Lefors City Council considers dog problem, 4-H presentation

LEFORS - A Lefors resident's complaint about dogs Monday evening prompted the City Council to take some action on the matter.

Mecca McBee said she has had continual problems with dogs, one in particular, and she believed some action needed to be taken.

McBee said she has seen one dog kill three of her cats, she has had planks broken from her wooden fence, and trash gets strewn about by the dogs every weekend. She said she was concerned for the safety of her young son because the dogs are getting inside her fence.

She also said that there was a skunk problem in Lefors and she was afraid rabies might be spread from skunks to dogs to humans.

After hearing the complaint, the City Council unanimously voted to see about borrowing a trap from the city of Pampa. City Marshal Max Kellison was appointed to work out the details.

The City Council, in an unrelated matter, received a presentation from 4-H Club members Bryan Bockmon, Nikki Bockmon and Tenille Franks on recycling. The three are members of Charlotte Bockmon's 4-H group.

Under the mayor's report, Mayor Gene Gee said that the sanitation collection process was under way and that the city had started the first collection last Thursday and hoped to complete it today.

"Dumping this on Carl (Connell) in my estimation was a crime. We need to hire a person on a one- or two-day basis to do the job and have Carl help them. That would be the most reasonable thing to do," Gee said.

The City Council, at a prior meeting, had unanimously voted to have Connell, a city employee, do the trash collection.

However, Gee said that with regular maintenance and operation of the city's other services Connell and employee Mike Steele are busy.

"These guys are constantly putting out fires (fixing problems)," Gee said.

The mayor said that on Monday, for instance, a water main broke and then the motor went out on the water pump. He said time was spent on the telephone by a city employee trying to get prices for pumps. He also said a gas project had been put on hold for two weeks. And he said the cemetery had to have some attention because of a burial there on Monday.

The mayor said that he had authorized the hiring of a person to help with the trash collection during the first pick up.

"I really believe we're doing an injustice by pulling Carl off the every day maintenance and operation of the city," Gee said.

No action was taken Monday on Gee's request to hire additional personnel.

Gee also requested the City Council take action on giving City Secretary Phyllis Crutcher a raise. He said that when Crutcher was hired a year ago September she was promised that she would receive an evaluation and possible raise after a year.

Council member Larry Fulton said he still thought the Council should wait until the water well situation was clearer before authorizing a raise. The city is in the process of negotiating with a landowner for water rights on which to drill a new water well.

The city received a grant to drill the water well, but the location originally chosen did not have good water. The city has been looking for good water since that time and it is possible the city will have to spend more money than originally estimated on the well.

"I don't think a $100 a month raise will break the city of Lefors," Gee said.

Council member Pat Seely said, "It's not an issue whether she deserves it or not. She definitely does. I can vouch for that."

Council member Johnny Woodard made a motion to give Crutcher a $50 a month raise with a review in six months. The motion died for a lack of a second.

Seely made a motion to table action on the pay raise and put it on the Dec. 9 agenda. The motion carried unanimously.

In other business, the City Council:

- unanimously voted to pay various insurance premiums.
- was shown the sign that will be placed in City Hall warning writers of bad checks that the city will prosecute.
- discussed, but took no action on the purchase of a base station and two mobile radios.
- set a work session for 7 p.m. Nov. 21 to go over the budget item by item.
- approved the payment of salaries and bills.
- approved minutes of prior meetings.
- received the city marshal's report.

11th hour nears

Congressmen battle crime, highway bills

By STEVEN KOMAROW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Congress is trying to pass crime and highway bills that President Bush demanded last spring before it completes a so-far lackluster legislative session.

But strong partisan disagreements make those bills still tough to pass before the planned Thanksgiving adjournment. Legislation expanding unemployment benefits, reworking the banking system and mandating unpaid leave for family emergencies are in similar difficulty.

Almost certainly left for next year, the election year, will be the fight over tax breaks that Democrats want to use in their run for the White House.

Congress also has failed to complete the annual spending bills for fiscal 1992, even though the fiscal year began Oct. 1.

After the Persian Gulf War, Bush challenged Congress to finish crime and highway bills in 100 days. Democrats dismissed his statements as pure politics.

But with adjournment nearing and Congress' trophy wall nearly bare, the pressure is on to get some legislation done. And those long-ago deadline bills are high on the list.

CRIME. Both chambers have passed much of what the president wants, including provisions to invoke the death penalty for some 50 crimes, including terrorism, treason and violent attacks on government officials.

But the Senate refused to go along with allowing illegally seized evidence to be used in court, and the House didn't go as far as Bush wants in restricting the time-consuming constitutional appeals by death row inmates.

The House and Senate also must settle differences on waiting periods for handgun purchases, something the president said he could sign if the rest of the crime bill were acceptable.

Democrats fear that unless they finish the crime bill, they could hand Bush a domestic issue beyond the differences they may have with him on the details of the legislation, though those are many.

TRANSPORTATION. The Senate and House are talking, but their versions of the highway and transportation bill differ significantly from each other and from the White House request.

The House passed a $151 billion, six-year program. To help cover the cost, it voted to extend part of the current 5-cent-per-gallon gas surcharge past its 1994 expiration date. The Senate approved a $123 billion, five-year bill, without the gas tax extension.

The White House asked for a $104.5 billion program, which Democrats say is inadequate, and has threatened a veto. But since they contend the programs are an economic stimulus, Democrats don't want the bill put off until next year.

BANKING. Hopes for a major bill this session collapsed, but Congress still must shore up the federal insurance fund that has been drained by bank failures. The administration has said $70 billion is needed.

ABORTION COUNSELING. An appropriations bill that pays for federal health and education programs is facing a veto because it would overturn Bush's ban on abortion counseling at federally subsidized family planning clinics.

DEFENSE. The Pentagon's $291 billion budget seems on the way toward completion, perhaps this week, if Congress goes along with Bush and backs off its plan to divert $1 billion to help the Soviets survive the winter.

The Defense Department will get money to build a limited defense against ballistic missiles, but it must cut 106,000 people from the active-duty forces. The bill denies Bush's request for authority to buy additional B-2 stealth bombers.

UNEMPLOYMENT BENEFITS. Lawmakers and administration officials again are trying to craft a plan for providing up to 20 weeks of extra unemployment benefits for people who have used up the standard half-year of coverage.

Bush ended three months of opposition to the Democratic effort two weeks ago, but compromise has been elusive as the two sides have bickered over how long the extra benefits should last and how to pay for them.

House officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said agreement could come as early as today on a plan. The measure would be paid for by faster tax collections from people with quickly rising incomes.

But across the Capitol, Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, has been pursuing a separate plan that would finance the benefits with foreign aid cuts, a transfer Bush opposes.

TAX CUTS. The tax bills floating around Capitol Hill aren't yet in the negotiations stage. Democrats contend they're trying to help the middle class by proposing plans which would give them a break at the expense of the wealthy.

CAMPAIGN FINANCE. House Democrats today planned to introduce their latest package with limits on total congressional campaign spending and partial public financing of the contests, anathema to most Republicans.

President Bush applauds as Robert Gates shakes hands with Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor after being sworn in as the 15th director of the Central Intelligence Agency at CIA Headquarters in Langley, Va., today.

Gates sworn in as CIA director

LANGLEY, Va. (AP) - President Bush today vowed to transform the CIA to keep pace with post-Cold War challenges and expressed "deepest trust" in new director Robert M. Gates to lead the way.

Gates, emerging from a controversial Senate nomination battle, promised to "move forward boldly." Bush, who was CIA director in 1976, participated in a swearing-in ceremony for Gates at the Central Intelligence Agency headquarters in this Virginia suburb of Washington.

Gates, 48, was confirmed by the Senate, 64-31, on Nov. 5 after rocky confirmation hearings at which critics - including some former co-workers - accused him of slanting intelligence data for political purposes as deputy CIA director in the 1980s.

He was sworn in today by Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day

O'Connor before an audience of family members and CIA employees.

Of Gates, Bush said: "He stood by my side and gave me wise counsel during the Panama crisis, Desert Storm and the drama of Moscow ... he has my deepest trust."

For his part, Gates, who has been Bush's No. 2 foreign policy adviser at the White House for the past three years, thanked the president for his unwavering support and friendship. He called it "an affection that is very much reciprocated."

Gates noted that it was 26 weeks ago to the day that his nomination had been announced by Bush. "In the interval, the entire Soviet empire has collapsed ... It has been a long process," he joked.

Bush, who flew by helicopter to the CIA headquarters from the White House, said the intelligence community must change "as rapidly as the world itself has changed."

Bush said that although East-West tensions have eased dramatically, "We will not let our guard down. We're not about to dismantle the capabilities that we worked so hard to rebuild."

He called the world "a safer world but it is no garden of Eden."

"The intelligence country's new challenge under Bob Gates' leadership is to move beyond the Cold War to the complex problems of the 21st Century," Bush said.

"I pledge to do all that I can possibly can to keep America's intelligence strong. Under Bob Gates' direction, we will dramatically expand our human intelligence collection efforts. We will give our officers and analysts the very finest in support technology."

Testimony begins in malpractice suit

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

Testimony in a medical malpractice lawsuit against Coronado Hospital was scheduled to begin this morning in 223rd District Court.

The jury was selected on Monday.

Phyllis (Skaggs) Ekleberry filed the lawsuit against Hospital Corporation of America and Coronado Community Hospital alleging that a registered nurse had improperly given her an injection on Dec. 28, 1986, and that the improperly administered injection had caused her severe pain and harm.

The lawsuit alleges that the medicine was injected into Ekleberry's sciatic nerve. Also listed as plaintiffs are Ekleberry's children, Amelia Jane Skaggs and Austin Shae Skaggs.

During jury selection Monday, defense attorney James A. Besselman told prospective jurors that the case would be difficult to decide.

"It's going to be rather difficult for you to decide what to believe and who is the most credible witness," Besselman said.

The attorney representing the hospital said that he would present evidence that Ekleberry had been treated for pain in her leg prior to ever receiving the injection from the nurse at Coronado Hospital. He said evidence of Ekleberry's condition as far back as 1974 would be presented.

"Will you be open-minded and look at her physical condition before she ever walked in to Coronado Community Hospital?" he asked jurors.

Besselman also said that sometimes medicine can be properly administered and still cause acute harm because of a bad reaction.

"This may be what happened in this case," he said.

The trial is expected to continue for two weeks.

Migraine sufferers have twice risk of stroke

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) - Men who get migraine headaches are twice as likely to have a stroke, according to new research that could provide clues to the causes of both disorders.

"We're not implying that migraines themselves are causing stroke, but rather that migraines may be a marker for increased risk of stroke," said Dr. JoAnn E. Manson, one of the authors of the study.

She emphasized that this was a preliminary finding that points to a need for further research. She also said the findings would apply to women as well as men.

The study, directed by Julie E. Buring of the Harvard Medical School in Boston, was presented Monday at the annual meeting of the American Heart Association. It found a statistical association between migraine headaches and strokes. It did not directly address the questions of what might be causing the disorders.

Dr. Seymour Diamond of the Diamond Headache Clinic in Chicago, the nation's oldest and largest private headache clinic, said the finding was "very significant and very important."

"It shows that people with migraines have more unstable or fragile blood vessels," he said.

The study suggests that using aspirin or other drugs to prevent migraines might help prevent strokes, Diamond said.

"If I was a migraine sufferer, I would talk to my physician," he said.

But Manson said the study suggests that the blood vessels of the people at risk may contract and expand more than the blood vessels of others.

Such changes in blood vessel size are linked to migraines and can cause strokes if the blood vessels constrict too much, she said.

Another possibility is that the high-risk individuals are prone to more clumping of blood cells called platelets, which help to form clots. The most common form of stroke, called ischemic strokes, occurs when clots impede blood flow in one of the arteries nourishing the brain.

In the Harvard study, men with migraines were found to have 2 1/2 times the risk of ischemic stroke. They had lower risks of other forms of stroke, so their total risk of strokes was slightly lower, about double that of others.

Suspect in sexual assault proposes to accept castration instead of jail

DALLAS (AP) - A man accused of sexually assaulting two young girls only a few months after he was released on parole after serving 12 years in prison for sexual assault says he would be willing to undergo castration to avoid another prison term.

Andrew Jackson, 52, made the offer Monday in an interview with the Dallas Times Herald.

Jackson insists he is innocent of the latest charges, which accuse him of sexually assaulting a nine-year-old girl he was babysitting and of abducting a 13-year-old girl and repeatedly raping her during several days while he kept her in a car in a wooded area.

But he said he would be willing to undergo castration because he believes a jury would be skeptical if he pleaded innocent.

"Jesus said 'If thy right eye offend thee, pluck it out and cast it from thee,'" he said. "It is a lot to give up. It's a certain kind of death, but if it's a cure-all situation and your freedom's involved, that's more important than sex itself."

Jackson is the first person to propose such punishment in Dallas, but two Houston judges endorsed castration in September as a punishment to deter violent crime.

The idea is called "barbaric" by civil libertarians. "There's no unanimity in the medical profession that castration would be an effective deterrent to that kind of behavior," Tom Krampitz, executive director of the Texas District and County Attorneys Association said. "Nobody's really given it too much credence."

Jackson's criminal history goes back to 1967 when he was given seven years' probation for statutory rape of a 16-year-old girl. He later was named in other sexual assault and indecency cases, but most of them were dismissed in 1978 when he received a 99-year sentence for raping a 15-year-old girl.

He served 12 years on that conviction and was paroled in November of 1990.

He was arrested last June in connection with the two sexual assault cases.

Although he says he is innocent of the latest charges, Jackson admits a problem with his "sexual drive."

"If you cut off a man's desire to have sex whatsoever, that should solve the problem, get to the root of it," said Jackson. "If the Dallas officials are in agreement, then I say let's get on with it."

Prosecutor Kate Porter said she will not agree to probation in Jackson's case when it comes to trial in February.

"We're going to ask for as much time as possible," Porter said. "If he wants to get himself castrated prior to the trial and use that to persuade the jury, he can do that."

Court considers developer rights, rejects cable appeal

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Supreme Court today agreed to decide whether the rights of land developers are violated when public officials arbitrarily, capriciously or illegally deny them building permits.

The justices said they will review a federal appeals court ruling that threw out a civil rights lawsuit against Puerto Rico officials by a development company in the island commonwealth.

In other action, the court rejected an appeal by a cable television company in Arkansas that says federal antitrust law and free-speech rights are being violated by a city that restricts the advertising on cable stations.

In a third case, the court asked the Bush administration whether it thinks the state of Alabama is unlawfully slowing shipments of out-of-state hazardous waste to a commercial disposal site near Emelle, Ala.

Some federal appeals courts have permitted such suits. The high court now will resolve the issue with a ruling likely by July.

The Puerto Rico dispute has a long history.

PFZ Properties in 1976 proposed to build a major hotel-housing complex in an area known as Vacia Talega in Loiza, Puerto Rico.

Planning board officials gave preliminary approval to the idea. But the proposal then encountered opposition from local residents.

The plan was shelved for several years and then revived in the early 1980s when PFZ Properties proposed a scaled-down version.

But for years there was no communication between the developer and Puerto Rico's Regulations and Permits Authority, the agency empowered to authorize building projects.

PFZ Properties sued in federal court in 1987, accusing the agency of deliberately refusing to act on its request for a building permit.

A federal judge threw out the suit, and the 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals last March upheld the dismissal.

The appeals court said the 1871 federal civil rights law invoked by the developer does not protect builders in such circumstances even if commonwealth officials violated the company's due process rights to fundamental fairness.

The developer cited rulings by eight other federal appeals court which the company said allow suits in similar circumstances.

The civil rights law invoked by the company was enacted to protect freed slaves after the Civil War and provides monetary damages to those who sue successfully.

In the Arkansas cable television case, the court without comment let a lower court ruling stand that lets Paragould, Ark. restrict advertising on the privately owned cable company in the city.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Prompting a little 'food for thought'

According to a new report by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, in August a record 23.6 million Americans received food stamps from the federal government, up three million from August 1990. The 1991 number comes to 9.4 percent of our 250 million people. As recently as 1970, only two percent of Americans ate on food stamps.

Even taking into account the real hardships people have suffered, how have we become a nation in which nearly one in 10 of our people feeds on the labors of the other nine? What happened to the old spirit of independence that made Americans unique in the world? Of relying only on family, church and private organizations for help?

Food stamps were a part of the explosion of wasteful, "Great Society" programs launched by President Lyndon Johnson in the mid-1960s. But food stamps — or any other welfare — are not on the Constitution's list of "All legislative powers herein granted ..."

Another point: As Charles Murray has shown in Losing Ground: American Social Policy, 1950-1980, the welfare spending boom actually halted the real post-1950 decline in poverty. Arthur Schiff writes in NY: The City Journal, "Unlike the rest of the American economy, the planned poverty economy is not accountable to its consumers."

Moreover, when LBJ's tax-and-waste programs took full effect in the early 1970s, the Great Society became the stagflation Malaise Society. In the Nov. 4 Newsweek, recent tax-cut convert George Will notes, "Since the 1973 oil shocks" — and the Great Society programs, we would add — "Americans' real after-tax incomes have barely risen, a minuscule 0.5 percent annually. This 18-year stagnation is unprecedented since the beginning of the Industrial Revolution."

What should be done? It will take some time for Americans to accept the proposition that federal anti-poverty programs are unconstitutional and make poverty worse; that private charities can take care of the truly needy best without creating a welfare culture. Meanwhile, other things can be done.

First, we need tax cuts. The poor pay an average of 50 percent of income in taxes, much above the 40 percent or so paid by the middle class. President Bush and Gov. Bruce King have made things worse the past year. They boosted taxes on items that take a large chunk of poor people's budgets: gas, cigarettes, alcohol and merchandise sales. And we should cut the incredible 15.3 percent swipe from every worker's paycheck for Social(ist) Security.

Second, repeal government agriculture price supports. Why does government boost prices on poor children's milk?

Third, repeal costly U.S. production and import controls on peanuts and other foods.

If government left people more of their own money, and stopped jacking up food prices, fewer people would seek food stamps and other forms of welfare.

Turtles and the environment

If you thought the only drawbacks of the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles were that they cause your children to demand toys, whack each other with sticks and talk like surfers who have been in the sun too long, you've been deluding yourself.

The muscle-bound little reptiles, I regret to inform you, have a political agenda, which is the same color as their shells: green. Not content with entertaining children, the Turtles want to indoctrinate them in environmentalist dogma and put them to work spreading it.

Their book, ABC's for a Better Planet, is a catechism of green theology, instructing kids in the True Word on everything from acid rain to animal rights and urging them to use this unleavened knowledge to become pests. "Write to your government leaders at every level," it urges. "Don't buy or use products that hurt the environment. Get your folks and friends to do the same."

The turtles aren't alone. Get up to watch Saturday morning cartoons with the small people in your house, and you may be introduced to the sort of villains you would expect to find only in the night terrors of Sierra Club officers — like scientist Dr. Blight, who schemes to "take pollution to new heights," and businessman Sly Sludge, who turns national forests into toxic waste dumps.

They are regulars on the syndicated show Captain Planet, which features a green-haired superhero who presides over the most politically correct group of confederates this side of your local faculty club and which pushes ideas about the environment that are even more cartoonish than its characters. The Ninja Turtles and Captain Planet have many amazing powers, but an ability to distinguish environmental fact from fiction isn't one of them.

Adult human beings often acquire that power, which is why it's important for environmental zealots to convert children before they can develop a healthy skepticism about political causes. The goal of these efforts is evangelization. The kids never get a clue that some alleged hazards are mythical or exaggerated, or that other objectives besides a pristine environment may be valuable.

Having been softened up by the cartoons, the little angels will be ready for the lessons of 50 Simple Things Kids Can Do to Save the Earth, a collection of half-truths and misinformation aimed at giving juveniles "the confidence that they can change — and save — the world."

You don't need to agree with W.C. Fields that "children should neither be seen nor heard from — ever again" to be certain that when salvation comes, it will not be conveyed by people too immature to have the knowledge or judgment to provide intelligent answers to complex questions. Kids may be good at moral outrage — that's why you can get college students to shout down unwelcome speakers — but environmental problems rarely yield to implacable certitude.

Any passion produced by this save-the-earth handbook will be misinformed. "Acid rain is extremely harmful to plants, rivers and lakes, and the creatures that lie in them," we are told. "In some places it is killing forests."

What we are not told is that (1) the sources of acid rain have dropped considerably and will keep dropping, (2) that only 4 percent of lakes, and those only in one region (the Northeast), are dead due to acidification, which can be blamed as much on naturally occurring factors as on acid rain, and (3) that the damage to forests is close to zero. To learn these facts, your cherubs will have to consult adult sources, like the 10-year federal study known as the National Acid Rain Assessment Program.

Global warming, which is still no more than a plausible theory, is presented in 50 Things as undisputed fact. The book says we produce "so much garbage that in many places, there is not enough room to bury it all." Lynn Scarlett of the Reason Foundation, however, calculates that "all of the garbage America produces in the next 1,000 years would fit in a landfill that occupies less than one-tenth of 1 percent of the continental United States."

Encouraging kids to learn about environmental issues is part of educating them. But education means exposing them to different views and requiring them to actually think. It also means insisting that they do what doesn't come naturally to children, namely inform themselves, before doing what does come naturally, namely tell others what to do. Turning kids into little green busybodies before they're old enough to think for themselves is no favor to them and possibly a great nuisance to the rest of us.

Ignorance about the environment among children may be regrettable, though not quite a priority when schools are perpetuating more basic forms of ignorance. But it doesn't help to take minds empty of knowledge and fill them with things that aren't true.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, Nov. 12, the 316th day of 1991. There are 49 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Nov. 12, 1920, baseball got its first "czar" as Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis was elected commissioner of the American and National Leagues.

On this date:

In 1815, American suffragist Elizabeth Cady Stanton was born in Johnstown, N.Y.

In 1889, De Witt Wallace, who, with his wife, Lila Bell Acheson, founded Reader's Digest, was born in St. Paul, Minn.

In 1921, representatives of nine nations gathered in the nation's capital for the start of the Washington Conference for Limitation of Armaments.

In 1927, Josef Stalin became the undisputed ruler of the Soviet Union as Leon Trotsky was expelled from the Communist Party.

In 1948, former Japanese premier Hideki Tojo and several other World War II Japanese leaders were sentenced to death by a war crimes tribunal.

Sexual harassment personified

NEW YORK — She took a cab down to SoHo to shop. She's young and pretty. She dresses stylishly.

"How did it go?" I asked her when she returned.

"My cab driver hit on me," she said. "He told me I was sexy and asked if I would go to an Indian restaurant for lunch with him."

"What did you do?" I asked next.

"I told him to stop and let me out and I caught another cab."

"Did you find anything you liked?"

"Not much," she said. "And there were all these guys saying things to me."

"Like what?"

"Like, 'I'd like to ...'"

"They said that to you on the street?"

"Yeah, that and 'Mmmmmmmmm, baby.'"

"How much does that sort of thing bother you?"

"It's unnerving as hell — coming from strangers, especially in a place like New York."

"Does this sort of thing happen to you often out in public?"

"Sometimes. But don't get me wrong here. I like a compliment like any woman would. I've had strange guys say things like, 'Your husband or boyfriend is a lucky man,' and then let it go at that."

"But it's the way some men say things and how long they keep saying them. There's a man in my building at home who keeps on making suggestive remarks to me.

"The other day, he sees me walking to my car and he says, 'I sure would like to take you to bed and make you my love slave.'"

"I said to him, 'How can you say that to me? We've never even had lunch together and you tell me you want to make me your love slave.' Guys like that make me sick."

"You go out with your other single friends to bars. What about men in a situation like that?"

"Same thing. If a man walks up to me, introduces himself and doesn't get personal, it's fine."

"But you get those who put their arm around your shoulders before you even know their name and say something about your body, and, 'Mmmmm, baby, I've been looking for something like you all night.' Those kind of men are arrogant creeps, and I tell them that."

"Have you ever been a victim of sexual harassment in the work place?" seemed a natural thing to ask at that point.

"My first job out of college," she explained, "I was working at a radio station. My boss took me to a hotel restaurant for lunch and then he said he had reserved the penthouse for us, and if I valued my job, I'd go up there with him."

"What did you do?"

"Got up from the table, went back to the office, cleaned out my desk and left there for good," she said.

It's OK to compliment a woman with whom you are not close, I surmised from my conversation, if you say simply, "That's an attractive outfit."

But keep your ideas about her anatomy to yourself and lose "Mmmmmmm, baby."

And if he tries to swap job security for sex, run. Blow the whistle on him. Slap his face. Knee him in the belly. Do something.

The battle of the sexes will end, I firmly believe, some day. But it will take some work.

David Duke has unusual bedfellows

By CHUCK STONE

The collegiality-shattering message out of Louisiana is not David Duke's "Ku Klux Klan member to elected official" respectability, but the depth of support among right-wing Republicans and black conservatives for his legislative agenda.

When the Republican gubernatorial candidate denounces quotas, affirmative action, welfare abuses, escalating street crime, widespread school failures and a massive job-losing recession, who can disagree with him?

When Duke calls for more self-initiative to replace spirit-debilitating welfare, isn't that what Clarence Thomas said his sister needed?

But, insist Duke's opponents, he is a KKK wolf in three-piece-suit sheep's clothing. The accusation falls on many deaf ears. This is the age of videocracy where the medium is the only message.

And David Duke comes across on television like Jack Armstrong, the all-American boy. "He's so cute," gushed retired nurse and life-long Democrat Ann Jernigan at a Baton Rouge rally. "How can anyone who looks like that be bad?"

Easily. That's why an ex-actor was elected president.

Handsome David Duke is the logical evolution of the past three presidential elections, in which cinematic Reagan was elected twice, and his water boy was elected the third time. And now shocked Americans are shedding crocodile tears over the gall of Louisianians voting for the same racial evil that has been lurking "in the heart of man" since 1980.

"There is no bigger problem we have ... in the country than the rising welfare class," Republican Duke declared recently. "I believe in equal rights for all, special privileges for none."

That is a catechism that most Republicans repeat, that George Bush advocates and that black conservatives preach. The only two differences between the 1992 political messages of David Duke and black conservatives are the tawdriness of his past and the color of their skin.

The rise of Duke should come as no surprise to informed observers of politics. For the past 11 years, the subliminal racial appeals of Reagan's "Chicago welfare queen" and Bush's Willie Horton have nurtured Republican supporters ranging from Northern conservative George Will to Southern conservative David Duke.

But subliminal messages don't remain subliminal forever. Eventually, somebody acts them out. Louisiana voters did this year.

Southern-reared columnist Edwin M. Yoder Jr. touched on the etiology of Republican strategies and Duke actions when he recently wrote: "Not until the Republicans chuck the whole nasty kit-bag of appeals to race, the sly and subtle with the rude and blatant, will their suit for divorce from David Duke be granted."

Curiously, I have yet to hear any cries of distress from black conservatives about David Duke. But if you dig a little deeper, their silence makes sense. In the game of power politics, a David Duke will help attract more Democrats to the conservative camp. Black conservatives mistakenly believe that this will enhance their power base.

Let's some fret that I misrepresent the politics and malign the integrity of black conservatives, I would suggest that there is not one iota of political difference between what David Duke is preaching in 1991, what George Wallace advocated in 1972 and what black conservatives Tom Sowell, Glenn Lowry and Shelby Steele, Clarence Thomas and Robert Woodson are urging.

But David Duke's contribution to American politics goes beyond his symbiosis with black conservatives. He has provided white racists with the imprimatur for white conservatives who are ecstatic at the prospect of breaking up the ethnic unity that ushered other ethnic groups into political power.

Lawmakers settle tabs at House Restaurant

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Current and former members of Congress owe up to $50,000 in House restaurant bills, but a $300,000 unpaid tab cited a month ago has melted away, according to a House official.

The official, who spent the last month sorting out the debt, said delinquent lawmakers have been forking over the money during a month of bad publicity over the unpaid bills.

But much of the unpaid balance, cited by a House member last month, was no more delinquent than someone's last credit card statement, the official, who insisted on anonymity, said in a recent interview.

"Do you owe money for Visa that you charged in the last month? If you do, it's not overdue," the House official said. "The figures early on were quite inflated. The bulk of the money owed was current accounts, amounts being billed."

The clamor began Oct. 3, when Rep. Pat Roberts, R-Kan., announced that 300 current and former House members owed more than $300,000 to the House restaurant system. Some $255,000 of the amount represented bills due Service America Corp., which operated the House restaurants and catering system from 1987 until last August.

If the announcement itself didn't cause indigestion, the timing certainly did. It came just after congressional investigators found that lawmakers wrote 8,331 rubber checks at the House bank from July 1989 through June 1990.

Roberts, ranking Republican on the House Administration subcommittee on personnel and police, said he took advantage of the check scandal to bring attention to a problem he'd been trying to resolve for years.

The Kansas lawmaker also proposed posting the names of debtors in the main House restaurant after a 30-day grace period.

The 30 days have come and gone, and so has much of Service America's debt. Only about 50 account holders owe the $50,000 or less remaining debt, the House official said.

He said Roberts "used a snapshot at the time there were lot of current billings included. Obviously, in the last couple of months a lot of members settled up accounts. There were incorrect billings. This was a very large operation that was providing a lot of food services."

"But that's not to say there weren't members slow in paying. It's being rapidly wrapped up. In the next few weeks, we hope to have it (the collection effort) finished."

The debt included not only members' own meals, but bills for food served to third parties — including constituent groups. The members had to take responsibility by signing for those meals.

"The third-party operation led to a great deal of confusion," the official said.

The House itself now runs the restaurant system, requiring advance deposits and payment at the time meals are served.

The official said he did not have figures on the status of an older $47,000 debt to the restaurant system. Roberts said more than 50 current and former members and several committees owed that money before 1987, when the House ran the restaurants without a contractor.

Roberts, the House official and Service America have been unwilling to provide the names of members who owed money.

Roberts admitted that his announcement wasn't popular with some of his colleagues and said last week that he's no longer privy to current debt figures.

The chairman of the House Administration Committee, Rep. Charles Rose, D-N.C., has taken control of collection efforts.

Weary of violence, Washingtonians seek to make gunmakers responsible

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fifteen hundred Washingtonians have been gunned down since 1987, and a week ago this city struck back.

But no one can say whether its extraordinary solution — holding gun manufacturers responsible for the damage caused by their products — is an effective step or an empty gesture.

Under a law enacted by vote of the people in a referendum, manufacturers, importers or sellers of 14 potent assault weapons could be sued for the deaths or injuries caused by the weapons they made available.

That's a novel extension of liability law. Usually manufacturers can be sued when their products are defective; under this law providers could be sued when their products perform exactly as intended.

"It is only fair that those making a profit from the gun trade should bear some of the costs," said a supporting organization, the Coalition to Stop Gun Violence.

"It's an absurd theory of law," said Richard Gardiner, lawyer for the National Rifle Association, which stands ready to help defend the first gun dealer sued. "The overall effect will be to make the District of Columbia look very foolish in the eyes of most people."

But Sherman Cohn, a specialist on liability law at the Georgetown University Law Center, said the measure might pass constitutional muster. He compared it to laws holding manufacturers of highly dangerous substances responsible for damages even when the substances are not defective.

The law was enacted by a 77 percent majority. The issue reached the ballot through the efforts of the city's black clergy who said the carnage on Washington's streets called for a radical remedy. This year's murder pace is approaching last year's record of 483.

The vote restored a statute that was passed last year by the city council, then repealed at the behest of newly elected Mayor Sharon Pratt Dixon. She feared its enactment would antagonize Congress and jeopardize an increase in the federal payment made to Washington.

The day after the vote, Rep. Dana Rohrabacher, R-Calif., introduced legislation to nullify the law.

He said the measure violates the Constitution "by purporting to subject to District of Columbia law the activities of businesses in the 50 states that are outside the city and do not conduct any business in this city."

If Rohrabacher can force a vote, he could prevail. Last month, one day after a shooting rampage in Texas left 23 people dead, the House refused to ban 13 semiautomatic assault weapons.

Court challenges are certain, too. And even if the law survives, there's a question whether it would curtail Washington's worst-in-the-nation homicide rate.

Most shootings here involve ordinary pistols, not the weapons listed on the ballot — including the Uzi carbine and pistol, the "Streetsweeper" semi-automatic shotgun, the Beretta AR-70 and the Chinese-made Avtomat Kalashnikovs.

"I've never heard anybody on the other side establish that person X would have been able to collect damages had the bill been in effect," said Rick Dyckema, an aide to Rohrabacher.

Indeed, Washingtonians seemed to acknowledge their action may turn out to have been symbolic.

"It will probably be found unconstitutional," one voter told The Washington Post. But "at least people did something," she said.

"I could understand both sides," another voter said, "but it seemed to me that holding manufacturers responsible was as good a suggestion as anything else that has come up."

Children who consume plenty of calcium have lower blood pressures, study claims

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Youngsters who consume plenty of calcium, largely by drinking milk, have significantly lower blood pressure and may be warding off heart trouble later in life, a new study suggests.

Although researchers have found a tentative link between calcium intake and blood pressure in grownups, the new research is the first to show that pre-school children seem to keep their blood pressure down by consuming milk and other calcium-rich food.

The research found that for each glass of milk — or similar serving of calcium — they regularly consumed each day, youngsters' systolic blood pressure was four points lower.

Children who have higher than usual blood pressure early in life often go on to develop hypertension in adulthood.

"We were surprised to see such a strong relationship in kids," said Dr. Matthew W. Gillman of Boston University. "If this is confirmed, it could be one way to prevent the appearance of hypertension" later in life.

Another recent study found that the newborn babies of mothers who consumed sufficient amounts of calcium during their last three months of pregnancy had lower blood pressures.

Gillman presented details of the children's study at the annual scientific meeting of the American Heart Association, which began Monday with more than 26,000 doctors, scientists and other professionals.

The study was based on a review of the eating habits of 79 boys and girls who were 3 to 5 years old. Researchers found that for each 100 milligrams of calcium consumed by the youngsters in every 1,000 calories, their systolic blood pressures were lower by two millimeters of mercury.

They found no change in diastolic pressures but said that was probably because those are harder to measure in children. Systolic pressure — the higher number in blood pressure readings — is the pressure in arteries when the heart contracts. Diastolic is the pressure between heartbeats.

Dr. David A. McCarron of Oregon Health Sciences University, who discovered the link between blood pressure and calcium about a decade ago, called the new work "a fascinating observation."

He noted that animal studies suggest that the younger animals are when they consume calcium, the bigger the impact on their blood pressures during adulthood.

He said the latest work suggests that youngsters who consume recommended amounts of calcium early in life may improve their chances of avoiding high blood pressure in adulthood.

"We need to avoid letting little kids fail to get the dietary calcium that they need," McCarron said. "Kids are drinking soft drinks and not getting their milk."

Dairy products are the chief source of calcium.

An eight-ounce glass of low-fat or skim milk has about 300 milligrams of calcium, and a cup of yogurt contains 300 to 400 milligrams.

The children in the study averaged 511 milligrams of calcium for every 1,000 calories. They typically consumed about 1,500 calories daily.

Their systolic blood pressures ranged from 69 to 108 and averaged 92.

The study was based on eating records of the child compiled on 12 days over a one-year period.

Spread of AIDS affecting Third World economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The spread of AIDS is hurting business in the Third World and may eventually hold down incomes, a World Bank official says.

In addition to looking at the human cost of the fatal disease, AIDS also should be examined for what it does and will do to people's livelihoods, the official said.

"Replacement and retraining costs in hard-hit industries are already beginning to escalate," wrote Jill Armstrong of the bank's Eastern Africa Department.

Her analysis, "Socioeconomic Implications of AIDS in Developing Countries," will appear next week in Finance and Development, a quarterly of the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund.

Armstrong said that by 2000 there may be 40 million people infected with the virus, generating 1 million new AIDS cases a year. Over 900,000 of those will be in Africa, she added.

The World Bank is concerned as the largest source of development loans to the Third World.

"AIDS is already the leading cause of adult death in Abidjan, and about 20 percent of adults in Kampala are infected," Armstrong said.

Abidjan, capital of the Ivory Coast, has a population of more than 1 million. Kampala, half its size, is the capital of Uganda.

"The current trend among high-risk groups in Thailand and India is particularly disturbing," Armstrong said.

Illness slows down productivity, boosting medical costs and death benefits, she noted.

Average output — roughly the same as average income — has grown slowly in Africa over recent years and has actually declined in some countries. The World Bank estimated it as $790 in the Ivory Coast and $250 in Uganda in 1989, the latest year for which figures are available.

Armstrong predicted a multiplier effect because AIDS affects young people at their most productive ages, with university students at increasing risk. Their loss means a waste of education in countries where well-trained people are in short supply and places in universities are hard to get.

Ho Chi Minh City returns to wildness of Vietnam War days

By DENIS D. GRAY
Associated Press Writer

HO CHI MINH CITY, Vietnam (AP) — Opium dens and girlie bars are back in business; "Saigon cowboys" on motorcycles snatch purses; and hustlers strike a deal-a-minute as this nominally Communist city lurches back to its anything-goes ways of the Vietnam War.

The former capital of South Vietnam, renamed for Vietnam's deceased revolutionary leader and supposed to have become a sober, socialist bastion, is a study in free enterprise run wild. Just about everything is for sale.

And nobody even bothers to call it anything but its former name — Saigon.

Rather than looking to Hanoi, citizens ape the West, and particularly the America of hype and Hollywood. You can stay at the Rambo Hotel, eat fast food at "Caliphonia Hamburgo" and drink at the "Apocalypse Now" bar. Old Saigon never really died. But it had to lie low after 1975, when the Communist victors tried to impose heavy-handed controls and Marxist ideology on a population addicted to capitalist ways.

The city's energies were unleashed following the Communist Party's 1986 decision to adopt sweeping economic reforms and open up to the world.

Now, visitors returning after just a few months are stunned at the city's transformation — for better and worse.

"I'm happy with the changes, but of course there is the negative, unhealthy side," says Nguyen Son, a senior party official. "We have to pay the price involved in free enterprise. And when you open your window a lot of goodwill flows in along with some flies."

Son, a member of the municipal council, or People's Committee, estimates 10,000 drug addicts are in the city and roughly an equal number of prostitutes, although actual figures could be far higher.

According to police, 600 brothels were in operation last year. Along Dong Khoi Street, the density of bars and discotheques is almost as great as in the 1960s, when American GIs turned Saigon into Asia's sin capital.

In an interview, Son cited unemployment — affecting 300,000 people of a total population of 4 million — as a root cause of the growing social ills.

But the loosening of controls, corruption and the darker sides of capitalism are certainly others.

The private sector accounts for 40 percent of the city's economic activity and 60 percent of the retail trade — double that of pre-1986 days. Free enterprise is expected to increase.

Late into the night, the streets of central Ho Chi Minh City throb with traffic and commerce, both in sidewalk stalls and increasingly up-market stores. More beggars haunt the pavements and an army of brazen pickpockets lurks in the shadows.

Hundreds of pairs of eyes follow a passerby, figuratively burning a hole in his or her wallet pocket. Foreigners are particular targets and are exerting a growing influence in the city.

Dowdy Soviet tourists and the trickle of other outsiders have been replaced by young backpackers, international businessmen and Viet Khieu — overseas Vietnamese, some of them "boat people" refugees, returning to visit relatives, invest and spread the word about life in the West.

More than 170,000 foreigners, including 95,000 tourists, visited the city in 1990 and more are expected to this year. Hotels have mushroomed and a dozen foreign airlines now provide service.

Son said that at mid-year, foreigners were involved in 109 projects in light industry, tourism and other economic sectors valued at $560 million. This is expected to expand once the United States lifts its trade embargo on Vietnam, more international credits become available and the country's infrastructure improves.

Foreign businessmen, including Americans itching for the embargo to be revoked, predict this city will be a magnet for investment.

Many residents say Communist narrow-mindedness helped generate this breeding ground of capitalism. By denying the defeated South Vietnamese — and their children — access to responsible positions in government and other areas of national life, the victors forced them to pursue private enterprise.

And this the Saigonese have done with a vengeance.

Troops landing

(AP Laserphoto)

Members of the 22nd Marine Expeditionary Unit land in the desert after being dropped off by a Sea Stallion helicopter 40 miles north of Kuwait City today. The landing came during the second day of "Eager Mace," a joint amphibious exercise with the Kuwaiti military. Approximately 2,300 U.S. Marines, airmen and sailors arrived Sunday for the 11-day exercise.

Dubrovnik Old Town under fire... again

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (AP) — Serb-dominated federal forces pounded the medieval heart of Dubrovnik again today, and both the besieged port and another vital Croatian city, Vukovar, appeared close to falling.

The Red Cross called on federal, Serbian and Croatian authorities to send representatives to an urgent meeting in Geneva. It appealed to the combatants to "spare innocent lives."

"The situation of the civilian population has deteriorated sharply in the last few hours, particularly in Dubrovnik," the Red Cross said in a statement issued in Geneva. "Casualty figures are mounting as fighting and shelling continue unabated."

Both Dubrovnik and Vukovar have great symbolic and strategic importance in the 4 1/2-month-old civil war, which has claimed nearly 2,000 lives since Croatia declared independence.

Fighting raged around Borovo Naselje just north of Vukovar, the eastern city on the border with Serbia that has been under siege for nearly three months, Croatian radio said.

Croat defenders in Vukovar have apparently run out of ammunition. About 12,000 people in the Danube River city have taken shelter underground.

To the west, federal forces surrounding the Adriatic port of Dubrovnik resumed shelling the city at 6:20 a.m. today after a relatively quiet night, European Community spokeswoman Renilde Steeghs quoted EC monitors in the city as saying.

Twenty-eight people have been killed and 300 have sought medical assistance in the past two days of heavy bombardment of Dubrovnik, Croatian radio said. According to the Croatian Health Ministry, 1,881 people have been killed in the republic and nearly 10,000 wounded.

Dubrovnik's 50,000 residents, who have spent days in cellars and shelters, are short of bread and drinking water because of the six-week siege which has devastated the city and threatens to destroy its medieval architecture.

On Monday, Dubrovnik was reported ablaze and surrounded by smoke.

Shells smashed into the old walled town this morning, EC deputy spokesman Ed Koestel said after speaking with monitors holed up in the city. The old town also was hit Monday by tank fire.

The Hotel Argentina, where 14 EC monitors are residing, was hit by three shells today. One slammed into the fifth floor where the EC monitors had their rooms, but they had taken shelter in the hotel cellar, Koestel said. Two shells hit another part of the hotel, he said.

The EC is trying to evacuate its monitors from the city. Steeghs said talks between the EC mission regional command center in the Adriatic port of Split and the federal army were continuing to ensure the team's safe withdrawal.

"We need an absolute cease-fire, but so far there's been no agreement to that," she said.

Koestel said agreement had been reached that one ferry boat would be allowed in and out of the port. He said the ferry Slavija was waiting at the Montenegrin port of Zelenika for clearance to enter the port.

National project measuring women over 55 to design clothes that fit

By ROBERT LEE ZIMMER
Associated Press Writer

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Experts around the country are sizing up the shape of things to come, measuring as many as 10,000 women with rulers and ribbons in an effort to develop better-fitting clothes for the 55-and-up set.

The industry project is the first step toward ready-to-wear clothing designed specifically for the older woman.

"Just because they are older does not mean they are larger. Other things change, like muscle tone and bone structure," said Ellen Goldsberry of the University of Arizona. "But the clothing industry has absolutely no data about their figures."

More than 17 million American women are 55 and up. Many older women endure clothing that's too tight here and too loose there. And many would be willing to pay a little more for the perfect fit, Goldsberry said Wednesday.

She and colleague Naomi Reich are coordinating the measuring project for the American Society for Testing and Materials, which develops standards for everything from tire cords to clothes.

At the Cooperative Extension Service office in Champaign County on Wednesday, women slipped into light blue body suits criss-crossed with ribbons to mark measuring points.

Volunteers used rulers and other tools to record 57 measurements, including the slope of the shoulders and the roundness of the abdomen.

"I think when they get all done, we'll have better clothes," said 79-year-old participant Orlena Leischner of Fisher. "It really is hard to find a one-piece dress that fits in all places."

The $180,000 project is being funded by the garment industry.

Now, sizing is based on measurements taken in the 1940s. Most of the women used for those measurements were in the Army, and only 2 percent were over 50.

Among them was flight nurse Elberta Morse of Champaign, who was measured in 1946. Morse, 69, decided to be measured again Wednesday to help older women find better-fitting clothes.

"I noticed a change in clothes in the early '50s after the last project," she said. "I began to buy the new juniors. I could see the difference. They fit me."

Rachel Eggen, specifications-quality manager for intimate apparel at Sears' Chicago headquarters, said the study could help the industry offer a better fit.

"These women are conscious about how their clothes look and fit — their appearance," said Eggen. "They diet and exercise, but still the biological clock ticks, and certain changes happen as they grow older."

The point of the shoulder rolls forward, for instance. The chest area narrows, the upper back widens, and the spine compresses, reducing height. The derriere flattens, and the abdomen protrudes.

"Some women buy pants with stretch fabric and elastic waistbands and wear them backwards," said Goldsberry. "It fits their new figure, but it's an absolute shame."

Goldsberry and Reich will continue collecting measurements through January, then they'll analyze their findings and eventually make them available to the garment industry.

Changes could include clothing and patterns designed specifically for the older body, Goldsberry said. And there could be labels that provide length and circumference information about the garment instead of just size numbers "that mean nothing," she added.

However, she said it could be two or three years before women see changes on clothing racks.

"The companies will have to re-gear and redesign, target the market and change their thinking," Goldsberry said.

"Today's older woman won't buy the frumpy old house dress 'Grandma' used to wear. She wants style and fit."

(AP photo) Carolyn Swope, left, and Michelle Saxon of the Cooperative Extension Service take body measurements on Lora Mae Kesler of Dewey, Ill., in Champaign, Ill. About 10,000 women, 55 and older, are being measured in the national project aimed at defining the older body so clothes can be made to fit better.

Trip to mailbox may end as march to altar

DEAR ABBY: Congratulations, you've done it again! You can now put another notch in your "success column" for Operation Dear Abby.

Last Thanksgiving, I wrote a letter to "Any Serviceperson" and sent it to the Persian Gulf as a part of your letter-writing campaign. I never really expected a reply, but I received one from a Lt. Patrick E. Fortune, which I answered promptly. We soon learned that we had a lot in common: His name is Patrick, my name is Patty; he's Irish-Catholic, I'm Irish-Catholic; he's one of seven kids, I'm one of seven kids; he went to an all-boys Catholic school, I went to an all-girls Catholic school; we both have dreamed of biking through Ireland. We also share many of the same beliefs about God, family and values.

When Pat returned to the states, we started talking on the telephone. We have had three- and four-hour long conversations. (Don't ask about our telephone bills!) I finally broke down and told him that I was absolutely nuts about him! He then confessed that he felt the same way about me.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

We finally met in Cincinnati over the Labor Day weekend and had a sensational time. We knew there was no doubt about it — we were right for each other.

Pat sent me a plane ticket so I could visit him at Fort Bragg, and our romance flourished. He will get out of the service in about six months, after which he plans to move to Milwaukee and make spoiling me a full-time job. That's wonderful because he's the most important person in my life.

So, Dear Abby, that's the saga of Pat and Patty. How can I ever thank you?

PATTY TREACY,
GREENFIELD, WIS.

DEAR PATTY: You just did.

DEAR ABBY: I recently remarried. My new husband was also previously married. How should I introduce my first husband's relatives who are my former in-laws? I am very friendly with my ex-husband's nieces and nephews, too.

SECOND TIME AROUND

DEAR SECOND: There is no reason to call attention to the fact that you were formerly related by marriage. Just introduce your ex-in-laws — nieces and nephews — as "dear" or "old" friends, and save the explanatory details for subsequent meetings.

Mann Elementary fall festival

Researchers: Depression may escape notice in elderly

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Depression may escape notice in older patients, who are more likely to complain about physical symptoms than their mental states, researchers say.

"Physicians and families of older patients should be aware of the possibility that complaints of multiple physical symptoms could signal depression," says Ronald B. Stewart, a professor at the University of Florida College of Pharmacy.

Stewart is one of six researchers to investigate depression in the elderly using data collected by the Florida Geriatric Research Program in Dunedin. Their findings were recently published in The Journal of Family Practice.

The study indicated older patients are more likely to complain they hurt all over. Stewart says they actually are sending a message to their physicians that depression may be an underlying factor.

When researchers compared depression indicators with diseases, laboratory tests, medication and symptoms of 1,048 participants, they found the best indicator of depression to be complaints of multiple symptoms.

The researchers found some correlation with complaints of memory loss and abdominal pain, but by far the most important factor was the total number of symptoms reported.

Studies have indicated that 1 percent to 5 percent of elderly people living in the community and 10 percent to 20 percent in nursing homes suffer from major depression.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Don't be indifferent to the suggestions of others in your commercial dealings today. By the same token, do not discount your own bright ideas, because they might be superior. Scorpio, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for Scorpio's Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) It's best not to use an intermediary today to pass on critical information to another. If you have something important to say, use direct lines of communication.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Frequently, tips given to us by others on ways to make or save money are unreliable. However, today you might receive some inside information that's worthy of further investigation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your words carry a lot of weight today with those who both trust and respect you. You're the one who can awaken the enthusiasm in a friend who's been down in the dumps lately.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) An important objective can be achieved today — if you take things one step at a time. Be sure you're on solid footing before making each move.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You might have an opportunity today to teach a friend how to do something that has been successful for you. You're a good instructor, and the knowledge you impart will prove most helpful.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) To be successful today, you don't have to be bolder or stronger than your competitors, just smarter. Let them use their muscles; you use your mind.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Keep an open mind today, because someone you'll be involved with might have better ideas than you do for advancing a mutual interest.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be reasonable about the size of returns you expect for your efforts today. What you do will be acknowledged in small ways, not necessarily on a grand scale.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You'll be an asset at social gatherings today; you will know how to put others at ease and get them to talk about themselves. Your tactics will make you popular, too.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Thoughtfulness toward those you love will be deeply appreciated today. It will be the little things you do for them that show you have their interests at heart.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You could have the proper skills today for working on endeavors that require creativity and imagination. Be sure to use your assets in some constructive manner.

IRVING (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys have to go on the road again, but this time without offensive tackle Nate Newton and possibly cornerback Ike Holt.

Both were injured in Sunday's 26-23 overtime loss to the Houston Oilers.

The training room on Monday was jammed with players treating injuries suffered in the longest game in franchise history that ended with 29 seconds left in overtime.

"We're a banged-up football team," said Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson on Monday. "It was a physical game."

Newton and Kevin Gogan, defensive tackle Tony Casillas, defensive end Jim Jeffcoat, special teams player Reggie Cooper, and cornerback Holt left the bruising contest with injuries.

Newton and Cooper will miss at least next week's game against the New York Giants. Newton has a sprained knee and Cooper a strained thigh muscle.

Cooper was placed on injured reserve and the Cowboys signed Michael Sullivan for depth on the offensive line.

"Newton will miss probably a couple of weeks," Johnson said. "Hopefully, that's all. We've got some injury problems. We are not far along in team depth to be able to afford injuries."

Holt will be doubtful next week with bruised ribs. Casillas was questionable with an elbow injury.

"Casillas is feeling a lot better and thinks he will be able to go," Johnson said.

Running back Emmitt Smith's pain was damaged pride.

Smith's first lost fumble in 238 rushing and receiving attempts this year setup the Oilers for Al Del Greco's game-winning field goal Sunday in a sold-out Astro dome.

Smith said "I think I was trying too hard. The ball just popped loose as I was sandwiched between two guys. I was thinking touchdown."

The Cowboys only needed a field goal.

Houston recovered the fumble and drove from its 17-yard line to the winning field goal.

"I made the big mistake," Smith said. "This is a tougher loss than usual."

The Oilers said Smith fumbled because he has a habit of carrying the ball in his left hand.

Oilers linebacker Lamar Lathon, who caused the fumble, said Smith "is a left-handed ball carrier. I was aware of that. He doesn't switch the ball to his right hand when he runs right."

Johnson said he decided to run another play "because I wasn't comfortable with a 46-yard field goal. We were just going to run Emmitt one more time before we kicked the field goal. We wanted to get the ball as close as we could down there. A long field goal could have been blocked."

"We were drained down there at the end of the game. Our defense played to the equivalent of two football games."

The loss dropped the Cowboys to 6-4 with back-to-back road games looming on the schedule against the Giants and the undefeated Washington Redskins.

Dallas doesn't play again at home until Thanksgiving Day against the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Bears claw Vikings

By ED STYCH
Associated Press Writer

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The Chicago Bears went back to the basics on third down — and there was almost no stopping them.

Using short passes and up-the-middle runs — along with some Minnesota miscues — the Bears converted seven of 13 third downs and one fourth down en route to their best offensive performance of the year and a 34-17 victory over the Vikings Monday night.

The victory, their first at the Metrodome in four years, gives the Bears (8-2) a two-game lead over Detroit in their quest for their seventh NFC Central title in the last eight seasons.

"If there's one thing that Coach Ditka stresses, it's winning the division games, and our goal is to win them all," said Chicago quarterback Jim Harbaugh. "We took a big, big step tonight, because historically we just don't play well up here. We were able to turn that around tonight."

With five games left for the Vikings (5-6), coach Jerry Burns all but conceded the division title to the Bears.

"I don't think there's any question but they're a better team," Burns said.

To a player and a coach, credit for Chicago's clutch, third-down success was given to Mike Ditka's decision to use tried-and-true plays instead of the new plays usually added to attack the weakness of that week's opponent.

"They were all plays that we've run the last two years," Harbaugh said. "They gave me a chance to have a little more input on the third-down plays, and the ones that they were calling tonight were the ones that I was really the most comfortable with. And I felt so confident every time that one of them came in that I knew I was going to hit it."

With the Vikings' help, the Bears converted six third- or fourth-down situations on their first two drives to take a 14-7 lead.

The Bears kept their first drive alive with two third-down conversions — one when Reggie Rutland was called for pass interference and the other on Harbaugh's 12-yard pass to Wendell Davis. Five plays after Davis' catch, Neal Anderson scored on a 6-yard run to tie the game.

Chicago's next drive was the key, as the Bears converted three third downs and a fourth. Minnesota's Joey Browner got credit for the first third-down conversion, as he was penalized 15 yards for a late hit on Anthony Morgan long after Harbaugh's pass fell incomplete.

Harbaugh later sneaked for 1 yard on fourth down and then threw an 8-yard pass to Tom Waddle on third down. Brad Muster had a third-down run of 2 yards, which was immediately followed by Harbaugh's 7-yard TD pass to Morgan.

The Bear's fifth drive — which came right after the Vikings made it 20-17 — included third-down passes of 17 yards to Dennis Gentry and 9 yards to Waddle, and culminated with Anderson's improvised 24-yard TD.

Lemuel Stinson ended the Vikings' comeback hopes when he intercepted Rich Gannon on the next play from scrimmage and ran 34 yards for a touchdown.

"We stuck with a few of the plays that we thought would be very effective," Chicago offensive coordinator Greg Landry said of the third-down plays he called. "I thought we really accommodated the strengths of our receivers."

It was the Bears' best offensive performance of the season. They hadn't scored on two successive drives and hadn't scored more than 21 points in a game.

They also had the ball for 38 minutes, 20 seconds to 21:40 for the Vikings, outrushed the Vikings 191 yards to 87 and outgained them 358-255.

Asked why his offense didn't do more, Burns said: "We couldn't get the ball back. We never got the ball back."

"We never stopped them. We couldn't stop the run. We couldn't stop the pass. We couldn't stop them in third-down situations," Burns said. "This is about as bad a defensive day as we've had since I've been the head coach here. The tackling was sorry, the coverage was sorry. Their third-down percentage must have been astronomical."

The Bears' clutch play didn't surprise Harbaugh.

"We've been in a lot of tough situations this year — a lot of nail-biters where we had to make the plays," he said. "I think the team was really focused tonight on making those kind of plays. I think we played like men tonight. We didn't get rattled."

'Magic' ad may be dropped

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Target Stores probably won't air a TV ad campaign featuring Magic Johnson because its playful tone might appear insensitive, the discount chain said.

However, Target said it will continue to use Johnson in other advertisements.

"The commercials ... are very Magic — very lighthearted, frolicky and whimsical," George Hite, the company's vice president of public and consumer affairs, said Monday. The campaign was to have begun next month.

"We looked at those spots, and in light of the (AIDS) virus it might be insensitive to run these spots because the virus he has is not funny."

Shortly after the former Los Angeles Lakers star announced Thursday that he has the AIDS virus, the companies with which he has endorsement contracts said they would not cut ties with him because of his infection.

"I'm still with them and that's beautiful," Johnson said last week.

The Target campaign is called "Electronics, Like Magic" and focuses on the sale of electronics equipment. The campaign was set to end in December. Hite said he did not know if Johnson's contract would be renewed after that.

"We have no other campaigns with him scheduled," he said.

Hite said a final decision on whether the commercial will be pulled will be made after Target officials talk to Johnson's agent.

The 30-second commercial shows Johnson jumping through television sets and joking with an announcer, Hite said. It would have been broadcast in 32 states.

Hite would not disclose how much Johnson was being paid for the Target endorsement, but said Johnson will still be paid.

Johnson will still be shown in Target billboards, circulars and participate in in-store signings as part of his agreement with the chain, Hite said.

"The response to this campaign and Magic has been very positive," Hite said. "We all know he's a terrific guy. Our focus the past few days has been more on Magic the person, not Magic the commercial."

Nearly 100 file as free agents

NEW YORK (AP) — World Series MVP Jack Morris and suspended Atlanta outfielder Otis Nixon were among the five players who filed for free agency Monday to raise the total to a record 97.

Meanwhile, the Pittsburgh Pirates made a late $18.5 million, four-year offer to outfielder Bobby Bonilla, who filed for free agency on the first possible day. The offer was rejected Friday by Bonilla's agent, Dennis Gilbert, and other teams can start making offers Tuesday.

"Starting Tuesday, I will contact all the teams that have contacted us," Gilbert said. "I will start making appointments with them and see what they have to say."

Pirates general manager Larry Doughty declined to comment Monday on the offer or confirm that it had been made. Bonilla has said he was "99.9 percent" certain he would leave Pittsburgh.

The total of free agents broke the previous record of 96, set last year. Others filing Monday were Minnesota second baseman Al Newman, Twins catcher Junior Ortiz and California outfielder Max Venable.

Seven more players were eligible to file by the midnight deadline, including Twins third baseman Mike Pagliarulo, Los Angeles catcher Gary Carter and Houston pitcher Mike Scott.

Morris had a 1992 option for $3.65 million but one day after pitching 10 shutout innings against Atlanta in Game 7 of the World Series, he decided not to exercise it. Twins general manager Andy MacPhail has said he hoped to resign Morris, who is looking to raise his salary to the $5 million-a-year range.

"I'm not optimistic at the moment," Morris' agent, Richard Moss, said Monday. "I had several conversations with Andy and the one thing we agreed on was that if anyone deserves to be at or near the top of salary structure, it's Jack Morris. What I take this all to mean is they just haven't decided whether to pay the money, that's all."

MacPhail was in Florida and could not be contacted Monday. The top-paid pitcher is Roger Clemens of Boston, who averages $5.38 million beginning next season. Dwight Gooden of the New York Mets is second at $5.15 million.

"I expect to talk to a number of clubs," Moss said, "and Jack is prepared to move if that's what happens."

Meanwhile, clubs began to get ready for the market's opening bell.

The top pitcher available, left-hander Frank Viola, rejected a $13 million, three-year offer from the Mets during the season. He then slumped to 13-15 with a 3.97 ERA.

"Last week I faxed the doctor's report to all the major league teams other than the Mets because I was hearing all sorts of rumors about his elbow," said Viola's agent, Craig Fenech. "That's about all I'm going to say. I'm going to try to hold to a policy that I'm not going to discuss which teams are interested and which teams have made offers, or else I'll get the North American record for interviews in one year."

Other top stars available include outfielder Danny Tartabull, first baseman Wally Joyner and reliever Mitch Williams.

PGA's Grand Slam tees off

LIHUE, Hawaii (AP) — Ian Woosnam doesn't think the winner of the PGA Grand Slam of Golf should be named golfer of the year because of that one victory.

Woosnam, winner of this year's Masters, says beating the champions of the other three major tournaments will be nice, but won't make the winner the world champion of the year, as fellow competitor Ian Baker-Finch has said.

"It's a two-day event. How can you say that about a two-day event?" asked Woosnam. "The best player is the best player over 12 months, not two days."

Still, a win by Woosnam would give him three titles this year and certainly put him among the top contenders for golfer of the year honors.

To do so, he'll have to beat British Open champ Baker-Finch, U.S. Open titlist Payne Stewart and PGA champ John Daly, who qualified for the Grand Slam with his one and only tour win.

All four golfers agree that the winner of the $1 million stroke-play format that began today will be the one that competes against the course and not the other competitors.

Woosnam says he'll set a target score for what he thinks it will take to win. "If that's not good enough, and someone plays better, then you're going to lose."

Baker-Finch says each player's strengths and weaknesses will determine how each plays the par-72 Kiele Course at Kauai Lagoons Resort.

"It's obviously going to be a different golf course for me than for John (Daly)," said Baker-Finch. "The par-5s here are probably just out of my reach, but John will be hitting 3- and 4-irons into them."

Slingin' Sammy's passing mark stands

By CHARLES RICHARDS
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Slingin' Sammy Baugh watched TV highlights of Mark Rypien's six-touchdown, 442-yard performance in the Washington Redskins' 56-17 rout of Atlanta and tried to remember a game 43 years ago in which he set an NFL record. Rypien completed 16 of 31 passes, an average of 27.6 yards per completion against the league's fifth-ranked defense. However, his 14.3 yards per attempt fell way short of the NFL record set by Baugh Oct. 31, 1948. On that day, Baugh completed 17 of 24 passes against Boston for 446 yards, an average of 18.58 yards per attempt. "I don't even remember that game, I really don't," the 77-year-old Baugh said Monday by telephone from his ranch home outside

Rotan, Texas, 210 miles west of Dallas. Baugh remembers other records, such as on Nov. 14, 1943, when he threw four touchdown passes in a 42-20 Washington victory over the Detroit Lions and also intercepted four Detroit passes. His interception record still stands, though tied by 15 others. Baugh led the NFL that 1943 season in passing, punting and interceptions. He led the league in passing six times and in punting four times, both records. His 51.4-yard punting average in 1940 still stands as a record, as does his 45.1-yard career average from 1937-52. In a Nov. 5, 1939, game against the Philadelphia Eagles — "It was a game we played in the mud, I remember that" — Baugh punted 14 times, which stood as a record until four years ago. No one else is likely to make the record book in such diverse categories. "Back then, we had to play both ways. We had to do a lot of things, and you couldn't substitute in and out. You didn't have someone who just punted or kicked field goals," Baugh said. A Fort Worth sportswriter slapped the "Slingin' Sammy" label on Baugh while he was passing Texas Christian to 29 victories from 1934-36, winning all-American honors twice. He was generally considered the first great passer in college football when the Redskins signed him in 1937. Baugh led the team to the NFL title his first season. "Today, it's a fast game, a good game. It's a wonderful time to be playing, as far as the quarterback is concerned. In our day, the rules made it a defensive game really. There wasn't one rule that encouraged the passing game. "I played in the NFL 16 years, and no coach ever told me to throw the ball away, to avoid a sack. You just couldn't do it. If you threw the ball out of bounds, or even halfway between two receivers even, you got a flag for intentional grounding. "The quarterback had to be five yards behind the line of scrimmage when he threw the ball," Baugh said. In 1937, Baugh's first year in the league, the quarterback was fair game until the whistle blew. "After you released the ball, they could chase you 20 yards downfield and hit you. Coaches told their defensive players, 'When the quarterback throws the ball, you put him on the ground. You don't stop. You put him on the ground.'" He learned quickly not to stand around after a pass, waiting to see if it was caught. "You did that, you could get killed," he said. A new rule was enacted in 1938, making roughing the passer a 15-yard penalty. In the 1945 NFL championship game between Washington and Cleveland, Baugh remembers, the Redskins were ahead in the game, but were backed up to their own 3. "I dropped back into the end zone, and I threw a pass that hit the goalpost. They had a rule I didn't even know about, that if the ball hit the crossbar, it was a safety. And that was what beat us. We lost the game 15-14." The NFL changed that rule the next year, so that any forward pass hitting the goalpost was automatically incomplete. The NFL adopted free substitution in 1943, withdrew it in 1946, and finally restored unlimited free substitution in 1950, opening the way for two platoons and specialization in pro football. "If you're just a punter, all you do is punt, I don't think you should ever shank the ball. You ought to perfect it. You ought to be able to close your eyes and kick it," Baugh said.

Sacramento is not king of the road

By The Associated Press

The Sacramento Kings have nearly a year's worth of road losses. Each NBA team plays 41 road games every season, and the Kings, who lost their final 37 away from ARCO Arena in 1990-91, lost their 40th consecutive game on the road Monday night, falling 106-90 at Utah.

The Kings' NBA record streak, which started last Nov. 21, was virtually assured when the Jazz led 60-44 at halftime. Sacramento, playing without starters Wayman Tisdale and Spud Webb because of injuries, didn't threaten in the second half.

"Even though they were short-handed, we couldn't worry about it," said Karl Malone, who scored 29 points on 12-for-18 shooting and grabbed 10 rebounds. "They had lost 39 in a row and we didn't want to make history as the team they beat."

Jeff Malone scored 21 points, John Stockton had 15 points and 13 assists and Mark Eaton blocked eight shots for the Jazz. Lionel Simmons scored 33 points and Mitch Richmond 17 for the Kings, who shot just 40.9 percent from the field for the game.

Utah led 32-20 following the first quarter after taking a 14-2 lead behind Jeff Malone's seven points, including two foul shots after a pair of technicals were called on Kings coach Dick Motta, causing his ejection.

"You try to get a lead early and bury a team that's had trouble on the road," Jeff Malone said. "That's what our defense did for us."

Elsewhere in the NBA, Philadelphia edged Milwaukee 102-99 and the Los Angeles Clippers beat Indiana 106-97.

NBA Roundup

Utah's largest lead, 92-65, came with 10:35 left in the game. Utah's 16-point halftime advantage came despite Simmons' 25 points for the Kings.

Karl Malone scored 17 points in the first half as the Jazz outshot the Kings 58 percent to 42 percent. Eaton blocked five shots in the first two periods.

"Mark had a ton of blocked shots, and that kept them from getting a lot of easy shots," Sloan said. "That was a big factor for us. Mark was alive and got some things done for us."

It didn't take long for Motta to become upset over the officiating.

"In the first few minutes, we had two offensive fouls, two no-calls and two touch fouls," Motta said of his short night on the sidelines. "Then we played right into Eaton's hands with five blocks in the first half."

76ers 102, Bucks 99. At Philadelphia, the 76ers beat Milwaukee for their fourth straight victory after opening the season with two losses.

Hersey Hawkins scored 21 points — the first time all season Charles Barkley didn't lead the team in scoring — and Barkley had 17 points and 15 rebounds for the 76ers, who led by 23 points in the second period before the Bucks rallied.

Milwaukee closed to 81-80 on a three-point play by Jeff Grayer with 7:05 remaining. After the 76ers rebuilt their advantage to 89-83, the Bucks rallied again, and a 3-pointer by Jay Humphries made it 94-93 with 1:18 left.

Baskets by Johnny Dawkins and Manute Bol gave Philadelphia a five-point lead with 17 seconds to play before another 3-pointer by Humphries made it 98-96 with 11 seconds left. Two free throws each by Armon Gilliam and Dawkins completed the scoring.

Milwaukee, which got 20 points from Moses Malone and 18 by Dale Ellis, trailed 63-43 one minute into the second half. But Alvin Robertson scored six points during a 12-2 spurt, closing the Bucks within 10 with 5:49 remaining in the third period.

Clippers 106, Pacers 97. Ron Harper scored 26 points and Danny Manning had 22 points and 12 rebounds as Los Angeles improved its record at home to 4-0 by defeating Indiana.

Rik Smits led Indiana with 27 points, overcoming a 3-for-13 first half by shooting 10-for-11 the rest of the way, including 14 points in the third quarter.

Reggie Miller's three-point play with 1:54 left put Indiana ahead for the last time, 95-94. The Clippers scored 12 of the game's final 14 points, starting when Ken Norman converted an offensive rebound by James Edwards for a 96-95 lead with 1:36 remaining.

The Pacers finished a five-game Western trip with their fourth straight defeat, matching their longest losing streak of last season when they dropped their last four games of November.

Book has Jordan, Bulls seeing red

CHICAGO (AP) — A soon-to-be-published book contends Michael Jordan told the Chicago Bulls not to pass the ball to a teammate in the closing minutes of games and once punched a teammate in the head during practice, a published report said. "The Jordan Rules," by Chicago Tribune sportswriter Sam Smith, will soon be published by Simon & Schuster. The Chicago Sun-Times said in a column in Monday's editions that it had obtained an advance copy. The book reportedly details the infighting the Bulls overcame to win the NBA title and is advertised as "an inside story of a turbulent season."

dan warned teammates against passing the ball to center Bill Cartwright in the final four minutes of a game. "If you do, you'll never get the ball from me," Jordan reportedly said. The book also reports that Jordan slugged backup center Will Perdue during practice. Jordan has seen galley proofs of the book. The Sun-Times reported that his only comment was, "A lot of things appeared that were said in confidence." On Monday, Jordan told a local television station that the book's accounts are wrong. "If I'm going to get knocked off this pedestal, I'm going to make sure I do something to be knocked off," he said. "I'm not going to let someone else knock me off for no apparent reason or comments that I didn't say." Attempts by The Associated Press for further comment from Jordan were unsuccessful. A phone message left at Jordan's agent's office was not returned. Forward Horace Grant, who occasionally is critical of Jordan, denied the incidents described by the Sun-Times' report of the book. "It's untrue, all of that stuff is nonsense," Grant said. Tribune spokesman Jeff Bierig said the newspaper had not received a copy of the book. The Tribune would not provide a home telephone number for Smith but agreed to call him; he did not call The Associated Press on Monday.

Seminoles could be Cotton Bowl bound

DALLAS (AP) — Florida State could be Cotton Bowl bound if it loses to Miami on Saturday, a source close to the Dallas New Year's Day game says. The Seminoles popped up in the Cotton Bowl picture on Monday because Notre Dame has decided to go to the Sugar Bowl on Jan. 1, the source said Monday. Should Florida State defeat Miami, then the Cotton Bowl could turn to Alabama of the Southeast Conference. Alabama has one loss. Miami, reportedly bound for the Blockbuster Bowl, was in the Cotton Bowl last year but left a bad impression with its deportment. Top-ranked Florida State (10-0) called the Cotton Bowl Monday morning to set up a fall-back position should it lose to No. 2 Miami (8-0) Saturday.

Jim Brock, executive vice-president of the Cotton Bowl, wouldn't comment only to say that lack of sanctions on the colleges and universities has caused deadline jumping again this year. "The institutions have no sanctions and are calling the bowls for commitments and the bowl guys are jumping the gun just like they did last year," Brock said. A source said the Sugar Bowl was willing to take a chance on Notre Dame with three losses because of its television draw and the fact the Fighting Irish hadn't been to New Orleans in 11 years. The Sugar Bowl's television ratings suffered last year with Virginia as the guest team for the SEC champion. Penn State (8-2) and Notre Dame (8-2) play on Saturday. Notre Dame had been the Cotton Bowl's prime target as guest team to be paired against the Southwest Conference champion, which is traditionally the host team. Bowl bids officially can't be extended until 2 p.m. next Sunday under the threat of a $250,000 fine. Penn State had been another long-shot Cotton Bowl choice but reportedly is on its way to the Fiesta Bowl. Texas A&M can win the SWC with victories in two of its last three games. The Aggies and Notre Dame met in the 1988 Cotton Bowl with A&M winning 35-10 and Cotton Bowl officials had hoped for a rematch. The Aggies (7-1) play host to Arkansas Saturday night in College Station. The Cotton Bowl apparently will be the only "major" bowl game for the SWC. Baylor (7-2, including a victory over Colorado) is still considered a top "minor" bowl prospect with the Peach Bowl looking on. Baylor coach Grant Teaff, preparing his team for Saturday's game with Texas Tech, said, "We are definitely still in the running for a bowl game. I think if we win Saturday the Bears will go bowling. The Peach Bowl people have been in touch so I think there is a chance we will go there. "There has been a lot of speculation in the media about who will go to which bowl. But that is all it has been speculation. I talked with a bowl representative on Sunday and I flat out told him that I had read where his bowl was no longer interested in us. He told me that was ridiculous." The Copper and Independence Bowls also are interested in Baylor.

Tech to battle Baylor

LUBBOCK (AP) — Texas Tech coach Spike Dykes isn't quite sure if the Red Raiders' lack of recent success against Baylor is due to bad play calling, bad execution or simply bad karma. What Dykes does know is that the results have been horrendous. Tech has dropped 10 of the last 12 games to the Bears. The Red Raiders (4-5, 3-3 in the Southwest Conference) take on 20th-ranked Baylor (7-2, 4-2) Saturday in Waco, where Tech has lost five of the last six games. "Murphy's Law is usually very evident in Waco," Dykes said. "Or maybe it's just the guys in the green jerseys outplaying the guys in the white jerseys. Maybe we can break a jinx." Tech is coming off victories in three of its last four games, including a 38-21 rout of Arkansas last Saturday which all but knocked the Razorbacks out of the SWC title race. Tech's hopes for a trip to the Cotton Bowl were dashed with four early-season losses.

Now the Red Raiders are on a mission to ruin everyone else's chances. "I like our role as spoilers," Dykes said. "I hope we can spoil a few more." Tech has improved gradually over the past five weeks in victories over Southern Methodist (38-14) and Rice (40-20) and in a narrow loss to Texas (23-15) two weeks ago. But Dykes said his team will have to play its best against Baylor, which ranks near the top of the SWC in most every offensive and defensive category. "Baylor's got a lot of confidence," Dykes said. "They are playing for bowl games and rankings and all of that. They have got all the trumps, you might say. It's going to take our best shot to win." Dykes praised Baylor's offense, which is second in the SWC, averaging 416 yards per game. The Bears attack is led by sophomore quarterback J.J. Joe, a slippery scambler who is also the conference's top-ranked passer. "Joe is a wheeler-dealer," Dykes said. "He runs well and throws well. He makes them very hard to stop."

PUBLIC NOTICE

PROCLAMATION
By Executive Order of the Honorable Gene Gee, Mayor of Lefors, it is proclaimed:
WHEREAS, November, 1991 marks the twenty-third anniversary of the passage of the Civil Rights Act of 1968, which included Title VIII, the Fair Housing Law, for guaranteed equal housing opportunity for all citizens; and
WHEREAS, Fair Housing is consistent with the principle of equality and justice for all, providing the challenge to combat discrimination, and to broaden the protection of the beliefs upon which our nation was founded; and
WHEREAS, This month provides an opportunity for all Americans to rededicate themselves to the principles of free choice and to reacquire themselves with the rights and responsibilities that are theirs under the Fair Housing Law. NOW, THEREFORE, I, Gene Gee, Mayor of Lefors, do hereby proclaim November, 1991 as FAIR HOUSING MONTH in Lefors, Texas, and urge my fellow citizens to join me in reaffirming the obligation and commitment to fair housing opportunities for all people.
Let all within the reach of this proclamation heed its directive.
By his honor the Mayor of Lefors, Texas
Gene Gee

No-nonsense prosecutor, folksy lawyer contrast in Smith trial jury selection

By DAN SEWELL
Associated Press Writer

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Prospective jurors for William Kennedy Smith's rape trial are greeted by contrast — a no-nonsense, no-frills prosecutor and a just-plain-folks defense attorney.

Legal experts following the case say jurors' reactions to the differing styles will likely play an important role in determining the fate of Smith, 31. The nephew of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy is accused of raping a 30-year-old Florida woman he had invited to his family's Palm Beach estate last March.

During the early days of jury selection — which isn't expected to conclude until Thanksgiving — prosecutor Moira Lasch has stuck to an unsmiling, staccato approach as she has questioned potential jurors.

At one point, 78-year-old Florence Orbach, whose bawdy commentary on the Kennedy family led to her dismissal from the jury pool, told Ms. Lasch: "Smile, you're pretty." The prosecutor didn't.

Instead, she has stuck to introducing herself and explaining who she and assistant prosecutor Ellen Roberts are before moving hurriedly through no more than a dozen questions that can be answered yes or no.

A "thank you" to the prospective juror, a notice of "no further questions" to Circuit Judge Mary Lupo, and Ms. Lasch is back to her table.

Defense attorney Roy Black comes across more like Andy Griffith as the down-home lawyer on television's "Matlock." He seems almost ready to invite the prospective juror out for a soda after this whole thing is over.

He has "Will Smith" stand up, then confides that "almost everyone who comes out here is a little bit nervous, and you're probably the same way."

"And I will tell you," Black confesses — to each and every potential juror — "that I don't always appear that way, but I'm a little nervous myself at times."

Two attorneys who have firsthand experience say Black and Ms. Lasch are following the approaches that have brought them success.

"It all sounds familiar," said Don Horn, who is now in private practice but who went up against Black when he prosecuted the 1989 manslaughter trial of Miami police officer William Lozano.

The officer was convicted in the shooting of a black motorcyclist that touched off race riots, but his conviction was thrown out last June when an appellate court ruled the outcome was influenced by jurors' fear that an acquittal would spark new riots.

"Smiling, very gracious, very apologetic for having to put them through this," was how Horn recalled Black's approach to the jury.

"You're not going to get a down-home image out of Moira," said attorney Craig Boudreau. "She's not going to act like she's your best buddy."

Boudreau represented Rufus Mitchell, convicted of rape in one of Ms. Lasch's last prosecutions before she was assigned to the Smith trial. In winning that case, she located a key witness who had been overlooked by other investigators.

Thorough preparation and relentless prosecutions have marked the career of Ms. Lasch, 40, who was named Florida's prosecutor of the year in 1987.

Black, 46, is lauded by fellow attorneys for his keen memory, quick thinking and relaxed demeanor.

Opinions differ over who is taking the more effective approach to this trial.

"Roy's No. 1," said Amy Singer, a Miami trial consultant who has worked with Black. She said Ms. Lasch "is shooting herself in the foot."

But Boudreau said Black runs the risk of looking insincere.

In any case, he said, both attorneys appear to be playing to their strengths.

"There's an old adage from law school that whatever your personality is, that should be your style."

Heart deaths highest for those who have no love nor money

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — People with few social or economic resources had triple the heart disease death rate of those with money — or someone to confide in, a study shows.

"If you are a patient with heart disease, and you have neither love nor money, your prognosis is worse," said Dr. Redford B. Williams of Duke University.

In a separate study, researchers reported what they said were disturbing findings that women were treated much less aggressively for heart disease than men. Both studies were scheduled for presentation today at the annual meeting of the American Heart Association.

Williams said that people who were not married and had no one to talk to had three times the heart disease death rate of people who were not socially isolated.

Fifty percent of the socially isolated patients died within five years, Williams said. "In contrast, among those who were married or did have someone to talk to, only 17 percent had died by five years," he said.

Poorer people likewise had nearly three times the death rate of their wealthier counterparts.

After five years, 24 percent of those with incomes less than $10,000 per year had died. Among those with annual incomes of $40,000 or more, only 9 percent had died, Williams said.

A number of studies have suggested that low social and economic status is associated with a poorer heart disease outlook. The new study refines the earlier work by showing that social isolation and low income are independently correlated with poor prognosis, Williams said. The importance of the finding is that it suggests relatively simple ways to lower the heart disease death rate, he said.

"The social isolation could be a target for intervention by simply having a nurse visit once a month," Williams said.

The costs of such social support are far less than bypass surgery and other medical procedures used to lower heart disease mortality, he said.

Further research is needed to evaluate the effectiveness of various social support treatments in much the same way that studies are done to evaluate the effects of lowering cholesterol or blood pressure, Williams said.

The other study, by Dr. Charles Maynard and colleagues at the University of Washington in Seattle, reported that clot-dissolving drugs used to treat heart attacks were given to 26 percent of men studied but only 14 percent of women.

Women were also less likely to receive treatment with inflatable balloons used to open clogged arteries, Maynard said.

The findings "call into question whether women are being appropriately treated for heart attacks," he said.

"We don't know why women receive treatment less often than men," he said. "We need to address why this is occurring."

Williams, meanwhile, said he is extending his findings on low income and social isolation with new research to discover precisely how these adverse factors raise the mortality rate.

Twist and Shout.

It's a familiar tune to those who suffer from neck pain: the relentless, burning, numbing sensation so painful you want to cry out with every movement.

The flip side is you don't have to suffer. By carefully examining your spine, a doctor of chiropractic can identify the source of your neck pain. With treatment, the trouble can usually be eliminated.

Our patient list includes many people with pain like yours — people who have found relief through the natural, chiropractic approach to health care. Give us a call, and we'll make an appointment for your initial exam. You've got nothing to lose but a pain in the neck.
