Churches prepare to sponsor alternative Halloween events

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Several area churches are sponsoring alternative activities for children on October 31 in the hopes they will forego Halloween while not having to pass up on fun and goodies.

The Salvation Army, 701 S. Cuyler, is sponsoring a "Fun in the Son" carnival, 6-8 p.m. Thursday.

Lt. Ernest Lozano said all games and events will be based on the Bible instead of the regular Halloween associations, which are drawn largely from the occult and paganism.

He said events will include a "wandering in the wilderness" cake walk, numbering of the Israelites by guessing the number of jelly beans in a jar and a Walls of Jericho ball toss, along with many more activities.

Lozano said several prizes donated by local businesses will be offered during the evening. They include a $25 dinner for two at a local restaurant, a $20 gift certificate from a pharmacy and other items.

Three churches, First Assembly of God Pampa, Faith Christian Center and First Assembly Skellytown, are teaming up this year for a Fall Festival, 6-8 p.m., at First Assembly Pampa's Family Life Center, Cuyler and Hwy. 60.

Pastor Charles Shugart of First Assembly Pampa said the three churches want young people to have the opportunity to get candy and play games, but in an atmosphere that does not glorify witches, vampires, ghosts and other entities associated with death, blood and the occult.

"We want to remind children that satanic influences are very real and very damaging, but want to also provide an opportunity to have fun and enjoy life in a good, clean way," Shugart said.

In addition to nearly 20 activity booths, Shugart said there would be a costume contest encouraging children, teenagers and adults to dress as their favorite hero from the Bible.

A hot dog and chili supper will begin at 5:30 for those attending the Fall Festival, with food priced on a

According to PHS counselor Barbara Evans who is coordinator for Teens Needing Teens (TNT), ribbons were exchanged as symbol of unified and visible commitment toward building a drug-free Texas.

Red balloons were distributed to game attendees and released as the crowd shouted, "High on life ... not on drugs." Evans explained that the balloon release was an effort to show unification throughout Texas in the fight against drugs.

Following the exchange of ribbons and balloon release, TNT members Christie Jones and Amy Rains presented Pampa Mayor Richard Peet with a scroll signed by PHS students stating they are drug-free. Pampa High School students and staff signed the scroll as way of telling city officials that they want and support a drug-free Texas, according to Evans.

The week's activities ended with a drug-free dance. Red Ribbon Week was sponsored Oct. 18-25 at Pampa High School by TNT, a positive peer support group.

suggested donation basis.

Zion Lutheran, 1200 Duncan, will host their annual All Saints Party from 6-8 p.m. in the church's parish hall.

Shelda Winton, youth director, said, "It's much more appealing for Christians to remember and celebrate the fact that Jesus has made us His saints, His holy people, than to play Satan's games."

In addition to candy and refreshments, a Bible Adventure Land tour will be conducted and there will be a movie.

Nathan Hopson, pastor of Highland Pentecostal, located at Banks and 18th, said his congregation is sponsoring a Hallelujah Family Night on the 31st, 7-9 p.m.

"We're offering an alternative to Halloween, being that Halloween dates back to a celebration of the dead by the Druids," Hopson said. "We want to celebrate life instead of death. Our women's ministry is planning it and the community is welcome to come."

Most of the churches specifically requested that those attending not wear ghoulish masks or costumes.

Faulkner did not profit from the alleged scheme, officials said.

Paul Scott Daugherty, a former vice president and director of First State Bank of Miami, was sentenced to three years in prison, a five-year probation term and ordered to pay a smaller amount of restitution.

Daugherty, 48, who is not named in the Faulkner indictment, had pleaded guilty to two counts of misapplication and embezzlement stemming from his service as vice president and a director of the bank.

The offenses took place in 1987, according to court documents.

The bank alleged that Fatheree caused it to lose almost $2.2 million and that Daugherty caused the bank to lose more than $280,000.

Diplomats ready final details for Middle East peace talks

By RUTH SINAI
Associated Press Writer

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Diplomats and security officials scrambled Saturday to sort out a host of delicate details to smooth the way for this week's historic Arab-Israeli peace conference. Jordan and Lebanon announced their delegations.

Israeli officials, meanwhile, conceded that they had resigned themselves to Arab demands to stay in the Spanish capital following Wednesday's opening of the conference for direct talks with their Arab neighbors. Israel had wanted a Middle East venue for the followup talks.

The ceremonial opening Wednesday is to be followed by three sets of direct talks — between Israel and Syria, Israel and Lebanon and Israel and a joint Jordanian-Palestinian delegation. The talks will probably begin Nov. 3, said an official who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

They will likely focus on procedural matters to set the framework for later rounds of negotiations, he said.

Meanwhile, Palestinian leaders continued to make conciliatory statements accompanied by references to Israel's tough stance ahead of the talks. Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, who decided to lead the Israeli delegation, has steadfastly said he would not trade land for peace.

"I know that there will be many obstacle and provocations," PLO

Chairman Yasser Arafat told CNN television in an interview Saturday evening. "But we have assured from the beginning that we will facilitate all this peace process."

However, when asked whether the Palestinians could negotiate with Shamir, Arafat said: "We have to deal with any person who will be sent by the Israelis."

Arafat also said that if the talks fail, there will be "complete confusion" in the region "because the slogans of the fanatical groups will be in the upper hand."

Syrian President Hafez Assad, also interviewed by CNN, said the conference's success depends on whether Israel accepts the principle of trading land for peace, contained in U.N. resolutions 242 and 338: "The road to peace is that of the resolutions."

Organizers of the conference, sponsored by the United States and the Soviet Union, were meeting through the weekend to work out everything from security to protocol arrangements.

Reflecting the jockeying for maximum advantage in advance of the talks, Jordan announced that its 14-member delegation includes two men who once lived in Jerusalem. The Jordanians will form a joint delegation with 14 Palestinian activists from the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

The Palestine Liberation Organization had wanted residents of east Jerusalem to be included in the Palestinian delegation, but Israel ruled that out to prevent any appearance that its sovereignty over the city is negotiable.

King Hussein announced the list, which was carried by the official Petra news agency.

Jordan's foreign minister, Kamel Abu Jaber, will head the joint delegation, which includes Walid Khalidi, a Harvard University professor and Jerusalem native who is an expert on Palestinian affairs. The list also includes former Trade Minister Anwar Khatib, who was governor of Jerusalem for more than two decades.

His role was not immediately clear, since Petra listed him as an adviser to the delegation but said he would attend the talks.

Lebanon also picked its eight-member delegation, government sources in Beirut said. It includes Foreign Minister Fares Bweiz, three ministry officials and four current and past ambassadors.

In the Middle East, passions ran high on both sides in the final days before the talks.

Tens of thousands of Israelis jammed downtown Tel Aviv's Kings of Israel Square, calling on the government to agree to a territorial compromise and a freeze on settlement activity.

In Nablus, the largest Arab town in the occupied West Bank, graffiti called for a general strike Wednesday and a Palestinian boycott of the conference.

As many as 10,000 people are expected to arrive in Madrid by Tuesday, when President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev will hold a mini-summit at the Soviet Embassy.

Turner welcomed home to Idaho

By DAN GALLAGHER
Associated Press Writer

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Jesse Turner, the university professor who spent 4 1/2 years as a hostage in Lebanon, returned to his hometown a hero, arriving by limousine to the cheers of thousands who waited hours in the cold to greet him.

"It's cold," Turner told the crowd late Friday as he made his first public statement since returning to the United States. "So, all I want to say is thank you. Thanks for everything."

Gov. Cecil Andrus proclaimed Saturday Jesse "Jon" Turner Day to honor the 44-year-old mathematics professor freed Tuesday by his Shiite Moslem captors in Lebanon. Turner had taught at the American University in Beirut when he was taken hostage.

He stood with his Lebanese-born wife, Badr, and their 4-year-old daughter, Joanne, atop the Capitol steps, on a platform festooned with yellow ribbons and red-white-and-blue bunting.

When reporters asked how he felt, he just shrugged and smiled.

He and his family members were whisked to the celebration in a stretch limousine after they arrived at the airport in Boise shortly after 11 p.m. Friday.

"Boise, Idaho, your son, Jon Turner, is home," said Mayor Dirk Kempthorne.

"We deeply regret your kidnapping, your incarceration by the terrorists," Andrus said. "But we're very proud of the dignity you displayed."

Earlier in the day, Turner and his family landed at O'Hare International Airport on a flight from Frankfurt, Germany.

"He smoked a pack of cigarettes, drank a couple beers and ate a bunch of food," said Ray Hipp, who sat in front of the Turners during the flight.

Hipp said that during the flight he told Turner, "Welcome to America," and that Turner did not respond. "He was very quiet," said Hipp, of Chicago.

Because Turner had requested privacy, he and his family were taken from the United Airlines flight to an undisclosed location to await their evening flight home to Boise, spokesman Joe Hopkins said.

Hours later, the Turners boarded the United flight to Boise. They were driven to the plane in a van, while reporters were kept inside the terminal.

"The community is anxious to give a heartfelt welcome home," Boise spokesman Brian Whitlock said before Turner and his family arrived.

Turner grew up in Boise, where his mother and stepfather still live. He attended Boise High School and Boise State University.

For his welcome home, the state Capitol was transformed into a huge reception area, which rang with music and church bells and flashed in the light of fireworks.

After Turner was freed Tuesday, he was taken to the U.S. Air Force hospital in Wiesbaden, Germany, for a round of medical tests and State Department debriefings before returning to the United States.

Turner clocks back; it's standard time

WASHINGTON (AP) — Did you set your clock back last night?

That's right, America falls back to standard time Sunday, with clocks set back an hour.

The good news — that extra hour of sleep the change made available.

The bad news — it'll be dark earlier in the evenings now. An hour of sunlight has been moved to the morning.

Daylight Saving Time will be back next April.

Infection control important for hospitals

"An effective infection control program can reduce infection rates by one-third, so we consider the program an important function at our hospital," said Robert Jones, director of nursing at Coronado Hospital.

Oct. 21-27 has been proclaimed Infection Control Week by Gov. Ann Richards with a theme of "Lather Up - And Fight Germs!"

Jones said that Kenda Maddox, RN, who is the wellness coordinator at Coronado Hospital, supervises the infection control program at Coronado Hospital.

"The object of the infection control program is to contain any infection that is identified or hidden to be sure it is not spread from patient to patient," Maddox said.

She said the theme "Lather Up" refers to the best method of preventing the spread of infection. "Hand-washing is still the easiest, smartest thing anyone can do to see that infections are not spread, whether at the hospital or at home. We teach our employees a very thorough technique to use when washing their hands, but everyone could help prevent the spread of infections by simply lathering up," she said.

She explained that she uses several methods to identify and follow any infections at the hospital. Each nursing unit keeps daily infection sheets that note any patient who runs fever, is in isolation, or has a drainage of an open wound. Maddox checks the charts of those patients to determine how the infection was acquired, if possible. Most infections are classified as "community acquired," meaning that the patient came in to the hospital with the infection.

She keeps statistics on the total number and type of infections and compares that to national standards to highlight any type of local problem.

Teaching employees to observe "universal precautions" standards is one of her jobs. She explained that "universal precautions" refers to the procedures an employee should follow when dealing with all patients. "That certainly includes proper hand-washing before and after working with a patient. With some patients, that may mean wearing gloves, masks, face shields, gowns ... a variety of things to protect the patients and the employee and to prevent the spread of infection," she said.

Maddox has been at Coronado Hospital since 1989. Until June of this year, she was a nurse on the obstetrics unit.

Sunday voting set for first floor of county courthouse

The Gray County Clerk's Office has set up an area in the first floor lobby of the county courthouse for residents to take advantage of early voting today from 11:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., said County Clerk Wanda Carter.

Carter said the first floor voting will allow residents to walk in without having to climb stairs to the second floor county clerk's office.

Any registered Gray County voter can vote early. Carter said today will be the only Sunday that her office will be open for voting prior to the Nov. 5 election.

The clerk's office is also open from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays for early voting, which continues through Nov. 1. Those who want to vote early during the weekday can go to the second floor office in the south end of the Gray County Courthouse.

There are 13 constitutional amendments on the ballot, including the lottery issue.

Also, voters in Alanreed, McLean and Lefors independent school districts can vote early today or in the clerk's office weekdays on a ballot for consolidation of the three school districts into the North Fork Consolidated Independent School District.

Polls will be open for 12 hours on Nov. 5 for those who do not vote early.

Coronado Hospital employees join in United Way drive

Coronado Hospital employees are joining the rest of Pampa in supporting the United Way, according to Al Chapa, assistant administrator who heads the campaign at the hospital.

"Our employees contributions to the United Way doubled from 1987 to 1989. Our goal is to increase last year's donation during this campaign," Chapa said.

The hospital is offering both incentives and education to encourage employees to give. Employees are given time away from their jobs to attend United Way film presentations. More than 20 sessions have been planned to give every employee an opportunity to attend and learn more about the 16 local United Way agencies who benefit from the drive.

Each employee who attends the presentation, each employee who contributes any amount, and those who contribute their "fair share" (one hour's pay per month) will be eligible for a special drawing.

The drawings are scheduled for noon, Oct. 31, in the hospital's cafeteria.

Also, each hospital department that has over 50 percent of their employees as "fair-share" givers will be recognized Oct. 31 with a special plaque to be displayed in the Hospital's "Hall of Fame" in the main lobby.

"We encourage our employees to participate, but we feel that each person's decision is a personal one. Coronado Hospital's main objective in participating in this excellent cause is to show our support in helping meet the health and physical care needs of our local community," Chapa said.

HyperTime - it's not a Happy Time

If you wanted to create a perfectly bizarre story for The Twilight Zone, it might go something like this ...

Time: the near future. Place: very much like your city. Situation: Technology has caused meals to take 30 minutes or less; cars have never-before-imagined speed and efficiency; computers allow people to do much of their work in their own den.

Yet, and this is the weird twist, even though people are always saving time on this or that, they have less of it than ever before.

There is no time for family, church or friends. It's work, work, work. But much of that work time is spent in seminars on increasing productivity.

The people in this demented TV show are always spewing lines like, "If we only had a 32-hour day, I might get something done!" But they make their comments while eating a baked potato that took only five minutes to prepare and fast-forwarding through a two-hour movie in 55 minutes.

Sounds like some Orwellian nightmare, right? It also sounds like the U.S. of A. in 1991.

In this month's Smithsonian, Bruce Watson blames the whole situation on something called HyperTime. Though his essay features plenty of hyperbole, it is true that our 24-hour days seem to be getting condensed into about 18 hours.

Steve Martin, in the incredibly authentic Parent-hood, screams that his life is filled with "have to's" that have removed any time for doing the "want to's," like spending time with the kids.

To what may be attributed HyperTime? Why are we living in an age of incredible time savings and yet we are always late?

The answer may lie in something that, on the surface, has no direct connection.

No longer are married folks climbing up the corporate ladder next to other married people who, like us, have two kids and a dog and a mortgage. That went out with Leave It to Beaver and The Lawrence Welk Show.

Nowadays, the guy (or gal) we're likely to be pitted against when promotion time comes is often single.

"What difference does that make?" you ask. For starters, it's a lot easier to be married to your job if you're not also married to a person.

Unless, of course, you are divorced or widowed and trying to support a family and keep the ties that bind from unthreading. Then the job is much harder than for those in a traditional family.

No, I'm talking about those who never married or at least don't have any kids as a result of a previous marriage.

Spending 20 hours on that razzle-dazzle presentation is pretty simple when you aren't trying to squeeze it between soccer practice, gym classes, baking cookies for the Fall Festival, helping whittle a Pinewood Derby car and a trip to the orthodontist.

People who choose single-ness aren't the villain of this story. This is America and that's their choice.

But, when a quarter to half of the work force in the United States can turn their eight-hour day into 14 because they don't have a spouse and kids waiting at home with supper getting cold and homework to be helped with and a basketball stuck on the roof and weekend plans to discuss, supervisors and managers can't help but be impressed.

Ever notice that the desire for more, more, more by employers over the last two decades roughly matches the spiraling number of people choosing to remain single.

And that makes it tough on those who don't.

In all fairness, some of those single people's marriage to their job is of the shotgun variety, with employers saying, "Give the project to Jones, he doesn't have a family or (they assume) a life. Let him do it."

Knowing this doesn't solve anything, but it does make coping with it easier. Some choose to be single and they may get a little further professionally because of it. That's all there is to it.

That helps it to not be taken so personally when promotions are missed and opportunities seem to fly by.

Should those with a spouse and kids try and compete with those married to their jobs? If we do, it can be at the expense of our families.

Quite frankly, no promotion or amount of money in the world is worth that.

Indiana residents dancing to the Time Zone Shuffle

By THOMAS P. WYMAN
Associated Press Writer

KNOX, Ind. (AP) — The last Sunday in October is here, which can only mean one thing: It's time for Indiana to do the "Time Zone Shuffle."

On Sunday most of the nation went through its annual ritual of setting clocks back an hour as the United States reverts from Daylight Saving Time to standard time.

For Indiana the switch should be easy; it's one of three states that observe year-round standard time.

But here's where it gets complicated: Eleven counties — six in the northwest corner of the state and five in the southwest — set their clocks to Central time, while the rest of the state is on Eastern time.

What's more, those 11 counties refuse to follow the rest of the state in staying on standard time and switch each spring to Daylight Saving Time. That means that in the fall, when they switch back to Central Standard Time, they are an hour ahead of the rest of the state, which has stayed on Eastern Standard.

The reasons for the split are complex and have to do with long-standing attitudes by people in certain areas about what time zone they want to live in. Business folks, for instance, initially wanted to stay on Eastern time because they often traveled to neighboring states that were on Eastern time. Farmers preferred Central time.

Some people also liked the idea of Daylight Saving Time and some didn't.

"A lot of people can't remember what's the difference, or why you go to daylight time," says Ed O'Hara, a spokesman for the U.S. Department of Transportation, the keeper of the nation's time zones. "All they want to know is, 'What time is it?'"

People in Indiana quickly learn that most of their state is on Eastern time in the winter, when every state observes standard time, but is an hour behind in the summer when they don't set their clocks ahead and the other Eastern states do.

The exceptions are those 11 daylight-saving counties in the Central time zone that run an hour behind the rest of the state in winter but are even with it in summer.

Clear? "It's sort of complicated," O'Hara conceded.

But don't worry, on Sunday things will become even more confusing.

Residents in Starke County, a rural area in northern Indiana, have changed their mind about changing the time. In a referendum last year, voters approved a proposal to join the state's 81 counties that don't follow daylight-saving time.

Starke County timepieces, once on Central time, are moving to year-round Eastern Standard Time.

"There has to be a line someplace," said Ray Short, a local contractor and county commissioner. "I wouldn't say that it's been a hot debate, but some people can get warm over it."

Opinion

President needs pro-growth plan

With the economy still showing signs of recession, President Bush is vulnerable to Democratic claims that he has neglected the home front while focusing his energies on problems abroad. To get the economy moving again, Bush needs to articulate a pro-growth agenda that provides incentives to boost investment, savings and productivity, while reducing the drag of burdensome taxes and unnecessary government regulations.

A comprehensive economic game plan should include:
Budget reform. The federal budget deficit continues to loom as a growing threat to America's economic health. Structural changes in the budget process are needed to bring annual spending increases under control. If Congress had been willing to live with only 4 percent annual growth in spending since 1983, the budget would be running a surplus and the national debt would be one-third of its present size. The need for fiscal restraint in Washington is greater than ever.

Tax cuts. High U.S. tax rates on capital gains raise the cost of capital for businesses, discourage investment and hamper economic growth. Lowering the maximum rate from 28 percent to 15 percent, as a bill in Congress proposes, would give business formation and job creation a much-needed boost. Contrary to charges that a capital gains tax cut would favor the rich, the main beneficiaries would be middle-class Americans, who would prosper from the growth in jobs.

Savings incentives. Americans put aside only 4 cents of every dollar as savings. That compares with 16 cents in Japan and 13 cents in Germany. This has helped deprive the U.S. economy of low-cost capital needed to finance investment. Extending tax-deductible individual retirement accounts to all workers once again would encourage individuals to save more of their incomes and at the same time spur business growth.

Unneeded regulations. The U.S. Chamber of Commerce is rightly calling for an assessment of how government regulations on industry negatively affect American economic competitiveness. Jobs and productivity must be weighed against the benefits of regulation.

Enterprise zones. One of the most potent weapons against economic decay are enterprise zones. In such zones, business investment is encouraged by offering special tax breaks, and reducing government regulations. Enterprise zones have helped revitalize blighted areas. Yet Congress resists enacting federal enterprise zones that could make the biggest difference. Housing Secretary Jack Kemp's proposal to help the poor purchase public federal housing projects also would fight urban blight.

Tax relief for families. Social problems that have spawned billions of dollars in government remedial programs stem in large part from the breakdown of the American family. At present, taxes consume one-third of the average family's income. Tax breaks, such as raising the personal exemption for dependent children, would promote family cohesion and lift many working poor families above the poverty level.

Not surprisingly, Democratic leaders on Capitol Hill and on the presidential campaign trail are hammering Bush on the sagging economy. Although the White House has proposed many elements of a pro-growth strategy, most of its agenda has languished in Congress. Bush can strengthen the economy and his own political standing by devoting a much more vigorous effort to promoting a comprehensive pro-growth agenda.

Children need some discipline

If you're over 40, it's a good bet that you grew up without a television, maybe not even a telephone in the house, and surely not a car of your very own when you were 17. When most of us were kids, our families were poor or just barely making it.

We're all tempted to give our kids lectures on what they have compared to what we had when we were their age. In fact, we are so caught up in an effort to give our children what our parents couldn't give us that we deprive them of what our parents did give us.

How about homework and other school-related activities? My mother didn't graduate from high school, but she knew that weekdays meant doing homework and getting the proper rest to be alert the next day. It also meant, after a hard day of domestic work, she had to check the homework and raise the appropriate amount of hell, mostly with me, when necessary.

Respect for teachers and adults was taken for granted. We were taught to address adults properly, never on a first-name or nickname basis. Even at the highest stage of fantasy, no kid would even think of cursing, much less assaulting a teacher. Today, teacher disrespect is routine in many schools.

Teenagers have always had copious amounts of puppy lust, but they weren't bedding down at today's rate. It just wasn't sanctioned. The accepted norm was simply abstaining from sex until at least serious dating, engagement or marriage, but by no means on the first or second date. With that norm, illegitimacy and venereal diseases were nowhere near the problems they are today.

Today's response to teenage sex drive, and its results, are: school-based sex clinics, teen abortions, school condom distribution, and if all else fails, school day-care centers and welfare.

On measures of self-esteem, compared to most other industrial nations, American students rank quite high. However, so far as academic performance, our youth rank among the lowest. That's because self-esteem, instead of self-discipline, has become part of our educational creed. Teachers, parents and, later, employers accept mediocre performance so as not to injure precious egos.

I wonder how many of today's teachers would have done as Mrs. Viola Meekins, my junior high English teacher — tear up a five-page composition paper with the instruction, "This is a disgrace; you could at least have the spelling and punctuation correct; rewrite it!" That might be "cruel," but coupled with home discipline, it breaks the habit of sloppiness.

Children are precious not only to parents but to the future of our nation. Our children are not materially poor; however, they are spiritually impoverished. They've been led to believe that life's disappointments and challenges are violations of human rights; gratification is never to be postponed; ethics and values depend on the person and the situation; and honesty and morality are only for chumps. Not all youngsters have this vision of the world, but enough have it so that the future of our country stands in jeopardy.

Despite the magnitude of the problem, it is not time to give up. There's nothing wrong with parents and teachers making this fall a new beginning.

We need to restore old values of respect, self-discipline and dedication to excellence. We should give our complete support to those among us who already have the courage to resist modern half-baked ideas and trends. We need to get the "experts" out of our lives, take back our responsibilities as parents and teachers and give our children the valuable intangibles our parents gave us.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, Oct. 27, the 300th day of 1991. There are 65 days left in the year. A reminder: Daylight Saving Time ended at 2 a.m. Clocks should have been turned back one hour.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Oct. 27, 1787, the first of the Federalist Papers, a series of essays calling for ratification of the U.S. Constitution, was published in a New York newspaper. The essays, written anonymously by Alexander Hamilton, James Madison and John Jay, argued in favor of a strong national government.

On this date:
In 1795, the United States and Spain signed the Treaty of San Lorenzo, which provided for free navigation of the Mississippi River.
In 1858, the 26th president of the United States, Theodore Roosevelt, was born in New York City.

In 1886, the musical fantasy A Night on Bald Mountain, written by Modest Mussorgsky in 1867 and revised after his death by Nikolai Rimsky-Korsakov, was performed in St. Petersburg, Russia.

In 1904, the first rapid transit subway, the IRT, opened in New York City.

Who is Ted Kennedy to judge?

I didn't see every minute of the Senate Judiciary Committee's surgery on Clarence Thomas, which was performed with a broken Budweiser bottle. I had to leave the television on occasion to throw up.

What made me the sickest was having to sit there and watch Teddy Kennedy. It was an affront to Clarence Thomas that he was within 500 miles of that room.

I don't know if Clarence Thomas is guilty of sexual harassment or not. But I do know allowing Teddy Kennedy to have any part of those proceedings was an insult to the judge and to whatever sense of fairness remains in our government.

Talk about skeletons in the closet. Kennedy's got more than the Harvard medical school.

I must say I enjoyed his squirming up there, however. He reminded me of an unprepared student sitting in class, praying to himself, "Please don't call on me. Please don't call on me."

My favorite moment was Sunday when he got into it with Strom Thurmond, the old swamp fox from South Carolina.

Chairman Joe Biden, the noted plagiarist, had left his chair as one of Judge Thomas's former female employees had begun an impassioned defense of him.

She was in the middle of describing the senators as "thugs" when Teddy interrupted her and said she had used up her time.

Old Strom appeared to be about ready to pull out the few hairs that remain on his head.

"That other crowd (Anita Hill's witnesses) had all day!" he bellowed in that deep drawl, telling Kennedy, in so many words to shut up and let the lady talk.

Just then, Chairman Biden came back in, took note of the disagreement, ignored Kennedy, and said to the former Thomas employee, "Please continue."

Kennedy shut up and let the lady talk.

Ted Kennedy is either dumber than I thought he was or he is totally without conscience.

When all this mess began, why didn't he say to somebody, "Look, in light of my problems in the past, why don't I take a long trip while you guys sort this out?"

The only people who know the truth about Thomas and Hill are Thomas and Hill and neither one has blinked.

But it is a galling process to watch those who are not without sin sit in judgment. From whom on the Senate panel would you dare buy a used car?

I don't want to be questioned about stealing chickens by a fox.

What I would like to see, though, is Ted Kennedy on the hot seat, just for once. I'd like to see him grilled about Chappaquiddick as Judge Thomas has been grilled about allegedly sexually harassing Anita Hill 10 years ago. At least Anita Hill is alive to tell her side of the story.

Judge Thomas, did you mention penis and breast sizes to Anita Hill? Did you tell her of your sexual prowess? Did you tell her the nickname of your sex organ?

Senator Kennedy, what really happened at Chappaquiddick?

Do you have a serious drinking problem? Do you know more about the alleged rape at your vacation home than you have told us? Isn't it true you're just one big party animal?

Do you still beat your wife, yes or no?

I don't care if Clarence Thomas stood in his office butt-naked and read Anita Hill this month's letters to Penthouse. He's still a better man than Ted Kennedy.

Congressmen can't balance budgets

It's no wonder Congress can't balance the nation's budget. Most congressmen can't even balance their checkbooks.

In the first six months of this year, members of the U.S. House of Representatives bounced 4,325 personal checks written on their taxpayer-subsidized House bank accounts, according to a recent report by the U.S. General Accounting Office (GAO). That's well ahead of their 1990 pace, when they bounced 8,331 checks — an average of nearly 20 bad checks per member.

We're not talking about the odd penny here. Five hundred checks of more than $1,000 each were bounced by 134 different congressmen. According to the GAO, some of the rubber checks were in excess of $10,000.

Anyone can make a mistake and bounce a check or two. But there are only two possible reasons for bouncing 20 a year: stupidity or a lack of concern.

I vote for the latter. Members of Congress write these bad checks because they know they can get away with it.

If you or I overdraw our accounts, our bank presents us with a hefty fine. If we continue to write rubber checks, our credit rating will be ruined. Worse, we might even face legal charges: Writing $1,000 checks for money you don't have clearly is an act of fraud.

However, in keeping with Congress' privileged status, none of the checkbouncers were fined or even charged interest on their overdrafts. In fact, instead of paying a penalty, the House bank gave members four weeks to repay the money they owed — in effect giving them a taxpayer-subsidized, no-interest loan. Only in the U.S. Congress can you get something for nothing.

To the free-spending members of Congress, the ability to bounce checks is just another perk of office, like the cut-rate haircuts, fixed traffic tickets, subsidized mailing privileges and free health club.

"It's a matter that had been raised before, and I thought had been corrected, and its going to be," Speaker of the House Tom Foley, D-Wash., told reporters.

Among the tough measures being proposed: House members who have insufficient funds to cash a check now will be told they need to make a deposit. The bank will still make good on bad checks written to a third party, but will inform the offending member that the account is overdrawn. Bank officials also have promised to suspend the check-cashing privileges of repeat offenders.

But these minimal reforms are being instituted only because House members were caught with their hands in the vault. If the GAO hadn't been watching, they would still be writing rubber checks.

The real issue, however, isn't overdrawn bank accounts. Bounced checks are simply the symptoms of a much larger problem: Congress has no regard for the value of money.

It is abundantly clear that members of Congress — who spend billions of taxpayer dollars at the drop of a hat — simply don't know the true value of the dollar. They seem to have lost sight of just how hard the average American works to feed the family and put a roof over their heads.

To hard-working, overtaxed Americans the GAO report confirms what they already know: You can't expect people who can't balance their own bank accounts to balance the budget of the United States.

Ministers: Just say NO to state lottery

To the editor:
Just say NO to the lottery. That is the message from the Pampa Ministerial Alliance. At its most recent meeting, the Pampa Ministerial Alliance voted unanimously to urge the citizens of Pampa to vote against a state lottery. Though the lottery may appear to be a painless way of raising revenue for the state, the Alliance believes the lottery's problems far outweigh the benefits.

According to the ministers, the reasons for saying no to the lottery are both many and varied. First and foremost, the lottery will not solve Texas' budget woes. More taxes will still be needed. Secondly, lotteries in other states have created a new generation of gamblers, lured by the state's high-pressure sales tactics. The lottery also tends to appeal most to those who can least afford to participate, thus creating another regressive "tax."

Finally, the lottery continues to erode the work ethic which made the United States the nation it is today. The message of the lottery is that luck, and not hard work, brings success. Persons concerned about the lottery are urged to contact their minister for more information.

Merchants help flags stay up at monument

To the editor:
For those of you that have not noticed the new flags being flown at the Veterans' Monument, let me suggest that you take time to go see them. You might remember that during Desert Storm, the VFW placed six additional flags at the monument each day. After the conflict, we discontinued putting them out. We received so many comments about not flying the flags that we convinced six of our generous local businesses to donate new flags to be flown daily from now on. Our sincerest thanks to Coney Island, Danny's Market, Wayne's Western Wear, National Bank of Commerce, Carmichael-Whately Funeral Directors and Pampa Communications for their generosity. When a project makes everyone feel good, you know it was truly a worthwhile endeavor. Also, many thanks to the Pampa Parks Department for putting the flags up each day.

The Pampa VFW is getting closer and closer to getting our bingo games started. We have been delayed by the miles of bureaucratic paperwork that is involved, but the light is finally at the end of the tunnel. We've purchased the equipment, and Bashful and Dean got it all in working condition. We hung the bingo board last Oct. 17 and now all we need are the supplies to get things rolling. Also, we will be holding our annual raffle again this year. We'll be giving away a Marlin 30-30 rifle and possibly some other items as well.

The Pampa Army Air Field/Veterans of Foreign Wars Museum Committee has been working continually on our proposed military museum to be located here in Pampa. This past summer, we received an $85,000 matching funds grant from the M.K. Brown Foundation. More recently, we received very generous contributions from the Nona Payne Foundation and the Pampa Army Air Field Reunion Committee. That, along with the proceeds from the Hall of Fame banquet, has gotten us off to a good start toward the needed $85,000. That first $170,000 will get us started on Phase I and II of the construction of what we perceive as a truly positive asset to this community. There will be more coming up pertaining to the museum that should stimulate everyone's interest.

Once again, I want to take this occasion to strongly encourage all area 'Nam vets to take the time to get involved in VFW. It will be the best $17 you ever spent. It's time to put the past to rest and get involved in a most worthwhile and rewarding organization. I guarantee that if you get to know the men in the Pampa Post, you'll never let your membership lapse. Get involved and feel good about what we stand for.

President Bush is no help to America

To the editor:
I count myself as being disgusted with our president, who is trying to blame the Democrats for picking on his "inactivity" concerning our economy here at home.

I have voted Republican most often, and I am STILL disgusted with his ability "seemingly" to help all nations but ours! Seldom do we have ANYONE in politics who REALLY cares about the mass of humans who make up the United States of America. The other people flooding into our land of opportunity get federal funds for housing, studies, groceries, schooling, etc. We, the Americans already of mixed nationalities, have trouble getting loans or help in many other ways.

I have promised myself I will vote for almost ANYONE but Bush if I have a choice. He is busily cutting our military strength down and making us where we will not be able to defend ourselves when needed. Also, he encouraged the Iraqis to rise up and overthrow Saddam, and when they DID try, he pulled our people home, and we watched thousands die, and even more become sick.

With his "New World Order" and "peace" talk, he is scary, because we will find he has done us more damage than any other president for the time he spends in office. Our nation has so many discontented groups which are headed by crazies, cults of all kinds, and in the land of the free we have all of these arms. America is on the edge of a revolution which will appear to have no one source or even reason. What has happened to the other countries is about to happen to us!

I recently read an article by Sarah Overstreet in a newspaper telling how much money was spent on getting George Bush into office. If he is so concerned about America, why did his inaugural cost $32 million, when all that was needed was to be sworn into office? Bush's big to-do cost TWICE of what Reagan spent on his, and TEN times more than Jimmy Carter's cost.

On one side of Bush's head, he says we must tighten our belt and get a balanced budget and the massive deficit must be taken care of. I find his actions different than his talk. No new taxes turned into a tax which just HAD to be done.

I wonder just how much we, the taxpayers, paid for this activity which is thought necessary for the taking of oath for the office of president. At Bush's inaugural, bleachers were built along the parade route and "user fees" were charged. I also found the $775,000 to build a HEATED inaugural stand on the Capitol steps a rather ridiculous idea.

We the people freeze or burn, and our president should certainly be one OF the people and WITH the people.

America, wake up, this is no longer the land of opportunity, and we will shortly find out we have also LOST OUR FREEDOM.

Mr. Mills' 'mistakes' aren't really so bad

To the editor:
It seems that some people look only for the mistakes that someone makes and then publicly criticize them. I am referring to Ms. Carolyn Barnes of Amarillo and Ms. Judy L. Williams, the lady from Lefors.

In Ms. Barnes' letter to the editor, Oct. 13, "Know the Subject Better," she mentioned some things about restrictions on hiring employees. I have checked with the local grocery stores and as of now they are not restricted on whom they may hire. Maybe Mr. Mills did go "Off Beat" in his article of Sept. 29 on this particular subject. Now he could write one, "Don't Add to Taxpayers' Burdens."

Listen to this: As I was checking out of a food store, the person ahead of me bought one small onion, paid for it with food stamps, then paid for three bottles of beer from his pocketbook (we paid for the onion).

Back to Ms. Barnes - In her last paragraph where she was lashing Mr. Mills, her vocabulary may be limited or she would have included some more harsh words to say about him.

Now I would like to say a few words to Ms. Williams of Lefors, who was criticizing Mr. Mills for his coverage about his little daughter in his columns. Here are some phrases: "The one you love, loves you." "If you don't love them, nobody else will." "Give honor to whom honor is due."

Certainly I would much rather Mr. Mills give praise and honor to that dear little girl than for the little girl to be following her mother in a public place being dirty and her hair just in strings.

I want to say, "Thank you very much, Mr. Bear Mills, and the other members of The Pampa News for a very good paper."

Association offers STD information

To the editor:
Thank you for the sensitive and straightforward discussion of the dangers to teens presented by sexually transmitted disease. The piece [by Staff Photographer Stan Pollard] did an excellent job of educating, as well as informing, your readers about the connection between drug use and STD. Education and information are two of our best weapons against diseases as pervasive, and yet as preventable, as STD.

The American Social Health Association is the only voluntary, non-profit, national organization dedicated solely to the elimination of STD. Another resource you might mention to your readers is the National STD Hotline, which ASHA operates under contract to CDC. Confidential information over the phone on all STDs as well as follow-up information sent by mail is available to anyone who calls. The call is toll-free: 1/800/227-8922. Please feel free to print the number if you think it is appropriate.

In addition, ASHA publishes a series of pamphlets on most sexually transmitted disease. Single copies are available to individuals who write or call us asking for them.

You have provided a valuable service to your readers. Please let us know if we can help.

Why does Richards want a state lottery?

To the editor:
This is an open letter to Governor Ann Richards in regard to a state lottery.

Over 35 states have already tried this, and none of them have made any money out of it. The only thing you are doing is trying to get Texas to go along with this amendment.

The advertising media are the only ones who will come out ahead. The only thing you are doing is using this for a means of a second term. People who will use this lottery are ones who have no control over their gambling and will do without food to fill their urge.

Ann, why do you hate the people of Texas???

What you are doing is evil, and you don't give a damn.

Chapman misleading on animal research

To the editor:
Stephan Chapman's article, "Saving animals, dooming people," relies on two common misconceptions. Because of this, it misleads your readers and perpetuates a stereotype of animal rights advocates as anti-science and misanthropes.

The first point is the false assumption that progress in medicine and animal research are inextricably linked. They are not. Much of the medical advances we have today - from the connection between the pancreas and diabetes (found in a human autopsy) to the discovery of CAT scans and X-rays - did not utilize animal research.

Second, redundant and wasteful projects add more to the cost of research than regulations to improve the lot of animals. For example, efforts to study alcohol addiction in monkeys, while there are not enough programs to help alcohol-dependent people, seems to be more anti-human than the most ardent animal supporter. It also takes money from other research, thus driving up its cost.

Mr. Chapman really needs to take a more objective look at what really goes on in the laboratories.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

By Danny Bainum

Don't waste the inside of a jack o'lantern. Cut out the pumpkin meat, scraping away seeds and pulp. Cut it into two-inch chunks and place in a saucepan with a quart of water. Cover and boil about 30 minutes, until tender. Mash and season as you would any squash.

Microwave oven is ideal for sizzling minced garlic in oil. It cooks quickly, yet evenly and gently enough that it won't burn.

Papayas taste so good we wouldn't care if they weren't healthy. Still, it's nice to know that one delicious medium papaya has 117 calories, more vitamins A and C than you need in a day, plus some B vitamins, potassium, calcium, iron and zinc.

Super sauce to spoon over ice cream or fruit is made with fresh or frozen raspberries, honey and fine tea brewed in a little water.

New dish: some restaurants are serving fruit soup for dessert - pureed fruits combined with dessert wines, with cut-up fruits adding texture and taste.

Come in soon for a look and a delicious meal.

Swaggart a creature of his culture, author says

By GUY COATES
Associated Press Writer

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Jimmy Lee Swaggart would be the first to say that God moves in mysterious ways. In his case, the same demons that drive him to prostitutes may have led him to power as a super televangelist.

"He's been so effective largely because for years he's been preaching against himself," said Quentin Schultz, author of Televangelism and American Culture and communications professor at Calvin College in Grand Rapids, Mich. "Nobody knows his weakness better. He knows firsthand of the demons he speaks of. That helps make him extremely believable and a powerful preacher against evils of the flesh."

The demons caught up with Swaggart in 1988 and again on Oct. 11. That latest encounter with a prostitute may have completed the topping of a tax-exempt televangelical empire that once brought in $150 million a year.

Driving in Indio, Calif., near Palm Springs, the 56-year-old Swaggart was pulled over by police for traffic citations. In the car with him was an admitted prostitute. She said Swaggart had picked her up on the side of the road and talked about dirty books.

In 1988, Swaggart was photographed with a prostitute in New Orleans. The picture was made public by the Rev. Marvin Gorman of New Orleans, one of the televangelical competitors attacked by Swaggart weeks before the disclosure.

"God deliver us from these pompadour boys, hair done, nails done, fresh from the beauty shop, preaching the Gospel," Swaggart shouted then.

Earlier this year, Swaggart's insurance companies were hit with a $10 million judgment in favor of Gorman. A state court jury found that Swaggart led a concerted drive to undermine his competitor, spreading gossip about Gorman's sex life.

That Gorman-provided photo ultimately cost Swaggart his Assemblies of God affiliation and most of his viewing audience that financially fed the ministry.

And now the man who was once the nation's most-watched televangelist is losing his international TV ministry. Dennis Brewer Sr., a board member for Jimmy Swaggart Ministries, was quoted Saturday as saying some services might be televised but "as far as an international television ministry, we're not going to try to keep that going at this time."

His audience, 2.1 million strong in 1987, had diminished to just over 300,000 last year. His Bible college lost 70 percent of its students and the $100 million ministries complex was at half staff. He once had 1,500 employees.

Information now is hard to come by. A belt of silence surrounds the Jimmy Swaggart Ministries. The family has told employees and students to avoid the press.

Top aides have quit. An undetermined number of layoffs have been forced on the ministry because contributions are drying up. Television programs have been cancelled.

Five hundred showed up in his 7,000-seat church recently when Swaggart announced he was stepping down temporarily to seek help in fighting a demon spirit.

"It would grip my mind and I would fight it. I would fight it with everything within me. I can't tell you the struggle. I can't tell you the holding, the times, to that fence outside our house, weeping before God, saying 'Lord, You said You would not allow anything to be put on us any harder than we can bear.'"

"The pressure of it would become so unbearable, and somebody may ask the question, 'well, why didn't you go for help?'"

"And that's the question, that's where I was wrong. But before you judge me, try to put yourself in my shoes."

But even as he asks for forgiveness himself, Swaggart's legacy may be based on how harshly he judged others.

Other prominent television ministers from Billy Graham to Jerry Falwell, Jim Bakker and Pat Robertson "almost seemed to have made a decision to play by the rules of the American religious game" by showing a tolerance for differing religious views, said William McKinney, dean of Hartford Seminary.

"Swaggart ... sort of played by his own interpretation of biblical rules," McKinney said.

Not even Mother Teresa escaped his harsh assessment of Catholicism — a "monstrosity of heresy" in Swaggart's terms. Mainline Protestantism was criticized for its "religious monstrosities," and Jews, Mormons, Christian Scientists and other religious groups also were subjects of Swaggart attacks, according to critics who have documented his remarks.

"He's an equal opportunity bigot, and one of the proudest bigots I've ever seen," said David Crane, vice president of People for the American Way, a Washington-based lobbying group.

Not even preachers who shared his faith escaped his wrath. The forgiveness he has sought for himself in recent years is unlike what he offered Jim Bakker. When Bakker's scandal broke, Swaggart suggested Bakker was a "cancer" that needed to be excised from the Body of Christ.

It is not surprising that few are rushing to Swaggart's defense in his time of trouble, according to some observers.

"People recognize a hypocrite," Crane said.

But no one should try to judge Swaggart without knowing something of his roots, his background, warned Schultz.

Cousins Jimmy Lee Swaggart and Jerry Lee Lewis were born to poverty in a Mississippi River Delta area of northeast Louisiana that has known little but poverty. With a natural rhythm and affinity for the piano, both also were born to boogie and raised in a religion that encourages showmanship.

They just took different roads that, ironically, now intersect.

Jerry Lee helped invent rock 'n' roll and took to smoky bars, fast cars, flashy women and booze. Tragedy was a companion.

"Were it not for the grace of God, whatever mistakes Jerry Lee has made, I'd have made the same ones, right down the line," Jimmy Lee once said.

Now, Jimmy Lee travels with the same companion.

"You won't understand Jimmy Swaggart if you come at it as if he's a shyster, huckster. That's not the way to understand him," said Schultz.

"Jimmy Swaggart believes more thoroughly in what he says from the pulpit than most would ever believe. That's because he was raised in a culture that values what he preaches and the way he preaches it."

To understand Swaggart is to know something of his southern Pentecostal Church upbringing, said Schultz.

"It's very emotional, dramatic, personal expression of the Christian faith. While a northern Protestant minister would approach preaching as a lecture, a southern Pentecost would approach it as a story with a dramatic style."

"In front of a crowd he's got to be able to perform in a style that people will warm up to. He's got to be able to turn the tears on and off, tell a story the way that engages people's imagination."

"That's what Jimmy Swaggart does so well. He's a naturally gifted performer, story teller and musician. That's not the sort of thing you pick up at the seminary."

Surgeons remove 303-pound cyst

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Surgeons removed a 303-pound ovarian cyst that had kept a woman bedridden for two years.

The 34-year-old woman, who did not want her name released, was "recovering and in excellent condition," Dr. Katherine O'Hanlan said Friday.

The operation Thursday at Stanford University Hospital lasted more than six hours, O'Hanlan said.

The physician believes the cyst, which had to be carried from the operating room on its own stretcher, was the largest in history, O'Hanlan said. She said the previous record was believed to be a cyst weighing 185 pounds.

O'Hanlan said the cyst was first noticed 10 years ago and "really grew during the last two years."

The patient had read about problems involved in removing cysts and was hesitant about surgery but "things had just gotten to be unmanageable," the doctor said.

The growth was "a lot of little cysts growing together in one 3-foot diameter mass," O'Hanlan said.

The patient, who is 5 feet 10 inches tall, now weighs 210 pounds.

A preliminary examination didn't show any cancerous cells, O'Hanlan said. The cause of the cyst is unknown.

SWCD accepting tree sale orders

The Gray County Soil and Water Conservation District is now taking orders for tree sales.

The trees will be delivered in March 1992. Orders need to be turned in as soon as possible to be sure to get the trees preferred before the nurseries sell out.

Some of the trees available are Australian pine, Ponderosa pine, Scotch pine, red cedar, bur oak, lilac, Russian olive, green ash, golden willow, poplar, little walnut and honey locust.

Order forms are available at the SWCD office located at the Courthouse Annex on East Frederic in Pampa, or call 665-1751 to have one mailed to you.

Baby elephant put to sleep after birth

HOUSTON (AP) — An Asian elephant whose birth has been awaited for nearly two years had to be destroyed when veterinarians found the two-hour-old infant had a rare, irreparable birth defect.

The female calf was born about 2 a.m. Friday at The Houston Zoo to adult elephant, Indu. Senior veterinarian Joe Flanagan delivered a lethal injection to the calf as Indu trumpeted her grief nearby.

"(Indu) trusts me very much. I feel like I betrayed her," Flanagan said late Friday. "I'm sad. Indu's sad. A lot of the staff is sad. Indu's our baby, and that's her baby."

The calf was born with an umbilical hernia, a rare condition in which the intestines are hanging outside of the body.

Former aide Joseph Califano says Johnson wanted '68 convention draft

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Although he had abandoned the presidential race months earlier, Lyndon B. Johnson still wanted the Democratic Party's 1968 convention to offer to draft him, according to a new book.

While Johnson intended to reject the invitation, he believed it would be an endorsement of his presidency, says author Joseph Califano.

But his hopes went up in flames as anti-war furor engulfed the Chicago convention — one final example of Vietnam's enormous impact on Johnson and his legacy.

"LBJ hoped, and probably anticipated, that the convention delegates in Chicago would offer to draft him to be their party's candidate," Califano writes in The Triumph and Tragedy of Lyndon Johnson.

He said that Johnson, weary and anguished over Vietnam, intended to turn down a draft but saw the offer as a symbol "that would validate his presidency in the eyes of fellow Democrats."

Events smashed those hopes. Protests broke out on the convention's eve, leading to several arrests, and on the first day Chicago police waded into demonstrators, injuring 20 and arresting 140," Califano writes.

"As the convention got under way, the fight over the Vietnam (platform) plank increased tension among the delegates inside and outside the hall. The likelihood that Lyndon Johnson would be welcomed in Chicago steadily diminished."

Even as aides at the White House and the LBJ Ranch in Texas worked on a convention speech for Johnson, "Reports mounted that he would be booed by anti-war protesters and that his appearance might incite greater disturbances and serious rioting," Califano recalls.

Califano says Johnson was upset and frustrated by the convention violence. He couldn't understand why protests continued when he believed he was making progress toward peace.

"For a while Johnson skidded into self-pity, licking his wounds, feeling melancholy that he had been denied the draft he wanted the opportunity to turn down."

The recollection is one of many in Califano's book, being published this week by Simon & Schuster. Califano spent 3 1/2 years as Johnson's closest domestic adviser.

Califano's is the latest in a recent and growing list of books about Johnson, who died in Texas in 1973. As would be expected of a former aide, it's a much more flattering portrait than the two volumes published so far by biographer Robert Caro.

A New York native and Harvard Law School graduate, Califano held posts in President Kennedy's administration and became top trouble shooter for Defense Secretary Robert McNamara. Then, in 1965, Johnson named him special assistant for domestic affairs.

Califano kept that job until Johnson left office on Jan. 20, 1969. The New York Times once called him "deputy president for domestic affairs."

The triumphs recounted in his book deal with those domestic affairs — Great Society programs for civil rights, poverty, education, health care, the environment, consumer protection and more.

The tragedy was Vietnam.

Johnson, his former aide says, became consumed by the war and the trauma surrounding it as public support eroded, overly optimistic Pentagon predictions crashed and Johnson's reputation wound up on the wrong side of the "credibility gap."

"The Vietnam War took a frightful toll on the nation and the president," Califano writes.

"Its bloody battles sapped the American spirit, took thousands of young lives, and stunted the development of the Great Society."

"No matter how Lyndon Johnson mustered his persuasive powers, he could not communicate to the American people why he was convinced we had to be in Vietnam; and, if there, why it made sense to walk his line between all-out war and surrender so that the nation could deal with its domestic problems."

Califano suggests an answer.

He says Johnson had been reluctant to become involved in Vietnam and was frustrated that his war on poverty and other social ills were "being subverted by the war in Southeast Asia" that he'd felt obliged to wage.

"At his best, Lyndon Johnson put the thumb of government forcefully on the scale for the vulnerable among us and brought talented people into public service," Califano writes.

"At his worst, Lyndon Johnson destroyed his own credibility. He hid the true cost of the military buildup in Vietnam as he first unfolded it ... He paid a fearful price as first the press corps in Washington and Saigon and then millions of Americans came to doubt his word. He never seemed able to accept what the war did to the American spirit."

In the end, Califano says, Johnson's White House tenure reflected both his towering ambitions for the nation and the terrible agonies of Vietnam.

"He left plenty of achievements to build on and plenty of mistakes to learn from," the author says. "However history measures those successes and failures, it must recognize that Lyndon Johnson cared and that he tried."

Bush's goals for a billion trees a year falling short

WASHINGTON (AP) — The only thing green about President Bush's ambitious plans to use volunteers to reforest the nation with a billion trees a year is the money in the bank to promote and coordinate the tree-plantings.

In a first-year budget outline submitted to a House committee Thursday, the National Tree Trust proposed spending $1.23 million on salaries, fringe benefits, travel and office expenses, compared with just $350,000 in grants to tree planting groups.

It also turns out that the U.S. Forest Service — and not volunteers — is supposed to plant all but 30 million of the 1 billion trees, lawmakers said. It was with great fanfare that Bush announced in January 1990 his "America the Beautiful program" in which volunteers would plant 1 billion trees a year for the next 10 years to combat global warming.

Several well-known individuals were enlisted for the program's board of directors: Lady Bird Johnson, ex-baseball commissioner Peter Ueberroth, Dallas developer Trammell Crow, former Sens. Howard Baker and Edmund Muskie, and Russell Train, chairman of the World Wildlife Fund.

But nearly two years after Bush's announcement, no money has been spent to plant a single tree under the program, although there are plans to get 100,000 trees in the ground next spring and an equal amount next fall.

Lawmakers said they were skeptical that 30 million trees could be planted in communities across the country through donations and a grass-roots network organized by the National Tree Trust, a non-profit foundation designated by Bush on Nov. 30, 1990.

But Allen McReynolds, the foundation's executive vice president, said he believes Tree Trust volunteers and other groups, "pulling together, will get there. ... I think we'll be able to report to the president we are planting at least that many, if not more."

Bush had wanted $175 million for his tree-planting effort; Congress gave him $20 million last year.

Rep. Jim Olin, D-Va., said none of the money has been spent on trees.

"The president made this big pitch about planting 1 billion trees a year and reforesting the nation. The first year was 1991 and they've not planted one tree. And now they're only trying to do 30 million, they're not talking about a billion-tree program," said Olin, vice chairman of the House Agriculture subcommittee on forests.

"It was never the intent of the president's program to put the trust on the hook for these new trees; the entire country is," countered McReynolds.

McReynolds, who testified before Olin's subcommittee last week, said the trust's primary objective is still to "provide for the planting and care of millions of new trees in cities and towns across America."

Dr. Barry Thompson

University president to speak to American Chemical Society

Panhandle-Plains Section of the American Chemical Society will meet Thursday, Oct. 31, in Canyon.

Dr. Barry B. Thompson, president of West Texas State University, will be the keynote speaker, discussing "Science and Science Education in the Texas Panhandle."

Thompson was previously the president of Tarleton State University. During his tenure there, Tarleton experienced an enrollment increase of 64 percent, completed more than $50 million in new construction, renovation and remodeling, and instituted six new graduate and eight new undergraduate programs.

WTSU's recent receipt of a $2.5 million federal grant for improvements in science education has come under Thompson's leadership.

The American Chemical Society meeting will begin with a social hour at 7 p.m. in the Buffalo Room of the South Dining Hall on the WTSU campus. Hors d'oeuvres will be served. Thompson's speech will begin at 7:30 p.m. and the public is invited to attend.

Reservations must be made by Tuesday, Oct. 29. To make reservations, call Kathy Brown at (806) 477-4479 or (806) 335-3535. Or call Pat Foster at (806) 477-3507.

Chamber Communique

Retail trade members announced that registration for the $100 in Pampa Bucks to be given away Nov. 1, part of the Spooktacular Savings Days promotion, will begin on Monday, Oct. 28 at 36 participating merchants here.

Shoppers may register through Halloween night when each store will draw the names of four potential winners. Those names will be turned in to the Chamber office and on Friday, four names will be drawn from that list to win $25 each in Pampa Bucks.

Bill Mercer of Amarillo was the big winner at the Country Fair winning the $5,000 drawing. Shelly Hale won $1,500 and Don Babcock walked away with the $1,000 prize.

Country Fair organizers report the biggest crowd ever attended this year's fair. Some auction items were not claimed the night of the Fair and office personnel are busy contacting those individuals regarding their bids. If the items go unclaimed for one week, then second highest bidders will get an opportunity to purchase the auction items.

During Tuesday's monthly membership meeting, Bourland & Levech Supply Company Inc. was the featured business of the month. Kayla Pursley was given the "pat on the back" for her community involvement.

Notes from the Industrial Foundation meeting include agreement to participate in the Clean Pampa project involving the landscaping of a triangle of land on U.S. 60 across from the old Killarney.

A nominating committee was appointed for the election of directors for 1992. The importance of Proposition 4 on the Nov. 5 ballot was also discussed.

The Chamber board of directors have elected to continue the Texcel program without funding in anticipation of the passage of the sales tax issue in January. If the increase in sales tax passes, the city commission will be appointing a group who will continue the industrial development program with the new funding. The Chamber will continue in its quest for industrial development in conjunction with the Industrial Foundation and the city of Pampa.

The ad hoc committee who did the original research and feasibility studies on the sales tax increase issue is being recalled. Members of that committee should contact the Chamber or Jimmy Wilkerson.

The M.K. Brown room at the Chamber of Commerce and the Nona Payne room are available for rental to organizations for meetings or individuals for business purposes or family gatherings. Call the Chamber at 669-3241 for rental information.

Harvesters shoot down Randall air attack, 28-19

Laury breaks 37-year-old single-season rush record

By J. ALAN BRZYS
Sports Editor

Pampa's stalwart defense and grinding ground attack combined for a thrilling District 1-4A victory Friday over Randall's upstart Raiders.

Leading Randall by two points and facing a fourth-and-1 at mid field with three minutes remaining in the game, Pampa's Sammy Laury galloped five yards for a first down and a lock on the huge victory for the district front-running Harvesters.

A subsequent 31-yard jaunt by Laury to the Randall 19 set up an eight-yard touchdown run by quarterback Andy Cavalier with 43 seconds remaining in the game to cement the win at 28-19.

"This was a classic high school football game," said Harvesters head coach Dennis Cavalier after the game. "Full of emotion, teams playing for high stakes - if you want to call it that - lots of pride on both sides, hard hitting, good execution ... just a classic football game."

"(It was) a great team effort against a team that came here very well prepared. My hat is off to them (Randall) in their preparation and execution."

Although it was an exceptional team effort, high-stepping Pampa running back Laury turned in an outstanding performance, especially in the final minutes of the contest.

Laury rushed for 120 yards on 21 carries to set the school's single-season rushing mark. Laury has amassed 1,120 rushing yards through eight games, eclipsing the mark of 1,070 yards set by Harold Lewis in 1954.

"It feels good, it feels real good," said the Harvesters tailback on hearing he had set a new record. "I congratulate my (offensive) line for all of it. If it weren't for them, I wouldn't be in the position I'm in now."

Concerning Laury re-entering the game with about seven minutes remaining, Cavalier said, "Sammy came back in with a very tender, if not strained hamstring and got the job done for us when we had to keep that clock rolling."

Randall took the opening kickoff and marched the length of the field in 2 1/2 minutes for a touchdown. Key to Randall's score was a 54-yard scamper by Travis Sims and a 2-yard TD run by Billy Vivens. The Raiders led 7-0 with the successful PAT.

In the next series, a Pampa fumble at the Randall 35 was recovered by the Raiders.

Randall quarterback Brandon Barker connected on a 42-yard pass play with Anthony Benson and several plays later, Barker threw to Doug Richardson for 16 yards and a touchdown at 6:08. The Raiders missed the PAT attempt and led 13-0.

Pampa took the ensuing kickoff at the 17 and two plays later, Cavalier ran the quarterback keeper for a 52-yard gain to the Randall 17.

At 3:16, Laury scooted in from the 4-yard line for the TD. The Todd McCavit PAT was good and Randall led 13-7.

Jason Johnson halted the Randall passing attack in the next series with an interception at the Randall 37, however Pampa was forced to punt facing fourth-and-11 at the Randall 41.

Randall's Richardson returned the punt 45 yards, but the stubborn Harvesters' defense dug in and forced the Raiders to punt.

At 5:18 in the second quarter, Pampa's Justin Johnson made the Pampa tailback Sammy Laury (5), heavily taped due to a hamstring injury, rushes Friday night for 31 yards and a first down in a key fourth-quarter, fourth-down situation. Teammates Chris Whitney (70), Chad Augustine (54) and Andy Cavalier (4) watch the gutsy run.

first of his two interceptions on the night. Wearing jersey No. 68, Johnson rambled 68 yards on the larcenous catch for a touchdown after shaking off several would-be tacklers. The successful PAT gave Pampa a 14-13 lead.

Cavalier stopped Randall's next drive with an interception and 18-yard return to mid field.

The half ended, Pampa leading 14-13.

At 4:21 in the third quarter, Cavalier faked a handoff and darted left for a 26-yard scoring run. The PAT was good and Pampa led 21-13.

A Randall drive halfway through the fourth quarter, which included a 59-yard toss from Barker to Benson, netted a touchdown. A pass for a 2-point conversion was stopped by the Harvesters defense and Pampa led 21-19.

"Justin Johnson had a key interception in the first half for a touchdown," said the Pampa coach. "I think Justin was one of the standout athletes tonight. But it goes across the board. It's ... a team (that) carried out their assignments for any one good thing to happen."

"Phil Sexton was absolutely outstanding," said Cavalier. "He was a great leader in the locker room at halftime (and) he played with a very tender ankle in the second half."

Asked about Andy Cavalier's excellent performance on both sides of the ball, the coach said, "I think Andy was an outstanding player tonight. I don't believe he ever came off the field except for a few kick-off situations. When Sammy (Laury) got injured he (Andy) replaced him."

"He (Andy) made a couple of nice key runs, he played good defense (and) had an interception."

Cavalier rushed for 110 yards on 13 attempts and Zach Thomas carried 13 times for 104 yards.

Pampa is 7-1 overall and 3-0 in district play. Randall falls to 5-3 overall and 2-1 in district play.

Wheeler routs Booker; McLean rips Miami; White Deer loses

Wheeler 35, Booker 6
WHEELER - Wheeler stayed undefeated with a 35-6 trouncing of Booker in a District 2-2A contest Friday night.

The Mustangs were led by Mark Marshall, who ran for two touchdowns of four yards and one yard and threw a 71-yard scoring pass to Brandon Chick.

Brother Mack Marshall chipped in a 24-yard TD run and Jason Beers scored on a two-yard TD plunge.

Mark Marshall led Wheeler's rushing attack with 79 yards on 17 carries. Beers at quarterback completed eight of nine pass attempts as Wheeler compiled 188 yards in the passing department and 266 yards on the ground.

Ike Finsterwald was five of five in extra point kicks for the Mustangs.

The Mustangs led, 28-0, at halftime.

Wheeler, ranked second in the state in Class A, is 3-0 in district and 8-0 for the season. Booker is 1-3 and 5-2.

McLean 49, Miami 0

MIAMI - Fifth-ranked McLean shut out Miami, 49-0, Friday night to take sole possession of first place in the District 1-1A six-man race.

McLean's Daniel Harris scored on three cross country touchdowns and quarterback Christian Looney threw two TD passes as the Tigers ended the game in the third quarter due to the 45-point rule.

Harris caught a 50-yard TD pass, scored on a 60-yard run and ran back an interception 50 yards for another tally.

Others scoring for the Tigers were Tuffy Sanders (30-yard run), Caesar Looney (20-yard pass reception), Dennis Ward (3-yard run) and Christian Looney (40-yard run).

McLean boosted its record to 7-1 overall and 3-0 in district. Miami is 4-4 and 2-1.

Panhandle 42, White Deer 0

PANHANDLE - Six different players scored for Panhandle, which blanked White Deer, 42-0, in District 2-2A action Friday night.

Quarterback Stan Kotara threw two touchdown passes and ran for another as Panhandle improved to 2-1 in district and 6-2 overall.

The Panthers built a 28-0 lead at halftime.

White Deer falls to 0-3 in district and 1-7 overall.

Miami Warriors' Melvin Seymour (33) is tackled from behind by McLean Tigers' Caesar Looney in Friday night action at Miami.

Groom Tigers dominate Lefors

GROOM - The Groom Tigers surged past the Lefors Pirates with a 40-point second quarter Friday night to notch a lopsided 68-20 District 1-1A six-man win.

"They (Lefors) came out and scored on us first," said first-year Groom coach Terry O'Dell in a Saturday telephone interview. "We led 14-6 after the first quarter, but we opened it up in the second quarter."

Groom, 6-2 overall and 2-1 in district play, is in a tight race for second place in its division.

"Second place is going to be decided the next two weeks," said O'Dell. Groom faces Miami and Follett the next two weeks.

Lefors Gary Wyatt tallied the game's first TD with an impressive 60-yard jaunt.

Groom's Brian Baker scored the Tigers' first touchdown on a 15-yard run.

Baker again scored on a 9-yard rush, giving Groom the first-quarter 14-6 lead.

Groom took a 21-6 lead on a Baker 45-yard touchdown run in the second quarter and Paul McLaughlin added another score with a 35-yard touchdown run.

McLaughlin added another score on a 24-yard run.

Also scoring in the game for Groom were Daryl Homer on a 20-yard pass from Bruce Britten; and Kirk Webb, who tallied TDs on a 65-yard kick-off return, a 6-yard run and a 9-yard run.

Webb hit seven of eight PAT attempts. The final PAT was not attempted because the game was shortened by the 45-point rule.

Lefors Andy Swires scored TDs on runs of 65 and 28 yards, and Gary Wyatt scampered 65 yards for a touchdown.

"We have a three-man rotation (Baker, McLaughlin and Webb) and they all have come up with good games," said the Groom coach.

"Baker, as usual, gets open and runs the holes well," said O'Dell.

"McLaughlin is running extremely tough."

"Webb had a pretty doggone good night," he added.

"Our defense has been pretty steady all year."

AF Academy bombs UTEP

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (AP) - Texas-El Paso never knew what hit them, nor was there much call for them to have expected it.

For three quarters, Air Force's wishbone had pounded up the middle or tested the flanks with pitchouts, staying almost exclusively on the ground - the only comfortable mode of transportation for a team that rarely lives up to its name.

Then, with the suddenness of a missile attack, quarterback Rob Perez unloaded a 76-yard scoring pass to wide receiver Scott Hufford early in the fourth quarter, lifting the Falcons to a 20-6 lead en route to a 20-13 victory on Saturday.

Twins' win forces Series into Game 7

Puckett hits homer in eleventh inning

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Kirby Puckett was just the difference the Minnesota Twins needed to make one of the closest World Series even closer.

Puckett, already a hero for a leaping, run-saving catch and two hits and two RBIs, led off the bottom of the 11th inning with a home run Saturday night to give the Twins a 4-3 victory over the Atlanta Braves 4-3 and force a decisive seventh game.

Puckett sent Charlie Leibrandt's 2-1 changeup on a line over the left-center field fence.

"They've been throwing me a lot of changeups the whole Series," Puckett said. "I'm such an aggressive-type hitter. ... I just go up there and hack. I just wanted to make him get the ball up."

"He got it up and I got it out."
Atlanta manager Bobby Cox gambled in bringing in Leibrandt, who started and lost Game 1. Leibrandt was making his first relief appearance in two years and defying baseball odds as a left-hander facing the righty-hitting Puckett.

It was the second extra-inning game of the Series — the first time that's happened since 1975 — and the fourth out of six to be decided by one run on the winning team's last at-bat.

"I feel like I've been in a 15-round fight," Puckett said. "I'm so drained you can't believe it."

The Twins returned home after three straight losses in Atlanta and improved to 7-0 in Series games at the Metrodome. Jack Morris, among baseball's best big-game pitchers, will start for Minnesota on Sunday night against John Smoltz, who shut out Pittsburgh in Game 7 of the NL playoffs.

The Braves hoped to clinch it behind 21-year-old Steve Avery. He had been winless in four starts this season on three days' rest, and the playoff MVP was not able to close it out, allowing three runs in six innings.

Puckett, the MVP of the AL playoffs, began this game in a 3-for-18 slump. He changed his luck, and that of the Twins, with a run-scoring triple in the first inning and a go-ahead sacrifice fly in the fifth. He also kept Minnesota ahead with a leaping catch at the fence in the third inning that robbed Ron Gant of extra bases.

Puckett, however, saved his best for last. Leibrandt, who started and lost the opener, made his first relief appearance in two years to start the 11th and Puckett met him with a line drive into the crowd. Rick Aguilera worked around leadoff singles in the 10th and 11th innings for the victory. Twins relievers were shellacked in Atlanta, but shut out the Braves in the final five innings.

The World Series has not gone seven games since 1987. That year, the Twins beat St. Louis in the only Series in which the home team won every game, the same scenario this one has followed.

Mark Lemke keyed the Braves' three victories at home, and sparked Atlanta's rally in the seventh inning that tied it 3-3.

Lemke led off with a single, making him 9-for-19 in the Series, and Mark Guthrie relieved Scott Erickson. Guthrie struck out pinch hitter Jeff Blauser, but a walk and Terry Pendleton's squib single to the right side of the mound loaded the bases.

Carl Willis replaced Guthrie and got Gant to hit the grounder the

The Atlanta Braves' Terry Pendleton watches his home run during the fifth inning of Game 6 of the World Series along with home plate umpire Ed Montague and Minnesota Twins catcher Junior Ortiz Saturday night in Minneapolis.

Twins needed. But the ball was hit too slowly for Minnesota to turn a double play, and Gant waved safe as he crossed first a shade ahead of the relay as Lemke scored.

Puckett again was at the center of things in the fifth inning, hitting a sacrifice fly for a 5-2 lead.

Dan Gladden fouled off several tough 3-2 pitches before drawing a leadoff walk, and then stole second on the first pitch to Chuck Knoblauch.

Knoblauch, the Twins' best bat-control artist, tried to hit the other way and succeeded with a fly ball to right that sent Gladden to third. Puckett put Minnesota ahead with a fly shy of the warning track in center.

Pendleton hit one much farther to center in the top half of the inning, tying it 2-2. He sent a 418-foot drive into the rolled-back football seats for a two-run homer.

Pendleton's second homer of the Series was set up by sloppy play on a potential double-play bouncer. Rafael Belliard opened with an infield single off the spongy turf and Lonnie Smith followed with a hard grounder to Scott Leius at third. Leius' throw to second almost pulled Knoblauch off the base, and he was unable to make a smooth relay. Pendleton compounded Minnesota's mistake with the no-doubter to deep center.

Puckett put the Twins ahead with a triple in the first inning and preserved a 2-0 lead with a great grab in the third.

With one out and a runner on first, Gant hit a long drive to left-center field, and Puckett was off at the crack of the bat. By the time the sound echoed, Puckett was in full stride toward the alley.

At the last instant, the 5-foot-8 Puckett leaped at the 13-foot fence and plucked the ball off the Plexiglas. Puckett recovered quickly from his backhanded catch and almost made one of the Series' all-time best plays, but his on-the-fly throw to first base was a second too late to nab the retreating Pendleton.

Puckett got the Twins fans going in the first inning with weird-hop triple. Knoblauch singled with one out and Puckett hit a grounder that skipped into the left-field corner. But instead of caroming out to a waiting Brian Hunter, the ball instead hit a post and stayed put, allowing Knoblauch to score and Puckett to reach third.

With two outs, Shane Mack singled for his first hit in 16 Series at-bats and a 2-0 lead. That marked the first time Avery had allowed three runners in an inning during the entire postseason, and when Leius followed with a single, it matched the Twins' hit total in seven innings against Avery in Game 3.

Avery gave up only two more hits through six innings. He also escaped a second-and-third jam in the fourth, set up when Herbek's high fly was lost in the roof by Hunter, by striking out Junior Ortiz and getting Greg Gagne on a grounder.

The Twins were worried Erickson, pitching on three days' rest for the first time this year, might be tired, and they did not relax when he needed to throw 26 pitches in the first inning. Erickson managed to stay out of trouble until the fifth, and the 55,155 fans gave the 20-game winner a standing ovation when he left after Lemke's leadoff single in the seventh.

Wellington edges Canadian, 28-22

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Writer

CANADIAN — Wellington had a 17-game regular-season winning streak going into Friday night's District 2-2A clash with Canadian. Wellington made it No. 18, but Canadian made the visiting Rockets sweat for every point.

An interception by Clifton Burns in the waning minutes of the fourth quarter helped preserve a 28-22 win for Wellington, which improved to 8-0 overall and 3-0 in district play. Canadian, which was tied with Wellington for the district lead, is 6-2 overall and 2-1 in district.

"It was the type of game that was up for grabs all the way through," said Wellington coach James Williams. "Canadian played us tough all night. They have an outstanding team."

Canadian did make it tough right from the start. After a scoreless first quarter, the Wildcats grabbed the initial lead. Steven Flowers plunged over from the one, capping an 8-play, 60-yard drive at the 11:57 mark of the second quarter.

The score could have easily been 14-0 at that juncture. Midway in the first quarter, Canadian quarterback Shad Jergenson, set loose on a crisp block by teammate Chris Lee, rolled out on a 67-yard touchdown run. However, a 15-yard clipping penalty nullified the play.

Wellington, led by lightning-quick tailback Wesley McKnight, struck for a score to deadlock things in the second quarter. McKnight scampered 44 yards to Canadian's 11, then breezed across the goal line two plays later from the 10 with 10:47 to go until halftime.

Both teams then went to the airways to light up the scoreboard.

Jergenson threw an 11-yard scoring toss to Joel Robbins to put Canadian in front. J.K. Hester's 77-yard kickoff return had put the Wildcats on the Wellington 15. The advantage didn't last long as Wellington bounced right back on Burns' 61-yard bomb to Henry Outley to tie things again.

Wellington capitalized on a Wildcat turnover to go ahead, 21-14, at halftime. Wellington's Chad Skelton picked off a Jergenson pass deep in Canadian territory, then on the very next play McKnight found some running room on the sideline and went 25 yards for the TD.

On their first possession of the third quarter the Rockets padded their lead, marching 64 yards in 9 plays. McKnight's one-yard plunge and Mark Chauveaux's PAT put Wellington ahead, 28-14, at the 4:31 mark.

Wellington's 14-point bulge wasn't safe by any means as the Wildcats went on a long drive of their own on the ensuing kickoff. Helped along by a Wellington face mask penalty and a Jergenson 15-yard pass to J.K. Hester, the Wildcats found themselves in business on the Rockets' five-yard line. John Sam Krehbiel went over from the one with 19 seconds left in the third quarter, climaxing a 12-play, 59-yard drive. Canadian went for a two-point conversion pass and Jergenson found Robbins in the end zone corner to draw the Wildcats within two, 28-22.

Both clubs muffed scoring opportunities in the final quarter, but Wellington's defense rose to the occasion to keep Canadian from tying the score.

When Burns and McKnight couldn't handle an exchange on the Wildcat eight, Canadian lineman Eddie Meek was there to pounce on the fumble. The Wildcats took possession with 6:03 left and picked up a big first down on Jergenson's 24-yard pass to Trent Butcher. However, the Wildcats were left stranded on their own 45 when three consecutive plays went nowhere.

Canadian had one more chance when Wellington had to cough up possession on the Wildcat six with 2:20 to go. Four plays later Burns intercepted Jergenson's pass at the midfield stripe and Wellington ran out the clock.

Wellington's big gun was 170-pound McKnight, who churned out 151 yards on 20 totes.

Krehbiel and Flowers, alternating in the backfield, were the leading rushers for Canadian. Krehbiel rushed for 58 yards on 16 tries while Flowers picked up 42 yards on eight attempts.

Jergenson enjoyed a good passing night for the Wildcats, connecting on 10 of 19 attempts for 145 yards and a touchdown. Leading receiver was Robbins, who snared three passes for 68 yards and a TD.

Canadian Wildcats quarterback Shad Jergenson (10) rolls out against the Wellington Skyrockets' defense in Friday night action.

Aggies sack Cougars

COLLEGE STATION — Houston quarterback David Klingler had big numbers again Saturday — all in the favor of No. 13 Texas A&M.

The Aggies sacked Klingler 10 times for 83 yards in losses, intercepted three of his passes and held him without a touchdown pass for only the second time in his career as a starter en route to a 27-18 victory.

The Aggies, quick starters in every game this season, took a 21-3 halftime lead on runs of 24 yards by Greg Hill and 3 yards by Keith McAfee and Bucky Richardson's 3-yard pass to James McKeenan.

After Houston cut the deficit to 21-18 in the third quarter on touchdown runs of 64 and 3 yards by TiAndre Sanders, Hill ended the Cougars' comeback attempt with a 22-yard touchdown run with 4:30 left in the game.

Klingler, who missed last week's game because of an inner ear infection, won the admiration of the Aggies defense that battered him all afternoon.

"Klingler is one tough customer," linebacker Jason Atkinson said. "We kept hitting him and hitting him and he kept getting up."

"It got touchy when they were moving the ball in the third quarter. The crowd picked us up and we pulled together. All of a sudden, it would be something like third-and-30 for them."

Klingler had started 17 games at Houston, including at Arkansas this year when he was shut out in the first half and missed the second half because of illness. It marked the only other shutout of his career.

Hill finished with 160 yards on 25 rushes and broke the school freshman rushing record of 726 yards by Curtis Dickey in 1976. Hill now has 791 yards.

"We grew up today," said Hill, a red-shirt freshman. "A lot of people called us youngsters early in the season but today you have to take youngsters off when you describe us. The defense held them and the offense produced when it had to."

Hill's 22-yard touchdown run was a "had to."

"We came out in the second half and made mental mistake after mental mistake," Richardson said. "We got nervous a little and had to calm down. We knew we had to move the ball in the fourth quarter and we got it in there."

The Aggies (5-1 overall, 3-0 Southwest Conference) and No. 25 Arkansas (4-0) are the only unbeaten in the SWC.

Klingler's 10 sacks were the most of his career in one game. He was sacked five times each by Miami and Illinois.

"They came up the middle and it was difficult to buy a little time," Klingler said. "But I'm proud of my offensive line. You just have to give a lot of credit to Texas A&M. They played just a great game."

The Aggies, who have outscored opponents 65-3 in the first quarter, took a 7-0 lead on the first drive of the game when Richardson completed a 3-yard pass to McKeenan 3:59 into the game.

Longhorns 'run-and-shoot' past Mustangs

DALLAS (AP) — The Texas Longhorns Peter Gardere showed the run-and-shoot Southern Methodist Mustangs how to pass-and-score Saturday.

Gardere threw three touchdown passes and the Longhorns handed Southern Methodist its 22nd consecutive Southwest Conference loss since the NCAA death penalty, sloshing through the rain to thrash the Mustangs 34-0.

Texas improved its overall mark to 3-3 and 2-1 in SWC play. SMU dropped to 1-6 and 0-5.

"Our offense got it into gear today," said Gardere. "SMU played the run tough and we had to pass to take advantage of what they gave us. They had almost eight people on or near the line of scrimmage."

Texas coach David McWilliams said it was good to see the offense score its most points of the season.

"We played well on defense again and the offense kept after it and did the job," McWilliams said. "That's the combination we've been needing. Peter threw the ball well and (Curtis) Thrift had a good day catching it."

The Mustangs have only won three games since returning in 1989 from the death penalty. None of those victories have come against conference foes.

The Longhorns took advantage of two glaring SMU mistakes to build a 21-0 halftime lead. All three touchdowns came in the second period.

Texas drove 61 yards in 10 plays with the pass off coming on an eight-yard pass from Gardere to tight end Curtis Thrift.

The Mustangs charged back but wide receiver Corey Beard fumbled after a 17-yard pass from Dan Freiburger and linebacker Anthony Curl recovered.

A livid Beard was flagged by the officials with back-to-back unsportsmanlike conduct penalties and Texas got the ball on the Mustangs 28-yard line.

On the next play, Gardere hit freshman wide receiver Justin McLemore with a touchdown pass.

The next critical SMU mistake came with time running out in the first half.

Punter Ryan Lawson dropped the ball, picked it up and ran it out of the end zone to the SMU three before he was swarmed under by the Longhorns.

On the next play, Phil Brown scored with only 11 seconds to play in the half.

"I don't feel like Texas was 21 points better than we were in the first half," said SMU coach Tom Rossley. "This game was not a blowout like the score indicated. We gave 'em some easy scores and we got no gifts."

Rossley said Texas "didn't make any mistakes and that's how you win games. We made too many."

Rossley said the penalty on Beard was the killer.

"That play was very indicative of the way the game went," Rossley said. "We should have had the ball well into Texas territory and they put it deep in our end. That's tough to deal with."

"It was just a tough day all around. We had bad weather conditions and that didn't help any."

In the third period, the Longhorns put the game away on another Gardere to Thrift connection, this time from 17 yards out.

Gardere completed 11 of 21 passes for 146 yards before he gave way to redshirt freshman Chad Lucas, who made his first appearance for the Longhorns in the fourth quarter.

Lucas immediately completed four of his first five passes including an 11-yard scoring pass to wide receiver Derrick Duke.

SMU's best drive was to the Texas 7-yard line but Russell Anderson's 34-yard field goal try was blocked by Shane Dronett.

An estimated crowd of 26,000 fans braved the rainy conditions.

Clemson leaves N.C. State 'blue'; Notre Dame nips Southern Cal

By RICK WARNER
AP Football Writer

Purple-clad Clemson made North Carolina State feel blue on Saturday. Freshman Nelson Welch kicked a school-record five field goals as the 19th-ranked Tigers handed the No. 12 Wolfpack its first defeat of the season, 29-19.

DeChane Cameron passed for 143 yards and rushed for a season-high 79 as Clemson's slumping offense came alive at Death Valley and ended State's eight-game winning streak.

The Tigers (4-1-1 overall, 2-0-1 ACC), who averaged only 14 points in their previous three games, scored on six of their first seven possessions against the Wolfpack (6-1, 3-1).

Clemson, wearing purple jerseys for the first time since 1939, raced to a 23-7 halftime lead against a team that had given up just 45 points all season. The Tigers finished with 399 yards even though they played without the ACC's leading rusher, Ronald Williams, who sprained his knee during warmups.

In other Top 25 games, it was No. 3 Washington 29, Oregon 7; No. 5 Notre Dame 24, Southern Cal 20; No. 8 Penn State 51, West Virginia 6; No. 9 Nebraska 63, Missouri 6; No. 10 California 41, San Jose State 20; No. 11 Iowa 31, Purdue 21; and No. 13 Texas A&M 27, Houston 18.

'Pokes to face Lions

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Mike Farr's stomach does a little flip whenever he talks about Troy Aikman.

It's not because the thought of Aikman makes him nervous. It's because Aikman used to feed him.

Farr, a Detroit Lions receiver, and Aikman, the Dallas Cowboys quarterback, were college teammates at UCLA. They'll be on opposite sides of the field today when the Lions (5-2) play the Cowboys (5-2).

"Troy used to take me out to eat a lot," Farr said. "Troy's a smart quarterback. He knew I'd be his guy on game day."

In those days, Aikman was locked in mortal combat with his crosstown rival, Rodney Peete, the quarterback at Southern Cal. As things turned out, Peete won those battles—but lost the war. "The whole thing was a quarterback thing," Farr said. "At stake was the love and affection of all of southern California. The game was winner take all."

The Trojans (3-4) tried an inside kick, but the Irish recovered.

No. 8 Penn State 51, W. Virginia 6

At State College, Pa., Tony Sacca passed for three touchdowns and ran for one as Penn State (7-2) routed West Virginia (5-3).

Richie Anderson gained 100 yards on 15 carries and the Lions defense held West Virginia to 131 yards.

No. 9 Nebraska 63, Missouri 6

At Lincoln, Neb., Keithen McCant passed for three touchdowns and ran for another in the first half as Nebraska (6-1, 3-0 Big Eight) routed Missouri (3-3-1, 1-2).

McCant rushed for 124 yards and passed for 144, while teammate Derek Brown ran for 118 yards and two touchdowns. It was the seventh straight time Brown has run for more than 100 yards.

No. 10 California 41, San Jose State 20

At Berkeley, Calif., Russell White broke out of an illness-induced slump with four touchdowns as Cal (6-1) beat San Jose State (4-3).

White, slowed for three weeks by a case of walking pneumonia, rushed for 166 yards on 32 carries. He scored on runs of 80, 14 and 8 yards and also caught a 7-yard TD pass from Mike Pawlawski.

No. 11 Iowa 31, Purdue 21

At West Lafayette, Ind., Mike Saunders rushed for a career-high 151 yards and two touchdowns and Iowa's defense sacked Eric Hunter seven times.

Matt Rodgers completed 20 of 27 passes for 229 yards as the Hawkeyes (6-1, 3-1 Big Ten) beat the Boilermakers (3-4, 2-2) for the ninth consecutive year.

No. 13 Texas A&M 27, Houston 18

At College Station, the Aggies sacked David Klingler 10 times and survived Houston's second-half comeback.

The Aggies (5-1, 3-0 SWC) built a 21-3 halftime lead on TD runs by Greg Hill and Keith McAfee, and Buckey Richardson's 3-yard pass to James McKehan. The Cougars (2-5, 1-3 SWC) rallied in the third quarter on scoring runs of 64 and 3 yards by TiAndre Sanders.

No. 14 Ohio State 27, Michigan State 17

At Columbus, Ohio, Carlos Snow rushed for 169 yards and a touchdown and Ohio State took advantage of a muffed squib kick to beat Michigan State.

The Spartans (1-6, 1-3) pulled to 13-9 on Jim DelVerne's 48-yard field goal with 6:35 left in the third quarter. But on the ensuing kickoff, DelVerne's attempted squib kick struck Ohio State's Alex Rodriguez and the Buckeyes recovered. Seven plays later, Scottie Graham vaulted 1 yard for a TD that put Ohio State ahead 20-9.

No. 16 Colorado 10, Kansas State 0

At Manhattan, Kan., Lamont Warren's 7-yard touchdown run and Jim Harper's 29-yard field goal helped Colorado (5-2, 3-0 Big Eight) win its 18th consecutive conference game.

Colorado was outplayed in the first half, but thwarted a series of Kansas State (4-3, 1-2) threats.

Northwestern 17, No. 17 Illinois 11

At Evanston, Ill., Len Williams set up one touchdown with his passing and scored another on a 4-yard keeper as Northwestern pulled off the upset in a driving rainstorm.

It was the first Big Ten victory this season for the Wildcats (2-5, 1-3 league). The loss ended any Rose Bowl hopes for Illinois (4-3, 2-2).

No. 18 Syracuse 21, Rutgers 7

At East Rutherford, N.J., John Biskup kicked second-half field goals of 40 and 29 yards and Qadry Ismail scored on a spectacular 65-yard reverse as Syracuse (6-2) won its fifth straight over Rutgers (5-3).

Rutgers' only touchdown came on a 28-yard interception return by Malik Jackson 49 seconds before halftime.

No. 20 E. Carolina 24, No. 23 Pitt 23

At Greenville, N.C., Jeff Blake scored on a 2-yard run and then ran for the two-point conversion with 46 seconds remaining to give East Carolina its sixth straight victory.

East Carolina (6-1) trailed 23-16 after Pittsburgh's Scott Kaplan kicked a 35-yard field goal with 3 1/2 minutes left. Blake, the nation's second-ranked passer, completed a 30-yard pass to Dion Johnson and a 14-yarder to Hunter Gallimore to set up the winning touchdown.

Pitt (5-3) drove to the East Carolina 30 with 7 seconds remaining. But instead of trying a potential game-winning field goal, Alex Van Pelt completed a pass to the Pirates 11 as time ran out.

No. 21 Oklahoma 41, Kansas 3

At Norman, Okla., Oklahoma scored on five straight possessions in the first half, including a pair of TD runs by Mike Gaddis.

The Sooners (5-2, 2-1 Big Eight) gained 439 yards against the top-rated defense in the conference and held the Jayhawks to 166 yards. Kansas (4-3, 1-2) lost to Oklahoma for the 25th time in 27 meetings.

No. 22 Baylor 26, TCU 9

At Waco, Texas, quarterback J.J. Joe and fullback John Henry scored on short TD runs as Baylor (6-2, 3-2 SWC) ended a two-game losing streak.

Baylor's defense recovered three fumbles and intercepted two passes at its 1-yard line. TCU fell to 5-2 overall and 2-2 in the SWC.

No. 24 Georgia 49, Kentucky 27

At Athens, Ga., freshman Eric Zeier passed for 302 yards and two touchdowns and Garrison Hearst ran for 158 yards and two scores as Georgia (6-2, 3-2 SEC) beat Kentucky (2-5, 0-4).

Zeier, who completed 19 of 23 passes, guided Georgia to touchdowns on seven of 11 possessions.

At Oxford, Miss., Jeff Owen kicked a 42-yard field goal with 22 seconds left as Vanderbilt beat Mississippi 30-27 to snap a 19-game road losing streak in the Southeastern Conference.

At Bethlehem, Pa., Holy Cross withstood a 21-point Lehigh rally in the fourth quarter to win its 16th straight game, 43-42. Lehigh (6-1) pulled within one point on a 45-yard TD catch by Horace Hamm with 2 minutes left, but a two-point attempt failed.

Texas Tech's QB Robert Hall leads 40-20 blowout over Rice

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK (AP) — Texas Tech coach Spike Dykes has seen the future and his name is Robert Hall.

Dykes' sophomore quarterback made his second start of the season in place of injured starter Jamie Gill and electrified Red Raiders fans by throwing three touchdowns and rushing for two others in a 40-20 blowout of Rice Saturday.

Hall threw to an array of receivers and slithered in and out of the grasp of tacklers as if his jersey was greased in accounting for 453 yards of offense, a school record.

"I thought Robert's poise was fantastic," Dykes said beaming after the game. "He looked like an old veteran out there."

Hall picked apart the Rice defense for 366 yards passing and hauled the ball for 87 yards, including a spectacular 70-yard scramble for a touchdown.

Rice coach Fred Goldsmith had nothing but praise for Tech's young quarterback.

"Robert Hall played the best ball game he has played," Goldsmith said. Hall, a low-key guy who shows very little emotion on the field, could only thank his teammates.

"I couldn't have done it without great blocking from my line and the catching of my receivers," Hall said. "This is probably the best day I've had at any level of my career."

Rodney Blackshear, who caught two touchdown passes, said Saturday's performance was long overdue for the Red Raiders, who struggled through four losses in the first half of the season.

"Today's team played offensively and defensively like we hoped it would at the first of the year," Blackshear said. "We had real good practices this week and they say you play like you practice."

Texas Tech (3-4, 2-2 in the Southwest Conference) finished with 534 yards and an average of 8.4 yards per play against the Owls (3-3, 1-2), who never mounted a serious threat the entire afternoon.

Hall was 18-of-26 for 366 yards without an interception and he rushed for 87 yards, including a few key first downs.

Touchdown passes of 33 and 46 yards went to Blackshear, who had six catches for 154 yards.

Hall also hit Lloyd Hill with a 24-yard touchdown toss in the second quarter, which put Tech up 17-7. Hill finished with seven catches for 135 yards.

The Red Raider defense hampered its way into the Rice backfield throughout the game, keying on Trevor Cobb, the nation's leading rusher who carried 29 times for 116 yards, including a 1-yard touchdown run.

Cobb led the country heading into Saturday's game averaging 168.2 yards per game.

Trailing 20-7 at halftime, Rice was forced to throw and Tech's defensive line, led by Shawn Jackson who had three sacks, haunted the Owls' backup quarterback Josh LaRocca. Tech finished with five sacks.

LaRocca, who replaced starter Greg Willig in the first quarter, was 18-of-26 for 198 yards with one interception.

LaRocca, a true freshman, scored Rice's first touchdown on a 22-yard quarterback draw early in the second quarter and hit Eric Henley with a 4-yard TD pass midway through the fourth quarter.

Tech opened the second half with a 73-yard scoring drive highlighted by a 45-yard pass from Hall to Hill that put the ball on the Rice 1. Hill took the ball over for the score on the next play to give Tech a 27-7 advantage.

Early in the fourth quarter, Hall dropped back to pass, couldn't find a receiver and then darted 70 yards untouched through the heart of Rice's defense for Tech's final score.

Tech's Lin Elliott kicked field goals of 36 and 22 yards for the Red Raiders.

Rice's Byron Coston fumbled the opening kickoff and Tech's Scottie Allen recovered on the Owls' 33.

On the next play, Rodney Blackshear faked an out pattern and then blew by Rice's Clifford Jackson to grab a 33-yard scoring toss from Hall, which put Tech up 7-0.

Foreigners fleeing Zaire

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — Hundreds of foreigners fled Kinshasa on Saturday in a final evacuation ordered by Western governments. Belgium and France prepared to withdraw paratroopers whose presence had helped quell rioting soldiers.

Diplomats reported a mutiny by unpaid Zairean troops spread to at least four southern towns, where soldiers led looting sprees Friday. The latest unrest was set off when President Mobutu Sese Seko, Zaire's dictator since 1965, fired Etienne Tshisekedi, a popular opposition leader he named prime minister. The appointment of Tshisekedi was made under pressure from Western governments after the riots by unpaid soldiers began last month.

Political tension escalated when opposition parties branded new Prime Minister Bernardin Mungul-Diaka a traitor and vowed to boycott any government he forms, state radio reported Saturday.

The Sacred Union, an opposition coalition of more than 150 parties, expelled Mungul-Diaka, Voice of Zaire radio said. It said opposition leaders Saturday reiterated their support for Tshisekedi as the sole acceptable prime minister. Mobutu has made no public statement on the unrest.

Diplomats in Brazzaville, capital of neighboring Congo, said they expected hundreds of French nationals to arrive later Saturday to board a plane sent from France.

French Cooperation Minister Edwige Avice on Saturday urged the estimated 500 French citizens remaining in Zaire to "use every means at their disposal" to get out of the country.

"Pillaging continues, there's a progressive destruction of the economic machinery, and the situation threatens to get worse," she told the French television network Antenne-2.

France will withdraw its remaining 150 paratroopers in Zaire as soon as the evacuation is over, the Defense Ministry in Paris said Saturday.

Belgium ordered its 3,500 citizens remaining in the country to leave on Friday while they could still rely on the protection of some 800 paratroopers in the country — indicating it too was considering a military pullout.

About 10,000 expatriates were evacuated from the former Belgian colony when soldiers first mutinied Sept. 23-24. Among those remaining are 450 Americans, 160 Britons and hundreds of Nigerians and Lebanese.

Belgium and France sent 2,000 paratroopers to safeguard the first evacuation. Critics have said they indirectly served to prop up Mobutu by quelling the riots against him.

The last 500 expatriates to flee the southern mining center of Lubumbashi arrived Saturday in neighboring Zambia, in a 171-vehicle convoy guarded by Belgian paratroopers.

Copter crash kills rock promoter Bill Graham

VALLEJO, Calif. (AP) — Bill Graham, who fled Hitler's Germany and carved out an empire promoting rock music from its infancy in the United States, died when his helicopter crashed into a utility tower. He was 60.

Graham was among three people killed, Jean Catino, a spokeswoman for Bill Graham Productions, said in San Francisco Saturday. The others were Melissa Gold and the pilot, Steve Kahn, 42, Catino said.

"Bill was the most influential non-musician in the rock 'n' roll world," his son David told a radio station in Los Angeles Saturday. "He started the Fillmores, which became the paragon (concert halls) of the '60s scene, and basically perfected the art of producing shows."

The Bell Jet Ranger helicopter was flying over marsh lands about 5 miles east of this city when it crashed into the 200-foot tower about 10:40 p.m. Friday, sheriff's Sgt. Jay Farmer said.

The copter remained suspended in power lines Saturday, and the cause of the crash was under investigation. Officials with Pacific Gas and Electric said 23,000 homes in the Vallejo area, about 15 miles north of San Francisco, were without power for most of the night.

Graham, who was born of Russian parents and lived in European orphanages before he immigrated to New York City, was one of rock music's greatest entrepreneurs. He was a promoter for Bob Dylan and a manager for Jefferson Airplane and Santana. The Grateful Dead was among the groups that headlined his megaconcerts, such as the 1973 Watkins Glen pop festival, which attracted half a million rock fans.

'Bill was the most influential non-musician in the rock 'n' roll world. He started the Fillmores ... and perfected the art of producing shows.'

He organized The Band's Last Waltz tour in 1976, the Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young reunion tour in 1974 and the Rolling Stones' 1982 tour. He also was involved in planning the 1985 Live Aid concert.

Graham was born Wolfgang Grajonca in Berlin in 1931. In 1939, he and his sister were sent to an orphanage in Paris.

When the Nazis invaded France in 1940, the two and some other children set out on foot for Marseilles.

"My sister couldn't make it beyond Lyons," he once told a reporter. "That's where she stopped, and we kept on going, and I wanted to stay there. One of the hang-ups I've had, I've always felt guilty that I left her there. She was 13, and she died in Lyons."

Bill Graham

Graham got his start as a rock promoter on Nov. 6, 1965, when he staged a benefit for the San Francisco Mime Troupe. Graham was the group's business manager. Held in a loft, the show brought together the Jefferson Airplane, the Virgin Fugs, Allen Ginsberg and other elements of the San Francisco art scene.

By the following year, the crowds for Graham's shows were becoming so large that he began holding the shows in a San Francisco skating rink known as Winterland.

In 1968, Graham moved to a hall on San Francisco's Market Street, naming it the Fillmore West. Later that year, he opened the Fillmore East on New York's Lower East Side.

The Fillmores served as a launching pad for groups and performers that went on to achieve national prominence, among them the Jefferson Airplane, the Grateful Dead, Janis Joplin, Quicksilver Messenger Service, Santana and the Tower of Power.

Graham, who was divorced, had two other sons besides David, Alex and Thomas.

THE BOW BUILDER

BEST AVAILABLE COPY

Measurements have to be so accurate that a micrometer is the only tool that is reliable enough to be used in gauging the thickness of material.

Bill Forman and Reece Field, each with a bow of their design and construction. Forman with a take-down recurve bow that can be disassembled and stored in a case and Field with a long bow.

Using a sander that he built himself, Forman starts shaping the handle of the bow. The material to be shaped is placed in a device called a jig and is held steady with wedges. At the bottom of the jig is a piece of wood that is cut with same shape of the handle to be constructed only it is extended further than the actual size of the intended handle. (Below) Forman incorporates ornate woods from around the world in the handles that he builds, both for strength and beauty. The amount of wood used in each handle can vary from six to 13 laminations and must also be heat cured.

After different strips of wood and fiberglass are laminated together the limbs (the two parts of the bow that extend from either end of the handle) are placed in an oven to be heat cured for six hours. (Below) After the limbs have been removed from the oven they are ready to be drilled and pinned for alignment.

It is not often that a person has the opportunity to merge their hobby into their occupation, however, that is exactly what Bill Forman of Pampa has done. Forman, who has been a carpenter all of his working life, now is building bows as well as cabinets and is hoping that someday it will be his primary source of income.

Forman became interested in archery at a young age. Since he enjoyed hunting, it was easy for him to start using his bow and arrows instead of firearms. When asked why he preferred archery over firearms Forman replied "Archery just seems to be more challenging as a hunting sport and to me a person can have more fun with it."

Since Forman's profession has always been in woodworking it was only natural for him to apply his trade skills with his hobby. "I decided that I could build them (bows) as well as anybody," Forman said.

Although his first bow was a success, Forman said that it wasn't as attractive as the bows that he is producing now. "The esthetics of it aren't quite there, but it's a pretty good shooting bow," he said.

From that first bow, Forman's products have evolved into sleek, powerful bows that can compete with anything in the country according to Reece Field, a friend and associate of Forman's.

Using bows of his own construction, Forman competes in traditional archery tournaments and has been successful as far away as Houston. Traditional archery does not allow the use of mechanical devices or sights. Instead archers must use what is coined as instinctive shooting.

Forman builds take-down recurve bows of his own design. He even built his own profile sander, a type of belt sander that has a bearing at the base that acts as a guide for handle material to be sanded to shape.

Along with his own bows Forman will be building and marketing a long-bow that was designed and engineered by Field.

Field is an accomplished archer throughout the '50s and early '60s, during which time he built and sold more than 200 bows.

Field said that he got back into archery a few years ago after picking up a magazine on the sport at a news stand. "I got the bug worse now than ever," he said.

When speaking about his experiences Field said "I had a lot of disappointments, lots of failures. But I wouldn't make anything for what I know about archery now," he added "Money wouldn't buy what I know about archery; but I'll share it with anyone."

This October Forman has started advertising his product nationally under the name of Great Plains Traditional Bow Company. Along with advertising he will be attending trade shows to let the world know about his products. According to Forman "I've got the quality, there's no doubt about that. It's just a matter of marketing it."

Projections for the future are international sales and a line of his own bows Forman said adding "But we'll do it one step at a time. We've got to get a first base before I worry about anything."

Plans for the future include manufacturing and marketing of wooden arrows as well as bows.

Field watches as Forman removes a limb from a form of his own design. The piece of fire hose is plugged on one end with an air valve in the other to allow compressed air to be pushed through the hose and hold the wood to be formed under equal pressure.

Cousins' small thanks is noted at holiday dinners

DEAR ABBY: My wife's first cousin died several years ago, but my wife continues to invite this cousin's husband and his two single adult children to our home every Thanksgiving and Passover. We don't hear from these people throughout the year — not even a telephone call, yet they continue to accept our invitations. Moreover, they leave immediately after dinner. (Last Thanksgiving, after accepting our invitation, the young man didn't show up and didn't cancel.)

Although we enjoy their company during the brief time they are with us, I think we should rid ourselves of this "obligation" that is taken for granted and never reciprocated. I would prefer inviting other friends and family members who would appreciate spending the holidays with us.

My wife and I have had a difference of opinion about this for years. Should we continue to invite these people? If we decide not to, I think we should give them plenty of notice so they can make other plans. Incidentally, we always have to leave messages on their answering machine — then wait until they get back to us at their convenience. We await your advice.

N.J.G. IN WELLESLEY, MASS.
DEAR N.J.G.: Talk turkey: Tell them now that you have decided to revise your guest list for Thanksgiving and Passover, so from now on they are free to make other plans for those special holidays because you have.

DEAR ABBY: Many years ago,

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

you recommended a reply to any intrusive question; it was, "Why do you ask?"

I can't tell you how often I have used this, and I must thank you for it again.

JANE THEODOROPoulos
IN REDWOOD CITY

DEAR JANE: The "Why do you ask?" response covers a multitude of presumptuous questions that should not have been asked in the first place. And it always throws the nosy questioner off balance and renders him/her speechless.

Thank you for thanking me, Jane. It gives me the opportunity to let my readers know that they are not compelled to answer an embarrassing (or personal) question just because someone had the nerve to ask it.

Problems? Write To Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. All correspondence is confidential.

Gods, royalty and common folk displayed in Smithsonian

WASHINGTON (AP) — A collection of 16th- to 19th-century Indian art at the Arthur M. Sackler Gallery gathers a lively mix of personalities — gods, royalty and the common folk, depicted in scenes of court, town and country life.

The 40 works in "Indian Paintings and Drawings from the Collection of Howard Hodgkin" will be exhibited from Sept. 15 through Jan. 12, 1992, at the gallery, which is the Smithsonian Institution's national museum of Asian art.

Hodgkin is a contemporary

British painter, known for his vividly colored, semiabstract works. In this exhibition, the selected items from his Indian collection have been organized into five thematic groups: "Hunting Scenes," "The Architectural Setting," "Outside the Palace Walls," "Portraits" and "Traditional Stories."

The gallery says the majestic Indian elephant emerges as a striking motif throughout this variety of images — in opulent court ceremonies as much as in the wild.

Retirees enjoy potluck dinner and newcomers are welcomed to Pampa

With an extra hour to while away this morning, we can peek slowly around town at our friends and neighbors.

When Carolyn White suggested to her Singles Sunday Class at First Baptist Church that they paint and repair the home of Vivian and teenage Jennifer, the idea spread to Briarwood Full Gospel Church, too. Friends, neighbors and fellow churchmen worked like little elves a couple of weeks ago to paint and do carpentry work. Ladies prepared lunch for the more than a dozen workers. That could easily be term Christianity in action!

Pampans and Pampa stores sported red ribbons this past week to support the 1991 Texas Red Ribbon Campaign over the state as part of Texans' War on Drugs. Special thanks go to Jerry Lane of the Pampa Learning Center for doing the ground work and publicity.

Friends of a former longtime resident Veda Harkrader-Brooks, now living in Sedan, Kan., will want to know that late in November, she will celebrate her 90th birthday with a big bash of a party. Veda, the widow of G.I. Harkrader, remarried at the young age of 70 plus a few months. She is still very much young at heart and looks forward to the celebration. Her address is 311 S. Spruce, Sedan, Kan., 67361.

It's good to see Pat Bagley back in his office after surgery and complications of several weeks. Welcome back, Pat!

Roy and Elsie Floyd, Jerry and Barbara South, Ed and Kay Morris, Jim and Grace King hosted a recent potluck dinner for Celanese retirees at Pamcel Hall. James Goodwin gave the invocation. The Happy Hatters, five ladies from Dumas, provided the surprise program of music from the 30's and 40's. The ladies, one 80 years old and another who celebrated her 50th anniversary this month, began their act as a one time appearance for their Sunday School Class and came to Pampa 184 performances later. Joe Wheeley, Bill Abbott, Buddy Epperson, Russell Abbott, Harold Scrimshire, Jack White, Red Jones, Bob Karr, Walt Bailey, Chuck Albus played musical hats with Buddy Epperson winning a small hat for the prize. About 85 people attended including the following guests: Marie McGarraugh, sister of Vera Williams, Anna Scrimshire, granddaughter of Harold and Yvonne, Eva Gill, mother of Pete Rowan, Dave Phillips and Ladin Moore. A committee was named to start plans for a reunion next April. There will be a basic CPR class for retirees on the morning of Nov. 14, with Gary James as instructor and Ancel Carlos and Claudine Carlos as hosts.

The trip Naomi and Bob Terrell, Gene and Norma Robbins, Linda and Roger Crawford made to West Plains, Mo., was primarily intended to be to attend the 50th alumni reunion of Dale Allison, the girls' brother. It became a mini family reunion with an uncle and several nephews. It was Linda's first visit there in 28 years.

Carol and Opal hall spent a few days in Oklahoma City.

Bob Baker seems to be doing a good job of batching while Peg is spending a few weeks in various parts of Mexico. Peg speaks Spanish fluently and would like to be able to do the same with French. She will!

Beity and C.J. Johnston have been on vacation. Any travel or motel stories to tell, C.J.?

It's good to see Chris Campaigne out and about after recent surgery. Chris is always cheerful and glad to see everyone, the kind of person who is always missed.

Jan Elston gave a program on birds to the Pampa Garden Club recently. Jan is knowledgeable in several areas and is gracious in sharing her knowledge and enthusiasm.

A warm Pampa "Welcome!!!" to employees of Albertson in Coronado Center. Buddy Guinn, recently of Garland, serves as store director. He and wife Nela have one nine-year old daughter, Heather. Buddy smiles when he describes her as a motor mouth. A native of Lamesa, Buddy has worked for Albertsons in Dallas, San Antonio, San Angelo, Lubbock. He's quick to tell you he wants to STAY in Pampa, defined as meaning that he is already becoming a good Pampman. The family enjoys camping trips and Nela adds another hobby of sewing. The Catholic Church is their preference. Buddy can carry on two telephone conversations at the same time and still maintain his good disposition.

Daniel Castaneda, grocery manager, and his wife Paula have a 20-month-old daughter, Amberley. Daniel's hobbies are softball and golf. The Catholic Church is their preference.

Jimmy Womack, drug manager, and his wife Jackie, came from Amarillo. Jimmy's hobbies are work, basketball and golf. Their church preference is Baptist.

Mike Keagy, president, Duane Harp, David Caldwell, and a host of others are elated over the wonderful results of the Country Fair of last Saturday evening, sponsored by the Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce. When a large group of Pampans are involved, anything can be accomplished. Buddy Allen handled the Country Fair crowd like auctioneering was old hat to him. His wife, Marian, is cute as can be.

The regular monthly luncheon of the Chamber brought lots of favorable comments to the point of raves. President Mike presented Jerry Sims as the new interim chamber manager. David Kaul, Cabot Research and Development, spoke on the uses sprinkled with technical knowledge of carbon black, after sharing that it is black! Bouldard and Levech Supply Co., Inc., was highlighted with lots of interesting information given, little of it known before by most Pampans. Kayla Pursley received the Pat on the Back Award for the month. Jim Morris of SPS introduced the speaker, Cheryl Pink, SPS manager of economic development of Amarillo. Cheryl held the rapt attention of the group while imparting some fascinating information on economic development and how it must be funded. At least one extra table was set up to accommodate the crowd. You should have been there!

Evonne Barnett, Lendi Jackson, Stephanie Klein and Kim Cox attended the Marty Stewart concert in Amarillo on Sunday night. All got autographs and Stephanie got a hug from the star. The girls' night out was a thrill for all.

Clifton "Cap" Pittman has graduated from the Amarillo Police Academy. His grandmother, Geneva Lisenbee, was recognized at the ceremony for sending goodies to the academy during the weeks of study. His parents, Charlene and Ernest Back, of Floydada, also attended the graduation.

Recent guests of Ell Hesse were her daughter Jo and husband, Morris Chambliss of Ardmore, Okla. Lucile and Norma Lantz made trips to Erick, Okla., and Liberal, Kan., to view the fall foliage. Along the Canadian River to Candian, the trees were outstanding.

Leta Bradley's sister, Elsie of Portales, visited in Lefors, last week.

Murray Stroud visited Sotiland, Ark., to spend some time with his parents.

Lefors Art and Civic Club birthday calendars are on sale at the civic center, Lefors.

Do make your plans now to attend the Polish Sausage Festival next Sunday at Catholic Church Parish Hall in White Deer. Those White Deer folks do know how to feed a large group with authentic Polish food.

See you back here next Sunday. Katie.

Daniel Benjamin Mahanay served in the United States Army Air Force second airborne squadron during World War II. On Oct. 11, he received the Air Force commendation medal for which he was recommended in the 1940's. During the service he served in the Philippines, Okinawa and Korea, building an ice plant on the island of Samar, Philippines. After the ice plant was complete, Mahanay recalled, Irving Berlin came to tour the plant. Berlin commented, "Isn't it wonderful what Yankee ingenuity can do?". Mahanay said he replied, "That wasn't Yankee ingenuity, it was Rebel ingenuity." Mahanay is the husband of Opal Mahanay, and the father of Mike Mahanay and Danny Mahanay, both of Pampa, and Katie Gunter, Dallas.

Sculpture added to Emory collection

ATLANTA (AP) — A rare, slightly larger than life-size marble head has been added to the ancient sculpture collection of the Emory Museum of Art and Archaeology.

The newly acquired sculpture was once part of a Roman copy of the Greek "Diadoumenos" — a statue of a victorious athlete tying the ribbon or diadem of victory around his forehead, according to Mary Jude Mahoney, a museum spokeswoman.

The bronze original was made by the renowned Greek classical sculptor, Polykleitos of Argos, around 440 B.C.

Cheese being investigated

By DIANE DUSTON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — When a Wisconsin congressman asked the General Accounting Office to find out if tainted imported cheese was being sold to consumers, investigators took the issue a step further.

All food imports inspected by the Food and Drug Administration should be considered, John Harman, director of food and agricultural issues for the GAO, said in a letter to Rep. Toby Roth, R-Wis.

"About 16 million tons of imported foods worth over $10 billion that enter the United States annually are subject to regulation by the Food and Drug Administration," said Harman, noting that the volume and variety is steadily growing.

Roth, whose home state is the nation's largest cheese producer, contends the FDA's random inspections of imported cheese isn't sufficient to protect the public which, he says, doesn't need anything but domestically produced cheese, anyway.

The FDA admits not having the resources to inspect all imports and instead focuses on kinds of foods that have been contaminated in the past and goods from countries whose health conditions are questionable.

For example, it physically inspects only 2 percent of all imported fruits and vegetables despite the fact that about 25 percent of the produce market in the United States is imports. The FDA concentrates on shipments from the largest exporting countries and those known to use pesticides not allowed in the United States.

Harman said the GAO, Congress' investigative agency, would have a report on the cheese question by spring.

We would like for 4-H members to let the County Extension 4-H Office know when you get your pigs on feed. Quite a few 4-H'ers already have pigs purchased. We would like to know so that we can get our pig feeder list correct in the office.

Any 4-H'er needing help or assistance with a 4-H pig project should contact Joe VanZandt: office-669-8033; home-665-6236. 4-H members that need help getting your pigs castrated are especially encouraged to call Joe VanZandt or leave word at the office.

MAJOR STOCK SHOWS

Gray County 4-H members considering showing livestock at any of the major stock shows such as Houston, San Antonio, etc, need to contact Joe VanZandt for details. Catalogs for these shows are in the office that can help answer questions you may have. The deadline for the major show entries to be in the County Extension Office is Dec. 5. The deadline for local show entries will be around Dec. 8.

PREPARE FOR COLD WEATHER

4-H lamb and pig feeders are reminded to have your facilities ready for cold, freezing weather. It will be here any day now and your animals, especially pigs need a warm, cozy place to bed down. Try to have a small shed that is fairly air tight on the north side along with adequate bedding straw for your pig.

As long as our dry weather continues, be sure and keep the dust down by wetting your pen frequently. Dust conditions can cause animals to cough, which can quickly go into dust pneumonia.

1992 CAPON PROJECT

Birds will be sold on a first come, first served basis. The capons will be shown and sold at the Tri-State Fair Show and Sale in Sept., 1992.

Future superstars of sports take careful tending, nurturing

By IRA DREYFUSS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — No coach or parent wants to curb a gifted kid's drive to turn pro, but there is the question of what else he'll do for the rest of his life.

"Any time you have somebody put all of their eggs in that one basket of physical superiority, you are courting later depression and dissatisfaction and low self-esteem," said psychiatrist C. Eugene Walker.

But many pressures push a potential superstar into a single-minded focus on his sport, said Walker, a professor of psychiatry and behavioral sciences at the University of Oklahoma Health Sciences Center in Oklahoma City.

A stellar athlete may start to expect special treatment because people tend to give it to him, Walker said. For instance, parents may excuse their kids from chores, and school administrators may let them out of classes for a sports event, he said.

While tests show Olympics-bound athletes to be extroverted, somewhat mature for their age, and able to work hard for a distant goal, there are other potential problems.

"If you find yourself obsessing on that one thing and making compromises and repeatedly excusing things because of that one behavior, that's a problem," Walker said. "Think to yourself, 'If my child weren't talented, what would I expect?' They'd have to clean their room."

Other kids also rank gifted athletes high, said Daniel M. Landers, a professor of exercise science at Arizona State University in Tempe who has counseled members of the junior national archery and gun shooting teams.

"In their high schools, they are kind of important people because they have been able to go to these international competitions and gotten written up in newspapers," Landers said. Fame can teach a kid to relate to his peers only as star, and when stardom ends, the former athlete could have to catch up on learning ordinary life roles, Walker said.

And stardom may not convince a kid of his own worth, Walker said. "They know they're good, but they're almost always insecure about that," he said. "In a competitive situation, you don't always win. Knowing that you're good but that you can lose creates quite a bit of tension."

These kids have pressure enough, said Landers. Practice leaves little time for the other things. Other kids may have a half-dozen interests, but a future Olympian can afford only his sport and one other interest, such as family, Landers said.

"When the season is over, I like to see them go back to being a kid again," Landers said. "There's a danger that, if it's not handled well, they can develop a sense of self only related to their sport," he said.

Backing off is not easy if a parent is pushing too hard. Parents who have too much of their own self-esteem invested in their child's success are easy to spot — constantly coaching from the stands or giving critiques of performances on the way home, Landers said.

To groom a gifted child toward a championship, you must balance keeping him motivated against getting him so wrapped up in his sport that it consumes him, Walker said.

If the pressure gets too great, a kid can start looking for a way to quit, said Deborah L. Feltz, professor and chairwoman of physical education and exercise science at Michigan State University in East Lansing.

"Injuries are a socially acceptable way to get out of a sport, and kids use that," she said.

Although they don't consciously hurt themselves, they can be willing to let an injury stop them from playing, she said.

Johns Hopkins contest seeks computer uses for disabled

By JOHN ROLL
Associated Press Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — A contest with a $10,000 grand prize has inspired a dazzling array of proposals to make offices and factories more accessible to the disabled, from a voice-activated wheelchair to a fax machine for the blind.

"We're really getting some marvelous, sophisticated entries. It's been very, very encouraging," said Paul Hazan, an in charge of the second Johns Hopkins National Search for Computer Applications to Assist the Disabled.

Co-sponsored this year by the National Science Foundation, MCI Communications and Microsoft, the first contest a decade ago resulted in development of several devices that have made life easier for the handicapped and prompted some computer experts to make helping the handicapped their life's work, among them Deane Blazie.

After winning a prize for "Total Talk," a computer terminal that speaks the same information that appears on a computer screen, Blazie launched an engineering company devoted exclusively to high-tech products for the disabled.

"I think (the contest) gave me that little bit of extra motivation I needed," Blazie said from his office north of Baltimore.

Other inventions that came out of the 1981 contest included the "Eyetracker Communication System," which allowed almost totally paralyzed people to communicate through synthetic speech by using the movement of their eyes to select words from a computer screen.

As impressive as some of the devices were that emerged from the 1981 contest, Hazan said the explosive growth in computer technology over the past decade will make this year's entries even more astonishing.

"Today there are about 20 million personal computers with a commensurate number of creative people who are computer literate," he said. "This whole idea of harnessing creativity on a national scale ... is the kind of thing we need to do more often. It seems to work."

Hazan said there were "hundreds and hundreds" of impressive entries, including a plan for using computer technology to build a theme park for disabled children. A navigation device that will allow the blind to sail also had been submitted.

Noting that the far-reaching Americans with Disabilities Act goes into effect next July, Hazan said the products that emerge from the contest will likely "be the enablers that make this law a practical reality."

The bill was passed by Congress in 1989 to encourage private employers to take steps to hire the handicapped. There are 25 million disabled Americans and lifetime cost of supporting an unemployed disabled person is more than $1 million, according to government estimates.

Hazan and the team of judges began last month to evaluate the entries. Regional winners will be named Dec. 7. A national exhibit of the winning entries will be held at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington in February.

The Butcher's Wife

Love is really quite simple, as long as you recognize all the signs—like shooting stars. And for Marina, a sweet little psychic from the shores of North Carolina, those signs tell her that her husband is a Greenwich Village butcher named Leo Lemke.

The story of Marina's "leap of faith" and how her visions change the lives of those around her unfolds in Paramount Pictures' The Butcher's Wife, starring Demi Moore.

The Butcher's Wife is one of season's cinematic treats and a joyous romantic romp. It's a lovely and endearing parable that helps restore faith in the simple things of life.

Moore, in long, blond tresses, is delicious as the bare-foot clairvoyant. And although her predictions wreck havoc in the neighborhood and especially for an uptight psychiatrist named Alex Tremor (Jeff Daniels), she means no harm. What streams from Marina is a goodness that's both unselfish and honest. She sees the potential in people, taps into their dreams and gives them a road map to their destinies.

Demi Moore

When Leo and Marina arrive at his home and butcher shop in New York's Greenwich Village, the local gossip are as dumbfounded as Leo that he's married.

Marina goes to work in the shop, first meeting Tremor's lover, Robyn (Margaret Colin), and telling her truths about her romantic future. She gives encouragement to a troubled teenager named Eugene, who starts to take his art seriously and decides he'd rather paint than spend time being analyzed by Tremor in shrink sessions.

She meets Stella (Mary Steenburgen), a prissy choir teacher, in a clothing store and suggests she buy a glittery, glamorous dress because Marina knows Stella one day will be performing in a club as a smoky-throat blues singer. Stella also is one of Tremor's patients.

Meanwhile, the boutique's owner (Frances McDormand) is looking for love, and Marina tells her she doesn't have to go far to find it.

Marina is sweet magic for those around her—all except Tremor, who can't imagine his patients figuring out life on their own and having the strength to believe in themselves. Tremor declares Marina a disaster unit and convinces Leo that Marina suffers from delusions.

Leo had doubts from the start. He knows he shouldn't be married to Marina, and has a growing attraction to the new blues singer—Stella—at the local pub. Plus, Marina is wrecking his butcher business.

Marina begins to question all those signs that led her to Leo. And lo, she made a mistake.

But this is a movie with happy endings. There are no losers in The Butcher's Wife. It's just a nice, cozy feel-good movie that wraps itself around you like cashmere throw.

Terry Hughes, a two-time Emmy winner for the TV adaptation of Sweeney Todd and the series The Golden Girls, directed from a script by Ezra Litwik and Marjorie Schwartz. Frank Tidy provides lovely cinematography, especially opening scenes on the outer banks of North Carolina.

The ensemble cast blends well, with perhaps the exception of Daniels, whose blandness strains the imagination when it comes to love.

Steenburgen is always a joy and doesn't disappoint. George Dzundza is sturdy and endearing. McDormand, Colin and Perlich lend good support.

As for Moore, she definitely has found her niche in romantic comedies and is fast developing as the Carole Lombard of the '90s.

The Butcher's Wife was produced by Wallis Nicita and Lauren Lloyd with Arne Schmidt as executive producer. It is rated PG-13.

'Just One Riot' offers entertaining look at Texas Rangers

By J. ALAN BRZYS
Staff Writer

If you don't believe Texas Rangers—past and present—are bigger-than-life individuals, read Just One Riot: Episodes of Texas Rangers in the 20th Century.

Published by Eakin Press of Austin and recently released in hard-cover format, it is the most recent work on Texas history by Ben Procter, professor of history at Texas Christian University.

Procter skillfully takes readers along the intriguing and often violent trail of law enforcement blazed by the famed Texas Rangers organization.

Utilizing graphically detailed reports and in-depth interviews he conducted with key individuals, Procter brings history to life in a book readers may find impossible to set down.

The title is taken from a famous one-liner by Capt. Bill McDonald, one of the last frontier Texas Rangers to enter the 20th Century.

The "Just One Riot" line was issued after McDonald arrived in Brownsville on Aug. 13, 1906 to investigate the "shooting up" of a section of the town reportedly by black soldiers of the Twenty-fifth Infantry.

Book review

McDonald, described by a superior as a man who would "charge hell with a water bucket," quelled almost single-handedly a potentially explosive situation between townspeople and the soldiers.

"With only sergeant McCauley ... as his backup ... McDonald steadfastly walked toward the front gates of Fort Brown," writes Procter. "With two pearl-handled Colt .45 revolvers obviously on display and an automatic shotgun deftly cradled in his arms—the only pass I want [into Fort Brown]—he disregarded a command to halt, even with 20 rifles of the Twenty-fifth leveled at him."

McDonald ordered the soldiers to "Put up them guns!" and eventually defused the dangerous situation, according to the author.

Procter, an award-winning author and past president of the Texas State Historical Association, writes authoritatively about many famous Texas Rangers and their heroic exploits.

Included is a finely-detailed report of bloody encounters in 1921 at Waco between Ranger Red Burton and the Ku Klux Klan.

Despite wounds and threats to his life, Burton, armed with a sawed-off shotgun, stood his ground and refused to back down or leave town "out the back door" of a local cafe.

Procter, in a chapter titled "Leo Bishop and the St. Augustine Crime Wave," recounts Ranger Bishops' face-to-face showdown in 1935 with a known killer.

In vivid detail, Procter describes the shootout between Bishop and the criminal, quoting the Ranger as saying, "I thought he was gonna kill me. He just turned and brought that ole gun up and I was lookin' right in the mouth of it. I guarantee you ... [that hole in the rifle barrel] looked as big as a dinner plate."

Although numerous vivid accounts of heroic exploits by Texas Rangers are chronicled in the book, a major portion is devoted to the 1974 siege of the three-story, brick, classroom-library building at Huntsville State Penitentiary.

Procter takes readers inside "The Walls" of the penitentiary during the July 1974 takeover by Fred Gomez Carrasco and other prisoners.

The ordeals endured by hostages during the siege are described in bone-chilling detail as are attempts by Texas law enforcement to rectify the situation.

The only fault readers may find in Procter's book is the final page arrives far too quickly.

American agriculture continues to attract illegal workers

By JENNIFER DIXON
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — American agriculture is still a magnet for illegal aliens seeking work in the United States, despite immigration reforms that made it illegal for employers to knowingly hire them for ranch and farm jobs, analysts say.

Backers of the sanctions in the 1986 Immigration Reform and Control Act had hoped that by drying up the supply of cheap, foreign labor, farm employers would be forced to mechanize or improve working conditions and wages to recruit a legal workforce.

While it's debatable whether that has happened, government and private analysts believe the law has failed to stop illegal aliens from finding work on the nation's farms and ranches.

Some officials say the widespread availability of phony documents is to blame. Others say it's a lack of strong enforcement on the border or the law's requirement that the Immigration and Naturalization Service obtain a warrant for open field searches, hampering the agency's ability to police farms for illegal workers.

Analysts assume illegal workers are entering agriculture because the shortage of workers that had been predicted when the bill passed in 1986 never materialized, despite the fact that one-fourth of all farm worker jobs must be replenished every year.

"Today, labor-intensive agriculture is once again expanding in the Southwestern states with the help of recent immigrants from Mexico, but today's handmaidens of expansion are farm labor contractors," said a new book, The Paper Curtain, published by the Urban Institute Press and Rand Corp.

"The seasonal demand for agricultural workers remains high, and all indications are that new and vulnerable immigrant workers continue to be drawn into seasonal farm work, largely through the recruitment activities of the (farm labor contractors)," said an analysis in the book by Philip L. Martin and J. Edward Taylor.

Martin is a professor of agricultural economics at the University of California at Davis, Taylor is an assistant professor of agricultural economics at the university.

They concluded that further growth in farm labor contractor employment could mean low wages, unstable employment and poor working conditions for farm workers.

Al French, farm labor specialist for the Agriculture Department, agrees that while agriculture may still be attracting illegal workers, working conditions have improved since the law was passed.

"Prior to immigration reform, workers who in effect were fugitives didn't particularly care about perquisites," French said. "In many areas, they were not interested in (employer-provided) housing because they regarded it as a trap, they knew the Border Patrol would look there first for them, so that's why they would sleep in the desert."

But the 1986 law, he said, created a high level of concern among employers who feared they would not be able to attract and maintain an adequate labor force.

"So they initiated a lot of new efforts to recruit workers and also to retain the existing labor force... and that's had a very positive effect," he said.

A second study, however, disputes French's claims.

The Center for Immigration Studies, a non-profit research organization in Washington, said in a report earlier this year that farm workers have actually seen real wages decline over the past four years, and that most seasonal agricultural workers remain without health insurance or retirement benefits, and live in crowded, substandard housing.

Government analysts are just now beginning to analyze wage rates for farm labor since the passage of IRCA and have no hard evidence yet, said one official, to support either side's claims.

Dan Stein, executive director for the Federation for American Immigration Reform, which favors stronger immigration controls, said he believes that agriculture is the biggest magnet of all U.S. employers for illegal aliens.

While the result may be cheaper food for consumers, there are hidden costs to the taxpayer.

Because their wages are so low, the workers may not be able to afford medical care or food for their children. So taxpayers foot the bill, Stein said.

"It's only growers who end up benefiting," Stein said. "It's a price break for the growers; the taxpayer really gets socked."

"We've turned our back on migrant labor in this country and the price we're paying in poverty and desperation is enormous," Stein said. "Just because they're (here illegally) doesn't mean we can treat them like dirt."

Senators say fight over dairy-beef cattle is divisive

WASHINGTON (AP) — Relations between dairy producers and cattle raisers have been simmering this fall as Congress debates legislation to limit milk production, prompting Western lawmakers to try to break up the fight.

Cattle raisers have worried that dairy relief legislation could result in more dairy cows being slaughtered, further driving down beef prices. Dairy producers, in turn, were angered by some of the cattle producers' opposition to their legislation.

A compromise appeared to have been reached as part of a dairy relief package approved last week by the Senate Agriculture Committee.

Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., said he hoped dairy farmers could be helped without jeopardizing the beef cattle industry, which suffered millions of dollars in losses when milk cows flooded the market under the 1985 whole-herd dairy buyout.

"Divisions within the agricultural community shrink our ability to bring desired results for agriculture in general," Boren reminded both sides at an Agriculture Committee hearing.

Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, said he was tired of seeing the interests of beef and dairy cattle pitted against each other because both provide red meat to consumers.

"It's divisive," he said. "It doesn't serve the well-being of two industries in my state."

In an interview, Craig said it was time for both sides to "start talking about the red meat industry and not beef vs. dairy. It's not to anyone's advantage, particularly in agriculture, to pit one segment of agriculture against another. Let's don't play one against the other."

Craig said relations between the two producer groups have been strained in the debate over dairy relief legislation.

The cattle industry's resistance to any program for dairy angered the dairy industry, Craig said. But he said the cattle industry still has fresh memories of its losses in the whole-herd dairy buyout.

"The dairy industry said 'come on, help us a little here,'" Craig said. But, he said, beef growers operate without a government program and were saying, "We go it alone, why can't you folks?" There is some rift, but I think that's being resolved at the moment."

In other cattle news, western livestock producers already are gearing up for next year's review of the formula used to set grazing fees on federal lands.

A House-Senate conference committee decided this month to drop a provision in the House version of the Interior Department appropriations bill to raise the grazing fees from $1.97 per animal unit to $8.70 by 1995.

The conference committee advised that the issue should be considered by next year by the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee and the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee.

North Rolling Plains RCD expanded to add Ochiltree, Roberts counties

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Soil Conservation Service has agreed to expand the North Rolling Plains Resource Conservation and Development project, adding two counties to the district, U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm announced.

"The Soil Conservation Service has agreed to add Ochiltree and Roberts counties to the Resource Conservation and Development District," Gramm said.

The district is currently composed of Briscoe, Collingsworth, Donley, Gray, Hall, Hemphill, Lipscomb and Wheeler counties.

Pork producers face red ink from low prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumers should find good buys on pork over the next year to 15 months, but hog producers could see red ink because of lower farm prices and some could be forced out of business, says a marketing specialist.

The lower retail prices are the result of expanding pork herds due to good profits over the past 18 months, according to Emmitt Rawls of the Agricultural Extension Service at the University of Tennessee.

The average price for pork in supermarkets has already declined about 10 cents a pound from a year ago, and a further decline is expected, Rawls said.

"Make good use of the ample pork supply, because in 18-24 months, supplies could be tighter and prices higher," he advised.

Pork producers have expanded the herd by 6 percent compared with September 1990, and they have plans for greater expansion in the fall and winter, the extension service said.

Rawls said those pigs would provide the pork supply for the first three quarters of 1992. From now through December, the pork supply should be 5 percent to 7 percent larger than a year ago. Pork production is expected to be up 7 percent to 9 percent in the first half of 1992, Rawls said.

Those expanding herds should push down farm prices during 1992, he said. Prices for top-weight market hogs will remain mostly in the mid- to low-$40s per 100 pounds, but could dip below that in the March-April period and again in the late fall, he said.

"Less efficient producers and those with higher costs will probably see some red ink," the marketing specialist said. "The expansion incentive will be gone, and some producers may leave the business."

The National Cattlemen's Association, meanwhile, reports little change in retail beef prices during the past month.

The national average price of six retail cuts of beef was $3.03 per pound on Oct. 10, compared with $3.04 on Sept. 12.

Beef production in recent weeks has remained substantially larger than it was last spring and early summer, and cattle and wholesale beef prices have been lower, the association said.

Supermarkets have continued to feature various beef cuts at bargain prices. In the association's latest survey, steak specials were prevalent, while specials on chuck roast declined.

House committee OKs bill to expand food aid to Soviets

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Agriculture Committee has approved legislation to expand short-term food aid and long-term technical assistance to the Soviet Union and other emerging democracies.

The legislation, sponsored by Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, would help the nations restructure their food production, processing and distribution systems.

"It is a helping hand to people in these countries who are struggling to create a new system of political and economic freedoms," said de la Garza, the committee chairman.

He said the bill gives the Agriculture Department greater flexibility in providing food and other assistance to the Soviets and other countries undergoing economic reform, while at the same helping the U.S. farm industry.

"By helping these countries modernize their food systems, we can expand the markets for U.S. agricultural products and benefit our own farm economy," de la Garza said.

Rep. Tom Coleman of Missouri, the Agriculture Committee's ranking Republican, said the legislation "will help make sure that American agriculture continues to play its proper leadership role in promoting freedom worldwide.

"At the same time, the bill will promote potential long-term markets in which American commodities and products can effectively compete," he said.

The legislation would give the president authority to provide U.S. commodities on credit or as grants. Eligible commodities include bulk and high value commodities and processed products, meat and poultry, fish, edible and inedible tallow, wood and processed wood products.

COTTONSEED PRODUCTS RECOMMENDATIONS FOR CATTLE

Beef producers should be aware of the proper amount of cottonseed products that can be fed safely depending on the type of animal.

Cottonseed products have been used for more than 100 years as nutritional supplements to improve cattle production. Millions of tons of cottonseed products are fed annually to U.S. livestock.

"Ruminant animals can tolerate much greater quantities of free gossypol than can monogastric animals. Pre-ruminant calves, under 8 weeks of age, should not be fed gossypol-containing products," says a report just released at Texas A&M University.

The source of gossypol and type of diet also affect the levels of gossypol tolerated by cattle.

Gossypol has been widely studied for its toxicity to some animals. But gossypol may also affect reproductive capabilities in cattle. These are the recommendations for feeding cattle:

- Beef cows and range bulls: 2 pounds per head per day of direct solvent extracted; 4 pounds/head/day of expander processed; 4 pounds/head/day of screw-press processed meal; or 4-6 pounds/head/day of whole cottonseed.
- Young bulls being grown or developed for breeding: Whole cottonseed should be limited to 15 percent to 20 percent of the total diet for most cattle and to 10 percent or less for young developing bulls.

High free gossypol meal (0.3 percent or 3,000 parts per million) should be limited to 5 percent of the total diet. Screw press and expander process meal containing less than 0.1 percent or 1,000 parts per million can be used at up to 15 percent of the total diet.

If using a mixture of cotton products, the combined concentration of gossypol will need to be considered.

• Embryo transfer: Producers with embryo transfer programs in which large sums of money are involved per animal may wish to use a conservative approach since other protein sources are available.

• Pre-ruminant calves (under 8 weeks to be safe): These animals, especially dairy calves, should not be fed gossypol-containing products until ongoing research establishes safe feedings levels.

Cattle raisers also should know that the method of oil extraction used on the cottonseed impacts the gossypol levels in the product. The expander process exposes the cottonseed to greater heat, which in turn reduces the amount of free gossypol content to about one-third of the level in the old direct solvent method. More than 95 percent of the cottonseed processed in Texas and Oklahoma today are from expander or screw-press operations.

Also, with high roughage or forage diets where slower passage takes place, cattle may be able to tolerate higher levels of gossypol. Cottonseed hull-based diets may be an exception, however, because of their rapid rate of passage.

NEW YORK (AP) — In Ted Turner's mind, he's already Jane Fonda's husband.

"I mean, we haven't officially gotten married yet, but we have unofficially. Have been for quite a while," CNN's founder told British journalist David Frost in an interview that aired Friday night on PBS.

Turner, 52, and Fonda, 53, announced their engagement last December. Turner said then that he planned to marry the actress in a year, but no wedding date has been announced.

Although the twice-wed Turner didn't elaborate on the "unofficial marriage," he said that when he and Fonda tie the knot, the union "will be my last one. Hopefully."

DALLAS (AP) — Boxer George Foreman intends to put some new punch into the "Don't Mess With Texas" anti-litter campaign.

Even though Willie Nelson, the Dallas Cowboys and Stevie Ray Vaughn have given similar anti-litter messages before, he warned: Those who trash Texas now face the wrath of a 260-pound former heavyweight champion.

But Foreman won't be wearing gloves when a video crew in Tomball begins shooting the advertisement. Instead, the Houston native will be at the pulpit of the Trinity Evangelical Church in Tomball, garbed in preacher's robes.

Foreman is a preacher who heads the George Foreman Youth and Community Center.

Script notes show that the 30-second spot gives Foreman four lines to be delivered "in his best fire and brimstone manner." The lines end with, "And if he ever, ever messes with Texas ... pray for him, brothers and sisters, pray for him."

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — A lawyer for Pee-wee Herman actor Paul Reubens says there shouldn't be anything illegal about the acts his client is charged with committing in an X-rated theater.

A hearing will be held Tuesday in Sarasota County Court to hear the arguments by attorney Ronald Dresnick, who wants the court to throw out the misdeemeanor case.

Reubens, 38, was arrested at an adult theater July 26 after detectives said they saw him masturbating twice in 10 minutes during Nancy Nurse and Turn Up the Heat.

Dresnick says it's wrong to charge anyone with sexual exposure in an adult theater because it's a place where "nudity is necessarily expected."

Prosecutor Mark Maynard disagreed. He said the public "clearly expects to see nudity on the screen in an X-rated theater" — but only on the screen.

Reubens won't be attending the hearing. He's filming a new movie.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country singer Vince Gill says he knew he had to push himself to arrive in time to sing the national anthem before Game 5 of the World Series. But he didn't know he'd be pushing his limousine.

"Our limo broke down on the way over here from the hotel," Gill told the Nashville Banner from Atlanta's Fulton County Stadium. "I was out pushing it until someone with Major League Baseball came by and picked us up. We just left it there."

Things could have been worse. For a while, Gill's biggest worry was that the World Series wouldn't last five games.

"That would be my luck," he said. "To be asked to sing at the World Series and it not get to the fifth game. When we were on the road, everyone was keeping up with the games to see if I would get to sing."

Gill was the Country Music Association's male vocalist of the year. His hits include "When I Call Your Name."

Opposition to planned B-2s growing among congressmen

By ROBERT BURNS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Growing congressional opposition to the B-2 stealth bomber has all but ended chances of filling the proposed fleet of 75 planes, and there are indications the Pentagon may be gearing to settle for about half that number.

There is even some doubt whether Congress will approve money for any additional planes beyond the 15 already authorized, although a total buy of between 20 and 40 aircraft still seems more likely.

Just last year, the Pentagon cut its planned purchase from 132 of the planes to 75, which the Air Force has consistently termed a minimum fleet size.

The Pentagon insists publicly that it has not abandoned its goal of building 75 B-2s, but even some key supporters in the House and Senate are calling for a further reduction.

At an estimated $865 million a copy, the B-2 is the most expensive plane ever built. And in an age of sophisticated missile technology and a waning Soviet threat, many people question the need for such a costly strategic bomber. And that question is compounded by doubts about whether its radar-evading technology will prove all that stealthy as detection equipment improves.

The New York Times reported in Friday's editions that Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, had told some members of Congress the administration would be willing to abandon the 75-plane goal and accept between 30 and 40.

President Bush, asked about the report at a news conference Friday, said he was "just not familiar" with Powell's position. Bush did not say the administration's position had changed, but by failing to explicitly endorse either the plane itself or the production goal of 75 planes, the president seemed to be leaving his options open.

"I will have something to say as we go along each step of the way as to the administration's position," Bush said.

Referring to his 1992 defense budget proposal to spend $3.2 billion to build four new B-2s in the current fiscal year, Bush said, "We've got a proposal up there and let's see where we go with it."

At Air Force headquarters in the Pentagon, spokesman Maj. Andrew Bourland said Air Force Secretary Donald Rice reaffirmed at a public symposium in Los Angeles on Friday that the administration remained committed to buying the full fleet of 75.

"The Air Force sticks to 75. That is the minimum," Bourland said. The future of the B-2 is a central issue in House-Senate negotiations on a compromise 1992 defense budget. The closed-door talks are now, nearly six weeks old.

The B-2, which has been in development since 1981, is designed as a long-range heavy bomber capable of penetrating sophisticated air defenses to drop either nuclear or conventional bombs. Its original mission was to strike at heavily defended targets inside the Soviet Union in the event of a nuclear war. Lately the Air Force has been stressing the plane's capabilities as a non-nuclear bomber that could be used in regional conflicts such as the Persian Gulf War.

Stifled by economics, paper recyclers awake to more jaded reality

By DAVID E. KALISH
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — In New Jersey, more than 10,000 tons of old newspapers pile up in a waterfront warehouse, waylaid by brokers who don't want to sell them at a loss to recyclers.

Four Long Island towns unable to peddle their used newspapers this summer stuffed 1,200 tons in an airplane hangar in Babylon, N.Y. — until a fire marshal declared it a hazard. The towns were forced to incinerate some of it.

In way stations such as these, environmental fervor is quietly capitulating to laws of supply and demand.

As America embraces recycling as a garbage-crisis solution, a shortage of markets for used materials has created a supply logjam — pummeling the price towns get for their waste.

The situation for newspapers, the largest single component of the recoverable waste stream, is particularly lopsided.

Some towns that once got $35 a ton for used news are now paying that much get rid of it. A growing number of municipalities have been forced to bury, burn, or — as with frustrated recyclers in Long Island and New Jersey — warehouse waste intended for recycling.

However, industry experts say such symbols of America's recent plunge into recycling may fade eventually, as communities begin to think more like marketers than environmental idealists.

As recycling participants begin to boost the demand side, the economic equation, at least for newspapers, is expected to reach some equilibrium by the mid-1990s.

"A lot of people who got into this thinking it's an environmental issue are discovering it's actually a supply-demand economics issue,"

Designers redefining image for used paper

NEW YORK (AP) — Forget uplifting images of Americans carefully bundling their newspapers and tossing them curbside.

These days, the cutting edge of recycling takes a sharp knife, wielded by a well-trained designer who knows some emerging tricks of the trade.

As thousands of communities rush to recycle their waste, new technology is letting paper manufacturers boost the quality of paper made from used fiber — expanding recycled paper beyond its historical uses in cereal boxes and environmental newsletters.

However, there are still important limits to the new high-quality paper, which is making life more challenging for designers asked to create commercial works of art from the relatively rough, sometimes grainy-looking paper stock.

The trend toward using recycled paper in everything from corporate annual reports to sales brochures is helping consume some of the enormous supply of used paper that the recycling boom has pushed to market in recent years.

For International Business Machines Corp., General Motors Corp., Procter & Gamble Co. and other companies opting for leading-edge recycled paper in their annual reports, an added dividend is that environmentally minded investors may view their companies more favorably.

To meet the new demand, designers are learning to go easy with colored inks, because they can appear blotchy on recycled paper. The paper may even curl. Paper fibers lose strength with each subsequent processing, causing inconsistencies in texture and absorbency.

When Pentagram set about designing IBM's 1990 annual report, the New York design firm said it tried to avoid heavy colored inks because of fears the paper would absorb too much.

For example, an inside page originally designed in solid dark green or dark blue, to starkly separate different sections of the annual report, was instead left white, with thin brown italic type floating in its center.

"The surface isn't as highly finished as some of the (virgin-fiber) sheets," said Jim Anderson, a Pentagram designer. "It doesn't take heavy coverages of ink quite as well."

Still, designers agree that the quality of recycled paper has improved tremendously in the last year.

Manufacturers, who are investing hundreds of millions of dollars into mills capable of processing used paper, would like to drive home that point.

Champion International Corp. this year undertook an advertising campaign in The Wall Street Journal promoting Champion's high-quality Benefit recycled paper for use in annual reports, catalogs, sales brochures and packaging labels.

Tony McDowell, director of marketing creative services for Stamford, Conn.-based Champion, said the company offers darker-colored paper containing a higher percentage of post-consumer fiber, and lighter paper that contains less.

said Dan Sandoval, editor of Fibre Market News, a trade magazine.

Some examples of how demand-side advocates are creating an appetite for the swollen supply:

— The Bush administration recently directed all federal agencies to purchase environmentally sound supplies, including those made of recycled materials.

— Champion International Inc. undertook an advertising campaign this year to get businesses to buy high-quality coated paper made from recycled paper for use in annual reports and other carefully designed publications.

— New York, after retreating from stricter requirements that newspapers hike their recycled content, used a financing package that included low-cost loans, tax incentives and potential job-training help in an attempt to lure a new recycling paper mill to the state.

— Smithtown, N.Y., is investing in a $500,000 baler machine that squashes newspaper into one-yard cubes and is getting paid $5 a ton for the more easily transportable waste.

Still, the problem will take years to solve. Supply has been building since the late 1980s, when more communities sought to cope with a scarcity of landfill space and fierce opposition to incinerators.

"Everyone said, 'Gee, let's get into it and make all these hordes of money,'" said Diane Nelson, a vice president at N & V International Inc. in Passaic, N.J., a waste paper dealer that has seen prices plummet. "Everyone said, 'Oh wow, we can collect this and give it to the mills...'"

The ensuing oversupply was exacerbated by the economic slump, which has reduced paper sales and made manufacturers reluctant to sink the half-billion dollars or so needed to build a new mill capable of processing used paper.

Newspapers complain that the shortage of capacity has made it tough for them to meet state rules requiring minimal recycled contents.

Connecticut, responding to newspaper publishers' complaints, pulled back from mandatory guidelines that 90 percent of all newspapers contain an average of at least 40 percent recycled content by 1998. Instead, the state now requires all publishers to voluntarily boost their contents to a statewide average of 50 percent recycled fiber by 1999 or face possible fines.

The squeeze forced communities and paper brokers to turn to overseas markets such as tree-scarce Southeast Asia. About 18 percent of the 6 million tons of newspaper collected for recycling went overseas last year.

But as the United States and ecology-conscious European nations plunged into mandatory programs, overseas markets also began to swim in used news. Brokers say the price they were paid for used paper at New York-area piers plummeted from around $60 a ton to $10 a ton earlier this year.

Things recently got worse. To support the Persian Gulf War effort, the Defense Department used about 37,000 sea containers to ship goods to U.S. troops in the Middle East, which recyclers say sapped supply critical for transporting waste paper overseas.

About 20,000 of the 40-foot metal containers, fitted into large ships for transport, remain in Saudi Arabia.

Towns such as those on Long Island said they couldn't even pay recyclers to haul away their old news this spring and into the summer.

"They pulled the rug out from under us," said Evan Liblit, executive director of the Long Island Regional Recycling Cooperative. "By midsummer, in all towns on Long Island, everyone was without a market for newspapers."

Liblit's group, which represents the four towns forced to stuff newspapers into an airplane hangar, eventually incinerated a small portion before finally finding a recycler it could afford to cart away the rest.

Despite setbacks, not all communities have backed down from recycling. Many West Coast and Midwest cities have expanded their programs because prices for used newspapers have held up better than in regions such as the landfill-scarce Northeast.

About one-third of all paper consumed in the United States is now collected for recycling, with that figure expected to increase to 40 percent by 1995, says the American Paper Institute, a paper-producer trade group.

The progress has not come without great cost and risk.

The number of U.S. and Canadian paper mills equipped to handle used paper is expected to double to about 20 by 1995, reflecting new or expanded facilities.

Big paper companies are committing up to $500 million for each new mill they build from scratch.

The paper industry, which is reporting sharply lower earnings this quarter, says it is justifiably nervous about the new capacity. The economic downturn has reduced demand, weakening the price of virgin pulp to 1987 levels.

"We don't need the fiber that this (recycled) pulp will give us to make another pound of newsprint. We have enough virgin-fiber pulp," said Mark Fuller, executive vice president at Champion International, which is investing $85 million in a Texas mill so it can process recycled paper.

Although used newspapers are cheap, the price is expected to rise as more mills come on line and tap supply.

"In terms of positive publicity, it gives us the right to stay in business," Fuller said.

Publishing chains, themselves under pressure from some states demanding minimum recycled-fiber contents in newsprint, are starting to drive hard bargains with suppliers.

Knight-Ridder Inc., based in Miami, has demanded that its mills supply newsprint containing an average of 25 percent recycled fiber by the end of 1992, or risk losing that part of their contract.

Gannett Co., the nation's largest newspaper chain, has told mills it requires an average of 40 percent recycled fiber content in its 82 daily newspapers by 1995.

"Suppliers who intend to be here in the year 2000 and after understand this is a requirement and an absolute necessity for a newspaper group the size of Gannett," said Karen Moreno, director of purchasing for the Arlington, Va.-based chain.

In the long run, the scramble is expected to help efforts to save precious landfill space as well as lower trash disposal costs.

"Recyclables are after all commodities. When you put them out on the curb for pickup, they become manufacturing feedstock. When you look at it that way, you can better understand the laws of supply and demand," said Ed Ayres of Keep America Beautiful, an industry group that works with community waste management programs.
