Elementary students glad to be back

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Pampa elementary school students enthusiastically returned to classes Wednesday, saying their new grade signified their status as older and wiser children.

Michael Dittberner, nine, a third grade student at Travis Elementary, said, "Third grade is pretty weird, but it's fun. It's a change from second grade. We're learning cursive writing and some other stuff."

Dittberner, a student in Pam Zemanek's class, said his teacher is nice because "she don't get mean or nothing."

Joanna Wheeley, a classmate of Dittberner's, answered inquiries about life in third grade with a shake or nod of the head.

When she did speak, it was to note, "I like the merry-go-round, science, and math and reading."

She said the extra 45 minutes of school each day that came with promoting from second to third grade is exciting because "you get to learn more stuff and do more things."

While she nodded heartily when asked if summer vacation had been fun, Wheeley shook her head just as aggressively when asked if she was sorry to return to school.

"School is fun," she said, again nodding her head.

Among the first day activities at Travis, third graders read letters written to them by last year's fourth grade class. They then wrote their own letters in response.

"The letter said Mrs. Zemanek is real nice and you will have a fun year," Wheeley reported.

Meanwhile, fifth graders at Wilson Elementary said the best part of being at the top of the primary grade ladder was getting 10 minutes of recess just before school is dismissed at 3:30 each afternoon.

Trey Ford said, "It's pretty fun and Mrs. (Pam) Lash is a lot of fun."

Another elementary school "senior," Jessica Lamb, stated, "This is a lot better than fourth grade because of the recess. And I'm a little older now and I like to move on as I get older."

Lamb said she is looking forward to studying American history and social studies.

"The work will be harder, but the higher you get, the harder the work is. I like that," Lamb said. "I'm older now."

Bush: U.S.-Soviet ties stronger

By RITA BEAMISH
Associated Press Writer

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine (AP) — President Bush says he is delighted by the resurgence of Mikhail Gorbachev after a failed coup and sees U.S.-Soviet ties growing stronger.

The superpower relationship can be strengthened because one barrier to U.S. assistance to Moscow had been fear that hard-liners would gain power and reverse Gorbachev's reforms, Bush said.

"It's a good day for U.S.-Soviet relationship because ... the fear that some of us have had about ... right-wing takeovers will no longer be as extant," Bush told reporters Wednesday.

"They tried and then they failed. And democracy prevailed and reform prevailed," he said after speaking to Gorbachev by telephone. Bush said it had been an "emotional day" for him.

Bush also spoke with Russian Federation President Boris Yeltsin by telephone twice Wednesday, lavishing praise on Yeltsin's "superb" performance in rallying resistance to the coup.

Bush said relations with Yeltsin "have taken a quantum leap forward now by this man's displayed courage and by his commitment to democracy."

Bush said he would urge Gorbachev to keep to his reform policies and "stand shoulder to shoulder with Yeltsin."

With Gorbachev returning to power and working with the presidents of the Soviet republics, Bush said he anticipates the U.S.-Soviet relationship "to be, if anything, even better."

As Gorbachev headed back to reclaim his office in Moscow, the president said that "if things work out in a satisfactory fashion," the United States will "go back into the business of furthering the economic recovery" in the Soviet Union.

The United States and its allies had frozen all aid to Moscow after the Sunday night coup.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III injected a more cautious outlook on increased Western assistance to help the reforms.

Speaking after a Brussels meeting with NATO allies, Baker said the Soviet Union cannot succeed economically just through "check writing on the part of others."

"There had to be fundamental, free-market economic reform," he said, reiterating the longstanding U.S. condition for economic assistance to Moscow.

But Baker did not shut the door on a more generous aid program than the administration was willing to adopt before Gorbachev was temporarily pushed aside.

He called on Gorbachev to accelerate his perestroika program of economic restructuring once he is back in charge.

An official traveling back to Washington with Baker on Wednesday night said "We will support reformers in the Soviet Union wherever we find them — at the center, at the republic or at the local level."

Baker today was flying to Kennebunkport to meet with the vacationing Bush on the latest Soviet developments and his meetings in Brussels.

Yeltsin called Bush on Wednesday night to thank him and the American people for their support, said White House press spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

"He said he was pleased with the outcome and felt that events were under control," Fitzwater said of the second, 10-minute call, which was placed by Yeltsin early today Moscow time.

Bush had been trying to reach Gorbachev and was boating when word arrived via a military aide that the Soviet leader was returning his call.

"I think people know of my respect for Gorbachev, indeed the way I feel about him. And I was just delighted to hear that he was fine," the president said.

But much of the focus in the triumphant putdown of the coup was on Yeltsin, the onetime Gorbachev critic who emerged as leader of the coup resistance and demanded Gorbachev's return.

Bush effusively praised Yeltsin's bravery in standing up to the tanks surrounding his Russian headquarters in Moscow and rallying the opposition forces.

Gorbachev: Soviet Union passes 'most difficult trial'

By MARK J. PORUBCANSKY
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP)— President Mikhail Gorbachev, moving to tighten his newly regained grip on power and punish the hard-liners who briefly deposed him, declared today that the Soviet Union had survived "the most difficult trial" of his 6-year-old reform movement.

Meanwhile, Boris Yeltsin, emerging more powerful than ever after leading the resistance to the coup, triumphantly rallied 100,000 jubilant supporters to mark the end of "three dark days" of the hard-line takeover.

Today, at his first news conference since the coup against him collapsed on Wednesday, the 60-year-old Gorbachev condemned the failed hard-line takeover as being against "the people, against democracy."

Earlier, he told reporters he would have killed himself rather than submit to any forced arrangement with the coup leaders. "I said I wouldn't make any deals," he said then. "Otherwise, I would have had to commit suicide."

At the news conference, sounding and appearing furious with the coup leaders, Gorbachev described his house arrest in the Crimea. He scoffed at their contention that he was giving up his power because he was ill. "Their own hands were shaking," he said derisively.

Earlier today, outside the Russian Parliament, the nerve center of nationwide resistance to the coup, cheering demonstrators waved Russia's pre-revolutionary, white-blue-and-red flag as Yeltsin addressed them.

Yeltsin denounced the failed coup as an attempt to plunge the country into an "abyss of violence," saying it violated "every moral standard."

The crowd marched from the Parliament building to Red Square outside the Kremlin, where Gorbachev was back at work today. But the rally was clearly a tribute to Yeltsin — and a show of anger at the coup leaders — rather than a welcome back for Gorbachev.

One speaker, addressing the crowd through a megaphone, asked whether Gorbachev should stay in power. The crowd whistled mockingly, then shouted: "Resign! Resign!" Asked whether Gorbachev should take another vacation, nearly everyone in the crowd raised their hands.

Gorbachev was on vacation in the Crimea when he was overthrown on Monday.

At the headquarters of the KGB, whose chief Vladimir Kryuchkov was one of the coup leaders, demonstrators chanted: "Hangmen!"

Around the world, leaders hailed the end of the takeover. Britain, Japan and the European Community said today they were lifting a freeze on aid to Moscow.

Miners in the Soviet Union's largest coalfield, who had answered Yeltsin's strike call during the takeover, went back to work today. But the miners — who wield considerable clout because their strikes can devastate the economy — refused to ship any coal until leaders of the coup are made to answer for their actions, Tass said.

In the restive Baltic republics, Soviet troops were withdrawing today from buildings they seized during the crackdown on secessionist movements in Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia. But Soviet Interior Ministry troops remained in control of the broadcast tower outside the Lithuanian capital, Vilnius.

Before dawn today, Gorbachev flew back to Moscow from the Crimea, where he had been confined to his summer home during his brief ouster.

The Soviet president, who was reported to have slept for a few hours in his dacha outside Moscow after returning from the Crimea, arrived at Moscow's Vnukovo Airport unannounced, under heavy security. He looked somewhat disheveled, clad in a windbreaker and a shirt with open collar.

In an appearance earlier today on Soviet television, Gorbachev looked haggard, unshaven, with deep lines around his eyes and mouth. Later, at his news conference, he spoke haltingly, but then appeared to recover his composure and spoke in a strong voice.

Yeltsin, the country's most important popularly elected leader, tapped into surging Russian nationalism to rally opposition to the coup. He gave every indication he would continue to demand a strong role for his vast republic in the wake of the takeover.

"The last three dark days ... have shown Russia cannot be safe unless it has its own national guard," he said.

At the Russian parliament, the crowd roared when Yeltsin announced that the Russian legislature had voted to adopt the tri-color Russian banner in place of Russia's red Communist-era flag.

"Hurrah for Russia!" he shouted, and the crowd chanted back: "Russia! Russia!"

There were also indications Yeltsin would claim a leading role for himself. He told reporters he had spoken by phone with Gorbachev and agreed to meet with him Friday to discuss the formation of a new "government of national trust."

At the rally, former Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze — who resigned last year, warning that hard-liners were pushing the country toward dictatorship — told the crowd the country must honor those who were killed Tuesday in clashes with troops near the Parliament building. Between four and seven people died.

"It's terrible that young people have perished — young people who died in an unequal battle. They should be buried at the Kremlin wall. If there is no room there, there are some people there who can be dug up," Shevardnadze said. That was apparently a barbed reference to the Communist luminaries who are buried there.

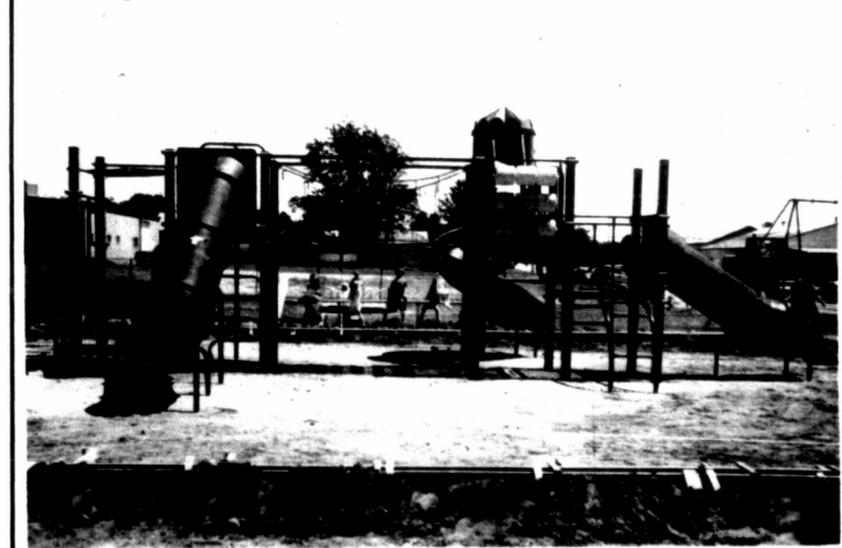

Earlier today, Yeltsin told the Russian Federation's legislature that police under his control had arrested four of the eight coup leaders.

A Russian official reported that a fifth, Interior Minister Boris Pugo, committed suicide as police arrived to arrest him. Other reports said he was gravely injured but alive.

A sixth member of the conspiracy, Prime Minister Valentin Pavlov, was in a hospital under guard, and the other two were reported to have parliamentary immunity.

Gorbachev today named officials to temporarily fill the posts of defense minister, KGB chairman and interior minister.

All local sales taxes must be approved by area voters.

Pampa police Cpl. John Goes inspects damage to a Ford pickup this morning shortly after 7:30 when a pickup driven by 16-year-old Bryan Lane Stephenson, right, ran over a water hydrant at the corner of Harvester and Duncan. The driver told authorities he was blinded by the sun and dew on his windows and missed the turn.

Counsel asks review of 'call waiting' hike

AUSTIN (AP) — The state advocate for residential utility customers is taking fresh aim at Southwestern Bell Telephone's request for an increase in the charge for "call waiting" service.

The proposed increase for the service, which allows a customer to put one caller on hold while talking to another, is from $2.10 to $3.10 per month.

The Office of Public Utility Counsel said it filed a motion Wednesday asking the PUC to consider whether the additional revenue should be used to reduce rates for basic local telephone service.

"Unless the PUC fulfills its statutory duty to determine whether the telephone company has a financial need for more revenue, Southwestern Bell will play the regulatory process like its own private slot machine," said Public Counsel Luis Wilmot.

He said such an increase should have been considered in Southwestern Bell's recent rate case. Southwestern Bell spokesman Bob Digneo said the rate case settlement envisioned the company seeking adjustments in certain charges.

The public counsel said the extra revenue from call waiting will total about $23 million. Southwestern Bell estimates it at $15.9 million. The company also has asked for new, increased charges for directory assistance.

Digneo said the company charges more for such optional services to keep basic local service rates low. He said Texas' basic local service rates are 22 percent below the national average, and that the current call waiting charge is the lowest in the country.

House approves congressional redistricting

AUSTIN (AP) — Regardless of what congressional redistricting plan the Legislature adopts, it will probably end up being decided in court, House Speaker Gib Lewis said.

The House on Wednesday approved a congressional plan despite opposition from Republicans who said the proposal was designed to protect incumbent Democrats.

Lewis, D-Fort Worth, however, said any proposal will be challenged in a lawsuit. "Sure it's going to court." He said redistricting fights "make lawyers rich."

Rep. Kent Grusendorf, R-Arlington, called the Democratic-backed plan "uncouth, torturous and bizarre."

But the bill's author, Rep. Tom Uher, D-Bay City, said it was fair and non-partisan, and "reflects the values and contributions of our congressmen."

The House sent the measure to the Senate on a 74-65 vote.

Republicans said the House-adopted plan would split 132 communities and 39 counties in order to benefit Democrats.

"It's one of the worst political gerrymandering jobs the state has seen in years," said Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, and chairman of the House Republican Caucus.

In West Texas, all the major cities that tend to vote Republican are divided into two or more districts, while traditionally Democratic areas are left wholly in districts held by Democrats, Craddick said.

Black legislative leaders voted for Uher's bill after an amendment passed that they said would increase the impact of black voters in Tarrant County, and increase the number of black voters in a proposed new congressional district in the Dallas area.

Gov. Ann Richards called the Legislature into special session to redraw congressional and State Board of Education boundaries to accommodate population changes recorded by the 1990 census.

According to census figures, Texas has about 17 million people, and will gain three new congressional seats, boosting the state total to 30.

A small crowd of local residents gather in the second floor courtroom of the Gray County Courthouse Wednesday morning to listen to an informational program on the new state regulations on vehicle insurance presented by Gray County Tax Assessor/Collector Margie Gray.

Officials warn drivers to get insured

AUSTIN (AP) — State officials today warned uninsured motorists that they will need proof of auto liability insurance to obtain or renew their driver's license, register a motor vehicle or receive a state safety inspection sticker.

"If you're driving without insurance, you're going to be facing some costly and perhaps inconvenient consequences," said Claire Koriath, chairwoman of the State Board of Insurance.

Under a new law that takes effect Sept. 1, motor vehicle owners for the first time will have to show proof of liability insurance to receive or renew their driver's license and vehicle inspection stickers.

They also must prove they have a policy when applying for initial vehicle registration, renewal of registration or transfer of registration.

About 25 percent, or 2 million Texas drivers do not currently have liability insurance, officials said.

Ms. Koriath said it isn't fair that insured drivers must pay the tab for uninsured motorists through higher insurance premiums and taxes.

Also under the new law, the fine for not carrying the insurance will increase from $75 to fines ranging from $150 to $300. Repeat offenders will have to pay $350 to $1,000 and face the possibility of having their vehicle impounded for six months.

Under state law, the minimum amount of liability insurance required is enough to cover deaths and injuries up to $20,000 per person, or $40,000 for all persons killed or injured in any one accident. It also must cover property damage up to $15,000.

(In Pampa, Gray County Tax Assessor/Collector Margie Gray provided a seminar Wednesday morning to explain the new state regulations.)

Labor: Tired of being taken for granted by Democrats

By PEGGY FIKAC
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas AFL-CIO President Joe Gunn says labor unions are tired of working for Democratic candidates who, when elected, fail to follow through on promises of support.

The Texas AFL-CIO's executive board has unanimously said candidates should be considered individually, rather than on a straight-ticket basis. The trade union coalition normally urges support of a straight Democratic ticket in the general election.

"I spend money, person power and resources to help many Democrats at the national and state level who seldom respond in votes or support for the welfare and concerns of working people ... Labor continues to be 'taken for granted' by these Democrats," said the policy adopted by the board.

During a break in the organization's state convention Wednesday, Gunn said, "We're not going to stay married just to the Democratic Party ... We've been endorsing people that's been after our backside, and we're tired of it."

Gunn said that some Republican state senators, for example, gave labor more support on worker's compensation reform legislation than their Democratic colleagues.

The policy says that labor may want to consider running union members as independent candidates. Gunn said he would support that in strong union areas.

Republicans who support labor interests also will be given consideration, Gunn said.

But he indicated the policy change was a difficult one for him, saying he once considered himself a "yellow-dog Democrat."

"The Democrats used to be the people's party, and if they'll return to that people's party advocacy ... I'll be proud to come back, because where I was raised, Republicans lived under rocks and only come out at night," he said.

Gov. Ann Richards and former state Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower, Democrats who spoke at the convention, had no quarrel with the new policy.

"I certainly think that's appropriate and their prerogative," Richards said after her speech.

Hightower urged delegates, "Impose a little political discipline. Why are you supporting people who aren't supporting you?" He said that labor should become more political-aggressive.

In her convention speech, Richards praised the work of local unions in her election.

She blasted the federal government, saying the country's domestic policies are in "shambles." Among her concerns is the lack of affordable health insurance, she said.

"Don't talk to me about any kinder and any gentler federal government, because we haven't seen it in Texas," Richards said.

She also praised accomplishments of the last special session, in which lawmakers wrote a state budget and passed $2.7 billion in fee and tax increases.

She said the tax measure was the smallest in many years.

Texas gains 25 spots on best places to live list

By TERRI LANGFORD
Associated Press Writer

Clean air and water, strong local government and low crime helped propel three Texas cities onto Money magazine's list of the 10 best places to live in America.

Bryan checked in at third place, while Lubbock was fifth and Austin ninth on Money's annual survey of the nation's 300 largest metropolitan areas. In all, 25 cities in the Lone Star State made the list.

"It's no surprise to us that so many cities in Texas made the top of the list," Cathy Bonner, interim executive director of the Texas Department of Commerce, said Wednesday in a statement. "... Money magazine's ranking shows us that not only do people love to visit the Lone Star State, they enjoy living here year round."

Bryan, last year's No. 100, catapulted ahead of other cities to finish behind Provo-Orem, Utah, in first place and No. 2 Bremerton, Wash.

"We were underrated last year," said Art King, president of the Bryan-College Station Chamber of Commerce. "We've always known Bryan is a great place to live."

Bryan and sister-city College Station are the home of Texas A&M University and boast a combined population of 122,000.

For Austin, a city of 465,600, a ninth-place ranking was a hard pill to swallow considering the football rivalry between the University of Texas at Austin and Texas A&M.

Asked whether Bryan-College Station was indeed a better place to live than the state's capital, Angelou said the Greater Austin Chamber of Commerce joked: "I'm in Austin, Texas, not Bryan-College Station."

BEST TEXAS CITIES

NEW YORK (AP) — Here is a list of how Texas cities fared among the 300 best places to live in the United States as ranked by the editors of Money magazine.

The listing is followed by its 1990 ranking.

- 3. Bryan (100)
- 5. Lubbock (75)
- 9. Austin (61)
- 13. Galveston-Texas City (32)
- 17. Waco (184)
- 22. Amarillo (174)
- 24. Brownsville (90)
- 26. McAllen (107)
- 29. Laredo (119)
- 42. Dallas (117)
- 46. Houston (59)
- 55. Brazoria (179)
- 61. Texarkana (191)
- 65. Killeen-Temple (122)
- 69. San Antonio (240)
- 86. El Paso (261)
- 87. Fort Worth-Arlington (203)
- 89. Abilene (227)
- 94. Midland (290)
- 101. Beaumont (223)
- 139. Tyler (234)
- 148. Wichita Falls (219)
- 160. Odessa (250)
- 162. Corpus Christi (257)
- 174. Longview (193)

"They have a good football team and they beat us every once in awhile."

Angelou said the ranking is just one of many "bests" the city of 465,622 has garnered recently, and residents are delighted with each one.

"All of these rankings help shape a view and image of our city for those who don't know what our city is all about," Angelou said Wednesday.

Among its recent accolades, Austin has been ranked one of the best places to raise children by Parenting magazine, one of the best places for business by Fortune magazine and one of the most all-American cities by the American League of Cities, Angelou said.

West Texas hospitality was among the factors contributing to Lubbock's high ranking, officials said.

"I think they ranked us so high because of our low unemployment, low cost of living and high quality of life," said Gary Lewis, assistant general manager of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce.

The cost of living in Lubbock, with a population of 223,000, is 6.3 percent below the national average.

The other Texas cities ranked as best places to live on the Money list were: Galveston-Texas City, Waco, Amarillo, Brownsville, McAllen, Laredo, Dallas, Houston, Brazoria, Texarkana, Killeen-Temple, San Antonio, El Paso, Fort Worth-Arlington, Abilene, Midland, Beaumont, Tyler, Wichita Falls, Odessa, Corpus Christi and Longview.

In ranking the metropolitan areas, Money asked 252 subscribers (median age: 46; median household income: $61,000) what they valued in a place to live. Their top priorities were clean water, low crime, clean air, abundant medical services and strong local government.

The magazine then collected information on the 300 largest metro areas and fed it into a computer.

Scouts say new program won't mean change in standards

By ROD RICHARDSON
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — The Boy Scouts of America isn't changing its standards, but is willing to expand its horizons.

A new program proposed to the nation's 397 local councils will be separate from the regular Scouts program and will be open to public school students between ages 9 and 18.

Blake Lewis, spokesman for the Irving, Texas-based organization, denied suggestions the program is a response to recent criticism over the Scouts' refusal to admit gays, atheists or females.

The "Learning for Life" program, in development for three years, will spread the ethics and principles of scouting to school-age children, he said.

Blake said details of the program have yet to be worked out. But he said the plans were prematurely made public last week by a California chapter of the United Way that had withheld a $9,000 grant because of allegations from a gay, civil rights group that the Boy Scouts discriminates against homosexuals.

Last week, Bay Area United Way President Thomas Ruppner said the Scouts' decision to create the new program had helped settle the debate. Ruppner called Learning for Life "a significant step to open the values of scouting to all young people without preconditions."

But Blake said "Learning for Life" will not open any doors for those excluded from scouting.

The exclusion of homosexuals is based on the Scouts' oath and laws, both written in 1910, that require members to be "morally straight." The organization also excludes girls and anyone who will not take a religious oath, Lewis said.

"The values and the standards of the Boy Scouts, Cub Scouts and Explorers remain in place today and will remain in place for some time to come," Lewis said.

The "Learning for Life" program would be similar to in-school scouting programs that have been active in local councils nationwide since 1982.

The curriculum is designed to promote self-esteem, ethical decision making, community service and personal growth.

Participants, who will not be classified as Scouts, will have regular contact with volunteers who will serve as mentors, Lewis said.

"It was never intended to be an alternative program to traditional scouting," Lewis said. "No, I think while the pressure may be there, scouting has no intentions of changing its standards in any way."

Lewis said the program was not a response to the California criticism.

"There's no way a program of national scope could be developed in five or six weeks in response to an isolated local issue," he said.

The new program "is not scouting," he said. "It has nothing to do with traditional scouting. It's not uniforms. It's not the scout handbook. It's not the scout oath."

NOTICE OF CERTIFICATION OF PRECOMPLIANCE WITH HAZARDOUS WASTE BURNING REQUIREMENTS OF 40 CFR 266.103(b)

This notice is to inform the public of the following facility's intent to comply with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) regulations for combustion of hazardous waste in boilers and industrial furnaces (BIFs).

GENERAL FACILITY INFORMATION:

Facility Owner/Operator: Hoechst Celanese Chemical Group

Address: P. O. Box 937
Pampa, TX 79066-0937

FACILITY LOCATION: 5 Miles SW of Pampa
Highway 60
Pampa, TX 79065

DATE THAT PRECOMPLIANCE CERTIFICATION WAS SUBMITTED TO EPA: August 21, 1991

DESCRIPTION OF BIF REGULATORY PROCEDURES: Following years of study, EPA has promulgated standards under Subpart H of 40 CFR Part 266 that regulate the combustion of hazardous waste in BIFs. These standards require BIFs to comply with emissions standards during a period of "interim status" prior to obtaining a final Resource Conservation and Recovery Act operating permit. Limits on operating conditions during interim status ensure that the facility is in compliance with emissions standards for hazardous metals, hydrogen chloride, free chlorine, particulate matter, and hazardous organic compounds, which EPA has determined are protective of human health and the environment. The interim status rules require that owners and operators of BIFs combusting hazardous wastes must submit, by August 21, 1991, a certification of precompliance documenting compliance with the emissions standards based on best engineering judgement. By August 21, 1992, owners and operators must submit a certification of compliance documenting that stack testing has confirmed compliance with the emissions standards. If the facility is not in compliance with the standards, hazardous waste burning must cease. Additional information on these regulatory requirements are provided in Subpart H of 40 CFR Part 266.

TYPES OF HAZARDOUS WASTES BURNED: The facility generates an average of approximately 8,500 lbs per hour of organic acid and solvent wastes as part of its manufacturing process. The boilers are designed to burn a maximum of 15,000 lbs per hour of these wastes, which is equal to approximately 5% of the total heat input to the boilers. These organic and solvent wastes include, but are not limited to, long chain carboxylic acids, ketones, and esters.

TYPE OF COMBUSTION DEVICE: The regulated devices are water tube, pulverized coal, corner tangential fired, steam generating boilers. The boilers provide steam for the entire facility. The boilers are equipped with fabric filters that control particulate emissions to less than 0.08 grains per dry standard cubic foot (gr/dscf).

FUELS AND FEEDSTOCKS TO BE FIRED OTHER THAN HAZARDOUS WASTES: The device is designed to fire an average of 100,000 lbs per hour of pulverized coal. It also burns approximately 700 standard cubic feet per minute (SCFM) of a methane rich gas produced by biological degradation of aqueous effluent, approximately 20 lbs per hour of a solid carbon material, and approximately 1300 SCFM of vent gasses collected from equipment in the chemical producing part of the plant.

BASIS FOR PRECOMPLIANCE CERTIFICATION: Data from tests conducted in 1990 indicate that particulate emissions will not exceed the EPA limit of 0.08 gr/dscf. Site specific air dispersion modeling of HCl, Cl₂, and metals was done to determine maximum annual average ground-level concentration. The projected ground-level concentrations of HCl, Cl₂, and metals are less than the levels established by EPA.

Southwestern Public Service files request to credit customers $11 million in savings

Southwestern Public Service Company has filed with the Public Utility Commission of Texas to credit $11.3 million to its Texas retail customers for savings in fuel costs.

The proposed credit includes $10.7 million in actual fuel savings and $600,000 in interest, based on an annual rate of 11.7 percent.

A Texas residential customer using 1,000 kilowatt hours of electricity a month would receive a one-time credit of $11.15.

SPS expects to receive swift approval on the filing, said SPS Group Manager of Rates and Regulation Gerald Diller.

"We hope to be able to apply the credit to our customers' October bills," he said.

The credit would cover fuel expenses from April 1990 through June 1991.

Retail customers include residential, commercial and industrial users.

The primary factor which made the savings available to the customers, according to Diller, was lower natural gas prices.

"Gas purchases for power plants made at spot prices have been extremely favorable during the past few months," Diller said. "Even our contract gas prices have been reduced."

Certain low-sulfur coal prices also have been somewhat lower, due to negotiations with suppliers.

Five SPS power plants are fueled by natural gas, two are fueled by clean, western coal. However, half the company's capacity is provided by the two coal plants.

SPS President and Chief Operating Officer Coyt Webb said the company expends significant effort to remain a low-cost producer.

"The cost of fuel makes up about half of an electric bill, and our ability to control this cost is very important to our customers," Webb said.

Because other states served by SPS have forms of automatic fuel-cost adjustments, savings as they occurred already have been passed through to SPS customers in New Mexico, Oklahoma and Kansas.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the covealing commandment.

Labor unions should give in or just get out

Labor unions in the United States have had a mixed decade. Their political star has continued climbing because of increased campaign funds spread around to federal, state and local candidates and massive lobbying operations.

Union leaders seem to have successfully kept politicians under their sway, but rank-and-file workers (the actual people the union honchos are supposed to represent) are more and more often deciding to go their own way. Union membership is shrinking everywhere and workers at new companies seldom opt for collective representation.

Given those trends, it should come as no surprise that union leaders and lobbyists are putting more and more of their efforts, faith and trust in America's politicians, not America's workers. (But, then, many so-called union leaders in the past showed that they had little true concern for their fellow workers, instead using their positions to line their own pockets at the expense of the workers they were supposedly protecting from the big, bad companies.)

Because strikes are even less popular with workers themselves, national labor leaders want a new law that would make it easier for unions to call a strike, harder for companies to negotiate a settlement and harder for companies to last out a strike and survive.

The union-supported bill, which has passed the House, would prohibit a company from hiring any permanent workers during a strike.

If it becomes law, a company could still hire temporary workers — people who would automatically be thrown out on the streets the minute a union decided to settle a strike. Few people, especially highly trained and skilled workers, would be willing to enter such an unstable situation.

That means that as a practical matter, companies would have two choices: give unions whatever they demanded or go out of business.

U.S. law already contains myriad protections for unions, workers and striking workers. They do not also need the right to put a company out of business through a strike. If the Senate passes this awful piece of legislation, President Bush should be poised with his veto pen.

The Crusade, one year later

It has now been a year since Americans awoke one morning to find out that we had added a 51st state, that its name was Kuwait, and that we were preparing to go to war on the other side of the globe to wrest it from an aggressive dictator. A grim President Bush vowed that Iraq's aggression "will not stand," and few people thought to ask the ominous question: Why not?

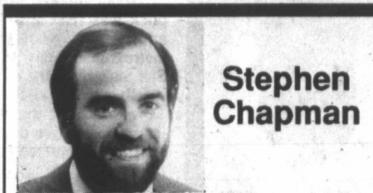

After all, Kuwait was not an ally whom we were committed to defend. The world could easily manage without its oil. Saddam Hussein was no threat to become anything more than a local bully, a headache to his neighbors but not a danger to those on the other side of the Atlantic Ocean, or even those on the other side of the Mediterranean Sea.

But all this was quickly forgotten as the administration inflated Hussein into a second Hitler — with the power to swallow up everything between India and the Azores, reduce the entire industrialized world to oil-starved poverty and terrorize Kansas City with nuclear weapons.

Conservatives claim to despise Nanny Government, but what Bush pursued in the confrontation with Saddam Hussein was merely Nanny Government on a global scale. We didn't send half a million troops to the Persian Gulf merely to free Kuwait and contain Iraq, but to make the entire world as tidy and well-behaved as a teacher's pet.

Protecting American interests in the world was mocked as a hopelessly small-minded task unworthy of such a great nation. What's the point of being a superpower — the only one left, don't forget — if you only resort to military force when you really have to? Bush yearned to erect nothing less than a New World Order, with guess who in charge.

The war went smashing, except for the American soldiers who came home missing a limb or an eye or something, and those who didn't come home at all. And all the civilians in Iraq who had to suffer or die for the sins of their leader. And the 5 million people displaced by the war.

Anyone intent on reordering the planet has to avoid sentimentality about such matters. You can't make an omelet without breaking eggs, and you can't rule the world without wrecking lives and spilling blood. After the stunning U.S. triumph over Iraq, it certainly looked as though the world was ours to run.

But the world seems to have had other ideas. Our crushing military victory was supposed to lead to a quick cashing of the loser, Saddam Hussein. Instead, he remains in full control of his country, rather as if Jefferson Davis had occupied the years after the Civil War with running the Confederacy.

It is easy for Bush's hawkish critics to say he should have taken the fight all the way to Baghdad if necessary to remove Hussein, but at the time that looked as inviting as crawling into a dark cave after a wounded bear. In a rare lapse into prudence, the president saw it was better to settle for a clean success than run the risk of a messy failure.

That was tough luck for those Iraqis who had been inspired when Bush urged them to rise up against their ruler, only to find out that the United States wasn't ready to actually do anything to help.

They are now wards of the United Nations (meaning, for the most part, the United States), which has the job of protecting them from famine and disease — not to mention the duty of coming to the rescue if Hussein gets the itch once more to annihilate them.

Kuwait, meanwhile, seems to have been liberated from a foreign tyrant only so he could be returned to a domestic one. Democracy remains as offensive to the ruler of Saudi Arabia as bare thighs. Arab-Israeli peace talks may be on the way, because the United States has bribed everyone to participate, but no one appears irresistibly determined to build a genuine peace. Some 42,000 U.S. troops are still in the gulf.

Of course, the United States can live with all the unfortunate results of its war — but, with a lot less trouble, it could have lived with Kuwait becoming a province of Iraq. Our fool's errand unnecessarily squandered money and lives. Its chief accomplishment was to teach a lesson that, unfortunately, neither George Bush nor many other people have grasped: Intervention abroad is more likely to harm the United States than to help the world.

A century ago, a British parliamentarian criticized his country's growing disenchantment with imperialism by remarking scornfully, "When I was young, it was thought to be the mark of a wise statesman that he had turned a small kingdom into a great empire. In my old age, it appears to be thought the object of a statesman to turn a great empire into a small kingdom."

The outcome of our Persian Gulf crusade may yet convince Americans of something Britons also learned the hard way: A great empire, by whatever name, is more fun to imagine than to administer.

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Thursday, Aug. 22, the 234th day of 1991. There are 131 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On Aug. 22, 1911, it was announced in Paris that Leonardo da Vinci's Mona Lisa had been stolen from the Louvre Museum sometime during the night. (The painting turned up two years later, in Italy.)

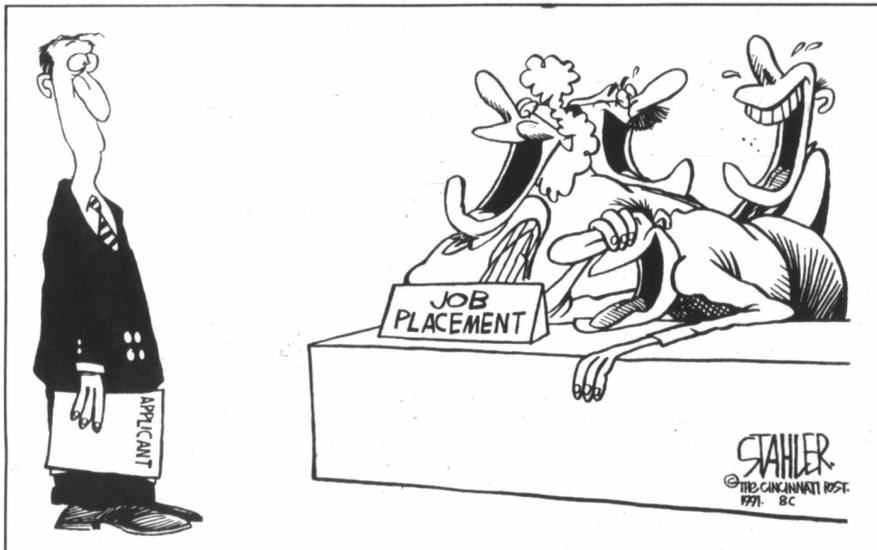

On this date:

In 1485, England's King Richard III was killed in the Battle of Bosworth Field, ending the War of the Roses. Richard was succeeded to the throne by Henry VII.

In 1762, Ann Franklin became the first female editor of an American newspaper, the Mercury of Newport, R.I.

In 1775, England's King George III proclaimed the American colonies to be in a state of open rebellion.

In 1787, inventor John Fitch demonstrated his steamboat on the

On one engine and a prayer

Several years ago, I had to make a very important decision. I had to either learn to deal with my fear of flying or find another line of work.

The rest of the world works on jet schedules. Not those of bus, train or car.

With the help of some very nice people at Delta, not to mention some of Delta's Crown Room stock, I made my first flight in nearly ten years.

Since then I have logged over a million miles on commercial flights and I have the frequent flyer points to prove it.

I've never learned to enjoy flying, but I have learned to accept it as a necessary part of my life.

I have even gone a step further. I sometimes fly in private aircrafts.

It's often more convenient than commercial and I don't get served any airline food.

The flight was in a twin-engine turbo prop from Hilton Head Island to Fort Myers, Fla.

The pilot said it would be a smooth flight of just over two hours.

A friend and business associate was flying with me. His name is Steve.

The pilot had just informed us we would be landing in Fort Myers in 20 minutes. Steve and I were discussing some of the finer points of putting.

It happened in a heartbeat. The plane slowed abruptly. It seemed to lurch to the right.

The cabin light flickered on and off. Buzzers and bells buzzed and rang.

Lewis Grizzard

I looked at Steve. He looked at me. Our initial reactions had been to grab our seats.

"I've lost an engine," said the pilot.

Over a million miles but nothing like this had ever happened before. I had a number of questions to ask the pilot, who had immediately shut down the damaged right engine.

My first question was, "Are we all going to die?"

The pilot answered "We're OK. The other engine will get us to Fort Myers. We're only 76 miles out."

I felt somewhat better but I was still in a mild state of shock from the moment the engine went out.

Steve looked out the window to his left and said to our remaining workable engine, "Come on, Lefty."

I looked out at the right engine, praying not to see any fire. The prop was revolving slowly in the wind. It was an eerie sight. But there was no fire.

I looked out the window again and saw the lights of the city below us. I could see the moon's reflection on a number of lakes.

I wondered if it actually were true my seat cushion could be used for flotation.

"I wonder if they're floating the runway for us," said Steve.

I wished he hadn't said that.

I thought of the recent crash in which country singer Reba McEntire's band had been killed.

"Six more minutes," said the pilot, "and it will be a normal landing."

It seemed like six hours. What if Lefty suddenly stopped? I was covered in perspiration.

A fire truck followed us to the private terminal. The pilot said he felt the problem likely had to do with an oil seal.

"You can tell me now," I said to the pilot when we were outside the plane, "were we in any real danger?"

"I know I was too young to go," he replied.

I walked inside the terminal. The very first thing I noticed inside was an autographed picture of a woman.

The woman was Reba McEntire.

Steve and I told the party who picked us up to find the nearest bar.

Abortion protests and needy babies

By CHUCK STONE

Watching the televised report of a small group of zealous anti-abortionists being arrested in Wichita, Kan., I let my mind take an illative leap half-way across the world to the refugee camps in the Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip and the squatter's camps near Cape Town, South Africa.

A cruel paradox infects all three countries:

In American, anti-abortionists self-righteously profess to be concerned about unborn babies, yet they seem oblivious to the tragedy of babies born in squalor and poverty who die prematurely from malnutrition and neglect.

This moral feeling is now being compounded by an administration that has shed any pretense of being "a government of all the people." It is far more concerned about reaping political capital by loudly opposing abortion than about sowing seeds of growth for needy babies.

In the Gaza Strip, where 700,000

Palestinians are sardined into the most squalid hovel, families struggle to survive under what a Washington Post reporter, Nora Boustany, characterized as "harsh Israeli army rule." Here sensitive reporting revived memories of the brief period when I lived and worked for a relief agency in the Gaza Strip in 1956-57.

During that period, the Palestinian refugees were exploited and oppressed by the Egyptian government. Today, the Israeli army is the new oppressor. To the Israelis, who have lived for decades under a constant threat of Arab terrorism, and now face attacks from the Palestinian intifada, the refugees must be contained, no matter how many civil liberties and social amenities are aborted in the process.

During my recent trip to South Africa, I visited the squatters' camps in Kayalitha, a few miles from the radiant elegance of Cape Town. Over 800,000 squatters are crammed in under conditions gruesomely similar to those at the refugee camps in Gaza. To both black and white South Africans, the squatters are a disconcerting fact that is shrugged from the consciousness.

But what the feverishly militant anti-abortion group Operation Rescue has proven is that a variation of the Palestinian intifada will attract more attention than a moderate stance. To Operation Rescue, there is no middle ground. One can only speculate about the motivation of this publicity-starved movement at a time when they are being supported by an ideologically aligned president and a conservative Supreme Court.

Ironically, in both the Middle East and in South Africa, where contending parties are trying to negotiate, respectively, a peace agreement and a new government, Israel's Shamir and South Africa's de Kerk show more moral flexibility than Operation Rescue's Randall Terry. Still, both government leaders are more interested in the politics of power than in the theology of humanity.

As a result, the Palestinian refugees in the Gaza Strip and the squatters in the South African camps are as much pawns of a power struggle between political factions as are the unborn babies and the babies born into poverty.

Years ago, I visited a school for teenage mothers. On the wall, a large sign declared, "A baby is God's opinion that the world must go on." Unquestionably, the anti-abortionists in Operation Rescue are motivated by that creed. Yet, when they fail to support or lobby with equal vigor for legislation that will help newly born babies grow up and help the world "to go on," it raises questions about the strength of its commitment to helping all babies to survive and thrive.

All of us face a similar dilemma. Limited time and limited energy force us to focus on one or two causes, instead of being morally eclectic in our concerns. But we could begin by worrying as much about the unborn and newly born babies in the Gaza Strip and the Kayalitha squatter's camps as we do about those in Wichita, Kan.

More on restaurants and moving houses, and reminders about pets

Last week I was writing of former restaurants and drive-ins in Pampa and of seeing a house being moved down one of the city's streets.

Margaret Bridges called to let me know I had listed the names of her grandfather's establishments incorrectly. I had recalled the Pig Hip Inn; it was actually the Pig Hip Drive-In, located on Hobart Street catty-corner from Caldwell's. I also had recalled the White Steer Inn; it was the Steer Inn, located on Brown just southeast of Hobart Street Park. The latter I guess I recalled as the "White" Steer Inn because of its white structure.

Anyway, her grandfather, B.W. Kelley, built both of the drive-ins back in the early 1950s; he later closed both of them in the early 1960s, though the Steer Inn was sold and operated under other ownership afterwards. The Hickory Hut is now operating at the former Steer Inn location. The Pig Hip Drive-In has since been torn down.

Of seeing the house being moved along a street on the back of a large, flatbed truck, I had wondered if pioneers had ever moved their houses.

Well, I have learned that some of them did.

Staff writer J. Alan Bryz told me he had heard Roberts County resident Effie Cowan Jenkins talking about the problems in moving her parents' home up a hillside north of Miami back in the early part of this century.

I called Mrs. Jenkins, and she gave me some details, though she mentioned that the moving occurred while she was still a little girl.

As she recalls it, her parents decided about 1915 that they wanted to move their home, located north of Miami, about half a mile up the hillside. A structure was built using wooden wheels and planks, and then the house — a part at a time, since the house was separated into two parts for the moving — was placed atop the wagon-like structure.

She said the family had about 10 men helping in the moving. They ended up having to get three steam engines to pull the structure up the rocky hillside since one was not enough and even two didn't help much. It took several days for the move, since even with three steam engines, the house could only be moved a short distance each day. At nights, the family slept in the house while it was still atop the large wooden wagon structure during the move.

After the main portion of the house had been moved, the men went to work on relocating the rest of the house, the dining room and kitchen area that had been separated from the main portion of the house. Then the two portions were rejoined. She said the whole operation took more than a week to get both parts of the house up the hill and in place.

It was quite a task to get the house moved, Mrs. Jenkins recalls, nothing like it would be today to move a house with large flatbed trucks and cranes.

In 1952, the old house was torn down and the lumber from it was used to build a new house at the hilltop location, she said.

JC's Family Restaurant has opened, drawing large crowds for its first week of operation. With Dairy Queen opening last week, there are now two new eating establishments, both in sight of each other on Hobart, joining the other fine eating places that feed many Pampa residents and bring in others from surrounding towns.

Jim and Carolyn Brown — thus the JC in the title — plan for their restaurant to be open seven days a week, except for major holidays. But with Labor Day coming up soon, on Sept. 2, they do plan a special treat. They won't be open for regular business that day, but they will have an open house from 2-5 p.m. to give people a chance to come and tour the facilities, including the kitchen. There also will be free Cokes, Jim said.

So on your way to or from Chautauqua activities in Central Park, just swing over to the restaurant and visit with the Browns.

The Browns' restaurant does have a menu that's a little different — it's printed like a small newspaper, with brief history articles on the front page you can read while waiting for your meal. And, if you wish, you can even take the menu home.

Have you happened to be asleep late at night, just really enjoying the good rest, only to dart straight up from bed because there are two dogs or two cats, or perhaps one of each, who have chosen to have a fight underneath your window? This can be especially disturbing when you don't even own one of the creatures. Or even embarrassing when you're so mad you rush outside in your underwear to break up the battling animals only to be caught in some passing car's headlight beams.

Or have you been out taking a walk on some mild summer night only to have some dog come bounding out from some bushes to snap at your heels, perhaps even biting at your legs?

Or, even worse, to be in your house and then hear your young child screaming, running through the yard into the house to show you where some dog had bitten a bare leg or arm? That leaves you to worry about trying to locate the dog and then waiting to see if your child will have to be subjected to a series of rabies shots.

Despite numerous stories and reminders over the years, there is still too many either unaware — or perhaps even deliberately ignoring — the existence of a city ordinance, No. 969 passed in revised form in 1984, requiring owners to keep their dogs and cats under restraint.

The ordinance also specifies that no dog or cat shall be allowed to cause a nuisance and that their owners shall be held responsible for such actions by their dogs and cats.

In other words, dogs and cats are not supposed to be allowed to run free throughout our city. They may be perfectly nice, calm and obedient animals in your presence and in your yard, but they may show quite different behavior when encountering strangers, young children or other animals away from their home.

They are to be kept in the owners' homes or fenced yards. If there is no fenced yard and the animal is outside, it is to be kept on a rope or a leash, or kept close to the owner and be responsive to the owner's vocal commands, to be considered under restraint.

The general purpose of the ordinance is, of course, to keep your pets from harming others, through bites or scratches, or keep them from being a nuisance through such acts as fighting other pets, digging up someone's flowers, depositing their "calling cards" in someone else's yards, or even possibly spreading various diseases.

But there's also another purpose. It helps to decrease the chance that you might step outside someday to call your pet back into the house only to see your pet lying in the middle of the street, run over by some vehicle, or dragging back home bearing the wounds received in a fight, or coming in after a battle with a rabid wild animal.

It might seem like a harsh ordinance to those who feel animals should be allowed to roam freely. But if you truly care for your pet, you should be willing to heed its aims.

And remember, there are also ordinances requiring the licensing and vaccination of your pets. Again, they aim to protect your pets — and others.

Lithuanians demand Soviet troops turn over television facilities

By MATTI HUUHTANEN
Associated Press Writer

VILNIUS, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Hundreds of Lithuanians thronged television facilities in Vilnius today, and the president of the breakaway Baltic republic said they would seize the buildings if Soviet troops did not give them up.

Troops captured the downtown studio and a suburban broadcast tower in January in an assault in which 13 civilians and a KGB officer died.

Following the failure Wednesday of the hard-line Communist coup in Moscow, Soviet troops were withdrawing from buildings they seized during the bloody crackdown on secessionist movements in Lithuania and its sister Baltic republics of Latvia and Estonia.

In Riga, capital of Latvia, the republic's national anthem echoed off the cobblestones of the area of the city known as old town as Soviet troops who backed the failed Kremlin coup retreated peacefully to their barracks.

In Estonia, a division of paratroopers began withdrawing Wednesday night.

The three Baltic republics, which began independence drives last year, have been attacked in a variety of ways by the central government ever since.

Nevertheless, their secessionist movements have inspired other Soviet republics' own independence drives that together have become the focus of a bitter debate between hard-liners and reformists in Moscow.

The people of the Baltics and other secessionist republics hope the failure of the coup will help advance their causes, but that will depend on what happens to the power of the central government in the aftermath of the putsch.

In Vilnius, Soviet Interior Ministry troops remained in control of the studio and broadcast tower.

Hundreds of Lithuanian residents converged on the buildings today, demanding the removal of the troops and three armored personnel carriers guarding the tower, the scene of the bloodiest incident last January.

Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis made a similar demand in a telephone call today to the Soviet chief of staff, Gen. Mikhail Moiseyev, the Lithuanian parliament said in a statement.

Landsbergis warned Moiseyev "that if Soviet officials do not give the order to withdraw the troops in the television and radio buildings in Vilnius, the residents and officials of Lithuania will take the initiative and take the buildings back themselves," the statement said.

Moiseyev promised that at noon today, during his meeting with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, he would raise the issue as first on the agenda and contact Mr. Landsbergis," the statement said.

Moiseyev has heading the armed forces since the arrest of Defense Minister Dmitri Yazov, who is under investigation for treason for his role as one of eight members of the Emergency Committee that organized the failed coup against Gorbachev.

Violence flared in Wednesday, after the collapse of the coup. Clashes occurred outside the Latvian and Lithuanian parliaments, leaving one Lithuanian guard dead and several other people hurt.

Nevertheless, all troops deployed in Latvia were to be back in their barracks by today, said Latvian Vice President Danis Ivans, quoting Col. Gen. Fyodor Kuzmin, Soviet commander of the Baltic military district.

About 2,000 Latvians, many waving V-for-victory signs, cheered and applauded as about 30 blue-beret paratroopers piled into a bus in the capital, Riga. Many burst into the Latvian national anthem, "God Bless Latvia."

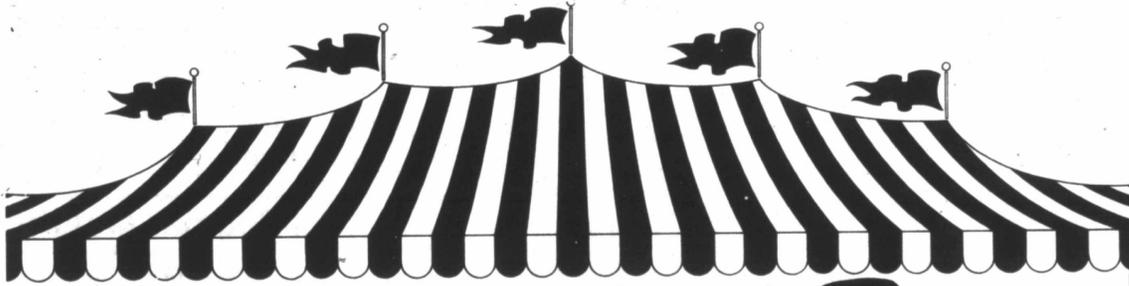

The republic's Parliament in Riga reaffirmed Latvia's independence on Wednesday.

A short time later, Soviet armored personnel carriers moved in on a central square. More than a dozen troops fired smoke canisters and rushed toward the parliament building before being blocked by people and barricades. Several people, including elderly women, were beaten, the parliamentary press office said. The Soviet troops later returned peacefully to barracks.

"Juntas come and go, but the Baltic way will continue," said lawmaker Romualdas Razhukas, a leader of the pro-independence Latvian Popular Front. He was addressing more than 500 Latvians listening to live broadcasts from the republic's parliament.

The Latvian Supreme Council Parliament declared outright independence on Wednesday, saying it was nullifying the transition period that followed its decision in May 1990 to seek independence.

Violence between blacks and Jews in Brooklyn continues

By CHRISTOPHER SHERIDAN
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor David Dinkins tried to calm tension between Hasidic Jews and blacks in Brooklyn, but a jeering, bottle-throwing crowd chased him away and violence continued early today.

New York Newsday columnist Jimmy Breslin described in his column today how he was pulled from a cab, robbed, stripped to his underwear and beaten.

The unrest in Brooklyn's Crown Heights neighborhood began Monday night after a black child was struck and killed by a car driven by an ultra-Orthodox Hasidic Jew. A rabbinical student was fatally stabbed by a black man hours later in what police say was a revenge killings. Police reported 44 arrests by Wednesday. Injured were at least 20 people, including journalists and firefighters, and 86 police officers, including eight hit by shotgun pellets.

Breslin, a Pulitzer Prize winner, was not among those seriously injured. He wrote that someone looked in the cab and yelled: "White man. White man" and a group of about 50 people descended, some calling for money.

One man jumped on the hood and hit the windshield with a baseball bat, "with a look on his face that told you all you ever wanted to know about life in New York at this time," Breslin wrote.

He said the youth broke the windshield, but was unable to get at him because of others in the back seat who were punching him and ripping at his clothes for money.

Breslin said he made it out of the cab, and was rescued from the crowd by two men with a knife who walked him to the police precinct.

Early today, Dinkins and Police Commissioner Lee Brown visited the wounded at Kings County Hospital. They told reporters they would not impose a curfew in Crown Heights.

On Wednesday, hundreds of blacks, some carrying baseball bats, bottles or rocks, attacked the headquarters of the ultra-Orthodox Lubavitcher sect. They shouted "War" and "Soon!" and threw rocks and bottles. About 100 Jews hurled rocks back.

Club-wielding police in riot gear separated the two groups.

One group of blacks burned an Israeli flag; some held signs with anti-Semitic slogans. Groups of blacks rampaged through the neighborhood, damaging police vehicles and stores.

"This is Nazi Germany all over again," said City Councilman Noach Dear, an Orthodox Jew who was pelted by rocks.

Wednesday afternoon, Dinkins decided it was too dangerous to take a planned walking tour through the neighborhood. Instead, he visited the family of 7-year-old Gavin Cato, who was struck and killed by a car in the entourage of the Lubavitcher spiritual leader, Rebbe Menachem Mendel Schneerson. The child's cousin, Angela Cato, also 7, was critically injured.

Dinkins, the city's first black mayor, was jeered and booed as he tried to speak to the black crowd through a megaphone.

"With respect to the driver of the car, that matter will be presented to a grand jury," Dinkins said. "In the meantime, we've got to increase the peace. I do want justice. We all want justice. But we will not get it with violence."

About 50 police officers escorted Dinkins to his car as the crowd threw bottles at him.

No charges have yet been brought against the driver, Yoseph Lisef, 22, said Brooklyn District Attorney Charles J. Hynes.

Rumors that a Hasidic ambulance crew tended to Lisef rather than the injured children helped spark the riots, although police later said they told the ambulance to take the driver away.

On Wednesday, a black youth, Lemrick Nelson, 16, was charged with second-degree murder in the stabbing death of Yankel Rosenbaum, 29, a Hasidic student from Australia.

Rosenbaum was not involved in the car accident, but police said he was apparently killed in retaliation.

Crown Heights has long been plagued with racial animosity. Members of the Lubavitcher sect blame local blacks for crime in the neighborhood; blacks charge the Jewish sect wields too much power and receives preferential treatment.

Hasidic Jews of the Lubavitcher sect emigrated from Russia to Crown Heights during the 1940s and '50s, when the neighborhood was mostly middle-class and Jewish.

The area is now mostly low-income and predominantly black, with about 300,000 residents, some 30,000 of them Lubavitchers.

The Lubavitchers, believed to be the largest Hasidic sect in this country, comprise fewer than 100,000 of the country's 5.8 million Jews.

Tensions were inflamed in 1978 when two men in Hasidic garb allegedly attacked a black youth; two rabbis were acquitted in the incident. A 1987 snowball fight between blacks and Jews escalated into rock- and bottle-throwing.

Twelve-year-old Yechiel Bitton cries next to his father Isaac after he was felled by rocks and bottles Tuesday during racial rioting between black and Hasidic residents in the Crown Heights section of Brooklyn. The tumult was sparked by the death of a 7-year-old black boy, killed Monday night by a car driven by a Hasidic man.

Seminar to train nonprofit leaders in special event production planned

The Panhandle Center for Nonprofit Management is offering Make Your Events Special, a training workshop in producing special events, to leaders of nonprofit organizations, on Sept. 12. The workshop will be from 9 a.m.-5 p.m. in the Fireplace Room of St. Andrews Episcopal Church, 1-40 and Georgia.

"According to Forbes, American nonprofit organizations annually raise more than $10,000,000,000 with special events," said Sally Manning, executive director of the Panhandle Center for Nonprofit Management. "With cuts in government funding, and increased need for services, special events provide a crucial part of many groups budgets. This workshop is designed specifically for executive directors and CEO's who will be directing a series of special events programs over a fixed period of time."

"Many nonprofit leaders have no experience in planning and producing special events," said Julie Attebury, president of the Junior League of Amarillo, which is co-sponsoring the workshop along with the Meadows Foundation of Dallas. "So we're providing them with practical, concrete training to equip them to create successful events."

"This all-day, intensive workshop covers special events from soup to nuts," said Ted Geier, executive director of Folkworks, a New York based management assistance provider, which designed the program. "Participants will learn how to set goals, choose the right events for their group, friend-raise and fundraise, control finances, promote and market their events and more."

Pre-registration is required. For more information call (806)-373-4261, The Panhandle Center for Nonprofit Management.

Heat manageable for senior citizens

NEW HYDE PARK, N.Y. (ASP) — Take the heat seriously if you're older, advises a geriatric specialist. "The older person will have some medical problem, either heart or lung disease, or perhaps diabetes, that places him in greater jeopardy during hot weather," says Dr. Conn Foley, medical director of the Parker Jewish Geriatric Institute.

Aging slows circulation, and that makes it harder for the older person to tolerate heat, Foley says. "Circulatory problems create changes in the skin as well as inefficiencies in the sweat glands, so there is less capability of dealing with extremes in temperature."

Those taking diuretics, sedatives, tranquilizers and some heart and blood pressure medicines also should be alert to hot weather problems, he says.

He advises seniors to stay out of the sun; drink larger amounts of liquids, bathe or shower frequently in cool water; wear lightweight, loose-fitting clothes in light colors; use a hat or umbrella on sunny days; avoid heavy meals, stay in air-conditioned areas, especially on humid days when an air pollution alert has been declared; and use a fan if air conditioning is not available to help evaporate sweat on the skin.

Mom's new marriage is split by spite

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Abby is on a two-week vacation. Following is a selection of some of her favorite past letters.)

DEAR ABBY: Judy and I have been married for one month, and I have already filed for divorce. This is the second marriage for both of us.

The problem is Judy's 16-year-old daughter, Lynne. Lynne told her mother that if she stayed married to me, she'd go live with her father. Judy doesn't want Lynne to live with her father because he drinks. Also, Lynne threatened to get pregnant just for spite.

Judy insists that she loves me. She says she doesn't want a divorce and the solution would be for me to move out and get a separate apartment near here for two years until Lynne is 18.

Abby, I love Judy more than any woman I've ever known, but what kind of marriage would we have living in separate apartments?

Please tell me what to do.

UNHAPPY IN VIRGINIA

DEAR UNHAPPY: Move out. But as long as you love Judy, don't push for a divorce until you are positive that you really want one. Lynne is blackmailing her mother, who can't be blamed for doing what she thinks is best for her daughter. Both the daughter and mother need counseling, I recommend it.

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been invited to a wedding. My husband is unable to attend, so I am taking my 16-year-old cousin. She does not know the bride.

At the last four weddings this cousin attended, she caught the bride's bouquet. Maybe I should tell you that she is a very large and athletic girl who is fast on her feet.

I feel that because she is only 16 and has already caught four bouquets, she should not make an all-out effort to catch this one.

Don't you think she should give the bride's friends and relatives a chance to catch the bouquet?

NO BOUQUETS FOR NORA

DEAR NO BOUQUETS: If you want to risk telling a "large, athletic girl who's fast on her feet" what to do, go ahead.

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend who insists he is not addicted to tobacco because he doesn't smoke cigarettes — he smokes a pipe! He says, "I don't inhale, so a pipe can't hurt me."

Meanwhile, his wife inhales his secondhand smoke all day, and it must hurt because she has a respiratory problem and a chronic cough. This man claims he doesn't have a habit, yet he is never seen without some kind of pipe — which he constantly is lighting, packing with tobacco, tapping into an ashtray or fiddling with in some manner.

He has a very impressive collection of pipes as well as a variety of fancy blends of tobacco, so it's apparent that he is not just a casual smoker. He brags that he could quit his pipe tomorrow and never miss it because he really doesn't have a habit.

Abby, I wonder whom he is kidding?

AN OBSERVER

DEAR OBSERVER: Himself.

In the home use classics for lasting value

By BARBARA MAYER
For AP Newsfeatures—

Buy classics for long-lasting value, say top decorators. After all, that's why they're classic.

Familiar favorites such as Queen Anne chairs, Oriental rugs and Regency secretaries never go out of style. Other classic styles may fall out of favor, but will return as fashion's darlings sooner or later.

Because of their grace, visual appeal and functional utility, classics blend well with pieces from many periods and usually can be used in different types of room.

"We designers sometimes think we have to create the next light bulb, but most people want to know that what they buy this year won't go out of style next year," says Charlotte Moss, the decorator and author of A Passion for Detail.

"It's not age that makes classics, but timeless design, usually related to the simplest geometric shapes — the circle, square or cube," says John Saladino, a designer whose furniture and rooms rely on classical detailing.

Classics carry assurance, says Mark Hampton, whose furniture designs draw from American and English 19th century classics.

"To a modernist, the famous 20th century Bauhaus pieces are classics," says Hampton. You don't tire of them. If you like American furniture, there are Windsor chairs, Connecticut Valley tables and chests which are beautiful in city apartments and in country places.

Hampton's top picks for pieces that won't let you down over the long haul are these:

— "A great mirror of some sort — English or French. It makes a huge decorative impact in a room and is a lot cheaper than a painting of the same size."

— "I would buy a pair of good period chairs. You can choose any period you happen to like. I love English Regency easy chairs — they date from 1800 to 1820 — in vivid, exaggerated shapes. Louis XV, Chippendale, Bauhaus classics are also fine. But buy a pair."

— "My third choice is a console table, 52 or 60 inches long, that can occupy a central position on a wall. Size is not so important as style and a piece that has character so it can lift the decorative character of any room in which it's placed."

Saladino places Tuxedo sofas, Thonet bentwood chairs, Oriental rugs, glass coffee tables with crisscrossed steel legs, clear glass cylinder lamps and Queen Anne chairs on his list of classics.

"I can't imagine a world without Queen Anne chairs. They are wonderful in a glass house and in an 18th century house."

The classics in fabric include naturally colored linen — "used by the Egyptians, in the Renaissance, by the Bauhaus and today" — and Oriental rugs.

"A Sarouk, Sultanabad and Tabriz can be used on the floor of a tent and a palace. And we see them in Williamsburg, Virginia, and in modern executive offices," says Saladino. White and Wedgwood blue are classic colors: "They never date themselves, won't ever become victims of fashion."

Moss's top three picks for someone who is furnishing for the first time are all living room pieces flexible enough to work in other rooms: "A well-made sofa, a console table or chest, and a mirror that you can look at and into."

One advantage in selecting classics, she says, is that they don't dictate a specific style. You can use them easily with contemporary pieces.

When shopping for clients and for herself, she looks for pieces that serve more than one purpose — like a secretary that's a desk, storage piece and bookcase all in one. She characterizes early 19th century Regency styles in mahogany or black lacquer as most adaptable for fitting into traditional and modern schemes.

"You could use a secretary every day and have it for life and it is one of those pieces that provide height in a room when everything else is low," Moss says.

Every room needs pieces with height, she says. Wing chairs, which have high backs, also add height.

For visual variety she usually includes at least one piece — either furniture or an accessory — that is black.

"I love black lacquer with gold chinoiserie, and every client of mine seems to end up with a piece."

Don't forget about accessories when buying classics, says Moss. Something with the patina of age can add vitality to a modern room.

Food choices influenced by health concerns

By DIANE DUSTON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Households with children spend more money on milk and sweets than any other else.

The elderly buy more fruits and vegetables. And higher income families spend more on fish, cheese and butter.

But it's health concerns and convenience that have the most influence over what the modern American eats, says an Agriculture Department economist.

The dominance of health awareness on food choices reached a high level in the 1980s and is still rising, says Alden Manchester in a report based on a forthcoming study called "Rearranging the Economic Landscape: The Food Marketing Revolution, 1950-90."

More than ever, foods are being viewed as good and bad, depending on popular perceptions of health consequences, he said.

Concern about the ill effects of cholesterol, fat and caffeine, and knowledge about the need for fiber are major considerations when people plan their meals nowadays.

As a result, the collective American thumb has turned up for poultry, cheese, fresh fruits and vegetables, fruit juices and cereal products. It has turned down on beef and pork, bakery products, sugar and sweets and coffee and tea, according to Manchester's research.

Convenience starts to become more significant, Manchester says, when the adults in the family work outside the home.

He says the proportion of families with more than one wage earner began to increase sharply after World War II from 39 percent in 1950 to 59 percent in 1988. Average household income also increased, jumping 126 percent in those 38 years because of rising real income per wage earner and declining family and household size.

These factors have led to more money and less time spent on food. Microwave ovens are in 90 percent of American homes, undoubtedly contributing to the finding that in families with adults who work outside the home, meals are fixed in 20 minutes today instead of the average 30 minutes of a few years ago.

People also are eating out more, spending 46 percent of their food dollars on restaurant food in 1990 compared to 25 percent in 1954. Fast food places saw the most growth, Manchester says.

He says the kinds of food people buy in the grocery store differs somewhat among races and geographic regions, but confirmed that kids lead to higher milk and sweets consumption; old-age to fruits and vegetables and increased income to more fish, cheese and eggs.

Keeping up with what consumers want to eat and how they want to buy it has led to major changes in the food industry over the last 40 years, Manchester says.

In 1950, people were shopping mostly at small- to medium-sized grocery stores. But the push toward diversity and convenience led to dominance in the 1970s by the larger supermarkets with their wider range of items.

Food processing also became bigger business, with larger firms making the largest share of the food we eat.

Mergers, acquisitions, leveraged buyouts and divestitures have led to internationalization of the business.

"Many large U.S. food companies are manufacturing and selling abroad, several sell more in foreign countries than in the United States," said Manchester. "Similarly, European, Canadian and most recently Australian companies have acquired U.S. food firms."

Changing demands also has led to changes in the way certain products are packaged.

For example, the popularity of hamburger restaurants and demand for convenience means that parts of the cow that used to be cut into roasts, too time consuming to cook on workdays, are being ground into hamburger meat.

Chickens and turkeys were sold as whole birds for many years, but since the early 1960s more and more were cut up before sale. More than half of all poultry is now sold in pieces.

Processed products that barely existed before World War II are now taken for granted as standard fare, like frozen concentrated fruit juice, fresh juices, frozen prepared foods, frozen baked goods, frozen fruits and vegetables, dehydrated vegetables and soups, refrigerated doughs, corn sweeteners, processed egg products, foods in vacuum packaging that keeps it stable when stored unrefrigerated.

As for the future, Manchester says the population will continue to age, incomes will probably continue to rise and restaurant eating will likely become even more important.

If the food choices of the population groups remain unchanged, fish, cheese, fresh fruit and vegetables will likely rise in demand and eggs and milk will continue to decline, he says.

All is go for Bo to show he knows

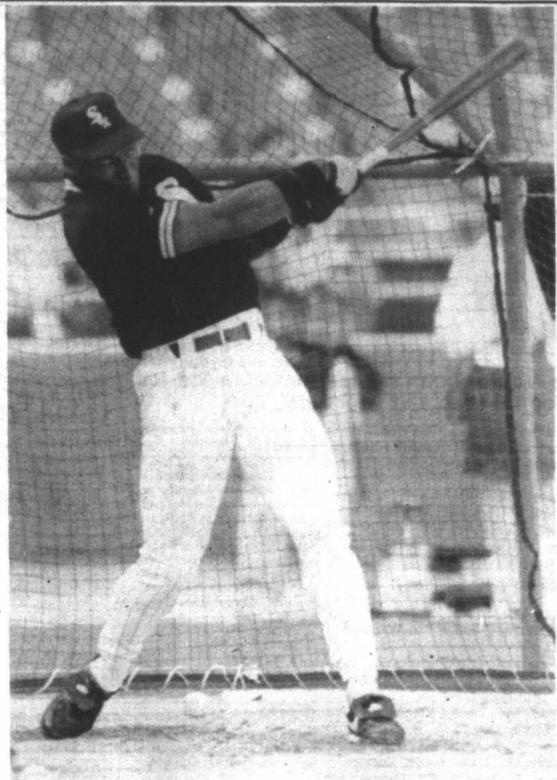

CHICAGO (AP) — Bo Jackson was assigned to the Chicago White Sox' Class A farm team in Sarasota, Fla., Wednesday to continue his rehabilitation from a hip injury and should play there this weekend.

Jackson will be the designated hitter for the Sarasota White Sox in games on Saturday and Sunday against Charlotte, N.C., the White Sox said.

The White Sox said that if Jackson's rehabilitation continues to improve, he will play Monday for the Class AA Barons in Birmingham, Ala.

Jackson, 28, injured his hip Jan. 13 playing running back in the NFL playoffs for the Los Angeles Raiders. The Kansas City Royals released him this spring after deciding the injury threatened Jackson's career.

The Chicago White Sox picked him up, and Jackson has since undergone daily treatment and spent several months on crutches.

Solomon storms out of camp

Cowboy coach says linebacker won't be back

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Dallas Cowboys Linebacker Jesse Solomon stormed out of training camp after learning he had been demoted to second-team strong-side linebacker.

Solomon learned of the demotion Wednesday.

Coach Jimmy Johnson had earlier announced that the linebacking situation had been resolved with Ken Norton Jr. in the middle, Vinson Smith at weak side and Solomon at strong side.

On Wednesday, he rearranged the lineup by inserting Jack Del Rio into the starting middle linebacker spot and moving Norton to the strong side in place of Solomon.

Solomon, who held out nearly half of last season because of a contract dispute, placed his belongings in a plastic trash bag, saying only, "I'm leaving."

"God love ya' all," he shouted as he roared out of a parking lot at the team's Valley Ranch headquarters.

Sources said the coaching staff became convinced that Solomon was preoccupied with his contract problems because the Cowboys had refused to renegotiate the contract and that brought about the demotion.

Pressed to explain the demotion, Johnson said, "This is our best lineup."

Johnson said later he was "a little surprised" that Solomon had left camp.

"He will not be back," Johnson said, implying that he will not tolerate a player walking out on him.

Sources said the Cowboys will apparently attempt to trade Solomon to another team before teams must get down to a 47-man roster by Monday.

Solomon signed a contract for $375,000 for this season after his seven-game holdout last season. Director of Player Personnel Bob Ackles said Solomon was offered a three-year package after the Cowboys returned to Valley Ranch.

Sources say the first year of the package was worth $400,000 and said Solomon was seeking a $600,000 base salary.

Bird may join flock on Olympic team

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Celtics star Larry Bird is leaning toward agreeing to join the U.S. Olympic basketball team, his attorney Bob Woolf said.

Back in September 1989, when officials first said pros would be eligible for Olympic play, the veteran forward said he was too old. He may have changed his mind now.

"The league sent him an invitation to see if he would be interested in playing," Woolf said. "He hasn't made a definite commitment."

Woolf said Bird called to say he had agreed to consider the offer. Bird has until Sept. 21 to make up his mind.

"I would have to say he was leaning toward it," Woolf said.

Patrick Ewing and Magic Johnson agreed earlier to join the team.

Karl Malone and John Stockton of Utah, David Robinson of San Antonio, Charles Barkley of Philadelphia, Chris Mullin of Golden State and Scottie Pippen of Chicago were identified by The Atlanta Journal-Constitution as others who accepted an invitation.

The newspaper said it learned the names from high-ranking members of the USA Basketball selection committee, who were not identified.

Craig Miller, a media spokesman for USA Basketball, said a list of those who will play will not be released until Sept. 21.

Toronto loses; Detroit, Boston win, gain ground

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

The Chicago White Sox won the home run derby. The Detroit Tigers won the game.

"Some days a pitcher can stop us. We're going to swing and miss a lot. But we're going to make some hard contact, too," Cecil Fielder said after he and Rob Deer hit three-run homers that led Detroit over Chicago 12-9 Wednesday night.

Mickey Tettleton and Skeeter Barnes also connected for the Tigers. The White Sox hit five home runs — Frank Thomas and Robin Ventura each hit two and Warren Newson added a solo shot.

The nine home runs were the most hit in a game at the new Comiskey Park. The total also tied the most ever hit in a game involving the White Sox, matching the mark set in 1949.

Detroit swept the three-game series and moved to within 1 1/2 games of Toronto in the AL East. Chicago has fallen 5 1/2 games behind Minnesota in the AL West.

In other games, Boston swept a doubleheader from Cleveland 13-5 and 5-4, Oakland beat California 2-0, Minnesota routed Seattle 9-1, Milwaukee topped Toronto 3-0, Baltimore beat Texas 4-3, and Kansas City defeated New York 7-4.

The Tigers lead the majors with 169 home runs, far ahead of Texas' runner-up total of 130. The White Sox, showing a surprising power surge, have hit 108.

Ventura, with 20 homers, drove in four runs. Thomas, with 26 homers, also tripled and drove in three runs.

"It's fun to watch those two guys," Tigers manager Sparky Anderson said. "But it's more fun when you've got 11 or 12 runs on your side, no doubt about it."

Fielder hit an RBI single and Deer followed with his 23rd home run, making it 8-2 in the fifth inning. Fielder hit his 35th homer, tying Jose Canseco for the major league lead, in the sixth. Fielder's 106 RBIs are the most in the majors.

American League

"It seems like one way or another we're going to beat you," Deer said. "It seems like our offense always has just enough to win."

Mark Leiter (6-2) pitched five innings for the victory. Wilson Alvarez (1-1) was the loser; in two starts since pitching a no-hitter, the rookie has allowed nine runs on 13 hits in 8 1-3 innings.

Red Sox 13, Indians 5
Red Sox 5, Indians 4

Wade Boggs hit a two-run homer in the bottom of the ninth inning as Boston bounced back to sweep a doubleheader from Cleveland.

Mike Brumley began the ninth with an infield hit and Boggs lined an 0-2 pitch from Steve Olin (2-5) into the Boston bullpen in right-center for his seventh home run of the season.

Greg Harris (9-11) won in relief after Roger Clemens again struggled. He is 1-3 with five no-decisions since the All-Star break.

In the opener, Phil Plantier hit a three-run homer and Jack Clark had three hits, including a pair of doubles.

Joe Hesketh (8-2) won his fourth consecutive decisions. The Red Sox ripped Greg Swindell (7-12) and two relievers for 15 hits. Albert Belle hit his 23rd home run and Glenallen Hill also homered for the Indians.

Brewers 3, Blue Jays 0

Julio Machado got his first AL victory, pitching four innings of hitless relief as Milwaukee won at the SkyDome.

Rick Dempsey went 3-for-4, including a two-run homer, as the Brewers won for the 13th time in 17 games.

Toronto had won three in a row.

Dan Plesac, making his third career start, held the Blue Jays to two hits for four innings before leaving with lower back pain. Machado (1-3) shut down the Blue Jays and Edwin Nunez pitched the ninth for his eighth save.

Jimmy Key (12-9) failed in his third try at his 100th career victory.

Twins 9, Mariners 1

Shane Mack's line drive was misplayed by center fielder Ken Griffey Jr. into a bases-loaded triple, keying a six-run first inning that led Minnesota over Seattle at the Metrodome.

Mack added a two-run double in the second inning, making it 8-1. His five RBIs tied a career high.

Kevin Tapani (11-7) won his sixth straight decision. He gave up four hits in eight innings.

Bill Krueger (10-6) retired the first two batters, but the Twins then loaded the bases for Mack, who hit a drive that sailed over Griffey's head.

Athletics 2, Angels 0

Mike Moore pitched three-hit ball for 7 2-3 innings as Oakland beat the Angels for the eighth straight time.

The Athletics completed a three-game sweep at home and improved to 11-1 against California this season.

Moore (12-7) is 4-0 against the Angels. He struck out six and walked two, and has not allowed more than two earned runs in any of his last nine starts.

Dennis Eckersley got two outs for his 36th save. Joe Grahe (1-5) has lost all five starts he's made this season.

Harold Baines drove in the first run with a grounder in the first inning and Mike Bordick hit an RBI triple in the sixth.

Royals 7, Yankees 4

Kirk Gibson hit his sixth home run against the Yankees this season, and Bret Saberhagen pitched the Royals to victory at home.

Gibson hit his 15th homer of the season, a two-run shot in the first inning. He is 12-for-38 with 11 RBIs against New York this year.

Saberhagen (9-6) gave up seven hits and struck out eight in seven innings. He has allowed just four earned runs in his last four starts.

Pascual Perez (1-1) lost in his second start since coming off the disabled list. Kansas City had three runners thrown out trying to stretch hits, while Yankees rookie Bernie Williams tied a major league record by striking out five times.

Orioles 4, Rangers 3

Joe Orsulak extended his hitting streak to 19 games with a two-run double in the sixth inning that won for the Orioles in Texas.

The longest hitting streak in Baltimore history is 22 games, shared by Eddie Murray and Doug DeCinces.

Reliever Todd Frohwirth (5-2) pitched four shutout innings and Gregg Olson got his 26th save. Kevin Brown (8-10) took the loss.

Costner's co-star in 'Dances with Wolves' hoofs it at museum

PLAIN JUSTIN BAR ain't so plain after all. As a matter of fact, he's a pretty darn good-looking horse.

The 8-year-old buckskin quarter horse gelding starred with actor-director Kevin Costner in the blockbuster Academy Award-winning movie "Dances with Wolves," and currently is appearing at the brand-spanking-new American Quarter Horse Heritage Center and Museum in Amarillo.

The beautiful animal may be just the added incentive you need to pack up the kids and visit the impressive new home of "America's horse" — the American Quarter Horse.

Plain Justin Bar will be on display through Sunday, weather and arena conditions permitting, at the Heritage Center's outdoor demonstration arena during Amarillo's Old West Days celebration.

According to American Quarter Horse Association (AQHA) officials, Justin — that's what they call the gelding for short — is owned by Debra and Rusty Hendrickson of Kalispell, Mont.

Justin was honored in March with the first AQHA Silver Spur Award. The award is given to either American quarter horses or individuals who have proven themselves to be exemplary representatives of the American quarter horse industry.

The equine star already has appeared at the 1991 International Special Olympics Games in Minneapolis and will be a special guest at the Friday night performance of the Panhandle Stampede Rodeo.

Justin is scheduled to attend the festivities at the All-American Futurity at Ruidoso Downs at Ruidoso, N.M.

The All-American Futurity, quarter horse racing's richest race, is set to run Labor Day, Sept. 2.

Also appearing Friday at the Heritage Center is professional rodeo saddle bronc rider Monty "Hawkeye" Henson of Mesquite, and singer Ed Montana.

Henson was PRCA World Champion Saddle Bronc Rider in 1975, 1976 and 1982.

The National Cowgirl Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center of Hereford is seeking names of women to be considered as candidates to the Hall of Fame.

According to Cowgirl Hall of Fame officials, candidates must either have a background as a cowgirl, or have made a significant contribution to western heritage through her life as a pioneer, educator, historian, missionary, doctor, artist, pacesetter, author, etc.

All nominations for possible induction are reviewed by a specialized committee. The review process usually requires two years of detailed research work on each nominee submitted.

Officials ask that names, and biographies if available, be sent to the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center, Box 1742, Hereford, Texas 79045.

The Texas Cowboys Rodeo Association Finals are being held this weekend in Abilene.

Area rodeo contestants participating include Justin Swires, of Boys Ranch and formerly of Lefors; Shawn Thompson of Pampa; and Cole Tindol of Allison.

The Panhandle Stampede Rodeo gets under way with performances of the PRCA-approved event beginning at 8 p.m. today, Friday and Saturday.

The rodeo is part of Amarillo's Old West Days.

Mets snap out of losing streak; Braves clip Reds

By The Associated Press

The New York Mets finally won a game. All they needed were two chances.

The Mets, returning home after an 0-10 road trip that dropped them out of the NL East race, snapped their worst losing streak since 1982 at 11 games by beating St. Louis 8-0 in the brawl-marred second game of a doubleheader Wednesday night.

For the first time in nearly two weeks, the pitchers pitched and the hitters hit in the same game — the Mets used three homers to back the combined five-hitter by Sid Fernandez (1-3) and Alejandro Pena after a 7-3 loss in the opening game of their first doubleheader of the season.

"Sid was the man of the hour," Mets manager Bud Harrelson said of the left-hander, who allowed four hits in seven innings. "He gave his life when we most needed it. He needed it, too, after losing all of his starts, but we needed it more. Our offense came to life."

"What does it mean? We'll find out tomorrow. Doc (Gooden) is going for us, so we have to be in a better frame of mind."

The Mets broke open the second game with six runs in the seventh, keyed by Kevin Elster's three-run homer and Kevin McReynolds' solo shot two pitches later off Willie Fraser, who had relieved rookie Rheel Cormier (1-1).

Fraser then threw the next pitch behind Howard Johnson, triggering the bench-clearing brawl that resulted in two ejections.

"I didn't expect it to happen," Johnson said of the brawl, which saw Fraser and Mets catcher Rick Cerone ejected. "We got our butts whipped, and none of our guys did anything like that. It was Fraser's problem for putting the ball where our guys could drill it."

National League

In other NL action, it was Atlanta 10, Cincinnati 9 in 13 innings; Los Angeles 9, San Diego 5; Houston 13, San Francisco 4; Philadelphia 6, Pittsburgh 5, and Chicago 3, Montreal 1.

Harrelson wasn't too happy after the first game, in which his team committed three errors and managed only six hits.

"We didn't hit it and we didn't catch it. It's sickening to watch us play," he said after Bryn Smith (11-7) beat the Mets for the first time in 13 starts over more than four years.

Smith allowed one run and three hits in seven innings. Ray Lankford's two-run triple off David Cone (10-10) in the seventh broke a 1-1 tie.

Braves 10, Reds 9

If the Braves win the NL West, they'll point to this game as a key after Francisco Cabrera's three-run homer in the ninth off Rob Dibble tied the game and David Justice's RBI double in the 13th won it.

Dibble was one out away from his 25th save in 26 chances when Justice doubled, Brian Hunter walked and Cabrera hit a slider into the second deck in left field at Riverfront Stadium. It was his second homer of the game, matching his season total, and tied the game at 9. Cabrera also hit a solo shot in the seventh off Ted Power.

"That's about as big a comeback as you can get against the league's best relief pitcher," Atlanta manager Bobby Cox said. "It's almost an impossibility, but we did it."

Justice's double off Randy Myers (5-10), his fourth hit of the game, gave Tony Castillo (1-0) the victory and kept the Braves 2 1/2 games behind the Dodgers in the West. The Reds trail by 9 1/2, their biggest deficit in two years.

Dodgers 9, Padres 5

Darryl Strawberry showed the Dodger Stadium faithful why LA paid more than $20 million to sign him. Strawberry hit a grand slam and a three-run homer for seven RBIs, matching his career best, as Los Angeles completed a three-game sweep.

Strawberry hit his fifth career grand slam in the fifth inning off rookie Ricky Bones (1-2), breaking a 2-2 tie. He added a three-run homer in the seventh off Rich Rodriguez. Strawberry has 21 home runs this season, including five in his last six games and 13 since the All-Star break.

"He's hitting now like we all knew he could hit," Dodgers manager Tom Lasorda said. "He's the kind of guy that when he gets hot, he can carry a ball club. Very few guys can do that."

Orel Hershiser, who pitched just one inning Friday night before leaving with the flu and a stiff shoulder, pitched 5 2-3 innings. Hershiser (5-2) allowed four runs and nine hits.

Astros 13, Giants 4
Pitcher Pete Harnisch capped Houston's biggest inning of the season with a two-run single as the Astros routed the Giants at the Astrodome.

Harnisch (8-8) drew a walk from Bud Black (9-12) to start the six-run inning and finished it with his single as the Astros overcame an early 4-1 deficit. The right-hander settled down after a shaky start to retire the last 15 batters he faced before leaving after seven innings.

Rookie Andujar Cedeno had two singles and a solo homer for the Astros.

Phillies 6, Pirates 5

Philadelphia blew a 5-0 lead before winning its 14th straight home game on pinch-hitter Wally Backman's bases-loaded, two-out single in the ninth.

Pittsburgh scored twice in the sixth and tied it in the eighth on Gary Varsho's two-run double and Gary Redus' RBI single off reliever Mitch Williams (7-4). But Ricky Jordan led off the ninth with a double off Bob Kipper (2-2) and Backman won it with a single to center off Bill Landrum.

The home winning streak is 1977 of the Phillies' team record, set in 1977.

Cubs 3, Expos 1

Rick Sutcliffe's comeback from shoulder problems took another step forward. The 35-year-old right-hander allowed just three hits in six innings as the Cubs won at Olympic Stadium.

Sutcliffe allowed only a first-inning run on Ivan Calderon's sacrifice fly. Les Lancaster gave up two hits over the last three innings for his third save.

Shawon Dunston doubled in a run in the second off Chris Nabholz (2-6) and later scored on Jerome Walton's RBI grounder. Ryne Sandberg singled in another run in the eighth.

Soviet coup attempt may cause administration to change policy

By RUTH SINAI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The aborted coup in the Soviet Union is likely to spur the Bush administration to realign its policies toward the Soviet Union, current and former officials say.

The main thrust of the change is expected to mirror the altered balance of power in the Soviet Union — shifting U.S. support from its almost exclusive focus on President Mikhail Gorbachev to take into account the growing power of the country's constituent republics.

This is a course the administration shunned until very recently, despite clear signs and intelligence reports that the center of power was moving away from Gorbachev to independence-minded republic leaders like Russian President Boris Yeltsin.

Now, the administration will have little choice.

"What has happened is it's a clear indication that the center has lost control," said Rep. Dave McCurdy, D-Okla., chairman of the House Intelligence Committee.

But the administration doesn't entirely agree. "I think there's no question ... that Yeltsin has come out of this a hero, strengthened, but again, please, we need to remember that Mr. Gorbachev is president of the entire Soviet Union and Mr. Yeltsin is president of the major republic, but there is a difference," said Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger.

The coup also might loosen purse strings in Washington. Since last winter, the administration has approved $2.5 billion in guarantees for Soviet purchases of U.S. farm goods but only small amounts of direct aid.

President Bush said Wednesday in Kennebunkport, Maine, that he would "look at" the possibility of direct economic aid to the Soviet Union in the coup's aftermath. "We will certainly, if things work out in a satisfactory fashion, get back into the business of furthering the economic recovery" in the Soviet Union, he said.

"I think if the reform measures come — and I think they will come now — that both technical assistance and financial assistance will be forthcoming because it will be in the long-term interest of our government to do so," McCurdy said.

But Jack Matlock, who last weekend returned from a five-year stint as U.S. ambassador in Moscow, cautioned that "money isn't going to help them until they reform their economic system."

Bush might face a tussle with Congress over just how much support to give the republics. "It's clear today that the Gorbachev era is over and we usher in now the Yeltsin era and the era of the Soviet people," McCurdy said.

But Eagleburger disagreed. "... the right-wing albatross that he's (Gorbachev) had around his neck for some time ... is, at least to some degree, disappeared now," he said. "So I think we need to be careful in our assumptions that Mr. Gorbachev is going to be substantially weaker," he added.

The president is unlikely to abandon Gorbachev, a man for whom he feels personal admiration and warmth.

In fact, Eagleburger said, the coup had shocked the world into a realization of what a post-Gorbachev Soviet Union might look like, run by hardliners.

"The Middle East process, arms control, a whole host of things were brought into question," he said in ABC TV. "With the return of Mr. Gorbachev, we are back on track again."

A clear sign of a more evenhanded U.S. policy came during the two-day coup, when Bush spoke twice by telephone with Yeltsin. Shortly after the coup ended, he spoke for the first time with Gorbachev. He said afterward that Gorbachev would return to Moscow and work with the presidents of the republics, including Yeltsin.

With his return to the Kremlin, Gorbachev is expected to sign the Union Treaty that the coup plotters sought to derail, giving the republics a measure of autonomy from Moscow.

Yeltsin, emerging from the coup a hero who led the challenge to the hard-liners until they backed down, will be in a strong position to dictate terms favorable to the republics, said Jeremy Azreal, an adviser to former Secretary of State George Shultz and now an analyst at the Rand Corp. in Santa Monica, Calif.

"Clearly, Yeltsin is now top dog, and we'll have to bite the bullet and deal with him whether we like it or not," a senior administration official said.

As a result, the administration likely will worry less than it has until now about insulting Gorbachev by openly supporting Yeltsin or other republic leaders, officials said.

But Yeltsin's focus will be on domestic politics and economic reform, the things that really interest him, specialists said.

Bush and Congress are likely to cooperate with him, as well as with other republic leaders, to encourage their efforts at transforming their stagnant, centralized economies into thriving, market-oriented ones.

At the same time, the administration is likely to press Gorbachev to undertake the drastic economic reforms he had been reluctant to espouse until now. Until the coup, the administration was careful not to push Gorbachev so as not to undermine what it regarded as his precarious position between the hard-liners and reformers.

"Gorbachev will now have a freer hand" without the hard-liners in his cabinet who blocked his reforms, Matlock said.

The republics' ascendancy is likely to result in another change for U.S. policy — in the Baltics.

The coup and the Union Treaty are expected to energize the three Baltic states' bid for independence and to result in their eventual secession. Bush has more or less promised that if the three peacefully negotiate their departure from the union, the United States would recognize their independence.

African nation seeks to restore diplomatic ties with Israel

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Congo has joined other African countries in seeking to renew diplomatic relations with Israel.

The foreign minister of the Congo, Jean Blaise Kololo, arrived Wednesday to discuss resuming the ties.

Along with many other African nations allied with the Arab world, the Congo cut ties with Israel after the 1973 Middle East war.

During his three-day stay Kololo was scheduled to meet with Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and Foreign Minister David Levy.

Nigeria, black Africa's most populous nation, announced earlier this month it would resume ties, following the lead of Liberia, Zaire, Togo, Cameroon, Ivory Coast, Ghana, Kenya and the Central African Republic.
