Moldavia latest republic to declare independence

KISHINEV, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Moldova proclaimed its independence from Moscow today, becoming the seventh republic to join the rush to leave a rapidly splintering Soviet Union.

"It's a happy day," said President Mircea Snegur after the Moldavian Parliament passed the declaration of independence. "The coup gave us an impulse to speed up independence for our people who have suffered such difficulty."

Five of the Soviet Union's 15 republics have now declared immediate independence since last week's coup. Two others already had done so.

About 200,000 people rallied in the heart of the capital before the Parliament session to urge independence. Red-yellow-and-blue national flags and banners fluttered over the crowd and children wore national costumes.

"For two years, we have spoken of independence," Snegur told the crowd. "But more often it seemed that this was in danger from those who have oppressed us for five decades."

"Now the time has come for independence," he said.

The vote for independence was unanimous, with 277 of Parliament's 380 members present.

Romania, which was forced by Nazi Germany and Stalin's Soviet Union to give up Moldavia in 1940, immediately recognized Moldavia as an independent state and said it was ready to establish diplomatic relations.

Snegur said in an interview that

Carson County approves reduced 1991-92 budget

PANHANDLE — Carson County Commissioners Court maintained the 1990-91 tax rate of 30 cents per $100 valuation in approving a reduced budget for the upcoming fiscal year during their meeting Monday at the courthouse.

County Judge Jay Roselius said, "Our budget was reduced some from last year. It was $2.77 million and this year it is $2.64 million, but it will be even less than that because no salary increases will be given and those that have already been figured in to the budget."

About 30 citizens approached the court, with eight voicing concern about a proposed 5 percent salary increase for county employees and a 4 percent increase for Roselius and Sheriff Terry Timmons.

Motions approving both moves died for lack of a second, with the court approving deleting the cost-of-living raises from the budget.

Roselius said federal grants totaling $108,000 for emergency communications equipment helped fight off a tax increase, while providing much needed equipment for law enforcement and emergency management.

"We have got a tax rate that we like to stay with in order to run the type of operation that will give service to all our residents," Roselius said after the meeting. "We did gain some revenue because we changed insurance carriers and our health insurance is now less."

He also credited purchases of equipment this year with helping to keep down costs for 1991-92.

"We are managing our money and keeping a fair and honest rate," the judge stated. "A lot of counties are using up their fund reserves and that means they are having to raise taxes, but that's like going out and spending from your savings when you run out of money in your checking account."

Gorbachev threatens to resign

By DEBORAH SEWARD
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, trying desperately to salvage the country's cohesion and his own power in the wake of last week's coup, threatened today to resign if some form of union is not preserved.

Addressing a stormy session of the national legislature and shouting at times to be heard, Gorbachev warned that the Soviet Union stood "on the point of collapsing," adding: "If it does, it would be a catastrophe."

But even as Gorbachev made his impassioned appeal for unity, a seventh Soviet republic was celebrating its declaration of independence today. Moldova, which borders Romania to the west, became the fifth republic since last week's coup to declare independence.

In the Moldavian capital, Kishinev, crowds waved the republic's red-yellow-and-blue flags. "It's a happy day," said President Mircea Snegur after Parliament approved the declaration.

With one republic after another moving to break away, Gorbachev sought to preserve at least the economic ties of union. Before his speech to lawmakers, he agreed to begin immediate negotiations on an economic cooperation agreement acceptable to all of the republics, even those intent on independence.

All 15 republics have said they want to continue economic ties, since their industries are tightly linked and would suffer from a break in trade.

Gorbachev, who had sometimes appeared weary and shaken in the days immediately after the coup, seemed rejuvenated today as he spoke to lawmakers, forceful in his speaking style and his gestures.

He appeared increasingly testy about suggestions of some complicity on his part in the coup. "I won't submit to any blackmail and I'm tired of being insulted," he said at one point.

Gorbachev, who quit Saturday as party chief and nationalized the party's assets, also made it clear he had not completely abandoned allegiance to the party, which was the target of popular anger once the coup was over.

He defended ordinary Communists, saying they did not deserve to be blamed for the hard-line coup. "I am against anti-Communist hysteria in the country against the rank and file," he said sharply. And he continued to address the parliamentarians as "comrades."

The Soviet president also said the fact that the army had failed to back the coup plotters showed the impact of his six years of reforms.

"Perestroika has given birth to a different army, and if not for this different army, they (the coup leaders) would have been able to carry out their plans," he said.

Gorbachev assured lawmakers some steps were already being taken to address conditions that had helped make the coup possible. KGB troops, estimated at 230,000, were being brought under the Ministry of Defense, he said, and "other practical issues have been dealt with."

Gorbachev said Boris Yeltsin, the president of the Russian Federation, and agreed with him on the need for maintaining some form of unity in the republics that comprise the Soviet Union.

Yeltsin's power has skyrocketed since he rallied nationwide resistance to the coup, and he has emerged as Gorbachev's partner in government — perhaps even the senior partner.

"Our common point is that the U.S.S.R. should be maintained as a union of sovereign states. Everyone is in favor of a unified defense, a unified armed forces," Gorbachev said.

If some form of union cannot be preserved, he said he would put the question to Parliament "and leave."

Participating in today's talks on economic unity were Gorbachev; Yeltsin; Kirghizia's president, Askar Akayev; and Kazakhstan President Nursultan Nazarbayev.

The presidents agreed to try to complete negotiations on the economic agreement within 10 days, and to hold separate, parallel negotiations on political unity, Akayev said.

He said an economic agreement "would be open to all republics who want to take part, regardless of whether they want to be in the future union or not."

In the forefront of the republics' independence drives have been the three Baltic states — Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia. They have been pushing for independence for three years and appear to be on the verge of winning it.

The European Community today formally recognized the independence of the Baltic states.

EC recognizes Baltic nations' independence

By ROBERT J. WIELAARD

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The European Community joined a host of other nations today by formally recognizing the independence of the Baltic states.

The unanimous decision regarding the republics of Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia was taken at a special meeting of EC foreign ministers, according to one of the officials, Mark Eyskens of Belgium.

He said the ministers also agreed to meet in Brussels next week with their colleagues from the Baltic states, which have been under Soviet control for 50 years. The Baltics' independence drives were given a tremendous boost by the failed coup in the Soviet Union last week and the turmoil that followed.

The EC leaders will meet in The Hague next month to discuss the disintegration of the Soviet Union, where Moldavia today became the seventh republic to declare independence from Moscow.

Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher of Germany said his nation had a "historical responsibility to the Baltic states." The Soviet Union forcibly annexed the Baltics under a 1939 pact with Nazi leader Adolf Hitler.

Denmark sent Otto Borch to Latvia on Monday as the first ambassador to the Baltic states in 50 years.

"It's not important to be the first, but it is important to come as quickly as possible." Borch said before arriving in Latvia, where he was mobbed by residents who gathered up the few Danish flags they could find.

The EC members are Belgium, Denmark, France, Germany, Greece, Ireland, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Britain, Spain and Portugal.

Iceland on Monday was the first nation to sign diplomatic agreements with the Baltics, whose independence drives surged forward following last week's failed coup and the purge of hard-liners opposed to secession.

PISD may raise taxes over loss of bank franchise funds

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Dr. Dawson Orr, superintendent of Pampa public schools, confirmed today that local property taxes may go up another penny over the proposed 11 cent figure because of news the state has commandeered the bank franchise tax.

Orr said the Pampa Independent School District will lose $76,000 to the state because of legislation allowing the state to keep the monies instead of turning them back to local governments.

"That's about a penny on the tax rate," he said. "I think the tax rate will still be within the $1.18 range we have talked about."

Wheeler commissioners uphold firings in sheriff's office

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

WHEELER — County commissioners here voted unanimously during a meeting Monday to uphold the firings of two deputies and two dispatchers by Sheriff Jimmy Adams.

Deputies Dennis Hilburn and Robert Judd and dispatchers Penny Hilburn — Dennis' wife — and Mary Huckert will continue on suspension with pay through Saturday, according to the commissioners court action, then be terminated.

Virginia Daugherty, an attorney for Adams, said the four are being discharged because they serve only at the pleasure of the sheriff and he has chosen to dismiss them.

Mr. Hilburn said the sheriff never told him why he was fired, or even that he was fired. He also confirmed a report that promiscuity within the sheriff's department may have been a contributing factor.

"But that was four or five months ago that that went on and we thought everything was just fine now," Mr. Hilburn said. "He (Adams) just didn't have the guts to do anything about it at the time."

County Judge Wendell Morgan said, "We made no determination of what happened. Deputies serve at the sheriff's pleasure. Our only action was to add or remove an employee at his pleasure. As individuals we would like to ask questions, but as elected officials, all we can do is add or delete people from the payroll."

Mr. Hilburn said he learned he was being fired from associates' trip to a Wheeler County coffee shop.

"The boys said, 'Well, now you can go on unemployment like us,'" Mr. Hilburn related. "I told them I was only suspended and not fired. They were the ones who told me I was being fired."

He said he began looking for the sheriff to confirm the story and was eventually told by a deputy, "I was fired for harassing another deputy. I fiscal budget, which will now be cut to only $8,000 by the state move.

"That's tight," Hackler said. "This comes very late in the process of planning and preparing a budget."

Orr said when he called state education agencies to ask about the loss of funding, they still had not realized what the Legislature had done.

"The Texas Association of School Boards wasn't aware of it," Orr said. "Most school districts probably don't know about this yet, either. This has not been communicated."

Orr and Hackler, during separate interviews, both acknowledged the franchise tax was taken over by the Legislature without any attempt to communicate the impact of such a move to cities or schools.

wanted to know what I had done to harass anybody."

Mr. Hilburn said his wife was "sent home one day by the sheriff, but he didn't tell her why."

"She still doesn't know she is being fired," Mr. Hilburn said.

Adams declined to answer any questions regarding the situation and his attorney, Virginia Daugherty of Amarillo, answered "no comment" to all inquiries.

When reached by telephone, Huckert declined to answer any questions and hung up on a reporter. Judd could not be reached either in person or by telephone through press time today.

Local doctor helps stop car theft

By BEAR MILLS
 Staff Writer

A local member of the medical profession doubled as a crime fighter Monday morning in stopping a car theft in progress.

The doctor, who requested anonymity, said he saw one of his patient's cars leaving the parking lot of his practice while the patient was still sitting in the waiting room.

"I asked her if her husband might have taken the car and she said, 'No,'" the man explained. "I really wasn't thinking; I just jumped in my car and followed him."

When they asked him for identification, saw a radar detector in his bag that matched the description of one missing from the patient's back. The suspect agreed to turn them over and then fled the scene.

"I didn't get that good a look at him," the doctor said. "I was more concerned with if he had a gun."

The doctor then locked up his own car and drove the patient's car back to his office.

"By that time the police were there and I told them (the suspect) was a black man in a pink T-shirt," he said.

Officers John Worthington, Ricky Hall and John Goes found a man wearing a pink T-shirt near Fairview Cemetery several minutes later.

When they asked him for identification, saw a radar detector in his bag that matched the description of one missing from the patient's 1970 Chevrolet pickup.

"We asked him a few questions, and when we asked him for some I.D., he pulled (a bag) open and had a radar detector inside that we had been told was stolen from the pickup," Worthington said. "He was arrested and brought in."

Melvin Martin Jr., 24, who listed his address as being in Amarillo, was being held in lieu of $5,000 bond through press time today on a charge of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle.

The doctor said, "I'm not a hero and I don't want to be thought of in that way. I just did what came to mind."

He added, "Now I bet I'm going to have to go to court on this thing. Great."

joining a growing list of foreign governments granting diplomatic recognition to the republics or saying they would do so soon.

Lithuania formally declared itself independent in 1990, and Latvia and Estonia declared outright independence during the coup attempt last week.

The Ukraine declared independence on Saturday, and was followed Sunday by Byelorussia, Georgia, in the Caucasus region, declared independence March 31.

Uzbekistan's president, Islam Karimov, on Monday ordered the drafting of a declaration of independence and decreed that Soviet Interior Ministry troops and the KGB in the republic be transferred to his control. Armenia is to vote on independence on Sept. 21.

Also today, Gorbachev sought to calm fears that Yeltsin's sprawling Russian republic, which already makes up two-thirds of the Soviet land mass, might try to renegotiate borders it shares with eight of the 15 Soviet republics.

Yeltsin's spokesman Pavel Voshanov had touched off alarm Monday by saying Russia reserved the right to review its borders with neighboring republics.

Redistricting plan drawing fire from West Texas Republicans

By CHIP BROWN
 Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK (AP) — No one ever seems to agree when it comes to redistricting.

But West Texas Republicans are particularly hot about a plan passed by state lawmakers in which "West Texas cities were needlessly mutilated" in order to secure Democratic votes, according to one state senator.

"There is no question that the driving force behind this redistricting plan was protecting Democratic incumbent congressmen. Everything else was secondary," said state Sen. Teel Bivins, R-Amarillo.

Under the redistricting plan approved by the Legislature on Sunday, portions of Amarillo, which straddles the Potter and Randall county lines, would be realigned from District 13 to District 19, which encompasses the western half of the Panhandle along the New Mexico border south to Odessa.

The plan takes East Lubbock, an area populated by Democratic communities of blacks and Hispanics, out of District 19 and into District 13, now represented by U.S. Rep. Bill Sarpalis, D-Amarillo.

District 19 is currently held by Republican Congressman Larry Combest of Lubbock.

"West Texas cities were needlessly mutilated," Bivins said.

"This plan totally ignores the number one concern of the public, which is keeping the communities of interest in one piece."

But Sarpalis, whose 13th District was extended eastward to pick up the eastern half of the Panhandle over to portions of Wise and Denton counties near Dallas, has said splitting Amarillo and Lubbock will benefit the voters.

"With parts of Amarillo and Lubbock in two districts there would be some real opportunity for congressmen to work as a team to help constituencies," Sarpalis said.

The Senate voted 18-13 Sunday to redraw lines for a House plan calling for 30 congressional districts, each with a population of 566,217, and the House agreed with those changes on a 73-58 vote.

The plan cuts up Midland County three ways, with part of the county in Combest's district and the rest divided between District 17, now served by U.S. Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford, and District 23, now served by U.S. Rep. Albert Bustamante, D-San Antonio.

Combest, who will have portions of Lubbock, Amarillo and Midland in his district, says constituents in the divided cities will lose track of their representative.

"People in Midland County won't know who to call with a problem," Combest said Monday. "They might live a block away from their current congressman, but under the new plan, that same family might have to make a long distance call to their representative to get help on case work."

Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, has already filed a lawsuit in federal district court in Austin challenging the redistricting plans proposed by the Texas House and Senate.

"It's one of the worst plans ever passed in Texas history as far as redistricting goes," Craddick said Monday.

"When this plan is thrown out, the Democratic party is going to have to take all the blame for it," he said.

But Phil Duncan, spokesman for Sarpalis, said the Republicans are the ones to blame for any redistricting shortcomings.

"The Republicans are trying to cover up for the ineffectiveness of their efforts in the Legislature," Duncan said Monday. "Those are the people that should be called on for an answer. Those are the people that were allowed to vote on the redistricting plan, not the Democrats in Congress."

Each 10 years, after the census count, legislators are charged with redrawing district lines for the state House and Senate, the U.S. House and the State Board of Education.

Any redistricting plan also must be approved by the U.S. Justice Department under the Voting Rights Act, and when it is all over, the plan can still be challenged in court,

Former brother-in-law says woman wanted neighbor dead

By WENDY BENJAMINSON
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — A Channelview woman angered that her daughter had twice missed out on being a cheerleader was willing to kill to get the girl on the high school squad, the woman's former brother-in-law said.

Terry Lynn Harper, who continues testifying today in the prosecution's case against Wanda Webb Holloway, says his former sister-in-law initially wanted both Verna Heath and her daughter, Amber Heath, killed. But Harper, who has been convicted of at least seven offenses, said he was unsure he could find anyone to kill the girl.

"I said I'd look into it for her, but I don't know anyone who would kill a 13-year-old girl," Harper testified Monday as the trial opened. "She said, 'There's car wrecks; houses burn down.' I said, 'Yeah, but not on purpose.'"

Mrs. Holloway, 37, is charged with trying to have Mrs. Heath, 38, kidnapped or murdered. Prosecutors say the plot was designed to make Amber Heath so distraught she would drop out of cheerleader competitions in February, giving Shanna Harper, Mrs. Holloway's daughter, a better shot at making the team.

"She kept saying, 'I hate this girl,'" Harper, 36, testified. "She said, 'I want to get rid of her. I hate her mother. I want to get rid of her, too. I want these people done away with.'"

Defense attorneys contend Harper joined Mrs. Holloway's ex-husband and his brother, Tony Harper, in a scam to gain custody of Shanna and her brother, Anthony Shane Harper.

"Why would Terry Harper do this? Because he was the black sheep in the family. His way to get back in the good graces of his brother was to call and say, 'I've got a way for you to get your children back,'" said defense attorney Troy McKinney.

The couple had been divorced in 1980. Since Mrs. Holloway's arrest on Jan. 30, Tony Harper has been awarded joint custody of the children.

Terry Lynn Harper, a key witness for the prosecution, said Mrs.

'Desert deaths' trial remains on schedule

EL PASO (AP) — Defense attorneys were unable to delay the serial murder trial of a man accused of killing six women and girls and burying their bodies in desert graves.

Jury selection is scheduled to begin Sept. 5 in the trial of David Leonard Wood and is expected to last at least six weeks.

His attorneys attempted to delay the trial in a hearing Monday by asking for time to question jurors wanting to be exempted from the jury pool, but state district Judge Peter Pecca denied their requests.

Pecca is expected to rule today on whether to allow the defense to have the body of Dawn Smith exhumed so the defense can check whether she was killed by a shotgun blast.

The bodies of the victims Wood is accused of killing were found between September 1987 and March 1988. The serial murder charge falls under the state's capital murder statutes. If convicted Wood could be sentenced to death by lethal injection. He was serving a 50-year rape sentence when he was indicted in the murders, which he denies committing.

Quijano has complained several times about the speed with which the case is going to trial and said he has been unable to give his client fair representation.

Experts: SAT scores decline may not be all bad

By LEE MITGANG
AP Education Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — SAT scores sank to new lows this year, but along with the depressing figures came a kernel of good news.

Averages on the verbal part of the Scholastic Aptitude Test slumped two points in the 1990-91 school year to an all-time low of 422, the College Board said Monday. Verbal scores have fallen steadily since 1985, when they stood at 431.

Math averages dipped for the first time in 11 years, a two-point drop to 474. The perfect score for each section is 800.

"The simple fact is that even our best students generally don't know enough and can't do enough to assure success in tomorrow's world," said U.S. Education Secretary Lamar Alexander.

But some experts say there is good news in the 60-point drop in SAT scores since records were kept in 1969: More minorities are striving for college.

Researchers inside and outside the College Board, sponsor of the test taken each year by 1 million high school juniors and seniors applying for college, question whether SAT declines mean nearly a decade of school reform has failed.

To use the SAT to judge public education, as some politicians and others do, is a dubious proposition.

For starters, the exam is taken each year by roughly one-fifty-fifth of the student population; test-takers are a self-selected, hence unrepresentative group.

Educational Testing Service research concludes that half the eight-point decline in verbal scores between 1987 and 1990 was due to the increasing proportion of minority and bilingual test-takers who a generation ago never dreamed of college, said Robert G. Cameron,

Man claiming to be 'Gentleman Bandit' plans to surrender to police

HOUSTON (AP) — A man who claims he is the dapper "Gentleman Bandit" responsible for robbing about 100 salesmen in Texas and Louisiana plans to surrender today to police, his attorney said.

Attorney Allen Isbell said Monday a guilty conscience prompted his 49-year-old client to admit to the crimes after Michael Harvey of Cibolo was arrested and held for 11 days in connection with the holdups.

"His conscience couldn't let him (Harvey) be tried for something he didn't do," Isbell said. "He said, 'I can't let somebody suffer for what I've done.'"

Texas students' scores rise in math, fall in verbal part

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas students' verbal scores on the Scholastic Aptitude Test fell a bit in the 1990-91 school year, but their math scores increased slightly, state education officials said.

The Texas Education Agency said Monday that the average SAT mathematics score in Texas was 463, up two points from 1989-90. The average verbal score was 411, down two points.

Nationally, the average mathematics score was 474, and the average verbal score was 422. Both were two points lower than in 1989-90.

Black and Hispanic students in Texas and the rest of the country continued to have lower scores than white students, the TEA said.

State Education Commissioner Lionel "Skip" Meno said officials will work to help minority students improve their performance.

An analysis showed that black students in Texas made up 11 percent of the test group and had an average mathematics score of 385, up two points from the previous year. Their average verbal score fell by three points to 344.

Mexican American students made up 15 percent of the test group and had an average mathematics score of 423, the same as the previous year. Their average verbal score dropped two points, to 371.

White students increased their average mathematics score by three points to 484. Their average verbal score dropped one point to 435.

More than 1 million students took the SAT nationwide. In Texas, 79,946 students took the examination.

Meno said he is pleased that the number of Texas students taking the SAT increased by 1,889 over the previous year. He said students who take more advanced courses get the highest scores on the exam.

Texas students with 20 or more academic or college preparatory courses had an average math score of 530 and an average verbal score of 472. Both were higher than the national average for such students, which was 526 in math and 470 on the verbal portion, TEA said.

"That should send a clear-cut message to all youngsters who plan to attend college: Take as many challenging courses as you can during your high school years," Meno said.

Seventy percent of Texas students who took the SAT in 1990-91 plan to seek financial aid to attend college.

senior research associate at the College Board.

ETS, the Princeton, N.J.-based organization that administers the SAT, is to release the research this fall.

Minority students make up 28 percent of students taking the SAT, compared with 11 percent in 1973. An additional 16 percent are from bilingual backgrounds.

In an earlier paper titled "Let's Have Another SAT Score Decline," Harvard education lecturer Harold Howe II argued that declines stretching back to the 1960s stemmed mainly from the growing presence of low-scoring minority students who for the first time joined white students in seeing selective colleges as realistic options.

Ted Wilson, a Harris County assistant district attorney, said Monday he has had discussions with the attorneys, but "nothing is in writing yet."

Victims have described the Gentleman Bandit as soft-spoken and polite as he preyed on traveling businessmen staying at plush hotels in Texas and western Louisiana.

Authorities say the bandit once called an ambulance for a victim

Thus, Howe wrote, the SAT slump is not evidence of failing schools but of the far more welcome news that minority students are striving for college.

A record 100,209 black students took the SAT in 1990-91. Blacks averaged 385 on verbal, 351 on math — 160 points below the combined national average of 896.

Mexican-Americans scored 377 on verbal, 427 math; Puerto Rican students averaged 361 verbal, 406 math.

Asian-Americans averaged better on math than any ethnic group, 530, but were 11 points below the national average in verbal skills at 411.

White students averaged 441 verbal, 489 in math for a combined 930 — 34 points above the national average.

Parents and schools could do more to improve the scores. The SAT's verbal section tests vocabulary and reading comprehension. Students who watch endless TV at home and never visit a library are at a disadvantage.

"There is firm evidence that parental influence is very important," said Cameron. "Things like outside reading and being read to at home really contribute."

Schools bear considerable responsibility when they don't require rigorous courses, assign enough homework or encourage outside reading.

Only 65 percent of students taking the SAT took at least four years of high school math, 55 percent took trigonometry and 44 percent studied physics.

Students who took physics averaged 464 on the verbal and 538 on the math, while those taking high school calculus averaged 599 in math and 502 in verbal skills, said Cameron.

But students who took "commercial math" or other dumbed-down courses were 23 points below the national verbal average of 422 and 30 points below the national math average of 474.

Notice of Effective Tax Rate (for use by most taxing units)

1991 Property Tax Rates in Grandview Hopkins ISD

This notice concerns 1991 property tax rates for Grandview Hopkins ISD. It presents information about three tax rates. Last year's tax rate is the actual rate the taxing unit used to determine property taxes last year. This year's effective tax rate would impose the same total taxes as last year if you compare properties taxed in both years. This year's rollback tax rate is the highest tax rate the taxing unit can set before taxpayers can start tax rollback procedures. In each case these rates are found by dividing the total amount of taxes by the tax base (the total value of taxable property) with adjustments as required by state law. The rates are given per $100 of property value.

Last year's tax rate:
Last year's operating taxes	$ 379,854.25
Last year's debt taxes	$ 0
Last year's total taxes	$ 379,854.25
Last year's tax base	$ 71,532,509.00
Last year's total tax rate	$.52888 /$100
This year's effective tax rate:
Last year's adjusted taxes (after subtracting taxes on lost property)	$ 378,255.00
This year's adjusted tax base (after subtracting value of new property)	$ 79,808,920.00
This year's effective tax rate	$.474001 /$100

(In the first year a city or county collects the additional sales tax it must insert the following lines unless it made its first adjustment last year.)

Sales tax adjustment rate	$ 0 /$100
Effective tax rate	$.474001 /$100

x 1.03 = maximum rate unless unit publishes notices and holds hearing

This year's rollback tax rate:
Last year's adjusted operating taxes (after subtracting taxes on lost property)	$ 378,255.00
This year's adjusted tax base	$ 79,808,920.00
This year's effective operating rate	$.474001 /$100
.72 for school district (or zero)	$ 0
x 1.08 (or add $.08 for schools) = this year's maximum operating rate	$.08 /$100
This year's debt rate	$ 0 /$100

(A school district must insert the following lines)

This year's rollback rate before adjustment	$.08 /$100
Rate to recoup lost revenue	$.314889 /$100
Adjusted rollback rate	$.394889 /$100
This year's rollback rate	$.394889 /$100

(A city or county that collects the additional sales tax (including one that collects the tax for the first time this year) must insert the following lines)

Health insurance 'facts' are fiction

Along with those proclamations of the efficiency of Canada's system of socialized medicine, otherwise known as national health insurance, have been several popularized "facts" floating about the public consciousness. Unfortunately, these "facts" leave much of the truth withering in the dark.

The most dastardly of these "facts" is that the Canadian system works to control costs while the comparatively market-oriented system working in the United States sends costs soaring upward inexorably.

Not quite true, not even close. Certainly, on a simple surface comparison of the GNP figures, it appears that Canada's health-care expenditures are being held in check (currently about 8.5 percent of GNP for Canada compared to 11 percent of GNP for the United States) and that the Canadian system even works to control costs, keeping Canadian health-care costs lower than those in the United States.

However, according to Edward Neuschler, director of policy studies at the Health Insurance Association of America, this "fact" is indeed contrary to the truth. Neuschler's analysis examines the period 1967-1987, the latest 20-year period for which data were available.

Neuschler calculated that Canada's overall real GNP growth for this period was 74 percent, as opposed to a U.S. GNP growth rate for the same period of 38 percent. This is an extremely important observation — the simple 8.5 percent to 11 percent comparison is distorted because health-care expenditures are being compared straight up despite a tremendous difference in GNP growth rates. This distortion in growth rates leads to the assumption that Canada's costs are lower, which is not true.

In addition to this distortion, Neuschler also corrected for other discrepancies evident in the simple comparison by adjusting for differences in inflation rates, population growth rates and currency exchange rates during the 20-year period. To arrive at an accurate assessment of the claim that the Canadian system costs less, Neuschler compared health-care spending in each country on a per-capita basis in constant (inflation-adjusted) dollars in each nation's own currency.

What did this new study show that the simple GNP comparison didn't? Just that Canada's rate of increase of medical expenses nearly paralleled that of the United States. In fact, between 1967 and 1987, inflation-adjusted per-capita health-care spending increased at an annual rate of 4.58 percent in Canada vs. a 4.38 percent increase in the United States.

Thus the myth that Canada's system actually works to control costs is arguable, at best. And, finally, socialism has failed miserably in every arena into which it has been thrust — do we really want to interject it into an area as vitally important as the preservation of life? The answer must be no.

Saving animals, dooming people

Figuring out your position on the issue of scientific experiments with laboratory animals is as simple as choosing sides. In one corner, we have a furry creature with soulful eyes and nasty electrodes implanted in its brain. In the other, we have a human being afflicted with a fatal disease, whose hope for life depends on tests on animals.

Is there any doubt which of the two deserves priority? There must be, or there wouldn't be protests against universities and corporations engaged in animal experiments.

The anti-vivisectionists would like us to think that we can empty the laboratory cages and still have medical progress. But the overwhelming consensus among scientists is that the experiments are indispensable to the fight against diseases. Sparing animals means dooming people.

Asking readers to side with suffering animals or with people afflicted with incurable diseases will strike animal rights supporters as unfairly looking the question. In fact, it understates the case. Some of us would be willing to abandon the distant and uncertain hope of curing AIDS or cancer — some of us who don't have AIDS or cancer, that is — in order to rescue animals from maiming and death.

Not many of us, though, would volunteer for exposure to polio, tetanus, smallpox or any number of other vicious illnesses that have been banished largely through research on animals. The conquest of these diseases isn't the only achievement reduced by such tests. Without animal experiments, nothing resembling modern medicine could have ever developed. We would be as helpless in the face of disease as our ancestors.

Animal rights groups minimize the conflict between human health and animal welfare, arguing that new procedures and medicines can be tested adequately by other means like computer models. This is not entirely mistaken — some companies have sharply reduced their reliance on animal tests in recent years — but it mainly testifies to the power of wishful thinking. In many cases, there is no substitute for experiments with warm-blooded creatures.

Animal rights advocates can easily portray many animal experiments as pointless and redundant. That's the case they have tried to make against studies at Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill. But the search for scientific knowledge generally proceeds by increments that, individually, look absurdly small or even nonexistent. Banning experiments unless they promise a large and certain reward is like banning arguments among philosophers unless they're guaranteed to yield universally accepted conclusions.

Not all of those campaigning on behalf of animals share the goal of stamping out all tests — though prominent groups like the National Anti-Vivisection Society and People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals candidly endorse that goal. Some don't want to eliminate necessary harm to animals, only gratuitous cruelty.

But good intentions aren't enough. Even modest efforts to improve the lot of laboratory animals pose a threat to the fight against disease. Restrictions and regulations add to the cost of such experiments. Every additional cost makes some tests too expensive to conduct. Every test not conducted creates the risk that some potential medical advance will go undiscovered. Each discovery lost is a windfall for the mortician.

The real danger is not that opponents will shut down the laboratories. The greater risk is that they will erect one small new barrier after another, until the path to new discoveries resembles a steeply uphill course. Raising the cost and trouble to anyone doing this sort of scientific research inevitably means pricing some cures out of the market.

For those trying to sell the anti-vivisection case to the public at large, the advantage of this development is that what is lost is unknowable. Someone dying of cancer can't know whether less rigid regulations might have permitted a cure. The damage done to animals by allowing invasive experiments is easy to show. The damage done to humans by banning them is conveniently invisible.

The animal rights movement has had the beneficial effect of causing scientists to ask themselves which animal experiments are truly valuable, and to scrap some that aren't. But it now poses the grave risk of halting research that may prove vital to human health. That's good news only to those who think rats are more valuable than people.

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Tuesday, Aug. 27th, the 239th day of 1991. There are 126 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On Aug. 27, 1883, the island volcano Krakatoa blew up. Tidal waves resulting from the cataclysmic explosions in Indonesia's Sunda Strait claimed some 36,000 lives in Java and Sumatra.

On this date:
In 1770, the German philosopher Georg Wilhelm Friedrich Hegel was born in Stuttgart.

In 1859, Col. Edwin L. Drake drilled the first successful oil well in the United States near Titusville, Pa.

In 1908, Lyndon B. Johnson, the 36th president of the United States, was born near Stonewall, Texas.

In 1928, the Kellogg-Briand Pact was signed in Paris, outlawing war and providing for the peaceful settlement of disputes.

In 1945, American troops began landing in Japan following the surrender of the Japanese government.

The lost time I saw Paris ...

LOST IN EUROPE — I always lose a lot of stuff when I travel in Europe. It could be the jet lag.

You get off the jet and it's two in the morning in your head, but they've already had breakfast in Paris and somewhere between the airport and getting insulted by your first concierge, you lose your sunglasses.

I didn't lose my sunglasses between Orly and getting insulted by my first concierge of the trip at my hotel. I left them on the plane.

After checking into my hotel, the concierge said, in a loud voice, "Zeees Americans. Zey are so unkept." (My underwear had crept above my pants waist and was sticking out over my shirt since I had slept in my clothes on the plane.) Then I discovered I had left my traveler's checks at home.

So I had to go to the American Express office in Paris to get new ones. That must be where I lost the key to my hotel room.

When I returned to the hotel and asked to concierge for a new one, he said, in a loud voice, "Vat do you Americans think? Keeyz grow on trees?" before giving me another one.

Later, my lovely companion and I rode the Orient Express from Paris to Vienna.

I normally don't wear socks but it is suggested passengers dress in black tie for dinner on the train and I had brought along a new pair of black lace-up shoes to go with my tuxedo. — I was afraid that with no socks the new shoes would cause large blisters on my feet, so I packed a new pair of dark socks, too.

When I went to dress a few hours before departure time, I discovered I'd lost my socks. I wore the new black lace-ups with no socks and got terrible blisters.

But I also got a lot of great photographs on the train: my lovely companion and I boarding the romantic train, eating something with a lot of sauce on it in the romantic dining car and capping off the evening in the romantic lounge car, where a man played a baby grand piano.

I lost the camera. I know I had it when my lovely companion and I went back to our romantic quarters on the train.

But when we awakened the next morning somewhere near Zurich, Switzerland, and were taking a romantic sponge bath in the lavatory (French for "wash pot") it was gone.

We got off the train in Vienna. Somewhere between the train and the next hotel, I lost the ashtray I had lifted off the train as a souvenir to replace the lost camera and photographs.

Now, we're in London. I tried to cash one of my remaining traveler's checks in the lobby of the Dorchester Hotel, but the cashier refused. He said my two signatures on the check didn't match.

What did he take me for? A thief? Of course, none of this is new to me. I lost my underwear once in the Soviet Union, and my passport driving between Italy and the south of France, where I temporarily lost another lovely companion on an elevator in a hotel in Cannes when she was swept out onto another floor by a large family of Arabs having an argument.

It's the jet lag. It's the fact you have so much to keep up with in Europe. It's the fact I probably could misplace an anvil after being locked in an otherwise empty room with it.

But I did find the ashtray I took off the train in London. It was inside the one black shoe I still have left.

Marijuana can be a good medicine

By SARAH OVERSTREET

Through a magazine assignment recently, I met a woman who had fought a difficult, harrowing battle to obtain a drug for her dying son. The drug was the only one of many that tried that could ease the pain of his cancer and relieve the nausea brought on by his chemotherapy so he could eat.

The drug's side effects — and those are still up for debate 12 years after his death — were minuscule in comparison to the relief it gave him. And mercifully, the drug was inexpensive.

So why did Mae Nutt, a Beaverton, Mich., housewife and grandmother, have to fight to get hold of this cheap wonder drug? Simple. The government didn't want her to have it. It's one of those substances Uncle Sam and Aunt Nancy want you to "just say no" to, whether you're in intractable pain and the drug is the only thing you can find to relieve it, or not.

The drug is marijuana, and the government would brook no exceptions in its all-out war against it.

Since Keith Nutt died in 1979, Mae's work has helped force the U.S. Public Health Service to at least issue "individual needs drug" permits, called INDs, to a few ill people who can benefit medically from using marijuana. But Mae can rattle off more cases of severely ill people who are being denied INDs than those who have them, some of whom are still being harassed by local law-enforcement officers.

And she contends the government is absurdly stingy and cruel in granting those permits. "They will lose the application between the Drug Enforcement Agency and the Federal Drug Administration," Mae told me, "or keep it for months and send it back saying you didn't fill something out right."

Marijuana has been shown to have numerous medical uses, among them easing the pain of cancer and other chronic diseases, relieving the muscle spasm of multiple sclerosis and halting the progression of glaucoma. One explanation the government gives for denying marijuana use is that the drug's medicinal ingredient, THC, is available in pill form. But how do you keep a pill down when you're too nauseous to hold down food? And smoking marijuana works faster than taking its pill form and sufferers say the speed of relief is sometimes crucial.

Mae and others in the Alliance for Cannabis Therapeutics (ACT), a Washington-based group lobbying for reform in laws governing the medicinal use of marijuana, suspect the real reasons are more sinister: First, the government doesn't want to admit that something it's devoted so much time and effort into demonizing could have at least one saving grace; second, a powerful pharmaceutical lobby doesn't want to see lowly, cheap marijuana gain ground on expensive manmade drugs that don't work as well but make the pharmaceutical companies billions of dollars.

Mae Nutt and ACT have many physicians squarely on their side although the amount of paperwork necessary to help a patient get an IND has caused some to throw up their hands and prescribe other medication. "One doctor told me, 'When the time comes that I spend more time on paperwork than on my patients, I just can't do the paperwork,'" Mae remembers. Syndicated Columnist Stephen Chapman, writing on this subject recently, cited a Harvard poll of 1,035 cancer physicians: Almost half said they would prescribe marijuana if it were legal.

There are myriad substances on the face of the Earth that can be used for good or ill. We don't ban their use in some products just because in others they can be destructive, and we don't deny access to them because some people may use them for no good. What is particularly infuriating and heartbreaking about this situation is that marijuana use by the very ill could be easily monitored by physicians and responsible care providers. Why should anyone "just say yes" to unnecessary torment, when relief is so simple and natural?

Croatian government urges all-out mobilization by citizens

By NESHA STARCEVIC
Associated Press Writer

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — The government of the breakaway Croatian republic today urged citizens to take up arms in the escalating battles against ethnic Serbian rebels and their supporters in the Yugoslav army, a report said.

The report, on Zagreb TV, did not give specifics, but the plan presumably includes an order for all able-bodied men to join the conflict — which has killed at least 250 people since Croatia declared independence on June 25.

At the moment, Croatian forces are made up of some civilians, but mostly of police and special militia fighters.

Other news reports today also suggested that the fighting in Croatia will probably spread and intensify.

In an interview with British television, Croatia President Franjo Tudjman said: "In future days we (will) have war."

Croatia's news agency, Hina, said the republic's government was expected to pass new defense measures today, but it did not give specifics.

Sources in Croatia, who spoke on condition of anonymity, reported a call-up of reservists had already begun.

Croatian leaders had earlier threatened to order a general mobilization unless the Yugoslav army withdraws to its barracks by Saturday. There have been no signals that the army plans to comply with the demand.

Ethnic Serbs, who account for about 12 percent of Croatia's 5 million people, have fought to keep their territory part of Yugoslavia. They have often been aided by the Serb-led federal military, which claims its is acting as a buffer between the warring groups.

Hatreds have been fed by memories of the slaughter of hundreds of thousands of Serbs under Croatia's Nazi puppet government in World War II.

Fighting has increased since the collapse of a cease-fire last week. Some of the heaviest clashes occurred Monday, as army tanks and warplanes blasted remaining Croatian strongholds in Serbian-dominated eastern Croatia.

The national Tanjug news agency reported that Monday's fighting in eastern Croatia and near the Adriatic coast claimed at least 12 lives. The Croatian Ministry of Information said 80 people were wounded.

Belgrade television said fighting raged today at several locations in Krajina, near the Adriatic coast, and Croatian radio reported renewed clashes in eastern Croatia bordering Serbia.

The army was involved in several clashes, Croatian radio said. The report could not be independently confirmed.

The eight-member federal presidency ordered a cease-fire on Aug. 7, but the truce failed to hold. A presidency meeting, called for today by its chairman, Croatia's Stipe Mesic, was indefinitely postponed, Tanjug reported.

At a meeting of European Community foreign ministers in Belgium today, Germany and Italy were expected to urge the 10 other EC members to recognize Croatian and Slovenian independence if the fighting continued.

Slovenia declared independence the same day Croatia did, but a cease-fire was imposed there after several weeks of fighting and it has held.

Austria, which is not an EC member, said Monday it was ready to establish diplomatic relations with the two republics if other European countries were willing to do so.

KGB unit explains why it didn't follow orders

By BRIAN FRIEDMAN
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Leaders of elite KGB commandos said they could have stormed the Russian Parliament "in 20-30 minutes" during the coup but refused an order to do so because they considered it unlawful, Tass reported today.

The Parliament building became the focal point of the coup's opposition, led by Russian Federation President Boris Yeltsin. It was surrounded by tens of thousands of Muscovites for three days to stave off an attack that never came.

Sergei Goncharov, deputy commander of the KGB's anti-terrorist Alpha Group, told Tass that Viktor Karpukhin, then head of the unit, told his men to make preparations to attack the Parliament building, known as the "White House."

They were first told of the coup on Aug. 18, when Mikhail S. Gorbachev was put under house arrest by the plotters, the news agency said. The next day they were ordered to scout the 19-story Parliament building in preparation for an attack at 3 a.m. the following morning, Tass said.

"When the order was given, we asked where it originated, since we were aware that Karpukhin, chief of Alpha Group, was just a link," Goncharov told Tass. "We were told it was 'the order of the government.'"

Goncharov said the unit's deputies asked again which government issued the order and "we were told again, 'This is the government order.'"

"We were aware that an armed group of some 500 people was inside the building," he told Tass. "If the operation began, it would lead to bloodshed."

Mikhail Golovato, who has since taken over leadership of Alpha Group, told Tass that the deputy leadership of Alpha Group "was shocked at the order," immediately decided to disobey it, and then called chiefs of the group's various units, who all decided it was unlawful.

The decision to disobey was "without precedent for servicemen, especially for our unit," Golovato was quoted as saying. "There has never been a case of refusal to carry out orders since the group's formation in 1974."

Yeltsin said Sunday that the 20 members of Alpha Group resisted the order despite intense pressure from their superiors, including "threats of court-martial, execution, etc."

Yeltsin said that Alpha Group, armed with grenade launchers, anti-tank missiles and other powerful weapons, was under orders to kill or capture himself and 11 others in the building.

Golovato acknowledged that the armed volunteers at the Parliament "were determined to resist to the very end."

"But they were no match for professionals," Golovato told Tass. "Frankly speaking, we could have fulfilled our tasks in 20-30 minutes. The building of the White House would have been taken, with all the consequences that follow."

Goncharov also said the Alpha Group participated in the seizure of the Lithuanian broadcasting center in Vilnius on Jan. 13 in which 14 people were killed. He claimed that "we had not fired a single shot" during that operation.

One KGB officer was killed in the events surrounding the assault, but it was not clear whether he was part of the Alpha Unit.

Free trade hearing conducted in Houston

By MICHAEL GRACZYK
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Texans alternately are telling a federal panel that the North American Free Trade Agreement could be the boon or the bust of the United States' economic trade with Mexico and Canada.

"Clearly, we wouldn't be doing the agreement if we thought it was a loser," Robert Fisher, the Office of the U.S. Trade Representative's director for Mexico, said Monday. "Our experience shows it does lead to jobs. We think this is a real winner."

The trade representative's office today resumes the two-day hearing on the proposed agreement. The pact is to end restrictive tariffs and other barriers that hinder trade among the United States, Canada and Mexico. The measure still must be approved by Congress.

"The proposed (agreement) would link the three economies in yet even more far-reaching ways, which the administration sincerely believes would be beneficial to all three countries," David Weiss, chairman of the staff committee, said.

But opponents contend it will result in job losses for Americans and encourage U.S. firms to exploit lower-paid Mexican workers, as well as avoid tough U.S. environmental laws by putting polluting factories in Mexico.

"Let's face it, the deal which has the support of U.S. corporations and banks aims at eliminating tariffs so that products built with low-cost Mexican cheap labor can be exported freely to the U.S., making high profits for the corporate owners ... and keeping Mexican workers in poverty," said Jaime Martinez, of San Antonio, secretary treasurer of the International Union of Electrical Workers.

The Houston hearing is conducted by a 10-member panel representing federal departments of the Treasury, Labor, Commerce and Energy. It is the second of six stops for the Trade Policy Staff Committee, which opened the sessions last week in San Diego. More hearings are planned for later this week in Atlanta, then next month in Washington, Cleveland and Boston.

Weiss said separate hearings will be held by the Environmental Protection Agency to concentrate on environmental matters involving the United States and Mexico. He also said Bush has pledged to minimize any negative impact on workers displaced by the agreement.

Fan Dorman, president of the Houston Interamerican Chamber of Commerce, told the panel that a recent questionnaire sent out by his group showed respondents are "100 percent in favor of the North American Free Trade Agreements." Of those, Dorman said 93 percent already are actively engaged in international trade within the Americas.

But John P. McCray, a management and marketing professor at the University of Texas-San Antonio, testified Monday that it would take more than a trade agreement to increase business in Texas.

"It is not the free trade agreement, but growing trade passing through South Texas that has the potential to change market, industry and firm dynamics throughout this region," McCray said.

"South Texas, with nearly $25 billion of imports and exports passing through the region annually, and a growth in that trade last year of nearly $3 billion, must have the trained work force and the infrastructure necessary to develop the value adding businesses associated with this trade," McCray said.

'Hot Shots!' still hot, but nation's theaters feel box office chill

By JOHN HORN
AP Entertainment Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Hot Shots! is still the hottest thing at the box office in this tepid Hollywood summer.

The flyboy spoof was No. 1 for the fourth straight week with $4.7 million, the lowest weekend gross for a leading film all summer, Exhibitor Relations Co. said Monday.

"The business does seem in a slump, but then it has always been a rollercoaster ride," said Exhibitor Relations' John Krier.

"I started as a theater usher in 1924 and even then people were saying, 'We can't go on with these dinky pictures.'"

Despite three summer films that have topped $300 million (Terminator 2: Judgment Day, Robin Hood:

Michael J. Fox's new movie, 'Doc Hollywood,' is No. 2 at the box office this week in a late summer run of tepid box office hits.

Prince of Thieves, City Slickers), the year's total theater take is down from last year. Art Murphy of Daily Variety calculated $3.01 billion for the first seven months, versus $3.07 billion last year.

"The second wave of summer releases turned out to be a ripple," he said.

Doc Hollywood, a Michael J. Fox comedy, was No. 2 over the weekend with $4.2 million.

Third was Terminator 2: Judgment Day with $4.1 million. The Arnold Schwarzenegger technothriller has made $175.6 million to date.

Among the films that flopped in their debuts over the weekend: Harley Davidson and the Marlboro Man, Defenseless and True Identity. The latter failed to even make the top 10 in its first weekend of release.

Here are the top movie ticket sales Friday through Sunday according to Exhibitor Relations, with distributor, weekend gross, number of theater screens, average per screen, total gross and number of weeks in release.

Figures are based on a combination of actual box-office receipts and studio projections where actual figures are not immediately available.

1. Hot Shots!, 20th Century Fox, $4.7 million, 1,998 screens, $2,341 per screen, $47.9 million, four weeks.
2. Doc Hollywood, Warner Bros., $4.2 million, 1,694 screens, $2,494 per screen, $33.2 million, four weeks.
3. Terminator 2: Judgment Day, Tri-Star, $4.1 million, 2,076 screens, $1,970 per screen, $175.6 million, eight weeks.
4. The Doctor, Disney, $3.7 million, 888 screens, $4,127 per screen, $19.4 million, five weeks.
5. Dead Again, Paramount, $3.5 million, 450 screens, $7,732 per screen, $3.5 million, one week.
6. Double Impact, Columbia, $2.7 million, 1,716 screens, $1,574 per screen, $20.1 million, three weeks.
7. Harley Davidson and the Marlboro Man, MGM-Pathé, $2.2 million, 1,196 screens, $1,840 per screen, $2.2 million, one week.
8. Robin Hood: Prince of Thieves, Warner Bros., $2.1 million, 1,365 screens, $1,514 per screen, $146.2 million, 11 weeks.
9. Pure Luck, Universal, $2 million, 1,557 screens, $1,290 per screen, $14.7 million, three weeks.
10. Defenseless, Seven Arts, $1.6 million, 666 screens, $2,388 per screen, $1.6 million, one week.

Report says poverty growing among many Latino children

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Poverty rates among Latino children are growing faster than among other youngsters despite the fact that their parents are more likely to be married and working, the Children's Defense Fund says.

"There is this idea in this country that we could solve the problem of child poverty if only these single women would get married," said Letitia Miranda, an analyst for the fund and author of a report on the Latino poor.

"But what you see is that among many Latino families with children, they are married and they are still poor," Miranda said Monday. "So the idea that marriage will solve poverty is not true."

"The idea that the child poverty problem can be solved through a greater adherence to traditional family values ignores the reality of pervasive poverty among Latino married-couple families," Miranda said.

"Many Latino children are poor despite their parents' best efforts to pull their families out of poverty and despite the fact that they are 'playing by the rules,'" said Miranda. "Even more than non-Latino poor children, poor Latino children often have both parents in the home and at least one parent working full-time year-round."

She said this is even more true of immigrant Latinos than of those born in the United States.

The fund, a private group that advocates increased government help for poor children, said 36.2 percent of Latino children were

Woman slain while talking to fiancé in telephone call

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Brian Eaker was talking on the telephone to his fiancée when she went to answer the door. The next thing he heard was the woman he loved begging for her life.

"She was crying, 'Please don't hurt me, please don't hurt me,'" Eaker recalled. He dialed 911.

"I knew that was the only thing I could do and hope they got there soon enough," he said. "But they didn't."

By the time Eaker had sped 80 miles to the home where 22-year-old Lisa Flormoe was staying, it was surrounded by police tape. "They told me her body was in the house and I lost it, emotionally and everything," he said.

Five days later, police arrested Todd Davilla, a 16-year-old honor student and Boy Scout whose family lives in the neighborhood. Police believe he used his Boy Scout knife to slit Flormoe's throat after trying to rape her.

Those who know Davilla described him as a well-liked high school junior who was planning for college and a business career. He is charged with murder, burglary and attempted rape.

"He was one of the nicest kids I ever met," said Scott Thompson, Davilla's counselor at Canby Union High School.

Eaker met Flormoe nearly five years ago in Eugene, where she was a buyer for a department store. He is a sales manager for a chemical company.

They lived together for some time, spent vacations together and traveled around the country and to Mexico before deciding to marry in December.

Eaker said he was talking to her on the phone the afternoon of Aug. 13 when a teenager came to the door twice, asking for the daughter of the family that lived there.

Flormoe was alone in the house of family friends in an affluent neighborhood in the Portland suburb of Wilsonville.

"The neighborhood is very secure, very nice," Eaker said. "If Lisa felt intimidated or threatened by this kid, she would have said something on the phone."

poor in 1989, the latest year for which data are available. It said the figures were 43.7 percent for blacks and 11.5 percent for non-Latino whites.

For a family of four in 1989, the government's poverty threshold was an annual income of $12,675. For a family of nine, it was $25,480. The Census Bureau adjusts the figures each year to account for inflation, and does not count non-cash benefits such as food stamps.

The report said more than half of poor Latino families with children had a head of household who worked at least part of the year.

It said the proportion of poor children living in married-couple families was 56.6 percent for Mexican-Americans, 48.3 percent for Latinos as a whole and 34.9 percent for all non-Latinos.

Other highlights of the report: More than 1 million Latino children were added to the ranks of poor children in the United States between 1979 and 1989, making up nearly half of the total increase in the number of poor children.

There are 7.2 million Latino children in the United States, representing 11 percent of the country's child population. By 1989, 2.6 million of them were poor.

More than two-thirds of poor Latino heads of family do not have a high school diploma, compared with less than half of poor white and black family heads.

The rate of labor force participation for Hispanic men is 84.1 percent, compared with 77.8 percent for non-Hispanic whites and 73.8 percent for blacks. However, just over half of married women in the Latino community worked in 1989, compared with 57 percent for whites and 64 percent for blacks.

Between 1973 and 1989, the median income of Latino families headed by a person under 30 fell by 13 percent — more than twice the decline suffered by young white families.

More than half of the nation's Latinos live in central cities and nearly one-third in suburbs, with a small minority in rural areas.

Gene-altered farm animals make human proteins in milk

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Gene splicers have created barnyard animals that make large quantities of medicine in their milk, taking a big step toward the creation of a new branch of agriculture — "pharming."

The scientists already have transferred human genes into goats and sheep, turning these animals into pharmaceutical factories. And they are close to doing the same with the ultimate barnyard milk maker, the cow.

Genetic engineers now routinely shift human genes into bacteria, yeast and tissue cultures so they will produce usable quantities of otherwise rare human proteins for treating disease. The goal is to do the same with larger — much larger — creatures capable of churning out vastly greater amounts.

"We are very close" to having commercially useful quantities, said Dr. Vernon G. Pursel, a research physiologist at the U.S. Department of Agriculture in Beltsville, Md. "We may be there."

For instance, a genetically modified sheep in Scotland produced up to 2 ounces a day of a human protein used to treat a form of emphysema. This is four months' supply for one patient.

Three reports on the creation of so-called transgenic animals are being published in the Sept. 1 issue of the journal Bio-Technology, released Monday.

The first transgenic animals to make foreign proteins in their milk were mice created by scientists four years ago. Researchers have also designed other gene-altered farm animals, including cattle, but the goal has been to change the size and characteristics of the animals, not produce human proteins in milk.

Pursel, who experiments with transgenic pigs, said the latest reports "may be significant advances," but "there are other big hurdles" besides boosting production.

Among them are efficiently separating the proteins from the milk, making sure they are pure and testing them to see how they compare to genuine human proteins.

He and others predicted it could take five to 10 years to get animal-made proteins onto the market.

In one of the new reports, researchers from Tufts University veterinary school in Grafton and Genzyme Corp. of Cambridge described the first successful creation of transgenic goats that produce a human protein in their milk.

Their first female produced milk with tissue plasminogen activator, or TPA, a protein widely used to treat heart attacks. But the amounts of TPA were tiny — about three milligrams in each liter of milk.

Experts generally agree that transgenic animals must make one gram or more of human protein per liter to compete economically with other gene-splicing techniques.

Dr. Karl M. Ebert, director of experimental biotechnology at the veterinary school, said the researchers have since produced a goat that makes three grams of TPA per liter.

In another article in the journal, Dutch researchers from the University of Leiden and Gene Pharming Europe said they had produced the first transgenic dairy cattle intended to produce milk with human lactoferrin, an iron-binding protein. Their first animal was a bull, so it could not manufacture the protein.

A commentary in the journal described their gene-splicing technique for cows as "a dramatic breakthrough in enlarging the transgenic pharm-yard."

Another team, from Pharmaceutical Proteins Ltd. and the AFRC Institute of Animal Physiology and Genetics Research in Edinburgh, produced three sheep that made human alpha-1-antitrypsin in their milk. This enzyme is used to prevent life-threatening emphysema in people who cannot make the substance on their own.

One of the animals made up to 70 grams of the protein a day. The protein is now derived commercially from human blood. An estimated 20,000 people in the United States need 200 grams annually.

To create their transgenic goats, scientists started with a copy of the human gene that contains the code for TPA. Then they fused it with a genetic control switch that turns on genes so they make proteins in breast milk.

Next, they injected copies of the hybrid gene into fertilized goat eggs and transferred them to a foster mother. The baby goats were then checked to see if they carried the hybrid gene in all the cells in their bodies.

Two of these gene carriers were then mated. The females that resulted produced TPA in their milk.

Would a coup be unthinkable in the U.S.A.?

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans could sit back last week and watch a coup unfold in the other superpower, confident that it couldn't happen here. Or could it?

On this fundamental question — whether a handful of conspirators could seize the U.S. government and take over — historians are surprisingly uncertain and divided.

Some point to 200 years of experience, in which power routinely changed hands in times tough and placid, as evidence that American fidelity to constitutional order is so great that no ideologically driven conspirator could ever find enough people in high places to go along.

Others are not so sanguine. These are tranquil days in America, but there have been times when mobs roamed the streets and the durability of democracy was worried about.

One national division was so great it took a civil war to put the country together again. Home-grown fascists had millions of followers during the Depression. A president feared to go anywhere in public except to military bases during the Vietnam frenzy, and crowds called him a murderer.

Four presidents were killed and six other assassination attempts failed, but none of those events resulted from seize-the-government conspiracies.

Such conspiracy is not in the American character, said Joan Hoff, a historian at Indiana University.

"What we have that the Soviets have never developed," she said, reflecting on the failed putsch in the Soviet Union, "is the institutionalized succession of power. We are totally imbued in it."

And Samuel R. Gammon III, executive director of the American Historical Association, said even during the Red Scare of the 1920s and the McCarthy era of the 1950s, the pendulum of public opinion always came around in time to knock down what looked like a threat to democratic order.

"Even in the McCarthy hysteria, the backlash was finally there and ultimately destroyed him," Gammon said.

And if the White House had been occupied by someone indifferent to the Depression's suffering, if no Franklin Roosevelt came along "to create a sense that something was being done," a demagogue could have seized power in America, said historian Howard Zinn.

Zinn, author of "A People's History of the United States," is not so persuaded that it could not happen

"I would like to think that the American people are so resistant, so imbued with democratic ideas that the country could not be taken over by some military or political clique," Zinn said, "but I don't think that's so."

"I don't think it is improbable given the volatility of public opinion and the power of important people to con or use the media in the way the administration used the media during the Gulf War to move public opinion from opposition to 85 percent support of military action in a number of days."

"Coups are not simply done by force," he added. "Force is used against those who won't be persuaded, but for the most part it is persuasion. Hitler didn't take over by force. Basically, he persuaded the German people he was the best thing in the world for them. I think the American people are as vulnerable as anybody else to persuasion."

On the other hand, Zinn is convinced that in America — as in Boris Yeltsin's Russia — a coup wouldn't last long before public revulsion undid it.

"That's where our history and claims of constitutionality and civil liberties and values are important," he said.

Amrita Jones, executive director of the Organization of American Historians in Bloomington, Ind., said events during the last days of the Watergate crisis persuaded her that "the rule of law and devotion to the Constitution" are too strong to permit the usurpation of a presidency.

"We realized we had a president who really wasn't in those last days able to function, and a number of people — including me — wondered who was making the key decisions," she said of Richard Nixon.

But even under such dire circumstances, Jones said, "I can't imagine something happening comparable to what happened in Russia."

Jet crash attributed to collision with a vulture

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — A $30 million Marine Corps jet crashed last year after colliding with a 4 1/2-pound vulture, Navy documents show.

The TAV-8B Harrier went out of control during a training mission after hitting the bird at about 500 feet off the ground, The News and Courier reported today, citing documents obtained under the Freedom of Information Act.

The two pilots ejected safely, and the jet crashed in a swamp about 30 miles northwest of Charleston.

Ethanol from garbage, energy crops could be cost competitive by 2000

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — Automobile fuel produced from household garbage, recycled newspapers and specially bred "energy crops" will be competitive with gasoline by the end of the decade, researchers say.

Trees, grasses, municipal trash, agricultural waste and crops such as sweet sorghum and so-called energy cane, a form of sugar cane, will be used to produce ethanol fuel as cheaply as gas, said Mark T. Holtzapfle of Texas A&M University in College Station.

"We have the technology to convert garbage into clean-burning ethanol fuels," Holtzapfle said Monday at the national meeting of the American Chemical Society. "It's a social choice; I don't think it's a technology barrier."

Lee R. Lynd of Dartmouth College in Hanover, N.H., said that ethanol can now be produced from trees, grasses and municipal waste for about $1.30 per gallon. It should be possible to cut that in half and make the process competitive with gasoline by the year 2000, he said.

Use of ethanol instead of gasoline would substantially reduce the buildup of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere, easing global warming from the greenhouse effect, the researchers said.

Another improvement that could lead to cheaper ethanol would be the production of newsprint from a newly developed crop called kenaf, which in some ways is superior to conventional newsprint produced from pine, Holtzapfle said.

Kenaf is a fibrous plant that grows in the U.S. Cotton Belt and yields about four times as much material per year as natural pine forests and 1.5 to 2.6 times as much material as cultivated pine, he said.

Kenaf newsprint has twice the energy content of conventional newsprint, Holtzapfle said. Two-thirds of it is cellulose, which can be recycled and converted into ethanol. The remainder is waste. Only one-third of conventional newsprint is cellulose, Holtzapfle said.

The United States generates 200 million tons of municipal solid waste each year, said James L. Gaddy of the University of Arkansas in Fayetteville.

"It's a renewable resource," he said, and it can be used to meet 5 percent of the nation's energy needs or 20 percent of its liquid fuel needs at competitive prices.

In addition, he said, a process he has developed can convert the cellulose from corn stalks into ethanol at a price of 80 cents per gallon if produced in a 20-million-gallon plant. That makes it competitive with gasoline right now, he said.

He noted that 15 years ago Brazil imported all its liquid fuels, but today it produces most of its fuel as ethanol from sugar cane. The reason, he said, is that Brazil established a national policy to reduce fuel imports.

"We don't have a national policy, except that we are going to continue to use oil, even at the risk of another shooting incident in the Mideast," Gaddy said.

Holtzapfle said a variety of advances have changed the picture for ethanol. "It's only in the last few years that the economics have looked good," he said.

The researchers agreed that an investment by the government is necessary to establish an ethanol industry but said the money could be found.

"We're paying $15 billion a year to subsidize farmers not to grow stuff," said Holtzapfle. "We could use that to start an ethanol industry."

Kennedy Smith's attorneys call for judge to remain on rape case

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — William Kennedy Smith's lawyers say they like the judge in his rape case just fine, and prosecutors are trying to goad her into stepping down.

Defense attorneys on Monday filed papers opposing the state's request last week that Circuit Judge Mary Lupo step down for, among other things, giving prosecutor Moira Lasch dirty looks.

The prosecution also accused Lupo of bias for granting a defense request to delay the trial until Jan. 13 and of conflict of interest because her family is friends with the family of another prosecutor in the case. It warned that Smith's lawyers could use the alleged conflict as the basis for a later appeal.

However, the defense on Monday said it had in effect waived an appeal by failing to act on the information months ago.

It said prosecutors tried to goad Lupo with "inflammatory motions" and "an abusive tone."

Hawaii rampage leaves four dead, four wounded

HONOLULU (AP) — A 37-year-old man distraught over his impending divorce shot and killed his mother- and father-in-law, tried to kill his wife and son, set a fatal house fire and torched his workplace, police said.

A love triangle set off the rampage that left four people dead and four wounded, said Maj. Rudy Alivado. It began Sunday night.

Orlando Ganal of Waipahu was arrested Monday evening. Charges were pending.

Police said Ganal crisscrossed the island twice, first breaking into the Waipahu home of his wife's parents, Santiago and Aradina Dela Cruz, both 59, and fatally shooting both.

Ganal then shot his 34-year-old wife, Mabel, and 14-year-old son, Orlando Jr., police said. Both were hospitalized in guarded condition late Monday.

"She moved in with us because she was having a lot of problems with her husband," said Elmer Revilla, Mabel Ganal's brother.

Diego Dela Cruz said he was sleeping in an upstairs bedroom when he heard shots. He escaped through a window, then returned to see what happened.

"My dad was right there, reaching for me," Dela Cruz said. "But I could do nothing. I was so helpless."

Ganal then drove 25 miles to Kailua and set fire to the home of Wendy and Michael Touchette, killing their 2 1/2-year-old daughter, Kalah, and 10-month-old son, Joshua, police said. The Touchettes were hospitalized in critical condition Monday night with burns.

"I heard her yelling, 'Help, help my baby,'" said Kala Kaahue, a neighbor. "I tried to go into the house. It was just black smoke."

Ganal was angry about a recent relationship between his wife and Michael Touchette's brother, David, police said. David Touchette left the island last month after Ganal repeatedly threatened to kill him and his wife, said Amy Lo, Wendy Touchette's sister.

Police said Ganal then drove back over the island and set fire to Young Laundry & Dry Cleaning, where he worked. No one was inside at the time. Damage was estimated at $150,000.

Ganal filed for divorce about 2 1/2 weeks ago and he and his wife had been scheduled for a hearing Monday in Family Court. In court papers, he claimed that his wife threatened to kill him and was spending their savings. He also sought custody of their son.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING ON TAX INCREASE

The GRAY COUNTY will hold a public hearing on a proposal to increase total tax revenues from properties on the tax roll in 1991 by 8 percent. Your individual taxes may increase at a greater or lesser rate, or even decrease, depending on the change in the taxable value of your property in relation to the change in taxable value of all other property.

The public hearing will be held on September 3, 1991 at 11:00 a.m. in Gray County Courthouse.

FOR the proposal: Judge Carl Kennedy, Comm. Joe Wheeley, Comm. Jim Greene, Comm. Gerald Wright, Comm. Ted Simmons

AGAINST the proposal: None
PRESENT and not voting: None
ABSENT: None

The statement above shows the percentage increase the proposed rate represents over the effective tax rate that the unit published on August 26, 1991. The following table compares taxes on an average home in this taxing unit last year to taxes proposed on the average home this year. Again your individual taxes may be higher or lower, depending on the taxable value of your property.

	Last Year			This Year
	County	Road	Ind Hlth	County	Road	Ind Hlth
Average home value		29,772			27,558
General exemptions available (amount available on the average home, not including senior citizen's or disabled person's exemptions)		3,000			3,000
Average taxable value	29,772	26,772	29,772	27,558	24,558	27,558
Tax rate Total			.2739 (proposed)			.30294 (proposed)
Tax Total			79.31			81.80 (proposed)

Under this proposal taxes on the average home would increase by $2.49 or 3 percent compared with last year's taxes.

Comparing tax rates without adjusting for changes in property value, the tax rate would increase by $.0294 per $100 of taxable value or 10.6 percent compared to last year's tax rate. These tax rate figures are not adjusted for changes in the taxable value of property.

Choosing a credit card you'll love for the long run

By KIPLINGER'S PERSONAL FINANCE MAGAZINE

Hypercompetitive credit card issuers have outdone themselves trying to make their card the one you apply for — and the one you pull from your wallet at the cash register. Their battles for your business play up perks, not price.

Credit cards now can double as a telephone calling card, be your ticket to a tow truck when you're stranded, rack up frequent-flier miles, earn rebates, reimburse you when purchases are lost, stolen or go on sale, or even broadcast your support for a charitable organization or sports team. One issuer dreams up a popular enhancement, other issuers feel compelled to match it—and the perk war escalates.

Each new fringe diverts attention from stubbornly high credit card pricing. Major issuers' interest rates remain at 18 percent to 20 percent despite a 1.5 percentage point drop in the prime rate since last year. Annual fees run $20 to $55.

But a few big issuers are finally breaking ranks on price. Consumers have snapped up so many no-fee Discover and AT&T Universal cards that major issuers, such as Chase Manhattan and BankOne, have begun to test-market cards with no annual levy. Others are waiving fees during the first year or for people who charge heavily.

Pressure on high rates could come next if American Express goes through with its plan to offer a moderate-rate Optima card that would be available to people who don't already hold the green, gold or platinum card. The company is test-marketing a stand-alone card — one mailing offers a 14.5 percent introductory rate, adjusted to prime (currently 8.5 percent) plus 6.75 points after the first year.

With their big marketing guns, major issuers get a big response with each new offer. But none undercut the bargains that have been available for years from smaller, low-profile issuers. This guide from Kiplinger's Personal Finance Magazine will point you to the deals.

Although many issuers pitch the perks and bury the rates and fees in the fine print, a credit card is a borrowing and money-management tool first and a benefits package second. What to look for in a card depends on your borrowing style:

— Low rate. If you're among the two-thirds of credit card holders who regularly carry a balance, concentrate on the interest rate. The rates on variable-rate cards have fallen in tandem with market interest rates — to as low as 10.5 percent at a few Arkansas banks, which can charge no more than five points over the Federal Reserve discount rate (5.5 percent in June).

— No annual fee. If you never carry a balance, the convenience of credit can be free. Ignore the interest rate and look instead for a no-fee card with a grace period that allows you to avoid interest charges if you pay within 25 days.

There are drawbacks to some of the bargain cards. Small banks that get publicity for their low rates, such as Arkansas Federal, receive more applications than they can approve, so chances of a turnaround are high and credit lines tend to be low.

Wachovia weighed in with a super-low rate of its own this spring. At 11.4 percent (prime plus 2.9 percentage points), it's the lowest rate you'll find from a large issuer. But avoid this card for cash advances. The 4 percent cash-advance levy is one of the highest in the industry.

Most standard bargain cards are plain-vanilla credit — no extended warranties, insurance or round-the-clock customer service. An exception is the no-fee standard card issued by Abbott Bank. It has many of the perks ordinarily reserved for gold cards.

Look for other bargains close to home — cards that aren't available nationally or that require you to have a checking or savings account with the issuing bank. Credit unions, which issue cards only to members, offer some of the best deals.

Enhancements sell credit cards — even though cardholders rarely take advantage of perks. You'll usually pay for the extras — with a higher annual fee for a gold bankcard or an American Express card, or with a higher interest rate on a card from a major issuer. But if you never carry a balance and earn roughly $35,000 a year in household income, you can take the ultimate free ride: a no-fee gold card that lets you enjoy all the trappings and never pay a dime.

Gold cards offer high credit lines — usually $5,000 or more — and often have reasonable interest rates. Gold Visas and MasterCard carry collision damage waiver, which allows you to decline a rental car company's insurance policy; purchase protection, which reimburses you (after your homeowner's insurance kicks in) if an item bought with the card is lost, stolen or damaged within 90 days; emergency travel, medical and legal; and emergency roadside assistance (optional on Visa gold).

Among the gold-card bargains:

Amalgamated; Union Planters; Security; Oak Brook; and Primerica. With such bargains around, what draws 40 percent of the credit card market to the top ten major issuers? Marketing.

Citibank, American Express and other giants tout customer service and privileges of membership, but never in those ubiquitous ads will you hear mention of Citi's 19.8 percent interest rate or Amex's $55 annual fee.

Charter members of the AT&T Universal card club (those who signed up during its first year) did get a loaded, no-fee card plus discounts on AT&T long-distance calls. But those who sign up now pay a not-so-cheap interest rate and $20 a year, and no discount on calls. Discover offers a rebate on purchases, has no annual fee plenty of perks, but if you carry a balance, you'll pay 19.8 percent.

A new card from Ford is similar to Discover but has wider acceptance. You pay no annual fee, get a rebate on purchases and pay an introductory rate of 15.9%.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Dead wife's memory haunts man's romance with widow

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Abby is on a two-week vacation. Following is a selection of some of her favorite past letters.)

DEAR ABBY: I met a very attractive, eligible widower last winter, and we've been keeping steady company since.

My only complaint is the way he keeps talking all the time about Mildred, his deceased wife. I never talk about my deceased husband. Outside of that, he is a decent man, and we get along just fine.

He has asked to marry me, but this is the way he proposed to me: "How would you like to take Mildred's place?"

UNDECIDED

DEAR UNDECIDED: If he has a sense of humor, tell him that since Mildred is in the cemetery, you don't want to take her place. But if he wants a new life and a new wife, you'll consider it — providing he quits talking about Mildred.

DEAR ABBY: Our 24-year-old son is engaged to a beautiful but spoiled 21-year-old girl. She has broken two engagements (one after the wedding invitations were mailed), and now she has asked our son for more time to "think things over." Meanwhile, the invitations are supposed to go out next Monday.

We have counseled with our minister, and he is all for letting her "think it over," but our son is trying to talk her into going through with the wedding on the scheduled date.

Her parents are no help at all and are pushing for the wedding as planned because they would like to get this spoiled, flighty girl married and out of the house. Also, they are very fond of our son.

What should we do?
DETROIT DILEMMA

DEAR DILEMMA: I agree with your minister. I would give the bride all the time she needs to think it over. There are worse things than a late wedding. And one of them is an early divorce.

DEAR ABBY: I have never written to you before, but after reading about the old gentleman who is still making love often at the age of 85, I took the newspaper out of the trash can three times to make sure I had read it correctly.

I would sure like to hear his wife's side of this story. I'll bet she is sick to death of it. Or maybe she is like me, going through the motions and faking it.

I am a 65-year-old woman married to the most wonderful man in the world, and I have been faking it for years. How many letters have you gotten on this one? I would love to know.

"B" IN DALLAS

DEAR "B": Thus far, only a few, but I would welcome letters or postcards (unsigned, of course) from other females who have been "faking it" for years.

Panhandle Bird Watch

by Jan Elston

This article is a reminder for you to be watching for Hummingbirds, then, if you'd like, to participate in the very informal survey of 1991 fall migration of Hummers which should be moving through just any time. If a number of people will send in information, we should have a better idea of where and when to expect them, next fall.

Have you seen any Hummingbirds, yet, this summer? We were having lunch with some friends, last weekend, when I caught a brief glimpse of one female Hummer at some Marigolds. Unfortunately, we couldn't stay all day, waiting for that little bird to come back. It was there for an instant, but it was long enough to excite everyone in our group about the return of the Hummingbirds through the Panhandle.

About midweek, I talked with a lady who lives between Canadian and Spearman, and she said she had seen some Hummers in her yard for two days. More of them should be migrating into our area any day.

It is exciting to see Hummers at your feeder, or at your flowers, or even sitting on a wire or branch close to your house. Some people have the mistaken idea that Hummingbirds never stop flying. Hummers often perch, and the best way to get a positive identification is to observe the little bird with your binoculars as he is sitting still. Watch carefully, because the brilliant color display is not visible all the time, and what appears to be a black area on the bird's neck and throat may show to be the vivid, iridescent red of the Ruby-throated Hummingbird when the sunlight hits it just right. (This display of color is thought to be a defensive tactic, warning other Hummers to keep their distance.)

Do you need additional copies of the 1991 Hummingbird Survey? You can go by and get them at the Pampa News office. If you prefer just to write the information on a sheet of paper, please include any pertinent data, such as the dates the Hummers were first and last seen, the weather conditions, and whether they were seen at flowers or feeder. The general location is also important; for example, "near Central Park"; or "five miles north of McLean", etc. It isn't essential that you include your name or address, but you may, if you want to. Please identify the species of Hummers, if you can. (Those most likely to be seen in our area are the Black-Chinned, the Ruby-throated, and the Rufous. Other varieties which have been reported are the Broad-billed, the Caliope, and the Anna's).

Please mail the information to The Pampa News, P. O. Drawer 2198, Pampa, 79066-2198, and mark in the lower left corner of the envelope "Hummingbird survey", or you may take your survey information by the newspaper office.

Hummingbirds not only make a humming or buzzing sound with their wings; but they also make a humming or buzzing sound with their wings; but they also make a humming noise with their mouths, sometimes adding a high twittering sound, and even a shrill squeaking sound when alarmed.

The flight patterns most consistently observed in Hummers will be the hovering near a blossom or a feeder, then the quick daring moves into the food source; then they will fly up to a wire or branch, where they perch for a while before returning to the nectar. Sometimes they will perch on the tiny plastic railing which is on the side of some feeders. Always when sitting, they appear to be quite nervous, constantly alert for approaching danger. Since their first line of defense is speed, they are ready to fly off quickly at the first alarm.

One of the first Hummingbirds observed here in Pampa during last year's migration was seen at the blossoms of a Mimosa tree. Perhaps that same Hummer will soon be seen at that same tree. I hope you get to see these fascinating birds, very soon.

Most of the Western Kingbirds have left. It is always amazing that, after being in our area for several months, suddenly they're gone. Fewer Scissortails are around now, but there are more Nighthawks.

Several people have reported seeing Ibises in playa lakes in the Panhandle. We saw a huge flock of about eight dozen Ibises, as they circled, then landed near a lake east of Pampa. Others have been seen at those lakes at the curves between White Deer and Panhandle. They appear to be black, but when viewed with binocs, their iridescent maroon or greenish coloration is distinctive.

Sampras steams ahead, Agassi exits U.S. Open

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Forget flamboyant and fancy, and, by the way, Andre Agassi, as well, in the U.S. Open. Stick instead with staid and sturdy, the Pete Sampras basic white look.

Sampras and Agassi, contrasting finalists in the Open a year ago, began this year's tournament Monday and continued heading in different directions.

Defending champion Sampras, a splash of color across the right breast of his otherwise traditional white outfit, defeated Christo van Rensburg 6-0, 6-3, 6-2.

Agassi, resplendent in trendy black and white with red piping and his customary hair band, lost 7-5, 7-6 (7-3), 6-2 to Aaron Krickstein. The sweep stretched Agassi's Open losing streak to six straight sets, three in a row for the title against Sampras and three more against Krickstein.

Sampras admitted that he came in a little nervous, burdened by the defending champion designation.

"Once I got in control, I felt fine," he said. "I was very confident. I'm playing very good tennis and I think I'm peaking at the right time."

Sampras soared from the No. 12 seed to the championship last year, sneaking up on many of his opponents to become, at age 19, the youngest champion in the history of the tournament.

There is no sneaking up on anybody now.

"It's a bit different from last year," he said. "Now there's a little more pressure. I was a little tight and nervous at the beginning."

Sampras said the depth of the men's draw scares him a little. "I'm capable of winning," he said. "I know that. There are six, seven, eight players capable of winning this tournament."

Agassi, however, wasn't one of them after Krickstein got through with him.

"Actually, I came in pretty confident about the way I was playing,"

Agassi said. "I think he had a lot more to do with what happened than I did. He played unbelievable. I didn't think he would go out there firing those kind of shots so early."

Krickstein seized the opportunity. "I have always felt I was a big-point and big-match player," he said. "I feel if I played my best, I could beat a lot of the top guys."

"I was pretty fired up to give him my best shots. It was a good opportunity for me to show what I can do and fortunately, I took advantage of it."

Krickstein's upset was constructed on 61 unforced errors and continued Agassi's Grand Slam frustrations. Beaten in the finals of the French Open the last two years as well as the U.S. Open last year, he didn't make it out of the first round this time.

It marked the first time since 1986 that a previous year's finalist washed out in the first round the following year. John McEnroe was the victim that time.

McEnroe almost was a secondary casualty of Agassi's loss. Anticipating a long match between Krickstein and Agassi, McEnroe decided to get something to eat. The next thing he knew, Agassi was out and Mac was on center court against Glenn Layendecker, trailing 3-0.

"It was just one of my usual lousy starts," he said. "Bad concentration lapses. I wasn't ready to play. I was a little tentative."

He snapped out of it after a trademark tete-a-tete with a court-side heckler and the chair umpire and displayed flashes of his former brilliance in winning, 6-4, 6-3, 6-3.

"I played better at the end than I did at the beginning," McEnroe said.

Other seeded players advanced routinely in the first day of the two-week tournament. Defending women's champion Gabriela Sabatini, seeded No. 3, was down 4-1 in the first set against Nicole Provis before recovering for a 7-6, 6-3 victory.

No. 1 seed Steffi Graf opened with a 6-1, 6-2 victory over Andrea Temesvari, and No. 2 Monica Seles celebrated her return to Grand Slam tennis with a 6-2, 6-0 rebout of Nicole Arendt.

(AP Laserphoto)

Eighth seeded Andre Agassi returns a volley from Aaron Krickstein in first round action Monday

Jennifer Capriati, seeded No. 7, opened with a 6-1, 6-0 victory over Eva Pfaff and summed up the feelings of the favorites. "There's more interest with first-round upsets," she said. "But I don't mind how it went today."

Both Seles and Graf came into the Open as question marks. Seles is still recovering from shin splints that kept the Australian and Franch Open champion out of Wimbledon. Graf won that tournament but has been nursing a sore shoulder since then.

Cowboys cut 13 players

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING (AP) — Cliff Stoudt knew what could be coming Monday and like a blindsided blitz there was no way to dodge.

With Sunday's trade for Steve Bueerlein as the primary backup quarterback for Troy Aikman, Stoudt, a 12-year veteran, and rookie Bill Musgrave of Oregon, a fourth-round draft pick, were less valuable to Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson.

So they were among the 13 cuts he announced. One of them could be back as insurance on Tuesday, depending on waiver wire claims.

Under NFL rules, each club may identify one player (a 46th player) on its two-man inactive list who will dress for the game provided that the player is a quarterback and that the club has only two quarterbacks on its 45-player list. Johnson could reinstate Stoudt or Musgrave to the inactive roster if they aren't claimed.

"I'm 36 and Bueerlein is 26 so you see a trend developing there," Stoudt said. "They had told me I was the backup. I'm not very happy."

Stoudt completed only 5 of 19 passes against Atlanta on Friday night to put his backup spot in jeopardy. On Sunday, the Cowboys traded for Bueerlein of the Los Angeles Raiders for what is expected to be a fourth round pick in 1992.

Stoudt wasn't the only veteran who felt the knife.

The Cowboys also cut safeties Vince Albritton, an eight-year veteran, and Stan Smagala, a 1990 fifth-round pick; kick returner and wide receiver James Dixon, a three-year veteran; and wide receiver Derrick Shepard, a four-year veteran. Dixon had been impressive in preseason return kickoffs.

Other cuts included fullback Reginald Wamsley, a free agent; defensive back Odie Harris, a free agent, offensive linemen Freddie Childress, a free agent from Arkansas, and sixth-round draft pick Mike Sullivan of Miami; tight end Craig Hudson, a Plan B free agent from Green Bay, and guard James Richards, a third-round draft pick from California.

Veteran defensive lineman Dean Hamel was placed on the injured reserve and will be out for the season.

The Cowboys plan to bring several players back for the developmental squad if they pass through the league on waivers and Stoudt could be one of them.

"You never know," Stoudt said. "Everything is day to day in this league."

The youth-oriented Cowboys kept 11 rookies led by defensive tackle Russell Maryland of Miami, the top pick in the draft.

Other rookies making the team included wide receiver Alvin Harper of Tennessee, a late first round pick; running backs Curvin Richards of Pittsburgh, a fourth-round pick, and Ricky Blake, a free agent who played for the San Antonio Riders of the World League of American Football; defensive back Larry Brown of Texas Christian, a 12th round pick; linebackers Dixon Edwards of Michigan State, a second-round pick, Darrick Brownlow of Illinois, a fifth-round pick, and Godfrey Myles, a third-round pick from Florida; defensive end Tony Hill of Tennessee-Chattanooga, a fourth-round pick, offensive tackle Erik Williams of Central State (Ohio), a third-round pick, and Leon Lett of Emporia State, a defensive lineman who was a seventh-round selection.

"We're going to be a young team this year and when a team is young and talented you have to be patient," Johnson said. "There are a lot of Sundays we'll be happy and some when we'll be disappointed." It's not the most rookies ever kept in one year by the Cowboys.

In 1975, coach Tom Landry kept 12 rookies which were tabbed "The Dirty Dozen." The Cowboys eventually got to the Super Bowl that year but lost to Pittsburgh 21-17.

NFL rookies and veterans go through 'unkindest day of all'

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

Dexter Manley, Dave Duerson and a host of other one-time heroes were sent packing on Monday, the NFL's unkindest day of all.

The league's 28 teams got down to the 47-player limit by ridding themselves largely of two types — rookies and free agents and veterans who tried to hang on for another season.

"The toughest decisions I have to make are always with veterans that have contributed to the success we've had in the past," said Miami coach Don Shula, who cut linebacker Barry Krauss and cornerback Paul Lankford, who combined for 22 years of NFL experience.

For some like Manley, trying to come back from a drug suspension, it could be the end of a career.

For others it may be a day off — many are cut and brought back later in the week after teams place players they want to keep around on injured reserve.

"It's like playing poker. You're trying not to show your hand," said Denver coach Dan Reeves. "You've got to bluff somewhat."

For still others, it's a temporary interruption before they're signed by another team. Bubba Paris, left tackle for the 49ers before being cut last week, was signed by the Colts on Monday.

And for rookies, it may be a few days in limbo before they go to a developmental squad. That means they can practice but can't play unless they clear waivers again.

Some big-name holdouts continued to trickle in, including San Diego running back Marion Butts and Buffalo linebacker Darryl Talley.

CAREER'S END?

Some veterans who lost their jobs: — Manley, who joined the Cards last year after being reinstated by commissioner Paul Tagliabue following a year's suspension for substance abuse. Released by Washington after the suspension, he was the often outspoken hub of the Redskins' defense during the mid '80s and is fifth on the NFL's all-time sack list with 91.

— Duerson, who won Super Bowl rings with both the Bears and Giants and was a Pro Bowler with the Bears and was cut by New York.

— Donald Igwebuikwe, who was accused of heroin smuggling last October and found innocent in April, was cut by the Vikings, meaning Fuad Reveziz will be the kicker. The Vikings also cut receiver Leo Lewis, an 11-year man, and running back Darin Nelson, a 10-year man who had returned after being dispatched in the Herschel Walker deal.

— Linebacker Jerry Robinson, a 13-year-veteran cut by the Raiders. He goes all the way back to the Eagles' 1980 Super Bowl team.

— Defensive lineman Andre Townsend, 29, a part-time starter on the Broncos' three Super Bowl teams in 1986, 1987 and 1988.

— Guard Billy Ard, a starter on the Giants' 1986 Super Bowl team. He was cut by Green Bay, could be reactivated after the roster is set. The Packers also cut Mark Lee, a starting cornerback for the Packers for most of his 12-year career.

— Eddie Johnson, an 11-year veteran who was once part of one of the NFL's best linebacking corps with the Browns.

— David Galloway, once the Cards' best defensive lineman, cut by the Broncos.

— Disgruntled strong safety Terry Kinard and kick returner Gerald McNeil by the Oilers.

— Running back Stanford Jennings of the Bengals, best known for his 93-yard kickoff return for a touchdown that nearly won the 1989 Super Bowl with San Francisco.

— Ron Brown, 30, a gold-medal winner in the relay in the 1984 Olympics and once the league's best kick returners with the Rams. He was cut by the Raiders.

NO. 1 TO GONE

Linebacker Anthony Bell, the fifth overall pick in the 1986 draft, was cut by the Cardinals. Bell was a symbol of the bad drafts that have left Phoenix at the bottom.

Other former No. 1s to go included wide receiver Kenny Jackson by Philadelphia; defensive lineman Jason Buck by Cincinnati; Terrance Flagger by San Francisco and defensive end Bob Buczkowski by the Seahawks.

Mavericks' Tarpley faces two years in jail if convicted

DALLAS (AP) — A judge has been asked to suppress all statements made at the time Dallas Mavericks star Roy Tarpley was arrested on charge of driving while intoxicated.

In a motion filed Monday, defense lawyer Jay Ethington asked that all statements made at the time of the arrest be suppressed. Ethington also said he was questioning the credibility of some of the police officers.

"Every barrel has a bad apple or two," said Ethington.

Jury selection was to begin Monday, but Ethington's pre-trial motions to suppress delayed jury selection for at least a day.

The motions hinged on the subpoenaed testimony of Linda Adams, an unauthorized passenger in one of the arresting officers' patrol cars. Ethington said authorities tried to prevent Ms. Adams from becoming a witness in the case.

"She saw things, heard things, knows things that would be very helpful to both the judge and the jury," Ethington said.

Ms. Adams testified Monday that Tarpley did not appear to be intoxicated when he was pulled over, contradicting officers' testimony.

Arresting officer Cpl. Paul Ellzey contradicted Ms. Adams' statements and testified that he saw Tarpley drinking and driving.

Dallas police told the Dallas Times Herald Monday that officer David Nevitt violated the department's policy by allowing Ms. Adams, who had not signed a waiver of city liability, to ride in the police car.

If District Judge Mike Schwille grants the defense motion, the state's primary evidence against Tarpley would be eliminated because Tarpley refused to take a breath test and did not receive a blood test.

Tarpley was accompanied to the courtroom by his mother, Selenera Tarpley.

Tarpley, 26, faces two years in jail and a $2,000 fine if convicted. He faces up to an additional year in jail if Schwille revokes the two-year probation he placed Tarpley on Sept. 5 for a 1989 drunken driving incident.

Tarpley was arrested March 30 in Dallas on a charge of driving while intoxicated. He was suspended indefinitely without pay for violating his NBA-mandated aftercare program for substance abuse.

It was the second suspension for Tarpley, a two-time offender of the NBA's anti-drug program. After a DWI arrest in November 1989, Tarpley was suspended without pay for 33 games, costing him $225,365.

Angels call on Buck Rodgers to save sinking ship

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — The Angels, who fell from first place to last in the AL West in a month, fired manager Doug Rader and replaced him with Buck Rodgers.

Rodgers, fired as manager by the Montreal Expos on June 2, signed a three-year contract on Monday to take over a team that has failed to win a division title under Rader despite the acquisition of such stars as Dave Winfield, Mark Langston and Gary Gaetti.

The Angels moved into first place by one percentage point over the Twins with a 44-33 record on July 3, but then lost 19 of their next 27 games to fall into last place on Aug. 4 with a 52-52 record.

California has been in last place since, with a low point coming last Thursday when a 2-1 loss to Oakland put them 15 games behind the Twins.

Rader, under contract through the 1992 season, was let go despite the Angels' three-game sweep of the Red Sox that left them 13 games behind Minnesota entering Monday night's game against the Tigers.

The 47-year-old Rader is the seventh manager to be fired this season, while Rodgers is the first of the group to be rehired. Other managers fired this season were the Indians' John McNamara, Don Zimmer of the Cubs, Nick Leyva of Phillies, John Wathan of the Royals, and Frank Robinson of the Orioles.

The Angels won eight of their final 13 games under Rader but it was their inability to beat the three-time division champion Athletics, who won 12 of 13 games against California.

Rader was hired before the 1989 season and made an immediate impact as the team went from 75-87 in 1988 to 91-71 and a third-place finish in 1990.

But last year, when they were expected to challenge the A's, the Angels fell to 80-82 and finished fourth in the AL West. And the high hopes this season were dashed in last month's collapse.

Rader previously managed the Rangers from 1983-85 — he was fired early in the 1985 season after the Rangers lost 23 of their first 32 games. His overall record as a manager is 388-417.

The 53-year-old Rodgers played for the Angels from 1961-69. A switch-hitting catcher, he was a lifetime .232 hitter. He was the catcher when Bo Belinsky pitched a no-hitter in 1962.

Saberhagen adds no-hitter to his laurels

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

(AP Laserphoto)

By now, almost all of us have seen the play that saved Bret Saberhagen's no-hitter. So was it a hit or an error?

Dan Pasqua thought he deserved a hit, and the scoreboard operator at Royals Stadium thought so, too. But Kirk Gibson thought he committed an error, and the official scorer, whose opinion was the only one that counted, agreed.

That resolved, sort of, Saberhagen went back to business. The two-time Cy Young winner finished the first no-hitter of his career and the seventh of the season, pitching the Royals past the White Sox 7-0.

"Now I know how Nolan (Ryan) feels like," Saberhagen said. "I realize what I've accomplished and it's something I'll always look back on."

In other games, the Blue Jays beat the Orioles 5-2 and the Tigers defeated the Angels 5-1, leaving the winners tied for first place in the AL East. And, the Twins beat the Indians 5-3 to take an eight-game lead in the AL West, their biggest edge of the season.

American League

Elsewhere, the Red Sox beat the Athletics 3-0, the Rangers trounced the Yankees 10-2 and the Mariners stopped the Brewers 5-4 in 14 innings.

The White Sox lost their seventh straight game. Saberhagen, meanwhile, almost lost his no-hitter in the fifth inning.

With one out, Pasqua sliced a long liner over Gibson's head in left field. Gibson ran back toward the alley, jumped at the front edge of the warning track and the ball grazed off his glove as Pasqua pulled into second base.

"I didn't know what the official scorer was going to do," Saberhagen said.

The first time Saberhagen looked at the 12-story-high scoreboard, he saw the hit column change from "0" to "1." Then, as he prepared to pitch to the next batter, he heard a big cheer from the 25,164 fans.

"You can pretty well tell by the crowd's reaction. I heard the crowd and I figured what happened," Saberhagen said.

Even though he did not look back until the inning ended, he had guessed right. The scoreboard operator had made his call before the official scorer made his. And, after scorer Del Black looked at several replays, a big "E" in red letters flashed up.

"I thought the ball was catchable," said Black, a former baseball writer for the Kansas City Star. "He was there waiting for it. It didn't appear that he was straining to catch it. It looked like he was under control to get into position to field the ball."

Gibson, not exactly a Gold Glover, concurred.

"It was the proper call," he said. "I guess it's a side note to the no-hitter. I think it was a good play to get an error on.

"On a play like that, I put myself into the position to make the play and I didn't make it, so the error is appropriate, whether or not it would've been a good catch or not," Gibson said.

Pasqua thought it might've gone the other way.

"I hit it pretty well. I didn't crush it, but I hit it good enough to get a hit out of it. But I guess the official scorer thought different."

Royals manager Hal McRae preferred not to talk about the play.

"It's something we shouldn't talk about. He pitched a no-hitter. The less said the better," he said.

Saberhagen (10-6) struck out five and walked two. The closest he had ever come to a no-hitter was a series of five two-hitters.

"Some guys get no-hitters without no-hitter stuff," White Sox manager Jeff Torborg said. "There was no luck involved here. He earned it. After the controversial call, he just cranked it up another level. He was really throwing hard after that."

Then again, Saberhagen was due for a great game. Throughout his career, the 27-year-old right-hander has pitched poorly in even-numbered years and bounced back with great seasons in odd-numbered ones.

Saberhagen won the Cy Young in 1985 and 1989. He was the World Series MVP in 1985.

"This is terrific, but there will never be anything better than the World Series. The World Series thing was an individual award, but this is a team game," Saberhagen said.

Saberhagen pitched the fourth no-hitter in Royals' history, joining Steve Busby, who had two, and Jim Colborn, who pitched the last one on May 14, 1977.

Saberhagen joined Nolan Ryan, Tommy Greene, Mark Gardner, Dennis Martinez, Wilson Alvarez and four Baltimore pitchers in throwing no-hitters this season. Alvarez, a rookie with the White Sox, was the last to do it on Aug. 11.

Last season, there were a record nine no-hitters. The 16 no-hitters in these two years are one more than the total during the entire 1980s.

Todd Benzinger drove in three runs as the Royals beat Charlie Hough (7-8). Red Sox 3, Athletics 0

Roger Clemens pitched a three-hitter and struck out 10, leading Boston over Oakland.

Clemens (13-8) walked one and won for just the second time in 10 starts since the All-Star break. He improved to 5-0 lifetime against Mike Moore (12-8).

The Red Sox had lost three in a row. The host Athletics have dropped four straight.

Jack Clark and Phil Plantier homered for the Red Sox. Clark, however, tore a calf muscle on his home run swing and limped around the bases, and may miss for several days.

Tigers 5, Angels 1

Mark Leiter stretched Detroit's winning streak to seven games as the Tigers spoiled the managerial debut of the Angels' Buck Rodgers. In the afternoon, Rodgers, fired earlier this season as manager of the Expos, took over when Doug Rader was fired.

Leiter (7-2) has won five straight decisions, the longest winning streak by a Tigers pitcher this season. He gave up seven hits in six innings and Dan Gakel finished for his second save.

Lou Whitaker and Travis Fryman each had three hits for the Tigers. Joe Grahe (1-6) has lost all six starts this season.

Blue Jays 5, Orioles 2

Jimmy Key (13-9) got his 100th career victory in snapping a personal three-game losing streak. He gave up two runs in six innings and joined Dave Stieb and Jim Clancy as Blue Jays with 100 victories.

Reliever Mike Timlin struck out five in two innings and Tom Henke pitched the ninth for his 30th save.

Devon White homered off Dave Johnson (4-5) as Toronto won for the third time in four games.

Twins 5, Indians 3

Kevin Tapani (12-7) won his seventh straight decision as the Twins improved to 8-0 against the Indians this season.

Shane Mack, Brian Harper and Kirby Puckett homered for the Twins. The Indians helped the Twins last weekend by sweeping a three-game series from the second-place White Sox.

Tapani, who gave up two runs and six hits in eight innings, is 10-1 in his last 16 starts. Rick Aguilera pitched the ninth for his 34th save.

Dave Otto (1-4) allowed five runs and 10 hits in eight innings.

Rangers 10, Yankees 2

Rafael Palmeiro, Kevin Reimer, Geno Petralli and Julio Franco each homered as the Rangers won at Yankee Stadium.

Reimer hit a solo homer, Palmeiro and Franco hit two-run drives and Petralli added a three-run shot. Petralli's last homer was June 20, 1989, a span of 544 at-bats.

Kevin Brown (9-10) gave up five hits in eight innings. The Yankees scored two runs on four hits in the sixth. Eric Plunk (2-3) left after Petralli connected.

Braves, Dodgers rally to victory; St. Louis gains on Pirates

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer

With the Braves trailing the Expos 7-1, it was almost certain there would be no celebrating this night in the Atlanta clubhouse.

Then the Braves rallied and it appeared they would end a season-long quest for a share of the lead in the National League West. The front-running Dodgers were losing 3-0 at Chicago.

National League

After the Braves had won 14-9 and the cheers died down, there was a buzz of anticipation as a small crowd of 12,889 filed out of Atlanta Fulton County Stadium realizing they were about to get good news.

But the Dodgers rallied for four runs at Chicago, precluding a party in the parking lot.

Elsewhere, it was Cincinnati 5, Philadelphia 4; San Diego 7, Pittsburgh 5 in 10 innings; St. Louis 7, San Francisco 6, and New York 6, Houston 4 in 10 innings.

Atlanta rookie Mark Wohlers (1-0) pitched two scoreless innings, allowing one hit while striking out two and walking two. Bill Sarnen (6-4), who relieved Montreal starter Chris Haney following Blauser's slam, took the loss.

Montreal got a three-run homer by Tim Wallach in the first, and still led 7-2 when Blauser hit his 10th home run in a five-run fifth.

Justice, who missed 47 games with a bad back before being activated Aug. 20, hit his 13th homer for an 8-7 lead. The homer scored Ron Gant, who had reached on an error by Wallach at third.

Dodgers 4, Cubs 3

Juan Samuel had a decisive two-run double as the Dodgers did all their scoring in the ninth inning at Wrigley Field.

Mike Scioscia led off the inning with a single and advanced to second when Lenny Harris reached on a throwing error by third baseman Chico Walker. Pinch-hitter Dave Hansen grounded out to advance the runners and bring on Chuck McLeroy (5-2) in relief of Rick Sutcliffe.

Pinch-hitter Mitch Webster bunted to first to score Scioscia, and Brett Butler doubled to right-center to score Harris and bring on Les Lancaster. He allowed Samuel's double to the right-center field wall.

Reliever Jim Gott (3-3) pitched one-hit ball over two innings. Jay Howell got the final three batters for his 14th save.

Sutcliffe struck out four and walked five over 8 1-3 innings. Sutcliffe had been on the disabled list twice this season with a weak right shoulder.

Mets 6, Astros 4

Mackey Sasser had three hits, including a 10th-inning double that drove in the decisive run at the Astrodome.

John Franco (3-7) pitched two scoreless innings. Dwayne Henry (3-2) allowed the Mets' 10th-inning runs.

Keith Miller walked with one out in the 10th and moved to second on an infield single by Howard Johnson. Sasser then doubled in Miller, and Rick Cerone singled in Johnson.

The Astros had tied the score 4-4 in

Tascosa intimidates PHS in volleyball

TASCOSA - The Pampa High School varsity and junior varsity volleyball squads lost Monday night to determined Tascosa High School teams.

"Tascosa has one of the strongest teams in the Panhandle," said PHS varsity volleyball coach Denise Reed today.

"We were terribly intimidated and didn't play well," said Reed of the first game in the best-of-three match. "We got after them in the second game."

Reed said the third game was "much closer than the score indicates."

According to Reed, the Tascosa varsity girls won the first game 15-1 and Pampa rallied to take the second 15-9. Tascosa took the final 15-1.

LaTanya Jefferey scored four points and Veronica Santacruz accounted for four points.

The varsity squad has a 4-5 overall record. In junior varsity action, Tascosa took two straight games, 15-3 and 15-1, to win the match.

Misty Plunk scored three points for Pampa. Thejunior varsity team has a 2-1 record.

Hurricane Bob proves to be second most expensive storm in U.S. history

By JONATHAN YENKIN
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Hurricane Bob ranks as the second most expensive hurricane in U.S. history, but it was the path of the storm rather than its severity that made it so costly, insurance experts say.

The hurricane caused about $780 million damage to insured property during its sweep through the densely populated Northeast, an insurance group said.

"If this had occurred over the Sahara Desert, it would not have been such a significant event," said Gary Kerney, claims consultant with American Insurance Services Group Inc., a trade group that prepared the damage estimate.

The estimate was released Monday, one week after the hurricane hit New England, damaging buildings, boats and farmland, and knocking out power to more than 2 million utility customers. Crews worked Monday to restore power to the last several thousand people who were without electricity.

The damage total ranks Bob a distant second behind Hurricane Hugo, which caused $4.2 billion worth of insured losses in the Caribbean and southeastern United States in September 1989.

Kerney said inflation helped Bob achieve a lofty ranking. For instance, Hurricane Frederic, which caused $752.5 million worth of insured damage in the southern and north central United States in 1979, undoubtedly would have cost more than Bob if the storm had hit in 1991, Kerney said.

Hurricane Gloria, which hit New England in 1985, caused $418.7 million in insured damage.

One insurer, Metropolitan Property and Casualty Co., based in Warwick, R.I., said it expects up to 5,500 claims across New England. Most claims appear to be under $2,000, a company spokesman said.

Overall, the largest losses occurred in Massachusetts, with $525 million in insured damage; followed by Rhode Island, $115 million; New York, $75 million; Connecticut, $40 million; Maine, $21 million; and North Carolina, $4 million.

There was also damage in New Hampshire, but that state was not included in the total because the damage there was not considered catastrophic, Kerney said.

The estimate covers losses only for insured property, which does not include flood damage unless the property owner had specific coverage, or other losses such as lost income to businesses.

Massachusetts, Maine and Rhode Island have applied to the federal government for disaster relief.

President Bush declared Rhode Island a disaster area Monday, clearing the way for federal cleanup aid, said Ed Quinlan, spokesman for Sen. John H. Chafee, R-R.I.

Disaster aid generally helps cover the cost of repairing bridges, roads and other damaged public property, as well as some private property that is uninsured.

Massachusetts estimated it had $69 million in damage to public property, compared with a total projected loss of nearly $1 billion in the state, including destruction of private property and economic losses.

Damage to public property in Rhode Island was estimated at $9 million; in Maine it was $2.5 million.

Suspect in Florida student slayings linked to triple murder in Louisiana

By JAMES MARTINEZ
Associated Press Writer

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The prime suspect in the slayings of five college students in Gainesville a year ago is also under suspicion in a 1989 triple murder in his Louisiana hometown.

A police affidavit outlining authorities' suspicions was made public Monday as Danny Harold Rolling went on trial in an unrelated holdup of a Tampa grocery store. Opening arguments were set to begin today.

Rolling, 37, has been identified by police as the prime suspect in the grisly slayings that terrorized students in Gainesville.

Shreveport, La., police investigating the triple murder traveled to Rolling's cell in Tampa last week to take blood, saliva and hair samples.

The affidavit from Shreveport Detective Don Ashley said Rolling's saliva will be compared to saliva from a bite mark on the breast of Julie Grissom, 24, who was stabbed to death with her father and an 8-year-old nephew in their home.

Authorities believe Ms. Grissom was the killer's primary target.

The saliva found on Ms. Grissom's breast was from a person with Type B blood who secretes his blood type into his bodily fluids, the affidavit said. It's the same makeup Rolling is listed as having, the document said. About a fourth of all males don't secrete blood chemicals into their body fluids.

Hair taken from Rolling's car was found by the FBI to have similar characteristics to hairs from the Grissom house, the affidavit said.

Investigators said fresh blood, saliva and hair samples were needed to confirm their suspicions. They said it would take months before those tests are concluded.

The affidavit also said Rolling lived in Shreveport during late 1989, jogged at the same track as Ms. Grissom, and on the day of the slayings was fired from his job at a restaurant, a mile from her home.

Investigators have long noted the similarities between the Shreveport slayings and those in Gainesville, particularly how some of the victims in each of the killings were scrubbed clean and posed for maximum shock value.

The Tampa robbery charges carry a possible life sentence.

TENSION HEADACHES

If you're bothered by headaches that seem to have their origin at the base of your skull, you may be suffering from tension headaches.

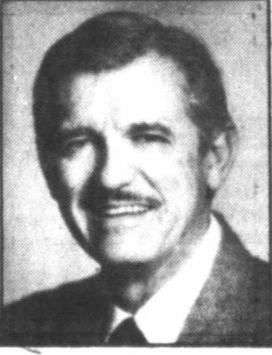

Tension headaches can be caused by an irritation of the nerves in the area of the spine immediately under the skull. These are called the suboccipital nerves. They pass through small openings in the spinal column to muscles in the surrounding area. Any abnormal pressure of dysfunction of neck and muscles can irritate the nerves, causing tension.

The tension doesn't cause the headache. To treat this form of headache, attention should be paid to the bone and muscle structures. They should be returned to normal balance so they can function properly again.

Medication is not the answer to tension headaches. Aspirin and other painkillers may give you temporary relief but they won't solve the problem. Once the source of the problem is found and treated, THEN you can get the relief you need.
