Utah gunman kills hospital employee

By PEG McENTEE
Associated Press Writer

SANDY, Utah (AP) — A man armed with explosives shot and killed a nurse and took over a hospital maternity wing Saturday. He gave up more than 17 hours later, releasing nine hostages, including three infants, unharmed.

Richard L. Worthington, a 39-year-old father of eight, was taken into custody at Alta View Hospital, where he said he had gone to kill a doctor who had operated on his wife two years ago, police said.

"During initial negotiations he wanted his wife and the doctor, and he wanted to kill the doctor," said Salt Lake Police Sgt. Don Bell, part of a team of hostage negotiators who talked with Worthington by telephone during the standoff.

The doctor, obstetrician Glade Curtis, said Worthington had threatened him repeatedly since he performed surgery to tie off the fallopian tubes of Worthington's wife, Karen. He escaped when Worthington took over the maternity ward.

Explosives were found in the maternity wing and were being disarmed by federal agents, said Police Chief Gary Leonard.

The freed hostages were shuttled into an ambulance and driven away. Several were hugging each other. Some wept. Hundreds of yards away, members of Worthington's family did the same.

Worthington's older brother, Allen, said he was relieved.

"I hoped it would end this way because I love my brother," he said.

Worthington gave himself up when authorities assured he would be safe, Leonard said.

Worthington began negotiating by telephone with police surrounding the hospital about 15 hours into the standoff, Leonard said.

Worthington said he had refused to sign a content form for the surgery, which prevents pregnancy, and insisted his wife hadn't consented to the operation, Bell said.

"He said they were all liars, they were all cheaters. He said, 'Those doctors raped my wife,'" Bell said, his voice hoarse after hours of negotiations.

Worthington told negotiators he was carrying dynamite and "would blow the place up" if police rushed the building, said police Sgt. Terry Pepper.

Police said Worthington held six adults and three infants on the top floor of a maternity wing connected to the main building by an enclosed skywalk. Police said he allowed nurses to care for infants.

Authorities hadn't said why Worthington went to the hospital.

Dr. Glade Curtis, an obstetrician who escaped from the maternity wing, said he performed surgery to tie off the fallopian tubes of Worthington's wife, Karen, two years before. He said Worthington had threatened him repeatedly since the surgery.

Authorities declined to say whether Worthington had been trying to get to Curtis.

More than 70 officers cordoned off the area and evacuated residents of three blocks east of the building in this Salt Lake City suburb. Land to the west, north and south is vacant.

Dr. Brent Mabey, an Alta View emergency room physician who treated the victim, Karla Roth, 37, said a clerk ran into the hospital shortly after midnight to say a man with a shotgun had just blown out a window in the adjacent Women's Health Center.

When police arrived, they found a woman who had been shot in the hospital's parking lot, Mabey said.

"We got her on a stretcher and took her back into the emergency department. She did not survive," Mabey said.

Roth, who was married, had been hired Sept. 5 but had only worked in the emergency room for two nights, said hospital administrator Douglas Fennesbeck.

"It's just awful," he said. "A hospital is supposed to be a safe place, isn't it?"

Shortly after the standoff began, police shot out lights that might have revealed the positions of special weapons teams.

Worthington's wife and the local Mormon bishop were at the scene but kept from reporters. The couple has eight children, the oldest a senior in high school and the youngest about 2.

Neighbors and friends described Worthington as a quiet man, something of a loner, with a strong work ethic and a love for his children.

"He took them everywhere, even when he went to work," said Alice Whitmore, a longtime friend who lives three doors up the street in the middle-class suburban neighborhood.

"He's just kind of an odd guy. He doesn't seem to communicate very well," said Jeff Parker, a neighbor across the street from the Worthingtons. "He's not a likable guy, but I never thought he would do anything like that. I've never had any good dealings with him."

Jess Gomez, a spokesman for Alta View Hospital, said the remaining 32 patients were evacuated from the 75-bed hospital and moved to other hospitals.

Sheriff, surety company sued over return of seized property

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

A lawsuit was filed last week in 223rd District Court against Gray County Sheriff Jim Free and Western Surety Co., the sheriff's surety, alleging the sheriff returned seized property without proper authority.

Jarmila Inc. filed the lawsuit Thursday naming the sheriff and the surety company.

According to the lawsuit, Jarmila had leased some property to David Caldwell Jr., individually, and doing business as Global Steel Inc. On Sept. 19, 1989, Jarmila sued Caldwell to recover money that was due in rent, ad valorem taxes, costs of weed control and other items.

Along with the lawsuit, the corporation filed a landlord's application and affidavit for distress warrant. Former Justice of the Peace Wayne Roberts issued an order directing for the issuance of the distress warrant and authorizing the sheriff to seize $9,432.08 worth of Caldwell's property.

"The Distress Warrant instructed the sheriff to attach and hold the property of Caldwell that was not exempt by statute ...," according to the lawsuit.

The lawsuit states that the sheriff was further instructed to "keep it safely in your possession unless it is replevied according to law, or subject to the further orders of the court having jurisdiction."

Caldwell's property was seized and held until about Oct. 3, 1989, when the sheriff released the property to Caldwell, according to the lawsuit, in violation of the court's order.

Free said Friday that he had no information about the returning of the property to Caldwell. He said former chief deputy Ken Kieth turned the property back to Caldwell.

"It was a deal Ken Kieth did when he was here. He had seized some property on an execution and this other guy's attorney called and talked him into turning it loose, so Ken turned it loose. I was never notified of it," Free said.

On July 10, 1990, Jarmila Inc. obtained a judgment in 223rd District Court against Caldwell and Global Steel Inc. for a total of $15,355.69, including $2,500 in attorneys fees. The judgment includes $900 for delinquent rent; $205.69 for delinquent ad valorem taxes; $4,000 for property removed by Caldwell from the property; $250 as value of unleased real property which was used by Caldwell; and $7,500 required to clean the property.

The lawsuit alleges that because the sheriff released all of Caldwell's property to him, there was no property remaining to help satisfy the $15,355.69 judgment.

"The sheriff of Gray County and/or his deputies acting in his behalf refused or neglected to retain the property of Caldwell seized to satisfy the directions and instructions contained in the distress warrant," the lawsuit says.

The releasing of the property were "breaches of his (the sheriff's) official duties for which he and his surety are liable," the lawsuit states.

The lawsuit also states that the sheriff is liable to the plaintiffs for all damages they have sustained because he violated Section 85.021 of the Texas Local Government Code.

The lawsuit seeks the $15,355.69 judgment plus interest on the money and attorneys fees.

Braun sentenced to life in prison

By DEBORAH BAKER
Associated Press Writer

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Gregg Francis Braun was sentenced Friday to life in prison for the 1989 murder of a convenience store clerk after jurors disagreed on the death penalty.

The Kansas man will spend at least 36 1/2 years behind bars for the slaying of Geraldine Valdez of Springer during a robbery, lawyers said.

Braun also is charged with the murders of four people in Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas, including E.P. "Pete" Spurrier of Pampa on July 20, 1989. Kansas wants him next, and Braun may agree to extradition, his lawyer said.

Braun, 30, of Garden City, Kan., apologized twice in court Friday to the Valdez family, calling his crime a "sick and evil thing to do."

He had pleaded guilty but mentally ill, which under New Mexico law means the defendant was mentally ill but did not meet the criteria for legal insanity.

It was the first time a New Mexico jury was asked to sentence to death a defendant determined to be mentally ill, said defense lawyer Gary Mitchell of Ruidoso.

The jury of seven women and five men deliberated about 80 minutes and agreed that Braun killed Valdez because she was a witness to the robbery — an aggravating circumstance prosecutors said justified a death sentence.

But there was no unanimous agreement to impose capital punishment, making the life sentence automatic. The jury did not say how it split on the matter.

State District Judge Jay Harris of Las Vegas, N.M., immediately sentenced Braun to a life term in the state penitentiary, a guaranteed 30 years. That would be followed by the 13-year sentence for armed robbery, which Braun has begun and for which he would serve at least 6 1/2 years.

Braun's father, a lawyer, tearfully declined comment after the verdict was announced. Valdez's husband, Elito Valdez, a correctional officer at the New Mexico Boys School, also declined to speak.

"I'm disappointed for the Valdezes — they didn't want it this way," said Ruth Hessman of Dodge City, Kan. Braun is charged with killing her daughter, Mary Rains, of Garden City.

Before closing arguments, Braun — thin and pale in a dark suit — stood and faced Elito Valdez and his daughter, Suzanne Baze. He apologized for the pain he caused them.

Regardless of the sentence, he said, "I will forever live in shame and guilt over what I've done."

He apologized again after the verdict.

Mitchell made an emotional appeal to religion and morality in his closing argument to the jury, calling the death penalty "stupid and uncivilized and un-God-like."

Braun should be allowed to live and be treated for his severe mental illness, he said.

"It seems to me that we should be angels and not executioners," said Mitchell, who cried as he addressed the jury.

Deputy District Attorney Leslie Skinner of Raton said Braun was the executioner, shooting Valdez twice in the head at close range so that she could never testify against him.

His mental illness was not an excuse, Skinner said.

Psychologist and drug expert Douglas Ferraro testified that Braun suffers from severe borderline personality disorder, which is marked by instability and unpredictable and often violent behavior. He also has a substance abuse disorder, he said.

Long-term treatment could help Braun, said Ferraro, former head of the psychology department at the University of New Mexico.

Former Lefors resident given deferred adjudication for arson case

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

A former Lefors resident, now of White Deer, received deferred adjudication of eight years probation Friday as part of a plea bargain arrangement in an arson case.

Albert Don "Country" Schroeder, 40, made his plea before 223rd District Judge Lee Waters.

Schroeder waived his right to be indicted by a grand jury and made his plea on information. He also waived his right to a jury trial.

Schroeder testified that he set a trash can on fire, starting a blaze, at a house he owned at 204 W. 1st St. in Lefors. He said he had lived at the residence for five years and has lived in White Deer for about a month.

The fire was in the early-morning hours of Sept. 2. He said he started the fire about 2:30 a.m. The Lefors Volunteer Fire Department was called to the blaze about 7 a.m.

Questioned by District Attorney Harold Comer as to why he started the fire, Schroeder said he and his wife were divorced on Aug. 21 of this year and in an attempt to get their marriage back together he decided to burn the house because she never liked the house. He said he thought that if his ex-wife knew they would not be returning to that house, they might be able to get back together.

"I was trying to work the marriage back together," Schroeder testified. "... She didn't want to live there. She wasn't happy with the house."

Comer asked, "So you thought you could just eliminate the house?"

"Yes, sir," Schroeder replied. Asked if he set the fire to gather insurance proceeds, Schroeder said, "No, sir."

As part of the plea bargain agreement, Schroeder was also fined $1,500 and must pay costs associated with the investigation of the arson fire by the State Fire Marshal's office. He was also ordered not to file an insurance claim as a result of the arson.

Arson is a second-degree felony, punishable by a maximum 20 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Deferred adjudication means that if a defendant successfully completes the probationary period he will not have a felony conviction on his record. However, if during the course of probation a defendant is found in violation of his probation, he can be brought back before the court, have his guilt adjudicated and be subject to the full range of punishment for the offense.

Rare 'Mein Kampf' volume missing from library

ATHENS, Texas (AP) — A rare volume of Mein Kampf was missing Saturday from the Clint W. Murchison Memorial Library. Authorities said the book by Adolf Hitler apparently was stolen overnight.

In the place where the book had been on display under a plexiglass dome, library personnel found a hand-written note that said, "Nazi trash like this should be destroyed." Athens, a town of about 9,000, is the seat of Henderson County, about 70 miles southeast of Dallas. The book was donated to the library in 1974, after a journey that began in 1945. An American soldier, 1st Sgt. Glenn Jackson, reportedly discovered the copy in the castle of a Nazi party member and sent the Mein Kampf volume to his sister in Illinois. The book later was sold to a friend of Murchison, who donated it to the library. The Defense Department later verified the book as only three of its kind known to exist.

The 18-by-24 inch volume is bound in a white calfskin cover with oak boards. It's embossed in gold with the Mein Kampf title, and Nazi swastika and eagle. The title is German for "my struggle." In the book, Hitler gave a fanciful account of his life and set down his political ideas. He described the alleged superiority of the German people and said that the good of Germany ranked above all other values.

Car wash teamwork

The skies may still have been a little cloudy from last week's cool weather, but Saturday saw a warming trend get under way as the Pampa High School Choir Boosters joined with choir members for a fund-raising car wash at the National Bank of Commerce parking lot on Hobart Street. The proceeds will go towards the choir's projects and trips.

Coronado Hospital to have cancer seminar

Dr. Rene Grabato and Dr. Joe Donaldson will be the featured speakers at a seminar to be held Tuesday evening for the promotion of Prostate Cancer Awareness Week.

Dr. Grabato will also be conducting free screening exams at Coronado Hospital on Saturday.

The seminar will begin at 7 p.m. in the hospital's cafeteria.

Grabato has added several pieces of high-tech equipment to his office recently, including the Proscan Ultrasonic Ultrasound System, which is an imaging device used to aid in diagnosing problems with the prostate, kidneys, bladder and scrotum; and the Endotek urodynamic evaluation machine used for patients with urinary stress incontinence and other voiding dysfunctions.

The Proscan ultrasound device uses high frequency sound waves to pick up spots on the prostate as small as 3 millimeters. Since prostate cancer is now the number one cause of cancer in men, early detection is vital to saving lives.

"The way to diagnose prostate cancer has been to have a rectal exam every six months," Dr. Grabato said, "and that's still a good idea. However, a blood test called PSA (prostatic specific antigen) and the prostatic ultrasound helps pick up cancers in the very early stages, which means a better cure rate."

In addition to the diagnostic equipment, he can also do in-office cystoscopy, prostatic biopsy, vasectomy, evaluation and treatment of male erectile dysfunction and impotence, male infertility, kidney stones and urinary tract abnormalities in both adults and children.

Grabato recently attended the American Urological Association's seminar "Advances in the Diagnosis and Treatment of Benign Prostatic Hyperplasia" and "The Role of Ultrasound in the Early Detection of Prostatic Cancer."

"Although the benign prostate disease is not as deadly as a malignant tumor, it can still cause suffering for men. According to statistics I just read, over 14 million American men over age 50 endure the pain and peril of an enlarged prostate gland, but do nothing about it," he said.

He said the seminar he attended focused on diagnostic procedures and new therapies, including other options in the treatment of prostatic hyperplasia other than the usual TURP (transurethral resection of the prostate), a very common surgery for older men.

"At the conference I just attended, many urologists from the bigger cities were amazed that we had such advanced equipment in Pampa," he said.

"Coronado Hospital is also keeping up with the technology, and has recently added a mobile lithotripsy (a device which pulverizes kidney stones using sound waves) and an MRI (Magnetic Resonance Imaging machine.) The hospital will also be expanding the Cystoscopy room which contains the most modern, state-of-the-art equipment available, during its remodeling and expansion of the surgical suite.

The addition of the latest state-of-the-art diagnostic equipment at both Grabato's office and Coronado Hospital will offer an excellent service to the people of Pampa and the surrounding area, hospital officials said.

Dr. Grabato came to Pampa in 1978 from Brooklyn, N.Y. He received his medical degree from the University of Santo Thomas, Manila, Philippines, and served his internship at Long Island College Hospital, Brooklyn. He completed residencies in urology at Long Island College Hospital, Brooklyn and Methodist Hospital, New York.

To register for the seminar and the screening, call Coronado Hospital at 669-0924. Space is limited.

SBA to honor Amarillo minority business owner

LUBBOCK — John F. Gutierrez, president of Tech Builders Inc. of Amarillo, has been selected to receive this area's U.S. Small Business Administration's (SBA) Minority Small Business Person of the Year Award, according to SBA District Director Walter Fronstin.

Gutierrez will be presented with the award at the Business Breakfast Connection for Minority and Small Business Entrepreneurs on Tuesday. The event is scheduled for 6:30 a.m. at the Camelot Inn, 2508 I-40 East in Amarillo.

"Mr. Gutierrez is a perfect example of a successful minority small business owner," commented Fronstin. "His firm is an aggressive and growing corporation, tripling in size since its inception in 1985, in spite of a recent economic downturn. Tech Builders Inc. is a very diversified company with knowledge and experience in a variety of specialized areas of construction.

"Our experience with the firm through SBA's 8(a) program has shown the company to be committed to high quality, professional and cost effective services to its customers," Fronstin said.

Tech Builders Inc., a general contracting and construction management company, started as a sole proprietorship in June 1982, and incorporated on Nov. 1, 1985.

The firm received 8(a) certification from the SBA in October 1988. They now employ 10 full-time employees and have completed contracts with the U.S. Departments of Interior and Energy, the Corps of Engineers, and numerous local and area businesses.

This year marks the ninth annual celebration of Minority Enterprise Development (MED) Week, which recognizes the outstanding contributions and achievements of the country's minority entrepreneurs.

MED Week '91, jointly sponsored by the U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA) and the U.S. Department of Commerce's Minority Business Development Agency, will be observed nationwide Sept. 22-28.

This year's MED Week theme is "Building a Stronger America Through Minority Business Development."

Coming to Pampa? Take the Subway

"Now I lay me down to sleep, I pray the Lord my soul to keep. God bless my mom in Missouri, my dad in South Carolina, my wife and child and finances and our church. And, dear Lord, if there is any way, could you work on bringing a Subway Sandwich Shop to Pampa?"

"Bear, I'm not sure the Lord is franchising restaurants," my wife interrupted.

"Why not? I've been good. We pay our tithe. Besides, the Word says He's the giver of all good gifts. And a Subway would be simply, pardon the pun, divine."

Who says God doesn't answer prayer? The family is doing well, we're able to pay our bills and have a little left over and ... get ready for this one ... Pampa is getting a Subway!

For those who are sandwich ignorant, Subways are the nation's fastest growing chain of sandwich shops, and for a very good reason. The Mills family has been known to drive to Amarillo just so the wife can get her ham and cheese on white and yours truly can dive into a delicious seafood crab on wheat.

Now we'll be driving up North Hobart instead of down Highway 60 for the delectable treats found at Subway.

The beauty of Subway is that Pampa currently has nothing like it. Remember a couple of years ago when you couldn't drive a block without seeing a different pizza place. That's bad for business and several of them cratered, leaving vacant buildings in their wake.

With Subway, we all have another good reason to stay in Pampa to eat and enjoy life.

"Can one new eatery make that much difference?" you ask.

Let me ask you, why is it so many people hit the highway for Amarillo? They're not unloyal to Pampa's merchants and restaurants. They just want a little variety in their shopping and dining experiences.

As new restaurants and retail outlets open up here, it's better for everybody. People get in the habit of spending their money in Pampa instead of Amarillo or Borger.

Off Beat By Bear Mills

Subway owner Milton Cooke, a Texas Tech alum who moved here a few weeks ago from Lubbock, said he located in Pampa because of a new wave of economic prosperity he sees coming.

"I wanted to start my first store in a good town with a good economic base," Cooke said. "The people here are really friendly, very open. I walk in and people strike up a conversation and make you feel at home."

Cooke, a veteran Subway employee who is promoting to the rank of store owner, said he carefully explored areas in West Texas and became sold on Pampa.

That's a real morale booster and ample reason for locals to feel proud.

Subway, along with other new additions like DQ, Fajitas in Coronado Center and J.C.'s Family Restaurant, will do more to draw in area people than any "Shop Pampa" publicity campaign.

Folks in Canadian, Lefors, McLean, White Deer, Groom, Shamrock, Wheeler, Skellytown and Mobeetie have more reasons than ever to make Pampa their shopping and eating destination.

With our four-screen theater in Coronado Center, which continues to enjoy success, you don't have to drive to Amarillo to catch a movie anymore, either.

Face it, this is a great little town. Thanks to Milton Cooke and Subway (and maybe the good Lord, too?), it just got even better.

Abducted Texan freed by Kurdish rebels

DALLAS (AP) — Three kidnapped Americans and two other hostages were kept on the move constantly in rugged mountains of eastern Turkey for the 22 days they were held by Kurdish rebels, a Texan told his wife Saturday.

Marvin Wilson, 49, of Garland called his wife, Renetta, at 6:30 a.m. CDT Saturday from the city of Bingol in the Turkish province of the same name. She tried to calculate what time it was in Turkey.

"It was ... oh, eight hours beyond that in Bingol. I'm so excited, I can't add," Mrs. Wilson said Saturday.

Wilson and two other Americans — Ronald Wyatt of Nashville, Tenn., and Richard M. Rives of North Carolina — were in Turkey to search Mount Ararat for what they believed was the site of Noah's Ark when they were kidnapped Aug. 30.

Gunmen from the Kurdish Labor Party, or PKK, reportedly stopped a minibus carrying the three Americans on Aug. 30 in Bingol province.

Two others, Allen Roberts of Australia and Gareth Thomas of Great Britain were on the same bus and also were taken hostage.

Two soldiers hunting for the captives were killed in a guerrilla ambush on Sept. 3.

Mrs. Wilson first learned that her husband had been released when he called her about 5:15 p.m. CDT Friday (1:15 a.m. Saturday in Turkey) from Bingol to let her know he had been released and that he and the others were in good condition.

"We talked about a minute. He said he had to go and he would be calling me later. He just assured me that he and the others were in good shape," she said.

Hurriyet, a major Turkish daily newspaper, said security forces, acting on a tip, rescued the five. Authorities were searching for the kidnapers, the newspaper said.

But Thomas said Saturday that the five former hostages were released by their abductors, who gave them directions on where to find authorities. He said they were released near the city of Bingol and walked about 90 minutes before reaching a military police station at Ilıcaklar.

Atilla Vural, the governor of Bingol province, said the five left the city on Saturday aboard two helicopters for the Incerlik air base in southern Turkey.

The semi-official Anatolia news agency had reported Friday that a man claiming to speak for the outlawed Kurdish Labor Party telephoned police in the township of Malazgirt in neighboring Mus province, and said the captives would be released. The party has been fighting since 1984 for an independent Kurdish state in south-eastern Turkey.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

By Danny Bainum

In Japan, all kinds of things are sold in vending machines -- including frozen steaks from the U.S. Prices of $11 a pound for rib-eye and $7 for sukiyaki beef sound high here, but not compared with Japan's usual $39 price for a pound of top-quality beef.

How do bakeries get that sheen on their pie crusts? Easy. Remove pie from the oven a few minutes before it's done, and brush the top with white or cider vinegar, then finish baking. For a darker glaze, brush with beaten egg instead.

Filling your plate at a salad bar while on a diet? Pile on the dark greens and fresh vegetables, but be conservative with the high-calorie peas and beans, raisins, sunflower seeds, cheese and croutons. Take it easy with the creamy dressings.

No-cholesterol dessert treats for the dieter are meringues, made mostly of egg whites and a lot of air. They're great with fresh fruit, plus a little ice milk.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Senators missing self-evident truths

The Senate Judiciary Committee's grilling of Clarence Thomas has provided many more moments of comedy and farce than illumination. Partly that's because the most hostile inquisitors of Judge Thomas are clearly not engaged in an exercise of intellectual curiosity, but a partisan campaign to string tripwires for their target. To that extent, there's something unworthy and corrupt about the whole enterprise.

It's been a fun time for people with a sense of irony. We're thinking, for instance, of the sight of Sen. Edward Kennedy lecturing the nominee on the treatment of women.

Other antics are more infuriating than amusing. Particularly the way the Democratic senators have hurled an endless stream of questions on abortion. Obviously, they want to get the candidate to commit on whether he would vote to overturn Roe v. Wade, the 1973 abortion ruling.

Of course they know — don't they? — that he won't, and can't, answer — because to do so would be improper, with reconsideration of that case imminent. Justice Thurgood Marshall stated the obvious ethical rule at his own confirmation hearings in 1967: "On decisions that are certain to be re-examined in the court, it would be improper for me to comment."

Beyond these shenanigans, some senators have descended to the truly appalling when they've suggested that Judge Thomas is somehow weird or dangerous to have endorsed the concept of natural law.

Natural law is just another name for the principles of justice. Do these senators really believe there are no standards of justice independent of our written laws by which we can judge those laws? What, then, about the laws of Stalin or Nazi Germany? If we don't acknowledge that there is a universal natural law — a law of justice proclaiming that all human beings have certain basic rights — there is no logical way to label as unjust the legal codes of tyrants.

How pathetic that there are members of the United States Senate who can't grasp that basic, indispensable truth.

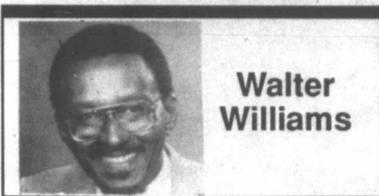

National immorality a disease

My grandmother used to say, "Nothing good is going to come of no good." That admonition is just as relevant for a nation as an individual. As a nation, we are headed into an ever-deepening mess because of our increasing disrespect for morality, rule of law and the principles expressed in the Declaration of Independence and codified in our Constitution.

In its September issue, Reader's Digest's senior editor, Ralph Bennett, gives us a peek at the tip of the iceberg through an article titled, "Pig Tales for Taxpayers."

Remember last year's public outrage when Sen. Quentin N. Burdick (D-N.D.) got a half-million dollar appropriation to build a museum at Lawrence Welk's birthplace? Rep. Jim Slattery (D-Kan.) introduced an amendment which successfully rescinded Burdick's appropriation. However, before the vote, a member of Sen. Burdick's staff telephoned the dean of Kansas State University (in Slattery's district), suggesting that the university's $5.3 million grant application might have trouble getting past Burdick.

This is standard fare in Congress, even though we face massive debt and deficits, higher taxes and talk about increasing them even more. There are billions of dollars of pork in the 1992 budget: Rep. Bob Traxler (D-Mich.) put $94,000 into the budget to study "apple-quality." His colleague, Martin Olav Sabo (DFL-Minn.) put in $1 million to see why people don't use bicycling or walking as a means of transportation. Rep. David Bonior (D-Mich.) calls for $37,000 to develop "comprehensive management technologies" for handling animal manure.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski (D-Ill.) had $8 million, from a $5.4 billion appropriations bill to cover the non-military costs of the Gulf War, transferred to the Department of Education budget so that it could be given to his alma mater, Loyola University of Chicago.

The Pentagon requested $500 million to overhaul the USS Kennedy aircraft carrier. But since the bid went to the Philadelphia Naval Shipyard, Sen. Arlen Specter (R-Pa.) ran it up to $1.2 billion to basically gut the ship and rebuild it.

This is just a sample of how Congress works. Congressmen who don't go along are in deep political trouble. This year, Sen. Robert Byrd (D-W.

Va.) warned two congressmen, "If you rock the boat or support a line-item veto, we have a special chute that goes down to the Potomac."

In the pursuit of political power, congressmen are destroying our great nation. That makes me mad; but how much can we blame them? Yes, they ought to have the decency and backbone to be statesmen instead of hustlers; however, the lion's share of the blame rests with you and me.

Congressmen are doing precisely what Americans vote them into office to do: use the power of their office to confiscate that which belongs to one American and give it to another. Any politician who campaigned on the promise not to get federal money for projects in his district or state simply would not be elected to office.

Most Americans think that their favorite spending project is vital. However, if each politician provides what his constituency deems vital, it adds up to something none of us want: increasing debt and deficits, competitive weakness and moral and national decline.

Congressmen have little or no principle. As such, they are like prostitutes doing what customers want. That being the case, it is up to you and me to let them know that they cannot buy our votes by destroying our nation. We must tell them what they're selling is diseased, and we don't want it.

Braves play name of the game

Since nobody else has stepped forward, I have taken it upon myself to do what must be done when a baseball team is in a pennant race in early September.

What must be done is the team must have a motto and a nickname. Players also need nicknames. Baseball historically has had great player nicknames.

Stan Musial, for instance, was The Man, and let us thank the Lord he was already out of baseball when whatever idiot started screaming, "You dah man!" every time some millionaire hit a golf ball on television.

Unlikely as it may seem — no, as mind-boggling as it may seem — the Atlanta Braves are in the pennant race at this stage of the season for the first time ever since whatever year it was they fought the War of 1812.

This team desperately needs a motto to take it through the mine-field that waits in September as it races against the Dodgers for the National League's West Division pennant.

Didn't the Phillies, in a similar spot, have "You Gotta Believe!"

The Dodgers are too West-Coasty to have a motto. If the Dodgers had a motto it would be something like "Koo-uhl," koo-uhl being the West-

Lewis Grizzard

Coasty way to say "cool."

Please, no "How 'bout Them Braves." That belongs to the University of Georgia, and anybody who would engage in that motto has no more imagination than that other idiot who started The Wave.

This person should contact Mr. "You day man!" and form a suicide pact.

I suggest the Braves' motto be one of the following: 1. "Good God, Is This Really Happening?" 2. "Are the Braves on Something?" 3. "Say What?"

All these imply what all of us have been thinking all season: "The Braves have a chance to win the pennant? Say what?"

As far as a team nickname goes, I'm for "Bobby and the Twilight Zoners" because I'm certain that's exactly where we and manager Bobby Cox are. The Braves are still in a pennant race. Sure, and the Falcons are going to the Super Bowl.

We also need some good player nicknames. I've come up with a few of those, too.

- Dave Justice: Brother Dave — for that late, great Southern philosopher, Brother Dave Gardner.

- Otis "My Man" Nixon: Ever see the movie, Animal House?

- Brian "Spanky" Hunter: He's a dead ringer for the head Little Rascal, if the head Little Rascal had been black, and he probably should have been so Buckwheat wouldn't have been a token.

- Tom Glavine: The Ice Man. He would not come apart in a fire in a crowded theater.

- Terry Pendleton: Teepee. And whatever happened to Noc-A-Homa?

- Ron "Hyundai" Gant: The man has biceps the size of a foreign import.

- Jeff "The Flying Nun" Blauer: Under that batting helmet, I'm guessing there's a couple of big-league ears.

- Rafail (Nothing Sux Like an Electrolux) Belliard: The Human Vacuum Cleaner was already taken.

Then, again, keeping with a Native American theme, should the Braves' 1991 motto be, simply, "How?"

Grading Bush's plan on education

Shortly after America's children don book bags and board buses to launch into another school year, the nation will receive its first report card.

A review panel soon will offer its assessment of America's progress toward its National Education Goals outlined by President Bush earlier in the year. These goals include everything from unparalleled achievement in math and science to drug-free schools. The latest drop in Scholastic Aptitude Test scores — the fourth consecutive decline in the national average — simply reiterates the need for real improvement in education.

However, skeptics of the education goals already abound. Asked the Washington Post in a recent editorial, "Who really expects American students to lead the world in math and science in nine years?" Clearly not the pundits in Washington.

Fortunately, the winds of reform are blowing from other directions, such as the business community, state politicians and grass-roots groups nationwide. The Golden Rule Insurance Company, for example, recently announced its plan to pay for the private education of low-income students in Indianapolis, in perhaps the most ambitious business-funded education choice program to date.

Company chairman J. Patrick Rooney said his firm will hand out education vouchers worth $1.2 million to low-income parents, with each student receiving up to $800 toward tuition at private schools. "When all families, no matter how poor, have the freedom to walk away from bad schools, competition will force their public schools to improve," Rooney said.

That's the heartbeat of the choice-in-education movement. It has been beating vigorously at least since last September, when Milwaukee's state Rep. Polly Williams spearheaded the nation's first choice program. Since then, state legislatures across the nation have confronted dozens of choice proposals.

Indeed, education reformers in state after state say that improving the quality of education is impossible without the pressure of competition that is brought on by choice. That's why more and more businesses are seeing the need to do more than put computers in classrooms.

The situation is all the more urgent because most of our nation's inner-city children — who desperately need the chance at a quality education — are minority students. And minority workers will make up the majority of new entrants to the workforce by the year 2000. This, of course, has far-reaching implications for our economic competitiveness abroad and standard of living at home.

Injecting the needles of free-market economics into public education's bureaucratic arm, as University of Chicago economist Milton Friedman argued some 30 years ago, is the only way to save our kids, our schools and the future of our country.

Although the concept of educational choice has met vehement opposition from the educational establishment — the Milwaukee choice plan is still being argued in court — results so far prove that competition among schools can only produce change for the better. Indeed, it is one of the crucial features of Bush's National Education Goals.

Even if the administration backs away from its choice proposals, as Education Secretary Lamar Alexander seems to be doing, there are reformers and parents around the country ready to help American schools pass their next report card.

Letters to the editor

A right to be moral

To the editor:
In rebuttal to the article on Sept. 11 on "Commission charged with moralizing," if I were them, I would feel quite complimented.

I signed the ban, and will do whatever necessary to keep this ban intact. I wasn't at the meeting due to a prior commitment, but my name was in black and white along with others who feel as I do.

As far as "the positive economic side," I see none. Paying police officers, nurses and EMTs doesn't strike me as positive. God forbid, someone having to pay for a funeral due to a drunk driver on Sunday. I can see that the money comes from one man to line another man's pocket. And all of this for what? Because of bad planning on the part of the person who is drinking to buy "enough" to get through Sunday without making a beer run? I don't pity them; I pray.

I also come to the defense of the teachers who "lollygagged" all summer. Ask yourself how you would fare to teach in the present and the future. Would you have the determination to stay year after year when that job continually gets more difficult to deal with? Oh sure, now we have technology—computers (and crack labs), new teaching methods (drugs at younger ages—wonder if there's a connection to alcohol), and there are people who are too busy to discipline or just don't believe in it. Consequently, our teachers have an extra burden because our children are "needing" something, but the parents blame the teachers. The blame lies in the mirror.

After reading the remarks made in this article, I am offended enough to have my children and their friends find another place to go for lunch FIVE days a week. But then, of course, I guess the schoolkids don't spend as much money all week as others do on Sunday.

Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging; and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise. Proverbs 20:1.

It is blatantly obvious to me how God feels, and who am I to argue with the Creator?

By a fair guess, I would say He doesn't appreciate His "seventh day" being ignored, much less abused. I would not want to be one who "allowed" the ban lifted, when I come face to face with God and his laws and judgments. How many died? How many died unsaved? Was I a part? I personally refuse to take that kind of responsibility over "lining someone's pockets."

The accused "moral" issue here is a right we were given. It dates back to Genesis; we have the "right" to choose our own morality—whether we choose wisely is up to us. Luckily, and thankfully, our forefathers saw fit to incorporate this into our government and our way of life. These rights and these morals were sent by God and have been around as long as the "high" from alcohol or the temporary escape that these "blinded" people think that it provides.

As for myself, I stand for the ban on beer sales on Sunday (my God-given right to be moral) and will continue to pray for possibly shortsighted or misled people who are so concerned with the present, they cannot see where they are going, now, or in the future... not excluding the hereafter.

And he shall judge the world in righteousness, he shall minister judgment to the people in uprightness. Psalms 9:8.

A right to bear arms

To the editor:
A well-regulated militia, being necessary to the security of a free State, the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed!

This is the 200th birthday of the U.S. Constitution and the Bill of Rights. Isn't it strange that no one questions or doubts the validity of any amendment of the Bill of Rights, except the Second Amendment? And most importantly, isn't it strange that no one questions that each amendment protects our individual rights, except the Second Amendment?

For years, Ted Kennedy has claimed (erroneously) that the militia, in the Second Amendment, means the National Guard. After reading some of the notes concerning the Second Amendment by the framers of the Bill of Rights, they in no way meant a militia that in just a few moments notice could be sworn into the regular army. They were talking about a militia of boys and men who provided their own arms and ammunition to protect their homes and villages from local enemies, foreign invasion and government takeover.

At this time the Congress is debating a "crime" bill. Crime bill is a misnomer for anti-gun bills. The House voted down a good bill, and passed HR 7—the Brady Bill. As soon as it passed, its proponents said the bill would do nothing to combat crime! Meanwhile, the Senate voted down a good bill by Sen. Ted Stevens, and passed S. 1241, Sen. Joseph Biden's (D-Del.) anti-gun bill.

Unless I completely misunderstand Article 5 of the Constitution, no amendment can be changed without a constitutional convention. If I'm right, we are allowing a rotten bunch to illegally pass gun control bills and disarm us step by step.

If you will, tell the people it's imperative they write Rep. Bill Sarpalius, Senators Phil Gramm and Lloyd Bentsen. Also, write President Bush and ask him to veto anything containing gun control that crosses his desk.

Give Jim a chance

To the editor:
I don't remember ever starting a job that I knew everything about or do without making some mistakes.

If little things that Jim Free does wrong are forgiven and written off as mistakes for awhile, it's my personal opinion he will be a far better sheriff than we ever had.

The reason he was elected is reason enough to say we are far better off than we were. I'll bet if the truth was brought out, there were lots of things that went on in the last 38 years that those who know were just afraid to reveal.

I think Jim is trying to do the right thing, and I believe those who are against his being elected ought to back off and give him a chance.

RRC chair to keynote Desk & Derrick Club banquet

Lena Guerrero

Lena Guerrero, chairman of the Texas Railroad Commission, is to be keynote speaker at the Pampa Desk & Derrick Club's Industry Appreciation Night, Wednesday, Sept. 25, at M.K. Brown Auditorium.
 A social hour, hosted by American Petroleum, begins the evening's events, followed by dinner at 7:30 p.m. Cost of the event is $15 per person, and reservations may be made until noon Tuesday, Sept. 24, by calling Diane Pergeson at 665-7120.
 Guerrero is the first woman and first ethnic minority to serve on the Texas Railroad Commission's three-member panel in its 100-year history. She was appointed to the position by Gov. Ann Richards shortly after Richards was elected to office, and was sworn in on Jan. 23.
 Guerrero first held public office as a member of the Texas House of Representatives. Elected in 1984 at age 26, she was the second female Hispanic ever elected to the House. She served three full terms and was elected to a fourth term before being tapped for the Commissioner's job.
 As a member of the House State Affairs Committee, service as vice chair during the 71st Legislative Session, Guerrero developed knowledge of regulatory policy of the energy, utility, and transportation industries. She has passed legislation that protects and conserves Texas' environment; and she was an advocate of developing Texas' natural resources, such as natural gas.

 In addition, Guerrero served on the Government Organization Committee. She completed a four-year stint on the Sunset Advisory Commission in 1990, serving the last year as vice chair. These years on the Sunset Commission added to her knowledge of state regulatory policy, and placed her in a position to control bureaucratic mismanagement and waste.
 Guerrero has been named to the Texas Monthly "10 Best" list for her ability to pass more legislation than any other non-chairman during the 71st Legislative Session. Texas Observer rated her as an "exceptional" legislator and Newsweek called her one of the nation's up and coming Hispanic leaders.
 Her involvement in politics and government began on the campus of the University of Texas in Austin where she received a degree in broadcasting. She has served in a number of political campaigns at the local, state and national levels. She served as political director of the Ann Richards for Governor campaign during the 1990 primary season and was co-chair of Unity '90 — the statewide coordinated campaign of the Democratic Party, during the general election.

 Guerrero's civic involvement covers board memberships in health organizations such as the Arthritis Foundation to cultural organizations like the Ballet East Dance Theatre.
 Statewide she is a member of the Texas Lyceum; active in several organizations which promote the reproductive rights of women; and involved with several groups dedicated to promoting issues of concern to the Hispanic community. On the national level, she is a board member of the World Wildlife Fund/Conservation Foundation and the National Wildlife Federation.
 Born in Mission on Nov. 27, 1957, Guerrero was the fifth of nine children born to Alvaro and Adela Guerrero. Her father managed a lumber yard, but died of cancer when she was 11 years-old. After his death, Commissioner Guerrero's mother took a job in the school cafeteria in Mission, where she is still employed today. Along with her bothers and sisters, the commissioner migrated as a farm worker during the summers to help support the family.
 She is married to Lionel Aguirre, who works in the Texas comptroller's Office. They live in Austin with their son Leo, 3.

Harvesters take Dodge City shoot-out, 35-20

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

DODGE CITY, Kan. — Add another name to the list of Texans who have ridden into this peaceful cowtown and created havoc for the locals.

The intimidating stranger was none other than Pampa Harvester running back Sammy Laury, who carried the football 18 times Friday night for 211 yards and lead a 35-20 ambush against the Red Demons.

A crowd of 4,065 was on hand for the shoot-out, including a large number of Green Team faithful.

Laury started the fireworks on the Harvesters first possession, capping a six-play drive with a two-yard sweep into the end zone.

Todd McCavit got the first of his four PATs and the score was 7-0.

Red Demons quarterback David Stubblefield spent most of the night running backwards to escape the crushing attack of Harvesters Phil Sexton and Zach Thomas.

He had two passes picked off in the second half by Andy Cavalier and Matt Garvin to further frustrate the cause.

In spite of being undefeated coming into the Pampa game, nearly every first-half series for Dodge City amounted to a lackluster four-and-out performance.

Harvester Mark Hampton collected the second TD of the night with 25 seconds left in the first quarter when he recovered a Sammy Laury punt in the Dodge City end zone.

Things went from bad to worse for the Demons on the ensuing kickoff. Jeff Cullen was ejected from the game for squaring off against a Harvester he thought exerted too much effort on a block.

"It would be like us losing Zach Thomas," Harvester Coach Dennis Cavalier said. "It really took something out of them."

It also took 30 yards off an impressive run-back due to personal fouls, backing the Demons up to their own 13.

Two plays later, Laury showed his stuff on defense, breaking up a long pass from Stubblefield to Joe Scharitz and creating a fourth and eight at the 13.

Laury then ran the punt from midfield all the way to the Dodge 29.

A series of penalties for illegal blocks and use of the hands backed Pampa up to the 45.

Undaunted by the misfortune, Laury went in two plays later from the 31 on a third and 16 to put the Green Team up 21-0.

It was only then that the Red Demon attack sputtered to life for a moment.

Though Dodge City has a reputation for never passing, their only first-half TD came after a series when they shot holes in Pampa's zone defense.

Andy Cavalier was the most frequent victim of the assault, which ended with Tom Armstrong juggling a Stubblefield pass all the way to the ground before finally pulling it in for the score.

A two-point conversion failed and Pampa led 21-6 at the half.

By the end of the third quarter, Laury had collected 211 yards and was helped off the field with a case of turf toe and leg cramps.

That was only after the Harvesters had racked up another 14 points on scores by Matt Garvin and Zach Thomas.

By the fourth quarter, when Dodge scored 14 of its 20 points, most of Pampa's second team defense was on the field and the contest was long decided.

After the game Cavalier said, "I liked the opportunity to play some of the younger players because the future lies with them. The Harvesters were pretty impressive tonight."

Cavalier was credited by Dodge City statisticians with producing the two most successful runners ever to face the Red Demons.

The first was Jeff Smith of Wichita (Kan.) Southeast, where Cavalier had coached before coming to Pampa, and the second was Laury.

"Sammy Laury is an outstanding athlete," Cavalier admitted. "He's a possible Division I prospect. However, there are some grade deficiencies he has got to make up before that happens."

If the Harvesters worst nightmare were to come true and Laury is tackled by the no pass, no play rule later this season, Cavalier said Thomas and Garvin, only a freshman, can successfully carry much of the load.

"I'm a Matt Garvin fan," Cavalier said. "He's only 15 years old, but because of his God-given ability, we decided to try him at the varsity level. I was skeptical that the jump

Harvesters quarterback Andy Cavalier (middle of pile with football) runs the keeper for a first down in first-quarter action Friday night at Dodge City, Kan.

from eighth grade football to varsity play against the Sandies, Lobos and Red Demons would be too much. But, from day one, he has been impressive."

After the game, the Red Demon coaching staff said they had no interest in turning the contest into an annual event.

"This team is just too strong," said head man Dick Masters of the Green Team. "Pampa intimidated our guys. They are probably the best team we've played in a real long time."

The win takes Pampa to 3-0 on the season. Their next game is a homecoming match-up against Lubbock Dunbar at Harvester Stadium Friday night.

Wheeler blanks Sayre; Canadian, Miami and McLean win

Miami 43, Guthrie 37
MIAMI — Miami posted its first win of the season, but it didn't come easy.

Andrew Neighbors made a key interception with 2:47 left in the final quarter to preserve a 42-37 win over Guthrie in six-man action Friday night.

"It was a good game all the way through," said Warriors' coach Terry Bean. "We had to come from behind to win it. Andrew's interception was an important one. It clinched the win for us."

The Warriors were behind, 24-22, at intermission, but outscored the visitors, 20-13, in the second half.

"Guthrie has a good team. Both of us had lost a lot of seniors from last year, so we were pretty well-matched," Bean said.

Cody Mixon led Miami's ground game with 102 yards rushing and scored on a 35-yard run. He also ran back a fumbled conversion attempt by Silverton for 68 yards and two points.

Quarterback Matthew Neighbors threw for 102 yards, including three TD passes to Andrew Neighbors covering 44, 20 and 10 yards.

Aaron McReynolds went all the way on a 60-yard punt return and a 65-yard kickoff return for the Warriors, who had three touchdowns nullified because of penalties. Two came on TD passes to Aaron McReynolds and Melvin Seymour. The other one called back was an 80-yard run by Seymour.

Miami hosts undefeated Valley for homecoming next Friday night.

"Valley has exceptional speed. One of their backs has been to state twice in the 200. We're going to have to slow them down a little bit," Bean said.

Miami now has a 1-2 record.

Canadian 40, Shamrock 0
CANADIAN — Canadian, led by running back Steven Flowers and quarterback Shad Jergenson, rolled to a 40-0 win over Shamrock Friday night.

Flowers, 160-pound sophomore, tallied three touchdowns, including one on a 52-yard punt return.

Jergenson's TD tosses went to Joel Robbins for 27 yards and J.K. Hester for 40 yards.

Canadian's other score came on a 22-yard run by Jeremy Harper.

The Wildcats boosted their record to 2-1 while Shamrock is winless at 0-3.

Wheeler 46, Sayre, Okla. 0
SAYRE — Unbeaten Wheeler compiled 425 yards in total offense in shutting out Sayre, Okla., 46-0, Friday night.

Mack Marshall, 190-pound senior fullback, scored twice and led the Mustangs' rushing attack with 195 yards on 14 carries.

"We finally got our offense rolling," said Wheeler head coach Ronnie Karcher. "We only had one penalty and I was probably more pleased with that than anything else. We've had too many penalties lately."

Receiver Brandon Chick caught two TD passes from quarterback Jason Beers. For the night, Chick had eight receptions for 88 yards.

The Mustangs led, 26-0, at halftime on the way to their third victory.

"Sayre has some big old kids and I thought they would give us a pretty good game, but we handled them pretty good," Karcher said.

Nathan Willeford, Mark Marshall and Joe Dan Ledbetter added one touchdown run apiece. Beers had a two-point conversion run while Ike Finsterwald kicked two PAT.

Willeford, Chick, Isidro Salas and Genaro Meraz were the ringleaders for Wheeler's defense, which limited Sayre to 77 total yards. Meraz and Jason Judd had one interception apiece.

Canadian Wildcats' Shad Jergenson bags Shamrock's Richard Hall (20) for a six-yard loss during third-quarter action Friday night at Canadian.

Wheeler travels to Quanah next Friday night.

McLean 37, Silverton 8

'Pokes aren't 'Sun Devil' worshippers

By MEL REISNER
AP Sports Writer

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Jimmy Johnson has been at the helm of the Dallas Cowboys a little over two years, but already he's developed a healthy dislike of Sun Devil Stadium.

Johnson's two trips with the Cowboys into the home of the Phoenix Cardinals have produced 24-20 and 20-3 losses, and the bad memories go even farther back. Before he left college coaching, Johnson's Miami team was bumped out of the national championship in a 14-10 loss to Penn State in the 1987 Fiesta Bowl, played on the natural turf at Sun Devil.

"I never like to go to that place, but it's on the schedule, so I guess we'll play it," Johnson said.

The Cowboys (1-2) and Cardinals (2-1), similar in their youthful look and reputation for having improved under new coaching staffs, shared similar embarrassment a week ago. Not only did both lose, they were shut out by division rivals.

The Philadelphia Eagles, victimized by the Cardinals the previous week, took out their frustrations in a 24-0 drubbing of the Cowboys, and Washington, which barely beat Dallas on Monday night, crushed the Cardinals 34-0 with six days' rest.

The Eagles sacked Troy Aikman 11 times and handed the Cowboys a futility record they'd like to forget — 90 yards in total offense. But Johnson said his team wouldn't have any trouble remembering the previous record for inefficiency. That was 100 yards gained against Phoenix in the game here a year ago.

Meanwhile, the Cardinals had anemic yardage totals of their own, picking up 165 yards against the Redskins and ranking second-to-last above only New England in the NFL with 655 for the season.

Cardinals coach Joe Bugel said he expected Johnson to go back to the run, both to protect Aikman and to exploit the ability of Emmitt Smith.

"His personality is to rush the football, and I think exactly that," Bugel said. "We have to be prepared for that. We have to be able to stop the rush."

Smith's 44 yards on 13 carries against the Eagles were disappointing for him, but he has 268 yards on 56 tries for the season, and memories of Smith's 75-yard scoring run in the 33-31 loss to the Redskins haunt Bugel.

At the same time, the defense can't forget Aikman, who earned the accolade of "legitimate tough guy" for getting up after all the hits he took in Philadelphia, the coach said.

Groom airs it out to whitewash Samnorwood, 45-0

By J. ALAN BRZYS
Sports Writer

GROOM — A stellar passing performance coupled with bone-jarring defense gave Groom a 45-0 win Friday night against a lesser-experienced Samnorwood team in six-man, non-district action.

Groom Tigers' senior quarterback Bruce Britten connected on five touchdown passes — four to junior Corkey Hickey — for a 38-0 halftime lead in the game abbreviated by the 45-point rule.

"This week we started to open up our passing game ... with success," said first-year Tigers head football coach Terry O'Dell.

Britten hit Hickey with TD passes of 50, 7, 29 and 40 yards; and fired a 10-yard pass for a score to senior Daryl Homer.

It was three and out for Samnorwood, which took the game-opening kickoff.

In the Tigers' first offensive series, junior Paul McLaughlin ignited the Groom scoring onslaught with a 73-yard romp off right tackle. The kick conversion failed and Groom led 6-0, two minutes into the contest.

Samnorwood, forced into miscues by a stifling Tigers defense, failed to make a first down in its second offensive series. The Eagles, facing fourth and 19 at the 34, coughed up the ball and McLaughlin recovered.

Groom gained five yards on a Brian Baker run; then Britten hit Hickey on a 50-yard spiral for the second score. The Tigers refused an Eagle face-mask penalty on the play, failed the kick conversion attempt and led 12-0 at 3:52 in the first quarter.

Excellent tackling by Kirk Webb, Matt Fields and teammates again stopped the Samnorwood Eagles.

At 1:05 in the first stanza, Britten connected with Hickey on a 7-yard scoring pass and the kick conversion failed. Groom led 18-0.

Samnorwood tried airing out the ball, but to no avail and Groom took over on downs on the Eagles' 35.

Three plays later, the Britten-Hickey tandem scored on a 29-yard pass play and Groom led 25-0 after a successful one-point conversion at 7:48.

With 3:50 remaining in the half, Britten threw a 10-yard pass to Homer for a TD. The kick was no good and Groom led 31-0.

Two minutes remaining in the half, Britten launched the ball 30-plus yards in the air to Hickey, who romped into the end zone for a touchdown. Baker rushed for the conversion building a 38-0 lead at the half.

O'Dell sent "a basically JV" squad onto the field for second-half play.

Three minutes remaining in the contest, it was freshman to freshman

— a handoff from JV quarterback Bo Burgin to running back Bryan Crowell — for 11 yards and the final touchdown.

Freshman Matt Miller ran the ball off right tackle into the end zone for the one-point conversion and a 45-0 game-ending score.

O'Dell's Tigers are taking turns putting on outstanding offensive performances and, although he commended Britten, Hickey and McLaughlin, he is reluctant to chose individual stars.

"(Brian) Baker was running the ball well last week. He had 195 yards rushing. Next week it could be someone else," he said. "We're just trying to use a lot of different players."

"Defense ... when I first came here (to Groom High School), that was one thing I wanted to work on," said O'Dell after the game. "I wanted to have a good strong defense."

"McLaughlin has really come on in the last two weeks (and) Fields has been steady for us all year."

"Give them (Samnorwood) credit," said O'Dell of the program in its second year of competition. "They came out and kept on trying."

Asked if the lopsided wins could hurt the Tigers' intensity level, the coach said, "I don't think so. We told them a while ago the season is ahead of us right now."

"It's whatever they want to make it from here on out. It's either fold up or beat the good teams coming up on our schedule."

O'Dell said he is pleased so far with the club he inherited and the 3-0 start.

"You bet. I couldn't ask for anything better."

He said the team's next big game is "next week ... against Cotton Center."

"We're just going to take them one at a time."

Cougars thrashed by Illinois; Red Raiders, Aggies lose

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Jason Verduzco, not David Klingler, was the hot quarterback on Saturday, throwing three touchdown passes to Gus Palma as Illinois thrashed No. 21 Houston 51-10.

Klingler, Houston's record-setting passer, was intercepted four times and was sacked four times as Illinois (2-1) handed the Cougars (1-2) a second straight embarrassing loss. Miami beat Houston 40-10 nine days ago.

Verduzco, who completed 16 of 22 passes for 340 yards, hit Palma with scoring passes of 37 yards in the first quarter, 21 in the second and 40 in the third quarter.

Kameno Bell had two 1-yard touchdowns runs. Clinton Lynch scored on a 50-yard run, Joe Muti raced 57 yards for a TD and Chris Richardson booted a 27-yard field goal for Illinois.

Houston got a 23-yard field goal from Roman Anderson in the first quarter, and Klingler passed 15 yards to John Brown in the third quarter.

Illinois took a 7-3 lead in the first quarter, then took control of the game in the second by holding the ball for all but 2 minutes, 51 seconds. The Illini used the possession advantage to build a 20-3 halftime lead, then struck quickly for two more TDs in the third to turn the game into a romp.

Verduzco established his aerial attack early, completing a 24-yard pass to Elbert Turner on the opening drive, then hitting Palma with the 37-yard touchdown pass.

Klingler completed his first pass for 38 yards to Brown only to have the drive end with a fumble by Ostell Miles.

Miles raced 19 yards on Houston's next possession, and Klingler connected with Brown for a 47-yard gain. But he missed on three consecutive passes from the Illinois 5 and Anderson kicked the field goal to trim the Illinois lead to 7-3.

Klingler began to feel the Illini defensive pressure in the second quarter, completing only one pass and being sacked twice in the period.

Verduzco, meanwhile, shook off the effects of a 15-yard pass interference penalty by hitting Lynch with a 23-yard pass to set up Palma's second touchdown reception.

And, under pressure and falling, Verduzco completed an 11-yard pass to Bell on fourth down to keep a 96-yard scoring drive alive. The Cougar defense nearly held at the 1-yard line, but Bell struggled into the end zone on his third try for a 20-3 halftime lead.

Illinois switched from ball-control to blitzkrieg in the second half. Verduzco's third TD pass to Palma capped an 89-yard drive that took 1 minute, 44 seconds. Lynch's touchdown run ended a 70-yard drive that took 70 seconds, and Muti's scoring run came at the end of a 46-second drive that covered 80 yards.

LARAMIE, Wyo. (AP) — Injuries have plagued Wyoming throughout the fall, but it was an injury that helped the Cowboys throttle Texas Tech 22-17 on Saturday.

With senior tailback Dwight Driver sidelined following arthroscopic surgery to his left knee earlier in the week, Wyoming coach Joe Tiller turned to redshirt freshman Terrance Hendricks.

Hendricks gained 100 yards and scored once on 22 carries.

"He's a strong running-type guy, a slasher," Tiller said. "He's not going to beat you to the corner, but he finds that crease and does a good job."

Hendricks' running not only made him Wyoming's first 100-yard rusher of the season, but it took the pressure off quarterback Tom Corontzos, who threw for 247 yards and two scores as the Cowboys dominated every aspect of the game.

Wyoming (2-2) outgained Texas Tech (1-2) 467 yards to 254 yards and held the ball 37:19 of the game.

The totals might have been higher but Hendricks sat out the fourth quarter after bruising his left elbow trying for his second touchdown from Texas Tech's 3 late in the third quarter.

The tailback was thrown for a 2-yard loss and Wyoming settled for a 22-yard Sean Fleming field goal to go ahead 15-7.

Texas Tech coach Spike Dykes said Wyoming delivered a "tail kicking."

"The first half we didn't do much, but you have to give Wyoming credit," Dykes said. "Their quarterback did excellent; he made the big plays. We never could stop them."

Hendricks, 5-10 and 200 pounds, helped the Western Athletic Conference Cowboys control the game with run after run through the right side of Texas Tech's defensive line. He led Wyoming to its first score late in the first quarter. On the 69-yard drive the tailback ran on four of the seven plays and gained 19 yards.

The drive's big play saw Corontzos roll right and hit Robert Rivers — who finished with seven catches for 119 yards and two TDs — for a gain of 17. A facemask penalty moved the ball to the Texas Tech 27 and four plays later Hendricks bulled his way into the end zone from the 5-yard line. The extra point was blocked.

Wyoming took a 12-0 lead when Corontzos hit Rivers with an 11-yard touchdown with 5:35 left in the half. The Cowboys tried a two-point conversion, but tight end Mike Jones couldn't handle Corontzos' pass.

Texas Tech scored on its first drive in the third quarter. Louis Sheffield bolted into the end zone from 2 yards out, capping a 61-yard drive.

Fleming responded with a 22-yard field goal.

The Red Raiders cut the score to 15-10 on their next possession with a 49-yard Lin Elliott field goal.

The Cowboys went ahead 22-10 early in the fourth quarter on a 19-yard Corontzos pass to Rivers.

Texas Tech made the score respectable with 1:58 left when a Fleming punt was blocked by Scott Allen. Steve Carr scooped up the loose ball and carried it nine yards into the end zone and Elliott's extra point pulled the Red Raiders to within 22-17.

But Wyoming recovered the ensuing onside kick and ran out the clock.

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — A touchdown away from one of the biggest upsets in school history, Tulsa kept knocking on the door in the fourth quarter and never took no for an answer.

The Golden Hurricane, which became an independent in 1986 and has taken its lumps ever since, broke through Saturday with a stunning 35-34 upset of No. 15 Texas A&M when T.J. Rubley threw a 63-yard touchdown to Chris Penn with 2:47 remaining.

Billy Cole recovered a fumble on the ensuing kickoff and Tulsa (3-1) ran off the final 2 1/2 minutes before players and fans created a monstrous pileup in a midfield celebration.

"Today we asked them one thing at halftime, just not to give up," Tulsa coach Dave Rader said.

The Hurricane never did, despite trailing 28-10 at halftime and stopping itself with three turnovers in the final quarter.

Boston cuts Jays' lead to half game

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Red Sox always thought they were in the AL East race. Even if no one else did.

"No player in this clubhouse ever said we were out of it," Jack Clark said Saturday after the Red Sox charged to within one-half game of division-leading Toronto by routing the New York Yankees 12-1.

Rookie Phil Plantier hit two home runs and Clark and Bob Zupic also connected as Boston scored in every inning except the first and rapped 14 hits.

The Red Sox and Toronto, which fell 4-0 in Oakland, each have 67 losses. Boston has gone 31-10 since falling 11 1/2 games behind the Blue Jays on Aug. 7. The Red Sox won their fourth in a row and for the 14th time in 17 games.

"We knew we had a chance. There was a point, though, when we had look at what we had to do," Clark said. "We figured we had to get to .500 first. Then we had to catch the Yankees. After we did that, we had to catch (runnerup) Detroit. Then we were able to look at Toronto."

Clark joined Bobby Bonds as the only major leaguers to hit 25 home runs in a season for five different teams.

Joe Hesketh (11-4) reached a career high in victories. He pitched eight innings and gave up four hits, including a solo homer by Steve Sax in the third. He struck out four and walked three.

Hesketh, released by both Montreal and Atlanta in 1990, is 9-3 in 14 starts since being moved from the bullpen on July 14.

"Toronto has its work out," Hesketh said. "Every time they go out, they know what we did. The pressure is on them as long as we keep winning."

Rookie Wade Taylor (7-11), who pitched seven shutout innings in Fenway Park on June 27, was unable to stop the Red Sox this time. He allowed seven runs on seven hits, two walks and a hit batter in 3 1-3 innings.

"They're playing well, they're hungry and they have something to play for," New York manager Stump Merrill said. "They just kicked the heck out of us in every phase of the game."

After leaving runners on second and third in the first inning, the Red Sox quickly broke it open.

With two outs in the second, Tony Pena was hit in the back by a pitch. Pena picked up the ball and flipped it underhand to Taylor and trotted to first, and then stole second and scored on Luis Rivera's single.

Jody Reed and Carlos Quintana hit two-run singles in the fourth and Boston made it 10-1 with a run on three walks and Darrin Chapin's wild pitch in the seventh.

Dave Eiland relieved to start the eighth and Plantier hit the first pitch for his seventh home run of the season. Zupic hit the next pitch for his first major league homer.

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The Toronto Blue Jays are still in first place. Barely.

The Blue Jays' lead in the AL East was cut to one-half game Saturday when they fell to Oakland 4-0 while second-place Boston routed New York 12-1.

Toronto, which led Boston by 11 1/2 games on Aug. 7, lost for the fifth time in six games. And the recent skid has brought back even more memories of the times the Blue Jays blown it.

"I hate losing," Blue Jays interim manager Gene Tenace said, "but this is a different team than the ones in the past. They should have their heads up. Three weeks ago, we were in this same situation with Detroit, and we came out smoking. We've got to do it again."

Willie Wilson's two-out, two-run double in the eighth inning broke up a scoreless duel between Mike Moore and Jimmy Key.

"I just threw a pitch where I didn't want it and he hit it," Key said.

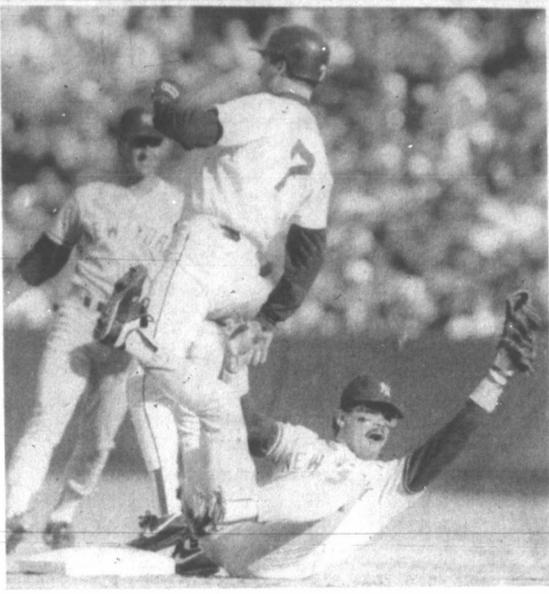

Key (15-11) had allowed only two singles through seven innings before Mike Gallego singled with one out in the eighth. Mike Bordick's sacrifice bunt made Gallego the first Oakland runner to reach second base.

Rickey Henderson was then walked intentionally before Wilson lined a 1-1 pitch into the left-center field alley, scoring both runners for a 2-0 lead. Following another intentional walk to Jose Canseco, reliever Duane Ward came on and gave up RBI singles to pinch hitter Harold Baines and Terry Steinbach.

"Tony (A's manager La Russa) decided to go with the bunt and take one shot at it," Key said. "Then we decided to walk Rickey, which I still agree with, and try to get Willie out. Not to degrade Willie, but Rickey is one of the premiere players in the game."

Wilson said a little bit of homework paid off.

"I hit a curveball," said Wilson.

(AP Laserphoto)

Boston's Steve Lyons safely steals second base when Yankees' Alvaro Espinoza is unable to catch the ball.

"We noticed earlier in the game when he got guys on base, he wanted to go to breaking pitches. And he gave me a curveball to hit."

Moments after hitting his double, Wilson received a death threat by a caller who then phoned back and threatened to kill the whole team. The calls were placed through the A's executive offices in a 10-minute span.

Wilson was given a police escort off the field after the game, and was accompanied by a total of eight officers to his car after the game.

Moore (15-8) beat Toronto for the fourth straight time this season. He gave up four hits in eight innings, and improved to 8-2 against the Blue Jays while pitching for Oakland.

"All I was trying to do was get outs," Moore said. "You have to be a little lucky to beat them four times. They're a good team."

Good enough to hold off Boston in the final two weeks?

Reagan authorization for missile shipment may surface in Gates hearing

By PETE YOST
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Poindexter tore it up. President Reagan said he couldn't remember signing it. William Casey didn't mention it. And Robert Gates says he'd forgotten it existed.

It's a presidential document — called a finding — that retroactively authorized CIA assistance for a secret Nov. 25, 1985, shipment of Hawk missiles to Iran.

The document, signed by then-President Reagan after the shipment was made, is at the core of a foreign policy initiative turned scandal. It also figures prominently in confirmation hearings for Gates, President Bush's choice to head the Central Intelligence Agency.

The hearings on Gates' nomination resume Tuesday, with testimony from past and present CIA officials, and questions likely about the mysterious paper.

The agency hurriedly drafted the document the day after the 1985 missile shipment because presidential authorization is required for CIA activities other than intelligence gathering. A CIA-owned company had shipped the Hawks from Israel to Iran.

The finding showed that the U.S. government was supplying arms to Iran in an attempt to free American hostages held in Lebanon.

A year passed. Word of U.S. arms deals with Iran exploded in a Lebanese publication.

"We did not ... trade weapons ... before it starts."

Britton said the Miami landfill is expected to close Monday.

He cited the Health and Safety Code of Texas, which prohibits dumping of refuse in public places.

Britton said violators will be prosecuted. He also urged anyone witnessing illegal dumping to contact the sheriff's office.

for hostages nor will we," Reagan told the nation Nov. 13, 1986.

He said the same thing six days later at a nationally televised news conference.

The finding threatened to become a political bombshell.

Congress was asking questions about the arms sales; Casey was going to have to testify on Capitol Hill.

It was Gates, then the agency's deputy director, who oversaw the preparation of Casey's testimony for appearances before congressional intelligence committees Nov. 21, 1986.

The testimony took no note of the finding to support the Hawks shipment.

Although Casey was questioned closely about having the necessary legal authority for the Hawk shipment, he never mentioned the secret paper.

Neither did Poindexter, Reagan's national security adviser, who met the same day with intelligence committee members before returning to his office. Once there, he ripped up the document in the presence of his aide, Oliver North, and the National Security Council's legal counsel, Navy Cmdr. Paul Thompson, according to testimony from North and Poindexter.

And Gates? According to notes taken by an assistant to John McMahon, deputy assistant director of the CIA, it was announced at a Dec. 5, 1985, meeting that Reagan had signed the finding.

But 11 months had passed, and Gates said he'd forgotten that fact by the time preparations for Casey's testimony were under way.

"I was in no position to know that something significant was being left out of the testimony" by Casey, Gates testified in 1987 at his first set of confirmation hearings to become CIA director.

Gates withdrew then because of questions about his role in the Iran-Contra affair.

But a statement by former CIA general counsel David Doherty placed Gates' sworn testimony in question.

Doherty says he handed a draft of the finding to Gates a day or so before Casey testified Nov. 21, 1986, to the intelligence committees about the Iran initiative.

"I handed a copy to Bob Gates with the comment that we had just found this draft," Doherty told the Senate Intelligence Committee in a document released Thursday. "I don't know what Bob Gates did with this draft."

Gates undoubtedly will be questioned about it this week.

The finding had become such a touchy subject in November 1986 that people were refusing to acknowledge its existence.

CIA officer Charles Allen called North on Nov. 19 and said an agency lawyer had found a draft of the document.

"Lt. Col. North, in an abrupt manner, told me emphatically that the finding did not exist and that I was mistaken," Allen says North told him.

Allen raised the issue of the finding in Casey's office Nov. 20, 1986, during preparations for his testimony.

"I recall with great clarity Mr.

Clair George informing me in a blunt and verbally abusive manner that the finding did not exist and that I should 'shut up talking about it,'" Allen said.

Allen made the statements in written answers to questions from Senate investigators in preparation for Gates' confirmation hearings.

"I have no good explanation as to why the existence of the 'mini-finding' was omitted from Mr. Casey's testimony," Allen wrote. "However, the vehemence of Lt. Col. North's denial as well as Mr. George's strong statement and the fact no one had seen a signed copy of the finding clearly were inhibiting factors."

The fact that Reagan had actually signed the document, and that Poindexter tore it up, remained a secret until the spring of 1987 when Poindexter made the admission in dramatic testimony before Congress.

He appeared under a grant of immunity.

Miami landfill to close Monday

MIAMI — The City of Miami landfill is closing and Roberts County Sheriff Bill Britton is beefing up locally the successful Don't Mess With Texas campaign.

"I'm reminding people it's against the law to dump trash on county roads," Britton said by telephone Friday. "I'm trying to head it (a possible problem) off before it starts."

Britton said the Miami landfill is expected to close Monday.

He cited the Health and Safety Code of Texas, which prohibits dumping of refuse in public places.

Britton said violators will be prosecuted. He also urged anyone witnessing illegal dumping to contact the sheriff's office.

THE NEED TO SPEED

Total concentration is the most important ingredient when the driver lines up at the starting line. Timing is essential for the most efficient start, which is probably the most crucial part of the race. The driver's reflexes must be finely honed and timing deadly accurate. To "red light" or beat the green light on the "tree" is an automatic loss.

Chuck Kimball with his 1982 Plymouth Arrow funny car. It is a fiberglass body over a chrome-molybdenum chassis, with a 468 Chevy engine. An average run time for the car is 8:02 seconds in the quarter mile. That translates to 168 miles per hour.

The roar of engines and the acrid smell of hot rubber fills the air. The lights on the "tree" go from amber to green and a pair of cars make for the finish line a quarter mile away.

Pampa has its own group of racing enthusiasts. They race everything from the family car (it does happen to be a Mustang), to funny cars, a long slender vehicle which transports the lone driver at well over 100 miles per hour.

This is bracket racing. It is not about just going fast, or beating the other car to the finish line, but it is about human reflexes and vehicle and driver consistency. The lights on the signal tree tell the drivers that their vehicles are staged (or lined up) evenly as measured by photo cells at ground level. Three amber lights countdown in five-tenth of a second intervals to the green go light. The driver hopes to accelerate his car as the green light shows, but not so fast that he "red lights". To red light means that the driver has anticipated the green light and he automatically loses the race.

From the roaring start, the vehicles race for the finish line, where another set of photo cells are tripped, and speed and time are recorded. The winner is not necessarily the car which arrives first. This is the second aspect of bracket racing which makes it more complex than just "going the fastest". Each driver knows his vehicle - its capability and timing. Before official racing starts, the driver has the opportunity to run his car in time trials to see just how fast it runs the quarter mile. Ideally, a vehicle performs consistently. That is, from trial to trial, it may do a quarter mile in 11:00 seconds. Before the driver stages at the starting line, he "dials in" his estimated time. To have a chance to win, he must not exceed the dial in time. To exceed the dial in time is to "break out", an automatic loss for the driver.

Racers pair off in a double lane, asphalt straightaway. Should neither driver red light nor break out, the driver who has the best reaction time to the starting green light and comes closest to his dial in time without going over is the winner.

On Saturday, Sept. 14, Dwayne Johnson, Jim Mills and Gary Bolch raced their vehicles at Amarillo Dragway.

Johnson, is the owner of a 1969 Camaro. The Camaro has a 427 Chevy big block engine and a Power Glide transmission. The body, except for the fiberglass hood, is all steel. Johnson said that he has between $13 and $14 thousand dollars invested in the car.

Johnson said that he's been racing since 1987. He said, "It is my unwind. I get away from Pampa, get away from work. It is a chance to meet people you've never met. I don't do it for the money, I'll never get the money back." Johnson came in second in the evening competition. He said he dialed in 11.59 seconds. He ran his race in 11.60 seconds; that is, 117 miles per hour.

Jim Mills races a teal colored 1973 Camaro named "Wild Imagination". It sports a 468 Chevy big block engine, two-speed Power Glide transmission and runs on high octane gasoline. Mills has been racing since 1978, with the first car he bought and paid for himself. He said that he races for the thrill of acceleration. He said, "Some people go around a corner real fast until they get a little scared, but you can do the same thing drag racing but alot safer because you're going in a straight line."

Despite a promising start - Mills was victorious in the first two heats - his car developed a crack around the transmission, and he could no longer compete.

Gary Bolch runs a rear engine dragster. He progressed to the dragster from a methanol powered Vega. For Bolch, racing is a family sport - while he drives, his wife, sons and their buddy, are his crew. Bolch said that before each run, he and one or both of his sons exchange a hand shake or thumbs up sign before he leaves the starting line. On Saturday, he took first place in the "Run What You Brung" trophy class. His dial in time was 10:96 seconds; he ran the quarter mile in 10:99 seconds, 131 miles per hour.

These men say that they've never wrecked nor been injured racing their cars. Mills described the safety features of his car. It has a drive-shaft loop to contain a broken drive shaft; the shifter has a reverse lock-out; the interior is outfitted with a roll cage. The driver wears a six-point safety harness, a single layer Nomex fire jacket, and a Snell certified helmet. On the back of his car is a safety switch to disconnect all electrical systems in the case of an accident with the car.

Chuck Kimball said, "If you like to go fast, racing is the right way to do it." He and other racers were unanimous in their condemnation of street racing. About racing, he said, "Until you experience it, there's no way to describe it. There's always a desire to go faster. The need to speed." He continued, "Racing is like a disease that you never want to get over."

Johnson's 1969 Camaro in the "burn box", a pre-staging area. In the burn box, Johnson locks his front tire brakes, and spins the rear tires to heat and clean them. A cloud of acrid smoke and deafening noise is produced.

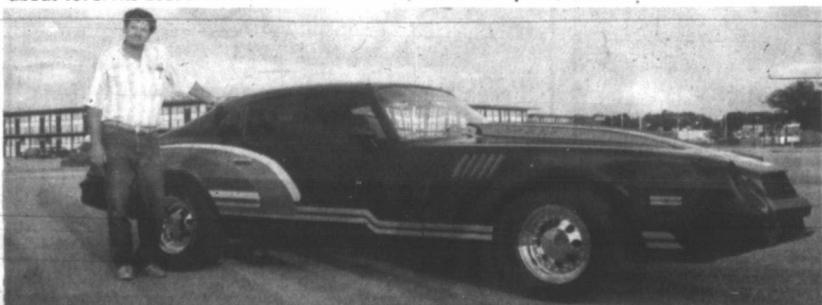

Johnson accelerates when the green light appears on the signal tree. Note the wrinkles in the rear tires. The air pressure in the tires is about 7 psi for better traction. The tire is screwed to the rim, otherwise the tire would spin off the wheel.

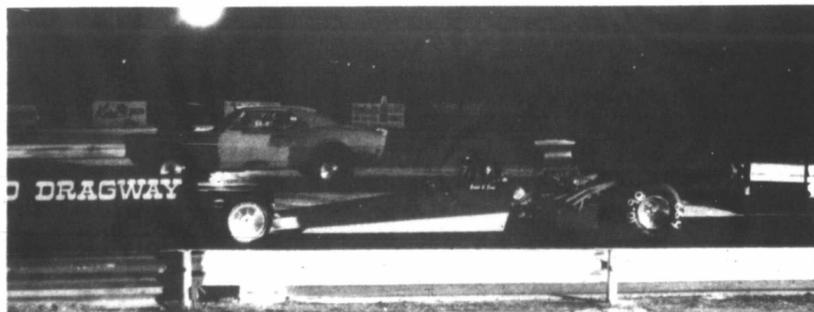

And he's off! Johnson races to the finish line, hoping that he doesn't break out or beat his dial in time. Note the photo cells in the lower part of the picture.

"Wild Imagination" is a 1973 Camaro, owned by Jim Mills. He said that he's been racing since about 1978. His best time ever was 11.37 seconds over the quarter mile.

Marlan Hoganson with his street legal 1979 Camaro. He races "just for the fun of it."

Gary Bolch in his rear engine dragster. The dragster lacks a "linelock" or break for the front wheels to use in the pre-staging burnout. He does a rolling burnout, that is accelerates hard until the wheels spin and he feels the tires grab the track.

Common sense and fitness

By BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS
For AP Special Features

Perceived exertion, or PE as it's sometimes called, is based on the research of Swedish exercise physiologist Gunnar Borg. His "Borg Scale" includes seven subjective phrases for judging the intensity of workouts.

The phrases range from "very, very light" all the way up to "very, very hard," reports Better Homes and Gardens magazine.

When asked to rate their workouts, Borg's research volunteers did a commendable job. Their subjective ratings closely matched the more objective laboratory measurements of exercise intensity.

For example, folks who described their workout as feeling "somewhat hard" or "hard" were in the intensity range best for fitness gains — 50 to 85 percent of maximum heart rate, explains Carl Foster, Ph.D., at Sinai-Samaritan Medical Center in Milwaukee.

The upshot: People don't have to worry about taking their pulse during a workout to find their optimum intensity level. All they need to do is remember "somewhat hard" or "hard." That's easy enough.

Key to lupus control is early detection and treatment

By Dr. SARA KRAMER
New York University School of Medicine

An estimated 16,000 Americans, most of them women, are diagnosed each year with lupus. But early diagnosis and treatment enable most to live a fairly normal life.

Lupus is essentially a glitch in the body's immune system — an auto-immune disease.

For reasons not fully understood, instead of destroying bacteria and viruses, the immune system turns against healthy tissues and organs.

Early detection and treatment are the key to managing lupus. There is no single test as yet for the disease, Kramer said, but the diagnosis is made with a series of blood and urine tests and assessment of the patient's symptoms.

Scientists are working on pinpointing possible genetic abnormalities that may one day lead to a simple blood test. It's believed certain people may be born with a defective or abnormal gene that places them at high risk for the disease.

Kramer stressed that most people have mild forms of lupus, and current treatments can slow the progression of the disease and control many of its symptoms.

There are different forms of lupus. The most serious form is systemic lupus, which can cause symptoms in different organ systems such as the skin, heart, lungs or blood, and may be life-threatening.

Systemic lupus can also involve the joints, causing swelling and pain similar to that of arthritis. Unlike arthritis, the joints aren't destroyed, but the pain can decrease mobility.

Another symptom of the disease is an unusual rash across the bridge of the nose and the cheeks like the wings of a butterfly.

Other symptoms can include weakness, fatigue, fever and joint swelling or pain.

The other type of lupus, called discoid or cutaneous lupus, affects only the skin, causing inflammation, rashes and scarring.

The joint pain caused by lupus is usually managed with anti-inflammatory arthritis drugs.

More serious complications might require oral corticosteroids or potent drugs called cytotoxic agents which suppress the immune system, and are used to prevent damage to organs.

AN ARA LIVING CENTER

Reunions, showers and birthdays keep Pampans busy in September

It's beginning to feel a lot like fall with cool mornings and evenings and pretty fall blooms in the yard. And winning football games!

About 230 classmates and spouses attended the 50th reunion celebration for the Pampa High School class of 1942, 1943, 1944 and 1945, the first to attend the present school. Julia Dawkins had the idea two years ago. Key workers were Julia, Margie Moore, John Paul McKinley, James Hart, 1944; Juanita Romines and Leymond Hall, 1942; Martha Holt, Jeannie Gilmore, Robbie Chilton, Pat Ramsey, 1943; Darrell and Jean Hogsett and Jean Casey, 1945.

Friday morning, 7 a.m. football players who had won the Pampa-Amarillo game in 1943 met with this year's team for some emotional moments as they exchanged memories. Visitors were John Paul McKinley, James Hart now of Tulsa, Merle McCracken, Dick Manry, Gene Robbins, Johnny Campbell, 1945 class president, Reginald Bridges and brother Doye Ray and J.C. Hopkins.

About a month before the game, Coach Cavalier PROMISED Julia, John Paul and Margie that his team would beat the Sandies and he kept the promise! The reunion group was the largest cheering section at the football game. The game served as a pace-setter.

Bill Waters emceed the Saturday night banquet. Rev. Reginald Bridges of Lubbock gave the invocation. Someone, dressed as S.T. Clements held the group spellbound as he talked like Mark Twain. The Pampa High School show choir, under the direction of Fred Mays sang. The tons of work seemed like nothing compared to the great time everyone had.

Belated birthday wishes to Roy Morriss, who celebrated the big occasion with his wife Charlene, Shirley and Don Stafford and Alberta Jeffries with dinner and dancing at the Biarritz Club last weekend.

At the United Way luncheon last Tuesday, Sona Solano wowed the crowd with her singing of the national anthem, unaccompanied, and the two more numbers, "Honestly" and "Holy Ground" to recorded accompaniment with her dad, Gil Solano at the controls. While listening to Sona, 17 the day before, was a real treat, the proud looks and smiles on the faces of her mom Jan, her dad and her grandmother, Cletis Butcher, were big treats, too. Just 18 months ago her parents were pleasantly astonished when Sona broke out in a song in the family car for the first time in their presence. Jan insists the talent comes from Gil, who sang professionally in Denver before moving to Pampa as an accountant for Celanese. Evidently Jack Bailey knew of her talent and booked her last spring for the luncheon. Jack did his bit of entertaining in another vein, uninhibited dry wit, which seems to be his specialty. P.S. Sona's mom is a beauty, too.

Carol Cofer was in charge of arrangements for the luncheon, and that says it all. Everything Carol does is done to perfection, beginning with her personal grooming habits and manner of dress. One nice gal!

Tonya and Dennis Stowers are deep in house plans. Their new house will be in the Quail Addition.

Sherry Carlson and 12 more hostesses gave a bridal shower for Lisa Maul, bride-elect of Darren Hudson last Sunday afternoon in Sherry's home. Marcia Stout dressed a doll for the centerpiece from the fabric of the bride's attendants' dresses. Everything was Victorian, even to the water pitcher and wash bowl, and quilt on the gift table. The scene stealer of the afternoon was little Kirsten Jo Benyshek, daughter of Robbie and Katrina of Ulysses, Kan. Kirsten is the first grandchild of Barbara and Robert Benyshek. Also enjoying the shower were Rita West, mother of the groom, Amarillo; Gladys Spence, grandmother of the groom, Skellytown; Elizabeth Newman, grandmother of the bride, Mobeetie; Martha Gardner and daughter, Shelly, aunt of the bride, McLean; and Regina Jordan, cousin of the bride, Lubbock. One funny gift received by the bride-to-be was an "attitude adjuster", i.e. a laced dressed rolling pin.

Did you know that Mike Conroy, cafeteria manager, sings well? Mike, let us hear you sometime!

Some residents of the Schneider House sleep in every morning, but not on Pat Bolton's BIG 5-0 birthday. When Pat arrived, she was greeted with smiles, laughter, giggling, balloons, streamers, a decorated wheelchair, a poster that assured her she was at the top, but not over the hill, handmade gifts, and two birthday cakes. All day long she wore a sign that said, "I'm 50!" Marguerite Martin hand decorated a shirt with "50 is Nifty" After such a celebration, Pat decided being 50 is nifty!

Last Saturday, six of the Schneider House residents held hands, giggled and walked to and from the Coney Island for lunch. That way no one got lost. In the line were Laquita Smith, leader, Esta Calhoun, Alice Moore, Exie Edwards and Beulah Wells.

Beulah was welcomed home recently after a month-long hospital stay. She made her first post-hospital birthday cake for the 11 residents who had September birthdays. On a daily basis she takes food to various residents and bakes a birthday cake for each one. Some undertaking, huh?

Pat's aunt and grandmother, Jean Webb and Nora Dalton, will be moving to Pampa soon from Sweetwater.

Just a little reminder. Good wearable clothing and what-nots of every kind may be left in the lobby. Instant enjoyment by the residents is guaranteed. Remember these dear people.

Residents are eager for Jean Rankin to return after making the rounds of family visits since June 1. Jean coordinates bingo games and quilting and writes a monthly newsletter. With a little coaching from Verlie Lampard, Coene Hunter served as summer bingo caller.

Members of a recently organized "New Ladies' Sunday School Class" at First Christian Church are strong in praise of their teacher Mary Sturgeon, a Pampa High School teacher during the week. Sandra and Jenny Bronner and Jenee' Bronner, Jenny's daughter, hosted a hamburger fry last Saturday evening. Others attending were Sue Winborn, Martha Green, Rosemary Holloway, Maedell Lanehart, and Mary. Early in the summer and soon after organizing the class, members went on a retreat at the summer home of Mary Sturgeon in Stonewall, Colo.

Now it can be told! Priscilla Alexander and Jerry Norris are making plans for early 1992. Family and friends are ecstatic over the news, even if it means that Priscilla will move to Lubbock. That's called GOOD NEWS with capital letters!

Joe and Dana Holland and son Ben are proud to announce the birth of a baby girl on Sept. 14 in Vail, Colo. Proud parents named her Brady Jo and she weighed in at 6 lbs. 9 oz. Grandparents are Earl and Barbara Smith, Pampa, and Mary Kate and J.B. Holland, Childress. Don Smith is Brady Jo's uncle. Great grandmothers are Ethel Mathews and Marie Smith, Pampa. The baby came on the birthday of great-aunt Betty Love of Amarillo. Beth and J.B. Walker, Pampa, are also her great-aunt and uncle. See you next week. Katie.

Dear Abby Abigail Van Buren

Eye doctor's exam was eye opening

DEAR ABBY: I had my eyes examined by an ophthalmologist who should have had his head examined. I am considering sending him a bill for services inadvertently rendered. Let me explain:

Dr. Toad (not his real name) must think that his female patients are so preoccupied with their eyes that they will not notice that the doctor's knee, arm, chest or whatever is pressing against them with more than ordinary pressure in this dark and very quiet examining room. (Actually, my knee was being sexually assaulted.)

Had I said anything, he would have feigned unawareness of any undue familiarity and accused me of having a dirty mind. So, I decided to handle this in my own way. From now on, anyone who treats me like a lady for hire will get my bill in the mail.

Any comment?
RUBBED THE WRONG WAY

DEAR RUBBED: Yes. Anyone, male or female, who feels that a professional is behaving unprofessionally should speak out immediately on arriving at that conclusion.

And should it happen a second time, a letter of complaint should be addressed to the county medical association.

DEAR ABBY: That snob who wrote to you, fearing that her uneducated in-laws might corrupt her son's English, was abominable. There are many more important things in life than correct grammar.

My late father, the son of Jewish immigrants, had to quit school at 14 to go to work. He and my late mother went on to become very successful businesspeople who sweated blood to educate their children.

I have always felt that what my parents achieved with very little education is far more impressive than what I have achieved.

My father's grammar may not have been as good as mine, but he was by far the better man. He was also highly respected in his community.

That snob who wrote to you, fearing that her uneducated in-laws might corrupt her son's English, should get off her high horse. Self-made people like her uneducated in-laws — and my parents — have a lot more to offer than some people who collect diplomas and degrees.

I would give everything I own if I could hear my parents talk in their poor English for only one more hour.

You may definitely use my name.

Know your real estate terms

By BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS BUILDING IDEAS

When buying real estate, the more informed shoppers are, the better their chances for a satisfactory purchase. It's wise to be familiar with the following common terms, suggests Better Homes and Gardens Building Ideas magazine.

— Abstract. Written history of a real estate parcel, showing transactions relating to its continuous line of ownership.

— Amortization. The orderly repayment of a loan, usually scheduled in equal payments at monthly intervals over a specific period of time.

— Appraisal. An expert's opinion of the value of a home and property.

— Assumption. Purchaser accepts responsibility for balance of existing loan.

— Deed. The document used to show transfer of ownership.

— Earnest money. Sum of money given to the seller or the seller's agent by the potential buyer as a deposit to reserve the property. If the deal goes through, the money is applied toward the down payment. If the sale fails, the money may be forfeited, unless contingencies for repayment are in the offer.

— Equity. The owner's value in a property, determined by the difference between its market value and any encumbrances.

— Loan costs. Expenses for services required in obtaining a loan, often including appraisal fees, attorney fees, survey fees, and loan commissions.

— Mortgage. The pledge of property as security for a loan.

— Note. The document promising repayment of the loan, stipulating amount of first payment date, and the date last payment is to be made.

— Point. Charge assessed by lender as loan origination fee or way to prepay interest, reducing the interest rate at which a conventional loan is amortized or increasing the yield on a government-backed loan that has an interest-rate ceiling. Each point is 1 percent of the loan amount.

Composter can reduce leaves; create mulch

MELROSE, Mass. (AP) — America's 54 million home gardeners face new problems in disposing of their leaves, branches and debris. Garden trash is estimated to account for 20 to 30 percent of this nation's landfill volume, and some municipalities now charge residents a per-bag fee for disposal.

An electric "leaf eater" reduces eight bags of wet or dry leaves to one in minutes. The shredded leaves are then used as mulch or compost, a natural fertilizer.

Chipping-shredding machines convert twigs and branches into wood chips, for flower borders and pathways.

Fungi cause dead spots in spring bermuda grass

Two fungi cause Spring Dead Spot in bermuda grass. We have had increasing occurrence of this disease over the last several years in our area.

Spring dead spot symptoms are 6 inches to 3 foot or larger areas that do not green up in the spring. Usually by late summer surrounding turf will have overgrown the dead areas. Many times the same spots will reappear and maybe enlarge each year.

This disease is most common in hybrid bermuda lawns but it can and does occur in common bermuda. Some of the cultural practices associated with the disease areas may include: compacted soil, close mowing, heavy fall watering, potassium deficiency and very cold winters.

Control of spring dead spot can be assisted by using a balanced fertility program and avoid high nitrogen after August and apply an application of Rubigan in September.

Rubigan is a fungicide that has only been available to professional turf people the last several years. It has been packaged in large quantities that were not economical for the homeowner in prior years. I understand that it is now available in pints and half gallons suitable for homeowner use.

One fall application in September at the rate of 4 oz. per 1,000 square feet should control spring dead spot. If you wait until October, you need to increase the rate to 6 oz. per 1,000 square feet. You will need to follow, the fungicide application with 1/2 to 1 inch of water which would be a thorough watering of your lawn. Rubigan may not be readily found but a little research of garden stores should locate a source. Hopefully this will help our bermuda lawns with spring dead spots. I intend to give it a try this fall myself because I have been having this problem in my lawn for several years.

For Horticulture

SWEET POTATO HARVEST

When to harvest sweet potatoes? In the fall and before the soil temperature falls below 55 degrees F. If an early frost damages the vines before digging, then remove them to prevent any decay from starting in the dead vines and moving down into the roots. A chilled sweet potato that has been below 55 degrees will not store.

If possible, dig sweet potatoes when soil is relatively dry. Let the roots dry for about 3 hours after digging so more of the soil can be removed. Avoid cuts, bruises and broken roots.

Cure in a warm, fairly tight building where temperatures range between 80 to 90 degrees for 2 to 3 weeks. Ideally the humidity should be 85 to 90 percent. Skin of a properly cured root will not slough off when rubbed firmly with the thumb.

After curing, sweet potatoes should be stored where the air is fairly dry and the temperature as uniform as possible around 55 degrees. Ventilate the storage area if temperature gets about 60 F and try not to disturb them.

The objective of this course is to teach youngsters safe and responsible firearm handling and marksmanship skills so that they can hit what they shoot at. This is not a hunter safety course.

Every one interested is invited to attend this first meeting at the Annex meeting room. Regular meetings for this beginner group will be held at the indoor rifle range located north of the rodeo arena and east of the Clyde Caruth Pavilion. Fertility drugs produce high pregnancy rates in women

By Dr. JOHN QUAGLIARELLO
New York University School of Medicine

Shakespeare wrote that Calpurnia, the wife of Julius Caesar, was "barren" and could not produce an heir.

But if Calpurnia had access to modern medicine's fertility drugs, history might have been altered.

Altered, that is, if she had seen a fertility specialist and had one of a variety of reproductive problems which fertility drugs might help.

Fertility drugs are tempting to most infertile women because such treatments are often associated with high pregnancy rates.

Fertility drugs are not appropriate for all infertility cases, however, and they have risks that women should consider before opting for such treatment. These treatments should never be prescribed unless all other possibilities have been investigated.

Most types of deficiencies for which fertility drugs may be prescribed have to do with the menstrual cycle when ovulation, or the production of eggs, occurs.

For women who do not produce an egg each month, fertility drugs stimulate the ovary to do so.

If a woman is infertile for no apparent reason, so called "idiopathic infertility," then fertility drugs can increase the chances of pregnancy by stimulating the ovaries to produce more eggs.

The most commonly prescribed fertility drug is a synthetic hormone called "clomiphene citrate" which is taken from the fifth through ninth day of each cycle. About 40 percent of the women who take this drug conceive. Most pregnancies occur within three or four months, and 95 percent within six months.

A woman should not stay on these pills for more than six months. If the pills are not effective by then, they most-likely aren't going to work.

Other drugs may be considered, however, including injections of the hormone "human menopausal gonadotropins."

There are risks involved in taking fertility drugs, even those that have the lowest complication rate.

With clomiphene citrate, about one out of 10 pregnancies will produce multiple births, usually twins. Because multiple births are more complicated than single births, they are more likely to result in miscarriage or premature delivery.

When human menopausal gonadotropins are used to induce or stimulate ovulation, a 20 percent multiple birth rate is expected — a 10 percent possibility of twins and 10 percent triplets or more.

Designers ready to show stripes

By BARBARA MAYER
For AP Special Features

The stripe is always in style. It mixes nicely with most other decorator patterns, so it can be used to update a room without entirely changing it.

Yet every few years, this perennial favorite becomes the darling of the design world.

And again it's time for stripes to shine.

"As a rule, more striped wallcoverings are sold than any other type of pattern," says Lyn Peterson, president of Motif Designs in New Rochelle, N.Y. "But currently, eight of our 10 top-selling wallpaper patterns are stripes."

"Perhaps it's because they are an antidote to the excessive floral patterns of the 1980s."

Taking a cue from the haberdashery where striped shirts are often displayed with plaid and paisley ties, Motif will soon release wallpaper patterns based on shirting stripes.

The reason they work so well in apparel applies to home decor.

"The repetition of an even pattern is visually comforting and soothing," Peterson says. "Stripes on the wall collect the disarray of everyday life and provide a quiet organized backdrop."

For something so simple, the stripe has a remarkably wide range of variations, depending on the combination of colors used and the thickness of the lines.

Some of the most useful combinations are these: awning stripes which are wide bands of color; shadow stripes which are two tones of the same shade; pencil stripes which are thin dark lines usually against white, and mattress ticking stripes which are usually bands of gray-blue and white.

In an Oxford stripe, the colored line is textured. A moire stripe has wavy watermarks down the length of the fabric. An uneven or multiple stripe features combinations of different widths and colors.

The variety of stripes and patterns means there is one for just about every setting.

"Like all truly classic designs, stripes never go out of style," says New York designer Jay Spectre.

'Freddy's Dead,' and Englund hopes he'll stay that way

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "I swear on my mother's honor, this is it," declares actor Robert Englund, right hand raised, about the nasty character he portrays on screen.

"There is no more Freddy Krueger. This is the final one."
It's hard to believe, but the title tells the tale: Freddy's Dead: The Final Nightmare. For the sixth time, the evil dreamstalker cuts a murderous swath through Elm Street, Springwood, U.S.A.

"We've taken out all the stops," assures Englund. "I don't think New Line will ever spend as much money as they did on this one. We did it in 3D, we've got actors like Yaphet Kotto. I knew when I read the script that this is the last one."

Robert Englund

At this stage in his career, Englund has a love-hate relationship with Freddy: loves what the razor-clawed maniac has done for his career; hates assuming the character.

"I really don't like the makeup anymore, haven't since about Part Four," he said. "I have to psych myself up to face the glue every morning. I've also done a couple of other horror movies, Phantom of the Opera and Terror, which required makeup. So I'm glad to be out of the makeup."

"But I have a sneaking suspicion that next summer — we always make ... (Elm Streets) in the summer — that I'm going to miss the same crew that we always work with, miss hanging out in the art department, miss the cameramen and effects people. It was sort of like going to summer camp every year. Now it's going to be over."

Elm Street had its first nightmare on Nov. 2, 1984, the product of horror master Wes Craven. He said that he had been inspired by press reports that a number of people had died while apparently experiencing nightmares. He invented Freddy as a Arnold Schwarzenegger in his first film, Stay Hungry, Henry Fonda in The Last of the Cowboys. I was in a rut when Freddy came along. I was usually the stool pigeon or the sidekick."

Englund grew up in the San Fernando Valley and studied acting at California State University Northridge and the University of California at Los Angeles. He played in repertory in the Midwest, specializing in Shakespearean clowns — "everything but Touchstone in As You Like It and the Fool in King Lear." He had his heart set on a Tennessee-Williams play but was passed over because of "sexual politics" in the theater company — casting was based on considerations other than professional.

"I had played all kinds of roles in hopes of getting the Williams play; in Skin of Our Teeth I literally played nine roles," he said. "When I was passed over, I thought, 'If I have to fight politics in this pure art form, the theater, I might as well go to Hollywood, where I can be rewarded for it.'"

Even though the Nightmares rescued Englund from sidekicks and hoodlums, he said that "horror movies are not my busman's holiday."

"But since I've done Freddy, I've been called upon to defend the genre. Because of the success of the Elm Street series, I've been to Europe a lot. There they treat the genre with a lot more respect than they do in the United States.

"We're sort of like the poor country peasant here; it's OK for us to save the studio, but try to get a good table in a restaurant!"

"But in Europe, we're like jazz; I'm treated with the same respect as a jazz musician. It's a kind of intellectual respect, and respect for the form as well. With my trips over there and my visits to film festivals, I've now become something of a (horror) fan, and I've picked up some favorites along the way."

He mentioned a few he likes, including Sisters, an early Brian de Palma film with Margot Kidder and Charles Durning; and White of the Eye, directed by Donald Cammell with David Keith and Cathy Moriarty.

Englund also liked The Silence of the Lambs, starring Anthony Hopkins and Jodie Foster.

"Although it's more of a psychological thriller," he said, "it certainly strays into the horror area."

BINDWEED CONTROL

This is a good opportunity to spray bindweed on your farmland if you have some actively growing that has not recently been plowed.

If you have some cropland that you don't plan raising wheat on this year, then an application of 1 to 2 pints of Banvel would be a good treatment for bindweed infested areas. Banvel has gotten better results with fall applications than in spring or summer applications.

Fall is also a good time to use Landmaster BW. With Landmaster, you can save a tillage operation as it will kill all vegetation presently growing. Spray Landmaster BW at the 54 oz. rate and after four days, you can start sowing wheat.

Bindweed is something that just takes repeated applications of herbicides over a period of years. It helps when you spend your herbicide dollars where they return the most good — that is what you should get with an application of Banvel at this time. You would need a few days of warm weather after application before a killing frost.

Wheat may be planted in fall after an application of Banvel but crop injury may occur if the interval between application and planting is less than 45 days per pint of product used per acre.

If you have any questions about bindweed control, let me know or come by and pick up a copy of L-2339, Field Bindweed Control.

PRAIRIE DOG CONTROL

During the past several years, a lot of land owners have made a concerted effort to eliminate their prairie dog towns. With the wetter fall weather, now is the time to get cranked up for this project if you have "any" prairie dogs.

As I have mentioned before, they travel long distances to infest new areas or re-infest old towns. Any prairie dogs that you allow will sooner or later cause infestations on friends and neighbors up to 5 to 10 miles away.

Fumigant tablets are my favorite method. You can obtain 100 percent control when using them with one or two follow-up treatments.

That is what is needed — 100 percent control. Otherwise, in a couple of years, they are back as bad as ever.

If you have any questions, give me a call or come by for a visit. The fumigant tablets can be obtained at some of the farm stores and are also used to fumigant grain.

Cattlemen talking beef to retailers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Cattlemen's Association is going beyond promoting beef as "real food for real people" as it fights depressed livestock prices and lackluster sales.

The association has taken its case for beef to grocers, exporters, fast-food giants and the national school lunch program, touting low prices and good supplies.

It also is fighting legislation that it claims would bring in for slaughter an additional 360,000 dairy cows to an already glutted beef market, and is pushing for changes in the way the government reports the market.

"With fed-cattle prices falling, weights rising and sales volume lackluster at best, the end of July and early August looked dismal for the beef industry," said this month's edition of the association's National Cattlemen magazine.

"Feedlot operators were estimated to be losing $10-$15 per hundred pounds ... Noting these circumstances, the National Cattlemen's Association swung into action to encourage movement of beef supplies. ... Seldom has the need to look out for cattlemen's pocket-books been more clear."

Market analysts say feedlot operators are losing about $100 a head as cattle prices hover at $67-$68 per hundred pounds: The market began slipping this spring and hit $63 per hundred pounds before prices began inching upward.

The Agriculture Department reported last week that cattle and calves on feed for slaughter totaled 7.01 million head on Sept. 1, up slightly from a year ago and 6 percent above Sept. 1, 1989. It is the largest September number on feed since 1987, USDA said.

Chuck Lambert, director of economics for the association, said he believes efforts to move the surplus cattle through the pipeline may be paying off, and in "three weeks to a month, most of these supply problems should be behind us for the rest of 1991."

"The indications are that (retail) prices have declined and we are seeing increased movement of product through the marketing system," he said.

China team to visit research center

AMARILLO — Texas A&M Agricultural Research and Extension Center in conjunction with USDA-Agricultural Research Service will host a group of visiting scientists from the People's Republic of China on Friday, Sept. 20.

Before coming to Amarillo, the PRC delegation will visit agricultural research centers at Oklahoma State University, Kansas State University, University of Nebraska and Iowa State University.

The Chinese scientists are traveling here to see research innovations in integrated cropping systems, particularly in corn production, and lysimeter irrigation systems developed in the Texas High Plains by scientists in Texas A&M's Agricultural Experiment Station and USDA-Agricultural Research Service research centers at Bushland and Etter.

The PRC delegation returns to mainland China following their only site visit to Texas in the Amarillo area.

Exports make up for lower U.S. tobacco demand

By JENNIFER DIXON AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fewer people than ever are lighting up in the United States, but the rest of the world still hankers for the flavor of an American cigarette.

The world's taste for U.S. tobacco has fueled exports of cigarettes rolled from the leaves of Southern-grown burley and flue-cured tobacco, and is more than enough to offset declining domestic demand, the Agriculture Department reports.

While those shipments mean cash for farmers and profits for leaf dealers and cigarette manufacturers, health activists say they also pose health and ethical questions.

"Transworld cigarette companies are bringing an epidemic in the Third World that will be unprecedented," says Cliff Douglas, associate director of the American Lung Association.

Today's tobacco outlook is further complicated by questions from a North Carolina Democrat, Rep. Charles Rose, about whether U.S. exports are actually mixed with mostly cheaper, foreign-grown tobacco being passed off as the genuine American blend.

Growers contend the practice undercuts their production, which nevertheless has been increasing steadily in value and weight since the mid-1980s. But others say the addition of cheaper tobacco from overseas makes U.S. tobacco blends more affordable, and has actually opened export markets for growers and cigarette manufacturers.

Trade negotiations that cracked open markets in Japan, Taiwan, South Korea and most recently, Thailand, sparked the dramatic expansion in overseas markets for U.S. tobacco, industry and USDA officials said.

"The demand has always been there, but it's been pent up in a lot of countries that simply would not allow American tobacco or manufactured products into their country, except in very limited numbers," said Walker Merryman, vice president of The Tobacco Institute, which represents U.S. cigarette manufacturers.

In 1986, about 10 percent, or 64 billion, of the 658 billion cigarettes produced in the United States were exported. By 1990, exports of U.S. cigarettes totaled about 23 percent, or 164 billion, of the 710 billion cigarettes produced.

The value of those exports also skyrocketed — from $2.31 billion in 1986 to $5.04 billion in 1990. And the trend continues this year, with exports in the first six months totaling 88 billion cigarettes worth $2.36 billion.

The biggest market for U.S. cigarettes last year was Belgium-Luxembourg, a transshipment point to Europe, Eastern Europe, the Soviet Union, North Africa and the Middle East, USDA said. Those cigarette shipments alone were worth nearly $1.73 billion. Other big buyers were Japan, $1.3 billion; Hong Kong, $430 million; United Arab Emirates, $187 million, and Saudi Arabia, $186 million.

Exports of leaf tobacco have similarly been increasing — from 477.5 million pounds worth $1.22 billion in 1986 to 492.5 million pounds worth $1.44 billion in 1990. Exports for the first six months of the year were worth $810 million, up 5.5 percent.

According to USDA, the leading export markets for unmanufactured tobacco last year were Japan, Germany, Netherlands, Hong Kong and Taiwan.

For farmers, value of their crop also has risen — from $1.77 billion in 1986 to $2.77 billion last year. The growth is in spite of a 10 percent decline in domestic consumption, from 583 billion cigarettes to 525 billion, said USDA's Economic Research Service.

"The drop seen in (domestic) consumption is in response to higher prices, anti-smoking activities, further restrictions on where people can smoke, and declining social acceptance of cigarette smoking," USDA said in a recent report. "This trend is expected to continue for at least the next few years."

USDA figures show steeply rising retail costs and taxes for cigarettes over the last half of the 1980s — from $31.8 billion in 1986 to $41.6 billion in 1990.

Health activists complain that people in many of the countries targeted by the tobacco industry are generally poor, poorly educated, and without the health awareness of U.S. citizens.

"Their conduct is outrageous. It's without any regard for the health and personal well being of people in this country or in other countries," Douglas said.

Douglas said women in developing countries "have extraordinarily low smoking rates" but that they — and adolescents — were being targeted by major cigarette manufacturers. The industry denied the charge.

Merryman said the biggest customers of U.S. cigarettes are not "Third World nations. And anyone who believes that other countries would stop producing and selling cigarettes if we ceased exporting is living in a fantasy world."

"The only thing that would result if we didn't export is that tens of thousands of farmers in this country would lose their farms, and farms in other countries would be enriched, and I don't see that as a very satisfactory tradeoff."

The Coalition on Smoking or Health, of which the Lung Association is a part, believes the federal government needs to help tobacco farmers convert to other crops.

"So we can stop growing a crop that brings much more death and disease in the United States than any cocaine crop ever did," Douglas said.

Light and plants undergoing study

By MARGARET SCHERF Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Genetic engineering and other technologies in the future will enable scientists to change how a plant receives and responds to light, an Agriculture Department researcher predicts.

"Applying new knowledge about how plants respond to light could mean new strategies for weed control, better control of the timing of the harvest, higher crop yield and improved crop quality," said Essex E. Finney, director of the department's Beltsville, Md., Agricultural Research Center.

About 60 U.S. and foreign scientists will report research findings on plants' response to light at the center's symposium this week on "Photomorphogenesis in Plants: Emerging Strategies for Crop Improvement." Photomorphogenesis refers to the regulation of plant growth and development by light.

"We can expect genetic engineering and other technologies in the future to enable scientists to alter how a plant receives and responds to light — for example, whether it shrivels or thrives — in ways that haven't been possible," Finney said.

An example of how photomorphogenesis can be manipulated to improve a plant will be described by research leader Steven J. Britz.

His greenhouse studies at the Climate Stress Laboratory in Beltsville have shown that soybean seeds contain more polyunsaturated oils when the plants are grown very close together, leaving the seedpods in deep shade.

In contrast, seeds from soybean plants grown farther apart, allowing more light to hit the pods, produced more oleic acid, a beneficial monounsaturated oil.

Some former Beltsville researchers will mark the 40th anniversary of a critical research discovery involving plants' responses to light by describing for the symposium their search for the biological "light switch" in plants.

The switch, a pigmented protein called phytochrome, controls such processes as germination and flowering. Phytochrome works as a switch because it exists in two forms — changing back and forth upon exposure to red light and far-red, a zone at the edge of our eyes' limits.

The team first observed this reversible response in 1951 and proved it in an experiment in April 1952. But it took the scientists until 1959 to detect the pigment itself in plant tissues, said the symposium's co-chairman, plant physiologist William J. VanDerWoude of the Beltsville laboratory.

"The discovery of phytochrome by Beltsville scientists was a major milestone in the study of how light influences plants," VanDerWoude said.

"Genetic engineering techniques have allowed researchers to determine which genes code for phytochrome, and these genes can be moved from one species of plant to another," he said.

Pampa designated FmHA loan Eligible Rural Area

The administrator of Farmers Home Administration (FmHA), La Verne Ausman, announced that Pampa has been approved as an FmHA Eligible Rural Area, and its residents may therefore apply for federal loan and grant money.

Pampa, in Gray County, falls under the jurisdiction of Farmers Home Administration's Clarendon County Office, supervised by FmHA County Supervisor David Grussendorf in Donley County.

With a population of 19,959, Pampa would soon have outgrown the limits set by previous federal guidelines as to which cities are eligible for loan and grant making.

The Farmers Home Administration guidelines which cover rural area requirements had called for a community to have a population which exceeds 10,000 yet does not exceed 20,000.

Under a new change to the procedure, Farmers Home Administration has been authorized by its administrator to allow aid for populations of up to 25,000 in special circumstances where limited private lending potential is evident.

This new change, effective Aug. 2, 1991, makes possible the servicing of numerous new rural areas previously unable to receive federal loan-making assistance. This is especially important in areas which have a lack of mortgage credit and have little opportunity for achieving loans locally, Ausman said.

Pampa's designation as an Eligible Rural Area marks the first use of this expanded procedure in Texas.

All interested applicants should notify David Grussendorf at (806) 874-3552, or apply in person at the FmHA County Office in Clarendon.

Farmers Home Administration, as the lending arm of the U.S. government, has long been a source of credit for farmers, ranchers and rural homeowners unable to obtain credit through commercial lenders.

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — U.S. Sen. Alan Simpson, a frequent critic of the American media, is writing a book on the First Amendment, politics and the press, and he says it won't be pretty.

"It will be very different from what the press perceives itself to be, I assure you that," the Wyoming Republican said.

Simpson has tangled with nationally syndicated columnist Jack Anderson and called CNN reporter Peter Arnett an Iraqi sympathizer for broadcasting from Iraq during the Persian Gulf War. He later apologized to Arnett.

Despite such criticism, Simpson is sought out by reporters for his blunt language and quick wit.

WENATCHEE, Wash. (AP) — Wanted to rent: rustic lakeside home with view of snow-capped mountains. Call Kevin Costner, Hollywood, Calif.

Costner

Film office spokesman Jim Boyle said the movie's producers reportedly found a cabin they like in Oregon, but are giving Washington a chance to come up with a better one before they make their decision where to film next week.

Boyle says set designers can have the house built if need be, but the snow-capped mountains and lake are non-negotiable.

SAN SEBASTIAN, Spain (AP) —

Psycho star Anthony Perkins is to receive this year's Donostia Prize for lifetime achievement at the 39th annual San Sebastian International Film Festival.

Jane Seymour, Claudia Cardinale, Klaus Kinski and Malcolm McDowell were among the stars who turned out for the festival's opening Thursday in this Basque resort town.

Over the next nine days films by such directors as Dany Levi of Switzerland, Bruce McDonald of Canada, Wojciech Marczewski of Poland and Sergei Snehkin of the Soviet Union will be up for prizes.

The festival will also present such American films as Boyz n the Hood and Barton Fink.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Things just haven't been the same in Baltimore since the Colts packed up and moved to Indiana, says novelist Tom Clancy, who is putting up $100,000 to try to lure a new professional football team to his hometown.

Clancy, 44, said he grew up watching the Colts and that a part of him left with the team when owner Robert Irsay moved it to Indianapolis before the 1984 season.

The 28-team National Football League is planning to add two franchises in 1994. Clancy, who wrote The Hunt for Red October, said he'll pay the city's $100,000 franchise application fee, due next week.

The author would like to be the majority owner of a new team, but says the main thing is that Baltimore get a team, no matter who runs it.

"This is something that I really want to do for the town I grew up in," he said.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Jim Palmer has made a good living pitching baseballs and underwear. Now he's going to try his hand at pitching ideas.

The Hall of Famer said he will begin filming a 30-minute talk show called Living Today on Sept. 30.

Palmer, who pitched for the Baltimore Orioles and now appears in ads for Jockey underwear, said the daily show will deal with the same kinds of topics that Oprah Winfrey, Phil Donahue and Geraldo Rivera cover, but will do it "a little more lightheartedly."

Producer Samuel Maturó said he hopes to announce a syndication deal shortly and have the show on the air next year.

NEW YORK (AP) — Diana Ross opened at Radio City Music Hall in a show punctuated by a surprise appearance by a male Diana Ross impersonator from the audience and an onstage glimpse at the singer's five children.

"Sing it, baby!" the Thursday night crowd yelled. "Go for it, Diana!" She gave them nearly two hours of old favorites, modern ballads and several songs from her latest album, her 58th.

Ross, 47, was singing a medley of such Supremes-era tunes as "Baby Love" and "Stop in the Name of Love" when she was upstaged by the male impersonator. The lookalike was ushered away only to return repeatedly.

Finally, Ross allowed him to dance the length of the long stage then coaxed him off.

"Go down now, honey," Ross said. "You're not getting paid tonight."

She later introduced her three grown daughter and two young sons from two marriages.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Bob Hope's act made the most money at the Ohio State Fair. But country singer Garth Brooks, 29, drew a bigger crowd than the enduring 88-year-old comedian.

The gate from the 18-day August shindig was disclosed at a meeting of the Ohio Expositions Commission.

Expenses for Hope's Aug. 4 show were his $88,000 fee plus close to $7,000 for musicians performing with him. He drew an audience of 5,080.

Brooks, paid $61,250 for his Aug. 12 concert, drew a crowd of 9,758.

In previous years, show admission was free and Hope filled the seats. This year, show tickets cost $3 on top of $6 adult admission to the fair.

GARDEN GROVE, Calif. (AP) — The Rev. Robert A. Schuller says he's ready to someday take over the television ministry built by his father, the Rev. Robert H. Schuller, but he's his own doubting Thomas.

The succession question arose when a cerebral hemorrhage struck the elder Schuller on a recent European trip earlier this month.

A full recovery is expected for the 65-year-old Schuller, who heads the Crystal Cathedral here and is host of the syndicated television show Hour of Power, which annually raises nearly $30 million from an estimated 1.2 million U.S. viewers.

"I can do the job. Whether or not that will carry it is another story," Schuller, 36, said. "That's anybody's guess. I do know that it's a very important ministry."

Church holdings include a $23 million Family Life Center and 170 acres in San Juan Capistrano, the intended site of a $30 million retirement center.

BERNARDSVILLE, N.J. (AP) — Bill Moyers and his wife, Judith, are joining other celebrities hanging their hats and gloves in the leafy and expensive preserves of New Jersey.

The couple bought a five-bedroom home in Bernardsville for $1.29 million, real estate records show.

Experts say Texas Longhorns perfect for fat-conscious eaters

By BILL JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — They once stretched from horizon to horizon, a bawling, heaving mass of stringy orneriness, their dust clouds giving notice that the Longhorns and their cowboy companions were headed to town.

Then, almost like the passenger pigeon and the buffalo, the Texas Longhorn faded from the trail, the victim of the same hunger for beef that made cities of Abilene, Dodge City and a dozen other trail towns.

"Actually, the Texas Longhorn was closer to extinction than the buffalo ever was," said L.V. Baker Jr., an Elk City physician and a former president of the Texas Longhorn Breeders Association of America.

"People wanted cattle with bigger frames and more fat," says Baker. "They brought in the English breeds and that nearly was the end of the Texas Longhorn."

When the federal government appropriated $3,000 in 1927 to save the Texas Longhorn, two rangers for the U.S. Forest Service traveled 5,000 miles and inspected 30,000 head of cattle trying to find purebred animals, Baker said. They came up with only 20 cows, three bulls and four calves.

Those Longhorns were taken to the Wichita Mountain Wildlife Refuge near Lawton, said Reimer Calhoun Jr. of Mansfield, La., the association's current president.

Those 27, plus a few head found later on a half-dozen isolated ranches, were the nucleus of today's seven recognized major blood lines.

Ironically, the same genetic trait that led to the Texas Longhorn's near demise is responsible for a present-day boomlet in its population.

"These are not fatty animals," says Baker. "The Texas Longhorn has the lowest fat and cholesterol of any breed of cattle."

"There are three ways to get lean beef," says Calhoun. "One, you buy fat beef, pay for it and then cut the lard off and throw it away. That's silly. You can starve your cattle down. That's silly. Or you can raise Texas Longhorns that produce lean beef and do it in volume."

"With the lean beef sentiment running through the nation, the Texas Longhorn fills the bill," Calhoun said. A study at Texas A&M University backs up most of their claims. That study showed that Longhorn cattle, and to a lesser extent a Longhorn-British cross, produced beef with less saturated fat and more monounsaturated and polyunsaturated fat.

That study also showed that the Longhorn deposited more of its fat in internal areas — kidney, pelvic and heart — than did the British cattle.

"They're very low in fat," says Joe Moranto, owner of a restaurant in Meers that bills itself as having the world's best hamburgers.

Maranto said the sale of hamburgers was declining until he began using Longhorn beef more than three years ago. Now, he says, "we sell between 75,000 and 100,000 a year."

"For a lot of people, it's the first time they've really tasted beef," he said.

The Texas Longhorn is the descendant of Spanish Andalusian long horn cattle Columbus brought to Santo Domingo on his second voyage in 1493. A dozen of the offspring were taken to Mexico in 1521 by Spanish explorer Gregorio de Villalobos. From there they spread along the mission trail into Texas.

When mission settlements were abandoned after Indian attacks or disease, the cattle escaped. By 1860, by some estimates, as many as 20 million roamed the Texas range, unbranded and unclaimed.

It was during this time, the experts believe, that the Texas Longhorn developed to its prime through a survival-of-the-fittest winnowing.

The end of the Civil War was the beginning of the great trail drives, probably the most enduring and romantic evocation of the Old West.

Range-toughened cowboys, some as young as 14, braved hostile Indians, rain-swollen streams and stampedes to herd the Longhorns to the railheads, primarily in Kansas and Missouri.

Although that part of history lasted but 20 years, some 10 million Texas Longhorns stomped their way along the Chisholm and other trails on their way to Eastern dinner tables.

But as consumers became dissatisfied with the lean Longhorn meat, ranchers became disenchanted with the extra time it took to get them ready for slaughter. By the 1920s, the Texas Longhorn had nearly disappeared from the Western ranges.

Now, however, Calhoun estimates some 125,000 Texas Longhorns are grazing in 48 states, Canada, Australia and New Zealand.
