A FREEDOM NEWSPAPER

SEPTEMBER 25, 1991

WEDNESDAY

Jack Mann, 77, waves to the press as he leaves the British ambassador's residence early Wednesday in Damascus, Syria. Mann was released Tuesday night in Beirut after being held captive by Islamic extremists.

Mann arrives home

LYNEHAM, England (AP) — Jack Mann, the 77-year-old Briton who had been the oldest Western hostage in Lebanon, came home to England today after 2 1/2 harrowing years of captivity during which he reportedly was tortured by his kidnapers and saw no one but them.

In New York, U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, who has been working to arrange a comprehensive deal to free the hostages, expressed hope today that another Western captive could be freed before the end of the week.

The military VC-10 carrying Mann and his wife from Cyprus touched down at 1:10 p.m. (7:10 a.m. CDT) at the Lyneham air base 80 miles west of London. The Royal Air Force saluted Mann, a World War II pilot, and a Spitfire fighter like the ones he flew against Nazi Germany made a victory roll overhead.

Mann was freed by the pro-Iranian Revolutionary Justice Organization on Tuesday, and reunited in Damascus, Syria with his wife, Sunnie.

Mann smiled as he emerged from the plane, and a nurse helped him down the steps. But after a night's rest, turned out in a sports jacket and ascot, he appeared more energetic than he had in his first hours of freedom.

He said nothing to the crowd of well-wishers, but shook hands cordially with the base commander and kissed a woman who had a bouquet for his wife. Sunnie Mann told the crowd: "It's the most wonderful day of my life."

During a stopover in Cyprus, Mann told his wife of his ordeal. CNN showed a tape of their reunion, and reported that Mrs. Mann said her husband told her he never saw another human being apart from his captors and did not know which faction was holding him. He also said he was tortured and his medication was withheld, she was quoted as saying, but she gave no details.

Despite the reports of maltreatment, the chief medical officer aboard the flight, Squadron Leader Garth Manning, said Mann was in "remarkably good shape when you consider he has been in a cell for 2 1/2 years."

"He is a very resilient man who obviously has great strength of spirit and is quite remarkably well," Manning said. The crew toasted the Manns with champagne during their flight, he said.

Perez de Cuellar, speaking to reporters outside the United Nations, said efforts to arrange a swap continued.

"We will continue our effort ... and I hope that perhaps one (hostage) will be released before the end of the week," he said. "That is my hope."

But more potential snags emerged, in the form of a dispute between two players in the hostage standoff.

Israel today accused Iran of breaking a promise to provide information on an Israeli soldier missing in Lebanon, a condition that is part of a broad deal to free Western hostages.

A Shiite Muslim cleric involved in the hostage negotiations said in Lebanon today that the soldier was "probably dead," but Israel has demanded a firm accounting of its missing men.

Pro-Iranian Muslim kidnapers holding Westerners in Lebanon are demanding Israel release Arab prisoners in exchange for their captives. The Muslim cleric, Hussein Musawi, said the kidnapers were awaiting a reciprocal action after freeing Mann on Tuesday.

City commissioners give praise and pay raise to city manager

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Pampa city commissioners awarded City Manager Glen Hackler for doing an "excellent job of managing the city and keeping a lid on taxes" by giving him a $4,885 annual pay raise during their Tuesday meeting at City Hall.

Hackler, 29, one of the youngest and, previously, lowest paid city managers in Texas for a city the size of Pampa, has been consistently praised by commissioners for his ability to increase city services without raising taxes.

He will go from a current salary of $49,350 to $54,235, commissioners voted.

Commissioner Ray Hupp said, "You look at two things: performance and what the job pays in other cities in the area. We looked at Big Springs and the city manager is paid $55,000. Borger is $55,200. Canyon is $60,420. Hereford is $62,500. Lamesa is $54,500 and Levelland is $54,912, and most of those cities are comparable in size or smaller."

Hupp complimented Hackler, noting, "He has done an excellent job under difficult situations. He has helped us to continue a policy of not raising taxes. Previously we had two assistants, now we have none. He is doing the jobs of three people."

Glen Hackler

Hackler, an attorney and Texas Tech University graduate, was promoted from legal assistant following a stormy four-month battle between commissioners and former manager Jack Chaney, who is now suing the city.

Prior to that the city faced a year or more of battles between City Manager Bob Hart and then-commissioner Richard Peet.

That battle caused Hart to seek employment with the city of Georgetown and helped Peet defeat incumbent David McDaniel for mayor.

Commissioner Gary Sutherland said of Hackler, "I personally, and the commission in general, believe Glen has done an excellent job. I'm hesitant to use too strong a word, but we all feel real high on him, as indicated by the raise. It just really gets him in line with other city managers in similar and smaller cities. Part of my problem in putting it into words is that I'm a Glen Hackler fan. He has wisdom beyond his years, and the same is true of his management ability."

Jerry Wilson was another commissioner to praise Hackler, especially for his work in the area of waste management.

In other business, commissioners agreed to have a special referendum on Tuesday, Nov. 5, regarding whether beer sales should be allowed in the city limits on Sundays.

The election is the result of petitions and complaints by Allan and Jesse Whitson, owners of Harvey Mart convenience stores, that it is unfair county businesses can sell beer on Sunday while establishments inside Pampa may not.

Supporters of the law, which dates back to 1946, say if people want to drink on Sunday they can buy their beer on Saturday. Several ministers have told commissioners they believe loosening restrictions on alcohol amounts to an endorsement of drinking.

They have complained that such a message contradicts the recent "Just Say No" campaign against drugs.

Commissioners gave Hackler permission to draw up an agreement with Scrap Processing Co. for reclamation of white goods such as washers and refrigerators from the landfill for recycling.

Hackler said a three-month trial with the company saw 150 tons of metal removed from the landfill, which he considered substantial.

"This is a business that would assist us with pro-longing the life of our landfill," Hackler said. "They would remove them before they enter the waste stream and save wear and tear on our equipment."

Hackler stated, "The financial end of this is virtually a wash," but that the ecological benefits make a break-even project such as this worthwhile.

The initial agreement is for three months, with a month-to-month renewal after that if things continue to go well.

Dan Treadwell and Mike Ehrle were appointed to the city Cable Advisory Commission to fill two uncompleted terms created by a death and a resignation.

Chisum: Lottery likely to pass in Texas

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

State Rep. Warren Chisum addressed a hometown crowd Tuesday afternoon during the monthly Greater Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce membership luncheon, warning that those Texans without liability insurance may soon be without an inspection sticker or new license as well.

"What we did was realize a lot of people do not carry liability insurance," Chisum said of the last legislative session. "We looked at different places that would be convenient to inspect their insurance certificate."

"The driver's license office, state inspection locations and license plate office were three places we picked out where you have to have proof of insurance before you can get the other things."

Chisum said the only allowances would be for people who have a driver's license but own no car.

Rep. Warren Chisum

"Basically, we are requiring proof of liability," Chisum said. "In this state, nowadays you cannot drive a car without it."

Chisum also noted that though he opposes a proposed state lottery, it appears imminent.

"In all honesty, I have to say I don't find many people against it," he said. "I intend to vote against it and work against it. I voted against it on the House floor. But it has a real good chance of passing."

If the lottery is approved by Texas voters in November, Chisum said it will generate $470 million for the general revenue fund during 1992-93.

He said no credit cards, food stamps or Aid For Dependent Children funds could be used to purchase lottery tickets and that they could not be sold in bars or private clubs.

Chisum also noted that those under 18 would be prohibited from buying a lottery ticket or claiming a prize.

One of the most dramatic and least reported changes in state government during the last legislative session, Chisum said, is the new authority given the governor to appoint heads of agencies.

"She was largely a figurehead but did appoint boards and commissions," Chisum said, referring to Ann Richards. "Now we are moving to more of a cabinet form of state government."

If Amendment 1 passes during the November elections, Chisum told chamber members, Texas will have more prison beds than any other state or foreign country in the world.

"But you cannot deter crime if you don't have prison beds to put them in," he said.

Chisum also predicted that by 1995 property taxes in the state will be so high, Texans will seek a state income tax as a means of relief.

"We will have to vote on it," he predicted. "People will be looking for some relief to the high property taxes."

Instead of a state income tax, Chisum said citizens should band together to insist government spending be reduced, something the public did not insist on during the most recent session of the legislature.

Lefors school district faces $30,000 deficit, trustees say

LEFORS — A loss of approximately $200,000 to County Education District 14 is leaving Lefors Independent School District with a possible deficit of more than $30,000 for the 1991-1992 school year.

At a special meeting of the Lefors ISD board of trustees Tuesday, board members unanimously approved a tax rate of $1.2095 per $100 valuation, up 10.95 cents from $1.10 per $100 valuation for the 1990, said Joe Roper, Lefors superintendent.

Board members met for 45 minutes Tuesday in the meeting, called specifically for the board to set the tax rate prior to Oct. 1.

Board members discussed revenues generated from the tax rate and compared with the 1991-1992 budget for the school district, Roper said. Lefors ISD's budget for the coming year has been set at $1.79 million overall, he said, with a projected deficit of $30,467.

"We feel like our deficit will be less than that if we give up a little here and a little there," Roper said. "We're giving up over $200,000 to the CED and as a result we had to raise taxes," he added.

Roper holds hope that the school district will still be able to balance the budget by cutting costs in some areas.

"We're still paying teachers the same. We're offering the same curriculum as we have in the past," he explained. "We'll be trying to cut back on supplies."

Roper added that by combining the school principal's and school superintendent's jobs and combining the role of school secretary and school business manager, salary costs will also be reduced. In addition, travel allowances will be cut, he said.

In other action, board members discussed collection of CED taxes and passed a resolution establishing an account for the CED tax collections with First National Bank of Pampa.

One board member, Nora Franks, was absent from the special meeting Tuesday night. Next meeting of the Lefors school board has been set for Oct. 8.

Famed children's author Dr. Seuss dies at age 87

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Theodor Seuss Geisel, the master of rhyme and doodle who as Dr. Seuss wrote such whimsical children's classics as The Cat in the Hat and How the Grinch Stole Christmas, has died. He was 87.

Geisel died Tuesday night at his home in La Jolla, his publicist said.

He wrote and illustrated 47 books, selling more than 100 million copies in 18 languages. He received a 1984 Pulitzer Prize for his contribution to children's literature.

His works seemed like journeys into nonsense, magical worlds of truffula trees, green eggs and ham, ziffs and zuffs and nerklies and nerds, where top-hatted cats run rampant through youngsters' homes while goldfish scold.

But they often included subtle messages on issues important to him, from internationalism to environmentalism.

In his 1986 book, You're Only Old Once, Geisel came to grips with his own mortality. He subtitled the work A Book for Obsolete Children, and described it as a book for adults in a children's format.

An immediate best-seller, it took a satirical look at the medical profession through the eyes of an old man who has to be poked, prodded and examined during a stay in the Golden Years Clinic. He is confronted by an array of medical gadgetry capped by a mechanized pill drill and a patient assembly line.

Geisel spoke for many a frustrated patient when he wrote: "When at last we are sure you've been properly pilled, then a few paper forms must be properly filled so that you and your heirs may be properly billed."

In his 1984 best-seller, The Butter Battle Book, Geisel offered a parable for the atomic age. It chronicled the escalating arms race between the Yooks, who eat their bread butter side down, and the Zooks, who do just the opposite.

It ends with the two sides at the Yook-Zook border, each armed with the ultimate weapon — a Big-Boy Boomerang bomb.

A boy asks his grandpa, "Who's going to drop it. Will you? Will he?"

"Be patient," grandpa says. "We'll see. We will see."

Geisel was childless himself — after his first wife's death in 1967, he married Audrey Stone Diamond, a mother of two — but had an unrivaled gift for delighting children.

"You make 'em, I amuse 'em," he said.

Born March 2, 1904, in Springfield, Mass., son of a brewer who ran a zoo for a time during Prohibition, Geisel graduated in 1925 from Dartmouth, where he drew cartoons for the humor magazine, Jack-O-Lantern.

During a year studying literature at Oxford University in England, he met another American literature student, Helen Palmer, who encouraged Geisel's artistic career.

After dropping out of Oxford, Geisel drifted to Paris, where he mingled with Lost Generation writers such as Ernest Hemingway, James Joyce and Gertrude Stein.

He returned to the United States in 1927 to marry Miss Palmer and to pursue his hope of being a novelist. But the Great Depression forced him to put the great American novel on hold, and he went to work writing two-line gags for Judge and Life, both humor magazines at the time.

It was on a spoof of scientific developments that he first used the name that would become his trademark. He added "Dr." to his middle name to sound more scientific.

"I wrote my first children's book because my exclusive contract forbade me from doing virtually anything else in the world," he said. That book was ... And to Think That I Saw It on Mulberry Street, penned on a ship crossing the Atlantic. He said that the words, strung together in the sing-song style that became his trademark, were written to the rhythm of the ship's engine.

Mulberry Street was published in 1937, the same year as his first adult novel, The Seven Lady Godivas. The children's book, rejected by 27 publishers before being accepted by Vanguard Press, became a spectacular success. His novel was a commercial dud.

He wrote three more children's books and switched to Random House publishers before World War II.

New club offers drug-free, smoke-free gathering place for Pampa teenagers

An Amarillo nightclub for teens has opened a similar establishment in Pampa, hoping to lure young people off "the drag" and into a smoke-free, drug-free, alcohol-free environment.

Rocky and Janine Jones and Leon and Belinda Wheeler opened Footloose at 600 S. Cuyler last weekend to a lukewarm response, the Jones admitted.

However, they said parents may be unduly critical of the establishment because it is located in a former bar called the Nugget and Party Station.

"We opened in Amarillo in December of '90," Mr. Jones said, "mainly to give the kids a place to go on Friday and Saturday nights to dance, play pool and video games and have a good time without having to deal with the pressures of alcohol and drugs."

He added, "I want to give them a place where they don't have to drink to be part of the in crowd. At Footloose it's not cool to drink or smoke."

Mrs. Jones said fighting is also taboo. "If you fight in Footloose, we will call the cops," she promised. "After a while we weed that kind of thing out."

For an admission charge of $4, teens between the ages of 13 and 20 get into the club and get a free soft drink. They can also purchase a variety of foods from the snack bar, including pizza.

"What we've seen in Amarillo is that parents will come by and drop off their kids before they go out for the evening, knowing they can come back at midnight and pick them up and they will have been safe and had a good time," Mrs. Jones said.

As a 1980 graduate of Pampa High School, Mrs. Jones said she could relate to local youth and their desire to have a place to hang out that is not a school dance with parents and teachers hanging around nearby.

"They will tell me things they won't tell their parents," she said. "You find them asking how many times you can do it before you get pregnant and that kind of thing. I'm glad I'm there for them to talk to."

Mr. Jones elaborated, "This isn't like a school dance where they've got teachers and parents as supervision. They feel like they can come and have a good time."

"We do have four or five floor walkers on staff at all times and an officer on duty, so it is very safe."

He said those over 20 are discouraged from entering Footloose unless they are a parent checking the place out.

"If you're over 20, you can go to a bar," Mr. Jones said. "This isn't for them. It is geared for teenagers. When they turn 21, they can go to the bars. They don't need to be in here. I don't want 21- or 22-year-old guys in here flirting with the younger girls."

Mrs. Jones said, "We want to let parents know we are on their side. We consider ourselves a safe house for kids. We don't have a revolving door policy and they don't hang out in the parking lot. They can do that on the drag."

The Jones said Footloose is open from 7 p.m. to midnight each Friday and Saturday.

Dr. Seuss

Children liked his writing because he treated them as equals, Geisel often said. His illustrations were another matter. His creatures often looked like stuffed animals missing much of their sawdust.

"I've taken the mistakes and refined them a little bit," Geisel said in a 1986 interview with The San Diego Union. "It's all mistakes—controlled mistakes."

Horton Hatches the Egg, published in 1940, reflected Geisel's impatience with pacifist sentiment in America at a time of international crisis.

When Horton the elephant, sitting on the egg of fly-away mother bird Maysie, is confronted by hunters, Geisel wrote: "Did he run? He did not! Horton stayed on that nest!"

"He held his head high. And he threw out his chest. "And he looked at the hunters as much as to say: 'Shoot if you must. But I won't run away."

"I mean what I said and I said what I meant. An elephant's faithful 100 percent."

After the attack on Pearl Harbor, Geisel joined the Army and was sent to Hollywood, where he worked on indoctrination films under director Frank Capra.

Two Geisel documentaries made in the '40s, Hilfer Lives and Design for Death, co-written with his wife, won Academy Awards for their producers.

A Geisel cartoon, Gerald McBoing-Boing, won its producer an Oscar in 1951 in the animation category.

He ended his Hollywood stint by writing the screenplay for the film The 5,000 Fingers of Dr. T., a fantasy about a berserk music teacher, a giant piano and 500 music students. While it became a cult film, Geisel never included the work in his official biography because he was infuriated over script changes made after he completed the project.

From Hollywood, Geisel moved to the coastal village of La Jolla outside San Diego. Through the 1950s, he wrote a couple of children's books a year, capped in 1957 by the publication of How the Grinch Stole Christmas and The Cat in the Hat.

Grinch, made into a cartoon with Boris Karloff reading the title role, was a stark critique of the commercialism that had befallen Christmas: a 20th century version of Dickens' A Christmas Carol.

The Cat in the Hat revolutionized children's reading habits.

"That is what I am proudest of; that I had something to do with getting rid of Dick and Jane," Geisel said in 1982.

Sales of The Cat in the Hat soared, and Geisel did not mind if it was slow to catch on in the classroom.

"If it were a textbook and assigned, kids would hate it like everything else," he said. "This is a prize they get. They can read it in their spare time."

Geisel's works also included One Fish Two Fish Red Fish Blue Fish, The 500 Hats of Bartholomew Cubbins, Horton Hears a Who, Green Eggs and Ham and Yertle the Turtle.

Of all his books, though, The Lorax was his favorite.

Written in 1971, The Lorax was about a brown mossy creature who tries in vain to protect the truffula trees from the Onceler, who chops them down with abandon to make "trneeds." Then one day, relates the Onceler, "all that was left 'neath the bad-smelling sky was my big empty factory, the Lorax and I."

Geisel ended the environmental saga, however, with a message of hope to his readers—a single truffula tree seed survived.

Powell says U.S. sending Patriots to Saudi

WASHINGTON (AP) - Six months after the end of the Persian Gulf War, the United States today began moving forces back to Saudi Arabia - nearly 100 Patriot antimissile missiles and more than 1,300 soldiers to operate them.

Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, told Congress today the surface-to-air missiles would be in place in Saudi Arabia in a few days.

Powell also said a team of U.N. inspectors being detained in Baghdad had "hit gold mines" of evidence that Iraq was developing nuclear weapons. Powell declined to provide details of the information gleaned, but said the documents showed that Iraq "had extensive contacts around the world" to obtain equipment and know-how for its nuclear program.

Powell told a House armed services subcommittee that the movement of missiles and support troops began early this morning. He said there were no other U.S. troop movements today but that President Bush "has preserved all his options" for responding to Saddam Hussein's standoff.

Powell said he spoke to Bush this morning and "the president is viewing this as a very serious matter."

"In response to a request from our friends in Saudi Arabia, two U.S. Patriot battalions have started moving today from Germany," he said.

"We don't know that there is any significant threat at the moment (to Saudi Arabia), but it's wise to be prudent," Powell said.

"I've just come from a meeting with the president and he intends to be assured that in the final analysis the will of the international community is satisfied with respect to these matters. He has preserved all his options," Powell said.

Powell made no mention of the possibility of sending additional U.S. warplanes to the region. He said there is still in Saudi Arabia "a rather significant air capability" of the United States.

Powell said that in the event that Bush decided to order air strikes against Iraqi nuclear facilities, the U.S. military could not guarantee that every bit of Saddam's nuclear development effort could be destroyed.

Captive now home in Texas after three weeks with Kurds

By ROBERT G. WIELAND
Associated Press Writer

GRAPEVINE (AP) — An archaeological expedition to find Noah's Ark turned into a chilly three-week ordeal after Marvin Wilson was kidnapped by Kurdish rebels.

"I wouldn't recommend this kind of a vacation," Wilson said Tuesday after his arrival at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

The 49-year-old Garland man was among five Westerners freed Friday in Turkey. He was welcomed at the airport by a dozen family members and co-workers carrying a banner.

His wife, Renetta, said she had never abandoned hope.

"Does a dog have a tail?" she asked.

Wilson said he would like to return to Turkey next year.

"I don't have any problems in going back. I'll be a little more careful," he said.

But Mrs. Wilson said she'd like to go along.

"I would go with him if I could cook or help carry dirt," she said.

Wilson, two other Americans, a Briton and an Australian were abducted Aug. 30 after they were stopped at a roadblock.

The Kurds, heavily armed with automatic weapons, grenades and "an assortment of knives" marched the captives from mountain to mountain to avoid thousands of Turkish troops scrambled to look for the missing men.

The tribesmen originally took the men captive to embarrass the Turkish government and bring visibility to their demands for a Kurdish homeland, Wilson said. But the move backfired when the American and Turkish governments took an active interest in tracking the rebels, he said.

"They'd got this tiger and they didn't know how to let go of it,"

Juveniles in TYC increase 38 percent

AUSTIN (AP) — A 38 percent increase in the number of violent offenders committed to the state's juvenile corrections agency has put a "significant strain" on the system.

Violent offenders sent to the Texas Youth Commission increased from 313 in fiscal year 1990 to 431 in 1991, executive director Ron Jackson said.

Juveniles committed for capital murder, attempted capital murder and voluntary manslaughter increased from 49 to 91, a hike of 86 percent.

"As the commission receives an

Wilson said,

The captors were members of the outlawed Kurdish Labor Party, or PKK, which has been fighting since 1984 for an independent state in Southeastern Turkey.

Wilson said he was well-treated by the Kurds, but could have used a blanket and some better food. The captives huddled together for warmth at night and subsisted mostly on bread and goat cheese, Wilson said.

Sometimes there was fruit, and once the Kurds slaughtered and shish-kabobbed a goat.

"I don't recommend it," Wilson said of the goat meat.

Wilson lost 16 pounds during his captivity, but is able to joke that it will be easier now to stay in shape.

Even though the rebels called the captives "friend" and did not harm them, Wilson thinks they should be punished.

"They certainly committed crimes and we think they need to be brought to justice," he said.

Wilson was among four people seeking permits to excavate a hill near Mount Ararat.

Also searching for the ark were Ronald Wyatt of Nashville, Tenn., Richard M. Rives of North Carolina and Australian Allen Roberts. A Briton, Dr. Gareth Thomas, was abducted from a tourist bus.

Since 1977, Wyatt has been searching for the ark, which the Bible says made a landfall in eastern Turkey after the deluge. Wyatt has been seeking excavation permits for the site he found in 1985.

A boat-shaped rock formation located 14 miles from Mount Ararat there has attracted numerous searchers, including the late U.S. astronaut James Irwin.

"I've been on top of it, walked around it, took pictures," said Wilson, who is convinced that an excavation would document and verify the validity of Biblical history.

Prosecution witness recants part of his earlier testimony against Noriega during trial

By RICHARD COLE
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — A former aide to Manuel Noriega recanted part of his testimony under cross-examination, casting doubt on the government's claim that Fidel Castro mediated a dispute between Panama's ousted ruler and drug traffickers.

Luis del Cid said Tuesday that his detailed description the day before of how the Cuban president settled a dispute between Noriega and Colombia's Medellin cocaine cartel was erroneous.

"I made a mistake," he said. He had testified Monday that a cocaine lab in Panama's Darien province was raided in 1984 when Panamanian commanders mistook it for a guerrilla camp.

He said Noriega — who allegedly had been paid $4 million to $5 million to protect the lab — was in Paris at the time, and that he and Panama's narcotics chief called Noriega to tell him what happened.

He said he met Noriega in New York and they immediately flew to Cuba, where, prosecutors contend, Castro had Noriega return the money.

But on cross-examination Tuesday, lead defense attorney Frank Rubino used dates and information from Panamanian investigative reports and Noriega's passport to show Noriega was in Panama, not Paris, when the raid occurred.

Further, the documents showed, Noriega didn't leave Panama until nearly a month later, on an official tour to the United States, France, Israel and Cuba.

"It was General Noriega who gave the order to raid the Darien lab, correct?" Rubino asked.

"Correct," del Cid said. He also agreed that Noriega's narcotics chief, Capt. Luis Quiel, took a U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agent along with him to inspect the lab following the raid.

Del Cid said he did call Noriega when he was in Europe later, but only to tell him that one of his aides, Col. Julian Melo, took a $6 million bribe from drug traffickers to protect the lab and that the traffickers wanted their money back.

Noriega sent Melo back to Panama and kicked him out of the army in disgrace, del Cid testified.

He also testified that when Noriega visited Cuba weeks after the raid, it was part of a pre-arranged visit and not a last-minute trip to settle a drug dispute.

Del Cid, Noriega's former right-hand man, also said he never saw the contents of envelopes and suitcases he took to Noriega, nor was he told they contained drug money. But he insisted that is what they must have held.

"It couldn't be anything else ... Everyone in Panama knew these people were into drugs," he said.

The prosecution, meanwhile, successfully barred the defense from asking del Cid about a variety of sensitive areas, including Israel's relationship with a succession of Panamanian military governments and the U.S. role in selecting Panama's president in 1983.

Rubino's questions to del Cid apparently were about to suggest Noriega had aided in attempts to free U.S. hostages in Lebanon when the lawyer was cut off by Judge William Hoeweler.

Noriega faces up to 140 years in prison on 10 drug and racketeering counts accusing him of turning his nation into a way station for U.S.-bound cocaine shipments. His lawyers contend Noriega worked for the CIA and other U.S. agencies that knew about and supported his activities.

Del Cid could have faced up to 70 years in prison on similar charges, but under a plea bargain faces as little as 30 months and could be free early next year.

In exchange for his testimony, the government also agreed to support him and his family under the witness protection program and to intercede with Panama to prevent his prosecution there.

Two Houston judges, prosecutor endorse castration as punishment

HOUSTON (AP) — Two state judges and the Harris County district attorney are endorsing a prominent physician's paper advocating castration as punishment for violent criminals.

State District Judge Mike McSpadden and Harris County District Attorney John B. Holmes told The Houston Post that castration would be an effective deterrent for violent crimes and that if it was the law, they would use it.

State District Judge Ted Poe advocated the procedure for sex offenders only.

They doubted, however, that such punishment would be constitutional.

Houston Dr. Louis Girard wrote a recent paper espousing castration for both men and women as a quick, inexpensive, painless way to discourage all violent criminal behavior, not just sexual offenses.

"If the increase in violent crime keeps the same pace, I think it's a real possibility in the future."

"It would send a real quick message out in the community that if you use violence, strong measures will be taken against you by society," he said.

Girard and McSpadden said the surgery — in which a man's testicles or a woman's ovaries are removed — could be offered as one form of punishment.

Holmes said he had no problem employing castration as a punishment as long as the convicted criminal chose the penalty.

"If society's ready for it, and it became law, could I participate in administering it? The answer's yes," Holmes said.

"If it were the law, and if it were used, it would be great deterrent for sexual crimes," Poe said. But he added he would not advocate castration for non-sex offenses.

Poe said, however, that "the do-gooders in the community would certainly object to that form of punishment, and it might not pass the Constitution's Eighth Amendment," which prohibits inhumane punishment.

Helen Gros, executive director of Houston's American Civil Liberties Union chapter, called the plan "barbaric."

"I understand that public officials are horrified and frightened by crime. I understand that the public and public officials might be willing to postulate anything — and this clearly comes in the realm of anything — but I cannot believe a civilized society would condone castration."

Victims rights activist Mike McMahan called castration a "Dr. Frankenstein tactic" and said Judge McSpadden "is getting a little on the macabre side."

"Which is more cruel?" Girard said. "To take an aggressive, violent individual and lock him up for a number of years at great expense to the taxpayer with little chance of rehabilitation? Or castrating him and returning him as a useful member of society in a matter of days?"

Cause of plane collision unknown

WINNFIELD, La. (AP) — Searchers have recovered the bodies of two veteran pilots killed when their A-10 fighter jets collided during a training flight and crashed in woods near this central Louisiana town, the Air Force said.

However, it may take months to determine the cause of Monday's accident involving the planes from England Air Force Base near Alexandria, the Air Force said Tuesday.

"More than likely, it will be several months before any determination is made," said Airman Ron Pitre, a spokesman for the base. "It's a slow, thorough process."

"The investigation is at a very preliminary stage," he said.

Killed in the crash were Maj. Jeffrey J. Watterberg, 38, of Albuquerque, N.M., and 1st Lt. Eric M. Miller, 25, of Sewickley, Pa. Both of the Desert Storm veterans were assigned to the 76th Tactical Fighter Squadron at England AFB.

Watterberg's family said memorial services will be held for him Thursday in Alexandria, and burial is planned in Santa Fe National Cemetery.

Survivors include his wife, Jeri; a son, John, 13; two daughters, Joy, 11, and Jackie, 7; his parents; two brothers and a sister.

"That man loved to fly," said Watterberg's sister-in-law, Debbie Torres of Albuquerque. "The fact that he died doing exactly what he loved to do says it all."

"He was the most sincere man you would want to meet," said Miller's housemate, David Ure. "He was very athletic and probably one of the more prolific guys in the squadron. Twelve hours (of work) a day was standard for him."

The Air Force said a memorial service for the pilots is planned Friday at England AFB.

The planes were flying a simulated surface attack mission at the time of the collision, the Air Force said.

The A-10 is a twin-engine, single-seat craft designed specifically for close air support of surface forces. It can be used against all surface targets, including tanks and other armored vehicles.

The wreckage was scattered over 40 acres of piney woods, said Sgt. Robert Pease, a spokesman at England AFB.

Pease said the bodies were recovered Monday night, but he did not know if searchers had recovered the devices that record cockpit instrument readings and pilot voice communications.

"We are going to get as much of the debris as we can," Pease said. "But with the thick underbrush and large area, it's inevitable that we will miss something."

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Economy is dying a very slow death

Last year's federal budget accord between Congress and President Bush was DOA even as it was signed into law. There was no way its $160 billion tax increase was going to reduce the federal deficit. Indeed, the deficit has soared to nearly $400 billion. But the Democratic leadership in Congress apparently likes to play funeral music. It has spent the past few weeks lamenting the budget accord's demise.

To the tones of loud organ music, House Majority Whip David Bonior sang, "I don't know how you can keep that agreement together in light of the realities of the world situation and, even more importantly, the situation at home. There's been a prolonged recession, and a lot of people are hurting, crying for help. We've got to meet their needs." So who, and what, caused the "prolonged recession," the "hurting" and the "crying"? Answers: Congress, President Bush and their tax increase.

The 1990 agreement froze the portions of the budget split between defense and non-defense programs. To change that proportion would require admitting that the agreement is dead, something Congress and Bush are not yet willing to do. Instead, we'll probably get some kind of "amendment" that shifts a few billion of U.S. taxpayers' dollars from defense to aid for the disintegrating Soviet Union. Such is the proposal by House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt and House Armed Services Committee Chairman Les Aspin.

Wonderful. In June, President Bush gave Moscow $1.5 billion in credits, 98 percent of which was backed by tax dollars. But according to U.S. News & World Report, "... so far no American bank has signed any deal." Moreover, "According to one well-placed U.S. source, when former Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze recently asked Mikhail Gorbachev how the $2.9 billion in emergency cash that Germany gave Moscow last year had been spent, the Soviet president thought for a moment, then replied simply, 'I have no idea.'"

It's clear that every dollar of your money sent to the Soviet Union — or whatever a new union might be called, if there is one — would be wasted. Russians, Ukrainians, etc., need more capitalism, not more aid.

The congressional leadership is also pressuring President Bush to spend more money on "emergency" aid for unemployed Americans. Though he could veto any new spending, in the past the president has compromised on such matters. Certainly, the unemployed need help — in the form of tax cuts to create jobs by stoking the cooling embers of our economy. Spending more money means higher taxes (or bigger budget deficits), which would worsen the economy and put even more people in unemployment lines.

Tax increases. A deficit near $400 billion. Economic stagnation. Unemployment. Federal waste now 25 percent of GNP. The only "emergency" we face is curbing our own quasi-Soviet regime in Washington.

Sen. Blowhard, Gov. Blowsoft

WASHINGTON — Paul Tsongas, the Massachusetts has-been, no longer is the only announced Democratic candidate for president. He has acquired company on the campaign trail. Let us have a flourish of kazooos for Sen. Thomas Richard Harkin of Iowa and Gov. Lawrence Douglas Wilder of Virginia. We ink-stained wretches of the press will have a little fun after all.

The senator from Iowa, to put the matter gently, is a blowhard of the old school. He rants, he raves; he storms, he bellows. In the University of Politics he majored in demagoguery. He took his minor in horsefeathers. On the stump he sheds his coat; he rolls up his sleeves; he sweats in his armpits, and he is every inch a man of the peepul.

The governor, by contrast, is a soft-spoken fellow. He too is full of hot air, but he is no more inflated than other candidates for the Oval Office. In his announcement speech of Sept. 14, Wilder proposed to cut the federal budget by "tens of billions." He would do this by "eliminating waste" and "establishing priorities." That's what they all say.

Welcome, gentlemen! Brother Harkin will campaign as a classic, unreconstructed, born-again Democratic liberal. In the 1989 congressional ratings, the AFL-CIO gave the senator a perfect 100. The American Security Council gave him a perfect zero. The gentleman scored 14 with the American Conservative Union, putting him at the bottom of the class with Joe Biden of Delaware. Americans for Democratic Action gave him a plump 95, in an elite cluster with Howard Ohnoxious of Ohio.

Harkin is running primarily against George Herbert Walker Bush and J. Danforth Quayle. He puts a nasty little spin on their names. It seems a little unfair that "J. Danforth Quayle" sounds like W.C. Fields and "L. Douglas Wilder" sounds like corporation counsel, but who ever said life is fair?

We may confidently expect 14 months of Bush-bashing from both of these worthies. Harkin has a problem in running against Congress, since he's part of it, but Wilder has a problem also. Speaking to a lunch-hour throng of state employees, Wilder attacked "the party inside Washington" for "making deals with higher regressive taxes and wasteful spending." But the party inside Washington is the governor's own party. As the fictional Mr. Dooley remarked a century ago, the Dimmycratic Party ain't on speakin' terms with itself.

Wilder has other problems. His approval rating with Virginia voters has plummeted in recent months. If he winds up on the Democratic ticket for 1992, he probably would lose his own state. Wilder's plan is to campaign part time and continue as governor full time, a neat trick that Virginians may not fully appreciate.

The governor has no experience in foreign affairs. Neither does the senator, for that matter, though he serves on a couple of subcommittees with foreign interests. Neither has experienced the grueling pressures of a national campaign. These pressures matter. Wilder got himself in trouble a few weeks ago by wondering publicly if Judge Clarence Thomas owned fealty to "the pope." Harkin has a hot temper. The press dearly loves a pop-off.

In 1984 the Democratic hopefuls were known as the Sominex Six. This was unfair to the sleeping pill. In 1988 they were tabbed the Seven Dwarfs, a fair-packaging label that defamed Sleepy, Grumpy, Dopey and Doc. The 1992 field seems likely to be as unimpressive, now that the party's heavy hitters have turned in their bats.

Other entries are in prospect. If Gov. Bill Clinton of Arkansas joins the parade, he will add a voice of common sense and moderation. Gov. Ann Richards of Texas could add some salt and pepper. California's former Gov. Jerry Brown would be good for a few laughs.

The rumor-makers are pushing the name of Sen. J. Robert Kerrey of Nebraska. The senator has excellent credentials. He served with great valor in Vietnam, winning the Medal of Honor for bravery; he served four years (1983-87) as governor of Nebraska, and he is what is known in the boondocks as a handsome dawg. As governor he enjoyed a well-publicized affair with actress Debra Winger. The voters of Nebraska, combining loose morals with a tight fist, did not greatly object to the lady's sharing the governor's bed. They objected to her sharing the governor's car.

Welcome, I say again. Welcome one and all. Complacency could defeat George Bush in 1992; a worsening economy could make things tough for him, but Tsongas, Harkin, Wilder & Co. haven't the stuff from which presidents are made.

On Sept. 25, 1789, the first United States Congress, meeting in New York, adopted 12 amendments to the Constitution and sent them to the states for ratification. (Ten of the amendments became the Bill of Rights.)

On this date:

In 1513, Spanish explorer Vasco Nunez de Balboa crossed the Isthmus of Panama to discover the Pacific Ocean.

In 1690, one of the earliest American newspapers, Publick Occurrences, published its first — and last — edition in Boston.

In 1904, a New York City police officer ordered Lillian Orr, an automobile passenger on Fifth Avenue, to stop smoking a cigarette. (A male companion was arrested and later fined $2 for "abusing" the officer.)

In 1919, President Woodrow Wilson became seriously ill and collapsed after a speech in Pueblo, Colo., during a national speaking tour in support of the Treaty of Versailles.

Freedom's song not allowed

Have you heard of the Continental Singers? In 25 years their nonprofit musical ministry has expanded from a single group of singers performing religious music in parks and prisons and college chapels now to include 10,000 young people all over the world.

The Continental Singers are young people between 16 and 28 — vocalists, instrumentalists, technicians and directors.

Presently 200 separate "tours" are performing in 50 U.S. states and 70 other countries.

The International Continentals are indigenous, made up of singers from the nation in which they are performing, singing in that nation's language.

There is no continent (except Antarctica) on which the Continental Singers have not performed.

Nine million people have welcomed and applauded them.

Any earnings from these performances pay the troupes' travel expenses, with whatever is left over going to fight world hunger. To date, $2 million has gone for this latter purpose.

They're good. They won the Gospel Music

Paul Harvey

Association's coveted Dove Award in 1984 and have recorded 35 inspirational albums.

This is not a "puff piece."

There is a purpose in this recitation of their worldwide acceptance.

They've performed in Britain, Western Europe and — since "the wall" came down — Eastern Europe as well.

They've performed in southern Africa, Singapore and New Zealand ...

In Puerto Rico, Korea and Japan ...

In Chile and Hungary and France ...

The Continental Singers have traveled 2 million miles worldwide and they've been welcomed everywhere — except one place.

For the first time ever anywhere, in August, they found themselves unwelcome, were told they would NOT be permitted to perform.

Romania?

No, as a matter of fact they recently returned from Romania where that nation, out from under communism, greeted them and their music with great ovations.

No ...

After a quarter-century of singing in prisons and colleges, public parks and stadiums and auditoriums on six continents, they were ordered NOT to sing in a public park in our own country.

Because theirs is "religious music," they were advised by a park ranger that they would NOT be allowed to sing in the Ellipse — that's the public park directly across the street from our White House.

The Continental Singers are welcome to sing their songs of freedom in every land but one.

Bush and Cheney are 'arms' apart

By MARTIN SCHRAM

Dick Cheney, meet George Bush.

A few days ago, our president surveyed the Newest World Order and declared that the stunning changes inside the Soviet Union may enable the United States to "vastly" restructure its own defense forces.

Hear Bush: "I do think that out of this change in the Soviet Union, if we handle it properly and if things keep going forward instead of slipping back, there's an opportunity for a vastly restructured national security posture."

Now comes our defense secretary, telling The Washington Post there is no reason to cut or reshape present U.S. defense budgeting. Not now, not later — no matter what the Soviet Evolution produces. And anyone who suggests otherwise is just talking "garbage."

Hear Cheney: "I think we've got the radical restructuring under way. It's embodied in the plan that's now pending before the Congress. ... Let me get something off my chest. One of the sources of frustration is having a lot of people operate on the assumption that we have not yet done anything to change our defense posture. ... (Some people talk as though) we're at our absolute peak in terms of military spending, and 'you guys in the Pentagon haven't done anything to respond to the New World.' And that's just garbage."

What's going on in Bush's official family? Must we send the president and his defense secretary to their rooms until they learn to get along and agree? There are, it sees, at least two explanations for what we have just heard — and they are not mutually exclusive:

• Explanation No. 1: These are the honest, unchoreographed, gut responses of two officials from opposite poles of the Grand Old Party — one a global thinker and congenial pragmatist, the other a true-believing hardliner and congenial skeptic.

• Explanation No. 2: These are the well-choreographed responses of two wily pils who are speaking to different audiences — Bush was playing the statesman, talking optimistically to the world; Cheney was playing the never-give-an-inch bargainer, talking intransigently to a Congress that has yet to approve his 1992 budget.

There may also be a third force at work. The official to-ing and fro-ing about restructuring defense spending may have as much to do with priming America's recession recovery as it does with preserving world peace.

President Bush and his top economic officials have been declaring the recession over for a year now. But prosperity is not happening, and Republican campaign strategists have become genuinely fearful that the election season of '92 will be at our doorstep before the recovery is at hand. The last thing Bush and his GOP campaigners need is further cuts in the already-decimated defense industry before the economic war is won.

This much is certain: Even staunch conservatives in Congress concede that the rationale for much of our past and present defense spending — fear of a war with the Soviet Union — no longer seems rational at all. The B-2 Stealth bomber (which once seemed to me to be a good investment) has been overtaken not by enemy aircraft but by events; yet the Air Force still wants to build 60 B-2s. The MX and Midgetman missiles need never be deployed. And the list goes on.

Truly innovative thinkers are working to find ways to spend our defense dollars. One of the smartest was House Armed Services Chairman Les Aspin's idea to shift $1 billion from defense spending to aid the Soviet economic development. Bush called it "creative" but stopped short of signing on.

Perhaps even more creative, though, is Cheney's Defense Department, which the other day sent Aspin this rationale for fully funding the Stealth bomber: "The B-2 is fundamental to our strategic deterrent posture and long-range conventional capability in the 21st century. Its demonstrated range and penetration characteristics will significantly tax improved Soviet defenses. ..."

Now that "creative" Cheney's team has re-created a threat — the communist menace — that a world of television viewers saw gasp and die in Moscow.

U.N. inspectors under seige for second day

By PETER JAMES SPIELMANN
Associated Press Writer

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Iraqi soldiers today besieged U.N. weapons experts in a Baghdad parking lot for a second day and stopped the inspectors from sealing up documents detailing Iraq's nuclear arms program, the U.N. team leader said.

The showdown over possession of the documents continued hours after Iraq gave the United Nations written assurance it would allow U.N. monitors to fly freely over its territory to look for hidden weapons facilities.

U.N. officials announced tentative plans today for a helicopter mission in four or five days to search for Scud missiles and launchers in western Iraq.

Rising tensions over the U.N. searches prompted a U.S. decision to send nearly 100 Patriot anti-missile missiles and 1,300 soldiers to Saudi Arabia, in case the Security Council decides to have warplanes and helicopter gunships escort the inspection flights. The airlift of the six Patriot batteries from Germany began today, the Pentagon said in a statement.

The chief of the U.N. team, David Kay, said up to 92 Iraqi security men surrounded the 44 weapons inspectors outside the Iraqi Atomic Energy Commission building. He said three Iraqi trucks blocked the exit, a closed iron gate.

About midday, security officials "charged into the circle" of the team's six cars and a bus to stop the inspectors from putting U.N. seals on boxes containing materials on Iraq's nuclear program, Kay said in a satellite-telephone interview with The Associated Press in New York.

"They forcefully prevented us from putting agency seals on the boxes," Kay said. He said the team wanted to seal the boxes to prevent any Iraqi tampering while members of the U.N. group slept.

The security men moved back after the team agreed not to put seals on the boxes, Kay said. No one was hurt in the incident, and the security officials did not draw their weapons, he added.

The Iraqis demanded that the team voluntarily surrender the copies of documents it made Tuesday, but the inspectors refused.

Kay said there was no sign Baghdad would lift the seige, which began about midday Tuesday. The inspectors parked their vehicles in a circle to protect themselves and the documents, some recorded on videotape. Kay said the team was determined to retain the material.

Videotapes taken by the inspectors were said to show details of Iraq's secret nuclear weapons program, its foreign suppliers and top Iraqi directors.

In Vienna, Austria, Hans-Friedrich Meyer, a spokesman for the International Atomic Energy Agency, said today the inspectors were in good condition. He said the Iraqis were giving them food and water and the team's bus was air conditioned.

Three bus loads of Iraqi women claiming to be spouses of workers in Iraq's nuclear program staged a noisy demonstration at the parking lot today, protesting the team's attempt to take away the documents, U.N. officials said.

Iraqi officials contend the documents copied by the team Tuesday contained only confidential personal information on the program's workers. The standoff dramatized the rising tensions in the gulf region.

Iraq called Kay an American spy, a charge that Kay today called "absolutely untrue."

President Bush on Tuesday accused Baghdad of "unacceptable behavior" and warned Iraqi President Saddam Hussein not to "miscalculate" as he did before the Persian Gulf War.

There were reports Saudi Arabia demanded the Patriot batteries in return for allowing the United States to stage escort flights for the U.N. inspectors in Iraq. Pentagon officials declined to comment.

Late Tuesday, Iraq sent a letter to the Security Council agreeing to allow inspectors to use U.N. helicopters for their inspections, a major demand of the council, British Ambassador David Han-nay said.

The council unanimously adopted a statement Tuesday insisting Iraq release the inspectors and allow them to take whatever documents they feel they need.

Council statements do not carry the weight of resolutions, which may be enforced under international law. The council was expected to wait for Iraq's response before deciding whether to accept U.S. offers of military escorts for the U.N. teams in Iraq.

On Monday, Kay's U.N. team was detained for 12 hours in a Baghdad building after finding what they said was evidence that Iraq has been trying to develop nuclear weapons. Iraqi troops seized the papers, and although some were returned early Tuesday, U.N. officials said key documents were missing.

Kay's team found other documents at another site Tuesday before it was hustled out of the building.

Angle Boyette of Atlanta waits to purchase several copies of the new book Scarlett early today at B. Dalton Book-sellers in Roswell, Ga.

Readers line up to buy first copies of 'Scarlett'

By JOAN SANCHEZ
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Employees at a bookstore in the hometown of Gone With the Wind author Margaret Mitchell donned antebellum costumes early today to greet customers who snapped up the first copies of the sequel.

About 300 people lined up outside one store for copies of Scarlett: The Sequel to Margaret Mitchell's 'Gone With the Wind.' Some 900,000 copies of the sequel, written by Alexandra Ripley, were shipped to stores for today's nationwide release.

"I just have to see what happens to Scarlett," said Kenneth Nix, who drove three hours from Dublin, Ga., and waited five hours for a B. Dalton Bookseller to open at midnight.

Costumed store managers served pecan tarts and mint julep punch. The store planned to stay open until its 1,000 copies were sold or until customers stopped coming.

It gave away paperback copies of Gone With the Wind and sold the hardback version for $3, the price when it was published in 1936. Scarlett lists for $24.95.

Cathy Hart headed to the cash register with four copies of Scarlett, and four of Gone With the Wind.

"It's part of my heritage, the continuing saga of Scarlett, Rhett and Atlanta," she said.

Mitchell's epic story of the romance between Scarlett O'Hara and Rhett Butler has sold more copies than any book except the Bible. It won the Pulitzer Prize.

The sequel runs 823 pages, about 200 less than the original. Ripley was chosen by Mitchell's estate and her style follows Mitchell's closely, with much of the action taking place from Scarlett's point of view.

Ripley keeps Scarlett moving: from Melanie's funeral in Georgia, to an attempted reconciliation with Rhett in Charleston, to a journey to Ireland and the start of a new life.

Does Scarlett find a way to get him back? You won't find out until the last few pages.

Debate raged over the appropriateness of a sequel by anyone other than Mitchell, who died in a 1949 car accident. Several Atlanta authors have denounced the sequel.

"When bad reviews start coming in, I could say they won't bother me, that's a lie; they will bother me," Ripley said Tuesday. "I'm just hoping to get more good reviews than bad reviews."

"The consensus I've heard from customers is they're interested in deciding for themselves," said Jim Enright, publicity coordinator for Borders Book Shop in Atlanta.

In Charleston, S.C., Rhett's hometown, Chapter Two bookstore placed its largest order ever: 1,200 copies, saleswoman Kelly Koester said.

In Seattle, people started reserving the book two months ago and 150 copies were on hold, said Dawn Martin, assistant manager at a Waldenbooks.

Atlanta's Oxford Book Store had 1,500 advance orders for the book, a figure boosted by Ripley's scheduled book-signing Sunday, said sales manager K.C. Culberth.

Today's hoopla contrasts with the release of Gone With the Wind, said Atlanta historian Franklin Garrett.

Garrett, who knew Mitchell, said the book's success "took her by surprise."

Mitchell lived long enough to see the book become an international phenomenon and Academy Award-winning movie, but not to see the civil rights movement that would change the world she knew.

Gone With the Wind contains pages of racist content, but Scarlett makes virtually no references to race. Ripley said she omitted slave dialogue because she found it offensive and wanted to concentrate on matters besides racial relations.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Orders to U.S. factories for durable goods fell 3.8 percent in August, driven down from the record growth a month earlier largely by falling transportation orders, the government said today.

The Commerce Department said orders for durable goods totaled a seasonally adjusted $125.9 billion, down from $130.8 billion the previous month. July's 11.7 percent advance was stronger than the 11.2 percent estimate reported last month and was the largest since the department began tracking orders in 1958.

After falling during the first three months of 1991, orders rose in April and May before dipping 1.1 percent in June. The August drop meant orders for the first eight months were down 0.4 percent from those of the same period of 1990.

Most major categories recorded losses in August. New orders for transportation equipment contributed the largest decline, a 9.2 percent loss and the first since April. A large decrease in aircraft orders offset gains in other equipment including automobiles.

Excluding the transportation sector, orders were off 1.6 percent.

Durable goods, usually expensive items expected to last more than three years, are considered a barometer of manufacturers' production plans. A decrease could result in a cutback in production and a loss of jobs.

The Federal Reserve reported earlier that overall industrial production rose 0.3 percent in August, just half of the 0.6 percent advance the previous month. It also said output of durable goods slowed to a 0.1 percent gain after rising 0.8 percent a month earlier.

Despite the decline in new orders, the August report contained an element of optimism. It said unfilled orders rose 0.3 percent, to $502.1 billion, the second straight advance after four consecutive drops. When unfilled orders rise, it often portends increased output to keep up with demand.

But non-defense capital goods orders excluding aircraft — often a gauge of business plans to expand and modernize — fell 2.7 percent, to $24.8 billion, after advancing 5.0 percent a month earlier.

Defense orders, often a volatile category, posted a 14.0 percent gain, to $10.7 billion, on top of a 13.2 percent advance in July. These orders plunged 13.1 percent in June. Excluding the defense category, orders were off 5.2 percent.

Transportation orders had jumped 27.1 percent in July, three-fourths of which was due to the aircraft industry.

Scientists say body found in Austrian glacier is 4,000 years old

INNSBRUCK, Austria (AP) — Alpine trekkers discovered a mummified body in a glacier, and a scientist examining the corpse said today that it was about 4,000 years old.

Local police had initially put the age of the body at 500 years. However, a bronze ax and a stone knife found with the body were "typical" of the early European Bronze Age and helped date it as much older, said Konrad Spindler, a University of Innsbruck scientist.

The mummy would allow researchers for the first time to "form an exact picture of life in the early Bronze time," said Spindler, of the university's Institute for Early History. "We are absolutely sure this body is 4,000 years old."

Scientists could study the stomach's contents and other organisms on the body, he said.

Hikers stumbled across the body in a glacier last Thursday in Austria's Tyrol mountain region, at an elevation of about 10,000 feet.

Researchers flew back to the site today to begin a detailed archaeological search, Spindler said. The body, which has been flown to Innsbruck for study, shows injuries on the back and head. But there was no indication of exactly how the person died.

Spindler said the man appeared to be between 20 and 40 years old. He was dressed in winter clothing of leather and fur stuffed with hay.

Tattoos in the form of crosses and lines were found on the corpse's skin, but their significance was not immediately clear, scientists said.

Cocoa is easy to use, low-fat ingredient for after school snacks

Celebrate fall and beat back-to-school snack attacks with lip-smacking chocolate favorites made with cocoa. Kids and adults will love these quick-to-fix and delicious chocolate favorites.

A sweet and fruity, but skinny dip for dieters

By NANCY BYAL, Food Editor
Better Homes and Gardens
Magazine

You would expect a dip this creamy and sweet-tasting to blow your diet. With pureed banana and cottage cheese, this one has a mere 14 calories per tablespoon! Better still, it's delicious and easy to make.

Gingered Fruit Dip

1 cup low-fat cottage cheese
1 small banana, cut up
1/8 teaspoon ground ginger
Milk

Orange peel cut into thin 2-inch strips
Fresh fruit dippers (such as apple wedges, kiwifruit slices, or mandarin orange sections)
In a blender container or food processor bowl combine cottage cheese, banana and ground ginger. Cover and blend or process until smooth.

Add milk, a teaspoon at a time, until dip is of desired consistency. (You'll need about 1 tablespoon milk.) Blend until smooth. Cover and chill up to 4 hours. Stir before serving; garnish with orange peel. Serve with fresh fruit dippers. Makes 1 1/4 cups dip.

Fall means back-to-school! And the change of season often brings a change in pace — schedules speed up, carpools start up and kids of all ages are on the prowl for delicious lunchbox snacks and after-school treats. This season, beat those back-to-school snack attacks with lip-smacking chocolate surprises made with deep, dark cocoa.

All-natural cocoa is a breeze to bake with since it eliminates the messy pre-melting steps of other chocolate baking ingredients. And since cocoa is lower in calories and fat than most other chocolate baking ingredients, moms can feel good about using one of nature's finest ingredients!

Don't worry when the football team or neighborhood gang drops in unexpectedly. Simply serve a delicious, easy-to-make treat like After-School Snack Mix. Made with crunchy tortilla chips, potato sticks, pretzels, and toasted oat cereal and tossed with sweet raisins and mini-marshmallows, this delicious snack is tossed in a sweet cocoa coating you make in the microwave. Store in a container for a help-yourself-snack that will satisfy nibblers.

Good-For-You Cocoa Muffins are the perfect lunchtime dessert or after-school snack. Chock full of good things like lowfat yogurt, raisins, carrots, nuts and cocoa these wholesome chocolate treats are perfectly portable and great for picnics and field trips.

If your kids want to help prepare their own after-school snacks, whip up a batch of Crispy Cocoa Bars. A creamy cocoa mixture is tossed with mini marshmallows and crispy rice cereal for chewy, simple-to-make chocolate creations. When they're finished, kids can top with candy sprinkles, raisins or chocolate chips.

For a quick cool-down snack after an afternoon of raking leaves or tossing the football, serve Frozen Chocolate Pudding Pops, a sweet creamy pudding mixture that's prepared in the microwave, poured in paper cups and frozen. Each chocolate pop is topped with chopped peanuts for extra flavor and crunch. Add to the fun by encouraging kids to decorate each pudding pop cup for their own individualized chocolate treat.

This fall, surprise you back-to-schoolers with easy-to-make chocolate lunchbox treats and after-school snacks made with cocoa.

AFTER SCHOOL SNACK MIX

1/2 cup (1 stick) butter or margarine

1 cup miniature marshmallows

In a 4-quart microwave-safe bowl, place butter. Microwave at HIGH (100%) or until melted; add cocoa and sugar, stirring until well blended. Gradually add tortilla chips, potato sticks, cereal and pretzels, stirring until coated with cocoa mixture. Microwave at HIGH 4 minutes, stirring after each minute. Stir in raisins. Microwave at HIGH 2 minutes, stirring after each minute. Cool. Stir in marshmallows. Store in tightly covered container in cool, dry place. About 10 cups.

GOOD-FOR-YOU COCOA MUFFINS

Let's feed the folks in need

(Staff photo by Cheryl Berzanski) Linda Radcliff of Shepard's Crook Nursing is with Baker Elementary School students, from left, Kelby McClellan, Candice Jameson, and Gina Tice. They are all set to participate in the High Plains Food Bank drive during this week. All Pampa elementary schools along with Pampa Middle School and Pampa High School have drop boxes for canned foods located near their offices. The High Plains Food Bank supplies the Good Samaritan House, Meals on Wheels, Tralee Crisis Center, Southside senior Citizens, Genesis House, Salvation Army and Community Day Care with food to be distributed to those in need in Pampa. Food collected will stay in Pampa.

Heart disease is leading killer of women

By HARPER'S BAZAAR
For AP Special Features

Heart disease is not for men only. Women fall victim just as often but usually at a later age.

Heart disease is the No. 1 killer of women in the United States, according to an article in the current issue of Harper's Bazaar, causing more female deaths each year than breast cancer, accidents and diabetes combined.

"Most (women) will rush to call an ambulance if their husband complains of chest pain, but if they themselves do, they'll blame it on indigestion and ignore the symptoms," said Elaine D. Eaker, director of the U.S. Centers for Disease Control's Cardiovascular Health Branch in Atlanta.

Because treatments are less successful in women, they are twice as likely to die from a heart attack or as a result of coronary bypass surgery than men. Almost all health experts feel that prevention is especially vital for women.

"One of the most significant things a woman in her 40s and 50s can do to extend her life is to learn how to recognize and reduce her risk for heart disease," said Dr. Marianne J. Legato, a cardiovascular researcher at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Columbia University in New York.

The top female risk factors that one should note:

— Estrogen decline. "Estrogen appears to play a protective role via its positive effects on a woman's overall cholesterol profile," said Trudy L. Bush, associate professor of epidemiology and gynecology-obstetrics at Johns Hopkins Health Institute in Baltimore.

Results are expected during the mid-1990s from a huge national Postmenopausal Estrogen-Progestin Intervention trial that will help doctors make decisions on estrogen replacement therapy.

— Elevated triglycerides. High total cholesterol can endanger both men and women. But elevated triglycerides are an often unrecognized, significant predictor of heart attacks in women.

"Triglyceride levels above 190 are a definite flag of trouble in women, although we don't know why they are different from men," Legato said.

— Oral contraceptive use. Pills prescribed 10 and 20 years ago at least doubled a woman's risk of heart disease. While all the studies aren't in yet, today's lower-dose pills seem to have a less adverse effect on heart health.

— High blood pressure. By age 50, nearly half of all women have hypertension. Even mild elevations above 140-90 are believed to double the risk for heart disease.

— Smoking. Although women who smoke are two to six times as likely to suffer from heart disease as nonsmokers, almost as soon as one quits, heart repair and regeneration begin. The arteries of a heavy smoker return to healthy condition within three to five years of quitting.

— Lack of exercise. A brisk 20-minute walk three times a week seems to provide surprisingly efficient heart protection.

— Diabetes. For some unknown reason, diabetes is a much stronger heart danger for women than men, literally doubling the risk. In addition, twice as many women as men develop "maturity-onset" diabetes.

— An apple-shaped body. If you tend to carry extra weight in your belly, instead of your hips and thighs, as pear-shaped women do, being overweight is especially worrisome.

— Family history. The more immediate the blood tie and the younger the relative when he or she experienced coronary trouble, the greater your risk.

— A high-demand, low-control job. Women with this job description have a much higher rate of heart disease than professional women the same age.

"But we know very little about occupational and other forms of stress," cardiologist Dr. Mary Ann Malloy, chair of the Chicago Heart Association's Women and Heart Disease committee, told Janis Graham in Harper's Bazaar.

"It's very possible that it isn't stress per se that is damaging, but the fact that it leads people to seek pacifiers like alcohol or high-fat foods."

Making your home burglar resistant

By READER'S DIGEST
For AP Special Features

If you worry about burglars — and most of us do — there is much you can do to prevent illegal entry. Here is some information that can reduce your chances of being burglarized and provide you with greater peace of mind.

— If you spot persons in your neighborhood behaving suspiciously, notify the police. For example, burglars often cruise in pairs. Upon seeing an empty garage or a car pulling out of a driveway, they ring the doorbell. If someone answers, they ask an innocent question and leave. If there is no response, they try to enter the home.

— Speak to your local police to find out which entry methods they favor in your area. Then, examine your home for weak points.

— Burglars commonly enter through an unlocked door, break in through a cellar window, break simple locks on doors or use force until the screws burst out of the wood or the frame gives way. Replace a hollow wooden door or flimsy door frame with a solid wooden (or even a steel) door mounted in a sturdy frame. Then equip the door with a deadbolt lock. A good bolt is 1 inch thick and has a 1-inch throw.

— Overgrown shrubbery and high hedges provide as much privacy for burglars as they do for you. Keep hedges trimmed, prune tree branches and remove trellises — especially if they provide access to second-floor windows. Keep basement windows — a favorite entry point for burglars — locked and free of foliage.

— If you live on the first or second floor of an apartment building, keep all windows locked. Lock windows or doors that lead to balconies, rooftops or fire escapes. (Caution: Be sure fire escape doors are easy to unlock in case of an emergency.)

— Burglaries in occupied homes are not as rare as you might expect. Keep your doors locked even when you're home.

— Before moving into a new house or apartment, have the cylinders of each door lock in your new home changed.

— If you have a telephone answering machine, don't let the greeting message reveal your whereabouts. Say simply that you can't come to the phone right now, but you will return the call as soon as possible.

— Don't put your name on your mailbox. Burglars will phone to learn if anyone is at home.

— If you're planning an evening out or going on vacation, set an automatic timer to create the illusion that someone is at home. Use it to activate lamps, television sets and radios that will make the house seem occupied.

— Before leaving for an extended period, arrange to have your home appear occupied. Ask someone to park a car in the driveway and move it periodically. Arrange to have the snow shoveled or the grass mowed. Have mail and newspaper deliveries halted until you return.

— Avoid attracting unwanted attention to your valuables. For example, if a new stereo arrives, don't put the labeled carton in the trash without flattening it inside out.

— Neighborhood watch programs work well. Post signs warning strangers that they are being observed.

— Finally, a family dog is one of the best burglar alarms you can have. The sound of loud, frantic barking is often all that's needed to discourage a would-be intruder and alert family members and neighbors.

Here are some ways you can minimize the extent of loss if your house is burglarized:

— Don't keep cash around — traveler's checks are safer.

— Leave some money and less-expensive valuables in the open and hope a burglar will overlook the gem collection in the bottom of the goldfish tank. (If you hide valuables, it's a good idea to keep a map of their locations in a safe-deposit box or with your attorney.)

— Make your valuables harder for thieves to sell and easier for police to identify by engraving your Social Security number on them. You can borrow an engraving tool from the local police department.

Questions and answers for homeowners

By POPULAR MECHANICS
For AP Special Features

Q. — My home has a heating system with a metal chimney which runs up through the attic and terminates above the roof. Since the temperature of the chimney in the attic is not high enough to ignite wood, why is it necessary to have a 2-inch clearance between the chimney and the wood framing in the attic?

A. The ignition temperature of wood is defined as the temperature at which it begins to burn. Wood and other combustibles undergo a physical change when continually exposed to elevated temperatures. This reduces their ignition temperatures.

Wood normally begins to burn at about 400 degrees to 600 degrees F. However, when it's continually exposed to temperatures between 150 degrees and 250 degrees F., its ignition temperature can become as low as 200 degrees F.

The lowering of the ignition temperature of wood and other combustible materials can take years to occur. When it does, should the wood's temperature coincide with its lowered ignition temperature, it will ignite and burn spontaneously. This is the basis for the clearance requirements in building and fire codes.

Q. — I'm concerned about the condition of our brick home. We bricked it two years ago. Every now and then, a white chalky substance appears on it. We would like to know if there is something we can do about it?

A. — The white substance is deposits of water-soluble salts called efflorescence. These salts may be contained in the bricks, the mortar or possibly the masonry behind the bricks. When efflorescence appears on a brick wall of relatively new construction, it's often the result of water absorbed by the bricks. The soluble salts dissolve in water (from rain, snow or ice) and are deposited on the brick surfaces when the water evaporates. However, it's also possible that water is entering the wall through open joints or poor construction methods, and has found a path to the surface.

When there is a sufficient amount of water to dissolve the salts, there will be an efflorescence buildup on the wall surface. In this case, you should examine the wall and construction details for open joints and possible sources of moisture penetration. All open joints must be sealed and poor construction methods corrected.

Efflorescing salts will generally disappear of their own accord with normal weathering — especially when they are the result of absorbed water. However, you can remove the salts by dry-scrubbing with a stiff brush. Heavy accumulations of stubborn deposits may be removed by scrubbing with a solution of one part muriatic acid to 12 parts water.

It is imperative that the wall be saturated with water before and after the solution is applied. Wetting down the wall enables the acid to work on the efflorescence, and wetting it down afterwards rinses off the acid which might otherwise damage the surface or pose a danger to people, plants or animals.

Before you go to the acid, however, try several sessions of hosing down the whitened area of bricks to wash away the deposits, and see if that doesn't do the trick.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Don't wait for an invitation to help someone in need

DEAR ABBY: Concerning people who are hooked on drugs and/or alcohol, I just read a letter in the San Diego Union from the woman who signed herself, "Broke the Cycle in Dallas." I agree with the writer wholeheartedly, and with your response as well. However, I would like to go one step further: Family members can help "someone who doesn't want help" — someone who is in denial. Denial, and that "false sense of control" we call delusional thinking, creates havoc in relationships. However, this denial can be broken through with a process called Intervention.

I recommend Intervention to anyone who is frustrated by another person's drinking or using. You don't have to wait for someone to "hit bottom," which could ultimately be death.

I am a professional counselor at the McDonald Center for Alcoholism and Drug Addiction Treatment at Scripps Memorial Hospital in La Jolla, Calif. To learn more about Intervention, call a local treatment center — or call our 24-hour Parent and Teen Helpline: 1-619-458-4357.

JOHN C. SEAMAN, M.A.

DEAR MR. SEAMAN: Thanks for a potentially lifesaving letter for the thousands of people who are hooked on alcohol and/or drugs but insist they can handle it — which they cannot.

DEAR ABBY: We have a daughter who is a senior in college. She was very popular in high school. She was homecoming queen, a cheerleader and an "A" student.

In her second year of college, she started dating guys with long hair. None of them were druggies, but they were all long-hair types. We would have called them "hippies" in my day. Her latest boyfriend has a tattoo on his arm. Well, last week our daughter came home with an ugly tattoo of an eye on her ankle!

Abby, we are decent people, but I feel as though our daughter has betrayed us and all our teachings and beliefs. I know that tattoos are fashionable right now, but I am sure the day will come when she will be sorry and embarrassed about that tattoo on her ankle. I am humiliated and would like to know how much parents are supposed to take.

UNHAPPY DOWN SOUTH

DEAR UNHAPPY: You are taking this too personally; keep in mind that the ankle with the tattoo is your daughter's, not yours. Your daughter sounds like a bright, responsible young woman. Don't worry about her tattoo. Should she ever feel sorry and embarrassed, the tattoo can be covered with a cosmetic. Two of the best — Covermark or Dermablend — can be found in most department stores and some pharmacies.

Problems? Write to Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Abby, P.O. Box 69446, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. All correspondence is confidential.

McLean Tigers win with big 'D'

After a season-opening loss to Lazbuddie, the McLean Tigers are starting to roll. The Tigers buried Follett, 40-6, the following week and then knocked off a tough Silverton bunch, 37-8, last Friday night.

Silverton was unbeaten (2-0) going into the game and averaging 34 ppg.

"Our defense is what won the game for us," said coach Jerry Miller, whose Tigers held the Owls' offense scoreless the first three quarters. They played exceptionally well."

McLean's ground game was balanced (no Tiger back had over 60 yards rushing) while a passing attack, led by quarterback Christian Looney, garnered 173 yards.

Tuffy Sanders and Daniel Harris each ran for two touchdowns while Tanner Hess caught a 32-yard TD pass from Christian Looney.

"Silverton has a big, strong team," Miller said "It was a big win for us."

McLean, currently ranked fifth in six-man, goes after Harrold on the home field Friday night.

"Normally Harrold has a pretty physical team, but they're down this year. However, a team usually gets up for a team that has a ranking," Miller said.

Wonder what Bobby Hebert's secret is?

The New Orleans Saints' quarterback lays out an entire season and then comes back to lead the team to a 4-0 record, best start in franchise history.

Hebert asked to be traded in January 1990, several weeks after he was benched for the last three games of the '89 season. The Saints refused.

Other observations from around the sports world: Gainesville, Pampa's football opponent on Oct. 5, blanked Justin Northwest, 50-0, last week....The Dodge City Red Demons, who fell victim to the Harvesters, 35-20, last Friday, has a nickname that just doesn't fit its western heritage. Gunslingers, Deputies or Outlaws would seem to be more appropriate. How about the Dilons(after famous Marshall Matt)?...For their victory at Dodge City, the Harvesters were honored by the Amarillo Daily News as the Team of the Week.

Things aren't going to get any better for the Texas Tech Red Raiders. The Red Raiders are coming off a tough 22-17 loss to Wyoming and now must tangle with unbeaten Texas Christian University (3-0) in the Southwest Conference football opener Saturday in Jones Stadium.

It's also homecoming for the Red Raiders, who have lost two of three outings this season. Besides football, there will be an alumni baseball game noon Saturday at Dan Lewis Field and an alumni basketball game at the Athletic Training Center starting at 2 p.m.

Cowboys' Smith to test Giants' 'stuff' defense

IRVING (AP) — Jerry Jones was legendary for his public relations pratfalls when he became the new owner of the Dallas Cowboys.

His handling of Tom Landry's firing drew fire. He then boastfully predicted the Cowboys would win more games in a third of a season than Landry did his last year with the team. That was the season Dallas defeated only Washington.

Then Jones dropped another PR bomb by calling his cheerleaders "the pick of the litter."

It took almost two years for Jones to extract his foot from his mouth.

So, Jones became concerned Tuesday when he thought his football coach was getting too testy when pressed about the lack of production by his wide receivers, in particular Alexander Wright, who has only caught three passes for 41 yards in four games.

"Why don't you (the media) just turn in the lineup cards so we'll know who to play?" Jimmy Johnson said in a half-kidding manner.

Johnson laughed about it but Jones was so concerned he issued an off-hand apology, saying: "I understand Jimmy was a little testy today. When you play the Giants you get testy. But I just want to let you know that the policy of the Dallas Cowboys is you can ask any question any way you want to. That's part of the ballgame. I've been used to that happening to me since the day I got here."

The Cowboys (2-2) play the New York Giants (2-2) in a game Johnson sees as a barometer of how far the franchise has progressed since he and Jones took over three years ago.

"Without question a victory over the Giants would put us ahead of schedule of what people might have expected," Johnson said. "We do have a better football team than what we've had the last two years. There are days when we have setbacks but there is a confidence that what we are doing is on schedule. Deep down the players have confidence that we are doing the right thing."

Johnson said nobody can stuff a team on the line of scrimmage like the Giants.

"Everything is upbeat now because of our (17-9) victory over Phoenix but we have a tremendous challenge in playing the Super Bowl champions," said Johnson, who has yet to beat the Giants. "They are the most physical team in the NFL. Their offensive line gets on somebody and just stays with 'em. Their backs run hard."

"On defense, they don't blitz much but still get a lot of pressure on the quarterback. If you try to run they just engulf the ball carrier."

The Cowboys will be testing the Giants' defense with the leading rusher in the NFL, Emmitt Smith, who gained 182 yards against the Cardinals last week.

Smith has 450 yards on 79 carries to 388 yards on 68 carries by Thurman Thomas of Buffalo.

"Teams will start to concentrate on Emmitt and it will help our offense and we'll be able to open it for Troy (Aikman) and the wide receivers," Johnson said. "In the past we've had some decent games against the Giants."

The Giants were rated two-point favorites for the noon game in already sold-out Texas Stadium.

Skies, Dodgers rain on Braves' parade

By The Associated Press

While it rained on the Braves, the Dodgers pounced the Padres and opened a two-game lead over Atlanta in the NL West.

Mike Morgan allowed six hits in eight-plus innings as Los Angeles beat San Diego 5-2 on Tuesday night. Atlanta's game against Cincinnati was rained out and rescheduled as part of a two-night doubleheader today.

"We don't have to pound the ball to win ballgames," Darryl Strawberry said. "Sometimes you pound the ball and not win. The big thing is getting key hits at the right time and getting guys in."

Eddie Murray had two hits for the Dodgers, including a single leading off a two-run second inning. Morgan (14-9) won his fourth consecutive game and even drove in a run.

It was the second straight offensive show by a Dodgers' pitcher. Ramon Martinez homered Sunday in the Dodgers' 3-0 victory over the Braves.

National League

"We've got a bat in our hand," Morgan said. "Like Ramon the other day, he hit a home run off (Tom) Glavine for the third run. We've got to help ourselves sometimes. We've got to get a double, bunt 'em over, hit a sacrifice fly, get 'em in. Execution wins ballgames a lot more than just power. If you can win ballgames executing, you don't need the three-run homers."

In other games, Pittsburgh beat New York 10-8, San Francisco beat Houston 9-7, St. Louis beat Montreal 4-3 and Philadelphia beat Chicago 4-2.

Ricky Bones (4-5) threw a run-scoring wild pitch in the second inning and Mike Sharperson hit an RBI groundout. Brett Butler's double made it 3-0 in the fourth, but the Padres got two runs in the fifth on Thomas Howard's RBI single and Bip Roberts' run-scoring groundout.

Morgan got his RBI groundout in the sixth and Mike Scioscia hit a run-scoring groundout in the seventh.

In the ninth, John Candelaria struck out Fred McGriff with a man on and Roger McDowell got Benito Santiago on a game-ending double play for his ninth save.

Pirates 10, Mets 8

Howard Johnson broke his own NL record for home runs by a switch-hitter with his 37th. Daryl Boston added a grand slam for the Mets, but visiting Pittsburgh got 17 hits.

Frank Viola remained winless in nine starts since Aug. 8. Bob Patterson (4-2) pitched two scoreless innings and Rosario Rodriguez got his fifth save. Jeff Innis (0-2) was the loser.

Giants 9, Astros 7

Matt Williams homered in the fourth at the Astrodome, then was hit with a Brian Williams pitch his next time up. Williams charged the mound, both benches emptied and both were ejected.

Trailing 5-2, San Francisco got seven runs in the ninth on Willie McGee's RBI single off Mark Portugal (10-10), Will Clark's run-scoring groundout, Kevin Bass's sacrifice fly, bases-loaded walks to Kirt Manwaring and Darren Lewis, a hit batsman to Mike Benjamin and an error by second baseman Casey Candaele.

Rod Beck (1-1) won despite allowing two runs and four hits in two innings. Cardinals 4, Expos 3

Catcher Gilberto Reyes, center fielder Marquis Grissom, shortstop Tom Foley and pitcher Chris Haney (3-6) made errors that led to four unearned runs for St. Louis at Busch Stadium.

Omar Olivares (10-6) gave up seven hits in seven innings and Lee Smith finished for his league-leading 43rd save, tying Rich Gossage for third place on the career list at 308.

Grissom stole three bases, passing suspended Otis Nixon of Atlanta for the major-league lead with 73.

Phillies 4, Cubs 2

Andy Ashby (1-4) won for the first time in six major-league starts, allowing three hits in seven innings at Wrigley Field. Mitch Williams finished with one-hit relief for his 29th save.

Mike Bielecki (13-11) lost his third consecutive start, allowing four runs and six hits in five innings.

Los Angeles Dodgers shortstop Lenny Harris holds up the ball as he jumps over San Diego Padres Tim Teufel after applying a tag on an attempted steal. Teufel was ruled safe.

'Neon' hopes to shine for Braves, Falcons

ATLANTA (AP) — Bo knows baseball, football and rehab. Deion had better know airline schedules.

In this weird and wondrous season for the Atlanta Braves, the weirdest news yet came Tuesday: Deion Sanders, who left the team eight weeks ago to resume his NFL career, will play both sports for the duration of the NL West pennant race.

Bo Jackson, of course, became the most successful two-sport athlete of his generation with the Kansas City Royals and the Los Angeles Raiders.

But Jackson never played two sports in a 36-hour span. Sanders, from all indications, plans to do just that this weekend: running back punts for the Falcons in Atlanta Sunday afternoon; running over travelers at Hartsfield airport Sunday night; and then running the bases for the Braves in Cincinnati Monday night.

Even as the Braves try to vault from worst to first, this is weird.

How much all this will eventually trouble the Los Angeles Dodgers — who enjoyed a 1 1/2-game lead when the Braves summoned Sanders on Tuesday — remains to be seen. The Braves' game against Cincinnati was rained out Tuesday night.

After all, it's not as if Braves general manager John Schuerholz found a 28-year-old Henry Aaron hanging around and got him a uniform. Sanders hit just Deion Sanders fields questions from the media Tuesday after it was announced he would play for the Braves in their drive for the NL West championship.

.193 in his 49 games with Atlanta this season, with four homers and 13 runs batted in.

But he was nine-for-12 stealing bases, and therein lies the reason for all this. With Otis Nixon, the major league's stolen base leader, suspended for a drug violation, the Braves need all the speed they can get.

Thus the announcement Tuesday from team spokesman Jim Schultz: Sanders was being added to the roster "for the remainder of the season."

Schuerholz, at a news conference before Tuesday's game, said Sanders would be in uniform for nine of the Braves' final 12 games. He said Sanders would miss this weekend's three-game series in Houston.

"We had talked with other clubs trying to acquire a speed guy," Schuerholz said. "We decided if Deion wanted to do it, as he said he did, we'd go ahead and give him the opportunity."

"I spoke to (Falcons president) Taylor Smith as a courtesy. I called to tell him, and he just said he appreciated our calling."

"We just hope he doesn't get hurt and we want him to keep focused on football," Smith said in a statement. "We've got a big game coming up this weekend against an undefeated division rival."

"I was excited," Sanders said as he was reunited with his baseball teammates. "They were excited. My face lit up like a Christmas tree when they saw me and accepted me."

Sanders said he also was wished well by his football teammates.

"They told me to go for it," he said. Sander said he had not talked to Falcons coach Jerry Glavine, "but I probably will tomorrow at practice."

He said he does not expect to be fined by the Falcons.

"No, I don't. I haven't done anything wrong. I'm going to be at practice, meetings and the game. What I do on my own time is my own business," Sanders said.

Twins close to AL title

By The Associated Press

The Oakland Athletics are out, the Minnesota Twins are nearly in and the Toronto Blue Jays are a step closer.

With their 5-4 loss to Kansas City on Tuesday night, the Athletics' three-year reign as AL champions officially ended. With 11 games left, Oakland dropped 12 games behind AL West-leading Minnesota, which beat second-place Chicago 9-2.

The victory over the White Sox reduced the Twins' magic number for clinching the division to three. Minnesota can clinch a share of the division title tonight, when they again host the White Sox.

Meanwhile, the Blue Jays increased their AL East lead to two games with a 3-0, 10-inning win over the California Angels. The second-place Boston Red Sox had their game rained against Baltimore and will play a doubleheader tonight.

In other games, it was Detroit 7, Cleveland 2; Milwaukee 5, New York 4, and Texas 8, Seattle 7. Royals 5, Athletics 4

Oakland was the first team to win three straight AL pennants since the 1976-78 New York Yankees. The Twins, in 1987, were the last team other than the Athletics to win the AL title.

Danny Tartabull hit his 30th homer for the Royals and Kevin Appier (12-9) allowed eight hits and one run in six innings. Tartabull's first-inning homer off Joe Slusarski (4-7), following singles by Brian McRae and Kurt Stillwell, gave the Royals a 3-0 lead that they never lost.

"It's tough to give it up; I mean, it's all over," Athletics manager Tony La Russa said. "It's been evident and there's been plenty of time to think about it. But we were outplayed by the club in front. It's time to give them credit. The people who took it over deserve every bit of it."

Blue Jays 3, Angels 0

Pat Borders hit a three-run homer off Jim Abbott in the 10th inning as Toronto won in California.

Borders' one-out homer, his fifth of the season, decided what had been a fine display of pitching by Abbott (17-10), Toronto starter Todd Stottlemyre and Blue Jays reliever David Wells (15-10), who worked the final 2-3 innings.

Abbott gave up four hits over 10 innings and struck out a career-high 13 with one walk. Stottlemyre gave up five hits, walked two and struck out three before Wells came on in relief with one out and one on in the eighth.

Wells allowed one hit and struck out two.

Former NFL referee testifies before House Select Committee on Aging

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former NFL referee Ben Drieth told the House Select Committee on Aging on Tuesday that he was demoted by the league when he refused to retire at age 60.

Drieth said when he turned 60, the NFL tried to get him to retire, and when he refused, demoted him to being a line judge. Going from referee to line judge, Drieth said, is like going from "the penthouse to the cellar."

Drieth successfully appealed to the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission to file a discrimination suit on his behalf. That case is pending.

Joining Drieth in testifying before the panel were a United Airlines pilot who flew his jetliner and 350 passengers to safety after a harrowing accident over the Pacific, and a Missouri Court of Appeals judge forced off the bench when he turned 70.

PHS varsity edges PD in volleyball

JVs lose to PD; Frosh defeat Borger Bulldogs

The Lady Harvesters varsity avenged an early-season volleyball loss to Palo Duro High by nipping the Dons 15-13, 17-15 Tuesday at McNeely Field House.

"Both games we had to fight from behind to win," said Lady Harvesters VB coach Denise Reed. "They (Palo Duro) had beaten us earlier in the year."

Reed said winning the match should give the players momentum as the squad begins district play Saturday against Caprock in Pampa.

Top scorers included Kristen Becker, 9 points; Kasey Bowers, 8; Leigh Ann Lindsey, 6; Jodi Millican, 4; Elasha Hanks, 3; and Shelly Young, 2.

Reed said Amber Seaton contributed mightily to the victory with 14 blocks.

"Becker had a good night at the net with five blocks ... and she served two aces."

The varsity record is 10-6 overall. Pampa's junior varsity lost to Palo Duro, 11-15, 15-11, 9-15.

Leading scorers were: Courtney Smith, 10 points; Emily Brooks, 6; Tammy Chesher, 6; Misti Plunk, 6; Candi Atwood, 3; Lara Adams, 2; Jennifer Cardenas, 1; and Jessica Geran, 1.

Reed said Pampa's "missed serves made a huge difference."

"We (the JVs) didn't serve or pass well," added Reed. "We had a difficult night."

The junior varsity overall record is 6-2.

Saturday's action begins at 2 p.m. The PHS ninth-grade volleyball team defeated Borger's freshmen, 15-8 and 16-14, in Monday night action.

Top scorers were: Misty Scribner, 8; Nicole Brown, 6; Tia Murry, 5; Michelle Johnson, 4; Kasha Jackson, 3; Noelle Wyatt, 1; Jennifer Holland, 1; Danette Hoover, 1; Jessica Whitney, 1; and Shanda Winton, 1.

The Pampa squad won the first match handily, pulling ahead 6-0 on the first service, said Freshman coach Susan Davis.

Davis said the second match was noted 14-14 before Pampa pulled out the victory.

The squad owns a 4-2 record.

School official reprimanded for 'Magic' comments

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — The Lansing school board member who described Lansing native Magic Johnson as "a big, dumb black kid" during his school years has been reprimanded by the board president.

William Carter said Tuesday he'd make a public apology to the NBA star and his family. Carter said his remarks during a Sept. 12 meeting were "a dumb thing," and he deeply regretted them.

"It's embarrassing for me, but I can't imagine how embarrassing it is for the Johnson family to have a little dingaling like me say something like that about their son, who's probably the best thing to ever come out of Lansing," Carter said.

Board President Nancy Erickson said she gave Carter the letter of reprimand on Tuesday.

"Your denigrating remarks are not only an insult to Mr. Johnson, his family, the minority community, and all Lansing citizens, but also to the goals and mission of the Lansing School District," she wrote.

Erickson said she's served on the board with Carter for four years and had never heard him say anything like that before.

"He has been a very good board member. In this particular instance, he used extremely inappropriate and offensive comments to try and convince the board of the merits of his argument," she said.

Carter's comments came as he argued for spending more money on athletic programs for sixth-, seventh-, and eighth-graders.

Ironically, Carter's comments came as the Los Angeles Lakers star was in Lansing to marry his college sweetheart. The two were married on Sept. 14.

Johnson attended high school in Lansing, and led nearby Michigan State to a national championship in 1979.

Pampa Classic soccer team splits

The Pampa Classic soccer team (under 16 boys) began league play with two games in Amarillo last week.

The first game was against the Torpedoes (an under 19 team), which was a non-league (different age brackets) game scheduled to give the older team more play. Pampa had several scoring opportunities, but were shut out, 6-0.

Pampa won the second game, 2-0, against the Tornados. Salvador Del Fierro and David Kludt had first-half goals.

Coach Fran Kludt said Eric

Ritchey, Matt Caswell, Scott Johnson and Brandon Soukup had outstanding games for Pampa.

Pampa's next games are scheduled for Saturday at 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. at Amarillo's Southwest Park, Field Four.

Neither wind nor rain stops dedicated golfers

The cooler weather and high winds this weekend failed to stop the dedicated golfers in Pampa from playing in the Hospice 4-person scramble at Hidden Hills Golf Course.

After all the shots were hit, all the putts putted three teams were tied for the lead with the score of 64.

Using a score card playoff, the team of Bob McGinnis, Gary Hokit, Bill Washington, and Kent Pellam were crowned winners.

Second place went to Don Rosenberg, John Carroll, Kelly Everson, and Mike Murray. Third place went to Bill Bybee, B. Richardson, R. Richardson, and D. Hall.

Congratulations to all the winners.

This weeks question will be answered by David Teichman, Pro at Hidden Hills.

WHY CAN'T WINTER RULES BE PLAYED ON THE PAR 3 HOLES AT HIDDEN HILLS?

Answer: New designs of LINKS and other courses have just about taken out the fairway on par 3 holes. Some use water from tee to green, some use sand. At Hidden Hills we use RUFF, you must play the ball where it lies.

RULE OF THE WEEK: Rule 8-2.. INDICATING LINE OF PLAY.

Everyone saw the controversy about John Daly's putt on TV during the 1991 PGA Championship.

The correct rule is as follows. Any player, caddie or Etc. may indicate or point out before the stroke a line to aim at, but in doing so the putting green shall not be touched. Penalty 2 strokes.

GOLFING FEATS: Bill Washington made an eagle 3 on number 8 at the Dumas Country Club. Bill hit a sandwedge into the hole. GOOD SHOT BILL. Hidden Hills assistant Pro Charlie Nelson and John Darby of Pampa played in a Pro-Am September 16 at the Dumas Country Club, but would not comment on how well they did. Curtis Heard of Pampa got a REAL BIRDIE on number 13 at the Pampa Country Club, OOP'S.

Gates contradicted on Iran-Contra, but senators don't mind

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Confirmation hearings for Robert Gates, President Bush's nominee to head the CIA, have built substantial evidence that Gates knew about the Iran-Contra connection, but senators appear eager to let bygones be bygones.

On Tuesday, the Senate Intelligence Committee spent its fifth day of hearings detailing contradictions between what Gates swears he knew about the Iran-Contra arms and money scandal, and the sworn recollections of two senior CIA officials.

But Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., told one of the witnesses, analyst Charles Allen, that his testimony "leaves us with some mysteries I'm not sure we can ever resolve."

And apparently presupposing a favorable committee vote on Gates' nomination, Boren and Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., discussed whether a final confirmation vote in the full Senate could take place after Congress returns from a Columbus Day recess.

The panel scheduled a closed-door session today to hear from a parade of CIA analysts about whether Gates is guilty of "cooking the books" — slanting intelligence assessments to support the policies of politicians above him.

Boren said senators also would deal in that session with sensitive questions of intelligence the United States shared with Iraq in the mid-1980s during its war with Iran, and would hear a report on conversations the CIA intercepted between Acting CIA director Richard Kerr testifies Tuesday.

Democratic members of Congress and the leftist former government of Nicaragua.

Richard Kerr, acting director of the spy agency, testified Tuesday that the United States had shown satellite photos of strategic sites to Iraq and given Baghdad line drawings of some sites. Intelligence sources say the data was given to aid Iraqi bombing runs on Iranian military and economic targets.

The committee already has compiled a list of at least eight instances between August 1986 and the time Iran-Contra became public on Nov. 25, 1986, when Gates allegedly was given information about the diversion of funds from the sale of U.S. weapons to Iran to Nicaragua's Contra rebels.

In each case, Gates has testified either that he cannot remember the conversation, that the information did not seem well founded or that he took appropriate action.

But he has steadfastly denied that he knew about the Iran-Contra connection before Allen reported it to him on Oct. 1, or that he ever knew about the involvement of the White House and National Security Council aide Oliver North.

On Tuesday, Allen described the Oct. 1 meeting when he detailed to Gates his rationale for suspecting the diversion of funds. He said Gates was not only "stunned that the White House would commingle two activities in such a way," but also commented that while he admired North, "this goes too far."

Gates has told the panel in sworn testimony that Allen "never mentioned to me or speculated that anyone in the U.S. government, including the CIA, NSC or White House" was involved in the diversion.

Later Richard Kerr, the agency's current acting director, recounted to the senators a conversation he says he had in August with Gates about the diversion. He, too, told Gates of North's involvement, and Gates responded that he had been hearing "rumors" about what Kerr was relating. Boren disclosed that CIA notes from an internal investigation in early December 1986 recorded that at that time — less than four months after the conversation — Kerr recalled that Gates had responded, "God only knows what Ollie's up to."

Tuesday's testimony portrayed the CIA as an agency where officials worked in fear of asking questions about the bizarre link between a covert Iranian arms-for-hostages deal and a support operation for the Contras, largely because they believed the initiative went all the way to President Reagan.

"There's a certain aura with the White House, there's a certain aura with the office of the presidency," said Allen, who perceived the link between the two operations by August 1986 and told superiors about his suspicions.
