Military removes nuclear weapons from alert status

By RUTH SINAI Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The United States removed hundreds of its nuclear weapons from 24-hour alert Saturday, but the country's defense chiefs assured Americans that sufficient fire power and readiness remain to confront any threat.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney urged the Soviets to respond with equally bold steps, cutting their tactical nuclear arsenals and negotiating with the United States further reductions in the superpowers' long-range arse-

Cheney signed an executive order removing 40 longrange bombers and 450 long-range Minuteman missiles from their full-time alert, the first step toward implementing a package of sweeping reductions announced Friday night by President Bush in U.S. nuclear arsenals.

"This is the single biggest change in the deployment of U.S. nuclear weapons since they were first integrated into our forces in 1954," Cheney told reporters at a rare Saturday Pentagon briefing. "It will make the world a

Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, who was notified by Bush in advance of the nationally televised plan, hailed the initiative as "positive, very positive." But he and 50 silo-based MX missiles, each with 10 warheads, stopped short of saying how the Soviet Union would

The White House was, nontheless, pleased. "The president believes that this is a positive response from President Gorbachev. We will continue to consult with the Soviets," spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Saturday.

Cheney made clear Bush's plan was conceived, in large part, in response to last month's coup in the Soviet Union which raised concerns about the control and safety of that country's 27,000 nuclear weapons.

He said it would clearly be in the Soviet interest to cut its arsenal, calling it an "expensive drag on their economy which they cannot afford."

The Soviets are estimated to have some 10,000 ground-launched tactical weapons – many more than the United States - and Cheney urged them to destroy that stockpile and reveal the exact numbers of their remaining

"This is a different approach than I would have advocated even a few years ago," Cheney said.

The bombers, part of the 280-strong strategic bomber force, are located at 11 air force bases around the country and can be scrambled into the air within minutes.

Cheney said the several hundred nuclear weapons on these planes would be removed, but that if a threat arose the bombers could be reactivated to full alert within 24

The Soviets do not keep a portion of their bombers on constant alert but they do deploy their mobile intercontinental ballistic missiles out of their warehouses every day. Cheney said.

Most of the 450 U.S. Minuteman missiles are on full alert, always fueled and ready to be launched from their underground silos toward targets in the Soviet Union. These weapons are scheduled to be dismantled under the recently signed, but not yet ratified, Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty (START).

"I am absolutely confident, that we will retain ... sufficient nuclear forces and that we are committed to keeping them up to date and effective," Cheney said.

In fact, as announced by Bush, the United States would eliminate fewer than 3,000 of its 22,000 nuclear weapons. Its 500 single-warhead Minuteman III missiles would not be affected, for now.

That could change significantly if the Soviets accept the U.S. challenge to eventually eliminate all the superpowers' multiple-warhead long-range weapons.

France said it would hold a summit soon with the the United States, the Soviet Union and Britain on reducing nuclear arsenals.

Cheney made clear, however, that offer doesn't include multiple-warhead missiles aboard U.S. submarines – an area where the United States enjoys a significant advan-

Mail-order businesses ignoring sales tax order

DALLAS (AP) - A plan to collect sales taxes from catalogue and other mail-order companies sending goods into Texas is being ignored, costing Texas tens of millions of dollars in uncollected revenue, state officials say.

Texas Comptroller John Sharp warned the companies to begin collecting taxes June 1, but few have complied, said Andy Welch, a spokesman for Sharp.

"Their compliance has been an less than overwhelming," Welch told The Dallas Morning News.

Gephardt spouting more gobbledygook

Let us reiterate an axiom of political economy we stated a while ago: The only true tax cut is one that also does not increase taxes for anyone. The tax cut might cut taxes more for some than for others, or even not cut some people's taxes. But it cannot boost anyone's taxes. The reason behind this axiom is shown by a new proposal by House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, which would cut taxes for the middle class while increasing taxes on the "rich."

Though Rep. Gephardt didn't announce specifics, his plan would probably resemble one submitted by his high-tax colleagues that would boost the tax rate from 33 percent to 39 percent on incomes more than $320,000 a year. It would also allow a $300 to $500 tax cut for families of middle income.

Where is that money taxed from the "rich" going to come from? It would take away money they would invest in companies and jobs. "Many of the "rich" would leave the country to seek better tax rates. The high taxes paid by the "rich" thus would lead to slower growth, fewer jobs and more layoffs.

How is a tax cut going to help a middle-class taxpayer if he's standing in an unemployment line? You can't pay income taxes if you don't have an income. So Rep. Gephardt's tax "cut" plan is but another attempt to grab more of taxpayers' money to waste on special interesets. His plan would sink our economy even further into the ocean of recession.

Rep. Gephardt also blasted the last two presidents, "For the last 12 years Ronald Reagan, George Bush and the policies they've supported have carried on a class war against middle-income working families to benefit the wealthiest people in our society." The man has lost all sense of logic. Twelve years ago was 1979, smack in the middle of the high-tax, "malaise" years of Jimmy Carter. And if times were so rough on middle Americans, why did they re-elect President Reagan with a landslide in 1984, and elect Bush in 1988? (Alas, Bush has himself cancelled much of the Reagan accomplishments.)

The congressman also referred to a new report by Citizens for Tax Justice, a special interest group associated with labor unions. The report calculated that middle-class taxes have risen $5.8 billion since 1978. But Reagan's programs didn't take effect until 1982, four years later. You might as well blame old Dutch for the decline and fall of the Roman Empire. In fact, during the Reagan years the economy created 20 million jobs, over half with incomes more than $20,000 per year. We enjoyed a record eight years of expansion – an expansion ended by last year's tax increase, which Gephardt and his congressional cohorts pushed into law.

Gephardt spoke of "class warfare," and he's right. However, the war does not pit rich against the middle calss and the poor, as he claimed. The real class war pits the tax-and-waste elite in Washington against everyone else, rich, middle class and poor.

Thomas is a friend of liberty

We should pay close attention to the Senate confirmation hearings on Judge Clarence Thomas' appointment to the U.S. Supreme Court. During what was an inquisition, Thomas faced questions about his position on affirmative action.

But we shouldn't fall for our immoral senators' attempts to denigrate this very forthright and principled man in their efforts to appear holier than

During the early part of the civil rights movement, affirmative action meant that firms, colleges and government agencies would take extraordinary due to the ugly discrimination of the past, were outside traditional recruitment channels.

In part, this meant advertising for positions in black newspapers, offering remedial assistance to youngsters with bright prospects but not quite up to standards, encouraging minorities to apply for hold as constitutional the use of race as a criteria opportunities previously unavailable, and combatting acts of individual discrimination.

Judge Thomas benefited from this moral and proper version of affirmative action like so many other black Americans. Thomas, like the majority of Americans, agrees with this version of affirma-

Therefore, the questions the Senate should put to the nominee are: "Do you see it as your duty to for hiring and college admissions?" and "Do you interpret the Constitution as mandating equal protection for all Americans regardless of race, sex or national origin?"

Though arrived at through different routes, Judge Thomas and I believe in the principles of natural law. These rights, expressed by John Locke in his enemy of state-granted privileges.

'Second Treatise of Government," which dominated the thinking of our founding fathers, are not granted by government.

Government's job is to protect these rights from private and public encroachment. But you don't have to read John Locke to arrrive at the fundamental principles of natural law. Two of the Ten Commandments warn "Thou shall not covet" and "Thou shall not steal." If anything is going to get Thomas in trouble with the U.S. Senate, it will be his belief in principles expressed in our Declaration of Independence.

Our U.S. Congress has utter contempt for principles of natural law. Unlike men like Jefferson, Madison and Mason, our congressmen believe that it is a legitimate function of government to forcibly confiscate property of one American to give to another to whom it does not belong. They believe that government should grant one American a special privilege denied to another American. Congress will never own up to this betrayal of human rights, but its actions speak louder than

Braves heading for pennant

ATLANTA - A Los Angeles newspaper columnist has taken a few shots at Atlanta. There was the usual stuff. We're still eating grits and talking slowly, you know.

And, admittedly, we're not nearly as hip as Los Angeles. Our street gangs still haven't gotten their hands on any nuclear weapons, our air doesn't come in colors and there's still probably a couple of people around who don't use cocaine.

What prompted the writer's words, I'm sure, is the fact that it's September and Atlanta's Braves are right up there with the Los Angeles Dodgers as both try to win the National League West baseball

The Dodgers think of themselves as tuxedos. The Braves as a pair of brown shoes.

Fine. So let the games begin. There are six more scheduled between the Braves and the Dodgers before the baseball season ends.

I think the Braves will finish in front of the particular, are both arrogant to the point they can't Dodgers - despite the fact that the Dodgers' millionaire, Darryl Strawberry, has said, "We aren't worried about the Braves.'

Goliath wasn't worried about Little David

I'll leave all the baseball talk for the sports pages. Here are the ten reasons I'm picking Atlanta to finish in front of Los Angeles:

10. Our guys don't have a lot of big fat contracts like their guys. So their guys aren't as hungry as our guys. If our guys do win, then a lot of them will have big fat contracts next year. And the Astros will probably win. But that's next year. 9. An earthquake could swallow up their guys by the time the season is over. And our guys will win by default. 8. Our manager isn't pouting because he wasn't named to host the Tonight Show after Johnny Carson retires.

7. Justice is on our side.

6. None of our guys are working on screenplays. Everybody in Los Angeles is working on a bla

3. Their former governor, Jerry "Moonbeam" Brown, is running for president again. Even Lester Maddox, our former governor, knows when it's time to hide under a rock and stay there.

2. They eat bait in California.

1. God picked the Braves to finish last, too, and the Big Ump enjoys a miracle just as much as the rest of us do.

Report links poverty, oppression

Sometimes I suspect that bureaucrats at the United Nations - that citadel of political and economic scheming - don't read their own reports.

The recently released U.N. Human Development Report for 1991 shows that there is a direct relationship between political freedom and economic prosperity. Simply put, the results show that many of the world's poorest countries also are the least free.

Prepared by a team of economic development experts, the report uses a "human freedom index' to measure each nation's relative freedom. Each country was ranked on a scale of zero to 40 (a perfect score), according to how it respects a list of rights: the right to travel at home and abroad, freedom of religion, access to an open judicial process,

"Political freedom seems to have unleashed the creative energies of the people - and [to have led] to ever-higher levels of income and social progress," according to the study.

You don't have to be a free-market visionary to see the implications of the report's findings: One of the most effective ways to promote and strengthen political freedom is to encourage the growth of free-makret economics.

market advocates in the West, who have long seen the link between heavily managed economies typical to totalitarian regimes - and the crushing of

So why is this not-so-subtle connection being lost on U.N. bureaucrats? The U.N. Development Programme, which published the report, is continuing to offer millions of dollars in economic development grants to countries with the least economic and political freedom. And there is not even any mention of the need for domestic reforms that would spur economic growth.

Indeed, the weakest aspect of the human freedom index is that it does not even attempt to measure economic freedom. It should have scored Of course, this comes as no surprise to free-countries on whether they protect the right to enter poverty.

commercial contracts, freedom from government

As a result, despite the U.N. research results, money will be misdirected. Poland, bursting with political and economic freedom, will receive $3.5 million during the 1992-96 budget period. Meanwhile, communist Cuba, which scored a five out of a possible 40 on the human freedom index, will get $10.9 million. Communist Vietnam, whose freedom record is as shabby as Cuba's, will receive $92.8 million.

When will the U.N. grant-makers cease rewarding the champions of repression? When will they realize the implications of their own reports?

"If society represses its people, it also repressses their creativity and motivation and, thus, its growth rate and human progress," Development Programme administrator William Draper III recently told the Governing Council.

It's time to wake up and smell the morning coffee. Governments that heavily manage their nation's economy tend to heavily manage the lives

I'm writing in regards to the article in the Sept. 19, 1991 paper which made me sound like a deranged psychopath. I appreciate your "unbiased" reporting. I would like this opportunity to give my side of the story.

First, you were accurate about my previous felony conviction. You were also correct about the length of time I've been out of prison. You did forget to mention that in the two years I've been on parole I've been a model citizen, a hard worker, and a family man. I've caused no problems in Pampa and tried to live a quiet life with my wife and two daughters. I did have a drinking problem and it was a "drunk night" that led to my

My lawyer claimed I would be convicted on the weight of my past. A sexual assault never took place, but the D.A. was going to try to give me a life sentence. A guilty plea was simply the fastest way to get back to my wife and girls.

My family, my in-laws and our friends know I'm innocent, but they also know how Pampa's justice system works. If I would've had the money for a good lawyer, I would've never pled guilty to such a sick crime. As it stands, I'll be back to my family within three years, and we plan to put Pampa behind us.

I've already received my sentence and I'm ready to get it over with. I only hope that one day the "victim" will tell the truth, and I can have this taken off of my

How about solutions instead of complaints?

To the editor:

When the commercial bingo hall operators are complaining about new state taxes on bingo, they should also admit how much the Legislature gave them.

For one thing, the original commercial bingo hall rental tax proposal was 10 percent, but that was cut to three percent.

Also, the Legislature gave the commercial operators but not the charity games the right to sell lottery tickets for a profit if and when Texas gets a lottery. There is no telling how many millions of dollars the commercial operators will make from that.

These big commercial operators have taken the lead in blaming me personally for the new bingo taxes and I would like to set the record straight. The responsibility for writing a realistic tax bill landed in the Senate's lap when the House of Representatives passed only a shell of a bill that totally failed to even come close to financing a state government for 1992-93.

At that point, I, along with the Speaker of the House, the chairmen of the Senate Finance and House Ways and Means Committees and staff members, met and reviewed a list of possible sources of revenue to close

The list was prepared by staff from the Senate, House and previous lists prepared by the State Comptroller. The final list was prepared with the thought in mid of what the House would accept. A bingo tax was just one of the agreed upon items. The list was widely distributed, reported in the press and a hearing was held in the Senate. Only two people in the bingo industry gave brief testimony and not one of the registered lobbyists for the bingo industry testi-

The tax bill containing the bingo tax was passed by a two-thirds vote of both the House and the Senate and signed by the Governor. It enabled state services to continue after September 1, unlike some other states where state services actually came to a halt.

I do not know anyone involved in the process that is proud of the new tax bill, but it is time that those in the bingo industry offer solutions and honesty instead of complaints.

Matthew Stuart and John McMahon pleaded innocent Friday to charges they helped dispose of the murder weapon, thinking they were participating in an insurance scam.

Their attorneys said they are "sacrificial lambs" offered to hundreds of people who cried out for justice in an episode that blemished police and prosecutors and victimized Boston's black community. "When Charles Stuart took his own life, the only thing that changed was the political pressure to do something," said Nancy Gertner, Matthew Stuart's lawyer. For two months, Charles Stuart led police and the public to believe a black man in a dark sweat suit robbed and shot him and his wife, Carol, on Oct. 23, 1989, as they left a birthing class in Boston's inner city. Police scoured the neighborhood known as Mission Hill for a suspect, in many instances randomly stopping and frisking black men on the streets. A man fitting the general description was fingered by Stuart and police made an arrest.

A Suffolk County grand jury indicted Matthew Stuart and McMahon after hearing from about 100 people over 22 months.

The grand jury said it believed Charles Stuart killed his wife and their unborn son, who died 17 days after the shooting. Stuart wanted to collect nearly $300,000 in insurance from his wife's death, a prosecutor

Matthew Stuart faces seven counts, including conspiracy to obstruct justice and conspiracy to defraud an insurance company. He could be sentenced to 32 1/2 years in prison. McMahon was indicted on five counts, including being an accessory after the fact of murder.

Baylor Bears destroy SMU

DALLAS (AP) - The Baylor Bears are off to their best start in 11 years and the primary reason is their "triple J" quarterback, J.J. Joe.

"I thought J.J. played pretty good, but it's not up to where I think he will eventually be," Baylor coach Grant Teaff said.

All Joe did was pass for two touchdowns and run for another score Saturday as the undefeated 12th-ranked Bears opened their Southwest Conference season with a 45-7 victory over winless Southern Methodist.

Joe completed eight of 10 passes for 171 yards and rushed 13 times for 55 yards.

"It was a good day, but J.J. had a turnover when he fumbled the ball and he knows that's a no-no," Teaff said. "He heard about it."

Baylor (4-0) handed SMU (0-3 overall, 0-2 SWC) its 13th consecutive loss. The Bears hadn't started a season 4-0 since 1980 when they won seven straight on the way to a SWC title. "SMU was loading up to stop the run so we went to the pass,'

Joe said. "That's how we beat Colorado and Missouri. When they loaded up for the run, we hurt them with the pass.' Baylor, a 24-point favorite, cruised to a 24-0 halftime lead behind Joe, who completed his first seven passes. SMU coach Tom Rossley said he was thoroughly impressed with the Bears.

"They've got a great kicking game, a good offense and a good defense," Rossley said. 'They're one of the top teams in the country and I think you saw why today.'

It took Baylor only 34 seconds to score on its first possession. Joe hit Melvin Bonner with a 40-yard completion and two players later David Mims scored on a 25-run. Starting fullback Robert Strait strained a knee on the play and missed the rest of the game.

After a 50-yard field goal by Jeff Ireland made it 10-0, the Bears cashed in Frankie Smith's interception of Mike Romo for another touchdown early in the second period-

Joe capped the 54-yard touchdown drive on a 4-yard run after he faked pitching the ball on the option.

Baylor had a 72-yard scoring pass from Joe to John Henry called back on a motion penalty, but the Bears came right back to make it 24-0 on Joe's 49-yard scoring pass to Bonner.

Gerald Sanders in his studio. He started showing his work professionally in the late 1970's. Sanders says he has been carving on "something or another" since he was a child and has been showing in the arts and crafts festival for many years. In 1986, he donated a piece of sculpture called "La-Olla" which was raffled in the show.

Evelyne Epps has displayed her art in the arts and crafts show since the mid-1970's. A piece of her work "Satanta" was donated to Pampa Fine Arts Association and hangs in their office today. Epps will give a sketching demonstration at 2 p.m., Sunday, Oct. 13.

Wood paneled furniture looks good, functions well

By POPULAR MECHANICS For AP Special Features

Furniture made from solid wood always looks and feels substantial. It exudes quality based on the material alone. But on even the best pieces, all you see and feel is the surface.

Manufactured panels look and work every bit as well as solid wood, and they can save you both time and full-scale home workshop.

design and build cabinets and furniture that contain relatively large parts without the necessity of gluing together and surfacing many smaller pieces of solid wood. And panels often cost less than solid wood.

Various types of panels are available. Plywood panels are made by ticleboard are all made by chipping or grinding wood into small pieces, drying the chips and mixing them with adhesive to form a thick mat.

The differences in the various panels are based on the size of the chips andorientation in the mat.

Particleboard is small, compressed particles, often in layers, but with no grain orientation. Oriented-strand board is made from strand-like particles arranged in layers with the grain in alternate layers at right angles to each other. Waferboard and flakeboard also consist of compressed particles, but they can be either randomdifference between the two is the size costs a lot less than hardwood.

and thickness of the particles. Flakeboard has larger, thinner flakes.

Plywood and other panels can span large areas like tabletops, doors, or countertops in one piece. They also have greater dimensional stability than solid wood, especially across the grain of the panel.

Panels resist shrinking and swelling, can be face-nailed or screwed very close to the edge withmoney, especially if you don't have a out splitting and, when used for cabinet or case backs, they improve struc-Using panel products allows you to tural integrity because they resist racking forces very well.

> On the down side, panel products do not hold nails or screws well in their edges. Because of their construction, the edges must be covered for the panels to look like solid wood.

> When buying panels, remember that hardwood veneers are relatively expensive. Structural panels are cheaper than hardwood-faced plywwod so use this material where you want the convenience of a panel but don't need its decorative appearance. Since thin 1/4-inch hardwoodfaced panels cost half as much as 3/4-inch, consider bonding one to lower-grade 1/2-inch material when the back won't show. Tradition goes contemporary

WASHINGTON (AP) — Navajo weaving and Hopi kachina-doll carving are among Native American traditions re-interpreted by present-day artists in an exhibition at the National Museum of Natural History.

There are 52 works in "A Separate Vision," on view through Nov. 17. It showcases the work and ideas of Hopi kachina carver John Fredericks; Santa Clara sculptor Nora Naranjo-Morse; Navajo weaver Brenda Spencer and Navajo landscape painter Baje Whitethorne.

"This is much more than an art exhibit," said exhibition curator Linda Eaton, curator of ethnology at the Museum of Northern Arizona. "The works of art speak in their own way. But there's also a lot of written material in the labels, and videos with the artists talking about some of the problems of trying to express themselves as artists.

After its closing in Washington, the exhibition will be shown at the Field Museum, Chicago.

Belated 85th birthday wishes to Charity Humphrey. Her birthday party at Pamcel last Saturday evening was a complete but pleasant surprise and a family reunion as well. Charity, a part of the ladies' ministry and a pillar of Briarwood Full Gospel Church, was all smiles and happiness to see everyone. Children, grand and great-grandchildren, sister-in-laws, cousins came from all over Texas and as far away as Pasadena, Calif., and the state of Oregon. Close members attending were Jeff and Debra Kent, Lefors; Jerome and Beverly Humphrey, Kenneth and Alisa Humphrey, Dean and Diana Bliss, Joe Humphrey, wife of Houston, their four married daughters and families, Billie Gibson, Oregon; Eva and C. L. Wallace of Palestine, and five granddaughters. Congratulations, Charity, on a milestone birthday.

Belated congratulations to Johnny and Susan Furgason on the birth if Mikala. Proud grandparents are Sharon and Guy Thompson, White Deer, J.L. and Helen Furgason of Skellytown. Four grandparents living that close should be enough to spoil the wee one. Lisa and Shawn Clifton are the proud parents of Corbin, from the Greek word meaning gift from God, and Brady for Shawn's great-grandfather. Grandparents Joyce and L.G. Clifton are so proud they can hardly contain themselves and almost draw straws for rocking privileges. The members of the Calvary Baptist Church honored their longtime church pianist with a SUR-PRISE PARTY. As a surprise, it was a complete success. The congregation gathered in Fellowship hall in honor of Yvonne Phillips, who has been pianist for the church for 36 years or more. She was given a money tree and gift basket containing cards and letters from present and former members and leaders.

Dicky McGahan, a nephew, presently music director of the church, sang some of Mrs. Phillip's favorite hymns. Several members spoke in memory of the faithful years given by Mrs. Phillips, before refreshments of punch and cookies were served by the party hostesses: Sherry Day, Billie Reddell, Christine Romines and Maxine Hapeman. Widower looking for company finds women in pursuit

DEAR ABBY: Your letters from vomen who are "faking it" to satisfy their husbands are hilarious! But there is definitely another side to the

For 48 years I was married to a wonderful woman. Every sexual encounter was an expression of love not lust. She initiated the activity as often as I did. Then she suffered a paralyzing stroke, so for seven years bathed her daily and cuddled her as laid beside her as her beautiful body withered away. Our love did not require the sexual act; holding her in my arms was all I needed. She has been gone for two years, and no one could ever take her place.

I am a shriveled 76-year-old man and certainly nothing to look at. Last year I joined a senior citizens group, and you would think I am Clark Gable! Widows swarmed like flies to garbage! The first woman I danced with outweighed me by 100 pounds and wanted to "dirty dance" with me. The first night I had three invitations to spend the night. I never went to another meeting, but I've gone on overnight trips with the group. Abby, women knocked on my bedroom door! If you could see me you would know how hard up they

I would like to find a woman for companionship, and possibly later on sex might enter the picture. But every woman I've met - even in church — makes advances. If these old gals have been faking it with their husbands, why do they become sex maniacs as soon as their husbands are gone?

NO BARGAIN IN MINNESOTA DEAR NO BARGAIN: Please don't label all women who long for intimacy "sex maniacs" maybe all they want is a warm body to cuddle with. You are apparently more attractive than you think you are. Rejoice and count your blessings. Every 76-year-old widower should have your problems.

DEAR ABBY: I recently attended my first major league baseball game. he batter lost control of the bat and it flew into the crowd, striking a young girl. They carried her off and the game continued.

We never heard any more about . Was the child hurt? Is she alive? Who knows? Does anybody care? The game went on.

There wasn't one word about it in the newspaper, but there was an article about a "minor hand injury" suffered by one of the players. Now, that's what I call bizarre! "C" IN K.C.

DEAR "C": You call it "bizarre" I call it a matter of priorities. Whose? The reporter who covered the baseball game.

DEAR ABBY: We had to laugh when we read the letter from the "Schnorrs of Arizona," who objected to the use of their name as "schnorrers" - moochers, freeloaders, beggars. Our name is "Schmuck" — how do they think we feel?

If one of your saws is dull and not cutting well, have the blade sharpened and set by a commercial sawsharpening service; ask your local the name of one. If a hacksaw or coping saw is dull, replace the blade.

TYPES OF SAWS The most useful saw for everyday cutting is a crosscut saw, which is used for cutting across the grain of wood, such as when you cut a board into shorter lengths. Its teeth are like cut when you push the saw. " little knives sharpened in alternate directions. As with all saws, the higher the "point count" (teeth per inch), the smoother and slower the 10-point crosscut saw.

- A ripsaw cuts along the grain of wood or when you are cutting down the length of a board to make it narrower. It usually has a 5-to 7point blade, and its teeth are sharpened straight across, like chisels. A backsaw is a short, squaredoff 12- to 16-point crosscut saw with a metal spine to stiffen its back edge. It's used to make clean, straight cuts, usually in conjunction with a miter box which has slots to guide the blade in making straight and 45straight cut with it using a clamped- doesn't twist.

 A coping saw, made for cutting curves for ornamental work, has a metal U-shaped frame that holds a narrow, fine-tooth blade. Start a cut with a crosscut saw by placing the blade on the waste side of the cutting line (not on the cut. Use relaxed movements, letting the saw do the cutting.

- Start and use a ripsaw the same way but clamp a board along the cutting line to guide the blade and hold it at an angle of 60 degrees or so.

- When starting a cut with a hacksaw, nick the edge of the material with a file.

'Forbidden Planet' heads off-Broadway from London run

LONDON (AP) - English musicals on Broadway are nothing new these days, which is why Return to the Forbidden Planet is heading off-Broadway.

Whereas most Britain-to-Broadway spectacles rely on the likes of falling chandeliers and helicopters to galvanize a crowd, Forbidden Planet needs only a Shakespeare play and some musical golden musical oldies to shake, rattle and roll the audience.

Forbidden Planet achieved fame in London last year as the rock 'n' roll show that beat Miss Saigon for the Best Musical prize at the 1990 Olivier awards, London's Tony.

But in New York, producer Andre Ptaszynski is keeping the two shows far apart so that audiences won't go expecting Forbidden Planet to be anything but the rowdy fun that it is.

The bizarre thing about awards is it yokes together shows that shouldn't be compared," said Ptaszynski, whose musical in London cost a fraction of the amount - and has a fraction of the pretension - of its ballyhooed West End competitor.

"I never wanted to take it anywhere near Broadway. We'd be crucified; it's obviously not Broadway fare," Ptaszynski said of Forbidden Planet. Instead, the musical starts performances Sept. 27 at the renovated Variety Arts Theater on the lower East Side. Opening night is Oct. 10.

Ptaszynski said he was aiming for the hip, downtown audience that made Little Shop of Horrors an off-Broadway smash a decade ago.

Like that show, Forbidden Planet is a campy, music-drenched affair, wedding Shakespeare's The Tempest to the 1956 MGM cult movie, Forbidden Planet.

Characters include the "chiseljawed" Captain Tempest, Dr. Prospero, and his daughter Miranda, described in the London program as "would-be homecoming queen and virgin.'

Together, the three set off for the planet D'Illyria while the theater rocks to songs like "Monster Mash," "Great Balls of Fire" and "All Shook Up."

Author-director Bob Carlton, who said he grew up during "the great Americanization of Britain," said he regarded the New York run as "the show going home."

"This is an Englishman's view of American pop culture," said Carlton, 41, who was born in Coventry in the English midlands. "I was brought up totally on American culture through that sieve which is Britain.'

Carlton wrote Forbidden Planet in 1983 for the Bubble Theater, a London outfit that travels to open spaces, staging productions under an enormous tent.

He then did the play in Liverpool before bringing it to a small theater on the London "fringe." After that came the present West End engagement at the 1300-seat Cambridge Theater, where the show is well into its second year. A separate Australian production opened in Sydney in June.

While he "always thought the show had a good chance," Carlton said in an interview just before leaving for New York that the Olivier Award was essential to its success.

"I knew Miss Saigon had won it," he laughed, remembering his feelings on the night of the awards. The Planet victory, he said, was "like a fourth-division rough-andready football team winning the FA cup final." Or to put that in American, like a Class A minor league team winning the World Series.

Next up for Carlton is In the Midnight Hour, which he described as "an English working-class version of American Graffiti." It's due to open at London's Astoria Theater at the end of the year.

For the moment, he and Ptaszynski are focused on New York where, even off-Broadway, the stakes are high. It is budgeted at $1.5 million in the 499-seat Variety Arts venue twice as much money for half as many seats as the London production.

The enduring style of Johnnie Johnson

By HILLEL ITALIE Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - Johnnie Johnson is a large but graceful man with twinkling eyes, stubby fingers and a voice of earth and wood as deep as the bottom keys of Millions have heard his music, but only a small percentage recognize the name of the man whose jangling, bluesy keyboards added such a special dimension to "Rock and Roll Music," "School Days" and other Chuck Berry songs.

If he never became famous, it was partly by choice. Johnson never grew a pompadour or duckwalked on stage or set his piano on fire. He just showed up, sat down and played. When times got tough, he didn't alter his style or write trashy memoirs. He just laid low, worked a day job hardly talk,' and he really made a joke out of that.' and waited until someone wanted to hear him again.

"I have kids come up to me on the streets and say, 'Hey, you're Johnnie Johnson,' and that lets you know you're reaching them now," he explained during a recent interview at the Manhattan offices of Elektra Records.

"The kids I see are more into the blues than they are into rap, believe me. I mean, like I did a thing in Frisco not so long ago and there were more young kids than there were old people and they'd request things by Jimmy Reed and people like that.

If Johnson's celebrity can be measured by how many people ask for his autograph, then his stature among peers can be determined by who wants to play on his records. By this standard, he ranks near the top of his profession.

Johnnie B. Bad, his first major album release - he's made a few records on regional labels - is a meeting of the rock 'n' roll old guard, with veterans Eric Clapton, an acknowledged master.

Included are rhythm 'n' blues instrumentals ("Hush of Hush" and "Movin' Out"), and a cover of Muddy Waters' "Key to the Highway," with Richards warbling away on vocals. The good-natured "Tanqueray" features the easygoing delivery of Johnson himself.

"While making Hail! Hail! Rock 'n' Roll, Keith and I became pretty close friends," Johnson said, referring to the Berry concert film that came out in 1987.

"He took me to the studio with him, and I was messing around with the instruments, just playing a little blues, and Keith said, 'Hey, I like that.' I said it was just. you to read it, let's put it that way.'

something I was fooling with and he said, 'Let's work with that.' So Keith and (drummer), Steve Jordan and I was clowning, singing 'Drinking Tanqueray,' and Keith said, 'Hey, that's a record,' and I said, 'Oh, c'mon.'

"When I got back home, I got a phone call from him saying, 'We're going to make this record, so get the words together,' and I didn't even pay attention, since Chuck (used to do) all the words. We would drive by car and I would do most of the driving. We'd drive from New York to Washington and Chuck would write the lyrics.

"I got into the studio with Keith and went around two or three times and he said, 'All we need is two or three more verses and we have a song, but you sing it.' Now, this is the thing: I've never sung before in my life and never attempted to. I told Keith, 'I can't sing. I can

Joke or not, Johnson sang. Johnson's first and greatest love is the piano, which he started playing at age 4. Born in 1924 in Clarksdale, W.Va., a mining town in the Blue Ridge Mountains, he loved Oscar Peterson, Avery Parrish and Earl Hines and modeled his own style after the light touch of Count Basie. By the early 1950s, he was living in St. Louis, working in a steel mill and playing at a club down the street from where Berry performed. On New Year's Eve 1952, Johnson needed another musician, recruited Berry, and the rest, he noted dryly, was history. Rock 'n' roll kept getting bigger, but Berry's popularity did tail off after a few years. Johnson, tired of traveling, left the group in 1973 and returned to St. Louis. He joined a local band, played with Al Hirt and Ike Turner among others, and found a day job driving a bus for senior citizens.

Hail! Hail! Rock 'n' Roll was the turning point. It Keith Richards and NRBQ all paying their respects to brought him new fans and allowed him to meet longtime admirers Clapton and Richards. Johnson is anxious to work with those musicians again and says he's busy writing new songs, songs for him to sing, songs built around a piano style as enduring as the man who developed it.

"I don't know how to put it into words; it's a special feeling. When I was little my parents bought a piano and I just sat down and played. I didn't know how to read music," he said.

"When I was trying to learn how to use the typewriter it was the same as playing piano. Now, I'm not good at it, I'm not fast, but I can type well enough for DALLAS (AP) - Branded by some as "America's most notorious serial murderer," Henry Lee Lucas was remorseless killers.

He was the subject of John McNaughton's controversial film, Henry: Portrait of a Serial Killer, which was released last year with an X-rating because of its violence.

Now Lucas is the subject of a new book by Mike Cox, The Confessions of Henry Lee Lucas.

Less monstrous than moronic, Lucas, a one-eyed drifter, killed his mother, his teenage wife, an old woman who befriended him and perhaps another 100 or so innocent victims.

No one knows for sure, although Cox's book suggests that Lucas killed more than many believe and less than he claims.

In the paperback original from Pocket Books, the author offers a new dimension to the bloody misadventures of Lucas and his equally disordered and deranged traveling companion, Ottis Toole.

Cox, who was a reporter for the Austin American-Statesman when he first encountered Lucas, provides a chilling account of the homicidal odd couple's quest for sex, money and blood and their random choice of targets, usually women in the wrong place at the wrong

She charged considerably more for a pint of her own moonshine whiskey.

One of Viola's retarded bedmates, Bernie Dowdy, who may have been Henry's real father, Cox says, introduced young Lucas to the joys of perverse sex, first with a calf whose throat he cut with a pock-

"Afterward," Cox wrote, "the young boy could hardly believe how good it had made him feel." That may partly explain why Lucas later preferred sex with his victims after he killed them, although some he Public Safety created a task force to coordinate the assaulted before as well as after.

On Jan. 11, 1960, Lucas graduated from killing animals to people, and his mother was the first to die. He slapped her around, choked her and plunged his pocketknife into her neck.

Lucas, then 24, was convicted and spent half his 10year prison term in a Michigan psychiatric hospital after two halfhearted suicide attempts.

Once freed, he resumed his animal antics, bungled two attempts to kidnap young girls, married a woman night and wound up at a mission near skid row in Jack-

He bragged that he and his murderous crony "killed and then Toole began confessing to most of America's 'em most every way there is except poison ... shooting them, hanging them, running them down with cars. We've beat them to death. There's crucifixions, filleting people like fish, people have been burnt, shot in their cars."

But outside the courtroom, Lucas denied killing "Orange Socks."

One who believed him was Hugh Aynesworth, then a reporter for the Dallas Times Herald. Aynesworth wrote a front-page story showing much of the Lucas affair to be a sham.

Lucas told Aynesworth and others that all but three of his confessions were lies designed to "show that law enforcement doesn't do its job.'

More smaller countries likely to emerge

By JOY ASCHENBACH National Geographic For AP Special Features

In the most dramatic change in global maps since the aftermath of World War II, 100 or more nations may join the international community during the next 50 years.

Before the failed Aug. 19 coup, the Soviet Union consisted of 15 republics. Today, the old union is no more. With the Baltic states of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia in the vanguard, one Soviet republic after another rushes toward sovereignty.

Inside and outside the crumbling Soviet empire, small states once swallowed by geographic giants or forced into uneasy unions are in various breakaway stages.

The hard-line Soviet coup "intensified the identity of the peoples in independence-minded republics and sharpened the 'wethey' division," says geographer versity of California at Berkeley.

pean countries, 20 nations could emerge," says Janusz Bugajski of the Center for Strategic and International Studies in Washington. "I'm almost convinced we'll see an independent Slovenia. It's ethnically homogeneous and it borders two Western European countries. Croatia is more problematic."

The new nations' prospects for survival 'are not a question of size, but a question of economic resources what do they have to offer the rest of Europe?'

Worldwide, says geographer Saul Cohen of Hunter College in New York, before the middle of the next century scores of new nations might arise, from Quebec out of Canada to Eritrea out of Ethiopia. "The change in Europe of 1992, with all kinds of customs barriers down, will promote more small states," he says.

Although emerging nations would only be shadows of the larger countries from which they're separating, none would be among the world's tiniest. Most of those are in Europe.

Luxembourg, largest of Europe's seven tiniest states, is smaller than Rhode Island. The Vatican, tiniest of all, could fit within the U.S. Capitol grounds in Washington. These nations are rivaled for smallness only by a smattering of island countries, mainly in the Caribbean Sea and the Indian and Pacific

Swine disease programs In agriculture show progress, problems since Texas joined the national effort to wipe out two swine diseases – pseudorabies and swine brucellosis. Producers and regulatory agencies, who teamed up on Texas' program, have a better picture now of their progress and the problems still to be solved.

With input from the Texas Pork Producers' Association, the Texas Animal Health Commission surveillance in July 1990, requiring that blood samples be drawn from Texas sows and boars at slaughter plants.

Testing the samples and followhas resulted in finding a small number of infected herds, but Bob the entire story.

quarantined and are being tested. Daniel said that the TAHC switched from the latex agglutination test to the more reliable ELISA test a few months after beginning the pseudorabies surveillance program. Furthermore, each blood sample that tests positive for pseudorabies on the ELISA test is retested (TAHC) started swine disease with the highly effective, but more costly serum neutralization test, run at the Texas Veterinary Medical Diagnostic Laboratory at Texas A&M University in College Station.

Mulches add organic matter, and also furnish food for earthworms, which are valuable in aerating the soil. The organic matter helps to keep the soil crumbly and easy to work. Farmers call this good tilth.

"To provide a source of mulch and to do something with those fall leaves, every gardener should have a compost bin - preferably two - for making compost from organic materials such as leaves," McDonald said.

Bins can be made by attaching ordinary wire fence or boards to solid posts or open brickwork. Each bin should be four to six feet high, three to five feet wide, and any convenient length.

One side of each bin should be removable for convenience in building up the compost material and for taking it out. In late fall, a temporary piece of wire fence may be used to increase the height about two feet. After the material settles in March, the piece of fence can be removed.

"Many organic materials, such as autumn leaves, are rich in carbohydrates and low in nitrogen, McDonald said. "Usually, you will find it beneficial to add nitrogen fertilizer to the material before applying it as a mulch. One or two cups of fertilizer high in nitrogen for each

The most powerful artistic event by the most explosive musical band has finally happened. The most anticipated rock album since Kiss dropped their makeup on Lick It Up has been released. Use Your Illusion I & II have been put out by Guns N' Roses, and the world is happy ... for

Most people consider patience as a virtue. That is definitely the case with the new GNR albums. "Patience" truly pays off with two LP's from the world's most popular rock-and-roll band.

The dual records have been forecast since May but, as with several performers, hefty problems have stood in the way. It seems like each time the group would solve one enigma another one would soon replace it. After they got their worries under control, the Gunners produced one of the most potent recordings in quite some time.

The biggest problem was locating a new drummer after Steven Adler was fired. The band said Adler was axed because he couldn't kick a heroin habit that halted recordings for a year and a half. Adler says that the band got him to do it, and he was fired because he tried to quit but the band didn't like it. He has since filed a lawsuit against the group.

Steven "indica bud" Adler was replaced by ex-Cult drummer Matt Sorum, who also used to be associated with Gladys Knight. He has proven to be an excellent replace-

Next on the list of troubles was a problem in management. The band had grievances against former manager Alan Niven and decided to let him go. Niven's parter Doug Goldstein left him and decided to take up the reins by starting his own management company and made Guns N' Roses his new clients. Reports are that they are pleased with him. Niven still currently manages bands such as Great White and Havana

The third dilemma was a case of "no-show syndrome" perpetuated by quite a few of the band members. It has been said that every other day Axl Rose had a new gripe and walked out a few times. Some of the other bandmates had problems with some of the mandates set down and boycotted the recording sessions. eventually and got down to some serious business.

Guns N' Roses had several complaints about the mixing done for the new albums. Bob Clearmountain band that lived in the slums of Holtried desperately to do his best as far as everyone in the group is concerned. Not good enough, though; of the 24 tracks that Clearmountain mixed for Use Your Illusion, not even one appears on the final cut. GNR found Bill Price and he seemed to be up to the group's task. Another problem that plagued the band is somewhat trivial, because every artist goes through it at one time or another. Guns N' Roses suffered from a bout of perfectionism.

Review

Every group wants their album to be the most perfect thing that their fans ever purchased. The GNR boys said they were happy with the way things sounded now, and to try and do anything more would be nit-

Releasing two full-length albums simultaneously is truly an unprecedented step in the annals of the music industry. Of course, the Gunners are used to taking unprecedented steps, in several ways. Whether it be for the "rape scene" on the first issued cover of Appetite for Destruction (GNR's first album. which sold an almost staggering 14 million copies), or for the somewhat racial lyrics in the song "One in a Million" from GN'R Lies (over 5 million sold), they are no strangers

A few other controversial acts that have been attributed to the band are: guitarist Slash (Saul Hudson) using the F-word twice on live national TV at the 1990 American Music Awards, vocalist W. Axl Rose (William Bailey) hitting his female neighbor over the head with a wine bottle and then writing a song about her, guitarist Izzy Stradlin (Jeff Isabell) being arrested for publicly urinating on an airplane's galley floor, along with several drunken bashes with ex-girlfriends and other bands (Vince Neil of Motley Crue challenged Rose to a boxing match on MTV recently).

There were high security precautions surrounding the release of Use Your Illusion. It was virtually impossible to get a copy to listen to before Tuesday, Sept. 17.

A few store chains such as Hasting's and Tower Records had listening parties Monday and started selling copies at midnight until 2 a.m. In those two hours, the twin LP's sold an estimated 500,000 copies nationwide. Sales by now are at almost 2.5 million. Not bad for a Use Your Illusion I opens with "Right Next Door to Hell. It's a love letter to Axl's neighbor who was supposedly hit in the head with a wine bottle by the star. She filed charges, but they were later dropped. There is also a message in the tune about how everyone's eyes are focused on rock stars and they get no privacy.

The next track, "Dust N' Bones," was written by Izzy Stradlin. He supplies most of the vocals, giving it a bluesy sound. You can hear Axl's characteristic wail in the background, though. It has a cool solo and part of the theme is: "Your life's your own, so do what you can because time catches up with all of us."

Next is a most triumphant remake of a classic song. In 1973 ex-Beatle Paul McCartney had a band called Wings that enjoyed moderate success. They put out a hit called "Live and Let Die," and now the Gunners have copied it and made a truly modern version that still retains some of the old flair. The fourth cut is the current radio single, "Don't Cry." The LP's have two different versions of this tune, even though the music is the same. It's a heartfelt song about love gone bad. Surprisingly enough, this song dates back to the demo tape that got the band signed to Geffen Records in the first place.

"Perfect Crimes" comes next and has a truly ripping solo by Slash. A lot of these songs prove that Slash has become more of an accomplished guitar player and soloist since the group's last outing. In GNR's down time, he refined his talents by guest-starring on albums by artists such as Iggy Pop, Bob Dylan, Alice Cooper and Lenny Kravitz (an old school chum).

The sixth track is an acoustic ballad entitled "You Ain't the First." The song says farewell to a bad lover. Izzy does most of the vocals. Some noticeable tambourine playing is done-by Tim Doyle.

The following song has a most outstanding harmonica introduction. "Bad Obsession" keeps a good beat and deserves to be a hit. Slash perproduces some awesome sounds.

In fact, out of the 30 tracks on Use Your Illusion I & II, 12 contain the dreaded F word. The parental advisory sticker on the tapes even says if people don't like the lyrics, they can "F Off" and go buy something from the New Age section!

GNR proves that there is no such thing as bad publicity. If people ignore the profanity and concentrate on the music, they will be satisfied rather than shocked.

Izzy Stradlin also wrote and vocalized on "Double Talkin' Jive."

"November Rain" is a piano-like Elton John tune. Axl credits John as being a serious influence. Great synthesizing, wailing guitar and keyboard orchestrating are combined to produce a cut that has serious hit potential. The group does a choirlike thing towards the end of the

The Garden" has some masterful slide and acoustic guitar playing by Slash. It also has a surprising guest vocalist - Alice Cooper. Everyone says a little collaboration is good for the soul. Alice has more lyrics than Axl does. Coincidentally, GNR is the only band Alice has let jam with him on stage besides his own. The two superpowers teamed up to do a modern rendition of a lot of people who have taken pot-Cooper's classic "Under My shots at the band. It denounces Wheels."

Use Your Illusion has a different variety of songs during its 2 1/2 hour span. It has mellow ballads, bluesy tunes, slamming rock and roll, and something else. "Garden of Eden" is a thrash-like number that is definitely high energy. The song is 2:36 long, but it has as many words as a six- or seven-minute song. The most memorable lyrics are: "This fire is burnin' and it's out of control/It's not a problem you can stop it's rock and roll.' 'Don't Damn Me" has some awesome guitar. There's a message here sent to all of the people Guns N' Roses have offended. Axl just spoke his mind and never pretended live in their delusions and don't sive sound. want to hear the truth about life. Everyone is an individual with their own sense of perception.

The next two songs are equally energetic. "Bad Apples" has some great riffs and a memorable melody. 'Dead Horse" has an excellent acoustic intro and exit performed by Axl Rose himself.

The last song on Use Your Illusion I has a guitar and bass intro that sounds like the beginning of Metallica's current single, "Enter Sandman." "Coma" is a 10 1/2 minute one can find you and none of life's forms on slide guitar during the tune exemplified by Matt Sorum making also contains an excellent solo. and that, mixed with the harmonica, his bass drum sound like a fluctuat-

It is extremely on several of the songs. This one

The third song, "Yesterday," starts out with a cool riff and some heavy bass drums. It's a pleasant tune that says you can't spend too much time reflecting on memories because today is more important.

Next is another classic cover tune which has been recorded probably more than any other song. Knockin' on Heaven's Door" is Bob Dylan's ode to the death of Billy the Kid. Guns N' Roses first recorded the song for the Days of Thunder soundtrack, and it became a hit. It is recorded a little bit differ-

The succeeding song is one of the most controversial of the 30 tracks on the two albums. "Get in the Ring" is Axl's revenge song for everything from fake blondes and yeast infections to implants and collagen lip projections. It's recorded live, and the music is great.

It also names names like Andy Secher at Hit Parader, Mick Wall at Kerrang and Bob Guccione Jr. at Spin magazine. One might expect the Gunners to have a song on their next album entitled "Just Another

"Shotgun Blues" is a fast-paced track that sounds almost like it was recorded or meant for somewhere besides a studio. You've heard of garage bands or garage-jam practice sessions, right? This sounds like a garage band song. It is good enough to be on an album, though. It just to be anything he wasn't. People has that thrown together yet cohe-

An excellent banjo intro is accompanied by powerful lyrics on "Breakdown." The piano at the beginning is semi-reminiscent of the Rolling Stones' "Let's Spend the Night Together." The tune starts mellow but suddenly kicks it. The piano helps make it memorable. At the end is a quote from the film Vanishing Point.

The Indian string instrument known as a sitar heralds the beginning of "Pretty Tied Up." The next song was featured in the movie Terminator 2. "You Could Be Mine" is definitely a powerful track and was released a few months before the LP's, as like an advance preview. The single on its own sold almost 2 million copies.

The alternative version of "Don't Cry" follows. The lyrics are totally different, but it's still a love song. Both songs have the same chorus and are both 4:42.

The last cut on Use Your Illusion II is "My World." It's only a minute and a half long, and it sounds like Axl Rose's self-performed version of his reality. The end of the cut catches him in a sexual frenzy.

Appetite for Destruction was just groundwork for the band, and now they are trying to build on that and make a statement to compete with rock legends. Some of the legends they have opened for are Aerosmith, Iron Maiden and the Rolling Stones.

Guns N' Roses hit the road before the albums came out, taking a big chance with fans not knowing new material. Their first-ever headlining tour opened at the Alpine Valley Music Theatre in East Troy, Wisconsin. Fans were treated to a preview before that as the band performed three "open rehearsal" shows at the Warfield Theater in San Francisco, the Pantages Theater in Hollywood and at the Ritz in New York.

Ever since GNR started touring, things have been running true to form. In Rose's home state of Indiana, the band was fined $5,000 for breaking a county curfew on May 28 that said all public performances had to be finished by 10:30 p.m.

On July 2 in St. Louis there was a riot at a concert because of a biker with a camera. The band quit playing and the result was 16 arrests, 60 injuries, $200,000 in damages and the loss of most of the group's equipment.

To see the band in concert is truly a marvel. They perform like a well-oiled machine. Robert Hilburn of the L.A. Times calls Axl Rose "the most compelling and combustible American hard rocker since Jim Morrison." The way he snakes around on stage is impressive. Everyone should get a chance to see them because the tour is scheduled

People do still wonder: It took them three years to put this out how long is it going to take for another one? Don't worry, fans; Guns N' Roses is already at work on an EP of punk cover tunes.

The fans will continue to watch and listen as the saga of the most popular rock band unfolds. Some people ask, "What's the point? Why do they bring all of this negative attention upon themselves?"

Rose answered the question best himself at a recent concert in Dallas. "Guns N' Roses is just a prime fing example of freedom of House budget office influence over the first wave of rules for enforcing the new food labeling law.

"I think they (the rules) are fully in the spirit of the law that was passed last year," said Dr. David Kessler.

Kessler was grilled by members of the Senate Governmental Affairs ad hoc subcommittee on consumer affairs about allegations of undue pressure by the White House Office of Management and Budget to shape the rules in favor of business at the expense of consumers.

Kessler said he was concerned about meeting the law's deadlines for getting proposals to the public for comment. He said he didn't consider the changes suggested by OMB to be that significant, but that they could be changed.

The Nutrition Labeling and Education Act was passed by Congress to require food manufacturers and retailers to give the public more information about the food they sell.

This means thousands of food items will be held to specific labeling and nutrition information standards. The FDA has until Nov. 8 to come up with rules explaining to industry exactly what it has to do to comply with the law.

The process involves consultation with OMB to make sure the benefits of the C-50 rules outweigh the cost of implementation. The proposals are then published in the Federal Register so the general public can comment. often leading to revision.

Earlier last week, a consumer advocacy group said drafts of the first set of rules show there was some weakening of standards after OMB reviewed them.

Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn., called FDA the 'cop on the beat" of the new labeling law. "We don't want a situation where OMB is taking away your nightstick," he said.

Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., asked Kessler to supply memoranda of all meetings and conversations that involved negotiations over the rules between the time they were drafted by FDA and published in the Federal Register for the public to see.

The chairman of the House Government Operations Committee has asked for the same information.

continues into sales of poison

DENVER (AP) - A three-state federal investigation into the sale of poisons to kill predators continues, although no arrests have been made, Colorado state wildlife officials say.

On Sept. 5, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and Environmental Protection Agency investigators raided the Wyoming Department of Agriculture's Predator Control Lab in Cheyenne after alleging state predator control officer Randy Graham was selling illegal poisons to sheep ranchers in Colorado, Texas and Wyoming.

"The federal investigation is continuing, and we're waiting for them to tell us if they've found a link between our poisonings and the others," said state Division of Wildlife spokesman Bill Haggerty.

No arrests have been made, but affidavits filed to obtain the courtissued search warrants indicate Graham is suspected of selling Compound 1080 and other banned or restricted chemicals to ranchers to poison predators.

The same day as the raid on the Cheyenne facility, officers also raided Humane Coyote Getters Inc. in Pueblo and Richard Strom's ranch near Laramie.

The raids netted enough illegal poisons to make an estimated 10 million fatal doses of Compound 1080, strychnine and Temick (a trade name for the pesticide aldicarb), said Fish and Wildlife Service regional director Galen Buterbaugh.

The investigation began last year with an undercover sting operation involving a dummy predator-control company in Laramie that targeted ranchers suspected of using illegal poisons.

The focus has been on 15 Wyoming ranches, five northwestern Colorado ranches and three ranchers near Vernal, Utah.

Terry Grosz, regional chief of law enforcement for the Fish and Wildlife Service, said, "all I can say is most of our interviews have been completed, and we're in the process of examining the documents and evidence we've seized."

Last September, Colorado wildlife officers found five bears dead within 150 yards of a lamb carcass laced with aldicarb in the White River National Forest.

Sandia's request and the subsequent proposal to change the law have aroused public outcry from Albuquerque residents and several communities downstream - including El Paso, Texas - who use water from the river. Environmentalists and some health care workers contend long-term effects of exposure to nuclear waste are unknown.

Opponents say they have gathered more than 6,000 signatures on a petition opposing the proposal, which goes before the Albuquerque City Council in October.

> Isleta Pueblo, a taxpayers' association for the Middle Rio Grande Conservancy District and an Albuquerque South Valley neighborhood association also oppose the plan.

A group of El Paso residents, including the mayor, also has opposed changing the ordinance. About a third of El Paso's drinking water comes from the Rio Grande.

"I don't care how clean or safe they say it is," says Mike Riley, special projects coordinator for the Elephant Butte Irrigation District in Las Cruces, which also is against the

"With the DOE's past safety record, issues like this need a lot more consideration," Riley says.

Farmers along the Rio Grande in southern New Mexico worry that the wastewater could endanger river water they spray on their crops.

"That's our sole source of water down here," says farmer John Salopek of Las Cruces, president of the EBID. "We're opposed to anyone dumping anything in the river that would effect people anywhere."

Cheney says it would cost about $1 million to solidify the water with cement and haul it to a permanent nuclear dump. He says he's not sure how much it would cost to dump the water into the sewer, but it would be cheaper than other methods.

People on all sides of the issue view the 50,000-gallon discharge as just a piece of a bigger issue.

Sandia wants the ordinance changed so it can dump more waste in the future, including wastewater from the Inhalation Toxicology Research Institute, another DOE facility on Kirtland Air Force Base.

"This 50,000 gallons, in itself, is but a part of the total picture," Cheney says. "There is an ongoing need to be able to dispose of water with trace amounts or potentially trace amounts of radioactive materi-

Opponents say the amendment would open the door for future dumping during a time when the effects of exposure to radioactivity aren't completely known.
