Bush to address nation on defense strategy

By RITA BEAMISH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush will unveil a "turning point" in the nation's defense strategy in a televised address tonight. He will propose large cuts in U.S.-Soviet nuclear arsenals, an administration official said.

Bush told reporters his speech will have "major worldwide implications for world peace."

One administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said that Bush is expected to propose mutual reductions in superpower nuclear arsenals, and will offer some unilateral cuts.

The official described the speech as "comprehensive and significant" and said it may refer to recent discussions within the Soviet Union about how to handle its nuclear arsenals. Russian Republic President Boris Yeltsin has called for moving all Soviet nuclear weapons to Russia, and other leaders have sought to banish missiles from different republics within the Soviet Union.

The 20-minute address will be broadcast live from the Oval Office at 7 p.m. CDT.

The speech will focus on "a new path for peace" as well as the status of U.S. forces and changes in the Soviet Union, said Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater. He said Bush will announce "a number of decisions related to our nuclear weapons program."

"He will discuss with the American people our thorough readiness to provide for the security of the United States in the new world order," Fitzwater told reporters in a formal announcement.

"It will mark a historic turning point in our national defense posture, pointing out a new path for peace," Fitzwater said. "The president will announce a number of decisions relating to our nuclear weapons program."

Fitzwater said Bush will deal with "long-term defense posture."

Bush told reporters during a photo session this morning that "we're living in a rapidly changing world. I think what I will be saying tonight will have major worldwide implications for world peace."

The administration source also said Bush will state a new strategy on sea-launched cruise missiles, a system in which the United States has an advantage over the Soviet Union.

The Washington Post said that move would be a concession on Bush's part to entice the Soviets to agree to other proposals, including a component on the Strategic Defense Initiative, popularly known as the Star Wars system.

Senior administration officials were quoted by the Post as saying Bush would propose reducing and eventually eliminating all U.S. and Soviet ballistic missiles equipped with multiple nuclear warheads.

Asked about the report, Fitzwater said, "The whole issue has been examined in preparation for this speech."

"The president was planning a speech on defense posture ... that examines these various weapons options."

Bush's speech was so closely held that only his closest advisers knew about it before Thursday. Their quiet work on the proposals was seen as an opportunity to try and diminish the world's nuclear threat by seizing on the time when the Soviet Union is undergoing dramatic changes.

Fitzwater said Bush has contacted U.S. allies and other world leaders on the issue.

Bush chose to make a televised address, Fitzwater said, because he believes "this is so important in terms of the way it changes our defense strategy, it in effect points to a new course in contrast to the one we've been on for the last 40 years almost."

Because of the scope of the announcement, "the president believes that these are issues that he needs to discuss directly with the American people," Fitzwater said.

The Post said Bush's new proposal would call for both the United States and Soviet Union to reduce their nuclear arsenals below the levels in the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty that they signed in Moscow this summer.

The treaty, which calls for a 30 percent reduction in long-range nuclear stockpiles, has yet to be ratified by the Congress.

The treaty was signed before the attempted coup against Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev that led to the disintegration of the central communist system and gave rise to a still evolving system with greater power for the Soviet republics.

U.N. inspector: No sign of release as team still held hostage by Iraqis

By PETER JAMES SPIELMANN
Associated Press Writer

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The head of a U.N. weapons inspection team held hostage in Baghdad said today there was no sign Iraqi officials were preparing to free his crew, even though a solution to the standoff had appeared imminent.

The Security Council on Thursday accepted an Iraqi plan to free the inspectors, who have the right to assess Iraq's weapons of mass destruction under terms of the Persian Gulf War cease-fire.

But the U.N. team leader in Baghdad, David Kay, said today Iraqi authorities have made no move there to resolve the 4-day-old standoff.

"We've had absolutely no change, and we've watched very closely for it," Kay told The Associated Press in an interview by satellite telephone. "The guard force is the same, the attitude seems to be exactly the same. No improvement at all, it's very strange."

The 44-member U.N. team remained surrounded by scores of Iraqi troops in a parking lot outside the Iraqi Atomic Energy Commission. The showdown began Tuesday, after the Iraqis demanded the inspectors turn over documents detailing Iraq's secret nuclear program.

Also today, Iraq's U.N. ambassador, Abdul Amir al-Anbari, released the latest in a series of letters complaining about surveillance overflights by U-2 spy planes, F-15 and F-16 warplanes and helicopters.

The flights went on from Sept. 19-25 "for purposes of observation and provocation," his letter said.

The British foreign minister, Douglas Hurd, said Saddam Hussein may be delaying the release of the U.N. team for a day or two, but he added that the Iraqi president risks conflict if he does not cooperate.

If "he were to dig in and take action against U.N. teams and refuse to comply, he knows very well that he will be made to comply," Hurd told BBC radio from New York.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater also questioned Saddam's actions. "There's been a pattern of cheat and retreat all the way through this," Fitzwater said Thursday.

Under the Iraqi plan, inspectors will keep the documents, photographs and videotapes while they and Iraqi authorities catalog the evidence, diplomats said.

Iraq had initially demanded that the team relinquish the documents, but the inspectors refused.

Kay said his team was getting ready for a solution.

"We've done all the preparatory work on the documents, the video and the film. So, we're ready to go. We've been working all morning about four hours with teams doing that. So, we've done essentially at this point everything we can do on our own," Kay said.

On Thursday, the Security Council said it "deplores Iraq's repeated violations of its obligations" under U.N. resolutions demanding its cooperation with the destruction of its terror weapons.

A statement said the council "reiterates its demand that the inspectors ... be released immediately," but didn't object to "a joint inventory of documents and materials" in this particular case.

Rolf Ekeus, head of the U.N. Special Commission charged with disposing of Iraq's weapons of mass destruction, estimated it would take less than 24 hours to catalog the evidence. At midmorning today, Kay did not indicate that the cataloguing had started.

Encircled by Iraqi troops, the inspectors have struggled to keep their spirits high, holding lotteries to make calls home and improvising touch football games, said Kay, an American.

To pressure Iraq to comply with U.N. resolutions ending the Persian Gulf War, U.S. forces are being sent to neighboring Saudi Arabia. The United States on Wednesday began moving Patriot anti-missile units to the Persian Gulf in case the Security Council orders military escorts for U.N. teams searching Iraq.

On Tuesday, Iraq gave the Security Council written assurance that it would no longer interfere with U.N. helicopter surveillance flights — another U.N. demand that Iraq had ignored.

But on Thursday evening, al-Anbari delivered a letter to Security Council President Jean-Bernard Merimee, insisting that "the aircraft should not start operating" until certain requirements were fulfilled. It did not elaborate.

Merimee said he believed the letter had crossed in transmission with Ekeus' contacts with the Iraqi mission and was not a problem. The letter requested that Ekeus go to Baghdad.

Lake McClellan group to have logo design contest

The Lake McClellan Improvement Inc. Board of Directors voted Thursday night to launch a "logo contest" to find a logo for the recently formed organization.

The board will be soliciting logo designs from the general public, from which a winning logo will be selected to represent and exemplify the organization.

Lake McClellan Improvement was formed during the summer to help with improvement projects at the Gray County lake, including proposed dredging operations, recreational facilities improvements and other projects.

Those who submit entries for the logo contest must have them to the board postmarked no later than Nov. 16. Entries will be reviewed at a meeting at 7 p.m. on Thursday, Nov. 21, at the Gray County Courthouse.

Entries should be mailed to Lake McClellan Improvement Inc., 1501 N. Banks, Pampa, TX 79065.

The winner of the contest will be named by Those attending the first check-in meeting of the Pampa United Way campaign were entertained by a surprise appearance of "Vanna White." Applauding the performance are, from left, Sylvia Goss of Citizens Bank & Trust; Lt. Ernest Lozano of the Pampa Salvation Army; Carol Cofer, Special Gifts; and Jeneane Thornburg.

United Way holds first check-in meeting

A surprise visit by "Vanna White" highlighted the first check-in meeting of the Pampa United Way campaign Thursday at the Pampa Community Building.

Those attending the meeting, including campaign chairman Jack Bailey, were surprised to see "Vanna" arrive in time to draw the name of the door prize winner.

The true identity of the tall blonde with rather hairy legs remains a mystery at press time. But "her" presence certainly livened up the afternoon's events. Carol Cofer's name was drawn as recipient of dinner-for-two at the Biarritz.

Total tally for the first check-in was $27,800, according to Katrina Bigham, executive director of the United Way here.

Top groups bringing in pledges and donations at this check-in were E.L. Green and Individuals with a total of $8,531. Carol Cofer and Special Gifts were runners-up with $5,665.

GCAD approves school contract amendment

Gray County Appraisal District board of directors approved an amendment to the collection contract with Pampa Independent School District at their September meeting Thursday.

On the advice of the appraisal district's attorney, Ken Fields, the board agreed to add a clause to the collection contract to outline the manner in which additional expenses incurred by collecting taxes for County Education District (CED) #14 would be paid.

Fields explained that the clause says that the expenses would be paid on the same basis and in the same manner as other expenses outlined in the contract and that the responsibility of the expenses would belong to the school district and not to the CED.

Board members also approved a list of tax accounts for the Pampa ISD and the City of Pampa to be moved onto a listing of doubtful accounts. Chief Appraiser Pat Bagley explained that the moving of the accounts is a "housekeeping" measure that allows the appraisal district to work with a shorter, active tax account roll, while keeping a record of the doubtful accounts as well.

In his report to the board, Bagley said that recent legislation has mandated that all delinquent personal property taxes that are 10 years old or older and all delinquent real estate taxes 20 years old or older must be removed from the tax roles.

"It's not a bad thing, but it doesn't really amount to a lot,"

Bagley told board members. Approximately 450 accounts amounting to approximately $16,500 would be affected by the legislation. He also presented activity reports from the delinquent tax collection agency to the board.

In other action, the board unanimously approved the minutes for the Aug. 8 meeting and expenditures for August.

John Spearman and R.W. Curry were absent from the meeting when it opened. However, Curry arrived in time to attend an executive session at the conclusion of the meeting.

The board met for approximately 20 minutes to discuss an offer of employment, reconvened and adjourned without taking action.

Open house trek

Parents peruse their students' schedules while walking the halls at Pampa Middle School Thursday evening during the school's annual open house. Earlier in the evening, parents were entertained by outdoor performances of the PMS band and choirs. Then parents went through an abbreviated form of their students' daily schedules, thus getting a chance to see each of the rooms and meet each of the teachers. The night's events also included a newscast written and performed by the students, complete with commercials, promoting the PMS Booster Club. Videotapes of classes in session were shown in some instances, and the theatre arts classes performed brief skits for the parents.

Landmark employees Daniel Tellez and Sixto Teller work on rails at the Rufe Jordan Unit as construction continues at the state prison site east of Pampa in the mild early fall weather. Construction on the prison is expected to continue over the winter and into next year, with completion expected for late summer or early fall in 1992.

Former D.C. mayor sentenced in drug conviction

WASHINGTON (AP) - Former Mayor Marion Barry was sentenced today to six months in prison on his cocaine possession conviction. It was the same sentence that had been thrown out two months ago by a federal appeals court.

U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson imposed both sentences.

Jackson said he believed that Barry was sorer that he had been caught than for his actual drug use. "His expressions of remorse have been belated and perfunctory," Jackson said.

Barry's lawyers had charged that the judge was biased but failed in last-minute legal maneuvering to have him removed from the case.

Barry declined to address the court before today's sentencing. His estranged wife, Effi, who had been at his side during the trial, was not in court today.

"The defendant is contrite. He has shown atonement" for his drug use, said Barry's attorney, R. Kenneth Mundy.

"Incarceration now would be nothing but punishment for the sake of punishment," Mundy said. "There is no societal benefit." He argued that the former mayor should receive probation, home confinement or should be sent to a halfway house.

But prosecutor Judith Retchin argued for a six-month term, saying "this case is different from any other simple possession case."

"The entire city was infected and affected and damaged and shocked" by the mayor's arrest, Ms. Retchin said.

"The defendant used illegal drugs hundreds of times all over the city," she said.

The judge went along with the prosecutor's request.

He ordered Barry to spend six months in jail, pay a $5,000 fine, and serve one year of supervised release.

"The defendant is not a first offender," Jackson said. "He has simply been caught and convicted for the first time."

Barry, the former three-term mayor of the nation's capital, was convicted in August 1990 of a single misdemeanor count of cocaine possession. Trial evidence included an FBI videotape that showed him smoking crack cocaine during a sting operation at a downtown hotel.

He was acquitted on one count of cocaine possession, while the jury deadlocked on 12 other charges including three felony counts of lying to a grand jury. Jackson sentenced him last fall to six months in jail.

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit upheld Barry's conviction in July but granted him a new sentencing on the ground that Jackson did not specify how he reached his decision.

Barry has admitted to alcoholism, prescription drug addiction and occasional cocaine use, and he attended a recovery program.

The Democratic former mayor did not seek re-election last fall and lost an independent bid for a City Council seat. But he has been making occasional public appearances in recent months, prompting speculation that he may run for the City Council again next year.

The appeals court in July denied Barry's claim that Jackson showed bias against him during the trial. But Barry tried again to have the judge removed, contending he showed bias by taking the highly unusual step of discussing the case in a post-trial speech at Harvard University during October, 1990.

Pampa receives financial reporting award

The Certificate of Achievement for Excellence in Financial Reporting has been awarded to the City of Pampa by the Government Finance Officers Association of the United States and Canada (GFOA) for its comprehensive annual financial report (CAFR).

The Certificate of Achievement is the highest form of recognition in the area of governmental accounting and financial reporting, and its attainment represents a significant accomplishment by a government and its management.

An Award of Financial Reporting Achievement has been awarded to the individual designated as primarily responsible for preparing the award-winning CAFR. This has been presented to Phillip Conner, assistant finance director.

The CAFR has been judged by an impartial panel to meet the high standards of the program including demonstrating a constructive "spirit of full disclosure" to clearly communicate its financial story and motivate potential users and user groups to read the CAFR.

The GFOA is a nonprofit professional association serving 12,300 government finance professionals with offices in Chicago, Illinois and Washington, D.C.

New limits imposed on money sent to Cuba

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Treasury Department today imposed new limits on the amount of money that may be sent to Cuba, in an effort to curb travel fees required by the Cuban government.

The new regulations are designed to limit exorbitant fees imposed by the Cuban government by setting a reasonable cap on the amount of U.S. dollars that may be sent to Cuba to facilitate travel," R. Richard Newcomb, director of the Office of Foreign Assets Control, explained.

"At the same time, the provisions accomplish the objectives of the embargo by further limiting financial and commercial transactions with Cuba," he added.

The amended regulations limit to $500 the amount a person or company may send to a Cuban national for expenses involving travel to the United States.

The new rules also limit to $500 the amount of fees to the Cuban government for travel to Cuba.

A third change reduces the limit on family remittances sent from the United States to close relatives in Cuba from $500 to $300 during any three-month period.

A fourth change prohibits Cubans returning from the United States from carrying non-Cuban currency in excess of the amount brought to the United States.

"Since March 1990, Cuba has substantially eased travel restrictions, including progressively lowering the minimum age from 65 to 20," the announcement said.

"This has resulted in a significant increase in the transfer of U.S. dollars to Cuba as a result of the rise in applications for non-immigrant visas," it continued.

The department said the required payment in dollars for travel-related services such as passports, exit visas and personal record procurement was "excessive."

The announcement noted that since Cubans may not legally hold dollars, their travel often is funded by relatives in the United States. Because these funds sometimes are sent to relatives who never receive permission to leave, the new regulations permit the transfer of funds only after a visa has been issued.

Man arrested on drug indictment warrant

Following a "lengthy foot pursuit," officers of the Pampa Police Department and Regional Narcotics Traffic Task Force apprehended a 19-year-old wanted on a grand jury indictment for felony drug trafficking.

Curtis Wine Jr., whose address was listed as 1144 Huff Rd., was arrested after officers chased him from his home to the 500 block of Harlem.

A task force press release said Wine was named in a sealed indictment following an undercover operation.

Wine remained in city jail through press time today and bond had not yet been set.

Officers said they attempted to arrest Wine at his home at 2:45 p.m., but he attempted to evade capture by running from them.

Children of former maquiladora workers impaired for life, mothers say

By EDUARDO MONTES
Associated Press Writer

MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP) — At 16, Francisco Javier Zavala still isn't able to speak. He can't dress or feed himself, and the prospects that he'll ever be able to do so are bleak.

His mother, Irma Duenes, gave up her job at a Matamoros maquiladora years ago to give him the extra care and attention he requires.

"I have to feed him," Ms. Duenes said recently. "He doesn't say when he has to go to the bathroom. He wears diapers day and night."

She said her son is a victim of chemicals she was exposed to during her pregnancy when she worked at a Matamoros electronics plant owned and operated by Mallory Capacitors Co. in the 1960s and '70s.

Now Ms. Duenes and other former Mallory employees who say their children suffered from birth defects because of the chemicals want assurances that they'll be compensated, and that their children will be cared for in the future.

Some 40 families from Matamoros and Brownsville, Texas, filed suit Monday in state district court in Brownsville against Mallory. They seek unspecified damages.

However, it's not clear who would be liable for any damages that may result from the lawsuit since Mallory has been sold at least twice since the plant shut down and neither its current nor former owners claim to have assumed the liabilities.

The lawsuit charges that the company was negligent in not warning employees about potential dangers posed by the chemicals and by failing to provide adequate safety equipment or ventilation.

According to the lawsuit, women who were pregnant while working at the plant subsequently either experienced miscarriages or stillbirths. Some babies died shortly after birth or suffered from extensive physical and mental defects, the lawsuit says.

More than 50 afflicted children are listed as plaintiffs in the suit.

Ms. Duenes and another former Mallory employee, Eva Ortiz de Rivas, said they had normal children before working at the plant. They said their lives have been turned upside down by the need to care for their afflicted sons.

"He can't dress himself," Ms. Ortiz said of her 15-year-old son Juan Arturo. "We have to do everything for him and take care of him."

Ms. Ortiz said she worked at the plant, which employed about 200 people, until it closed without warning in 1977. Since then, Mallory has been sold several times and it is not clear who is liable for the plant's operations.

It was owned and operated by Mallory of Indianapolis, Ind., at the time of the alleged violations, but that company no longer exists.

The company is now owned by North American Capacitor Co., which did not assume the plant's liabilities, said spokeswoman Jo Carr.

Black & Decker owned Mallory from 1989 until late last year but never assumed its liabilities either, said Black & Decker spokeswoman Barbara Lucas.

Duenes and Ortiz said that workers at the Mallory plant came into contact daily with unidentified chemicals apparently used in making the capacitors.

The chemicals would splash over the workers assembling the component and the bitter-tasting liquid would often fall into their unprotected mouths and eyes, they said.

Frequently employees who worked around the chemicals "would begin to faint and fall everywhere. When they started to faint they would send us home," Duenes said.

But workers were never warned that the chemicals might be hazardous, employees said.

Rafael Moure, an industrial hygienist and associate professor at the University of Massachusetts at Lowell, said it's not unusual for unprotected maquila workers to be exposed to chemicals.

Moure conducted a study last year in colonias in Matamoros and Reynosa, Mexico, that revealed many problems with several border plants, including the fact that employees often don't know what chemicals they're using.

"We almost consistently found answers from the people we interviewed that handled chemicals that the signs on the bottles of chemicals that they had to use were almost always in English," he said.

"We found that people who have received the training (to handle the chemicals) from the company seemed to be less knowledgeable than the people who were trained independently," Moure added.

He did not mention particular instances.

Paul Blanco, president of the Matamoros Maquiladora Association, which represents about 70 maquilas, said he had no knowledge of particular instances of violations.

But he said that all of the association member facilities he had visited had been very clean and modern.

"I don't know some of the smaller companies, what they look like inside," Blanco said. "I have been very well impressed with the cleanliness and the order that they have" at some of the larger facilities.

Regardless of any corporate assurances the maquilas are safe, environmentalists maintain that maquila owners exploit their workers and subject them to hazardous conditions for the sake of profit.

Lawsuits like the case filed against Mallory will help bring that situation to an end, said Craig Merrilees, a trade and environmental specialist with the National Toxic Campaign Fund, a nonprofit corporation that provides support to local citizen organizations.

"This lawsuit is absolutely crucial," Merrilees said from his office in San Francisco. "It's one of a growing number of suits filed by workers in Mexico and Central America who were harmed by U.S. corporations that moved south to find desperate poor people who would work for pennies an hour and wouldn't complain about dangerous conditions."

Duenes and Ortiz see the suit much more simply. "I hope we can get the best for our children," Duenes said. "It would be good if something was left for them because they're going to be affected for the rest of their lives."

Federal agents now turning their efforts to chemical shipments in war on drugs

By MICHAEL GRACZYK
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Federal agents say they want to make the cost of manufacturing illegal drugs as high as possible, and have developed a high-tech way to keep chemicals from getting to drug-makers in South America.

Common chemicals like benzene, acetone and ketones are made in Houston and shipped around the world from the Port of Houston, which handles 70 percent of the nation's chemical exports. The chemicals are used in items like nail polish, perfume, paint and medications.

Although a typical 55-gallon drum of the solvent would sell legally for $100 to $150, it's worth almost $10,000 on the illegitimate market in Colombia where it's needed for cocaine production, agents said.

"We want to make the costs as high as possible in this illegal traffic," Billy Monks, supervisory inspector for the U.S. Customs Service, said Thursday. "We want to make it as difficult as possible."

"There's a tremendous profit potential for those who would divert into the illegal trade," Monks said. "They are essential to making illegal drugs that will come back to the United States."

A 1988 law known as the Chemical Diversion and Trafficking Act requires chemical makers to document to the Drug Enforcement Administration what they are shipping, how much they are shipping and where it is going.

Those documents are filed in a computer which then is matched against the actual cargoes.

If quantities exceed the designated amounts, they are stopped from shipment.

"Last week we stopped two shipments to Colombia because it was decided too much of a chemical had gotten into Colombia so far," said Mike Shortis, a senior investigator with the DEA.

Agents armed with a new device known as an M-600 measure the density of drums holding chemicals and awaiting shipment from the port. The $5,000 device, which resembles a hair dryer, sends microwaves through the drums.

Agents using the device can look at a digital readout to identify differences in the cargo and determine if something is being shipped that is not accounted for.

If the cargo does not match the list submitted to the DEA and stored in the agency's computer, it is seized.

Shortis said agents, who have two of the M-600 devices in Houston, have made 65 seizures in the past two years worth more than $21 million.

Houston is the only port where DEA and Customs agents are working together on the program, although the computer is available to agents elsewhere.

"Houston is a point of opportunity since we do have so much chemical trade here," Monks said.

Monks said officials believe German, Dutch and Japanese chemical companies are filling the void left by a decrease in U.S. shipments. But the success of the American program makes it easier for diplomats to encourage the governments of countries overseas to adopt similar efforts.

Man sentenced to 30 years in constable's taped murder

TYLER (AP) — A judge has sentenced a government witness to 30 years in a federal penitentiary for his involvement in the slaying of a constable whose attack was partially recorded on videotape.

Jesus "Jesse" Cortez Zambrano, 23, of Edinburg, pleaded guilty on April 11 in the capital murder of constable Darrell Lunsford, 47, in January.

Zambrano then testified against brothers Baldemar Sambrano Villarreal, 29, and Reynaldo Sambrano Villarreal, 25, in July. The older brother received a life sentence without parole and the younger was sentenced to 40 years in prison.

The two were convicted after three days of testimony, which ended with the panel viewing a dramatic videotape of the brothers and Zambrano attacking the constable.

The constable started the video camera mounted on the dash of his patrol car before getting out to question the suspects during a routine traffic stop in Garrison in northeast Texas.

The camera captured his attack by the men but his slaying, with his own pistol, occurred out of the frame. However, moments later, Baldemar Villarreal was shown carrying the pistol.

The video showed Zambrano getting out of the car and assisting in the attack after Lunsford had been knocked to the ground.

Zambrano testified that he and the Villarreal brothers were driving a load of marijuana from Houston to Chicago on Jan. 23 when Lunsford stopped their car and began searching it.

Zambrano's guilty plea to murdering a law enforcement officer during a drug-related crime could have brought a life sentence.

But U.S. District Judge Robert M. Parker said he took into consideration Zambrano's lesser role.

"Had Jesus never gotten out of the car, Constable Lunsford would still be dead," the judge said.

"Jesus Zambrano had far less involvement in the actual murder ... and I believe 30 years is an appropriate sentence," said U.S. Attorney Bob Wortham.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Iran-Contra case has run its long course

Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., was correct in one aspect when commenting on the dismissal of all charges against Oliver North in the never-ending Iran/Contra affair. Congressional hearings, he said, were more important than criminal charges against North.

Those hearings, in which North was required to testify in exchange for immunity, now have led to freedom for North. The result was predictable: how could trial witnesses against North not be influenced by North's testimony? His testimony was Star Chamber with a twist — the hearings were public.

It becomes increasingly apparent that prosecution of criminal charges was not the primary purpose. Although Hamilton didn't put the matter in that context, it is inescapable that what Congress really intended was to discredit the Reagan administration, especially its policy related to assisting Nicaraguan Contras. What better way to do so than conduct public hearings, during which Congress could question and micromanage foreign policy?

With an open checkbook and congressional backing, special prosecutor Lawrence Walsh sought North's scalp. After months of preparation and weeks of trial, North was convicted of three minor charges: destroying documents, assisting in the obstruction of Congress and receiving an illegal gift. He was found innocent of the major charge of conspiring to defraud the government.

But the immunity question was certain to cast doubt on the wisdom of North's compelled testimony to Congress. A federal appeals court, in reversing the convictions and sending the case back to the trial level, said Walsh, et al., would have to prove "line and by line and witness by witness" that his congressional testimony didn't influence witnesses. The ruse fell apart when Robert McFarlane, Reagan's former national security advisor, said he was influenced by North's comments to the congressional committee.

The same is likely to happen to Walsh's case against John Poindexter, who succeeded McFarlane as National Security adviser. Poindexter was convicted in 1990 of five felonies including conspiracy and obstruction of Congress. Witnesses in that trial, too, must have been influenced by Poindexter's testimony before Congress.

After having spent $27 million in persecuting, trying and losing the case against North, the prudent course of action is to hand Walsh his walking papers and deep six the entire Iran/Contra affair. Nothing has been gained, no great knowledge imparted and no great crime uncovered. The public is weary of Iran/Contra and there is no justification to continue wasting millions of dollars.

There oughtta be a law? No

WASHINGTON — Thirty-odd years ago, newspaper readers delighted in a feature called "There Oughtta Be a Law." The feature came to mind the other day, thanks to an interview in Time magazine with Myriam Miedzian. Time identified her as a social philosopher.

Mrs. Miedzian seeks to rear boys in ways that will make them less prone to violence and sexism, a worthy aim. The interview focused on boyhood sports. She properly criticized coaches and parents who are obsessed with winning at any cost. This obsession "is frequent enough that it is a serious problem."

Perhaps so. All of us have heard of sports dads who drag their sons into pitching sliders before they learn the fastball. An extreme level of competition, as she said, "is just not good for a 7- or 8-year-old boy." But I am sure that the social philosopher's approach can also be carried to extremes, and I wonder especially at the remedy she would apply. She feels there oughtta be a law.

"I advocate regulation of youth sports," she says. "There are 30 million American children involved in youth sports programs, and there is absolutely no control over the coaches or what is going on."

Mrs. Miedzian has all kinds of worries. She fears that young athletes who are overly concerned with conquering the other team will grow up with a desire to conquer women. They will develop a negative attitude. Boys look at violent movies. They absorb violence from TV. It is completely unrealistic to expect parents to monitor their children's viewing habits. She has a better idea. There oughtta be a law.

"Parents also should be writing letters to their members of Congress, asking for the creation of a children's public television network dedicated to pro-social, non-violent programming."

By reducing the emphasis on winning, and by curbing violence in movies and on TV, she would "redefine masculinity." We must encourage boys from the youngest age, she says, "to be empathetic, to get in touch with their own feelings, to tell them they can be nurturing and masculine at the same time."

Much that Mrs. Miedzian says about our violent society is undeniably true. By her count, American youths will have watched 26,000 murders on TV alone by the time they reach 18. Common sense tells us that when the screen is filled with tales of sex and crime, young people are bound to absorb a notion that sex and violence are acceptable. A horror film is art. Life imitates art, if art it may be called.

Yet I doubt that the situation would be greatly relieved by recourse to "there oughtta be a law." One envisions a new bureaucracy, created in the name of the general welfare, that would govern the training and licensing of Little League coaches. Their schooling would include a compulsory course in Graceful Losing 101. Opposing teams would not be known as "opponents." The word smacks of violence. Opposing teams would be known as the Friendly Others.

The lady's proposal for a public TV network for children is equally suspect. She insists she is not talking about "goody-goody, boring programming," but in fact she is talking about government control of a broadcast medium financed with the taxpayers' money. We have quite enough of that, thank you, in the Corporation for Public Broadcasting and National Public Radio.

Let a gaggle of social philosophers run a TV network for children, and the kids will not get Bambi, Lassie and Rin-Tin-Tin. I don't know what they would get, but I would be wary of conning my grandchildren into watching what the government says is Good For Them. It was said of the Jesuits that if they got to a child before the child was 5, they would have the child for life. Indoctrination comes in many forms.

Some months ago, out of curiosity, I watched the Saturday morning cartoons. They didn't seem awful to me. There was plenty of violence, as I recall. Roadrunner was always falling off a cliff or smashing into a stone wall, but the 6-year-old beside me was not impressed. Children are not dummies. They know ketchup, and they know blood, and they know the difference.

We ought to teach boys and girls to play fair, but we ought also to teach them to play hard. The object of a game is to win it — not at any cost, of course, but to win it if one can. Show me a good loser, said one philosopher, and I will show you a loser. This was not a social philosopher. This was a garden-variety philosopher. He learned his trade by coaching third base.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, Sept. 27, the 270th day of 1991. There are 95 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Sept. 27, 1964, the Warren Commission issued a report concluding that Lee Harvey Oswald had acted alone in assassinating President Kennedy in November 1963.

On this date:

In 1779, John Adams was named to negotiate the Revolutionary War's peace terms with Britain.

In 1825, the first locomotive to haul a passenger train was operated by George Stephenson in England.

In 1854, the first great disaster involving an Atlantic Ocean liner occurred when the steamship Arctic sank with 300 people aboard.

In 1928, the United States said it was recognizing the Nationalist Chinese government.

In 1939, Warsaw, Poland, surrendered after weeks of resistance to invading forces from Nazi Germany and the Soviet Union during World War II.

In 1959, a typhoon battered the main Japanese island of Honshu, killing nearly 5,000 people.

Fuss-fights among the retirees

Repeatedly in recent years I have been invited to speak at Del Webb's Sun City retirement villages in Arizona.

Nowhere have I been hosted in a more comfortable environment.

Retirees arrive — often in their golf carts — at the enormous auditorium which is aesthetically beautiful and acoustically incomparable.

Acquaintances who have retired there — doctors, musicians, industrialists — have offered nothing but praise for the community, its facilities and their neighbors.

Now I hear from Paul Tatz of the Del Webb Corporation that this attractive environment is not friction-free.

University of California researchers further discover that seniors in retirement facilities are more likely to attack their governing boards than support them.

The Wall Street Journal says, "To many affluent Americans the idea of spending one's golden years behind the gated confines of a well-to-do retirement community conjures up visions of carefree days of golf and lawn bowling, but there is another enduring pastime: quarreling."

The quarrel at Sun City is mostly over whether to incorporate. Emotions run so high on this issue that the leader of one faction admits he watches the obituary column every morning for the name of the leader of the opposing faction.

The Journal looked around:

At Laguna Hills (Calif.) Leisure World, the fuss-fight is over relative golfing rights of owners and renters. A lawsuit is pending.

At Oakmont Village in Santa Rosa, Calif., the fight — scheduled for trial in October — is over how to buy a nearby golf course.

At Century Village, Pembroke Pines, Fla., two opposing groups of retirees publish monthly newspapers, each bitterly critical of the other.

Rossmoor, near San Francisco, has 27 holes of golf, tennis, riding stables, swimming pools, lawn-bowling greens and hiking trails. Two hundred clubs are devoted to everything from yoga to archeology.

But residents also participated in a variety of litigation — relating to who pays how much for maintenance, property management, and at least two other squabbles are in court there.

Are the elderly residents of these places less flexible, more stubborn, "accustomed to having their way?"

That's part of it.

Actually, most of our nation's 100-plus mega-retirement communities are pleasant places — including these I've mentioned — with most residents going about their business oblivious to any swirling turmoil. And often even the most outspoken dissidents concede that they'd not live anywhere else.

Maybe, in some instances anyway, the intramural squabbling is just "something to do."

Judge Thomas goes against the grain

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

The curtain has now risen on the final act in the drama of Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas. The Senate Judiciary Committee has had its hearings on his nomination, the anti-Thomas lobby has kicked off its $3 million campaign to "Bork him," and conservatives are fighting back as best they can.

Ever since President Reagan's nomination of Robert Bork in 1987, which the liberal left defeated by dragging a supremely well-qualified nominee through a barnyard mudbath unprecedented in the history of judicial nominations, there can be no confidence that the confirmation process, now or in the future, will be conducted with anything approaching the dignity it deserves. The Senate will be a long time living down its disgraceful performance on that occasion, whether Clarence Thomas is confirmed or not.

Luckily, it seems possible that at least a majority of senators, this time, will turn a deaf ear to the snarls of Norman Lear and his left-liberal lobby. If they do, it won't be because they have experienced any belated influx of high-mindedness. Rather, it will be because the character and significance of Clarence Thomas will have become unmistakably clear in the Senate hearings.

It isn't merely that Clarence Thomas has suffered, starting his life under circumstances of abject poverty and rising, step by step, to a position of real eminence in American society. Plenty of American blacks have suffered as much, as some have risen as high.

What makes Clarence Thomas so noteworthy is the fact that he did not choose to construct and pursue his career on the theory that, as a black man, America owed him special attention or special help. All he ever asked — and this he demanded — was an equal opportunity to compete.

Unless I miss my guess, the dignity and power of that position are going to have a profound impact on the national television audience watching the Thomas hearings. Some of the senators on the committee can hardly be expected to appreciate a sentiment so thoroughly noble (Sen. Kennedy, for example, who weighs these matters between midnight pub crawls in Palm Beach).

But even the Senate's most abandoned opportunists are experts at detecting the way the wind of public opinion is blowing — and acting accordingly.

The real losers, if Thomas is ultimately confirmed, will be the black "leaders" who long ago made a Faustian bargain with America's liberals to be their lifelong political rag-babies in return for the right to administer a crippling dole to their fellow blacks.

Let us assume they were convinced that this bargain was the best that could be struck, in the interests of the black community. Let us assume they genuinely believed they had earned the praise (and the far more tangible rewards) showered on them by the liberals for striking it. Let us assume, even, that there was something to be said for that diabolical dole (without forgetting, however, such appalling blunders as Aid to Families with Dependent Children, which virtually destroyed the black family structure in America).

Even so, Clarence Thomas stands forth as a man who never for a second endorsed such a "solution" to the problems of America's blacks. He has fought fiercely for their right to equal opportunity, but has rejected every effort to treat them as cripples.

And he has demonstrated, in his own career, the success that can be achieved by an able black who refuses to spend his life as a "handkerchief-head" (to return professor Derrick Bell's compliment) on the plantation of American liberalism.

To liberal blacks, such independence is hugely offensive; for it to be rewarded by elevation to the Supreme Court would be utterly intolerable. Clarence Thomas — and through him, black Americans generally — must be taught that there is no salvation save through liberalism.

We shall see.

Dr. Yuet Wai Kan, a genetics expert at the University of California, San Francisco, holds the 1991 Albert Lasker Clinical Medical Research Award after it was presented to him Thursday in New York.

Genetic researchers, others awarded Lasker prizes for studies of genes and disease

By MALCOLM RITTER
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Two California scientists and a German researcher have won prestigious awards for their studies of genes in body development and disease.

The Albert and Mary Lasker Foundation also announced public service awards for former House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill Jr. and family planning advocate Robin Chandler Duke.

Winners of the $15,000 prizes were announced Thursday. The awards were to be presented at a luncheon in New York today.

Dr. Yuet Wai Kan of the University of California, San Francisco, won the Lasker award for clinical medical research.

In 1975, he discovered that some infants with the disease alpha-thalassemia lacked a gene for part of the hemoglobin molecule. It was the first time that a genetic deletion was shown to cause human disease.

Later, working with enzymes that cut genetic material into fragments, he found that the pattern of fragments from patients with sickle cell anemia differed from the pattern of other people. The discovery led not only to a genetic test for that disease, but to tests for other genetic diseases and a method of locating genes.

The Lasker award for basic medical research was shared by Edward Lewis of the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena and Christiane Nusslein-Volhard of the Max-Planck Institute for Developmental Biology in Tubingen, Germany.

Lewis, while studying the fruit fly Drosophila, discovered a cluster of genes that controls how the fly's body segments develop. His work established the idea that individual genes can control the development of specific regions of the body, and "launched a new area of investigation into how genes regulate the entire course of growth of a living organism," the Lasker foundation said.

Also working with Drosophila, Nusslein-Volhard "solved the logic of how genes control body patterns by showing that they give rise to a hierarchy of signaling molecules, each conferring spatial information by governing where and when other molecules are expressed," the foundation said.

She and colleague Eric Wieschaus identified nearly all the genes involved in specifying embryonic pattern development in Drosophila, work that "opened up the study of the body plan on the molecular level," the foundation said.

O'Neill "worked tirelessly ... to guide some of the most important national health legislation in history through Congress," including the National Cancer Act and expansion of Medicare services to the disabled and elderly, the foundation said.

Duke, who chairs the national Population Crisis Committee, "has been a tireless advocate of family planning, world population stabilization and women's reproductive rights," the foundation said.

Anti-Thomas forces say they're gaining support

By JAMES ROWLEY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Joseph Biden announced today he will vote against the confirmation of Clarence Thomas to the Supreme Court, and said the panel would split 7-7 on the controversial nomination.

Biden said the committee vote, expected later in the day, would send the nomination to the full Senate.

Sen. John Danforth, the Missouri Republican who has been Thomas' most visible supporter, said that despite the close committee vote, he was "confident of the result" when the full Senate voted.

Even so, the virtual certainty of a tie vote in committee was certain to give opponents of the nomination cause for optimism. Thomas, a black, conservative appeals judge, has drawn fire from many Democrats for declining to discuss his views on abortion and many other controversial areas of the law. He has been nominated to replace Thurgood Marshall, an advocate for liberalism in a long tenure on the court.

Biden's decision to oppose Thomas came a day after a fellow committee Democrat, Alabama's Howell Heflin, came out against the 43-year-old federal judge picked by President Bush for the court.

"I will not vote to confirm Judge Thomas," Biden said. "It is not a decision I come to lightly. ... Every one of us was impressed by Judge Thomas' personal life story."

"As difficult as this decision has been to me, it is one that I make with firm conviction," Biden said. "For it is a vote that I cast with my head, not my heart. ... I acknowledge that this is a close call."

Biden said that Thomas, during confirmation hearings, failed to convince him that the nominee believed in protecting rights guaranteed by the Constitution, "even after repeated attempts by me to assuage my concerns and the concerns of others."

"We're at a place in this country where the risks are just simply too high," he said.

He said his decision had been a close call, and said that one lawmaker told him he had decided to support Thomas because of his roots. Biden said he replied that it wasn't his roots he was worried about — "it was his wings."

Thomas, who was born in poverty in the segregated South, is 43, and can be expected to serve for many years on the court.

Biden said he still believed that Thomas would surmount the Senate floor debate and vote. Biden said he hoped that Thomas' record as a Supreme Court justice would ultimately compel the senator to "say that I should have voted with my heart and not my head."

Biden said that under the Senate's rules, a 7-7 vote could kill the nomination.

But he assured Danforth, that he had "no intention of holding to that fast rule. He also said he has no intention of supporting a filibuster — and knows of no move by opponents of the nomination to stage one.

Danforth, responding, said he hoped the Senate could take up the nomination by the middle of next week, no matter what the vote in today's Judiciary Committee meeting.

Although Heflin, in remarks made on Thursday, predicted Thomas still will win confirmation by the full Senate, he said Thomas "might be part of the right-wing extremist movement" and suggested he may have given deceptive answers about his views.

Thomas' disavowals of past writings "suggest to me deceptiveness at worst or muddleheadedness at best," Heflin said in a floor speech.

"Heflin's vote is the most significant breakthrough in the confirmation process," said Nan Aron, executive director of Alliance for Justice, a liberal advocacy group that opposes Thomas.

"It will cause a lot of senators ... to think long and hard about opposing this nomination," she said.

Ralph Neas of the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, a coalition of 180 groups that opposes Thomas, said Heflin's opposition "underscores the fact that, contrary to the White House press campaign, the confirmation of Clarence Thomas is not a done deal."

Whatever the vote, Biden has said the committee will follow its customary practice of sending Supreme Court nominations to the floor with or without a recommendation.

Although he has studiously avoided stating his views on the nomination, Biden expressed exasperation several times at Thomas' refusal to answer questions about his judicial philosophy.

Thomas, President Bush's nominee to succeed the retiring Thurgood Marshall, would be only the second black to sit on the court, Marshall is the first.

A legal newspaper reported this week that Thomas, now a U.S. Court of Appeals judge, may have tried to avoid controversy at his confirmation hearings by postponing the release of an opinion he wrote in an affirmative action case.

The Legal Times of Washington said Thomas has withheld the majority opinion in the three-judge panel's decision that reportedly strips from a woman her license to operate a new radio station in Middletown, Md.

House panel approves $1.1 billion anti-crime package

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $1.1 billion anti-crime package that would expand the death penalty to 48 new crimes and ban some assault-style weapons has been approved by the House Judiciary Committee.

The sweeping anti-crime legislation, approved Thursday after 3 1/2 days of debate, would help state and local governments put more police on the streets, improve programs for youthful offenders and give drug treatment to more prisoners.

House Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., said the full House would debate the measure next month.

Rep. Charles E. Schumer, D-N.Y., said he was optimistic that the fights over the death penalty and other issues that blocked passage last year of comprehensive crime legislation would not be an obstacle this year.

"The old ideological fights are losing their strength," said Schumer, who chairs the panel's crime subcommittee.

But Republicans are expected to wage floor fights as they did last year to make it easier to impose the death penalty and further restrict the ability of state prisoners to challenge their sentences in federal court.

Rep. George Gekas, R-Pa., complained that the bill "in many different ways tries valiantly to defeat the death penalty."

Schumer said Democrats believe that "the death penalty is an appropriate form of punishment, they also believe you better be careful you don't execute the wrong person."

The bill applies the death penalty to 48 federal crimes, including terrorism, espionage, kidnapping that results in murder or death, political assassinations and for drug trafficking on a large scale.

Prosecutors would be required to prove intent to kill to obtain the death penalty except for terrorist acts or drive-by fatal shootings. For those crimes, the bill would authorize execution for someone who showed "reckless disregard for human life."

A floor fight on the assault-weapon ban is also expected, though gun-control proponents scored a big victory last spring when the House approved a seven-day waiting period for handgun purchases known as the Brady Bill.

The bill is named after former White House press secretary James Brady, who was left disabled when he was shot in the head when a gunman shot President Reagan in 1981.

President Bush, who chided lawmakers for their inability to pass a major crime bill last year, has demanded enactment of several controversial provisions as a condition for signing gun-control legislation.

Bush has sought an expanded federal death penalty, wider latitude for police to conduct searches and more restrictions on habeas corpus petitions used by death-row inmates to delay their executions.

Here are the major items in the anti-crime bill approved Thursday by the House Judiciary Committee.

GUN CONTROL
Bans 13 types of assault-style weapons, compared with a ban on nine types in a bill passed last summer by the Senate. The Senate's version would also require a five-day waiting period for handgun purchases while police conduct background checks of would-be buyers. The House passed a separate seven-day waiting period in May.

DEATH PENALTY
Applies the death penalty to 48 federal crimes including terrorism, espionage, kidnapping that results in murder or death, political assassinations and for drug trafficking on a large scale.

Prosecutors would be required to prove intent to kill to obtain the death penalty except for terrorist acts or drive-by fatal shootings. For those crimes, the bill would authorize execution for someone who showed "reckless disregard for human life."

The Senate bill would include the looser standard for 51 capital crimes.

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE

Both the Senate and House bills would codify a 1984 Supreme Court decision allowing the use of improperly seized evidence if police armed with a search warrant thought they were following procedures. Both the Senate and the House Judiciary Committee rejected a proposal to allow such evidence in the case of warrantless searches.

The House bill would give death-row inmates up to a year to file habeas corpus petitions to challenge their convictions and set minimum standards for competence of lawyers who represent defendants in capital murder cases.

The Senate bill gives death-row inmates 90 days to file such petitions and restricts the challenges to the validity of the conviction. The House version allowed a slightly wider range of legal challenges.

Join Us In Worship

In The Church Of Your Choice

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Man's first reactions to another is based on outward appearances, and only time will help him to know the heart of another; God knows, immediately, every attitude of the heart, whether it is good or bad.

"Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God."

There are many rewards for those that follow the Lord. "Let the heart of them rejoice that seek the Lord."

Rev. James E. Maloney

Spirit conference scheduled today through Sunday

Faith Christian Center, 118 N. Cuyler, is hosting a city-wide Holy Spirit conference on today, Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 27-29.

Services are to be at 7 p.m. on today and Saturday and at 10:30 a.m. and 7 p.m. on Sunday.

Evangelist James Maloney has traveled worldwide, including India, Russia, the Philippines, and Indonesia. His gifts of the Spirit include word of knowledge, word of wisdom, prophecy and healings.

Pastor Ed Barker and members of Faith Christian Center extend an invitation to the public to attend the services. Nursery services are provided for children through three years of age.

Hi-Land Christian sets 'homecoming' celebration Sunday

Hi-Land Christian Church, 1615 N. Banks, is celebrating "Homecoming" this Sunday, Sept. 29, at it's 10:45 a.m. services.

Homecoming queen candidate, Summer Ziegelgruber is to share her testimony and life as a cheerleader and a Christian. Several of the church's charter members are to call the congregation's attention "homeward. And a special sermon is to deal with how persons can "come home."

A noon sandwich luncheon will follow the services so all former members, as well as newcomers, may have a time of fellowship. The community is invited by the church and its pastor to this celebration of victory.

Visitors are asked to be tolerant of the construction projects going on at the church. Additional parking is available across the street from the church building.

Revival promises gospel singing, Bible preaching

Evangelist and Mrs. Tim Peter are to bring gospel singing and Bible preaching at a revival Sept. 29 through Oct. 3 at The Carpenter's Church, 639 S. Barnes.

The event begins at 10:30 a.m. Sunday, Sept. 29, followed by a 7 p.m. service that night, and continuing with services Monday through Friday at 7:30 p.m. each night.

The Peters are American Indians of the Choctaw tribe. Evangelist Peter, a second generation minister, writes most of the songs he and his wife sing. The Peters live in Oklahoma and minister throughout the Southwest.

"We are very happy to have Evangelist and Mrs. Peter in Pampa at the Carpenter's House," said Pastor F.C. Palmer. "Everyone is invited to come and enjoy the music and ministry."

Rev. Robert Williams to conduct revival at Nazarene church

First Church of the Nazarene is to host revival services Oct. 1-6 with the Rev. Robert B. Williams, pastor of the Trinity Church of the Nazarene in Duncanville, as evangelist.

Services are to be conducted nightly beginning Tuesday, Oct. 1 with a banquet at 6:39 p.m. and service following. Services will be 7 p.m. Wednesday through Saturday, Oct. 2-5, and 10:50 a.m. and 6 p.m. on Sunday, Oct. 6.

The pastor and congregation invite the public to participate in the week's special services.

Landmark Jacksboro church marks 120 years of worship

By MARIA WEAVER
Wichita Falls Times Record News

JACKSBORO (AP) — At the end of a little dirt road near downtown Jacksboro, two old churches anchor the city's black community.

With little more than a handful of members between them, Antioch Baptist and Mount Pisgah Methodist churches meet together, alternating Sundays between the meeting places — first and third are Baptist, second and fourth, Methodist, and on fifth Sundays, the Baptist pastor preaches at Mount Pisgah or the Methodist pastor at Antioch.

This month the community celebrated Mount Pisgah's 120th anniversary. Organized in 1870, the little stucco church is considered a landmark and is known as the pioneer Methodist church of Jacksboro.

Kathy Garner, chairwoman of the anniversary celebration, said the church is celebrating the future as well as the past. Progress has moved in on the six-member, all-woman church.

"Until three or four years ago we had one room with the pastor's study and a bathroom," Mrs. Garner said. "Nothing had changed in years."

Then the Rev. Woodrow Holman, who came to the church in 1985, began to make improvements on the building. He added paneling and carpeting and built an altar area for the worshippers.

Last year he told his congregation that if they wanted to guarantee his staying at the church, they should build a new building. "We started looking at purchasing land to enlarge," said Mrs. Garner, "then one day he said he had a vision. God said don't build a new church, build a fellowship hall."

"Almost single-handedly he built this hall," she said, walking into a bright meeting hall complete with a kitchen. With the help of co-workers from Fort Worth and Mrs. Garner's husband, Holman began the project last October, completing the structure in March and leaving the congregation only $1,800 in debt.

"He built cabinets himself," said Mrs. Garner. "He did the floors; he even painted." After the work was done, families donated tables and chairs to fill the hall.

"We celebrate our anniversary every year," said Mrs. Garner, "but this year, the completion of the fellowship hall makes it special."

Mount Pisgah has always been special to Mrs. Garner. As a child she remembers her mother and her husband's grandmother preparing community barbecues to help pay the church's budget.

"They'd start early Friday and work all night and sell it on Saturday," she said. "The barbecues are now famous. We no longer have to have them; now it's more to help out..."

Mrs. Garner was christened at Mount Pisgah, as was her daughter, but her husband and sons are members of the Baptist church.

"Church affiliation in Jacksboro is pretty much what was going on at the time you joined," said Mrs. Garner. "My mother was Baptist to begin with and got into the Methodist and stayed. I was christened; my sister and brother are Baptist."

Linnie Shelton is the oldest member of the Mount Pisgah Methodist Church in Jacksboro. Shelton taught at the church for 49 years.

"When we had the boys, we were going to both churches, and most active in Baptist. It was natural for the boys to be baptized. It was a natural progression."

"But when we had a daughter, I was working in this church. There was no other thing to do but to have her christened here."

"We're like one big family. We meet in two buildings, but we're just one big family," she said. "It's a community church, not necessarily Baptist and Methodist. Any time one has anything we can count on the other to support it."

"There's a small population of black people in town," said Mrs. Garner. "There are few people whose names aren't on the roll of one church or the other."

Mount Pisgah remains a symbol of the past as it reaches for the future. Its worn wooden pews are covered by faded red velvet cushions, fraying at the edges from years of supporting the church's faithful through good times and bad. Well-used hymnals rest at the end of each pew, near the door, a bottle and a disposable diaper are propped against a stack of hymnals — a new generation being readied to carry on.

Then there is Linne Shelton, who has been there just about every Sunday since the turn of the century. She can't drive anymore, but she finds a way to get to church most Sunday mornings, the turn of the century.

"I had to let my car go," said the ninety-something woman. "I was too nervous, afraid maybe I was going to run into somebody."

"All my children have cars now, so I don't worry about getting places."

Miss Shelton, as members of the black community in Jacksboro call the retired teacher, doesn't have any children, but she's raised almost all of the children who grew up on Jacksboro and attended her school.

"She was a mother to all of us," said Mrs. Garner, one of Shelton's students.

"She's one of my baby girls," said Miss Shelton, with a nod toward Kathy Garner.

"I taught 49 years," Miss Shelton said. The "colored school" didn't have a name when Miss Shelton started teaching there, so she started calling it the Blackshear School, named for a principal at Prairie View College, where she obtained her teaching certificate and eventually a master's degree.

It was in the summer of 1960, when Miss Shelton was away working on her master's, when the community changed the name of the school to the Linnie Shelton School.

School wasn't the only place Miss Shelton worked for her community. She has been Sunday School superintendent of Mount Pisgah CME Church since 1918.

Her grandmother was a charter member of the church, and Miss Shelton is now its oldest member.

"We did a lot of walking when I was a little girl," Miss Shelton said. "Then my parents got a buggy — two seated."

"When I started teaching, I bought a car, and got to ride," she said. "I always had a way to get here ... until two years ago, when I retired from driving."

In its heyday, the black community in Jacksboro had more than 100 families, Miss Shelton said, "but most of them have passed away."

Highland Baptist to host revival

The Rev. Richard David Coss is to conduct revival services at Highland Baptist Church, 1301 N. Banks, Sept. 29 through Oct. 4. Special music for the revival will be provided by Tim Langley of Aurora, Colo.

Coss will first speak at morning services at the church on Sunday, Sept. 29. The Sunday evening service will begin at 7 p.m. All other evening services are to begin at 7:30 p.m. A noon luncheon service is planned from Monday through Friday. Everyone is invited to bring a covered dish and attend the noon services.

Transportation to any of the services is available by calling the church at 669-6509 between 9 a.m. and noon. A nursery will be provided.

Between the ages of 15 and 25, Richard David Coss was confined in city jails, county prison farms and in prison, itself, three times.

Before Coss knew it, his anger and hatred had become irrelevant. What counselors, psychologists, correction officers, special schools, threats and prison had been unable to do in 16 years was accomplished in one day. On March 16, 1969 — while serving his third prison sentence — Coss gave his life to Jesus Christ and became a Christian. He was paroled in November 1970.

He was ordained as a Southern Baptist minister in 1971. On Dec. 23, 1975, he received a full pardon from then-President Gerald Ford. He is the author of two books, Wanted and Full Pardon.

Langley and his wife Lynna have two children, Beth and London. They were both saved in 1977 at Trinity Baptist in Ada, Okla. Since that time they have ministered to families all over the country.

Langley was licensed to the ministry at First Baptist Church of Idabel, Okla., in 1979 and was ordained in 1985 at First Southern Baptist Church of Del City, Okla. He has served as minister of music at numerous churches in Oklahoma, Missouri and Colorado for 15 years. He has performed in concert, crusades and revivals in 17 states, Mexico and Europe.

He has also led music for youth camps, retreats and Fellowship of Christian Athletes events, as well as hosting several major concert artists in concerts.

Glen Walton to speak at church here

Glen Walton

Mary Ellen & Harvester Church of Christ is to have a gospel meeting on Sunday, Sept. 29, through Wednesday, Oct. 2.

The time for this event is to be during regular worship time on Sunday at 10:30 a.m., 6 p.m. Sunday evening and 7 p.m. Monday through Wednesday.

Guest speaker for the meeting is to be Glen Walton of the North Amarillo Church of Christ.

Born and reared in San Augustine County, he has completed college work in Howard County College and Abilene Christian University, majoring in Bible at ACU.

For 32 years, Walton has lived and worked in the Texas Panhandle and Southwestern Kansas. He has served the Western Avenue congregation in Liberal, Kan., and the Mary Ellen & Harvester congregation in Pampa. For 19 years, he has been ministering the North Amarillo Church of Christ. Walton has also taught Bible as history and literature in Amarillo's Palo Duro High School for two years.

United Methodist women to meet in Midland Oct. 11-12

MIDLAND — United Methodist women from across the Northwest Texas Conference will meet Oct. 11-12 at the First United Methodist Church in Midland for the 18th Annual Meeting with the theme of "Faithful Witnesses for God's World."

Registration begins at 10 a.m. with the meeting beginning at 1:30 p.m. A dinner will follow at 5:30 p.m. in the church fellowship hall.

The women are invited to bring their families. While the women attend the meeting, their families can attend the Confederate Air Force Show at Midland International Airport.

Featured speaker for the event will be the Rev. Meridith Whitaker. She is a United Methodist missionary serving as director of the Cookson Hills United Methodist Center and General Board of Global Ministries mission to the Cherokee people in Cookson Hills, Okla.

Whitaker is a graduate of Brockport State University in Brockton, N.Y., where she received a bachelor's degree in physical education. She taught for four years, then she returned to school at Gordon-Conwell Theological Seminary in South Hamilton, Md., where she received a master's degree in religious education.

She became an ordained pastor in April 1984 in Lockport, N.Y. She continued her education while in New York at Colgate Rochester Divinity School, working on her doctorate in church history.

Drug cartel's 'most trusted' assassin nabbed in New York

NEW YORK (AP) — A man said to have killed at least 40 people as a Colombian drug cartel's "most trusted assassin" was seized on a New York street days after coming to this country on what authorities say was a murder mission.

Paul Daniel Munoz Mosquera was seized late Wednesday as he used a pay telephone in the city's Queens borough, said Robert A. Bryden, head of the New York office of the federal Drug Enforcement Administration.

Bryden said Munoz was the mastermind behind the Aug. 18, 1989, assassination of Colombian Sen. Luis Carlos Galan, who was then the leading candidate in his country's presidential campaign.

"We believe we have captured the single most trusted assassin of the Medellin cartel," Bryden said Thursday.

"The Colombian national police credit him with the murder of at least 40 Colombia national police officers, judges, public officials and innocent bystanders," he said.

Bryden said Munoz had been in this country a little more than a week before his arrest and had arrived in New York Saturday from Los Angeles.

He said authorities learned from confidential sources in Colombia that Munoz had come to the United States to carry out an assassination, but he said they didn't know who the target was.

He noted that Munoz came to New York just before the opening of the United Nations General Assembly and the arrival of President Bush earlier this week. "This man is of such stature in the cartel's activities ... that he would not have been sent to this country for anything less than what the Medellin cartel would consider a very important assignment," Bryden said.

The DEA said Munoz gave his age as 24 and his first name as Dandeny when he was taken into custody, but Colombian records, including fingerprints, confirmed his true identity and his age as 39.

Munoz wasn't armed and didn't resist when drug agents arrested him, Bryden said. He was being held without bail on charges of making false statements to a federal agent. He will likely be extradited to Colombia, the DEA said.

U.S. Magistrate John L. Caden ordered Munoz held pending a hearing next week in federal court.

Bryden said Colombia's national police were "ecstatic over the arrest," and Colombian Justice Minister Fernando Carrillo, reached in Bogota, said his government was pleased.

However, The New York Times, in today's editions, quoted an aide to Colombian President Cesar Gaviria Trujillo as saying Colombian officials did not want Munoz returned because he was a dangerous man who twice had escaped from Colombian prisons.

Romanian miners' leader orders end to protests

By ROLAND PRINZ
Associated Press Writer

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Guards fired rubber bullets and tear gas today at anti-government protesters ignoring a peace appeal by a coal miner leader, who led three days of rioting that forced the nation's premier from power.

The crowd of miners and supporters tried to push through a gate at the palace, where President Ion Iliescu had met earlier with a group of miners and their leader, Miron Cosma.

After the meeting, Cosma urged an end to the protests and said the miners "considered the conflict over and are going home," the Rompres news agency reported.

The demonstrations, however, swelled outside the palace and there were reports more miners and protesters who left the area were returning. Miners ignored a call by Cosma to leave Bucharest on Thursday following the resignation of Premier Petre Roman.

Thousands of miners have led protests against Roman's austerity policies, which sent inflation soaring and lowered the standard of living in one of Europe's poorest countries. Many miners complain that they cannot afford to feed their families.

Iliescu has denounced the protests as a coup attempt. Roman was the first of Eastern Europe's post-Communist leaders to fall victim to a backlash against Western-oriented reform.

"If an institution is attacked with violence, we cannot but respond with violence," warned Iliescu.

There were no immediately reports of casualties at today's clash outside the palace.

At the meeting today, Iliescu promised miners he would travel to the coal fields in the central Jiu Valley next week to discuss the miners' grievances.

Alexander Mironov, a presidential spokesman, was quoted by state radio as saying

(AP Laserphoto)

Miners stand on an armored car in front of government headquarters in Bucharest, Romania, Thursday, continuing to strike despite calls to end the protests.

Iliescu also promised an official probe of whether miners were killed in the Bucharest protests, and agreed to form a special parliamentary commission to study miner's complaints.

An estimated 2,000 miners commandeered trains on Wednesday and traveled to the capital, where they stormed the government headquarters and battles security forces in the streets. About 3,000 more miners arrived Thursday. At least three people died and 284 were injured in the clashes, Rompres reported.

Tanks and soldiers surrounded the presidential compound today.

The president also planned to meet Friday with government and opposition leaders to form a new coalition. Iliescu, who appears less committed to swift economic reforms, said the current government would remain until a new one could be named.

Interior Minister Doru Viorel Ursu said in a statement published by Rompres news that police "will take all measures to defend the fragile democracy in Romania."

On Thursday, protesters ransacked the Parliament and besieged the television center, scene of fierce fighting during the December 1989 revolution that toppled Communist dictator Nicolae Ceausescu.

Roman called the unrest "a Communist coup" led by people who wanted to turn the clock back on reform.

Earlier today, clashes occurred around the TV station and on Bucharest's downtown University Square, where several hundred miners and other protesters battled with police backed by armored vehicles.

The protests this week were the worst since June 1990, when thousands of miners went on a three-day rampage through Bucharest that left six dead. The crisis threatened to blow up into a major confrontation between the ruling National Salvation Front and angry Romanians.

Roman, a 44-year-old technocrat, emerged as premier after the revolution against Ceausescu. Roman's market-oriented reform sliced standards of living, widened the gap between rich and poor, and pushed inflation up to 170 percent.

In Brussels, Belgium, European Community officials said today Romania has asked for about 2 million tons of food to offset shortages expected this winter.

The EC executive body also said it has suspended preliminary talks on an association accord with Romania because of the political crisis.

The EC has already promised Romania $232 million in food, medical and economic aid this year.

Dear Abby

Midwife's practice of medicine leaves daughter feeling sick

DEAR ABBY: My mother is a native of Mexico. I don't know if you are familiar with the medical-pharmaceutical practices in Mexico, but they are very "relaxed." In Mexico, my mother was a midwife. She assisted the local doctor, but she has had no formal training. She has lived in America for 30 years and fully understands the laws of being a citizen.

Furthermore, if the needles she uses are not properly sterilized, she could be spreading all kinds of diseases. Inform her emphatically and immediately that no one should be giving shots unless supervised by a doctor of medicine or osteopathy.

I recently learned that my mother is giving injections to people who seek her out. These people obtain the medication in Mexico and my mother has a syringe. A relative brought her children over to be injected with so-called vitamins, so I asked her why she was doing this. She said, "The American doctors are afraid to cure people quickly."

DEAR ABBY: Whatever happened to dinner? Everyone here in my section of Florida eats "supper," never dinner, in the evening. Isn't it correct that if you have lunch at noon, you have dinner at night? Or if you have dinner at noon (as farmers do), then supper is a light meal in the evening?

I said nothing more to anyone; then I told my mother that if she continued to practice medicine without a license, I would turn her in. She laughed and said that she would stop. I know my mother and doubt that she will stop.

Even the "Golden Girls" on TV refer to their dinner as "supper," and it's obvious they are not eating their dinner at noon.

FLORENCE KRUEGER, BAYONET POINT, FLA.

Abby, I don't want to turn her in. Other family members agree that what she is doing is wrong, but they think it's none of my business. Their attitude and my mother's actions appall me, but I don't want to visit her in jail. Please answer in the paper.

DEAR FLORENCE: Webster's Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary defines "dinner" as "the principal meal of the day." And "supper" is defined as "the evening meal, especially when dinner (the principal meal of the day) is taken at midday." "Supper" is also described as "a light meal served late in the evening."

CONCERNED DAUGHTER IN FRESNO

DEAR CONCERNED: I consulted my personal physician, Dr. Jaime Paris, who practiced at the Mayo Clinic for 20 years. He said: "Regardless of what the laws are in Mexico City, the woman is breaking the law here."

So, technically, you are correct. But if local or regional custom dictates that the evening meal be called supper — then the word from here is, Don't argue with the natives, or you might wind up eating your words regardless of the hour.

Establishing the ingredients in kitchen renovation

By BARBARA MAYER For AP Special Features

Today's kitchen is busy — and crowded — making renovation more desirable, according to a cross section of kitchen designers polled by the Maytag Co.

five years ago). Almost 70 percent of the clients have two adults working full-time outside the home, the kitchen designers say.

Adult children returning home to live with parents, grandparents caring for young children, and the need and wish to recycle kitchen waste are crowding the kitchens, the poll says.

Though they want all the high-tech, labor-saving appliances that can afford, most people want old-fashioned styling. Traditional and country-style cabinetry and surfacing were selected by about 60 percent, and modern styles were chosen by about 40 percent.

Today's average kitchen measures 9 feet by 15 feet, about the same as five years ago. Not surprisingly, inconvenient layout, inadequate storage and countertop space are among the major factors leading to a decision to renovate.

The kitchen designers report that 64 percent of their clients select white appliances, instead of the gold, green and copper colors once favored, although black appliances are also finding growing favor.

Maytag polled 100 kitchen designers and found that one way consumers are coping with a busier and more crowded kitchen is by choosing appliances that cook faster.

For the past four years, white has been the most frequently chosen color for major appliances, according to the Association of Home Appliance Manufacturers (AHAM). White trim on a white background is interpreted by the general public to convey upscale sophistication of a designer kitchen, AHAM says.

Microwave ovens are now placed in 92.5 percent of the kitchens remodeled by those polled, compared with 79.8 percent five years ago, and the demand for convection ovens, which bake faster than conventional ovens, is growing.

Electronic touch pads, a feature made popular by microwave ovens, are now favored on a wide variety of major appliances, such as ranges, refrigerators, dishwashers and laundry equipment. Until recently, touch pad controls were an option only on top-of-the-line models.

The dishwasher, formerly an optional convenience for many consumers, now is included in almost 98 percent of the kitchens designed by survey respondents.

"Overall, appliance profiles are sleek and uncluttered, free of embellishment and overbearing graphics. Metallic trim is used sparingly and tends to be brushed instead of shiny. Edges are rounded instead of squared," according to the trade association.

The kitchen designers say more people are asking for recycling facilities in their kitchens so items can be separated as they are used. This can be as simple as leaving space for several containers or as complicated as setting up a series of vertical chutes from countertop to basement.

The growing popularity of an open kitchen that is part of or flows into the living room is a major factor influencing the design of kitchen appliances.

Designers asked to add a spot for a quick meal often comply by building it into the kitchen's work island.

"With more of the kitchen on view, consumers want their appliances to visually blend with the surroundings and to form a seamless line with the kitchen cabinetry," says AHAM.

Another trend: more kitchens are being designed for two cooks (33 percent compared with 24 percent

New vac attachment gets where others cannot go

Would you use your regular vacuum cleaner to clean a computer keyboard?

Indian Wells, Calif., can clean keyboards, pleated lampshades or ducts, screens, bookshelves and even inside drawers without disturbing the contents. The suction pipes are so small that only dust and dirt are scooped up — not the valuables.

Would you use it to suck the crumbs out of your kitchen drawers? No, because your attachments are too big.

In addition, the attachment can also be used inside vents, on vehicle instrument panels and telephone dials or pushbuttons.

A new vacuum attachment, however, features 25 small suction pipes with soft filament brushes at the end to gently clean inside nooks and crannies. It attaches to your regular, heavy-duty vacuum.

The attachment also comes with its own attachment so you can use it on your handheld vac.

The Amarillo Symphony Guild will host the 1992 Young Performer's competition for area students, according to a release from Nancy Reavis, competition chairwoman.

from works that can be accompanied by a chamber orchestra, according to the release. Only one movement from the concerto is required for competition purposes.

The four areas of competition are piano, strings, winds/percussion and vocal. Students who have not exceeded the age of a graduate of high school may compete, according to the release.

Contestants should present the music from memory, and each entrant must provide his own accompanist. Participants can arrange for an accompanist for a nominal fee by contacting the Amarillo Symphony Office.

A list of the repertoire to be used by contestants for choosing their selection for competition as well as the official entry form is available through the Amarillo Symphony office, 1000 S. Polk, or by contacting Reavis, 352-0636.

The symphony will host the competition on Feb. 29, 1992, in the concert hall on the Amarillo College campus.

The works listed in the repertoire were selected for the appropriate level for high school students and

The "grand prize" winner will receive a cash award of $250, and winners in the individual areas will receive a cash award of $100. An entry fee is charged, and the deadline for entry is Jan. 16, 1992.

The Gray County Extension Homemakers Council met Sept. 23 at the Gray County annex, with president Beulah Terrell presiding. Renee Stout led the group in the pledge of the American flag. Reports were given by each club president and all standing committee chairmen.

Sixteen members and two guests were welcomed by the incoming president, Dona Cornutt.

Final plans were made for the craft sale and luncheon on Oct. 4 at the Chamber of Commerce building. The craft sale hours are 9 a.m.-3 p.m.

Frances Hall distributed yearbooks of activities for the coming year, and the programs were discussed. Also, names were drawn for the club Christmas party to be held in the home of Mrs. B.D. Kindle on Dec. 17.

The council voted to donate $25 to the United Fund drive.

The next meeting will be a workshop in the home of Mrs. C.S. Youngblood, 1924 Dogwood.

A program on "Saving with Coupons" is planned for 11 a.m., Oct. 28, at the Gray County annex. A salad luncheon will follow and the council meeting is planned for 1 p.m.

The Worthwhile Extension Homemakers Club met Sept. 20 in the home of Audrey Steward. The meeting was opened with prayer and thought of the day. "School is a building that has four walls, with tomorrow inside." Six members answered the roll call with something that is fun and inexpensive.

The three delegates to the state TEHA convention, Sept. 7-9, gave reports. Marilyn Butler, TEHA chairman, Betty Baxter, TEHA vice-chairman, and Beulah Terrell, council president, represented Gray County Extension Homemakers Clubs. The theme of the future was "Step into the Future with TEHA."

The club was reminded of duties for "Christmas in October," planned for Oct. 4, 9 a.m.-3 p.m.

The council meeting adjourned with "Cast your bread upon the waters and it will come back to you with jelly on it."

Gladys Stone was chosen the club's "Woman of the Year." She will be honored during December activities.

The Pampa Art Club met Sept. 17 for their first meeting of the 1991-92 season. They were entertained by Mrs. C.B. Reese and Mrs. Ralph Collinsworth with a luncheon at the Pampa Country Club.

Beulah Terrell presented the program by giving a report on the state TEHA convention, Sept. 7-9, in Austin.

Choosing right nail makes building or wood repair easier

By READER'S DIGEST For AP Newsfeatures

The Texas Extension Homemakers Association theme for 1992 is "Step into the Future" with a desire to be a part of the community.

There's more to driving a nail than just hammering it in. By selecting the right nail for the job and using effective nailing techniques you can ensure that you'll get a job that lasts and that your fingers will remain intact.

For those interested in joining an extension club, call 665-1589, or the county extension agent, Donna Brauchi, 669-8033.

NAIL TYPES

SPARK PLUGS, FINS AND CHAINS

Common nails are best for construction, rough carpentry and heavy-duty jobs because their broad heads won't pull through wood.

Check the spark plug before heavy use. If it is heavily coated with oil deposits, replace it.

For extra holding power, use coated nails or nails with spiral shanks or annular rings.

Without enough lubrication, the chain can become damaged from overheating.

Finishing nails are used for cabinetry trim and other fine work because their small heads are easy to conceal.

Before refueling a gasoline-powered chain saw, brush away any accumulated sawdust. Use a wire or small screwdriver to clean the oil holes in the guide-bar and the guide-bar slot. Brush all vents around the engine housing and the muffler, so that air can continue to cool the engine. Always wipe spilled fuel or oil from the engine housing to avoid fire hazards and possible fouling of the starter, carburetor or engine ignition points.

Many flooring and masonry nails are specially hardened. NOTE: Hardened nails sometimes snap instead of bending when they are struck at an angle. Be sure to wear safety goggles to protect your eyes against flying pieces.

Use a magnetized tack hammer for starting tiny brads or tacks.

A wallboard nail is used for installing gypsum wallboard (also called drywall or plasterboard). Its annular rings are designed to prevent it from popping as a house settles.

When joining two wood pieces of different thicknesses, drive nails through the thin piece into the thick one. Use nails three times as long as the thickness of the thin piece so that two-thirds of their lengths will be securely anchored.

For greater holding power, drive nails at angles, slanting them slightly toward or away from one another. For maximum strength, drive a long nail through both pieces and hammer the point over.

TO PREVENT WOOD FROM SPLITTING:

Stagger nails rather than placing them along the same grain line.

Stagger nails rather than placing them along the same grain line.

In hardwood, drill pilot holes slightly smaller than the nails.

Before driving a nail near the end of a piece, blunt the nail's point with a hammer so that the point will shear through the wood instead of wedging it apart and splitting.

Hold the hammer handle as far from the head as possible without sacrificing a firm grip. After the nail is started, swing the hammer from your elbow.

If you're driving common nails in rough work such as house framing, drive the nails in flush with the surface and don't bother to be careful about hammer marks.

To start a nail, hold it and tap (don't bang) it a few times to drive it just far enough to stand up by itself. Take your fingers away and swing the hammer a little harder — but only a little. Don't use heavy strokes until you have driven the nail about an inch into the wood.

Another way to conceal a nail head is to chisel a shaving parallel to the wood grain, leaving the shaving attached to the surface. Drive in the nails. Then glue the shaving back in place over the nail-head.

WHEN STARTING A NAIL:

Hold it between your index and middle finger with your palm

Congratulations!

Carefully used and properly maintained chain saw makes quick work of wood

By READER'S DIGEST For AP Newsfeatures

Remove the air filter, wash it in detergent and water, then rinse and dry it thoroughly before reinstalling it.

A chain saw can make short work of cutting heavy brush, tree limbs or even whole trees. The power that makes this possible also makes them into potentially dangerous machines that must be maintained and used properly with extra caution. Here are some guidelines:

Proper chain tension is the key to safe and efficient cutting. The tension changes due to heating during operation, stretching and wear, and should be checked whenever you refuel the saw. Check your owner's manual for the proper method of adjusting chain tension. Make sure the chain is completely cool before adjusting its tension.

LUBRICATING

Sharpen the chain every four hours of use rather than waiting until you must force the saw to cut. Use the round file specified by the manufacturer and a file holder that you position at the specified sharpening angle (usually 35 degrees).

Most chain saws are powered by two-cycle gasoline engines, although electric models are also available. The oil used to lubricate two-cycle engines is mixed with gasoline and is entirely different from that used in automobiles or to lubricate the saw's chain. Check the owner's manual for the proper gas-to-oil ratio. Always mix the oil and gasoline in a separate, clean container and then pour the mixture into the fuel tank.

SAFETY TIPS

Think ahead. Plan your work well. Don't use your saw in semi-darkness or when fatigued, intoxication or illness may impair your coordination.

Wear heavy gloves and protective goggles. Don't wear clothing that is too tight or too loose. Use ear plugs if you plan to work with the saw for any length of time.

Keep other people away from your cutting area.

While cutting, hold the saw firmly with both hands and stand with your feet solidly placed.

Be sure the saw is free of obstruction. Kickback from surrounding tree limbs, earth, rocks and other obstacles causes injuries.

Turn off the ignition switch or unplug an electric model before refueling, touching the chain or performing any other maintenance or repairs.

After refueling, move the saw at least 10 feet away before starting it; spilled gasoline can easily ignite. Keep a fire extinguisher handy.

Start your saw on the ground. Then start the chain before making contact with the wood to prevent the saw kicking out of control.

Stand to the side of the saw when cutting—never directly behind it.

Mel reveals secrets to catching 'hawgs'

Talk with any serious fisherman and, depending on the moon phase, the tides on Venus and several even more mysterious factors, he might reveal some of his fish catching secrets. Might, because big fish require special skills, refined over a lifetime of serious fishing. For our purposes big fish will henceforth be called "hawgs."

Said hawgs can be bass, walleye, catfish, striped, trout, redbreast, or even slab crappie. The key to catching hawgs is to cleverly reveal the "new" bait only to hawgs and never give the little ones so much as a glimpse. NOW you know why real hawg-hunters don't want you using their secret baits. It is not the fear of a competitor catching the hawgs, it is the horror that in the hands of a novice, every fish in the lake will be educated!

If you will promise not to use the following secrets to educate all the little fish, then read on.

HAWG TIP #1. Big baits catch big fish. Fairly obvious, but the big baits must be worked in slow motion. So slow that few mortals possess the patience to spend an entire hour and make five casts. JOE CARTER of Canyon is the master of using a large saltcraw and letting it soak for up to ten minutes. During a two day tournament, he caught nine bass that weighed 40 lbs.!

HAWG TIP #2. Show 'em something new. BEN KIRKPATRICK of Post and starting linebucker for Texas Tech, used a Slug-go to impersonate a quivering-unable-to-swim minnow. He won two Fun Tournaments at White River with nearly twice the weight caught by the second place angler. A slight tap on the rod was the proper quiver. Very little reeling, no hopping action, and now swimming the lure. Amazing what "deadsticking" can do.

Frankly, it amazes me that tournament anglers can fish so s-l-o-w for so l-o-n-g. After fifteen minutes of hawg hinting, I grab either a rattletrap or a buzzbait and proceed to start educating those little fish. Of course, I do usually get a final pleasure of watching the tournament winners s-l-o-w-l-y walk away with my entry fees.

The last scheduled 1991 Big Bass Tournament at Lake Baylor will be Saturday, Sept. 28th. Entry fee is $50 and this newspaper copy of my column will save you the $10 late fee. You must call 806-353-3654 and let me know you are coming. Fishing starts at 7:00 A.M. and continues til 2:00 P.M. Based on 100 entries, biggest bass will earn $2,600.00 and hourly winners make $100.

Autopsy fails to disclose kicker's cause of death

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — An autopsy on the body of a Texas A&M football player who suddenly died on the field did not immediately disclose a cause of death, but a team doctor said it could have happened anywhere.

James Glenn, 19, a walk-on freshman kicker from League City, was "just loosening up" about 3:45 p.m. Wednesday before the Aggies' scheduled practice at Kyle Field when he suddenly collapsed on the field.

Trainers administered cardiopulmonary resuscitation. He was rushed by ambulance to Humana Hospital-Brazos Valley, where he was pronounced dead at 4:20 p.m.

"The gross autopsy is all the findings that we have at this time and that does not reveal the cause of death," Dr. Jesse Parr said. "There is nothing to the naked eye that would explain the death at this time."

Parr said further tests would be conducted to determine the cause of death but added it was not preventable.

"This incident that occurred with this athlete could have occurred walking across campus, in the dorm, at the movie or just as well on the football field," Parr said. "I'm confident that we will be able to determine the cause of death."

Parr said Glenn had a heart problem that was evaluated when he was in high school. Parr declined to identify Glenn's condition.

"Those underlying problems were not of a nature that would put him at risk of sudden death more than anyone in this room," Parr said. "We have the sudden death of an otherwise healthy young man and don't have a cause at the present."

Glenn, 5-foot-11 and 167 pounds, was an all-district selection as a junior and senior at Clear Creek High School and was invited to walk on with the Aggies.

Glenn fulfilled his dream of kicking for the Aggies last week when he had three kickoffs in a 35-34 loss to Tulsa. The Aggie football team was stunned by the players' death but went ahead with preparations for Saturday's game in Kyle Field against Southwestern Louisiana.

"These things are terribly difficult for any of us to make sense out of, particularly when you are 18 or 19 years old and you don't think a whole lot about death," coach R.C. Slocum said. "To walk out on the field with a teammate and a short time later be told he's no longer alive is a shocking experience."

The Aggies will honor Glenn by wearing his number on the back of their helmets the rest of the season. The fallen player will be honored on Tuesday with the playing of silver taps for all former students who died during the month of September.

Freshman linebucker Reggie Graham, a teammate of Glenn's at Clear Creek, recalled how excited Glenn had been to play against Tulsa.

"I told him if he got in the game it would be a Creek player kicking off and a Creek player making the tackle," Graham said. "And it turned out that way. He was real excited about it because he wasn't supposed to play."

Slocum said he had not intended to use Glenn in the game, but took him on the trip in case one of the other kickers was injured.

"It's really eerie when you think back," Slocum said. "During the course of the game, for no reason, I had something come to me that I wanted James to make this kick."

"It's strange that you would do something like that when you planned to do the opposite."

UCLA Bruins leave San Diego State in ruins

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Tommy Maddox threw for 303 yards and two touchdowns and scored once himself as UCLA routed San Diego State 37-12 Thursday night, the Bruins' 11th straight win over the Aztecs.

The Bruins (2-1) lead the series 14-0-1, including eight consecutive victories since it was resumed in 1984. The tie was in 1924. San Diego State (2-2) committed four turnovers, three of which set up UCLA touchdowns.

UCLA was coming off a 30-16 loss at Tennessee, in which Maddox completed 17 of 34 passes for 196 yards. Against the Aztecs he was 17-for-26, including 9-for-15 for 170 yards in the first half. He was intercepted once, setting up San Diego State's only score.

Maddox gave the Bruins a 17-0 lead when he rolled left and scored from 8 yards out with 4:57 left in the third quarter. That capped a 96-yard, 11-play drive in which Maddox was 4-for-4 for 50 yards.

On the next play from scrimmage, cornerback Carlton Gray intercepted San Diego State's Cree Morris. Maddox lost 6 yards on the Bruins' first play, but then found Bryan Adams alone on a fly pattern for a 58-yard scoring pass and a 24-0 lead with 3:52 left in the period.

Maddox was picked off by defensive back Damon Pieri at midfield with 30 seconds left in the third quarter. David Lowery, who replaced Morris, led the Aztecs to the UCLA 2, where freshman Marshall Faulk went over on fourth down. Lowery's conversion run failed. Faulk, who set the NCAA single-game rushing mark two weeks ago with 386 yards against Pacific, finished with 79 yards on 15 carries.

On second-and-goal from the San Diego State 5, Maddox was flushed from the pocket but completed a shovel pass to tight end Brian Allen with 8:07 left. Lowery fumbled while scrambling and Maddox's replacement, Jim Bonds, threw a 5-yard TD pass to Maury Toy with 5:18 left.

Morris completed just eight of 23 passes for 98 yards and was intercepted twice. Lowery was 4-for-13 for 71 yards, including a 26-yard scoring pass to Darnay Scott with 3:28 left.

The winning margin could have been greater, because the Bruins had two touchdowns called back due to penalties.

Kaleaph Carter's 1-yard run was negated by an illegal procedure call and the Bruins settled for Louis Perez's 23-yard field goal to cap their 84-yard opening drive.

Defensive tackle Andre Farr intercepted Morris at the Aztec 45, setting up Kevin Wills' 4-yard run for a 10-0 lead 5 seconds into the second quarter.

On UCLA's next drive, Kevin Williams' 25-yard scoring run was called back because of holding, and the Bruins had to punt.

UCLA had one last drive starting from its 35 with 2:06 left in the half, and Maddox led the Bruins to the Aztecs' 17. Sean LaChapelle appeared to catch a pass in the end zone, but it was ruled incomplete. The Bruins were called for holding on the next play, and Perez's 49-yard field goal try was short as time expired.

UCLA's Tommy Maddox rolls out on an end run to gain nine yards against San Diego State Thursday.

Rain quits, Boston treads water with split

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

There was Spahn and Sain for the Boston Braves in the late 1940s. There was Bunning and Short for the Phillies in 1964. And there was Viola and Blyleven for the Twins in 1987.

For the Boston Red Sox to win the AL East this year, maybe they should use a one-man rotation. Too bad, because Roger Clemens can't pitch every day.

The Red Sox missed a chance to move up on idle Toronto on Thursday and instead wound up exactly where they started — 2 1/2 games behind the Blue Jays — because of a disappointing doubleheader split in Baltimore.

Clemens did his part, winning the opener 2-1. But Boston then blew its chance to move up when the Orioles rallied for two runs with two outs in the ninth inning, capped by a bases-loaded walk to former Red Sox star Dwight Evans, for a 6-5 win.

"It's a whitewash. We're back at square one," Clemens said. "I've kind of got mixed emotions right now, the way things came out in the second game."

The Red Sox begin a three-game series tonight in Milwaukee. Toronto starts a three-game set at SkyDome against Minnesota, which can clinch the AL West this weekend.

In other games Thursday, Detroit beat Cleveland 6-5, Oakland trounced Texas 10-0, Milwaukee defeated New York 6-2 and Kansas City topped California 3-2.

American League

Clemens (18-8) kept alive his hopes for a fourth 20-win season and a third Cy Young Award with an impressive outing in the opener. He struck out 10, raising his total to 227, most in the majors, and lowered his ERA to 2.38, best in the league.

Clemens gave up seven hits and did not walk a batter. He is 6-0 with a 1.33 ERA in his last seven starts.

"How often do you see a game pitched without anyone warming up in the bullpen?" Red Sox manager Joe Morgan said. "We had the big horse out there, forget it, it's over."

Dave Johnson (4-7) retired the first two batters before Phil Plantier hit his eighth home run of the season. Jack Clark followed with his 26th homer, and that was enough for Clemens.

In the second game, the Red Sox took a 5-1 lead in the sixth inning. That, however, wasn't enough.

Cal Ripken's 32nd home run began Baltimore's comeback. The Orioles got within 5-4 in the seventh on Mike Devereaux's RBI single, but reliever Greg Harris escaped a bases-loaded jam later in the inning when Randy Milligan grounded into a double play.

In the ninth, Chris Hoiles singled with one out and took third on a two-out, bloop single by Devereaux. With relief ace Jeff Reardon unable to pitch because of a stiff neck, Harris stayed in the game and gave up Ripken's tying single, then walked Milligan, loading the bases.

That brought up Evans, who left the Red Sox this season after spending 19 years in Boston. Harris (11-12) walked him on four pitches, forcing home the winning run.

Athletics 10, Rangers 0
Jose Canseco hit his career-high 43rd home run and tied Cecil Fielder for the major league lead as Oakland won at home.

Canseco connected for a two-run shot in the fourth inning off Oil Can Boyd, surpassing the 42 homers he hit in 1988. Canseco has nine games left and Fielder, trying to repeat as baseball's home run champion, has 10 remaining.

Mike Moore (16-8) pitched a four-hitter and won his fourth straight decision. He struck out four and walked four.

Rickey Henderson and Dave Henderson hit consecutive home runs in the fifth off Boyd (2-6). Rickey hit his second in two nights and 15th of the season and Dave hit his career-best 25th.

The loss officially eliminated Texas for the AL West race. League batting leader Julio Franco did not play for the Rangers and stayed at .341. He leads Wade Boggs and Ken Griffey Jr. by nine points each.

Zimmer denies betting claims

NEW YORK (AP) — Penthouse magazine said in an article released Thursday that Don Zimmer bet $3,000 to $5,000 weekly on football and basketball games while he was manager of the Chicago Cubs.

Zimmer said Thursday night that he had been questioned by Commissioner Fay Vincent last winter and he feels he is in fine standing with baseball.

"This guy that wrote the story, I don't know him," Zimmer told WMAQ radio in Chicago, referring to author Jerome Tuccille. "Supposedly I talked to him. I don't know the guy. I will say this: the commissioner called me in. I think in the winter of '90. ... As far as I'm concerned, the meetings I had with the commissioner, he was satisfied with everything I told him and ... half of this, I'm kind of giggling at. I've got the whole thing in front of me. ... Some of it, I can't even believe. Somebody's trying to make a paycheck. What can I say?"

Tuccille said in the article appearing in the November edition of the magazine that more than a year ago he met with Kevin Hallinan, director of security for baseball commissioner Fay Vincent, and John Dowd, an investigator for the commissioner's office. Tuccille asked if Zimmer had been investigated by the commissioner's office.

"We can't get into any of that," Tuccille said Dowd told him repeatedly. "We're not at liberty to discuss it."

Hallinan did not return repeated phone calls to his office by The Associated Press on Thursday. Rich Levin, director of public relations for major league baseball, said, "Our policy is not to discuss any investigation that we have conducted or are conducting."

Betting on football and basketball games is illegal outside of Nevada.

Tuccille, who said he posed as a gambler in order to gather his information, also quoted a gambler who said that Zimmer once divulged that his starting pitcher in the next day's game had a sore arm and would not last long. Zimmer denied passing information about baseball to gamblers and the man quoted by Tuccille said that Zimmer may just have "a loose tongue."

Florida State vs. Michigan could be 'game of the year'

By RICK WARNER
AP Football Writer

A long winning streak is going to end Saturday when top-ranked Florida State meets No. 3 Michigan in Ann Arbor.

The Seminoles have the nation's longest winning streak at nine, while Michigan and Miami are next with eight in a row.

"This could be the game of the year in college football," said Florida State coach Bobby Bowden. "This is the kind of game that everybody wants to be part of. High rankings, big stadium, national TV — it's all there."

Florida State has yet to be tested, winning its first three games over BYU, Tulane and Western Michigan by a combined score of 140-39. Michigan, on the other hand, passed a major test by beating Notre Dame 24-14 two weeks ago.

Both teams have balanced offenses and aggressive defenses.

Michigan's attack features quarterback Elvis Grbac, running back Ricky Powers and receiver Desmond Howard, who has scored six of the Wolverines' eight touchdowns this season.

Florida State's offensive leaders are tailback Amp Lee, fullback Edgar Bennett and quarterback Casey Weldon, the nation's top-rated passer. The Seminoles also have a deep and talented group of receivers.

Michigan's defense was impressive against Notre Dame, limiting the Irish to 78 yards on the ground and holding them scoreless for the final 22 minutes. But the task will be even harder against Florida State, which may have the most versatile offense in the country.

College Picks

The teams have met only once before, with Michigan winning 20-18 at Ann Arbor in 1986. The oddsmakers expect another close one on Saturday, making Florida State a 2 1/2-point favorite.

School board decides Dallas student athletes must pay per-sport fee

DALLAS (AP) — Student athletes in the Dallas Independent School District are going to have to pay up before they dress out for sports.

It's being blamed on the new "Robin Hood" school finance plan that takes money from richer school districts and gives it to the poorer district. The plan has forced the district to cut more than $800,000 from the athletic department budget.

The DISD school board voted Thursday to approve a $10-per-sport fee for all student athletes in the ninth through 12th grade and made it retroactive to sports now in progress such as football, volleyball and cross country.

Deputy Superintendent Chad Woolery said the process of collecting the fee will begin in the next 2 1/2 weeks. A collection plan is being worked out with district coaches, he said.

"It's come to the point where some investment on the part of the players is necessary," Woolery said. "The key issue is we want to keep as many sports as we can. We are wanting our kids to have a full range of athletic opportunities."

The district expects to raise $100,000 from the fees. Steve Mainord, head football coach at Skyline High School and president of the Dallas Coaches Association, said the association is "totally opposed" to the $10 fee.

North Dallas High football coach Emo Black said his school has many families with more than one athlete and that the fee might cause some financial hardship.

"I think definitely it would have adverse affect on the total number of athletes participating as well as the image of the DISD," Black said.

Describing the money to be raised by collection of the fees as "a spit in the ocean," Black said the money to be raised would be insignificant in financing athletics for the district.

Other districts in the Dallas-Fort Worth area have considered imposing a pay-to-play fee. The Houston Independent School District charges a $20-per-athlete insurance fee and other school districts around the country have imposed pay-to-play fees.

Georgian presidential troops retake national guard base

By THOMAS GINSBERG
Associated Press Writer

TBILISI, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Soldiers loyal to President Zviad Gamsakhurdia have seized the opposition's national guard base, but opposition leaders today remained in control of Tbilisi's broadcasting center.

There was shooting throughout the night in the capital of Georgia, where Gamsakhurdia imposed a state of emergency to squelch dissent. Sporadic firing was heard in the direction of the broadcast center this morning.

The standoff pits Gamsakhurdia's supporters, who believe his strong hand is needed to win the republic's independence, against critics who believe he has become increasingly dictatorial.

In Moscow, Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev expressed concern today about the unrest in Georgia and the Nagorno-Karabakh enclave in the Caucasus, and about public protests over the reinstatement of a Communist Party stalwart as president of the Central Asian republic of Tadjikistan.

He denied accusations by Gamsakhurdia that the Kremlin was behind a mounting opposition movement in the republic.

"This is not realistic, not factual," he said, repeating several times that "the situation is worsening" in Georgia.

"I think that President Gamsakhurdia and his opponents ought to exert the maximum goodwill" to peacefully resolve their conflict, he said.

Gorbachev endorsed efforts by Russian federation President Boris Yeltsin and Kazakh President Nursultan Nazarbayev to broker a truce in Nagorno-Karabakh, an Armenian enclave inside mostly Muslim Azerbaijan.

Rebels take position around Tbilisi's television broadcasting center Thursday evening.

"But unfortunately I read in the newspapers today that there was more shooting, that five people were killed," Gorbachev said. "There are forces who do not want the conflict to end."

He was referring to renewed fighting in the mountainous region that broke out after a tentative peace agreement was reached Monday.

While not directly criticizing the parliament of Tadjikistan for reinstating Communist leader Rakhman Nabiyev and declaring a state of emergency, Gorbachev said "each republic must understand the need to continue democratic development."

Nabiyev, who was ousted several months after Gorbachev became Kremlin leader in 1985, was reinstated on Monday. He replaced acting president Kadriiddin Aslonov, who tried to abolish the Communist Party.

In Georgia, Gamsakhurdia's troops seized the national guard base outside the capital Thursday. A statement by his office today said the facility was empty and no shots were fired, but the Soviet news agency Tass earlier quoted the guard's commander as claiming 60 people were killed in an attack there.

The conflicting reports could not be reconciled, and a statement read by a worker at Gamsakhurdia's press office denied the Tass report.

The statement said Gamsakhurdia's troops occupied the Shavnabada base near Tbilisi, but that the rebel National Guard leader, Tengiz Kitovani, "and his armed formation had left several days earlier."

One prominent leader of the opposition to Gamsakhurdia, former Georgian Foreign Minister Tengiz Segua, said at one point that an unknown number of government troops were wounded or killed.

Rumors of high casualties were indicative of the tensions in the southern Soviet republic, where Gamsakhurdia loyalists and opponents began an armed standoff last week.

On Thursday, government forces encircled the broadcast center and demanded the activists put down their arms or face arrest.

Electricity was cut and roads sealed around the broadcast center at 8 p.m., the deadline imposed by Gamsakhurdia for the rebels to turn in their weapons. The opposition this morning remained in control of the building, which it seized Sunday.

Gamsakhurdia imposed a state of emergency Wednesday to quash weeks of street protests against him. Tass said the Interior Ministry troops were killed when they attacked members of a rebel national guard force at the Shavnabada base early Thursday.

But Gamsakhurdia's spokesman, Georgy Burdzanadze, denied there was an attack, calling the report "disinformation."

Kitovani, whose guard turned against Gamsakhurdia after he formed it, said at least two attackers were killed at a checkpoint a half-mile from the base in the hills outside Tbilisi.

Georgia is one of several Soviet republics embroiled in political and ethnic turmoil. The strife in many areas, including Georgia, began years ago but has been exacerbated by the erosion of central power since last month's failed hard-line coup against Gorbachev.

In Tadjikistan, democratic forces and Muslim leaders on Thursday declared a war of protests and strikes to pressure diehard Communists who they say seized the republic in a coup.
