Ice and snow hold chilling grip on Pampa, Panhandle regions

From Staff and Wire Reports

An early winter storm swept across the Panhandle Wednesday, bringing snow, sleet and blowing ice pellets and creating hazardous driving conditions.

Area law enforcement agencies reported "hundreds" of small accidents throughout the Panhandle region, but no fatalities had been reported through this morning.

Most of the accidents involved trucks and cars sliding into other vehicles and into ditches.

According to Pampa's KGRO-KOMX meteorologist Darrell Schorn, Pampa received 3 inches of snow and ice accumulation through 6 a.m. today, adding 0.47 inch of moisture.

Wednesday's high was a chilly 22 degrees, with the low this morning dipping to 15, tying the record low for October.

Light snow was falling at mid-morning, with additional accumulations of up to 3 inches expected through tonight.

Tonight's low is forecast to be in the mid teens. Sunny skies are predicted to return Friday, with the high slipping up to near 40.

In other parts of the state, according to Associated Press reports, winter weather moved eastward across northern portions of Texas with freezing temperatures expected to spread as far east as the Dallas-Fort Worth area and as far south as the Hill Country tonight and early Friday.

Temperatures dipped into the mid-teens across the Panhandle. It was 14 at Dalhart and 16 at Amarillo before daybreak.

The early winter weather was being triggered by an upper level storm system located over northern New Mexico.

A mixture of snow and freezing drizzle fell across portions of the Panhandle early today. Dalhart had 5 inches of snow on the ground and Amarillo had 1-2 inches of snow on the ground. Southeastern sections of the Panhandle had 1-2 inches of snow.

Light snow was reported at Amarillo and Lubbock, freezing rain fell at Childress and Abilene and freezing drizzle was reported at Midland and San Angelo during the pre-dawn hours.

Snow fell as far south as the Guadalupe Mountains and a mixture of freezing drizzle and snow fell in the Concho Valley and Permian Basin.

The snowfall had ended in Dalhart by 5 a.m. today and was expected to end from the northwest across West Texas during the day.

Freezing drizzle was reported as far east as Abilene and Eastland early today.

The freezing weather was expected to spread into central portions of North Texas tonight and early Thursday. A winter weather advisory will be in effect tonight along and west of a line from Henrietta to Stephenville to Brownwood and includes the cities of Mineral Wells, Stephenville and Breckenridge.

To the east, strong thunderstorms dumped heavy rainfall across a vast area of already drenched North Texas, prompting the National Weather Service to issue a flash flood watch for the area east of a line from Gainesville, Stephenville, Lampasas to Belton and west of a line from Paris to Corsicana to Marlin. The watch area included the cities of Sherman, Dallas, Fort Worth and Waco.

Strong thunderstorms roared across the Dallas-Fort Worth area before dawn today, dumping as much as one-half inch of rain at Fort Worth in less than 30 minutes.

Numerous traffic accidents were reported as morning rush hour traffic began building up, authorities said.

The additional rainfall may cause more flash flooding problems in the Dallas-Fort Worth area where officials had said the Trinity River, already above flood stage, had peaked and the level was dropping on Wednesday.

Isolated thunderstorms were reported early today in central sections of South Texas and fog reduced visibility in some areas.

A storm that swept through New Mexico smothered parts of the state with snow and created dangerous driving conditions. Two people were killed in traffic crashes during the storm, police said.

The National Weather Service said more snow was possible early today, but the storm was expected to move out of New Mexico and into Texas by midday.

One person was killed and two others injured in a two-car collision 17 miles south of Portales on ice-covered U.S. 70, said Sharon Huffman, a dispatcher for the state police in Clovis.

The victim's identity had not been released.

A dispatcher for the state police in Tucumcari said a Tennessee man died in a crash on Interstate 40 west of San Jon. Police said Floyd Maxwell, 62, of Wildersville, Tenn., was killed when the vehicle he was driving went out of control and overturned. Police said the road was icy and snow was falling when the crash occurred.

The storm affected most of the state, with heavy snowfall in northern New Mexico and mixed rain and snow in the south-central and southwest valleys.

About 13 inches of snow had fallen on Chama by 5 p.m., while Lindrieth reported 10; Quemado Lake, Los Alamos and Star Lake had 4; and Cuba recorded 3 inches.

The state Highway and Transportation Department said roads throughout the state this morning were snowpacked and icy.

Interstate 40 was closed eastbound from Gallup to Albuquerque. I-40 was closed through Tijeras Canyon east of Albuquerque and between Clines Corners and Tucumcari.

Interstate 25 was closed from Truth or Consequences to Socorro, and U.S. 380 was closed east of Interstate 25 to the Texas border.

Dozens of accidents were reported throughout the state on slick city streets.

Texas Rangers asked to assist in investigation of DA's office

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

The Texas Rangers have been formally requested to assist the Attorney General's office in an investigation of District Attorney Harold Comer of the 31st and 223rd judicial districts, Assistant Texas Attorney General Shane Phelps said Wednesday.

Phelps said a letter went out Wednesday requesting that the Texas Rangers be allowed to assist in the investigation.

He and Capt. Bruce M. Casteel of the Texas Rangers in Lubbock said that the office of the attorney general and the Texas Rangers often work in concert on investigations.

Casteel, who heads the Texas Rangers in Company C, which encompasses 60 counties in the Texas Panhandle, said this morning in a telephone interview that he had not received the request, but was expecting it later today.

"It will probably come to me and I'll write my recommendation to Capt. (H.R.) Block, the senior ranger captain in Austin," Casteel said.

He said the official approval or disapproval to aid in the investigation will come from James Wilson, the director of the Texas Department of Public Safety. Casteel added that he saw no reason that the assistance in the investigation would not be approved. If approved, Casteel will make assignments in the case and said he would probably assign Texas Ranger Gary Henderson of Pampa to the case.

According to court documents filed Tuesday afternoon, Phelps has also been approved to serve as attorney pro tem or special prosecutor in the case "to prosecute this matter to completion, including trial and any appeal thereof." The order appointing the attorney pro tem was signed by 223rd District Court Judge Lee Waters and 31st District Court Judge M. Kent Sims.

Phelps said he did not know how long the investigation would take, but said the investigation would be completed "as quickly as we can. A lot depends on how quickly we can get together the material we need," he said.

However, he declined to comment on the exact nature of the investigation.

Phelps was in Pampa this week and the week prior to the near head-on collision that Comer had with an 18-wheeler on Oct. 19 near Canadian and a reported prescription drug overdose at his residence later that same day.

Comer was hospitalized at Coronado Hospital following the incident at his residence and later went by private vehicle to an Amarillo hospital where he was under the care of Amarillo psychiatrist Dr. James Johnson. He said that following the vehicle accident, in which he drifted across the center line, he went home and took about three pain pills, three tranquilizers and had a couple of beers over a period of several hours.

He has been released from the psychiatrist and is back to work, said his longtime friend and spokesman Bill Waters, a Pampa attorney.

Also on Tuesday, Comer filed a motion to recuse himself and the office of district attorney of the 31st and 223rd judicial districts as attorney for the state "in the matter of an investigation of the District Attorney of the 31st and 223rd Judicial Districts," according to the styling on the court file.

Waters, in a statement to the news media on Tuesday, said that Comer will continue serving in the capacity of district attorney for the two judicial districts on all other matters.

He also said Comer intends to cooperate with the investigation and added, "Mr. Comer welcomes the investigation and it is his feeling that facts are much to be preferred over speculation or rumor."

The motion to recuse states, "Due to the pending investigation and any prosecution resulting therefrom, if any, concerning the 31st and 223rd Judicial District Attorney's office and myself, the undersigned (Comer) respectfully moves this Court that justice would be better served by the appointment of a special prosecutor as respects such matters."

Judges Waters and Sims signed the order, determining that "good cause exists for the granting" of the motion and stating that Comer is recused and disqualified to act as attorney for the state in the investigation matter pursuant to Texas Code of Criminal Procedure Article 2.07.

The two judges also signed the order appointing the attorney pro tem, which states in part that Attorney General Dan Morales and any other Assistant Texas Attorney General approved by Morales, including Phelps, is appointed to serve as the prosecuting attorney in the matter.

An "Official Oath" signed by Phelps was also filed. It states that he will "faithfully execute the duties of the office of District Attorney Pro Tem" in Gray County and will "to the best of my ability preserve, protect and defend the Constitution and laws of the United States and of this State; and I furthermore solemnly swear (or affirm) that I have not directly nor indirectly paid, offered, or promised to pay, contributed nor promised to contribute any money, or valuable thing, or promised any public office or employment, as a reward to secure my appointment as District Attorney Pro Tem, or confirmation thereof. So help me God."

Phelps said Wednesday that he expects to make more trips to Pampa as the investigation continues.

Glenda Knight scrapes ice and snow off her van's windshield this morning before taking her children to school. Three inches of snow and ice overnight caused a heavy build-up on vehicle windows around the area. Snow combined with thunder and lightning shortly after 4 a.m. today for an unusual October phenomenon and officially heralded the arrival of an early winter in the Panhandle. In spite of the icy conditions, schools in Pampa went on as scheduled.

State lottery controversial proposal for constitutional amendments

EDITOR'S NOTE: Information in this story is provided about Propositions 10-13 that will be on the Nov. 5 general election ballot.

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

The most talked about and controversial proposed constitutional amendment on next Tuesday's general election ballot is Proposition 11 which, if approved, would authorize a state lottery.

The Baptist-General Convention has sent out literature to the media and the churches in the convention providing anti-lottery literature which it says proves that a lottery would be bad for the state and its people.

Many Baptist and other denominational churches in Gray County have been placing anti-lottery literature in church bulletins.

But earlier this week, The Lone Star Lottery Committee came forward with the results of an opinion survey, which it says shows that the lottery proposition is favored 2-to-1 across the state.

Lyda Creus, a spokeswoman for the lottery committee, said the poll found support for the lottery among all age groups, income levels and political party affiliations.

The Associated Press, in a story this week, quoted Sue Cox of the Dallas-based anti-gambling group Texans Who Care as saying that the lottery opponents will be working up to election time "to close the gap," and believes that the opponents will win "if people are motivated to go to the polls in sufficient numbers."

The wording of Proposition 11 on the ballot is: "The constitutional amendment authorizing a state lottery."

Summary of Proposition 11: If

passed, this amendment will allow the state to operate lotteries. The state would also be able to contract with other organizations that would operate lotteries on the state's behalf.

Following are summaries provided by Secretary of State John Hannah Jr. about propositions 10, 12 and 13.

Proposition 10: "The constitutional amendment authorizing the legislature to exempt from ad valorem taxes certain property of a non-profit corporation that supplies water or provides wastewater service."

Summary of Proposition 10:

the leftover assets must be property that can be used for water supply and wastewater services.

Note: An ad valorem tax is a tax imposed on the value of property.

Proposition 12: "The constitutional amendment to increase from 20 percent to 50 percent the percentage of Texas water development bonds previously authorized by Texas voters that may be issued for economically distressed areas."

Summary of Proposition 12: This amendment deals with reallocating a percentage of the $500 million of Texas water development bonds that were approved by Texas voters in 1989. These bonds were to be issued to fund water supply, water quality and flood control projects.

Currently, the board is limited to issuing 20 percent of the $500 million (or $100 million) of these bonds to provide water and wastewater facilities to economically dis-trressed areas of the state. If passed, this amendment will allow the board to issue up to 50 percent of the $500 million (or $250 million) of these bonds for this purpose.

Proposition 13: "The constitutional amendment providing for the issuance of general obligation bonds not to exceed $300,000,000 to continue existing programs to provide educational loans to students, with repayments of student loans applied toward retirement of the bonds."

Summary of Proposition 13: If passed, this amendment will allow the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board to issue up to $300 million in general obligation bonds. The money from selling these bonds will be used to finance educational loans to students.

In the past, all bonds in this program have been retired through repayments from student borrowers, not the taxpayer.

Weather doesn't dampen Halloween spirit

There may be snow on the ground and there's quite a chill in the air, but many Halloween-related activities scheduled for this evening are still going on.

One that has been canceled, however, is the city of Pampa's 7th annual Halloween Parade and Party.

Recreation Department Superintendent Craig Erikson said this morning that because of the weather, the fire trucks would have to remain inside the Central Fire Station to be kept ready in case of emergencies. Because the trucks cannot be taken from the station, the party cannot be held, he said.

However, as of this morning other planned activities were still scheduled.

The First Assembly of God, corner of Cuyler and Hwy. 60, will be having a Fall Festival from 6-8 p.m. at the church's Family Life Center with games and free candy. Co-sponsoring the event, open to the public, are Faith Christian Center and First Assembly Skellytown. There will be a costume contest, with children, teens and adults encouraged to dress as their favorite hero from the Bible.

The Salvation Army, 701 S. Cuyler, will be having a "Fun in the Sun" carnival from 6-8 p.m., with games and events based on the Bible.

Zion Lutheran Church, 1200 Duncan, will host its annual All Saints Party from 6-8 p.m. in the Parish Hall.

Highland Pentecostal, located at Banks and 18th, will be having a Hallelujah Family Night.

The Bible Church of Pampa is sponsoring a Pumpkin Patch Party from 6-8 p.m. at the church, 300 W. Browning, with hot dogs, treat bags, games and a costume contest.

Other churches have scheduled parties for their children.

The Pampa High School Key Club is sponsoring a Haunted House at the Mary Ellen and Harvester Church of Christ Fellowship Hall from 8-10 p.m., with proceeds benefiting the club.

Other Haunted Houses are scheduled by the Pampa Jaycees, at the Pampa Mall, and by the Munday Employees Club at the Clyde Carruth Pavilion (the Bull Barn) at Recreation Park. The Jaycees' house will be in the Vance Hall space from 6-8 p.m. The Munday house will open at 7 p.m. and continue as long as necessary.

In addition, parents are invited to bring their children by Coronado Hospital from 6-8 p.m. to have their treats screened and to enjoy some cookies and punch.

Residents having treats for the trick-or-treaters are asked to have their porchlights on for the safety of the children.

County commissioners to meet in regular session Friday, Nov. 1

Gray County Commissioners Court is scheduled to hear a presentation from District Ranger Reggie Blackwell of the U.S. Forest Service during a regular meeting set to begin at 9 a.m. Friday.

Last week, the board of directors of Lake McClellan Improvement Inc. voted to ask the Commissioners Court to assume control of operations of the concession at the lake with operation profits to be given to the improvement fund.

John Etchison now operates the concession for Dan Lewis of Clarendon. The concession sells permits for fishing, boating, motorcycle riding and picnicking. It also sells bait, picnic supplies, food, soft drinks and fishing equipment.

Other items on the Commissioners Court agenda include:

- consider an Oct. 1 letter from the County Judges and Commissioners Association of Texas.
- consider sale of delinquent tax properties.
- consider a letter from the city of Lefors regarding delinquent tax property.
- discuss the new jail.
- authorize newly-appointed District Clerk Yvonne Moler to open new checking accounts at the county depository bank.
- consider an application for military service credit.
- receive the treasurer's report.
- pay salaries and bills.
- consider transfers.

Vocalist brings folk songs to Pampa audience

By BILL HAILEY

Review

Pampa Community Concert Association presented its second seasonal project Saturday night at M.K. Brown Auditorium. Debi Smith, Falls Church, Va., who has performed on the National Network, at Kennedy Center, Manhattan's Bottom Line and Walt Disney's Epcot Center was the attraction.

The artist appeared on stage in a bright blue and white cow girl costume with a long spacious skirt, white cowboy boots and a ten-gallon hat hanging from her neck. Carrying a large golden guitar which she handle with consummate skill, and with a glamorous smile and coal black hair, she wasn't the least bit hard to look at.

Debi's line-up comprised folk songs, hits from Broadway and original compositions by herself, Neil Simon and others. Among the best were Shenandoah, Gershwin's "Summertime" from "Porgy and Bess", "I See the Moon" and "Amazing Grace."

What really ignited and brought lavish response from the audience were demonstrations of two medieval percussion instruments, the dulcimer and the Irish bodhran, both part of Debi's entourage. The badhran is a drum held by the right hand activated by a knobbed mallet in the left thereby producing a variety of interestingly shaped rolls. Accompanying the demonstrations was a double-jointed puppet doing what appeared to be a cake-walk.

All this was attention-getting and uproariously funny. Participating was Jennifer Bonnell, a Pampa youngster on loan from the audience.

The evening closed with a haunting, beautiful "Moscow Night," which I heard for the first time, and the great World War II anthem, "This Land is Your Land", by Pampa's own immortal Woody Guthrie.

Braun tells prosecutors: 'All deals are off'

GARDEN CITY, Kan. (AP) — A Garden City man accused in a four-day robbery spree that left five people dead is telling prosecutors that "all deals are off."

Gregg Francis Braun, 30, appeared in Finney County Court on Wednesday to face felony murder charges in the deaths of two Garden City women. After the hearing, Finney County Attorney Ricklin Pierce would not say whether a plea agreement had been discussed with Braun.

Braun was sentenced to life in prison last month in New Mexico for killing Geraldine Valdez, the last clerk to die in a four-state crime spree in July 1989. He arrived Tuesday at the Finney County Jail, where he was being held without bond.

Braun had pleaded guilty but mentally ill in New Mexico. His sentencing jury deadlocked over the death penalty, making the life sentence automatic.

"There won't be no hearing. You can call Collins and Comer and tell them all deals are off."

At Wednesday's hearing, Magistrate Judge Russell Jennings appointed Leroy Rose to defend Braun and set a preliminary hearing for Dec. 4.

"At this point, your honor, I would like to waive my preliminary hearing," Braun said.

Jennings denied the motion, telling Braun to first consult with Rose.

Braun then asked that he be appointed as his own co-counsel and allowed access to a law library.

Ruling made in child support case

AUSTIN (AP) — The state Supreme Court ruled 6-3 Wednesday that the Texas Family Code prohibits parents from settling claims for unpaid child support until the unpaid amount has been reduced in writing to a final judgment.

The issue was raised in a divorce case out of Brazoria County.

"Requiring that the trial court reduce arrearages to a final judgment before the parties can enter into a settlement and release agreement shields the custodial parent from the financial pressures which frequently result when child support goes unpaid," said Justice Eugene Cook's majority opinion.

Chief Justice Thomas Phillips filed a dissenting opinion.

He said the majority opinion "imposes upon divorced parents wishing to compromise arrearages in child support a time-consuming and expensive procedure, with little or no corresponding benefit to themselves, their offspring or society."

"I'm skeptical that the state of Kansas would provide me an adequate defense," said Braun, who has a pre-law bachelor's degree.

Jennings again instructed Braun to speak with his defense attorney first.

As Braun was escorted out of the courtroom, Pierce asked Jennings to repeat the date of the preliminary hearing.

"There won't be no hearing," Braun said angrily. "You can call Collins and Comer and tell them all deals are off."

Fred Collins is district attorney in Ardmore, Okla., where Braun is accused of killing a flower shop employee. Harold Comer is district attorney in Pampa, Texas, where Braun is charged with killing a photo-processing store owner.

Texas and Oklahoma have the death penalty. Kansas does not.

The bodies of Mary Rains and Barbara Kochendorfer, both of Garden City, were found outside town July 19, 1989. Prosecutors say Braun kidnapped them from a convenience store, shot them in the head, and then set out to Oklahoma, Texas and New Mexico.

Witness: Gilley blamed now-dead officer for deaths

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — A former state crime bureau agent who investigated the slayings of a couple on a rural lover's lane 21 years ago says the man accused of the deaths blamed a fellow police officer for the killings.

Ken Jacobson, a state's witness in the first-degree murder trial of former Norman police officer Frank Gilley, testified Tuesday that Gilley blamed Officer Brian Green for the killings in a statement he gave to Jacobson in 1971 in Lubbock, Texas.

Jacobson spent much of Wednesday on the witness stand as well, answering questions from defense attorneys.

Gilley is accused of the May 1970 deaths of David Sloan, 21, of Amarillo, Texas, and Sheryl Benham, 19, of Oklahoma City. Their bodies were found in the trunk of Sloan's car a day after they were last seen at a fraternity party at the University of Oklahoma, where Sloan was a student.

Green was a fellow officer and friend of Gilley's who died in 1971. Admitted into evidence in the trial Tuesday was a signed statement from Green in which he claimed Gilley once told him to lie to authorities if he were ever asked about Gilley's ownership of .22-caliber weapons.

Ms. Benham and Sloan were each shot more than 10 times in the face and torso with a .22-caliber weapon.

Jacobson said that Gilley was accompanied by a lawyer when he made the statement in 1971 about Green. He was not under arrest at the time, Jacobson said.

Jacobson also said he had met Gilley twice before that encounter in Lubbock — one he said was in the field where the bodies were found and the other was when officers served a search warrant at Gilley's home in Amarillo, Texas.

Jacobson said the search warrant was issued so officers could look for .22-caliber weapons.

When the officers asked Gilley if he would sign a search waiver, Jacobson added, "he became very agitated and belligerent towards us and ordered us off his property."

Gilley denied owning or ever having owned any .22-caliber weapons, Jacobson said. He said some .22-caliber weapons were recovered from Gilley's house that day.

Jacobson said ballistics tests done on the .22-caliber weapons seized from Gilley's home failed to connect the weapons to the slayings.

Also Tuesday, two ex-wives and a stepdaughter of Gilley's testified they knew Gilley in the years following the Norman slayings but that Gilley never told them he was a suspect in the deaths.

In fact, the women said, Gilley never told them he used to be a police officer in Norman.

Rosella Gilley said it shocked her when she learned last year that Gilley once worked in Norman and was a suspect in a double homicide.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Limiting terms can limit damage

The incompetent conduct of the Senate Judiciary Committee during the Judge Clarence Thomas hearings gives us another reason to work for term limits for all 535 members of the U.S. Congress. If the Judiciary bunglers had been in private law practice, we could sue them for malpractice. As it is, they can sit around the Senate for 20, 30 or even 40 years, because current election law ensures the perpetuation in power of their incompetence.

And let's remember the other outrages in both houses of Congress: the 23 percent pay raise, the 98 percent re-election rate, the check-kiting scam, the free lunches paid by taxpayers, the Keating savings and loan scandal, Abscam, the lynching of Judge Robert Bork, and on and on. It reminds one of the Senate of the Roman Empire as depicted in the Stanley Kubrick movie Spartacus, recently restored and re-released, in which the privileged senators sit around senatorial baths plotting to rob and murder.

The focus—and there must be one—should turn to term limits for our national legislators. The limits might be two terms of six years each for U.S. senators, six terms of two years each for members of the House.

If such a reform had been in place since 1960, Sen. Alan Cranston of California would have left the Senate in 1984, before he helped cause the savings and loan scandal, which will cost taxpayers $500 billion. Sen. Ted Kennedy of Maine would have spent his last day in the Senate in 1974. Sen. Joseph Biden of Delaware, the fumbling Judiciary Committee chairman, would have left in 1984. And Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, the ranking Republican on the Judiciary Committee, would have left as long ago as 1966.

Even longtime opponents of term limits have been so scandalized by Congress's recent behavior that they have changed their minds. Columnist George Will once plumped for long congressional terms. He reasoned that congressmen needed that much time to really learn their jobs.

But recently Will described what our servants do on Capitol Hill as "spending other people's money. Invariably, they can persuade themselves they are not 'really' spending anything." A new wasteful spending program, congressmen think, "will pay for itself." Will added: "Most of the people legislators associate with are involved in regulating other people's lives and spending other people's money. ... After a prolonged immersion in Washington's culture of ruling, there is not a dime's worth of difference between ... Democrats and Republicans."

Hear, hear. Let's not wait for Congress itself to act. Colorado has passed a referendum limiting the term of its U.S. congressmen. Texas should follow suit—and not forget to limit terms for its own state legislators in the process. In fact, extend the term limits to city, county and school governments while we're at it. Government must be returned to the people.

FORMER SEXUAL HARASSER

Democrats don't need to win

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is by the editor of the Bastrop County Times in Smitheville, Texas.

By H.H. KRUSEKOPF

There seems to be a mad race in the wrong direction by potential Democratic presidential candidates for the 1992 election.

In recent months House Majority Leader Dick Gephardt of Missouri, Sen. Jay Rockefeller of West Virginia and Sen. Al Gore of Tennessee have all announced their decisions not to run. Sen. Lloyd Benson of Texas has already said he won't test the political waters in '92 after being the party's vice-presidential nominee in '88, and other frequently-mentioned candidates such as Gov. Mario Cuomo of New York, Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia and Rep. Jesse Jackson are showing little interest. Which leaves the Democrats with Arkansas Governor Bill Clinton, Virginia Governor Doug Wilder and Iowa Senator Tom Harkin as remaining possibilities, along with former Sen. Paul Tsongas of Maine.

With George Bush's public popularity continuing to soar, especially in the wake of the failed Soviet coup and the subsequent democratic changes taking place in that nation, it may seem to many Democrats that a bid for the presidency in '92 is a doomed effort before it even begins. Despite Bush's apparent obliviousness to domestic affairs and his inability to confront, much less begin to remedy, the gradual decay of U.S. society, his overseas exploits have given him an aura of leadership that a majority of Americans find appealing. He appears invincible in next year's election, and that is scaring away any challengers.

Democrats, however, must realize that the goal of 1992 is not to win. Bush, in all likelihood, will be president until 1996 unless he makes a monstrous screw up or is confronted with a problem, no doubt domestic, that he simply cannot handle yet which piques the public's interest greatly. Why then, you are probably asking, should a leading Democrat take the plunge into the long and torturous (not to mention expensive) run for the presidency?

Simply put, the Democrats have a unique opportunity to set forth an agenda of issues without having to compromise themselves pandering to special interests to win election. Issues such as health care, education, and decent jobs and housing are not ones which will disappear anytime soon, but they are being totally ignored by the present administration in favor of international posturing.

To his credit, George Bush has been masterful at times in his handling of overseas crisis, but meanwhile back at home banks are still failing, the economy is in a tailspin, and the gap between the rich and poor is widening at an ever more rapid pace. Indeed, this is an administration headed by an oilman that has no coherent energy policy and one led by an "environmental president" that is doing nothing to help the environment.

Democrats should be seizing this moment to begin developing a platform that addresses these long-term problems. As Anna Quindlen of the New York Times put in a recent column, "Democrats need to stop worrying about winning and start concentrating on speaking up, on fighting hard, on giving people something to vote for for a change."

Instead of trying to be Republican look-alikes, the Democrats should be setting their own agenda. They may be a lone voice crying in the wilderness for now, but someday Americans are going to realize that in Bush's relentless pursuit of a "new world order" he has left his own house in disarray. Then who will have the answers?

George Bush is not the enemy. Poverty, a dirty environment, lousy schools and a stagnating economy are the enemies. Democrats must begin to realize this, and the 1992 election is a good place to begin showing that they do.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, Oct. 31, the 304th day of 1991. There are 61 days left in the year. This is Halloween.

Today's Highlight in History:
Fifty years ago, on October 31st, 1941, the U.S. Navy destroyer "Reuben James" was torpedoed by a German U-boat off the coast of Iceland with the loss of 115 lives, even though the United States had not yet entered World War II. (Another "Reuben James," a destroyer escort, was commissioned in 1943.)

On this date:
In 1517, Martin Luther posted the 95 Theses on the door of the Wittenberg Palace church, marking the start of the Protestant Reformation in Germany.

In 1795, English poet John Keats was born in London.

In 1864, Nevada became the 36th state.

In 1887, Nationalist Chinese leader Chiang Kai-shek was born in Chekiang Province.

In 1926, magician Harry Houdini died in Detroit at age 52 of gangrene and peritonitis resulting from a ruptured appendix.

Last drive-in in N.J. driven out

The last drive-in movie in New Jersey, which is just behind confusion on my list of favorite states, is closing. Believe it or not, that is significant.

The first drive-in movie in the country was in Camden, N.J. It opened, according to an Associated Press article that passed my way, 58 years ago.

Second, the closing of Route 35 Drive-In in Hazlet Township, N.J., which will now become "a shopping mall with a 12-theatre cineplex," is part of a trend toward a serious decline in drive-ins all over.

The article said there once were 4,000 drive-ins nationwide. Now, there are only 900, and most of them are in the Sun Belt, where drive-ins can operate all year and there is no possibility of freezing to death while watching Thelma and Louise drive willy-nilly across the desert.

And those cineplexes in shopping malls are convenient. If the movie you are watching (like Dead Again) is boring, you can go through the next door and watch your choice of 11 other movies, if the usher with all the zits and the earring doesn't catch you.

"Cineplex," by the way, is from the Latin phrase, "Cineplexus Milkduidius," which means marking up things like candy, popcorn and soft drinks about 9 million percent.

I could go to the Alamo theatre back home, pay a dime to get in and buy a candy bar, a bag of popcorn and a drink for an additional 15 cents.

Of course I didn't get to see anybody naked on the screen back then, but Randolph Scott riding the West of riff-raff was plenty of entertainment for me back then.

No wonder the drive-ins are closing. Who wants to have to get out of a car, hike a mile in the dark, tripping over speaker wires, in order to buy a Coke, which now costs what a six-pack of beer did 30 years ago?

And I don't guess teenagers need drive-ins any more for the primary reason we went to drive-ins.

That, of course, was to engage in some fair to partly cloudy petting. It rarely went past petting in those days.

After you figured out how to un-snap a bra with one hand in the dark, while engaged in a serious lip-lock, you were usually too tired and frustrated to try to take it any further.

I guess kids today get a suite at The Ritz, or at least a room at Motel Six, I mean Six.

But I have my mammaries. Memories. Who cared what was playing at the old drive-in?

Ben Hur? Didn't see the first chariot. The windows in my car were too fogged up. Mondo Trasho, a documentary about a certain occult practices in other parts of the world? There likely was the opportunity to see a couple of topless tribeswomen, but I was too involved in my own practice of trying to get around the bases.

Second is about as far as I ever reached, but that was better than watching Rock Hudson fake heterosexuality around Doris Day.

And, soon, there probably won't be a single drive-in left and they are already teaching in school what it took me years to find out in the back seat of a 1957 Chevy.

But I'm sort of glad that's the way I learned it. Sex education textbooks today probably don't mention a thing about explaining all those wrinkles in your clothes after watching The Glob That Ate Arkansas at Saturday Night at the drive-in.

Thomas vs. Hill was therapeutic TV

By MARTIN SCHRAM

"It was the best of times, it was the worst of times, it was the age of wisdom, it was the age of foolishness, it was the epoch of belief, it was the epoch of incredulity ... we had everything before us, we had nothing before us, we were all going direct to Heaven, we were all going direct the other way."

It was, Charles Dickens must have been trying to tell us, the Senate's tormented inquiry into the sexual harassment allegations brought against Judge Clarence Thomas by Professor Anita Hill.

It was, surely, the worst of times: The tragic public destruction of two private lives, forced before us in the worst of ways, because 14 white male senators didn't care enough about an initial allegation of sexual harassment to insist that it be fully investigated in the most proper—that is, private—forum.

But it was also the best of times: This was a National Consciousness Raising. The public vetting of Anita Hill vs. Clarence Thomas is already causing CEOs, managers, shopkeepers and workers everywhere to take a new look at their old views of sexual harassments—both physical and psychological. It has gotten us to talk openly about things we mainly just whispered about. We are all rethinking the propriety of what we tolerate in the workplace.

This was a broadcast happening that riveted Americans like nothing before. Not Army-McCarthy, not Watergate, not Ollie and Iran-Contra. Those were gripping television dramas about them—revelations of government people who committed crimes. This was about us—the one Washington scandal that was really about what was happening not just in government's workplaces, but ours.

Four of every ten working women say they have been victims of some form of sexual harassment on the job. That's why we watched during workdays and worknights, weekend days and weekend nights, from our barber shops and beauty shops, offices and warehouses, rec rooms and board rooms. In the name of getting ourselves a Supreme Court justice, we witnessed norms of broadcast decency being shattered by testimony that was the crudest of smut. This was part Supreme soap opera, part classic tragedy.

We found ourselves in the role of spectators at a bullfight, waiting for the destruction that was inevitable. And it came, as we knew it would—wounds inflicted by smears thrown from the Right, wounds inflicted by smears thrown from the Left, permanent wounds inflicted by the Senate warriors determined to win a political battle at all cost. Their smears, unprovable yet unrefutable, scarred forever two talented black Americans who had lifted themselves from rural poor circumstances to positions of professional respect, and all we could do was watch.

Because Judge Thomas and Professor Hill spoke so convincingly, our minds and hearts were captured by the last person we heard. And yet ...

Men looked at Clarence Thomas and asked themselves: "If a woman in my workplace fabricated a harassment accusation against me, could I ever prove it untrue?"

Women looked at Anita Hill and asked themselves: "If I ever dared to speak out against someone who'd harassed me, wouldn't I be subjected to the same sort of insults, hostility, character assassination and innuendo?"

So we fell into debates—believe him, believe her. And while we sensed from the outset that we'd never discover the whole truth, without a shade of doubt, we discovered searing truths about our own workplace wounds. Fortunately, we were forced to see them in time to treat them.

Long after the ugliness and unfairness of this public airing of the private lives of Judge Thomas and Professor Hill have receded, the lives of working Americans everywhere will be significantly better.

For seven days in October 1991, we shared an epoch of belief/incredulity that left us with new insights into the conduct of private matters in the public workplace. That is the enduring contribution of this Tale of Two Citizens.

Mischief over Miami

A Virgin Atlantic Lightship with the silhouette of a witch attached to its side glides over Miami Wednesday night, reminding residents in the Florida city that Thursday is Halloween. The blimp is the only one of its kind that is internally illuminated.

Aid flotilla arrives in besieged Dubrovnik

DUBROVNIK, Yugoslavia (AP) — A flotilla carrying top Croatian officials and humanitarian aid arrived at this port city today to the cheers and tears of residents tested by a month-old siege by Serbian-dominated federal forces.

The battle for Dubrovnik has become a major symbol of Croatia's struggle to secede from Serbian-dominated Yugoslavia, a civil war that officials say has left thousands dead since the republic declared independence in June.

Thousands of residents, many with tears in their eyes, sang the Croatian national anthem as they greeted the Slavija ferry that headed the 29-boat flotilla, delayed one day by a federal navy search, high seas and sporadic gunfire.

About 850 people joined the flotilla — the first to bring returning residents since the siege began a month ago. The boats also brought fruit, milk and other basics for the estimated 50,000 residents who have been without electricity and short of food and drinking water.

Gathered about a mile from a hill controlled by federal army troops, the crowd shouted "Stipe, Stipe!" for Stipe Mesic, the Croat who heads Yugoslavia's incapacitated eight-man federal presidency.

"This is a small step. We had to come here and show that we are all one body, one Croatia," Mesic told the cheering crowd from the top of the ferry's gangplank.

After Mesic spoke, the crowd sang the Croatian anthem. Many wept.

Officials said Mesic and other leaders could spend the night in the city, but it was not certain.

The success of Mesic in negotiating with the military safe passage through the naval blockade was a certain morale booster for Croats, embroiled in an undeclared war with the Serb-backed federal army and Serb insurgents. It began after Croatia declared independence June 25.

The city, normally a tourist mecca, has become a symbolic prize in the Croatian war. Its fall to the army would thus strike a psychological blow at Croatia.

"It is a symbolic trip, but it is also a concentration of good energy for the people of Dubrovnik and the people of Croatia," Mesic told The Associated Press.

So far boats have only been allowed through the blockade in small numbers, to bring aid or pick up refugees fleeing the besieged city. Some reporters and foreign officials have also been allowed in.

"We reached just one aim today. We came to Dubrovnik. But ... Dubrovnik is still under total army blockade. The second aim and the big one is to liberate Dubrovnik," he said.

"The enemy army has to be stopped just like (Saddam) Hussein," the Iraqi leader, Mesic said in the brief interview. "It is the same with (Slobodan) Milosevic," he said of Serbia's leader. "He is the same."

Mesic, rugged-looking in jeans, sweater and navy duffle coat, accused "mad generals" of trying to destroy Croatia.

"The spirit of the people cannot be stopped. Long live Dubrovnik," he told the crowd of about 2,000. Many held olive branches and small Croatian flags in a show of defiance against the Serb-backed army in the ongoing war of nerves.

The offensive against Dubrovnik began Oct. 1, but the army has not yet moved to enter the walled city.

As people in Dubrovnik celebrated, fighting continued elsewhere in Croatia, with attacks on the besieged Danube city of Vukovar and overnight fighting in Karlovac, Croatian defense officials said.

Croatia claims 5,000 people have been killed and hundreds of thousands have fled or lost their homes in the war pitting militant members of Croatia's Serb minority and the Serb-dominated Army against Croatian forces.

Baby Bells get high court go-ahead for developing information services

By ROBERT NAYLOR JR. Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The seven regional Bell telephone companies have Supreme Court approval to provide news and other information services, but Congress and the courts could still impose restraints.

The court's action Wednesday was a major setback for the newspaper industry, which fought vigorously to keep the "Baby Bells" out of an area newspapers long have dominated.

The court denied without comment a request from the American Newspaper Publishers Association for an order blocking entry by the Bells into the information services market while an appeals court considers the case.

ANPA filed its request with Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist, who referred it to the full court. Justice Sandra Day O'Connor did not take part in the case and did not say why. The brief order suggested that new Justice Clarence Thomas did participate.

The appeals court could still impose restrictions. And a bill sponsored by Rep. Jim Cooper, D-Ky., that also would place restraints on the regional companies is pending in the House.

Ron Stowe of Pacific Telesis, a spokesman for the regional Bells, said the court's decision was "very much in the public interest" because information services now offered to large businesses and specialized consumer markets will become practical for small companies and millions of other consumers.

But ANPA President Cathleen Black said the decision "makes it imperative that Congress pass the Cooper bill to prevent the regional Bell telephone companies from strangling competition in the vital field of information services and threatening the privacy of everyone who owns a telephone."

The Bell companies could provide such information as news reports, classified ads, sports scores and stock market quotes by phone.

Newspapers and other companies already provide some of those computerized services over the Bell companies' telephone lines. But none has been in the business long enough to prove it can be successful.

Prodigy, a computer service targeted to consumers, has yet to turn a profit after three years, although the company says it was not expected to make money yet.

Analysts say International Business Machines Corp. and Sears, Roebuck and Co. spent $500 million to develop Prodigy.

Two media companies, Knight-Ridder and Times-Mirror, tried unsuccessfully to provide news and other information using phone lines and personal computers. Analysts estimate that the Knight-Ridder service, a joint venture with American Telephone & Telegraph called Viewtron, lost $50 million.

"The risk of losing money is very high here," said Michael Noll, a communications professor at the University of Southern California and a telephone industry analyst. "You could easily lose $200 million."

Noll said that if newspapers could not successfully sell information by telephone, it was doubtful that phone companies — with no expertise in the area — could do so either.

"If there were some magic in it, don't you think the newspapers would have figured it out?" Noll said.

Consumer groups say they fear the phone companies will subsidize information services ventures with money from basic phone service — where they are regulated monopolies with guaranteed profits — and crush any competition.

The phone companies have dismissed that argument, saying regulators would not allow it.

Cooper has introduced the Telecommunications Act of 1991, which would require the Bell companies to relinquish their monopolies on local phone service before being allowed to offer informational services in their own regions. They could, however, immediately begin serving other areas, provided they set up separate subsidiaries.

"The idea is not to stop them from doing this, but to require them to do it in a way that you can monitor what they're doing," Cooper said.

El Paso selected for new factory

EL PASO (AP) — A New York-based light-switch manufacturer that was considering Texas and New Mexico as potential sites for a new plant has picked El Paso, city leaders say.

Leviton Manufacturing Co.'s decision ends months of fierce competition between officials in El Paso and the neighboring New Mexico community of Santa Teresa, N.M.

The manufacturer said it expects to employ 300 people during the first five years of its Texas operation and an additional 325 in the next five years, El Paso Mayor Bill Tilney said in a statement.

The jobs will pay $7.45 an hour. Leviton has maquiladoras in the Mexican cities of Juarez, across the border from El Paso; Tijuana, across the border from San Diego; and Carmargo in the state of Chihuahua. The new El Paso operation will supply the Mexican plants with plastic and metal components. Leviton is not closing its home plant in New York.

El Paso lured the manufacturer with an incentive package that gives the company a property-tax break on a portion of its building for five years. The tax credit can be extended another five years if Leviton makes good on a city requirement that it create a specific number of jobs.

Jury selection under way in rape case; Smith hopes for jurors with open minds

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Jury selection began today for William Kennedy Smith's rape trial, and as he arrived at court he said he hoped to find "six people who have an open mind" about the highly publicized case.

"I'm innocent of the charges," Smith told hundreds of reporters, photographers and onlookers thronged together under bright, balmy sunshine outside the Palm Beach County Courthouse. Selection began this morning for a six-member jury; Florida uses 12-member jury only in capital crimes. Prospective jurors in the case faced a marathon quiz on topics ranging from opinions about the Kennedy family to male-female relations.

He planned to take an active part in choosing those who will decide his fate, lead defense attorney Roy Black said late Wednesday.

"Today, the court will begin to try to find six people who have an open mind, who will look at all the evidence in the case," said Smith, the nephew of Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass. He is accused of raping a 30-year-old Jupiter woman at the Kennedy family estate in Palm Beach on Easter weekend.

"I'm confident that when the process is completed, I'll be found innocent of all the charges. I look forward to putting this behind me and getting on with my life and my career."

Smith, 31, a 1991 medical school graduate, was accompanied by his attorneys; his mother, Jean Kennedy Smith; his aunt Pat Lawford; sisters Amanda and Kim; and brother Stephen. Smith said he was grateful for his family's support. On Wednesday, Circuit Judge Mary Lupo cleared the way for jury selection after refusing to bar TV cameras from the selection and ruling the defense could use the alleged victim's underwear as evidence.

Lawyers would not speculate on how long it might take to seat a six-member jury but agreed the process was complicated by heavy publicity. Hundreds of reporters and photographers have converged on the city for the case.

Ms. Lupo agreed Wednesday to allow the accuser's clothing as evidence over the objections of prosecutor Moira Lasch, who said the defense wanted "to slur" the woman.

Black said lack of damage to the woman's clothing, particularly her bra, "clearly proves Mr. Smith's innocence."

The 30-year-old woman told police Smith tackled her and pinned her down while pulling up her dress March 30 on the Kennedy estate in Palm Beach. Smith's lawyers are expected to argue that the woman consented to sex.

Lasch argued that the woman's underpants, bra, pantyhose and dress might be improperly interpreted as "suggestivity," or implying that "someone who buys their underwear at Victoria's Secret cannot be a victim of a sexual battery."

Florida rape law was changed to restrict evidence about an alleged victim's clothing after a rape suspect was acquitted in 1989 and jurors later cited the woman's outfit — a lace miniskirt and no underpants.

In a full day of pretrial hearings, Lupo also restricted how far the defense may go in bringing up the woman's past abortions and out-of-wedlock child, and she rejected defense requests to bar TV cameras from jury selection.

Black argued that TV coverage would make jury selection even more difficult by making potential jurors uncomfortable about speaking freely.

But the judge said they could ask to answer in private — away from the media — sensitive questions, such as experiences in their family with rape, sexual abuse or domestic violence. They also were to fill out questionnaires.

Killer in Southern California preys on prostitutes, addicts

By LYNN ELBER
Associated Press Writer

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — In five years, a killer has plucked at least 17 victims from among society's most vulnerable ranks: women caught up in drugs and prostitution.

Their bodies have been discarded on hillsides, in alleys and along freeways in Riverside County, a rapidly growing desert area about 90 minutes east of Los Angeles.

Authorities say they are optimistic the killer will be caught, but they acknowledge that finding a serial killer who preys on prostitutes is never easy.

In a "typical homicide," the victim has an established routine and a circle of contacts, said Sheriff's Detective Henry Sawicki.

But prostitutes and addicts don't lead such well-ordered lives, he said. It isn't unusual for them to approach dangerous people, and their disappearances may go unnoticed for long periods of time.

Details of the investigation, being handled by a 14-member sheriff's task force, are closely guarded.

Police have released a list of victims, however, beginning with Michelle Gutierrez, 36, whose body was found Oct. 29, 1986. The body of the 17th victim, Catherine McDonald, 30, was found last month.

On Wednesday, the body of what is believed to be the 18th victim was discovered on a road near Riverside, Sawicki said. The 35-year-old woman's name was not immediately released.

Authorities no longer discuss how each victim was killed. Some of the earliest ones were found naked and were stabbed or strangled.

The way the women lived is part of what makes their deaths so tough to solve, experts said.

When prostitutes are involved, police are sometimes less likely to believe them when they try to provide information, said John Douglas, an FBI expert on serial slayings. He is chief of the investigative support unit for the bureau's National Center for the Analysis of Violent Crime, based in Quantico, Va.

Overburdened police departments may also assign such cases a lower priority because public pressure to find a killer isn't as great, he said.

Unlike the random Night Stalker attacks of Richard Ramirez that terrorized the Los Angeles area in the 1980s, the attacks in Riverside County have not left residents feeling especially vulnerable.

"I don't do the big D (drugs). I'm not female and I'm not a prostitute," said one young man, a merchant at Lake Elsinore, 60 miles east of Los Angeles.

The town, population 15,000, is where seven of the bodies were found and where some of the victims walked Main Street — a few blocks of stores, homes and weed-covered lots that end abruptly at the broad sweep of Interstate 15.

"You sell your body, you go druggin', you get what you expect," said Beatrice Hathorn, owner of an antiques shop. But she said she felt for the victims, as did resident Victor Ramirez.

"It's sad. They got a right to live, too," he said.

Authorities said they are vigorously pursuing the case.

"We're not ... just counting bodies and doing what we have to get through the day. We really feel we're going to catch the people or person doing this," Sawicki said.

There are countless tips to pursue, he said, including calls from people who "suspect their husband, their boyfriend, the guy next door."

"We don't look at any of these things flippantly," he said.

The father of one Riverside victim said he is satisfied with the task force's efforts. The body of Robert Chapman's daughter, Julie Angel, 36, was found on a dirt road in November 1989. She was the seventh victim.

"We cling to every little thing," Chapman said. "I spend days thinking I know they're doing something."

He noted that the killer has recently become more brazen, leaving the body of the 17th victim at the construction site where she died rather than dumping it elsewhere.

"I think he wants to be caught," Chapman said, hope in his voice.

Wise consumer choices may make use of 'rules of thumb'

Consumer choices are more for reaching than deciding which items to buy and what price you are willing to pay. Consumer choices involve: (1) Nations creating policies that are responsive to consumer perspectives; (2) Corporations making safety their first concern and developing quality products and services; (3) Governments using tax dollars wisely, responsibly, and ethically; (4) Charities inspiring us to support worthy causes with our financial resources; (5) Parents putting safe, nutritious food on the table; and (6) families knowing how to spend and save wisely so they have enough money left over to pursue a dream or enjoy a special pastime.

Consumers, as busy people, often rely on shopping "rules of thumb" to make the best choices in the marketplace. This can be a problem for consumers because the "rules of thumb" about product quality and/or price may no longer hold true.

Research evidence suggests that the old "rules of thumb" may not work. Here is a current look at some old "rules of thumb":

(1) Buy a Known Brand. Once consumers have found a brand name they believe works for them, they often continue to buy that brand without further comparisons. Research evidence suggests, however, that past performance of a brand is a poor predictor of future quality. Analysis of ratings from Consumer Reports suggests that brands rated as "tops" vary widely from year to year.

(2) Look For Seals of Approval. Some consumers may equate certain product seals of approval with quality, but in actuality, they represent a limited refund or replacement policy.

(3) Look for Seals of Approval. Some consumers may erroneously assume that the top of the line product may be the "best" choice. Research has shown that even with large jumps along a product line, quality may not change dramatically. Consumers who buy "top of the line" may be buying features they do not want or need.

(4) Price Indicates Quality. Research findings show that consumers believe there is a positive relationship between price and quality. But several studies have demonstrated a poor relationship and some a negative correlation so that higher prices are sometimes associated with lower quality. Therefore, consumers should comparison shop for price once a product decision has been reached.

(5) Larger Sizes Are Better Buys. Consumers often think there is an economy of scale by buying the largest size. However, research shows that this may not always be the case. Consumers should use unit pricing to determine if the largest size is, in fact, the lowest cost per unit.

Making a purchase decision using "rules of thumb" is not a bad strategy, but when the rules change and shopping behavior does not, consumers may be paying more than they need to and may not be receiving the quality of product they expect.

BREAD BAGS AND LEAD
Recent consumer warning has been issued related to the lead contained in the ink used to print labels on plastic bread wrappers. Upon analyzing 18 bread wrappers representing 14 different national brands, researchers at the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey - Robert Wood Medical School detected considerable amounts of lead in the printed sections of all but one. A separate look at nearly 100 bread bags by Consumers Union produced similar results.

The lead does not migrate through the plastic and contaminate the bread inside. But when a consumer turns the bag inside out and reuses it to store other foods, the print can leach unhealthy high levels of the metal into those items. Therefore, consumers wanting to reuse plastic bread bags should shake bread crumbs out, and need be, rinse the inside of the bag before adding a new food to it. If you want to reuse plastic bread bags - do not turn bags inside out placing printed label next to food.

Lead poisoning can damage kidneys and liver along with the nervous, reproductive, cardiovascular, immune, and gastrointestinal systems.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Motorists, here's a warning: Don't interrupt cops at work

DEAR ABBY: Will you please ask your readers never to interrupt a police officer in the middle of a traffic stop unless it is a dire emergency? (Directions to the nearest restaurant don't count!)

Abby, we police officers never know who we are pulling over during a routine stop. It could be a murderer, an escaped felon or a minister. More law enforcement personnel are injured or killed during routine traffic stops than almost any other type of police activity. (It's twice as dangerous at night.)

Please don't pull up right next to me as I'm approaching the car I just stopped and ask me for directions! We could both be in danger and I might not be able to guarantee your safety.

We also make stops where the element of danger is known beforehand — such as an armed robber fleeing the scene. This is usually a planned stop where suspects are taken out of a car at gunpoint. If you should see one or more police officers with their guns drawn and pointed at someone, don't walk up and ask, "What's going on?" We are not filming "T.J. Hooker."

If a police officer is all red in the face and yelling at you and waving an arm in a sideways motion while holding a gun in the other, don't wave back. It isn't a greeting. Move! You are in the line of fire!

Thanks, Abby, for letting me get this off my chest.

CALIFORNIA COP,
LOMPOC, CALIF.

DEAR READERS: He's right. When officers are on duty, they are not playing cops and robbers; it's the real thing. So, please, don't interrupt an officer who is obviously busy doing his job.

DEAR ABBY: My husband (I'll call him Barry) received an invitation to the wedding of his first cousin — I'll call him Joe. I realize that the wedding invitations were sent out by Joe's fiancée, whom we have never met, but it was addressed only to my husband, Barry. We have been married for 15 years and have two children. We see Joe only once or twice a year and he knows that we are married.

Am I to assume that I am not invited to this wedding? Or am I to assume it was an oversight on the part of Joe's fiancée? Also, are the children invited?

BARRY'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Your husband should call his cousin Joe and explain this dilemma. I hope Joe will advise his fiancée that cousin Barry has a wife and two children, after which you will probably be invited. But don't bring your children unless they are specifically invited.

"How to Be Popular" is an excellent guide to becoming a better conversationalist and a more attractive person. Public Notice

On July 1, 1991, Southwestern Bell Telephone filed an application with the Public Utility Commission of Texas that proposes to delete Paragraph 3.4(G) from Section 3 of Southwestern Bell's intrastate Access Service Tariff, which concerns credits where a customer uses Switched Access Service to furnish a service which has been defined to be an exchange service. The application was assigned Docket No. 10463.

Because Southwestern Bell is not aware of any customers who presently use switched access service to furnish an exchange service, Southwestern Bell does not believe its revenues will be affected. However, certain interexchange carrier customers of switched access service have made claims under the aforementioned tariff. Such customers, but only to the extent they provide an exchange service using switched access, would be affected by this application. Based on claims made for credits (assuming such credits were allowable), Southwestern Bell's revenues would be affected by no more than $1,168,962 annually, which is .037 percent of the Company's adjusted revenue for the 12-month period ending December 31, 1990. It is not possible to know how many interexchange carriers might believe themselves entitled to credits, but 189 carriers have registered with the Commission pursuant to PUC Substantive Rule 23.61.

The tariff, after suspension, is proposed to be effective May 1, 1992.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible, but no later than November 15, 1991. A request to intervene, participate, or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Blvd., Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information may also be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Public Information Office at (512) 458-0256. The telecommunications device for the deaf (TDD) number is (512) 458-0221.

Rodeo duo has double the fun

Ever wonder what it's like being a twin? I've had very little experience dealing with the biological phenomenon, but I've heard all kinds of claims they have uncanny, non-verbal communicative abilities. In many cases, one supposedly is able to sense what is happening to the other though they may be a continent apart. Recently, I decided to experiment on Sarah and Farah Oxley - "mirror twins" (their terminology) who regularly compete in Tri-State High School Rodeo Association (TSHSRA) events.

I'd seen them racing individually across arenas in timed events at Tri-State Rodeos and often had trouble identifying whether it was Sarah or Farah.

My only salvation was hearing properly the announcer when one or the other entered the arena. But all it would take was a little static on the public address system and Farah could easily sound like Sarah.

At the TSHSRA Directors' Rodeo held in Canadian, I talked with each of them separately, hoping I could trip up one or both of them.

Sarah and Farah are blond, 14-year-old freshmen at Pampa High School.

The twins have competed in barrel racing and pole bending events "since we were real little," according to Farah.

"Who is older," I asked each of them.

"Sarah is ... by about a minute," said Farah.

Out of earshot of her twin, Sarah answered, "Me, by a minute."

Several questions later, I realized my efforts were failing and it would take extraordinary means, possibly a devious query, to elicit different answers for the same question.

"Who's better in rodeo?" I asked each of them.

"I don't know," said Farah. "Sarah's better at poles, but ... it just kind of depends in barrels."

Sarah later answered, "I'm better at poles and she (Farah) is better at barrels."

I had finally stumbled on something they disagreed on, even if ever so slightly.

While typing in the River Road Tri-State Rodeo results earlier in the week, I found they were correct about pole bending. Sarah placed seventh by tripping the timer at 22.711 seconds; Farah finished eighth with a 23.705-second run through the cloverleaf pattern.

Asked if they are tempted to confuse people in everyday life by switching places, Sarah, who appears more reserved, said, "Yes."

"But do you switch places?" I asked.

"No," said Sarah with a wide grin.

I think I spoke with both of them; but I couldn't swear by it. All it takes is a blink and they could have pulled the old switcheroo on me.

They wouldn't do that to me, would they? Naw.

BITS and SPURS

Folks, I'm downright perturbed with some of the printed material that's being proliferated by the anti-lottery people. When I got done reading some of it, I felt like I would be taking food right out of the mouths of babies and forcing people out of their homes if I voted for it.

I sure believe the money spent on the subversive literature proliferated by the anti-lottery groups could have and should have gone towards a better cause. And I certainly hope the money wasn't scooped out of the weekly collection basket.

Shame on you! Let the public decide for themselves. I wish you a lotto luck in your negative campaigning. You'll need it because a Texas lottery is a foregone conclusion. Perhaps a better look at bingo operations is needed.

The Pampa Harvesters are ranked No. 23 again this week in the Harris Rating System. I find it hard to believe a win against Randall isn't worth at least one step up the ladder.

Harris has the Green Team favored by 17 points Friday night against Dumas in a road game. The only way Pampa won't beat the spread is if there's two feet of snow on the ground.

I'd sure like to know who is responsible for making the announced switch on television from the Thoroughbred Breeders' Cup Classic to a football game. I wait all year to watch the seven horse races worth more than $10 million. Boo!

Good luck to Pampan Shawn Thompson who is headed to the Coors World Finals opening Friday in El Paso. Thompson is this year's Texas Cowboys Rodeo Association bareback champion.

Barkley calls 76ers racist

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Charles Barkley says he feels obligated to speak out against racism. Even if it involves the Philadelphia 76ers.

Barkley accused the 76ers on Wednesday of practicing racism, predicting the team would keep backup center Dave Hoppen on its 12-man roster as the Sixers' lone white player.

Barkley also indicated he thought team owner Harold Katz would base his decision on the fans' feelings, not personal prejudice.

"I don't think Harold is racist, but I said it would surprise me if we had an all-black team. And I stick by that statement," Barkley said after practice Wednesday in responding to statements he made Tuesday night on a radio talk show.

Katz was in California at the NBA Board of Governors meeting and "probably is going to refrain from commenting," said 76ers spokesman Zack Hill.

Coach Jim Lynam said he wants a winning team, regardless of the color of the players.

Cavalier: Dumas won't hide

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Writer

Pampa may be on the brink of winning the District 1-4A title, but head coach Dennis-Cavalier doesn't look for Dumas to go off and hide from the Harvesters.

Quite the contrary, Dumas is deadlocked with Randall for second place at 2-1 and Cavalier believes the Demons could give the Harvesters a tough tussle Friday night.

"Dumas is vastly improved and they don't much resemble their team of a year ago. They can play competitively with anybody and that includes the Harvesters," Cavalier said.

Dumas has gone from a 1-9 showing a year ago to having a shot at the playoffs. The Demons have a 4-4 overall record and could make a post-season appearance by winning their last two games.

"Dumas has played well all season long," Cavalier said. "They've lost some games they probably should have won, but the turnovers hurt them."

Solid performances from two-way starter Jay Grosfield (240-pound senior) at tight end-defensive tackle, Craig Dunham (190-pound junior) at wide receiver, Jamie Valdez (190-pound senior) and James Smith (170-pound senior) at tailbacks have been largely responsible for the Demons' resurgence.

"Grosfield is one of the best linemen in the district," Cavalier said. He's very highly-touted. Dumas uses a tandem two-tailback system and both Valdez and Smith are tough and durable in those roles."

Dunham, who was second-team all-district as a sophomore last season, has been sidelined by injuries for much of the season, but is back in the lineup now.

"He came back about two weeks ago and he's made an impact on their system already. We're going to have to be concerned about him when they throw the ball," added Cavalier.

The Harvesters pulled out a 28-19 win over Randall last week to gain sole possession of first place in district with a 3-0 record.

"We felt like we were going to play a quality team and Randall didn't disappoint us," Cavalier said. "They had a good game plan and they executed it real well against us."

Pampa had trailed Randall, 13-0, in the first quarter before rallying back for the win.

"We were geared more to Randall's passing game and we were surprised that they were able to move the ball on us. Once we got our game plan going I felt like we had control of things, but we went through some scary moments," Cavalier said.

The Harvesters did suffer a couple of key injuries in the win over Randall. Middle linebacker Justin Johnson (190-pound junior) and Matt Clark (226-pound junior) a two-way starter in the line are both out with knee injuries. Johnson is lost for the season and Clark will miss Friday's game and could miss the remainder of the season, Cavalier said.

Clark's defensive-tackle spot will be filled on a rotational basis by Bryan

Hall, Chris Whitney and Troy Reeves. Starting defensive tackle Kurt West will alternate with Brian Calfy at Clark's offensive guard position. Darin Wyatt will take over Johnson's linebacker spot.

Record-breaking tailback Sammy Laury will be at or near 100 percent for Friday night's game. Laury, a 174-pound senior, injured a hamstring against Randall.

"He's been through rehabilitation and is recovering nicely," Cavalier said. Laury rushed for 120 yards against Randall to set the school's single-season rushing record. Laury's 1,120 total yards breaks the old record of 1,070 yards set by Howie Lewis in 1954.

The Harvesters, 7-1 for the season, need only to win one of their last two games to clinch a playoff spot. Winning both, of course, would make Pampa the district champions.

"We want to be district champions, but we play only one game a week and right now we're concentrating on Dumas," Cavalier said.

Dumas head coach Ron Rogers is hoping to surprise Pampa, but he knows his Demons face a difficult task.

"Pampa is an awfully sound football team. They don't make a lot of mistakes," Rogers said. "They're probably going to be the best football team we've played this season."

The Harris Rating System has Pampa favored by 17 points over Dumas. Kick-off time is 7:30 p.m. in Dumas.

With the win over Randall last week, Cavalier moved into fourth place on the all-time win list among Harvester coaches.

Cavalier (24-22-10) trails John Welborn (27-23 from 1974-78), Tom Tipps (54-17 from 1947-53), and Odus Mitchell (81-40-3 from 1929-40).

Canadian to fight Panhandle for playoff berth

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Writer

The importance of the Canadian-Panhandle showdown Friday night can be spelled out in one word: Playoffs.

The winner of the District 2-2A clash qualifies for post-season play. The loser will be left with only memories of what might have been.

"The winner goes to the playoffs, no matter what happens later. The loser can get ready for the off-season. They can go ahead and finish the season, but their playoff hopes are dead," said Canadian head coach Paul Wilson.

Both clubs are deadlocked for second place in 2-2A with 2-1 records. District-leading Wellington, unbeaten and 10th-ranked in the state, has defeated both Canadian and Panhandle to lift its record to 3-0.

Last week's hard-fought 28-22 win over Canadian all but locked up a playoff spot for Wellington, which is 8-0 for the season.

"We were so disappointed after looking at the game films. We had our chances, but just couldn't get it done. It was a win we wanted awfully bad, but the kids did put out a good effort," Wilson said.

Canadian twice had leads, but victory slipped out of the Wildcats' grasp when the Rockets' defense came through with some big plays in the fourth quarter.

Wilson looks for Canadian's confrontation with Panhandle (7:30 p.m. on the Panthers' field) to be a defensive battle.

"It's the same old Panhandle with that good defense. They really pack it in on the line and make it tough on the running game," Wilson said.

Panhandle's offense also has some punch. Running back Keith Reining rushed for 139 yards and a touchdown in the Panthers' 42-0 win over White Deer last week. Heath Haseloff at fullback is also a scoring threat.

"Both of these players are quick and fast. They also have a smart quarterback ((Stan Kotara) who knows how to run their offense," Wilson said. "They've got some good players at the skill positions."

Canadian can also make things happen on offense. Steven Flowers and John Sam Krehbiel at running backs combine to give Canadian a solid running attack.

The Wildcats can also throw as quarterback Shad Jergenson demonstrated against Wellington. He completed 10 of 19 pass attempts for 149 yards and a touchdown.

Both Canadian and Panhandle have 6-2 overall records.

In other area games Friday night, Wheeler hosts Shamrock. Lefors visits Higgins, McLean welcomes Follett and Miami is at Groom.

No. 2-ranked Wheeler remains tied with Memphis for the District 1-1A lead at 3-0. Those two teams are headed for a showdown Nov. 7, the final game of the regular season.

Two important games are on tap in Canadian Wildcats head football coach Paul Wilson watches intently during the Wellington game last week.

the District 1-1A six-man ranks. Follett (2-1) will be trying to knock off first-place McLean (3-0) in a bid for a possible playoff spot. The Miami-Groom winner will still be in the playoff hunt while the loser will likely be out of the race. Both teams, along with Follett, are in a three-way tie for second.

Top-ranked, Class 4A Bastrop stripped of two victories

LOCKHART (AP) - Bastrop, the top-ranked football team in Class 4A, may not make the playoffs because of an ineligible player.

The executive committee of District 26-4A voted unanimously Wednesday to strip Bastrop of two victories, dropping its record to 6-2.

The top two teams in the district qualify for post-season play, and changing the two victories to losses drops the Bears to 1-2, two games behind Lockhart and Schertz Clemens, both of whom are 3-0.

Barring a reversal in the ruling, Lockhart is now assured of a berth in the playoffs, and Clemens will wrap up a spot by winning either of its last two regular-season games.

However, Clemens' last two games are its two toughest of the year. The Buffaloes are at Bastrop Friday night and at home against Lockhart on Nov. 8. If Clemens loses both and Bastrop beats New Braunfels Canyon in its final game, Bastrop and Clemens would finish with identical 3-2 district records and Bastrop would go into the playoffs because of its victory over Clemens.

B.J. Stamps, assistant to University Interscholastic League director Bailey Marshall, told committee members that a 2-day investigation by the Texas Education Agency concluded that an algebra teacher changed the player's grade from failing to passing.

Bastrop head football coach Les Johnson declined to identify the player. He said the player is a running back who substituted on alternate plays.

The player was failing an elective algebra class he did not need to graduate, said Bastrop principal James Richardson. The teacher changed the grade after it was decided that the class was too difficult for the student, he said.

"Our contention is that the teacher is in control of grades," Richardson said. "We don't try to regulate why teachers give the grades they give. It's a common-practice for teachers to give students the grade they think they are worthy of. I support the teacher."

According to the state's no-pass, no-play law, any student who fails a class is ineligible for all extracurricular activities for six weeks.

"I feel like we've done nothing wrong," Bastrop coach Les Johnson said. "Our principals and our administration have done everything they feel is correct. We didn't know we were breaking any rules. I still feel there was not a rule broken."

Twins' Kelly named top AL manager

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) - Even at the very end, Tom Kelly made all the right moves. It was Kelly, the manager of Minnesota Twins, who sent Gene Larkin up as a pinch-hitter. And it was Kelly who gave Larkin the edge to drive in the biggest run of 1991 by keeping the player sharp all season.

"I got almost 300 at-bats and I wasn't an everyday player," Larkin said after his bases-loaded single beat the Atlanta Braves 1-0 in Game 7 of the World Series. "T.K. does a great job of using everybody."

For that — and for guiding the Twins from last place in 1990 to the AL West championship in 1991 — Kelly on Wednesday was named American League Manager of the Year.

Johnson signs with Hornets

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Larry Johnson says he didn't give in. He just wants to play in the NBA.

"If you ask some people, they would say I caved in," the NBA's No. 1 draft pick said Wednesday after he signed with the Charlotte Hornets. "But I'm just anxious to get into camp and get into the rotation."

"I don't feel like I'm in game shape, but the only way to do that is to get out there with the team. But I feel I can go Friday night."

The Hornets open their season Friday night in Boston.

After missing 27 days of the preseason, Johnson, a 6-foot-5 power forward from UNLV, signed a six-year contract worth $3.3 million a year.

The first year will be worth $1.95 million, the same offer that the Hornets made at least a month ago.

"I'm ready to play," Johnson said. "I was ready three or four months ago. Nothing has been as terrible as waiting to get into camp."

Though Johnson has worked out in Dallas with a personal trainer, he acknowledged his first practice with the team today will be a physical struggle.

"I'll probably fall out at practice," Johnson said. "I don't know what it's like to practice, it's been so long."

Johnson missed the preseason while his agent, Steve Endicott, and Hornets officials tried to work out a deal.

The negotiations started off on friendly terms when the Hornets made Johnson the top pick in June's college draft, but they soon became acrimonious. Earlier this month, each side accused the other of being ignorant of the NBA's salary cap rules.

Johnson said the impending season opener helped trigger a settlement.

"I didn't want to miss the first game," he said. "My dream was to play in the NBA."

Endicott called the talks the most frustrating he's been involved in during his eight years as an agent.

"I laid awake at night many times wondering if I could have done anything different," he said.

Larry Johnson gestures as he answers a question during a news conference in Charlotte, N.C. Wednesday.

Both sides had plenty of incentive to resolve the impasse before today at 6 p.m., when all NBA clubs are required to turn in their final 12-man rosters.

Endicott said reports that Johnson was prepared to play in Europe were serious. Asked the same question, Johnson said he never discussed playing for any European team, but left the decision up to his agent.

The contract includes an escape clause for Johnson after four years and one for the team after five, officials said.

Hornets coach Allan Bristow, faced with the loss of starting center Mike Gminski due to a pulled hamstring, said earlier Wednesday that Johnson will not start but should get plenty of playing time against the Celtics.

"We don't run a lot of plays on offense, so it won't be hard for him to learn," he said. "And we run a lot of pressure defense like he played at UNLV."

Bristow said the biggest question mark right now is Johnson's physical condition.

"Anybody who's mentally tough is a welcome addition right now," he said. "We don't want to put too much pressure on Larry right now."

Festin is favorite in Classic

NEW YORK (AP) — Too long for In Excess, and so long for Farma Way: Two of the top contenders for Horse of the Year are out of the Breeders' Cup Classic, the sport's richest race.

In Excess, winner of four straight Grade I stakes, was entered instead in the Breeders' Cup Mile on grass. His trainer, Bruce Jackson, said the 1 1/4-mile Classic, which offers $3 million in prize money, was "too much to ask of my horse."

In Excess has run 12 of his 19 lifetime starts on grass.

Farma Way, winner of the American Championship Racing Series, was taken out of the Classic, as well. Trainer D. Wayne Lukas said the colt had sustained a slightly sprained right front ankle.

"We wanted to do the right thing by the horse. This is a very good horse with a bright future," Lukas said. "This was a gut decision that I made this morning."

Lukas said he first noticed the injury on Tuesday and hoped it would improve.

The Classic is one of seven Breeders' Cup races, worth a total of $10 million in purses and bringing together many of the world's best thoroughbreds, that will be run at Churchill Downs on Saturday. Horses were entered on Wednesday.

Eleven were entered for the Classic. The 5-year-old Argentine-bred Festin, trained by Ron McAnally, was made the early 3-1 favorite and will start out of the No. 6 post position under jockey Eddie Delahoussaye. Festin was runnerup to Farma Way in the 10-race ACRS and is coming off a victory in the Jockey Club Gold Cup on Oct. 5 at Belmont.

Also entered were two Kentucky Derby winners, Unbridled, who won both the Derby and the Classic in 1990, and this year's Derby winner, Strike the Gold. Unbridled, who will start from the seventh post position, was the 5-1 second choice, and Strike the Gold, who will break from No. 10, was listed at 10-1.

In Excess will be in a full field of 14 for the $1 million Mile and was made the second favorite, at 3-1, to another McAnally entry, Tight Spot — winner of his last eight starts, including the 1 1/4-mile Arlington Million on Sept. 1. Tight Spot also is a Horse of the Year candidate.

In Excess won the Suburban Handicap at Breeders' Cup Classic hopeful Festin plants a big kiss on the mouth of hot walker Tony Ortega Wednesday in Louisville, Ky.

Belmont on July 4, setting a track record of 1:58 1/5 for 1 1/4 miles on dirt. But Jackson said the Churchill Downs track was softer and deeper than most tracks, "and we felt the track would make it difficult for him to get the 1 1/4 miles."

Jackson said he still considered In Excess the leading contender for Horse of the Year.

Housebuster was made the only odds-on early favorite, at 4-5, in the $1 million Sprint, which drew 11 entries and will be run over 6 furlongs. Housebuster was the 1990 sprint champion, although illness forced him to miss the Breeders' Cup. He has won four of seven starts this year but was beaten by In Excess in the Metropolitan Handicap at a mile on May 27.

Dance Smartly, unbeaten this year and winner of the Canadian Triple Crown against colts, is an even-money favorite in the Distaff at 1 1/8 miles for $1 million in purse money. Trained by Jim Day, Dance Smartly will be opposed by two Shug McGaughey-trained fillies, Versailles Treaty, at 7-2, and Queena, at 5-1.

Another Canadian-bred trained by Day, Sky

Classic, was the 5-2 early choice in the $2 million Turf.

Preach, trained by McGaughey and ridden by Julie Krone, was made the early favorite, at 3-1, in the $1 million Juvenile Fillies. Bertrando, trained by Bruce Headley and ridden by Alex Solis, was the 5-2 morning line choice for the $1 million Juvenile.

For the first time, a foreign horse will be entered in each of the Breeders' Cup races. French trainer Francois Boutin has three horses entered — Cudas in the Classic, Priolo in the Mile, and Arazi in the Juvenile.

Of the three, Arazi, at 3-1, was given the best chance of winning. He has made seven starts this year, all in France, and won six of them, including the Grade I Grand Criterium at Longchamp on Oct. 5.

"Some of the European horses have a very good chance to win," said English trainer John Hammond, who has Dear Doctor in the Turf at 12-1 and Polar Falcon in the Mile at 8-1. "We have run against most of the major horses here, and I think we've got a good chance."

Garner named as Brewers' manager

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Phil Garner has never managed a minor- or major-league baseball team. But don't tell him he doesn't know about the modern-day player. He does. He was one of them.

"Having come through an era where we've had drug abuse, where we've had a lot of different things happen, having been on the ground floor of free agency and a whole new era there, players today can't say it was different when you played," said Garner, named on Wednesday as the Milwaukee Brewers' new manager.

"I've been through all of this stuff so I can draw on some of those experiences."

Survey finds most Americans misinformed about solid waste disposal

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans say they support environmental protection, but most aren't willing to pay more for "green products" and many are misinformed about the effectiveness of recycling, said a poll released today by a business-oriented group.

The nationwide survey of 1,004 adults found that half felt a landfill located within 10 miles of their homes would very likely cause health problems. Three-fourths were enthusiastic about waste-to-energy conversion, but 40 percent thought such a facility within 10 miles would be unhealthy.

The survey was conducted in August by the Roper Organization for Citizens For The Environment, or CFE, an advocacy group that says it seeks "pro-market" solutions to environmental problems. The margin of error was plus or minus 4 percentage points.

In the poll, 58 percent of the respondents said disposable diapers help cause severe solid waste problems and 57 percent said plastic foam is a serious polluter.

But Stephen Gold, executive director of CFE, said the reality is that such items account for little

"The public doesn't have a good grasp of the problem. It perceives certain items as being bad, especially non-recyclable products, even if those products play only a minor role in our solid waste problems."

— Stephen Gold
CFE executive director

more than 1 percent of solid waste and occupy less than 1 percent of landfills.

"The public doesn't have a good grasp of the problem," Gold said. "It perceives certain items as being bad, especially non-recyclable products, even if those products play only a minor role in our solid waste problems."

More than one-third of those sursions on biodegradable products.

Florida, for example, prohibits non-degradable retail plastic grocery bags and is considering a ban on plastic foam, Gold said.

On a general level, 48 percent of those polled said environmental considerations were more important than economic growth, compared with 27 percent who put the economy first. But 38 percent said they would not pay more to get environmentally superior products.

While consumers with incomes of more than $50,000 spent more on environmentally friendly "green products," the average increase in the price of an item they were willing to pay dropped from 8.2 percent in 1990 to 6.8 percent in 1991.

More than two-thirds in the highest income bracket recycle newspapers, against only 23 percent of those earning less than $15,000 annually, the survey indicated. Six out of 10 Americans recycle aluminum cans, compared with 46 percent for newspapers, 38 percent for plastic bottles and 37 percent for glass.

CFE was founded in January by the Citizens for a Sound Economy Foundation, which promotes lower taxes, free trade and government deregulation.
