STONE

One of the hippest jazz albums in the past 40 years is the Count Basie band romping behind Frank Sinatra. It sings with an awesome majesty, and the power of two jazz legends kicking up a storm hasn't dimmed with the years.

In contemplating the current ideological mood in world affairs, I thought of one of the fastest-paced numbers in the Basie-Sinatra album, "Looking at the World With Rose-Colored Glasses."

That's because no amount of rose-colored tint could elicit optimism about a global trend that seems to be giving aid and comfort to bigotry: Neo-conservatives in America, young neo-Nazis in Germany and Japan-bashers all over.

Neo-conservatives will take immediate umbrage at any assessment that remotely ties them to neo-Nazis and Japan-bashers, and I don't blame them. After all, neo-conservatives ought to fall within the protected reciprocity of civility that has always governed discourse in our democracy.

John Stuart Mill put it nicely in his discussion of "intemperate discussion, namely invective, sarcasm, personality and the like," then went on to lament: "The worst offense of this kind which can be committed by a polemic is to stigmatize those who hold a contrary opinion as bad and immoral men."

That sentence has nagged my conscience for decades, because I have never been mature enough to avoid sinking into the dialectical quagmire of argumentum ad hominem. Unlike most of my conservative adversaries, however, I am not convinced that all of my opinions are unassailable. (Only 98 percent!) But bear with me. I believe there is a legitimate connection.

When 2,000 young neo-Nazis recently marched through Dresden, Germany, sporting Adolf Hitler mustaches and chanting "Sieg Heil!", it may not have been considered a cause for alarm among some people. After all, they make up only a minuscule percentage of the total population of Germany. But a similar small cadre of young fanatics in the 1920s paved the way for Hitler's rise to power in the early 1930s.

I don't think Mill's concern about labeling dissenters as "bad and immoral men" would apply to neo-Nazis. Nor would it apply to those who sweepingly indict an entire nation because of its obnoxious trade policies.

What's so disturbing about opposition to Japan's xenophobically inspired restrictive trade policies is that opponents in both the United States and Europe seem more intent on issuing scathing denunciations of Japan than on seeking negotiations to resolve the conflict.

A recent contract report written for the CIA calls the Japanese "racist" and "amoral." Edith Cresson, the blunt-talking French prime minister, accused the Japanese of staying up nights, thinking of ways "to screw the West." Lee Iacocca has repeatedly warned of Japan's threat to American economic stability. Western corporate and political leaders frequently decry a "Tokyo economic war plan."

A Eurocentric civilization still cannot accept an Asian nation controlling its economies. But we have yet to hear similar howls of indignation when a Western country exerts economic power in Latin America, Africa or Asia. Nor do we exhibit the same ultra-sensitivity when a European nation develops strong economic interests in the United States.

Great Britain, for example, exerts enormous financial power over some of our corporations. But Americans' cultural noses aren't out of joint, because the British are perceived to be more like "us" — that is, the European American "us."

Paradoxically, U.S. neo-conservatives have shown an enlightened attitude toward the Japanese, with whom they share an affinity for fiscal prudence.

But neo-conservatives are part of a global trend whose conservative ideology seeks social retrenchment. Sometimes, bedfellows can be curiously uncomfortable.

Community gathers to honor Jerry Sims

Look for a cool, shady spot and a long, tall glass of iced tea while we peek around Pampa.

Jerry Sims celebrated his retirement and birthday for a full week. Hundreds of friends, fans and bank customers attended his retirement party at First National Bank with hugs, tears and all good wishes for him. Jerry began his tenure on July 23, 1953, and ended it on July 23, 1991 — his birthday in each case. Girls at the bank dug deeply to put a scrapbook together for him that covered his 38 years at First National.

Bank employees had a potluck lunch at the bank on his last day and birthday. It was a time of varied emotions, filled with lots of warm memories to cherish.

Ruth McBride hosted a surprise dinner party ahead of time at the Crown and Shield Room of the Biarritz Club. After dinner, lights were dimmed as Jerry blew out the birthday candles. Guests brought gifts of fruit and put them in a large basket for a different birthday gift. Attending were Mary Bates, Alberta Jeffries, Pauline Vaughn, Gerry and Clint Caylor, Helen and Darrell Danner, Ottolene and Ray Jones, Retha and Ray Jordan, Charlene and Roy Morriss, Martin and Irvine Riphahn, Debbie and Danny Stokes.

On THE day, Jerry was greeted with a big yard sign that read, "Happy Retirement - Happy Birthday." There was another outdoor party last night for Jerry at the home of Fauncine and Robert Mack.

Just heard or overheard that Coronado Hospital will have a birthday party soon for all children born there during the 10 years of its existence. The hospital was opened in August 1981. Belated 88th birthday wishes to Lucille Clements, a milestone birthday! Friends and relatives sent cards and called her to make her day bright and happy. Lucille is a joy to know and one who still makes jelly and jams to share with friends. Her good friend Aiv Edwards and she shared birthday cake a day or so past the birthday.

Another pair of neat senior citizens are Nickie Gordon and Gladys Harvey, always pleasant and fashionably dressed. They often can be seen sitting together on Sunday mornings at First Christian Church where Gladys sang in the choir for more than half a century.

Speaking of half a century, belated 50th anniversary wishes to Lois and Red Watkins, who celebrated the day late in June. The same good wishes to Dorothy and Welby Parish who celebrated the day last week.

A large bridal shower for Tamara Johnson, bride-elect of Tony Musgrave was given in the home of Marlene Kyle recently. Guests and hostesses oh'd and ah'd at the flower arrangements and corsages made by her maid of honor from Dallas. An interesting side note: Two hostesses, Marilyn Kirkwood and Billie Bruner were also hostesses at Tony's baby shower.

Congratulations to Lisa and Davis Winegeart on the birth of Kaitlin Paige. Big sister and brother are Kyla and Jason. Grandparents are Judy and James Hooker, Mary Lou and Earl Winegeart. Great-grandparents are Noel and Edna Southern.

Belated great-grandmother congratulations to Glendora Gindorf on the birth of Ryan John Gindorf, son of Steve and Martha, and grandson of Tom and Beth, all of California. He made Jackie a great-uncle!

Hildren Bates and Joyce Clifton put together a shower for little Tate Roush, four-month-old son of Heidi and Randy. The little one now weighs a full eight pounds! The shower was in blue and yellow to match his nursery in Grapevine. Tate slept as guests passed him around and cooed at him.

For Rev. Gene and Jean Allen, there was a family reunion when Garland and Marcie and little Hailey came from Springfield, Mo. On Sunday, Gene conducted the dedication service of little Tate.

Recovery wishes to Georgia Mack, Bruce Reinhardt and Vernon Bell as they recover from similar operations. Bruce and Brenda are still in Houston, while Georgia and Vernon are back home. Bruce's first words after surgery are said to have been, "How long before I can get back to work?"

Katie and Ray Hupp and daughter Mitzie had fun written all over their faces as they took their son and brother Eric and his wife Elizabeth around town. Eric and Elizabeth, who met and married while in the service in Germany, left a few days ago for Fort Bragg.

Spied Jim Morris and Glyndene Shelton checking out the work to be done on the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company building on Ballard Street.

Cindy Judson has been named administrator of St. Matthew's Episcopal Day School. Cindy is vibrant, energetic and ever so enthusiastic about everything.

Jim and Carol Brown are busy as can be getting the new JC Restaurant on North Hobart in operation. Watch for the opening date.

Jessie and Evelyn Williams had family visitors from Clovis, N.M. — Enoch, Gladys and Dorothy Suller. Christie Cosfield and her children, Hailey and Heath, also of Clovis, are here with Christie's parents, Foster and Lois Whaley. Christie and the Sullers, who attend the same church in Clovis, were happy to see each other last Sunday at Mary Ellen and Harvester Church of Christ. Heard that Evelyn's jams and jellies rate in the super bracket!

Jeanne Gilmore spent two weeks visiting family in St. Louis, Mo., recently. Clifford Martindale, a Ma Bell Pioneer, is sporting the spiffiest T-shirt with the Pioneer emblem on both pockets and on the back a painted-on crank wall phone. Yes, at one time all phones were of the crank type! Donna Sims and her daughter painted the shirt.

Eight-year-old Callie McGrady returned days ago from her first unaccompanied airplane trip all the way to Bel Air, Md., to visit grandparents and eight younger cousins. Tina, her mom, assigned her mom, Freddie Seitz, the task of taking her to Amarillo to the airport. Scared mom, huh? Grandmother, too! Callie made friends on the plane and didn't have time to report from Dallas. Callie had a wonderful trip and Tina has recovered.

Gary Stephens, Amarillo area manager of Southwestern Bell Telephone Company and former Pampan, spoke at the Greater Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce membership luncheon Tuesday on education. His message was, "Kids, get a good education and plenty of technical training." The speech came after a little back-and-forth ribbing. Thurmond-McGlothlin, Ray Jordan as president, was the spotlight business. Congratulations to Frances Braswell for receiving the Pat on the Back Award for volunteer and personal service.

Beta Sigma Phi members are busy planning their second annual Fall Style Show scheduled for Aug. 17 at the Pampa Country Club. Charlene Morriss is general chairman. Tickets will be available soon from BSP members.

Members of the Pampa Fine Arts Association are well into plans for Chautauqua on Labor Day at Central Park.

A bit of history came to light in the recent death of a longtime Pampan, Bess Rice in Dallas. She was the daughter of Pampa's first mayor, Franklin P. "Pete" Reid. Bess, twinkling blue-eyed and softly beautiful at 94, lived up to her code of honor, took pride in her family and loved everything that helped build Pampa. As one of The Pampa News' longest subscribers, she eagerly awaited each issue to keep abreast of local happenings, whether she was with her daughter Lillian Benedict in San Antonio or with her son Otto in Richardson. Bill and Doris, another son and daughter-in-law, of Pampa, had readied her house for homecoming and installed a new lawn sprinkler system for her convenience. She was all packed and ready to come home when illness and death overtook her. Bess represented her era in the best fashion possible. We will miss her.

See you next week, Katie.

Dan Bachler of Pampa, right, accepts a check for $300 from Weldon Holly of Culligan Water Conditioning Service, 314 S. Starkweather, after he recently won the company's third annual "Hey, Culligan man!" contest. Bachler was one of four winners from the Pampa area who then competed with contestants from Plainview and Amarillo. Bachler won the contest by saying "Hey, Culligan man!" with a Jamaican accent.

Pro-choicer says adoption speaks louder than words

DEAR ABBY: In Richland, Wash., men and women are carrying signs and parading small children in front of family-planning clinics in opposition to a woman's right to choose.

Meanwhile, a newborn baby boy was dumped in an apartment complex trash bin and left to die. He was found, hospitalized and survived. The baby, his 17-year-old mother and another son, a 1 1/2-year-old, have been placed in separate King County foster-care families.

Abby, please print the letter signed "Hates Hypocrites" again. In light of the abovementioned incident — which is occurring all over the nation — that letter needs to be seen again.

BARBARA HARROW, RICHLAND, WASH.

DEAR BARBARA: Indeed I will. And here it is:

DEAR ABBY: This is a message to those men and women who try to prevent women from entering abortion clinics and carry big signs that say, "They Kill Babies Here!"

Have you signed up to adopt a child? If not, why not? Is it because you don't want one, can't afford one, or don't have the time, patience or desire to raise a child?

What if a woman who was about to enter a family-planning clinic saw your sign, then decided not to have an abortion but chose instead to give her baby to you? Would you accept it? What if the mother belonged to a minority group — or was addicted to drugs, or tested positive for AIDS?

Why are you spending your time carrying a sign? Why aren't you volunteering to baby-sit a child born to a single mother so she can work? Why haven't you opened your door to a pregnant teen-ager whose parents kicked her out when she took your advice and decided not to have an abortion?

As for the taxpayers who resent paying for abortions, who do you think pays for foster care, welfare, social workers and juvenile delinquency? The taxpayers.

Let's talk about something money can't buy: love. Have you ever visited a home for abused and unwanted children? Have you ever been to juvenile hall and seen the children who have committed crimes because they were born to mothers who didn't want them?

Dear Abby

I'm not thrilled about abortion, but I don't think anyone has the right to tell others not to have one unless he or she has done the things I have mentioned above.

So, to those carrying those signs and trying to prevent women from entering family-planning clinics, heed my message: If you must be against abortion, don't be a hypocrite — make your time and energy count.

HATES HYPOCRITES
IN SANTA ANA, CALIF.

DEAR HATES: I couldn't have said it better. Or as well.

DEAR ABBY: To the Caucasian couple with the adopted Korean child: I, too, have been confronted by many unthinking strangers with rude comments. My most memorable occurred while grocery shopping with my blond-haired, blue-eyed biological son and my dark-haired, dark-complexioned adopted daughter.

A woman approached me and asked, "Are these your children?"

"Yes," I answered.

"Different fathers?" she asked.

"Yes, and different mothers, too," I replied.

"Oh," she said, looking confused.

"With people sleeping around so much these days, I just thought — I didn't let her finish. I just walked away and left her with her big mouth hanging open."

Avoiding hot weather hazards

By NYU School of Medicine
For AP Newsfeatures

As temperatures and humidity rise outdoors, so do the risks of heat-related illnesses such as heat exhaustion and heat stroke.

Unacclimated athletes, infants, the elderly and people with certain medical conditions or on certain medications are at highest risk, according to Dr. Susi U. Vassallo, an emergency medicine specialist at New York University Medical Center.

In heat exhaustion, a person feels weakened as the body becomes stressed by its struggle to lose excess heat.

In heat stroke, the body's heat regulating mechanisms are overwhelmed. The body temperature rises, and the body's cells are literally cooked to death.

Heat exhaustion in young, active people, is often associated with profuse sweating brought on by physical exertion. The body rapidly loses fluids, salt and other electrolytes.

"Sweating is one of the two major ways the body attempts to cool itself," Dr. Vassallo explained. "As sweat evaporates, it pulls heat away from the body."

Serious heat illness can occur if the body doesn't sweat enough, or if sweating is ineffective. When the air is already saturated with moisture because of high humidity, sweat can't evaporate easily, so the body is cooled less.

People who sweat less than normal also are at higher risk. These include individuals taking diuretics, cold or other medications that interfere with the sweat glands, or skin conditions such as extensive psoriasis or scleroderma.

"The other major way the body gets rid of excess heat is through dilation of the blood vessels in the skin and increased pumping of the heart," said Vassallo. "A large volume of warm blood is brought near the surface so the heat can dissipate through the skin."

Many heart medicines, psychiatric medicines and common cold medications constrict blood vessels, and-or interfere with the heart's ability to pump harder. If you are taking a heart medication, for example, your heart may not fully respond to the stress of heat.

Infants and the elderly are more prone to heat illness because their heat loss mechanisms — and the "internal thermostat" that regulates them — are generally less efficient.

At the first sign of heat exhaustion, several measures should be taken. Symptoms of heat exhaustion include dizziness, accelerated heart-beat, muscle cramps, weakness and minor confusion.

Treatment consists of lying down in a cool, shady place with the feet raised, removal of clothing and consumption of lots of cold water.

Expos' Martinez tosses perfect game

By JIM DONAGHY
AP Baseball Writer

Who says the pitching isn't as good as it used to be.

Over the weekend at Dodger Stadium, Montreal's Mark Gardner tossed nine no-hit innings and Dennis Martinez pitched the 15th perfect game in major league history.

The Dodgers' staff didn't do too bad, either. They had two shutouts and allowed only two runs in 27 innings.

Martinez's no-hitter came less than 48 hours after Gardner held the Dodgers hitless until Lenny Harris led off the 10th inning with a single.

Los Angeles then went on for a 1-0 victory.

Martinez and Dodgers starter Mike Morgan were both perfect through five innings.

"When we got to the fifth inning, I looked up there and said this is incredible, to have two pitching performances like this," Expos first baseman Larry Walker said. "It was just an incredible weekend, a three-game set like this ... having a no-hitter for nine and a perfect game. It's unbelievable."

Martinez wasn't quite sure what to make of it all, either.

Mike Scioscia hit a fly ball to medium left field leading off the bottom of the ninth and pinch-hitter

Stan Javier struck out, bringing the capacity crowd to its feet. Pinch-hitter Chris Gwynn then hit a deep fly to center field for the final out.

"I was blank. There was nothing in my mind," Martinez said of his reaction when the game ended. "I had no words to say. I could only cry. I didn't know how to express myself. I didn't know how to respond to this kind of game."

National League

Elsewhere in the NL it was St. Louis 3, Cincinnati 2; Chicago 6, Atlanta 2; Houston 9, Pittsburgh 7; San Diego 2, New York 0; and San Francisco 2, Philadelphia 1.

The last perfect game was by Cincinnati's Tom Browning, also against Los Angeles, on Sept. 16, 1988, at Riverfront Stadium. It was the second perfect game at Dodger Stadium as Sandy Koufax beat Chicago 1-0 on Sept. 9, 1965.

Martinez, a native of Nicaragua, is the first opposing pitcher to throw a complete-game no-hitter in the 30-year history of Dodger Stadium. He's also the first to pitch a complete game no-hitter against the Dodgers at home since Johnny Vander Meer beat Brooklyn on June 15, 1938, at Ebbets Field.

"He was keeping everybody off balance, and that's what baseball is all about," the Dodgers' Brett Butler said.

"He had great stuff," Gwynn said. "He always does. He had command of all his pitches."

Morgan (9-6) had a perfect game of his own until Ron Hassey led off the sixth with a single. The Expos scored two runs in the seventh.

It was the seventh no-hitter in Expos' history and the first perfect game. It was the fifth nine-inning no-hitter of the season, the first coming on May 1 by Nolan Ryan.

Cardinals 3, Reds 2

Craig Wilson's pinch double drove in the tying and go-ahead runs in the seventh inning as St. Louis handed visiting Cincinnati its 15th loss in 18 games. The Cardinals have won eight of their last 11.

Jose DeLeon (5-8) won his second consecutive decision, while Randy Myers (4-8) lost his second straight start since being moved into the rotation. Myers held the Cardinals hitless for 5 1-3 innings.

Cubs 6, Braves 2

Andre Dawson homered twice and drove in four runs to lead Chicago and Mike Bielecki past Atlanta at Wrigley Field.

Dawson, who was hit in the right elbow and had to leave Saturday's game in the first inning, hit a three-run homer in the fourth inning and added a solo shot in the eighth, his 18th of the season. It was Dawson's 34th multi-homer game and his first since May 15, 1990, at Atlanta.

Charlie Leibrandt (9-9) took the loss.

Giants 2, Phillies 1

San Francisco won its eighth straight game as Matt Williams and Kevin Mitchell each homered off Philadelphia's Tommy Greene (7-4). The Phillies have lost seven straight games.

Bud Black (8-8) went 6 2-3 innings, allowing one run on four hits as the Giants swept the three-game series. Jeff Brantley worked the final 2 1-3 innings for his ninth save.

Expo's Dennis Martinez weeps in the dugout after pitching a perfect game Sunday against the Dodgers.

Astros 9, Pirates 7

Casey Candaele homered and scored four runs and Ryan Bowen for the first time in the major leagues as Houston beat visiting Pittsburgh to snap a seven-game losing streak.

The Astros scored five runs in the third off Zane Smith and held on for Bowen, who went five innings, allowing four runs on six hits.

Padres 2, Mets 0

Fred McGriff drove in two runs with a two-out double in the sixth inning and Andy Benes (5-10) gave up five hits in eight innings as San Diego beat New York at Jack Murphy Stadium. Frank Viola fell to 11-7.

The Mets, who have lost five of six games, missed a chance to make up a game on NL East-leading Pittsburgh. The Pirates maintained a seven-game lead over New York, with St. Louis another game back in third.

Rangers cage Tigers; Twins, Red Sox, Yankees and Jays lose

You didn't expect the Oakland Athletics to just go away, did you?

The A's have survived injuries to Rickey Henderson, Dave Stewart, Carney Lansford, Walt Weiss and Mike Moore. They have weathered a 14-game winning streak by Texas and a 15-game skid by Minnesota. Dennis Eckersley even proved he was human, and the A's handled that, too.

Sunday was just like old times. Jose Canseco hit a three-run homer, Henderson hit a solo shot and Eckersley got the save in a 4-3 victory over the Baltimore Orioles, completing a three-game sweep.

The three-time defending American League champions have won six of their last seven to pull within four games of the first-place Minnesota Twins in the AL West.

"I think everybody in the league has been waiting for us to put a streak together," first baseman Mark McGwire said. "We've got a good one going now ... five out of six on the road isn't too shabby."

In other games Sunday, it was California 8, New York 4; Seattle 6, Cleveland 5; Milwaukee 11, Minnesota 2; Kansas City 10, Toronto 4; Chicago 5, Boston 2; and Texas 10, Detroit 4.

Henderson's homer in the eighth snapped a 3-3 tie and made a winner of reliever Rick Honeycutt (2-2), who pitched out of a bases-loaded, no-out jam in the seventh. Eckersley, who has blown five saves this year — including three to the Cleveland Indians — made quick work of the Orioles in the ninth.

"That was vintage Oakland of the past," Canseco said. "Eck comes in with a one-run lead and shuts them down. We haven't really had that in the past, but it happened today."

The A's trailed 3-0 in the sixth when Rickey Henderson and Dave Henderson singled off Ben McDonald (4-5) and Canseco, who had been hit by a pitch earlier, followed with his 27th homer.

American League

"My main concern there was getting the first fastball he threw and capitalizing on it," he said. "The first one was up for a ball and I figured he'd go outside with the next one. He did."

The Orioles led 3-0 after three innings, but the A's still had plenty of time to come back, a fact not lost on McGwire.

"We've got two months left, and a lot can happen in two months," McGwire said. "Everyone knows that."

Angels 8, Yankees 4

Luis Sojo drove in three runs and Max Venable homered as visiting California beat New York.

Jim Abbott (9-7) gave up eight hits in eight-plus innings before being relieved by Bryan Harvey after the Yankees scored twice in the ninth.

Venable led off the game with his second homer of the season, but the Yankees scored twice in their half on Don Mattingly's single and Mel Hall's double.

The Angels scored three runs in the second off rookie Scott Kamieniecki (4-3) on Sojo's two-run double and Dick Schofield's RBI single. During the inning, a Morgana impersonator ran onto the field and gave Kamieniecki a hug.

Sojo capped a three-run seventh with an RBI single.

Mariners 6, Indians 5

Pinch-hitter Alonzo Powell drove in the go-ahead run with a seventh-inning infield single as visiting Seattle improved to 12-5 since the All-Star break.

Pete O'Brien had three RBIs as Seattle took the season series from Cleveland 10-2, matching its best one-season win total against one team.

Randy Johnson (9-7) got the win, allowing five runs and six hits in six innings. Bill Swift got the final two outs for his ninth save. Reliever Mike York (1-3) took the loss.

Tracy Jones doubled with one out in the seventh and moved to third on Jay Buhner's single. Powell beat out a bounce to third, scoring Jones.

O'Brien had a two-run single in the first, but the Indians took a 3-2 lead in the second on Alex Cole's two-run single and a sacrifice fly by Carlos Martinez.

Albert Belle hit his 17th homer for Cleveland.

Brewers 11, Twins 2

Paul Molitor and Darryl Hamilton each had five hits as Milwaukee tied a club record with 22 hits, pounding Jack Morris and Minnesota at the Metrodome.

Candy Maldonado and Franklin Stubbs each homered for the Brewers. Morris, who had won 10 of his last 11 decisions, allowed eight runs on nine hits in 2-3 innings.

It was the first career five-hit game for Hamilton and the third for Molitor, who also had a record five hits in Game 1 of the 1982 World Series.

Jaime Navarro (8-8) broke a personal four-game losing streak in pitching his sixth complete game of the season.

Molitor and Hamilton opened the game with singles. Molitor scored on a groundout by B.J. Surhoff and Hamilton scored on Stubbs' single.

In the second, Molitor and Hamilton each singled again. Molitor again scored on a groundout by Surhoff and Maldonado followed with his fourth homer, making it 5-0.

The Brewers scored three more in the third on Hamilton's two-out ground-rule double, which chased Morris, and consecutive run-scoring infield singles by Surhoff and Maldonado.

Cowboys throttle Oilers in controlled scrimmage

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A new plot emerged in Chapter Two of the Dallas Cowboys versus the Houston Oilers.

The Cowboys, who fought back to tie Houston in a controlled scrimmage last week, came on strong early in a Sunday scrimmage to defeat Houston 24-6.

"We played much better tonight on both sides of the ball," said Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson. "Offensively, we played with much more confidence."

Starting Cowboys quarterback Troy Aikman, who had arm surgery during the off-season, completed 11 of 16 passes for 202 yards and three touchdowns. "I felt very good throwing the ball," Aikman said. "The first series was very important because I wanted to establish my confidence early."

The Cowboys took control right away, scoring two touchdowns in their first 15-play series. Aikman completed a 46-yard pass to wide receiver Alexander Wright for a touchdown on the fourth play.

Dallas completed an 11-play, 65-yard drive with another touchdown on an 11-yard Aikman pass to full-back Daryl Johnston and took a 12-0 lead at the end of their first series.

"We worked real hard on attacking their coverage," Aikman said. "The first series established the entire tempo of the game."

The contest lasted about 2 1/2 hours and contrasted with the teams' Thursday night three-hour controlled scrimmage in Austin that ended in a 30-30 tie.

The Oilers and their run-and-shoot offense were able to score only one touchdown Sunday.

During Houston's first possession, veteran quarterback Warren Moon completed a 29-yard pass to wide receiver Ernest Givins to move the Oilers to the Cowboys' six. Then Moon handed off two consecutive times to running back Gary Brown, an eighth-round draft pick from Penn State, for the score.

"We had opportunities early, but we dropped a few passes that hurt," Oilers coach Jack Pardee said. "After the first series we could never get it in gear. The Cowboys were much better."

The Cowboys improved their lead to 18-6 during their third series with a touchdown on a 1-yard run by Ricky Blake, the leading rusher in the World League of American Football last spring when he played for the San Antonio Riders.

The Cowboys followed up with a 65-yard drive in six plays capped by a 17-yard Aikman pass to tight end Jay Novacek for another touchdown and a 24-6 lead that lasted the rest of the night.

Backup Dallas quarterback Cliff Stoudt was 6 of 10 for 90 yards. Moon, who was at the helm for only one 15-play series, passed for 38 yards and was 4 of 9 for Houston.

The Dallas defense made a strong showing in the Oilers' second series. First-round draft pick Russell Maryland of Miami recovered a fumble as the Oilers tried to move to within the Cowboys' 10-yard line. Defensive tackle Leon Lett then sacked former Baylor quarterback Tom Muecke. And Cowboy Vince Albritton intercepted a Muecke pass.

"Defensively we played much better, especially after we've already seen the run-and-shoot offense," Johnson said.

Houston's Haywood Jeffries breaks up a near interception by Cowboys' Manny Hendrix.

Rangers to monitor Ryan injury

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — The Texas Rangers will monitor Nolan Ryan's shoulder over the next couple of days to determine whether he will be able to make his next start Friday night against Milwaukee. Ryan was forced to leave the game with the Detroit Tigers in the top of the sixth inning on Sunday night because of tightness in the back of his right shoulder. The Rangers said that it was a precautionary move by Ryan, who twice has been bothered by sore-ness in the trapezius muscle. Ryan, baseball's all-time strikeout leader, had fanned 10 batters to that point and the Rangers were leading 3-2. Ryan was on the 15-day disabled list earlier this year when he had soreness in the back of his right shoulder. He was out from May 14-29.

'Intimidator' wins DieHard 500 at Talladega

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Dale Earnhardt is known as the Intimidator — and nowhere is that nickname more appropriate than Talladega Superspeedway. Earnhardt won for the third time in his last four races at the Alabama track, holding off Bill Elliott by less than a car length to win the DieHard 500 on Sunday.

Elliott said, "I was just in a bad situation. "If I ever backed off, I had the No. 6 (Martin) and the No. 5 (Rudd) behind me. You catch yourself in a situation, and I was hoping that the No. 6 would help me get on up there beside Earnhardt, but the problem is if I made my move too early, those two were going to pass me."

Martin finished third in a Ford and Rudd took fourth in a Chevrolet. Sterling Marlin, whose Ford started from the pole, finished fifth and Allison dropped back to ninth. Fifteen cars were still on the lead lap at the end of the highly competitive race, in which 12 drivers exchanged the top spot 32 times. Marlin said one of the Fords could have caught Earnhardt if there had been more cooperation. "I thought we had an agreement to work together between us, but once the flag dropped there at the end (with six laps to go after the final caution flag), it all went to heck," he said.

"I got hung out there at the end," Allison said. "When you don't have any draft help, nobody there to push you, nobody to help you get to the front, you can't do it." So Earnhardt remained the king of Talladega with an average speed of 147.383 mph. He holds the track record with five victories, including both the Winston 500 and DieHard 500 last year. "I like to race here," said Earnhardt, who won $88,670 and leads the NASCAR point standings. "It's a good track, one of my favorites."

Earnhardt might be celebrating his fourth victory in a row at Talladega but for a controversial decision in this year's Winston 500, when he finished third. The winner, Harry Gant, ran out of gas on the final lap but got a bump from teammate Rick Mast, and Darrell Waltrip was allowed to keep second despite an illegal spooler. Mast wasn't around to help anybody at the end this time. On lap 166, after bumping with Buddy Baker in the tri-oval, his Oldsmobile skidded sideways, flipped over and slid down the track several hundreds yards on its roof. Mast was not injured but the crash was harrowing. "I might need a new pair of britches after getting upside down like that," he quipped. Baker also was involved in a chain-reaction crash on lap 105 that appeared to begin when he tapped Ernie Irvan from behind and sent at least eight cars skidding across the track. "I got into it a few times with some people, but I think they all know it was just racing," Baker said.

NASCAR driver Rick Mast skids through the tri-oval on his roof Sunday. Mast walked away from the resulting crash.

"I love Talladega," Earnhardt said after earning his 51st career victory, which ranks seventh on the NASCAR career list. Several Ford drivers lined up and took a shot at Earnhardt's Chevrolet after it moved to the front with 27 laps to go in the 188-lap event. Davey Allison pulled alongside Earnhardt on lap 185, but Earnhardt shot back to the front on the backstretch.

Elliott then took over second and tailed Earnhardt until the final turn on the 2.66-mile tri-oval. Elliott made his move to the inside, but no one passes the Intimidator at that stage of a race.

"Bill, with his experience on the speedways, I knew he was going to make a run at me," Earnhardt said. "He was running low off the corner and I moved around a little to shake the air off me so he couldn't make a real good run."

Elliott, meanwhile, had to be concerned with both catching Earnhardt and holding off Mark Martin and Ricky Rudd, who were right on his back bumper in a fitting conclusion to a race that had more than 100,000 fans on their feet all day. "There was just nothing I could do,"

Spain wins 1st Federation Cup title; Brown wins GHO

NOTTINGHAM, England (AP) — Arantxa Sanchez Vicario defeated Mary Joe Fernandez in singles and then teamed with Conchita Martinez for a doubles victory as Spain defeated the United States 2-1 to capture its first Federation Cup title Sunday.

The U.S. took a 1-0 lead when Jennifer Capriati defeated Martinez 4-6, 7-6 (7-3), 6-1 in the opening singles match. Sanchez Vicario beat Fernandez 6-3, 6-4 to even the match. Sanchez Vicario and Martinez then defeated Gigi Fernandez and Zina Garrison 3-6, 6-1, 6-1 in the doubles match.

Derby winner Strike The Gold finished third. GOLF BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus and Chi Chi Rodriguez completed the regulation 72 holes tied for the lead in the U.S. Senior Open at 2-over-par 282 on Sunday and will meet for the title today in an 18-hole playoff. Rodriguez and Nicklaus each played the fourth round in 1-over 71 on the 6,718-yard Oakland-Hills Country Club course.

Brown shot a 3-under-par 67 to tie Pavin (69) and Fehr (70) at 9-under 271 on the 6,820-yard TPC at River Highlands course. Fehr putted first on the playoff hole, the 171-yard 16th, and missed from 35 feet away. Brown made his putt and Pavin, who had been 4-0 in playoffs during his career, then missed a 20-foot putt which could have forced another hole. Loren Roberts (67), Billy Andrade (68) and Jim Gallagher (69) tied for fourth at 272.

Sheriff: Dahmer says he committed his first murder in Ohio

By JEFFREY BRODEUR
Associated Press Writer

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Jeffrey L. Dahmer drew detectives a map of his parents' former home pinpointing the remains of what may be his first mutilation-slaying victim — a hitchhiker killed with a barbell 13 years ago, authorities say.

Authorities plan to use the map Tuesday when they excavate the yard in suburban Bath Township for the remains of Steven Mark Hicks, 19.

"We feel at this time it may have been his first," said Sheriff David Troutman.

Dahmer, 31, has admitted drug-ging, killing and dismembering 17 people whose remains were found in his Milwaukee apartment last week, police said.

Wisconsin authorities have said he may have killed and dismembered as many as 17 men over the past decade.

On Sunday, Troutman said Dahmer told authorities his first victim was Hicks, a 19-year-old from suburban Coventry Township who was hitchhiking to a rock concert when he accepted a ride from 18-year-old Dahmer to his parents' home on June 18, 1978.

Dahmer said the two shared a few beers, and when Hicks wanted to leave, he hit him over the head with a barbell, Troutman said. He strangled Hicks with the barbell; cut up the body and buried the remains, the sheriff said.

In a three-hour interview Saturday, Dahmer identified a photo of Hicks and drew a map of his parents' former home, pinpointing where on the wooded, two-acre property the remains were buried, Troutman said.

"He gave us information in reference to personal belongings that we didn't even know about," the sheriff said.

Police verified the information with Hicks' parents, he said.

Ohio authorities questioned Dahmer after William Berger, who now owns the house, learned about the Milwaukee slayings and gave police a human bone found while landscaping a year ago, said Bath Township Police Chief Bill Gravis.

Dr. Thomas Marshall of the Summit County coroner's office said he couldn't confirm that the bone, a piece of the humerus, or upper-arm bone, belonged to Hicks.

Authorities hoped to find more remains so they could identify the victim.

Dahmer didn't say if he killed others in Ohio, Troutman said.

Telephone calls to the Berger home weren't immediately returned Sunday.

After serving in the Army from 1980 to 1982, Dahmer lived with a grandmother in the Milwaukee suburb of West Allis from 1982 to 1989. He then moved to the apartment in Milwaukee.

Dahmer has told authorities he engaged in homosexual acts with several of his victims but didn't have sex with Hicks, Troutman said.

Chemicals, including aqueous hydrazine, a corrosive liquid used in jet fuel, spilled from the train cars forcing the closure of the freeway. Sea Cliff is about 10 miles north of Ventura, Calif.

Train derailment and toxic spill close major California highway, Amtrak line

SEA CLIFF, Calif. (AP) — A toxic spill from a train wreck forced hundreds from their homes, closed 10 miles of California's main north-south highway and stopped all Amtrak service between Los Angeles and Santa Barbara today.

It was California's second derailment and chemical spill this month.

Fourteen cars from the Southern Pacific line jumped the tracks Sunday near U.S. 101, about 75 miles northwest of Los Angeles, authorities said.

Four of the derailed cars contained hazardous materials, including aqueous hydrazine. Between 10 and 20 of the 55-gallon barrels of the chemical, a corrosive liquid used in jet fuel, broke open, spilling their contents on the ground, said Julian Griggs, a spokesman for the Ventura County Fire Department.

The chemical, which has an ammonia-like odor, can cause nausea, burns, nerve damage and damage to internal organs, he said.

Other hazardous materials aboard included paint and adhesives, said Michael Brown, a Southern Pacific spokesman.

Officials said they were uncertain how volatile the spilled chemicals were and planned to attack them with a neutralizing agent at daylight.

Two TV cameramen, apparently sickened by fumes, were taken to hospitals for observation and released, officials said. No other injuries were reported.

Brown said about 300 people who spent the night at a Red Cross center would not be allowed to return home until more was learned about the chemicals.

On July 14, a Southern Pacific train derailed in the Sacramento River Canyon, spilling weed killer into a river that feeds California's biggest reservoir.

Brown said Sunday's derailment may have been caused by an overheated axle.

Amtrak passengers were being bused between Santa Barbara and Los Angeles, said Amtrak spokesman Bruce Heard said from Washington. Six Amtrak trains ply the route daily, with several hundred people on board each train, he said.

Canadians to use submarine to look at oil leak

NEAH BAY, Wash. (AP) — Oil from a sunken Japanese ship continued to wash ashore, killing scores of birds and threatening other wildlife today. Canada's Coast Guard said it would use a submarine to inspect and try to stem the leak.

An oil sheen and globs of oil mixed with kelp washed up on several beaches Sunday, a week after the fish-processing ship went down in international waters in a collision with a Chinese freighter.

More than 80 dead birds and 200 live, oiled-soaked birds had been found, authorities said Sunday.

The slick stretched in patches from the shipwreck site, 25 miles northwest of the tip of the continental United States, to La Push, 30 miles down the coast.

"It's very difficult to predict its exact movement," said state Ecology Department spokesman Ron Holcomb. "There are lots of eddies and currents. It's a wait-and-see situation to see what the winds and tides do."

The slick, believed to be less than 100,000 gallons of bunker oil and diesel fuel, contaminated about a half-mile Shi Shi Beach (pronounced shy-shy) on Sunday in Olympic National Park, Coast Guard spokesman Kevin Brunton said.

Clumps of oil also rolled up on Hobuck Beach about three miles down the coast, and a light sheen appeared on Cape Alava, about 10 miles farther south, said National Park Service Ranger Bob Appling.

The Canadian Coast Guard planned to use a three-person, 17-foot submarine on Wednesday to examine the leak and determine how to stop it, spokesman Rod Nelson said. The wreck is believed to be under 500 feet of water.

The Japanese vessel the Tenyo Maru carried more than 273,000 gallons of bunker fuel and 91,000 gallons of diesel fuel when the collision occurred July 22. All but one of the 85 people aboard the Tenyo Maru was rescued.

Oil skimmers collected 21,000 gallons of oil and water by Sunday morning, said Brunton.

The coast is home to thousands of seabirds, which are now nesting. Wildlife officials feared for birds such as peregrine falcons and bald eagles, which can feed on tainted prey, and for the more than 275 sea otters in the area.

Oiled birds, mostly common murres, were brought to a rescue center on the Makah Indian Reservation.

Dole expects Bush to name MIA panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole says he expects President Bush to name a blue-ribbon panel to resolve the issue of Americans missing in Vietnam, rather than have a Senate committee investigate it.

"I think what we should do, and what I would like to see happen this week, is for the president to say, 'I'm going to have a presidential commission,'" Dole said in a television interview Sunday.

At a news conference for Kansas reporters Friday, a newsman asked the GOP leader if he was suggesting to the president that he appoint such a commission.

"We discussed it on Tuesday this week at the White House," Dole said. "I think we will have some development in the next week."

"Congress is moving on a commission," he said. "My view is it would be better to have a presidential commission."

Sen. Bob Smith, R-N.H., has called for a Senate investigation of whether Americans are still held prisoner in Southeast Asia. His move has attracted 41 cosponsors, about twice as many Republicans as Democrats.

Judy Smith, a White House spokeswoman, said she knew of no developments on the issue since a briefing Friday by national security adviser Brent Scowcroft, who said he is convinced no Americans missing from the Vietnam War are still alive.

The recent release of a grainy photograph purporting to show Americans still held captive in Indochina has renewed the debate on 2,274 Americans unaccounted for from the wars in Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia.

Kenneth Quinn, a deputy assistant secretary of state, traveled to Vietnam last week to investigate the photo.

The Pentagon said Thursday that the picture had passed through the hands of a "ring of Cambodia opportunists led by a well-known and admitted fabricator" of information about missing Americans.

Scowcroft, asked whether he believed some missing Americans are still alive in Southeast Asia, said, "No, I do not."

Dole, appearing on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press," said, "I don't know, and I don't think Brent Scowcroft knows."

"Let's raise this to the highest level to see if we can't address it," the Kansas senator said. "That might in effect help some of the families who are distressed."

In addition, Dole said, "We might be able to weed out some of these people who, I think, have got something pretty good going here. They indicate to families that they can find their sons or husbands. A lot of money is being spent."

In his meeting with Kansas reporters, Dole suggested, "Put somebody who really has great credibility as chairman of that commission; put people on the commission, maybe fresh faces, who aren't going to be looked upon as having some bias either way."

Assistant Secretary of State Richard Solomon said in Bangkok, Thailand, Sunday that the United States will not establish diplomatic ties with Vietnam until the issue of Americans missing there is resolved and a Cambodian peace accord is signed.

Solomon is to meet in Bangkok Tuesday with Vietnamese Deputy Foreign Minister Le Mai.

Ann Mills Griffiths, executive director of the National League of POW/MIA Families, called Scowcroft's remark "unfortunate" Saturday and said, "Now is the time for Hanoi to move rapidly to resolve this issue, and we urge them to do so."
