A FREEDOM NEWSPAPER

Three vehicles and an 18-wheeler sit this morning on 23rd between Price Rd. and Rosewood after they became stranded in snow drifts Thursday night. Some of the drifts were up to four feet high, but had reconfigured themselves prior to this picture being taken.

Snow storm leaves drifts on roadways

From Staff and Wire Reports

A strong north wind coupled with loosely packed snow to create high drifts around the northeastern Panhandle Thursday night and this morning.

Three motorists and the driver of an 18-wheeler were forced to abandon their vehicles Thursday night on 23rd between Rosewood and Price Road because of drifts up to four feet high on the road.

Those vehicles remained on the street through 8:30 this morning.

Lynn Thornton, city of Pampa safety and risk manager, said a police car became stranded in a snow drift at 25th and Perryton Pkwy. shortly after 3 a.m. today. Approximately $200 worth of damage was caused to the vehicle when a wrecker attempted to pull the cruiser out of the snow, Thornton said.

City officials also reported an ornamental tree on the grassy median on North Somerville was knocked over sometime late Thursday or early this morning by a motorist who lost control on the ice.

Four traffic accidents were reported in Pampa Thursday, only slightly higher than normal for any 24-hour period in the city.

However, this morning four more accidents were reported between 7 and 8:30 a.m. as people headed for work and school.

Emergency Management coordinator Ken Hall said drivers should keep in mind that a variety of conditions, including snow, ice, drifts and small patches of clear road are combining to contribute to the number of accidents.

Thursday's high only reached 22, with the low falling only four degrees lower during the night for a reading of 18 degrees.

While forecasters are calling for temperatures to reach the lower 40s today and Saturday, another cold front carrying snow is expected to hit the Pampa area by Sunday.

Over the last two days only 3 inches of snow was reported in Pampa, but Boise city had 8 inches, Perryton reported 6 and Dalhart got 5.

The Associated Press reported that the storm system also brought unseasonably cold readings to North Texas before moving eastward into Louisiana and Mississippi.

Lows tonight will be in the mostly in the 30s in West Texas, ranging from the 20s in the Panhandle to the 40s in the Big Bend area, in the 30s across North Texas and in the 30s in the Hill Country and in the 40s and 50s elsewhere in South Texas.

Highs Saturday will be in the 30s in the Panhandle and in the 50s and 60s elsewhere in West Texas, in the 50s in North Texas and in the 60s and 70s in South Texas.

Temperatures were in the 20s across West Texas early today, but northerly winds at 15-25 mph made it seem much colder.

Judge grants injunction on auto insurance plan

AUSTIN (AP) — A judge's ruling against an emergency rule to bring relief to perhaps millions of uninsured Texas motorists will be appealed, the State Board of Insurance said.

State District Judge Scott McCown on Thursday granted an order to stop the board from enforcing a rule that would prohibit insurers from charging higher prices or denying coverage to first-time auto insurance buyers.

In granting a temporary injunction, McCown said the rule was too broad in that it covers not only liability automobile insurance, as required by law, but all forms of insurance, including collision.

He also said that the rule should not have been adopted on an emergency basis, because the board should have known there was a longstanding problem with uninsured motorists.

McCown set a trial on the merits of the case for Dec. 16.

Appeals announced Thursday will keep the emergency rule in effect for the time being, said Public Insurance Counsel Amy Johnson, who represents consumers.

On Sept. 27, the Board of Insurance approved the emergency rule in response to reports that insurance companies were either refusing to write policies or gouging thousands of Texans who were purchasing mandatory auto liability insurance for the first time.

But McCown blocked immediate enforcement of the rule after the insurance industry filed suit, and a three-day hearing on the rule in his court was concluded Wednesday.

Insurance companies contend the rule would increase insurance costs to most motorists because previously uninsured drivers are bigger risks.

State insurance consumer representatives, however, say that first-time buyers should be charged on the basis of their driving record.

The issue emerged after the Legislature passed an insurance bill that essentially forces drivers to buy auto liability insurance in order to obtain or renew a driver's license, license plate, or safety inspection sticker. Subsequent convictions require impounding the vehicle for 180 days.

McCown noted that as of Sept. 1, when the law went into effect, some 3 million Texans, or one in four drivers, needed to obtain the required minimum insurance.

At issue, McCown said, is whether there is "an imminent peril to the public health, safety, or welfare" that justifies adoption of the rule on an emergency basis.

"Here the concern is one of 'public welfare,'" he said.

"The danger to the 'public welfare' identified by the board is that without the emergency rule 'there will be a significant segment of the driving population for which insurance will not be available at an affordable cost,'" the judge said.

"We have long known that many people do not have liability insurance," McCown said. "This situation is not an imminent peril but a chronic problem that the Legislature has been trying to solve for years."

He said the Board of Insurance, "acting with reasonable diligence, could and should have foreseen the particular problem here long before it became an imminent peril."

A trailer parked next to the north side of the garage was also badly damaged in the blaze. At right, smoke and steam billow from a garage fire at 416 N. Nelson Thursday afternoon, engulfing Pampa firefighters as they battle the blaze. According to fire reports, the garage and the vehicle inside were a total loss.

Pampa firm gains pipeline reclamation project

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

A Pampa-based company has been awarded the largest energy pipeline reclamation project in industry history, company representatives said Thursday.

Panhandle Pipeline President Bill White said his organization will be removing 256 miles of old underground pipe stretching from west of Fort Worth to just northeast of Houston.

White and Herschel Jones, projects manager for the company, said the multi-million dollar project involves removing the pipe and selling it to distribution companies who, in turn, sell it to foreign and domestic concerns for a variety of purposes.

"It's a products pipeline carrying jet fuel, diesel and gasoline down to the Houston area," White said. "We sell the pipe we take up to pipe dealers. We already have this pipe sold to two of the largest pipe dealers in the country."

Due to problems in the pipe's outer casing, Diamond Shamrock has opted to remove it, Jones said, noting that "even if there weren't problems with the casing for 10 years, they felt like it was cheaper to remove it now and put in new pipe than to wait."

He explained that pipeline reclamation is an environmentally responsible move by energy companies that permits recycling of the metal and keeps aging casings and pipe from leaking petroleum-based products into the ground.

"This has been done a little over the last 10 years," White said. "It is now really a coming thing with the environmental people forcing companies to remove abandoned pipelines."

In addition to the Diamond Shamrock project, which will take six to eight months to complete, White said Panhandle Pipeline has reclaimed abandoned pipes for Energas, Cabot and Lone Star Gas.

Jones said Panhandle Pipeline, only three years old, has developed a reputation as the largest pipeline reclamation company in the nation.

"The used pipe is reconditioned and re-sold and the quality of the pipe has a big bearing on what it is then used for," he stated. "The pipe in this project is like new and will be re-laid or used in structural work."

He added, "Our understanding is that roughly 900,000 feet of this 8 5/8 inch pipe could be sold to some Europeans who have shown big interest in this."

Both men expressed confidence that in addition to bringing new dollars to the Panhandle, pipeline reclamation is a growth industry that will be good for this area's oil and gas-based economy.

Approximately 30 people will work on the project for Panhandle Pipeline, with removal slated to begin in early December.

Planning to go to college? Beware — it's not going to be so easy anymore

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

A decade ago, if you were caught with a calculator in high school math class, you were in big trouble.

Now calculators are considered as common in many math classes as paper and pencil.

Used to be, knowing all about George Washington meant you were on your way to understanding American history.

Now you better know just as much about George Washington Carver.

The College Board is attempting to deal with those and other cultural, educational and technological changes by drastically reworking the SAT college admission examination, beginning in 1994.

Begin in 1901 as the College Boards, the SAT has undergone six previous facelifts.

However, the 1994 edition will reflect perhaps the most radical revisions to date.

Pampa High School counselor Barbara Evans said failure by parents and students to adapt to the changing expectations of colleges and the employment market, as reflected by changes in the SAT, could hinder future academic and economic success.

While private universities have always been thought of as reserved for high achievers, Evans said even state schools are now demanding very good SAT performance and "the right" college preparatory work.

"The SAT is going to be testing higher learning skills, rather than just what information you have," Evans said. "They want to know how the learning you have applies. Therefore, they can look at how you would do in college, knowing what you know right now."

Poor performance on the SAT or the wrong track of studies in high school — even if you passed all your classes — will keep you out of a state school, she said.

"Three things should happen from the very beginning of the ninth grade," Evans said of students facing the 1994 SAT. "A good selection of solid academic courses should be taken seriously all four years. A student should also read widely so his vocabulary is up to par and, third, he must be consistent about studying hard all four years. You can't wait until your junior or senior years anymore."

A number of national consulting agencies, including the Ronkin Educational Group of New York, are promising this is more than just another threat about "your permanent record, young man."

Janet Ronkin, the former teacher who heads Ronkin Group, a consulting firm promoting educational excellence and higher academic performance, is telling parents their children should take the toughest high school courses available and then be totally dedicated to passing them.

In an interview with Woman's World, she said, "the classic last burst of steam the junior and senior year won't cut it" anymore.

The New York Times, in a January 22 article, pointed out that thousands of parents of middle schoolers are now doling out $14.50 per SAT to see their child knows what to expect before ever entering high school.

Initial studies, as reported by the Times, indicate such a program may succeed in shocking students regarding what level they must perform at in high school.

"I'm not an advocate of shock treatment for seventh graders," said Dr. Dawson Orr, superintendent of public schools in Pampa. "But this is a way of motivating kids. By the same token, I don't particularly hold that scaring the wits out of them will make them go forth and do better."

Among the changes in the SAT in 1994 and beyond, portions of the multiple choice math section have been eliminated.

Students will now be required to write in their answer.

That eliminates a student's one-in-five chance of getting the question right, even if they don't have a clue what the decimal value of 3/10 is.

There will also be more critical reading, new measuring of vocabulary and unprecedented emphasis on interpretation of data and applied mathematics.

Students devoted to hanging out on the drag or playing Nintendo for their four years of high school must re-group and spend more time doing homework and reading quality literature if they hope to do well on the SAT, educational experts are agreeing.

"An awareness by students and parents that this is serious business is essential," Evans said. "We need to look at how they spend time. What kind of conditions are we studying in? We're going to have to take all that more seriously."

She explained that in the past students could get by with knowing what a passage of literature said.

"Now they must read between the lines and be able to do critical thinking," Evans said. "There has got to be a lot more reading in the home."

In addition to being tougher, the SAT will also be longer, increased from 60 to 80 minutes.

Forty questions will center on critical reading skills, with 15-20 asking students to draw analogies and another 20-25 seeking sentence completion.

In math, multiple choice questions are being reduced in favor of fill-in-the-blank.

Evans said if students and their parents immediately accept the reality of tougher criteria for college admission and increase their studying efforts, they should be prepared for the SAT's new January 1994 look.

She and Orr, in separate interviews, said the district will be responding to these changing expectations by modifying curriculum.

How that will happen is still being planned, both said. But they both said it will also take a concerted effort on the home front for students to meet the increased expectations of colleges and, eventually, employers.

Educators are hoping parents who got into college on a C and a prayer will realize the standard has been upped and their children must do better if they seek admission to a private or state school.

Police report

The Pampa Police Department reported the following incidents during the 24-hour period ending at 7 a.m. today.

THURSDAY, Oct. 31

Mae Harris, 525 Harlem, reported criminal mischief at the residence.

James Alexander, 514 N. Russell, reported criminal mischief at the residence.

Police reported domestic violence in the 100 block of North Sumner and the 500 block of Harlem.

Correction

In the Pampa High School football story Thursday on Page 9, it should have stated Jason Johnson, not his twin brother Justin, is out for the season due to a knee injury. Also, it is Harold Lewis who set the Harvesters' single-season rushing record in 1954. We regret any inconvenience the errors may have caused.

Bush attacks Democratic 'carpers'

HOUSTON (AP) — A livid President Bush, kicking off his re-election drive, blistered the Democrats and said Saddam Hussein would still be in Kuwait if liberal senators like Ted Kennedy had their way.

"Thank God I didn't have to listen to these carpers telling me how to run that war," Bush said Thursday night.

Sliding in the polls and likened earlier in the day by a Democratic leader to Herbert Hoover, Bush

Head Start program has a few vacancies

A few vacancies remain in the Head Start pre-school program at Baker Elementary School for the 1991-1992 school year.

Head Start is a program for children of low-income families, although as much as 10 percent of the enrollment may be children who come from higher-income families.

It is a half-day program with one morning and one afternoon session. Interested parents may contact Jeneane Thornburg at 669-4783 for more information.

came out swinging before a crowd of 850 who poured $1 million into the Bush-Quayle '92 campaign committee coffers.

He was heading to Dallas today for another $1,000-a-plate banquet to fuel his re-election drive, as well as a private luncheon at the home of oilman T. Boone Pickens to raise $500,000 to strengthen Republicans' hand in the reapportionment battle in Texas.

His voice rising in anger, Bush flailed against his Democratic foes and their "old tired liberal ideas," threatening to veto their unemployment benefits bill again and goading them to give his capital gains tax cut a chance.

Bush expressed disdain that some Democrats had criticized him for going to Madrid to open the Middle East peace conference Wednesday.

"I have a responsibility to lead and I'm not going to let Democratic liberal carping keep me from leading," he shouted.

"If I'd have had to let Ted Kennedy tell me whether I could move a quarter of a million troops to the Middle East ... Saddam Hussein would still be in Kuwait, maybe moving into Saudi Arabia," said Bush.

He shared the podium with Vice President Dan Quayle, who got in his own dig at Kennedy, a Massachusetts Democrat, and Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, another liberal stalwart.

Quayle said that if Ronald Reagan and George Bush had to live with two-term limits, "then surely for the good of the country the Senate careers of Howard Metzenbaum and Ted Kennedy should be limited to two terms."

Bush reacted with fury to the criticisms of his domestic record from Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, and others. He accused them of playing politics with an unemployment benefits bill and trying to "ram it down my ear."

He held out the possibility of a compromise, but vowed, "I'm going to veto their bill if they send it down in a way that's going to bust this budget (agreement)."

Bush's sky-high ratings in the polls have tumbled amid growing signs that the recovery from the year-old recession is sputtering.

White Deer readies for annual Polish Sausage Festival

WHITE DEER — The Sacred Heart Parish of White Deer has scheduled its annual Polish Sausage Festival for Sunday at the Parish Hall, one block east of Main Street, according to Carolyn Rapstine, publicity chairman.

Serving time will be from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. The 1991 festival notes its 53rd anniversary. This annual affair dates to the summer of 1938 when the Rev. J.A. Zienta, a Polish priest, was pastor.

The first sausage dinner was held in an open pasture north of White Deer and large black iron caldrons were used to steam the sausage. The rest of the food was prepared by the women in their homes.

The meal was served on plank tables. Mrs. Floryan Haiduk supervised the seasoning and making of the sausage, using an old Polish recipe handed down for generations. An estimated 150 people were served.

Today more than 2,000 people are served in a modern parish hall equipped with a modern kitchen and barbecue pit. Today, Alice Haiduk, Isabel Urbanczyk and their sons are the seasoning experts.

Some 5,000 pounds of Polish links will be made and served barbecued or steamed in the traditional Polish way. It will be accompanied by crisp slaw, red beans, potato salad and apricots. Take-out dinners, as well as sausage-to-go, will be available.

The proceeds from the festival are used for parish needs and charitable purposes.

White Deer is the only Polish-oriented community in the Texas Panhandle. Sacred Heart Parish celebrated its 75th anniversary in 1988. Roots of Faith, a historical book focusing on the Polish pioneers, was published to commemorate the celebration. The book will be on sale and there will also be a display of pisanki, Polish Easter eggs.

"pisanki." The decoration of eggs has been a part of Polish history for more than 1,000 years. The first "pisanki" were found near Opole, Poland, and date from the 10th century. The egg itself is considered to be a symbol of life. It is connected with the rebirth or awakening of spring from winter's sleep.

During the 10th to 12th centuries, it was forbidden to eat eggs because they were considered to be a symbol of life. Pagan people believed this so fervently that they would place eggs on the tombs of the dead. This custom was called "rejkwawka" and was preserved up until the 19th century in Krakow.

Ornamentation of eggs is also considered to be an important part of the courtships and marriages of the village youth. These eggs would be presented by young women of the village to the young men of their fancy.

The Sacred Heart Polish Dancers will be dancing at this year's festival, weather permitting.

McLean ISD trustees support consolidation plan

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

McLEAN — McLean Independent School District has unanimously voted to support the consolidation effort under way for McLean, Lefors and Alanreed school districts, said McLean Superintendent Stanley Lamb.

The issue will be decided Nov. 5 when the voters in each of the three school districts will vote on the issue. For the consolidation to take place, voters in each of the three school districts must approve the measure. If consolidated, the district would be called the North Fork Consolidated Independent School District.

The McLean school board issued a statement following the vote last week which states: "We believe that the consolidation of these districts will be beneficial in many ways. By combining forces, we are ensuring that we can maintain a local school system as long as possible, and keep the small school atmosphere that we all know and love."

"Through efficient use of our combined resources, we can expand the curricular and extra-curricular opportunities offered to our children and hopefully get the maximum results for every educational dollar spent."

The board also agreed at the meeting that the joining of forces of the three districts would be the best insurance for the future of the children and the communities.

All of the issues that will be considered if the districts consolidate are not clear at this time, Lamb said.

The McLean board also included in its statement, "We think that with the combined support of our communities and the expertise available from all the board members and personnel of our three districts, we can be confident that any issue to be resolved will be dealt with in a way that is in the best interest of our children."

The vote next Tuesday will not decide if a new school will be built or where students will attend school.

By law, the McLean Independent School District Board of Trustees will be the school board for the consolidated district for about the first year because it has the largest student enrollment. If the consolidation passes, the schools would be consolidated effective next school year.

However, in discussions with Alanreed and Lefors school boards, the McLean trustees have indicated they would voluntarily give up two seats to Lefors and one seat to Alanreed.

At an earlier Lefors town meeting this month, the Lefors school trustees indicated their concern with the McLean school board not willing to give Lefors an equal number of school board seats during the first year. Lefors trustees contend that because Lefors has the largest tax base of the three districts it should be given three seats, McLean should get three and Alanreed should have one during the first year of consolidation.

Witnesses testify of rifles owned by Frank Gilley

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — A former Norman police officer says his one-time colleague, now on trial in a double homicide, admitted shortly after the 1970 killings that he knew the young man who was found shot to death with his date on a rural road.

"Frank stated he had known the kid and that he arrested him when he was working as a deputy in Amarillo," Bill Cox said Thursday during the murder trial of Frank Gilley.

Gilley, 55, is charged with two counts of first-degree murder in the deaths of David Sloan, 21, of Amarillo, Texas, and Sheryl Benham, 19, of Oklahoma City. Their bodies were found May 10, 1970, in the trunk of Sloan's car, which was parked on a Norman lover's lane. They had been shot repeatedly.

Gilley, who was a Norman police officer at the time of the shootings, also is charged with perjury after allegedly denying owning a .22 at the time of the shooting or having ever known Sloan.

Gilley made the comment about Sloan to several officers at the Norman police station within a few days after the bodies were found, Cox said.

Cox also testified he was with Gilley when he used a .22-caliber rifle for target practice in April 1970. Cox said Gilley kept several other guns in his locker at the police station, but he did not remember what kind they were.

Another former Norman officer, Claude Keyes, testified that two of the guns were .22 rifles. Keyes, a gun collector, said one of the rifles, which both were for sale, was considered a collectors item.

Earlier Thursday, a Norman police detective said he seized a box of ammunition from the DeSoto, Texas, home of Gilley last year because some of the shell casings looked like a casing found at the scene of the killings.

Dave Pearo said he and other detectives were searching Gilley's home in the reopened investigation of the deaths.

Some of the bullets "appeared to have the same U-type marking on the base as one I had a photograph of," Pearo said.

"I don't know anything else you can determine about it (except that) they appear to be the same type of casing."

Pearo said detectives seized some .22-caliber guns and a box of .22-caliber bullets. The bullets were a mixed batch of shells with some that matched and some that didn't match a photograph taken of a shell found at the time of the murders. Pearo said none of the guns turned out to be the murder weapon.

Defense Attorney Robert Perrine accused Pearo of changing his testimony from a July preliminary hearing in which Perrine said Pearo said none of the shell casings matched.

"Well, some matched and some didn't," Pearo said.

"But that's not what you said at the preliminary hearing, is it?" Perrine asked.

"I guess not," Pearo conceded. Pearo said he was assigned to investigate the case when police thought new evidence had surfaced.

James Jansing, who was Gilley's landlord in 1970, gave police a .22-caliber rifle he found in the attic of Gilley's rented Norman home in August 1970, a day after Gilley moved out.

"We thought it could be the murder weapon," Pearo said. He said an examination showed that the rifle had the wrong type of firing pin.

HBO gets cheerleader hitman story

HOUSTON (AP) — Home Box Office has bought the rights to the saga of a woman convicted of plotting murder to help her daughter become a high school cheerleader, a family representative says.

Tony Harper, ex-husband of Wanda Webb Holloway, sold the film rights to "their family story" on behalf of himself and the couple's two children, Shanna and Shane Harper, for $137,000, said his attorney, Paula Gavrel Asher.

HBO officials in New York Thursday declined to comment on the deal, saying it is company policy not to discuss projects in development.

Mrs. Holloway was convicted in September of solicitation of capital murder. Prosecutors said she tried to hire a man to kill Verna Heath, the mother of Shanna Harper's chief cheerleader rival, Amber Heath, hoping the girl would drop out of competition. Mrs. Heath was not hurt.

Tony Harper made the film deal on the basis of being Shanna Harper's "joint managing conservator." A judge, who had to be involved because Shanna is a minor, gave the final go-ahead Thursday.

Greyhound bus line comes out of Chapter 11

DALLAS (AP) — Greyhound Lines Inc. emerged from bankruptcy with common stock that went up on its first day of trading and a strong board of directors, chief executive Frank Schmieder says.

"We got a board of directors who are tougher than the creditors committee in terms of wanting performance," Schmieder said Thursday in a phone interview from New York, where the company's stock began trading.

Greyhound shares, trading on a when-issued basis, opened at $12.75 and closed at $13.50 on the American Stock Exchange.

The nation's only inter-city bus line had been privately held since March 1987. But the Chapter 11 reorganization prompted by the March 1990 drivers' strike resulted in a return to the public market.

Ninety-five percent of the 11.1 million shares that are initially being issued go to Greyhound's unsecured creditors, who are counting on the stock's value to rise to recover their claim against the company.

Greyhound turned the final corner on its debt restructuring Monday, when the judge presiding over the bankruptcy case refused to delay emergence.

The National Labor Relations Board had asked U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Richard Schmidt to prevent Greyhound from leaving Chapter 11 while it appeals his confirmation of the company's reorganization. Schmidt approved the $600 million debt restructuring on Oct. 10.

The NLRB and the union representing Greyhound's striking drivers object to the priority given their potential claim from an unfair labor practices dispute.

The company filed for bankruptcy in June 1990, three months after its more than 5,000 drivers went on strike over wages and benefits.

The agency and union's appeal of the confirmation will be heard by a federal judge in Brownsville.

Greyhound's new directors spent three days in Dallas this week learning about the company's labor problems and business strategy.

"They expect us to be more efficient," Schmieder said.

Mideast conference breaks up on bitter note

James Baker

Baker appeals for delegates to meet again

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Secretary of State James A. Baker III said today the next phase of Middle East peace talks "should begin" this weekend but that the parties have not agreed on a location.

However, Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Boris Pankin later appealed for Israeli and Arab delegates to meet in Madrid on Sunday to discuss where to hold the face-to-face talks, which are considered more important than the ceremonial three-day opening of the conference.

The conference's afternoon session today was delayed for nearly two hours while Baker met with the heads of Israeli and Arab delegations trying to reach agreement on the date and site of the second phase of talks — in which Israel and its Arab foes would hold separate discussions.

The opening days of the historic conference were dominated by speeches used to air long-held grievances.

Baker said officials had expected all sides to stake out "maximum positions" before entering the scheduled bilateral talks.

At a news conference after his speech, Baker said he plans to leave Madrid on Sunday to attend the opening of the Ronald Reagan presidential library in Simi Valley, Calif., on Monday.

After Baker spoke, the Israelis and the Palestinians agreed to attend an initial face-to-face session in Madrid on Sunday at which the future location of the bilateral talks was expected to be discussed. It was not clear what the other Arab states — especially Syria — intended to do.

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir had invited the Arab delegations to conduct the next round in Israel and other Mideast capitals, but the Arabs have refused, not wanting to give de facto recognition to the Jewish state.

"It is very difficult to understand how a party could now refuse to attend bilateral negotiations simply over a disagreement over the site of those negotiations," said Baker.

"This weekend, negotiations should begin on the accepted basis of United Nations resolutions" that, among other things, urge Israel to withdraw forces from occupied territories and Arab nations to recognize Israel, said Baker.

Baker was also critical of the Arabs and Israelis. "The unwillingness of the parties to take confidence-building measures is disappointing," he said.

He said the delegates had "failed to deal adequately with the human dimension" of the Middle East problem.

"Leaders in the region have taken difficult and courageous decisions to get to this conference. More difficult and more courageous decisions will be required," said Baker.

He said that U.S. and Soviet officials would continue to mediate talks, but could not conduct the negotiations themselves.

"If you won't do it, we certainly can't," said Baker, directing his comments to the Arab and Israeli delegates.

Baker's speech followed an address by Pankin, who predicted the peace conference will succeed. "The search for new approaches to tackle decades-old problems and find solutions is gaining momentum," he said.

The U.S. blueprint for the conference had envisioned three sets of bilateral negotiations in the second round: Israel with Lebanon, Israel with Syria and Israel with the Jordanian-Palestinian delegation.

Baker said a third phase of talks which would concentrate on regional issues would begin in several weeks for those parties that want to attend.

By MONA ZIADE
Associated Press Writer

MADRID, Spain (AP) — The Middle East peace conference adjourned in rancor today after Secretary of State James A. Baker III failed to win Arab and Israeli agreement over where to hold the next phase of the talks.

But the Israelis and the Palestinians agreed to attend an initial face-to-face session in Madrid Sunday at which the future location of the talks was expected to be discussed. Syria said no decision had been made on its attendance.

Without an overall agreement on where to hold the next phase of talks, the much-vaunted peace conference, the first in a generation to bring the warring parties together, could collapse altogether.

Baker's remarks — closing the contentious three-day opening session of the talks — followed a day of acrimonious speeches by the delegates. In one especially bitter exchange, Syria and Israel accused one another of terrorism.

Sounding disappointed and angry, Baker said the United States and Soviet Union, the conference sponsors, were proposing that the next phase — bilateral talks — begin "as soon as possible" in Madrid, but that the parties had not yet agreed on a location. He said he was still trying to secure an accord, and that Sunday was the earliest possible starting date.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, arriving back in Israel, told reporters that Israel would attend an initial session on Sunday in the Spanish capital, but after that, "it is our intention not to continue the negotiations in Madrid."

Hanan Ashrawi, spokeswoman for the Palestinian delegation, told a news conference the Palestinians, too, would attend the session on Sunday, but that it would be technical in nature. "The subject of this first session will be mainly, or purely, procedural — issues dealing with venue, timing and modalities," she said.

Arab delegates, primarily Syria, have demanded that the talks continue on the neutral ground of Spain, under U.S. and Soviet sponsorship. The Israelis have sought to move them to the Middle East as soon as possible.

Syrian Foreign Minister Farouk al-Sharaa said there was no agreement yet on a Sunday session. "It is not decided yet when the bilaterals would begin," he told a news conference.

Ashrawi said the Palestinians were prepared to move the talks to the Middle East "if we have an independent state that can host the bilaterals." Israel is eager to hold at least one session in the Jewish state because it would amount to de facto recognition by its Arab neighbors.

Baker told the conferees the international community would judge them harshly if they failed to move ahead with the peace effort because of the dispute over where to talk.

"From the perspective of most of the rest of the world, it would be very difficult to understand how a party could now refuse to attend bilateral negotiations simply because of a disagreement over the site," he said.

At a news conference, Baker suggested that both sides needed to take "confidence-building" steps to move the peace process along, such as a suspension of the Arab economie boycott against Israel or a halt to the Palestinian uprising in the occupied lands in exchange for Israel stopping settlement-building activity.

In today's conference session, the longtime foes, facing off across a wide, T-shaped table in an ornate, chandeliered hall of the Royal Palace, staked out stubborn, long-held positions and vented once again their ancient grievances. Today's speeches were rebuttals to Thursday's remarks.

Syria's foreign minister, holding up a 44-year-old wanted poster of Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, branded him a terrorist for his activities in the Jewish underground fighting British control of Palestine in the 1940s.

"He himself recognized he was a terrorist," the Syrian said.

Shamir, speaking earlier, called Syria "one of the most brutal and tyrannical governments in the world" and ticked off Israeli's list of complaints against Palestinians and other Arabs.

The chief Palestinian delegate, Haider Abdul-Shafi, reiterated Arab demands that Israel give up lands it won in the 1967 war and eventually allow an independent Palestinian state on some of those territories.

"Ladies and gentlemen, the issue is land," said Abdul-Shafi. "Security can never be obtained by the acquisition of other peoples' territory."

Israel has refused to cede any of the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, seized from Jordan and Egypt, and has annexed the Golan Heights, seized from Syria.

The Palestinian delegate also demanded that Jerusalem be part of the negotiations, despite the Israeli refusal to discuss the status of the holy city. "The gates of Jerusalem must be opened," Abdul-Shafi said.

Abdul-Shafi, a doctor from the occupied Gaza Strip, also criticized Shamir for leaving immediately after his speech to return home for the Jewish Sabbath, which begins at sundown Friday. He said the Muslims are working through their own holy day and that the occasion's importance warranted Shamir's staying on.

Shamir had apologized for his departure, saying: "I trust no one will see in this a sign of disrespect." Baker said afterward that Arab delegates had been notified several days advance about Shamir's plans for an early departure.

Baker himself said he had planned to leave Madrid on Sunday night and "I am inclined to keep those plans."

In his address, Foreign Minister Kamel Abu Jaber of Jordan said the Arabs had hoped the conference "would produce a sense of balance... instead, it appears as if time stood still as far as Israel was concerned."

The last Arab speaker, Egyptian Foreign Minister Amr Moussa, urged both sides to cool their rhetoric and put aside "old arguments" in favor of meaningful talks. Egypt is the only one of Israel's Arab neighbors to have made peace with it.

Shamir, in his brusque 10-minute address opening the session, likened the two preceding days of speeches to the "futile exchanges and rebuttals" that have characterized the conflict for 43 years.

"Is this what we have come for?" he asked.

In The Church Of Your Choice

A Mighty Hunter

The story of the dog as a faithful hunter and companion for man is a fabulous one. Doubtless some of our very own ancestors were kept from starvation by the skill and service of the dog, finding game where no man could hunt it out, keeping at the chase when man would have given up. Small wonder that many authors have talked of God as a Mighty Hunter for man, but in a quite different way; the game in this case is man himself. God never gives up in His search for us no matter how we try to hide from Him. Wherever we go, there He will follow though it be the end of the earth. He follows because He loves and He will have nothing less than love in return. No one is shut out from His love; He stands at the door of every heart asking for entrance—only the individual can keep the door shut.

Is something wrong with your life? The answer to every human problem comes only from God our Maker. He alone can forgive and restore. Through the Church God has committed the provisions and redeeming love. Without a church to God, everyone should be in the Church and the Church in every one!

Richard Ronsisvalle Church to host Florida speaker in special services

Richard Ronsisvalle of Cocoa, Fla., will be in special services at Briarwood Church, 1900 W. Harvester, beginning Sunday and continuing through Wednesday. Sunday services will be at 10:45 a.m. and 7 p.m. Services on Monday through Wednesday will be at 7:30 p.m. Ronsisvalle has traveled throughout the United States and into many countries of the world. He is a radio and television recording artist and also the host of a weekly television program called "Reality." He is considered by some to be one of the most powerful singers in gospel music. The public is invited to the special services. A nursery will be provided for each service.

Revival services set to begin Sunday at First Pentecostal

First Pentecostal Holiness Church, 1700 Alcock, will have revival services beginning Sunday and continuing through Wednesday. The services will be at 7 p.m. each evening. The Rev. Kenneth Adams of Norman, Okla., will be the evangelist. He has served for the past 22 years as pastor of the Classen Boulevard Church of God in Norman. Adams has also served as state director of Youth and Christian Education in Oregon, and director of evangelism and home missions in Oklahoma. He speaks at revivals, camp meetings and Bible conferences across the nation. Pastor Albert Maggard and the congregation invite the public to the revival services.

Religion roundup

WASHINGTON (AP) — Billboards, posters, banners and ads are being used in a national marketing and public relations effort carried out through Catholic schools across the country. Co-sponsored by the National Catholic Education Association and the U.S. Catholic Conference, the campaign seeks to highlight the excellence of Catholic schools with their values-added education. Campaign messages say that only 3 percent of Catholic high school students drop out, compared to a national average of 14 percent, that 95 percent of Catholic secondary students graduate and that 83 percent go on to college.

NEW YORK (AP) — Scores of U.S. Protestant missionaries have evacuated Zaire as a result of violence and looting, precipitated by an economic-political crisis under the rule of President Mobutu Sese Seko. The denominations reporting missionaries pulled out of the third-largest African country gave these totals: Forty-three United Methodists, 39 of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), 38 American Baptists, six Southern Baptists, four of the Assemblies of God, and several of the United Church of Christ and Christian Church (Disciples of Christ).

CLEVELAND (AP) — Heads of three national agencies of the United Church of Christ say a positive element of the hearings on Judge Clarence Thomas focused national attention on "the sexual harassment women face everywhere." "It also underscored the difficulties women have in discussing such harassment and in being believed," they said in a joint statement. "Both men and women have trouble drawing the line between sexual harassment and acceptable conversation."

St. Mark's schedules Saturday breakfast
The men of St. Mark's CME Church, 406 Elm, will host a breakfast from 8 to 11 a.m. Saturday at the church. Pancakes, sausage, bacon, coffee, orange juice and eggs will be served. Donations will be accepted, according to Pastor H.R. Johnson.

Lutherans take stand to oppose executions

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

In condemning the death penalty, Lutherans had to do something they're skilled at — fine-tuning their theology to back their case.

"Some were concerned that we had not been sufficiently clear about the Lutheran perspective," said the Rev. Franklin D. Fry of Summit, N.J., who led the amending process.

Referring to the temporary snag that arose about the matter at the recent governing assembly in Orlando, Fla., of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, Fry added:

"The feeling was we hadn't been explicit enough in acknowledging the authority of the state in protecting and holding human society together."

Historically, Lutherans always have held, in line with Romans 13, that governments are "instituted by God" to preserve order and that they do "not bear the sword in vain" for just war and executions to curb evil.

Consequently, for the church to oppose capital punishment under that concept took some elaboration. It was provided with this amendment by Fry and theologian John Reumann of the Lutheran Theological Seminary in Philadelphia:

"God entrusts the state with the power to take human life when failure to do so constitutes a clear danger to society. However, this does not mean that governments have an unlimited right to take life.

"Neither does it mean that governments must punish by death."

Lutheran doctrine has always postulated two realms under God, symbolized as his right hand guiding the church in spiritual nurture and redemption and his left hand guiding the state for justice and the well-being of society.

"With his left hand, God sometimes seems to be a little awkward," Fry observed, noting the strains and failings of governments in preserving community order and safety.

However, the Lutheran "two realms" or "two kingdoms" doctrine, dating from 16th century Protestant reformer Martin Luther, challenged the old Roman Catholic concept of the pope's "two swords" over both state and church.

"To bring both realms together into one is dangerous for both," Fry said, adding that the church should not have power over the state, or the state power over the church.

This Lutheran thesis became the seed of ensuing distinctions between the functions of church and government, but the separation nevertheless assumed interaction between the two.

Luther once said, "I'd rather have a wise Turk than a stupid

Christian as prince, because the job of the prince is not to preach the Gospel but to run the government and serve the populace."

In opposing executions, delegates of the 5.3-million-member denomination said the death penalty reflects a "spirit of vengeance," prevents possibilities of restoration and "perpetuates cycles of violence."

"It is not fair, and fails to make society better or safer," the church said, noting that race, gender and money plays a role in such sentences, and the innocent sometimes have been executed.

"The message conveyed by an execution ... is one of brutality and violence," the church said. "We would be a better society by joining the many nations that have already abolished capital punishment."

However, the Lutherans stuck to their premise that the state has the authority for such acts, saying "society is ruled by the law," yet "influenced and nourished by the Gospel."

Fry commented, "We're not pacifists. We have a sense of the reality of evil. And sometimes violent measures are necessary to curb it such as war or capital punishment. That's why Dietrich Bonhoeffer took part in the plot to assassinate Hitler."

Bonhoeffer, a German Protestant theologian, was executed by Hitler in 1945.

Nevertheless, Fry said that under present circumstances, the state should not exercise its authority for executions because "we do not see it as being exercised justly nor as an effective deterrent to crime."

"Prudentially we should not do what the government has the authority to do."

The denomination put it this way, quoting from Jesus's Sermon on the Mount and other biblical passages:

"Renewed by the Gospel, Christians, as salt of the earth and light of the world, are called to respond to violent crime in the restorative way taught by Jesus and shown by his actions."

But the church also recognized the importance of protecting society from those who endanger it by "incapacitating them" — keeping them in prison.

Fry said the Lutheran emphasis on the "two realms" of God's purview can become warped, as occurred among some Christians in Germany under Nazism, when a kind of "Lutheran pietism" saw the state as having full authority over society.

In opposing the death penalty, the ELCA took a position in line with other mainline Protestants — Presbyterians, United Methodists, Episcopalians, American Baptists, United Church — and also Roman Catholic bishops.

Kelly Beesley, left, and Joyce Field will sing in concert at Faith Christian Center at 6 p.m. Sunday.

Pampa duo to be in concert at Faith Christian Center

Faith Christian Center, 118 N. Cuyler, will present a gospel concert Sunday featuring Joyce Field and Kelly Beesley.

The concert is set for 6 p.m.

Field and Beesley are members of Central Baptist Church and are active in the music ministry there. They have ministered in several local churches and were featured gospel singers at the 1991 Chautauqua.

Field is a soprano and has a wide range for a variety of types of gospel music. She is complimented by Beesley's ability to harmonize and lead in many of the numbers they do.

The duo will sing traditional, contemporary and the newest Hosanna Integrity type music.

Faith Christian invites the public to attend the special worship service. A nursery will be provided.

ATLANTA (AP) — An Atlanta congregation has severed ties with the Episcopal Church, saying the national church leadership is too liberal on issues such as homosexuality.

The governing board of the 760-member Church of the Apostles cited the refusal of the denominational convention last July to require celibacy for priests outside heterosexual marriage.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Zondervan Publishing House says it is the first publisher to produce a complete, unabridged concordance of the New Revised Standard Version of the Bible.

That version has sold more than 2 million copies since it was issued last year by the National Council of Churches. The 1,650-page concordance provides references to where every word in the Bible appears.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Clergyman of the Year is the Rev. Arthur Caliendo, senior minister of Manhattan's Marble Collegiate Church, according to the Religious Heritage of America.

Poll shows some lose, some gain in question of religious preference

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Gradually declining proportions of the country's population claim a religious preference, with percentages both of Protestants and Roman Catholics edging downward.

At the same time, those having no religious preference have increased to a record high — 11 percent.

These are among the findings in a composite audit of data gleaned about America's evolving religious profile by the Gallup organization in interviews last year with a representative 30,233 adults nationwide.

The results, described as having only a 1 percent margin of error, were summarized in the September issue of Emerging Trends, published by the Princeton Religion Research Center directed by George Gallup Jr.

A shrinking majority of the population — 56 percent — identified themselves as Protestants, compared with 61 percent in 1980. Catholics slipped from 28 percent in 1980 to 25 percent, the report says.

In one respect, the data produced a question: Where are the assumed U.S. Muslims?

Noting that news stories in recent years have prominently featured Muslims as an increased and growing part of the population, with estimates that they constitute 3 to 5 percent of it, the report says:

"However, after a year's attempt throughout 1990 to accumulate a sufficient number of interviews to be analyzed with statistical reliability, there simply were not enough Muslims to be found."

Specifically, only two-tenths of a percent of the 30,000-plus respondents indicated they were Muslims.

Other polling projects have run into the same puzzle. A survey of 113,000 Americans by the City University of New York, termed the largest ever made of religious affiliation, last April reported only a half percent were Muslims.

The Gallup report, discounting various possible reasons for the discrepancy between the data and the usually unattributed estimates, concludes that Muslims in fact are less than a percent.

Concerning the rising proportion of Americans without any religious preference, the report notes this figure gradually increased through the 1980s, rising 2 percent since 1987.

The latest 11 percent is higher than at any time since the Gallup organization started measuring religious preferences in 1947. Varying from 2 to 6 percent until 1977, it was 9 percent in 1987, 10 in 1988-89 and 11 last year.

That doesn't mean they are all without religion, the report says, noting that some may be "shopping around" and others may have some eclectic religious preference that doesn't fit any conventional categories.

Other survey evidence indicates that non-believers — atheists and agnostics — are no more than 5 percent of the population, the report says.

It says the reduced proportion claiming Catholic affiliation, down from 28 to 25 percent in a decade, is the lowest level recorded for Catholics since they hit that same figure in 1967.

However, over the long haul, the proportion of Catholics has grown from 20 percent when Gallup first began gathering statistics in 1947, while Protestants — now 56 percent — have declined from that time, when they were 69 percent.

The Jewish proportion of the population has remained relatively constant at 2 percent over the last two decades. Other religious preferences, including Eastern Orthodox and Mormons, are grouped under "other" at 6 percent.

This figure rose 2 percent during the last decade.

Despite the long-range growth in the proportion of Catholics, the report says that church may face declines ahead, oddly because of its tendency to have a relatively high proportion of younger members.

Thirty percent of Americans under 30 are Catholics, while over 30, the proportion drops to 24 percent, and over 65, to 21 percent, the report says.

Jury selection in Smith rape trial focusing on Kennedy family ties

By JAMES MARTINEZ
Associated Press Writer

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Potential jurors are being asked not only what they have heard about the rape charges against William Kennedy Smith but also what they think of the Kennedy family.

Smith, who returns to the Palm Beach County Courthouse today as selection of a six-member jury continues, said he's pleased with what he's heard so far.

"It's very gratifying to see how open and willing people are to share a lot of very difficult and complicated feelings," Smith told reporters after the start of jury selection Thursday. "It's not an easy process, but given the time and respect it deserves, it's one that will work."

Smith, a nephew of Sen. Ted Kennedy, is accused of raping a 30-year-old Florida woman at the Kennedys' Palm Beach estate March 30.

All the prospective jurors said they had heard of the rape case — and some said they had formed strong opinions about it. But defense attorney Roy Black also asked them for their opinions on the Kennedy family.

"Some people think of them as untouchables," said prospective juror Theresa Poterek. "They're not common, ordinary people. I guess that goes along with the name."

The prospective jurors were also questioned about their attitudes toward President John Kennedy and Sen. Robert Kennedy, whom Black referred to as "Jack" and "Bobby."

When Black began calling his client "Will," prosecutors asked that he be addressed in court as "Mr. Smith" and urged an end to the talk about his slain uncles. Circuit Judge Mary Lupo denied the requests.

"There are people out there who may hate the Kennedys and feel all the Kennedys should be thrown in jail," Black said. "We have a right to elicit those feelings."

During 45 minutes of questions, potential juror Priscilla Roper of Boynton Beach said she followed news of the assassinations of John and Robert Kennedy and the incident at Chappaquiddick Island, Mass., in which a woman passenger drowned when Ted Kennedy drove his car off a bridge.

She said she had also kept up on the health of family matriarch Rose Kennedy, had watched a recent television miniseries on the late president's widow and knew "some of the Kennedy children used drugs."

When asked which Kennedy family member she respected least, she answered quickly: "I guess I would say Ted Kennedy."

Potential juror Dorothy Wixted of Delray Beach made it clear she felt Smith was guilty. Defense attorneys appeared surprised when she said Smith's grandfather, Joseph Kennedy, U.S. ambassador to Britain at the outbreak of World War II, "supported the Nazis."

Eight potential jurors were questioned, with three of them released for causes unrelated to the case.

Imelda Marcos completes first leg of journey to Philippines

By EILEEN GUERRERO
Associated Press Writer

HONOLULU (AP) — About 150 supporters greeted former Philippine first lady Imelda Marcos with cheers and a bouquet of white orchids when she arrived here on the first leg of her first trip home after 5 1/2 years of exile.

"I'm very happy, very happy," Mrs. Marcos said. On Sunday, she flies on to Manila.

Her plane landed Thursday night at Honolulu International Airport, where the crowd waved small Philippine flags and a streamer that said, "God Bless America. Welcome Back Ma'am. We Love You And We Support You All The Way."

Ali Dimaporo, former governor of Lanao Norte province in the Philippines, hinted Mrs. Marcos will run for president.

"I know a great majority of Filipinos want her back and want her to play a role in the prosperity of our country," he said.

Speaking to reporters at her home, Mrs. Marcos would not rule out a possible bid for the presidency.

Mrs. Marcos began her day in New York, offering a prayer of thanks at St. Patrick's Cathedral before flying to Hawaii.

She received communion, lighted about 20 votive candles while dabbing her eyes with a black handkerchief, and put a $100 bill in the offering box.

Last year, she gave thanks for her acquittal at an embezzlement trial in New York by going up the aisle at St. Patrick's on her knees.

She was found innocent of embezzling up to $10 billion from the Philippine treasury during her husband's rule and hiding the proceeds in New York real estate and other acquisitions.

She still faces trial on tax evasion charges in the Philippines.

In Manila, acting Justice Secretary Silvestre Bello said Mrs. Marcos would be given two days to settle in before she is presented with arrest warrants for nine criminal charges and numerous civil suits.

Mrs. Marcos and her husband, Ferdinand, fled the Philippines in 1986 during a revolution that removed him from power and installed Corazon Aquino as president.

Marcos died in exile in Hawaii in 1989 and his remains are preserved in an air-conditioned tomb in Oahu.

Mrs. Marcos plans to visit the mausoleum during her stay in Hawaii. She has said her life's mission is to bury her husband in Manila in accordance with his wishes.

Marcos' son, Ferdinand "Bongbong" Marcos Jr., arrived in the Philippines early today and was greeted with cheers and calls for him to run for president.

The Aquino government recently said Marcos could be buried in his home province of Ilocos Norte, 250 miles from Manila, but Mrs. Marcos said she would accept nothing less than a soldier's funeral in the capital.

In Tacloban, Mrs. Marcos' hometown, officials and residents were gearing up for a lavish welcome.

Drunken husband gave wife life of hard lessons

DEAR ABBY: Twelve years ago, I received a personal letter from you in response to my frantic plea asking how to handle my alcoholic husband. You became my special friend. When my mother died, you called me at home. I will never forget that. Now I want to give something back; it's some advice to your readers from my own experience.

In a recent column, a John C. Seaman, referring to his personal experience with alcohol and drug abuse, said, "I recommend intervention to anyone who is frustrated by another person's drinking or using. You don't have to wait for someone to 'hit bottom,' which could ultimately be death." Those words hit close to home!

My husband's alcoholism ultimately led, although indirectly, to his death. For 12 years I tried to help him, and finally we agreed that he should enter an alcohol and drug abuse program in an area hospital. Six weeks after his release, he resumed drinking. I tried "tough love" and moved him out of our house, saying he could return when he got back on the program and quit drinking.

Well, he wasn't strong enough to quit drinking, nor was he strong enough to fight off the killer who knifed him to death in his motel apartment. It happened in the early hours of April 10, 1991. A drug-crazed man forced his way into my husband's apartment and stabbed him 14 times, then stuffed him into a closet!

Now I have to live with the fact that I let him down. I failed him. It is too late for intervention. So, Abby, please tell your readers to keep trying! Keep trying to rehabilitate your alcoholic or user. Where there is life, there is, at least, hope.

After death, you will want them back so badly, drunk or high, but alive! I, too, recommend intervention along with Mr. Seaman, not out of professional knowledge — but from harsh life experience. Call a treatment center, as he suggests. Please do not give up!

Kindest regards to you, Abby, and love to all of your readers. You may print my name.

DIANE SMITH

DEAR DIANE: Please accept my condolences on the tragic death of your husband. For those readers who may have missed it, the 24-hour helpline of the McDonald Center for Alcoholism and Drug Addiction Treatment at Scripps Memorial Hospital in La Jolla, Calif., is: 1 (619) 458-4357. That call could be a lifesaver.

Pampan to celebrate 100th birthday

A reception honoring Nelle W. Baird's 100th birthday is planned for 2-4 p.m., Saturday, Nov. 2 in the First Baptist Church parlor.

Baird was born Nov. 5, 1891 in Smith County, Tenn., the oldest of nine children. She and her first husband, Robert Gill, came to Pampa in 1933 and operated grocery stores in the Lefors oil-field and Pampa. Gill died in 1944.

In 1948, she married A.J. Earp who farmed and ranched south of Kingsmill. After Earp's death in 1951, she stayed on the farm. In 1960, she married Ernest Baird, and they continued to live on the farm until 1971. Baird died in 1988.

Mrs. Baird was active at First Baptist Church while her health permitted. For 2 1/2 years, she has lived at Coronado Nursing Center, where she still enjoys watching First Baptist Church services and reading.

Three of her sisters are still living in Pampa and one brother is living in Tennessee.

Nelle W. Baird will be 100 years old on Nov. 5.

Belated memorial structure for Czechoslovakian protester

NEW YORK (AP) — An architect is donating his time and talent to create a memorial for a Czechoslovakian who committed suicide to protest the invasion of his homeland in 1968.

The Cooper Union for the Advancement of Science and Art is co-hosting the event to honor Jan Palach. Two structures in his memory were designed by the American architect John Hedjuk, dean of Cooper Union's school of architecture.

The Hedjuk works, "The House of the Suicide" and "The House of the Mother of the Suicide," are square structures 27 feet tall and 12 square feet, made of black-painted wood crowned with steel spikes.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If you have a serious matter to discuss with a friend today, lead up to your subject gradually. Patience in your presentation lessens the possibility of a misunderstanding.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Conditions in general are rather run-of-the-mill for you today — unless you are materially motivated. If acquisition is your desire, your aims can be fulfilled.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Be an attentive listener today in conversations with those whose ideas you respect. What you learn from them can be used to your advantage in the near future.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Repayment could begin at this time regarding a debt you've been trying to collect. The installments might be small, but they should be steady.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your involvements might appear to be a trifle frivolous to others, but you consider them to be constructive. This is the day when hard things can be done the easy way.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your possibilities for achieving an extremely important objective are excellent today. You'll know how to adjust to developments, and your back-up plan could be just as effective as the original.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your ideas have real worth today; they should be of equal or superior value to the ideas of those individuals with whom you'll be involved. Don't sell yourself short.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Changes that occur today, especially those that are initiated by others, could prove beneficial in the long run.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you have to negotiate a matter of importance today, don't deal with individuals who are not empowered to make decisions. You'll be more fortunate dealing with those who can.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your fiscal picture is much better than you may realize at this time, provided you make a few positive adjustments. Construct a budget where your expenditures don't exceed your income.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Those you'll be involved with today will respect your organizational and managerial qualities. They'll know instinctively that when you take over the helm, you steer the right course.

Arabs, Israelis sharpening debate over Mideast issues

MADRID, Spain (AP) — During the heated exchanges between Israel and its Arab neighbors at the Middle East peace conference today, the issues that divide them have come into sharp focus. Here they are:

TERRITORY

Israel says returning the territory it captured in the 1967 Middle East war is not the primary issue, but rather whether the Arabs will recognize Israel's right to exist.

The Arabs say peace is impossible unless Israel withdraws from the territories: the West Bank, the Gaza Strip, the Golan Heights and annexed east Jerusalem. Lebanon also wants Israel to relinquish its self-designated security zone in southern Lebanon.

JEWISH SETTLEMENTS

The Palestinians said they are willing to live side by side with Israelis on occupied Arab lands, but that the Jewish state must immediately halt the building of Jewish settlements there.

PALESTINIAN HOMELAND
Jordan, which has a large Palestinian population, said it would not be a substitute for a Palestinian state.

The Palestinians said they would accept limited self-rule in the occupied land, but only as a transitional phase to statehood.

Israel has rejected a Palestinian state and said it will not accept anything more than limited Palestinian self-rule.

JERUSALEM

The Arabs demand that Israel return east Jerusalem to Arab control along with other occupied territory.

The Palestinians want east Jerusalem as the future capital of a Palestinian state.

The Israelis, which annexed the Arab half of the city soon after capturing it in 1967, refuse on both counts.

BILATERAL TALKS

There was disagreement over where to hold the next phase of the peace conference, separate meetings between Israel and each of the Arab delegations.

Israel wants the bilateral talks to be in the Middle East, and invited the Arab countries to send delegations to Israel and then to receive the Israelis in their countries.

The Arabs want bilateral talks to take place on neutral ground, preferably in Madrid. The Arabs want U.S. and Soviet observers present when Israel meets each Arab delegation. The Israelis want no observers.

MULTILATERAL TALKS

Israel wants the third phase of the conference, multilateral talks on regional issues such as arms control, energy, environment and the economy, to accompany the bilateral negotiations.

The Arabs say progress must first be made in the bilateral talks before the regional talks can be held.

Russian parliament approves increase in Yeltsin's powers

By DEBORAH SEWARD
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — The Russian parliament gave preliminary approval today to President Boris Yeltsin's demand for increased political powers to implement radical reforms in the most powerful Soviet republic.

The 858-16 vote, with 11 abstentions, came as Yeltsin's government formally cut off funding to at least 70 Soviet ministries based on Russian soil in a move to cut the costly and inefficient national bureaucracy.

The decision to cut funding to the Soviet ministries, not including defense and transportation, could shut down much of the Moscow-based central government, which has repeatedly backed away from economic reforms.

The funding cuts were announced by Yeltsin after the Oct. 18 signing of an economic treaty by eight republics, including Russia.

Yeltsin has staked his political future on a plan of economic reform that Russian and Soviet officials have discussed since perestroika began in 1985, but never carried out.

Yeltsin's plan would free prices by year's end on nearly all goods; cut nearly all subsidies to state-run industries and gradually privatize them; shift funding to social welfare programs; allow the private sale and purchase of land; and buy $100 million in urgently needed farm equipment.

The proposal for allowing Yeltsin additional powers would give him the ability to reorganize all levels of executive power and would freeze most local elections until Dec. 3, 1992.

After the preliminary vote, the deputies were to regather after lunch to work out the wording of the proposal before a final vote.

The proposal would also allow Yeltsin to decide independently how to reorganize the government at the republic, regional and local level as well as make personnel changes.

It would give Yeltsin authority in the autonomous republics and regions of the Russian federation, many of which are now seeking separation from Russia.

During the period of reforms, the proposal would forbid referendums on Russian territory. The referendum is the main method for a republic or region to declare independence and has been a major political factor for disintegration in the Soviet Union since the August coup attempt.

A separate resolution, passed 876-16 with 17 abstentions, requires Yeltsin and the Russian government to approve the laws needed to carry out economic reform by Jan. 1.

Court convicts four in record Van Gogh heist

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — A court has sentenced four local men to up to five years in prison for the botched heist of 20 Van Gogh paintings in the nation's biggest-ever art theft, Dutch media reported.

A guard on duty at the time of the April 14 theft, 24-year-old R. van Basten, received a five-year sentence while his co-defendants, two of which were the robbers, received four- and five-year terms in Thursday's ruling, reported the national news agency ANP.

According to evidence presented in Amsterdam District Court, Van Basten switched off the museum's infrared alarm system to allow the two bandits to grab the works worth hundreds of millions of dollars, ANP said.

The heist from the Vincent van Gogh National Museum ended in less than an hour, when the paintings by the 19th century Dutch impressionist were discovered in a parked car. Three of the paintings were badly torn.
