Atlantis blasts into night with spy satellite

By MARCIA DUNN
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Atlantis pierced the night sky and roared into orbit Sunday with six astronauts and a military satellite that will scout for missile launches from a perch thousands of miles high.

The 100-ton spaceship rumbled off its seaside pad at 6:44 p.m. EST. The shuttle lit up the sky for hundreds of miles as it headed eastward over the Atlantic Ocean and was swallowed up by the night.

It was a spectacular, and rare, after-hours show. The last shuttle departure in darkness was a year ago.

"You all certainly earned your Thanksgiving," launch director Bob Sieck told workers at launch control.

An oxygen fuel leak on the launch platform forced a 13-minute delay. Three workers tightened a leaky valve, but the job put crews behind in their work to replenish the fuel supply. NASA also had to wait for an orbiting spacecraft to pass out of the way of the shuttle.

The astronauts were eager to get going. "Atlantis is ready. We're ready to burn paint," said Air Force Col. Frederick Gregory, the shuttle commander. He was referring to the freshly painted launch pad tower.

Earlier in the day, the launch team had feared that strong wind and low clouds might thwart its second attempt to send up Atlantis. But the weather proved perfect for liftoff, with only a thin patch of clouds visible.

The spacecraft's long journey 224 miles above Earth is NASA's sixth and final shuttle flight of the year. It was only the seventh time in 44 launches that a shuttle has blasted off in darkness.

Atlantis' twin solid rocket boosters dropped empty into the ocean two minutes into the flight. The shuttle reached orbit 6 1/2 minutes later on the thrust of three main engines.

Gregory said he noticed an unusual flickering on the nose during ascent. "It was a very interesting light show coming up," he said.

NASA's first countdown for the 10-day military mission ended abruptly Tuesday, just before fueling, when the steering system of the satellite booster malfunctioned.

All that was put behind Sunday with final testing of the newly installed guidance unit. The system passed a critical three-hour calibration and was cleared for flight.

Engineers still had not identified the problem in the navigational unit that was removed last week from the satellite's attached rocket. But program managers were confident the trouble was isolated to that component.

"We were extremely lucky," said Air Force Lt. Col. Ernie Jaskolski, chief engineer for the satellite booster. "We were able to demonstrate that if we did encounter this problem during flight that we would still make our mission goal."

Gregory and his crew planned to release the $300 million Defense Support Program satellite six hours into the flight.

The 5,200-pound satellite quickly was to be propelled 22,300 miles above the equator. There, it would join other Defense Support Program craft in alerting the Pentagon to missile and rocket launchings as well as nuclear detonations.

A large infrared telescope on the satellite has 6,000 sensors to detect heat from missile plumes.

Pentagon officials used the Defense Support Program network to warn of Iraqi Scud missile attacks during the Persian Gulf War. They did not publicly acknowledge this until last week and even then would not discuss how successful the satellites were or how many more craft were planned.

Secrecy has surrounded the program since an unmanned rocket carried up the first DSP satellite in the early 1970s. The newest satellite would have been classified, too, if it had not been assigned to a shuttle.

The Pentagon has opted for openness in its use of NASA's shuttles to save tens of millions of dollars in security costs. Everything was classified for the first seven military shuttle flights; even the liftoff time was not divulged until nine minutes before.

A Star Wars research mission by Discovery last spring broke the classification barrier. The Atlantis flight is the second unclassified military shuttle mission.

While in orbit, the astronauts are to conduct medical and radiation-monitoring experiments and use a telescope, cameras and binoculars to observe U.S. military installations.

A Defense Support Program satellite is ready for launch from the cargo bay of the space shuttle Atlantis Sunday night in this television picture. The $300 million satellite was released early today and an attached rocket lifted it to an orbit 23,000 miles above the equator.

The Pentagon wants to see how much detail the men can observe in case astronauts are ever needed to help out during national crises.

Army imagery analyst Thomas

Hennen was chosen for the mission because of his expertise. The five others are full-time astronauts.

Only Gregory and Story Musgrave have flown in space before.

The rookies are Hennen, pilot Air Force Col. Terence "Tom" Hennessey, Navy Lt. Cmdr. Mario Runco Jr. and Army Lt. Col. James Voss.

Medley juggles spare time with officiating three different sports

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Writer

Nelson Medley's spare time is so dominated by sports that he's hardly ever at a loss for anything to do.

If there's a high school football, baseball or basketball game going on someplace, chances are Medley will be there, but not usually as a spectator. He'll be right in the middle of the action, either blowing a whistle or calling balls and strikes.

Medley, who graduated from Mobeetie High School in 1972, is a referee of not just one sport or two, but three. And he says it's not that unusual to be a three-sport official.

"There's several in Pampa and around the area that call three sports. Danny Cagle is one and Lynn Thornton does four sports, football, baseball, basketball and volleyball," Medley said.

One of the reasons the same person calls several different sports is because there's not enough officials to go around, according to Medley.

"We're always looking for new officials. If anybody shows the least bit of interest, we put a shirt on them and get them started. There's just never enough people to call games. It's a dying art," Medley said.

Medley, however, doesn't just officiate because there's no one else to take his whistle.

"It's a hobby with me," Medley said. "It's something you have to enjoy doing because you're never going to get rich at it. A lot of guys will put their money away for Christmas or vacation."

A basketball official calling two varsity games in a night makes a minimum of $35. A football official's paycheck is based on the number of tickets sold and the minimum salary is $25 per game.

Medley, whose fulltime employment is at the Energas Company in Pampa, says basketball is the toughest sport for him to officiate.

Nelson Medley stays busy officiating three sports: football, basketball and baseball.

"In basketball you have to make a split-second decision and live with it. In football and baseball, you can make a call and then talk about it," Medley said.

"Basketball is hard to officiate because the players are faster than they used to be and the rule changes are also getting tougher every year. They want to cut down on the body contact."

Medley started his officiating career by calling junior high basketball games as a high school sophomore.

"Our basketball coach had all the varsity players calling games. It was a good experience," Medley said.

Later on he started officiating football games and umpiring baseball games at the Pampa Optimist Club, where he's been a longtime member.

"My favorite sport is baseball. I love the game," Medley said. "However, I call more basketball than anything else because there's just so many games going on."

It takes dedication and perseverance to be a good official, Medley points out.

"If you don't like crowds and can't stand noise, you have no business being out there. Only 50 percent of the people are going to be happy with the calls you make," Medley noted. "We have a lot of people quit because the coaches and the fans yell at them."

Medley must take an annual test to maintain his eligibility as an official in addition to attending several schools and clinics throughout the year. Persons interested in becoming an official can contact Medley or Cagle, who currently serves as president of the North Plains Football Chapter.

Medley's family moved from Pampa to Mobeetie when he was a high school sophomore. He was an all-district guard in basketball as a senior and later played baseball at Ranger Junior College.

Medley is married and his two children, Donnie and Jennifer, are both involved in sports. Donnie, a high school senior, plays Harvester baseball and also runs on the varsity cross-country team. Jennifer, an eighth-grader, is on the school basketball team.

Wife Judy is very supportive of her husband and his "hobby," which takes him all over the area, in all kinds of weather, throughout the school year.

"Judy never complains, but she worries sometimes when I'm out in bad weather. She'll stay up until I get home. Sometimes she'll even ask how the game went," Medley said.

School turns tables by adopting nursing home

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Over the last several years, businesses around the nation have taken to adopting public schools, offering perks for good grades and displaying the children's work in their stores or offices.

This week Woodrow Wilson Elementary is turning the tables and doing some adopting of their own.

Principal Ray Thornton said the school's leadership team has voted that Wilson students will adopt the residents of Pampa Nursing Center.

"For some time there has been a national move for businesses, and industry to adopt public schools and we've had some of that in Pampa," Thornton said. "We felt like we could do this without a great deal more effort by our students. When we have an art project, rather than hang all of it in to give than to receive."

He said benefits will include students brightening the days of nursing homes residents with periodic visits, as well as brightening their halls with art work.

On the other hand, the senior citizens will help students have a heightened sense of compassion and assist them in developing an attitude of doing for others.

"We want to build a respect for the elderly and a rapport between children and people of grandparent-type age," Thornton said. "We felt like we could do this without a great deal more effort by our students. When we have an art project, rather than hang all of it in the halls of our school, we could share it with residents of the nursing homes."

Also in the planning stages are visits to the nursing homes by some students and inviting mobile nursing home residents to come to school assemblies.

"A kindergarten teacher has said she has already planned some activities for Thanksgiving and would like to share those with the nursing home," Thornton said. "So we will be kicking this off this week. We are also making plans for our students to go to a local bank and sing Christmas carols in a few weeks and when they are out on that field trip, they will go on to the nursing home and provide music for those residents."

Thornton said classes and individual students will also have the opportunity to "adopt" residents of the center by sending them cards, letters and birthday and Christmas greetings.

Ina Gail Rowell, activities director at Pampa Nursing Center, said, "I was real pleased and honored they would do this. We have to have inter-generational activities. The residents become a lot more involved and alert when kids are around, so I think it's great."

She said this is the first time Pampa Nursing Center has been adopted by a school.

"I'm a member of Altrusa and we adopted Wilson to do special tutoring for some of their students," Rowell said. "When Mr. Thornton found out I worked here, he said he was interested in the school doing this and I thought it was great."

Libya's foreign minister claims U.S., Britain are planning an 'aggression'

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Libya's foreign minister says he believes the United States and Britain are creating controversy over the bombing of Pan Am Flight 103 as a pretext for an attack.

In a letter circulated today at U.N. Headquarters, Libyan Foreign Minister Ibrahim Bishari accused Washington and London of indicting two Libyans in the 1988 bombing as part of a plot against Libya.

"We warn that such statements stem from a premeditated intention to accuse (Libya) and undertake aggression against it. They unquestionably represent a great threat to peace and security, not only in the region but throughout the world," Bishari said of the accusations.

The United States and Britain seek the extradition of two Libyans they charge arranged the bombing over Lockerbie, Scotland that killed 270 people on Dec. 21, 1988.

The two countries say they might impose sanctions if Libya does not hand over the suspects. Washington has not ruled out military action.

Bivins plans public briefing on redistricting

State Sen. Teel Bivins, R-Amarillo, will be in Pampa for a public briefing on state redistricting at 10 a.m. Tuesday at the Gray County Courthouse.

"Redistricting will affect the political landscape of West Texas for the next 10 years," Bivins said. "Everyone should be concerned that the new district lines are drawn fairly without detriment to this part of the state."

He pointed out that the state legislature redraws district lines for the state Senate, House, Board of Education, and Congress every 10 years based on updated census results.

United States Justice Department last week approved the state Senate and Education Board lines, as well as the congressional redistricting plans, for compliance with the Voting Rights Act, Bivins said.

However, he also pointed out that the Justice Department has rejected district lines for the state House.

Several lawsuits have been filed challenging all of the redistricting plans, Bivins explained.

He said he will attempt at the meeting to help local residents understand the complexities of the redrawn lines and their implications for Pampa.

Fitzwater says Sununu in no danger of losing job

WASHINGTON (AP) - Embattled White House Chief of Staff John Sununu is not in jeopardy of losing his job, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said today.

"I don't think it's ever been in danger," Fitzwater told reporters as the White House moved to shore up support for the combative staff chief.

Sununu has been the target of attacks recently from many Republican officials for his heavy-handed management style.

Many prominent Republicans have suggested, in fact, that Bush should make major staff changes soon to regain control of the administration's domestic agenda in view of the slumping economy and Bush's decline in public opinion polls.

There have been some reports that Bush may make such changes as soon as the upcoming Thanksgiving weekend, which he is expected to spend at Camp David.

But, Fitzwater said, "I don't anticipate any. At least there's no indication here" of any upcoming staff changes.

Sununu was at Bush's side again today as the president walked across the White House lawn to board his helicopter as he began a trip to Columbus, Ohio.

Sununu did not accompany the president on the trip but walked halfway to the helicopter with the president. The two were deep in conversation except when Bush turned to grin and wave at reporters.

U.N. truce appears to be holding in Yugoslavia

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (AP) - Croatian officials said the army stopped shelling Osijek, and European Community monitors reported general calm elsewhere today, the first full day of the Yugoslav civil war's 14th cease-fire.

Refugees continued to flee Osijek, regional capital of Croatia's ethnically mixed eastern Slavonia region. Officials in secessionist Croatia said army cannons pounded the city early today, but the shelling stopped before noon.

A defense official in Osijek said seven people were killed and 34 were wounded by shelling by the Serb-dominated Yugoslav army in the last 24 hours. The official, who spoke on the phone on condition of anonymity, estimated that only 50,000 of Osijek's original 140,000 residents remained.

In Croatia's capital, Zagreb, meanwhile, the army prepared to vacate more barracks after Croatian troops lifted their weeks-long blockade.

And in another development, a reliable source reported that six people were killed in three gunfights between police and other uniformed men in Zagreb.

There was no official confirmation of the report. But police were presumably hunting members of the nationalist Party of Rights, whose leader Dobroslav Paraga was arrested Friday on allegations of planning an armed rebellion. The party opposes any truce while the army occupies any of Croatia.

Croats claim Serbia is using the issue as a pretext to annex parts of Croatia.

At least 2,000 people have been killed in fighting since Croatia declared its independence. But the toll does not include federal troops and ethnic Serb forces, which have not given a full accounting of casualties.

Croatian President Franjo Tudjman accused the army of trying to take as much territory as possible before any U.N. peace-keepers arrive.

Despite major battlefield losses, he told Croatians in a televised address Sunday that they were not losing the war, saying: "The aggressor has not achieved his goals."

There were no reports of major fighting in Croatia by this afternoon. EC spokesman Ed Koestler said the newest cease-fire appeared to be generally respected, although rival forces were "still testing it in some places."

Belgrade television reported early today that a Croatian mortar attack on Nova Gradiska, 80 miles southeast of Zagreb, killed one Serb insurgent and wounded five others. But it also said that the cease-fire was generally holding.

In Rome on Sunday, U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar said he was "hopeful" about the latest truce plan.

The Yugoslav news agency Tanjug said 40,000 refugees from eastern Croatia have crossed into Hungary in the past three days.

Croatia declared independence June 25 along with the republic of Slovenia. After several days of fighting in Slovenia, the federal government dropped its opposition to independence for the ethnically homogeneous republic.

But Serbia opposes independence for Croatia, claiming its 600,000 Serbs would suffer persecution.

Evangelist Tilton blasts critical ABC-TV report of his ministry

FARMERS BRANCH (AP) — The wife of television evangelist Robert Tilton took the microphone, looked straight into the camera and, in his absence, launched a 15-minute counterattack of an ABC-TV expose of his ministry.

"We've been judged, tried and convicted of criminal charges. Not by a judge and a jury, but by the press of these United States," Marie Tilton said during televised services Sunday at the Word of Faith Family Church in this north Dallas suburb.

"(PrimeTime Live) told you at the beginning of the piece that they lied and were deceitful in obtaining the information that they sliced and edited to make a story," she told the television audience and a live congregation of about 500 people.

"We pose to you today the question, 'When did they quit lying to you, and when did they start telling the truth?'"

She said her husband did not appear because he was on a "scheduled crusade out of the country."

Later, an associate pastor said Tilton was on a revival crusade in Puerto Rico.

ABC's PrimeTime Live reported that Tilton's church received $80 million each year from followers through a televised direct mail campaign. Donations often came with pleas for help or other requests, which sometimes were chucked in the trash, the program reported. The ABC report spurred the Texas attorney general office and Dallas County district attorney to launch investigations.

Tilton, who lives in a multimillion dollar home in suburban Irving, has denied the allegations.

Sunday, his followers were shown a videotaped statement reportedly filmed Friday in which the evangelist said a dumpster full of discarded prayer requests shown by ABC was a ruse.

"That could never have happened. It had to be a lie. Unless they were stolen, every prayer request that comes in to me, I personally pray over," Tilton said.

"There are serious problems in our country when we let the media control what you think and what you believe. There is another side to every story," he said.

If any prayer requests were thrown out, it was because they were lost or postal workers had stolen them, Tilton said.

His wife echoed that assessment.

"Yes, there are some prayer requests that don't get to us because there are thieves in the postal system. Now, if it didn't get to us, are we guilty of criminal charges?"

"No!" the audience shouted in response.

"Has God answered your prayers?" Tilton's wife asked the congregation. They answered in unison, "Yes."

"Has Bob Tilton ever asked you to look to him?" she asked. They answered, "No."

She continued: "When you send your finances to this ministry, I hope you're always giving to God through this ministry, because if you give to Bob, you will not be helped," she said.

Outside the suburban Dallas church, members defended the televangelist and criticized the media's probing into his practices.

"The guy teaches you prosperity. If a man of God can't prosper, then how can anybody else?" said Ralph Henderson, commenting on Tilton's three luxury homes and boat.

Henderson said he and his family drove 19 hours from Evanston, Ill., 800 miles northeast of Dallas, to attend the service.

Clarence Craig, a religion major at Paul Quinn College, said he gives Word of Faith Family Church 10 percent of what he earns as a nursing home orderly — a part-time, minimum-wage job he took to help finance his education.

"I was blessed through his ministry. I was having all kinds of problems. He said a prayer for me, and I felt it right away. I know God is using this man. I feel sorry for those who are attacking him," Craig told The Dallas Morning News.

Tis the season...

As the Christmas season nears, the Salvation Army's annual Angel Tree has gone on display at Wal Mart. A second Angel Tree is to be placed at Alco today, as well, according to Salvation Army officials. To date, approximately 240 "Angels" — local children — have qualified for aid from the Salvation Army, officials say, and more are expected before the Christmas season ends. The Angels are the first names of needy children along with a list of clothing sizes. "Persons who wish to buy gifts for the Angels may take a name from the tree, buy the gifts, wrap and bind the gifts together with the name and code number on all packages and return the gifts to the location from which the Angel's name was taken.

Hospital to become smoke-free Jan. 1

Coronado Hospital employees who smoke were bombarded last week with information, encouragement and incentives to break the habit.

The activities are part of an effort to prepare employees for the Jan. 1 inauguration of the hospital as a smoke-free facility.

"To comply with standards set by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations, Coronado Hospital will join other hospitals across the nation and will officially be a smoke-free facility beginning Jan. 1," Bruce W. Reinhardt, administrator, said.

No smoking will be allowed anywhere in the building by visitors, medical staff, employees or patients, he said. Designated areas outside the buildings will be equipped with benches and ashtrays, he said.

In extreme cases, some patients will be allowed to smoke in the building if their doctor orders it. "We're trying to comply with the standards and be as compassionate as we can toward both the smokers and the non-smokers," he said.

As part of the Great American Smokeout held last Thursday, smoking employees were adopted by fellow employees. The "adopters" supplied healthy snacks, gum and words of encouragement to help the smokers make it through the day.

The hospital cafeteria joined in the fun, featuring "cold turkey" sandwiches on the menu. Also, ashtrays in the cafeteria were removed and replaced with bags of complimentary mints for the smokers.

A big red basket, filled with apples, was placed in the lobby area, next to an educational display about the hazards of tobacco use. Smokers were invited to substitute the apple for a cigarette during the day.

The campaign, designed to give smokers incentives to quit and to educate all employees on the danger of smoking, began in late October with the announcement of Stop Smoking Classes.

Coronado Hospital joined with Hoechst Celanese Pampa Plant to bring the Stop Smoking Center of Houston to Pampa for their employees.

The classes have drawn a large number of employees to the "Quit-Mobile," where they are learning techniques to break the habit. The two-phase program deals with the physiological addiction of tobacco and the psychological addiction of smoking.

According to Dr. William Wolf, director of the program, 82 percent of the smokers attending the classes feel in control of their habit after the third session. The five-day session was scheduled for the week of Nov. 18.

Recanted testimonies in capital murder case are false, officials say

HOUSTON (AP) — Although two ex-convicts have signed affidavits denying their previous testimony against a death row inmate, state officials say Justin Lee May — slated for execution early Tuesday — has admitted his involvement in a 1978 slaying.

"Contrary to what's coming out now, he's already admitted he was involved in the murder," Assistant Attorney General Bob Walt said Sunday.

May, 45, is scheduled to die by lethal injection for killing Jeanetta Murdaugh, 43, during a robbery at a Western Auto Parts store in Freeport. Mrs. Murdaugh's husband, Frank, 42, also was killed.

The Texas Resource Center, assisting attorneys who represent May, has

Jogger runs across baby

ROWLETT (AP) — A jogger has found a newborn infant girl wrapped in a plastic bag, authorities said.

Officers said Cliff Bannister, 44, of Rowlett, found the baby early Sunday after hearing a baby cry as he jogged. The baby was in an area of dense brush near a country road.

Authorities said the infant was less than 24 hours old.

He said he crawled into the brush and found a garbage bag, partially hidden by bushes.

"I tore the bottom open, hoping I'd find a cat," Bannister said. But he saw the baby's feet. The child was unclothed and still had about 2 inches of her umbilical cord attached.

The baby was taken to LakePointe Medical Center where nursing administrator Jackie Willits said the infant has improved.

issued a statement saying that Richard Miles, the state's chief witness, signed an affidavit Friday declaring that May was not present when Mrs. Murdaugh was killed.

Attorneys said they are seeking a stay of execution from state and federal courts and from Gov. Ann Richards based on Miles' affidavit and another signed about a week ago by Oren Howard, another former prison inmate who testified against May.

Howard said he lied when he testified regarding a prison conversation about the killings he said he overheard between May and Miles, the resource center said.

Walt called the new statements "bull" and "baloney."

In a March 29, 1985 intake interview with Texas prison officials, May said he was present when the shootings occurred but denied shooting the victims, Walt said.

"The real problem (with the affidavits) is that Mr. May admitted he was there," Walt said.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans on Saturday denied a request for a stay of execution for May.

Texas leads country in parolees, probationers

HOUSTON (AP) — The number of convicted criminals on parole or probation hit a record high in 1990 and Texas led the nation in both categories, according to a U.S. Justice Department study.

At the end of 1990, 2.6 million adults were on probation and 531,407 were on parole, the survey released Sunday by the Bureau of Justice Statistics said. The overall total of 3.2 million represented a 7.5 percent increase from the previous year, the department said.

Texas accounted for more than 109,000 parolees and more than 308,000 probationers during 1990 — more than any other state in both categories.

"Somehow I don't find anything surprising in these numbers," said Harris County District Attorney John B. Holmes Jr.

"This just confirms what everyone has been seeing. It's been our experience in Harris County," Holmes said. The number of parolees nationwide increased 16.3 percent last year, and those placed on probation went up 5.9 percent.

The growth in the number of convicted criminals paroled from prison and those placed on probation parallels the growth in the nation's prison population in the last decade, the department said.

Cross found burning in yard of Lancaster family

The Rev. Arthur Smith and his wife, Evelyn, discovered a smoldering cross on their lawn when they returned home from a church revival Friday night.

"I was shocked," said Smith, pastor of the Ebenezer Baptist Church in Pleasant Grove. "I just didn't know what to think."

"It made me reflect back to the '60s when all this was going on in the South."

Firefighters — summoned by Smith's next-door neighbors — had just extinguished the fire when they returned home at about 9:45 p.m. Investigators told him they were searching for two men who fled the residence.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

Magic's moment won't hide issues

The first thing to be said about Magic Johnson's awful news is this. The man has awesome poise, the sort of inspiring characteristic that automatically nominates him for Positive Thinking Poster Boy of the year. No self-pity here, not a dribble of it.

In an era that accentuates victimhood, even victimology, we cannot have enough of Magic's unerring self-responsibility.

It is a pity, a paradoxical pity, that we should feel such a lift from Earvin Johnson's demise both as a star basketball player and as a healthy human being. If there is anything consoling about his situation it is that he gave us his refreshing honesty and positive attitude selflessly, much as he gave his teammates so many chances to score (indeed, a record number of assists) when he might well have dunked the ball himself.

Enough obit-like past tense. Magic Johnson commences a new life as a self-appointed spokesman for AIDS research and as, potentially, the owner of a professional basketball team himself. He might well even serve, it has been suggested, as coach of the U.S. Olympic basketball squad. Magic's wonderful attitude virtually assures an exemplary life ahead.

The next thing to be remarked has to do with the culturally peculiar manner in which the news has been received. People frozen in front of TV screens as if it were Pearl Harbor II. The mayor of Los Angeles telling the world that Magic's HIV virus was the most devastating news since JFK's assassination. The orgy of bathos, much of it media-generated. The manifold leaps to illogical public-policy conclusions.

Why, we are even unable to tell our kids about Magic's ill-fortune, if you pay attention to our media brethren, unless we have guidance from university-trained psychologists. Just once we should like to hear one of those credentialed counselors telling us, "Get a grip! You don't need me."

To be sure, there is something perversely salutary in all this attention given, not to a political figure, but to an inspiring sports star. Too many Americans are overaddicted to the spectacles offered in our major cities' sports stadia, but that kind of habit is vastly less dangerous than the kind associated with politics, which is based on social coercion. That so many people love Magic Johnson, and do so voluntarily, proves the man's authenticity.

Still, in the emotionalism of the moment, many of us haven't quite got our approach to AIDS right. Magic Johnson's plight does not mean more tax dollars need be spent. Nor does it follow that what passes for "safe sex" — i.e., unusual sex practices "protected" by a thin layer of latex — will be safe; nor that more people should be encouraged to abandon the ancient taboos if sufficiently condomized. Nor does anyone in the media seem to be overly bothered by the number of women he's claimed to have sex with, as though that were a privilege accorded his "superstar" status — what kind of message is that sending to our youngsters?

Manfully, Magic Johnson announced that he would take the message of personal responsibility to his young fans. That message is direct and compelling enough. His tragedy will be infinitely worsened if he buys into the trendy, politicized ideology of the AIDS lobby.

Mario may give Bush a fight

CHARLESTON, S.C. — Mario Cuomo, governor of New York, came to town on Saturday the 16th. Before an exceptionally well-heeled audience, he gave a luncheon speech that was Old No. 1. As an example of the forensic art it was spectacular. I've heard the governor many times before. He was at his best.

A brassy lady with orange hair caught up with me outside the ballroom door. She was the wife of one of the Fortune 500 executives who were having a conference here. "Whaddid ya think?" she asked. I said it was a remarkable performance.

"Piffawmance!" She was not impressed. "Shuah, some piffawmance. But tell me — whaddid he say?"

As a matter of fact, the governor said a great deal, and great deal of what he said made great good sense. But the lady with the Sunkist hair was right. A pundit has no business covering Cuomo. This is a job for the drama critic. The gentleman is the best freestyle, ad lib, catch-as-catch-can orator in public life today.

No one in either party is even close. Jesse Jackson is good. Republican Rep. Henry Hyde, when he gets all wound up, is top chop. If he could just get his voice down an octave, New York's Sen. Patrick Moynihan would be in the first rank. A couple of other senators — Hollings of North Carolina, Bumpers of Arkansas — are stem-winders of the old school. But nobody plays the harp like Mario.

Cuomo begins with a few jokes. He tells them superbly. One joke recalls the time he was introduced by an Albany mayor who had wearied of introducing him. The mayor looked up "governor" in the dictionary. Then he introduced Cuomo as "a device attached to a machine to see that it does not operate improperly."

He recalls the first time he went to the White House during the Reagan administration. Pat Moynihan brought him forward to introduce him to the president. Reagan needed no introduction. Smiling at Cuomo, Reagan said he would know Lee Iacocca anywhere. After the laughter dies, with perfect timing Cuomo confesses that he was on the verge of saying, "Well, Mr. President, to some people we all look alike."

Watching Cuomo in action is like watching an eggbeater whip up margarine. His hands never stop. He snaps his fingers, jabs at the crowd, makes a fist, prays to high heaven. This was a tough bunch. I looked around. Nobody was whispering to anybody. Cuomo spoke for almost an hour, and he held them all the way.

After the jokes he got serious. The stock market had fallen 120 points on Friday. Cuomo mocked the president and Congress for assuring the people that things are getting better. What was the market saying? "We don't believe you!" We are at a turning point, Cuomo believes. Nothing will be accomplished until the critical situation is acknowledged. Somberly he dwelled upon the human aspects of the recession. Sixteen million people are out of work! You can feel the pain! He spoke of a secretary in Albany who seemed unusually happy. "My husband has found a job!" Cuomo repeated it: "My husband has found a job!"

At times Cuomo speaks as if he were playing scales at concert speed. Facts, figures, ideas, anecdotes, small jokes — they rise and fall in fountains, in arpeggios, in glissandos of statistics. He talks about people in poverty, about school dropouts, about people who have no health insurance, about a woman who came up to him on a New York sidewalk, crying in despair. Her husband has cancer. Their savings have been wiped out. Cuomo looked all choked up.

Without getting maudlin, the governor recalls his beginnings. His immigrant father at first was a ditchdigger — a ditchdigger! Neither parent could read or write either English or Italian. But they made it. They ran a grocery store. They made it! They believed in the American dream. They believed that every generation would do better. "We can't take the American dream for granted any longer," says Cuomo. "We cannot leave things the way they are."

He plunges into his 10-point program: more capital, more investment, a lowered tax on capital gains, greater emphasis on education, a rebuilding of the infrastructure. It will be painful. Some entitlements must be cut. Wealthy families must pay higher taxes. He has said all this before. He says it well.

The governor of New York at 59 is slim and trim and getting bald. He's a presence. If he decides to run for the White House, George Bush will have a fight on his hands.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, Nov. 25, the 329th day of 1991. There are 36 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: Five years ago, on Nov. 25, 1986, the Iran-Contra affair erupted as President Reagan and Attorney General Edwin Meese revealed that profits from secret arms sales to Iran had been diverted to Nicaraguan rebels.

On this date: In 1758, in the French and Indian War, the British captured Fort Duquesne at what is now Pittsburgh.

In 1783, the British evacuated New York, their last military position in the United States during the Revolutionary War.

In 1881, Pope John XXIII was born Angelo Roncalli in a village near Bergamo, Italy.

In 1920, radio station WTAW of College Station, Texas, broadcast the first play-by-play description of a football game, between the University of Texas and Texas A&M.

In 1963, the body of President Kennedy, who was assassinated in Dallas three days earlier, was laid to rest at Arlington National Cemetery, following a requiem mass in Washington.

In 1973, Greek President George Papadopoulos was ousted in a bloodless military coup.

Noise makes too much news

Police who try to control thoroughfare traffic are aware that any accident — though the smashed cars may be removed to one side — still creates a "gaper's block."

This refers to the motorists who slow down to "gape" — to scan the wreckage. And the bloodier the accident, the slower they go.

Why? Is there a subconscious satisfaction at themselves having been spared?

Or is it just that "noise makes news," and inevitably we will turn our attention toward the source of anything disruptive?

Whatever the explanation, the reaction is almost universal. We do slow down or stop to watch either a marriage or a murder.

Gaper's block is the only explanation for the daytime TV audience that is currently tuning in those talk shows dealing with the most grotesquely aberrant human behavior.

And because this big-city focus on society's misfits is transmitted instantly elsewhere, a handful of media moguls may pollute a nation in a single generation.

Added to these TV and cable programs are now "computer sex," "telephone sex" and "sex by fax."

Expect scandal. Not too far up the road ahead some of those individuals or couples now paid to display their soiled underclothing on TV will be revealed as phonies.

I thought perhaps it was just the Harveys who have reached the stomach-turning point until I heard from Brent Bozell of Media Reserach.

He notes that network television viewership has declined 25 percent since 1980. He believes that the "explicit sexual content of shows intended to lure viewers is backfiring, is driving American families away from network television."

A George Gallup survey is revealing: "62 percent of Americans do not think TV represents their values."

And while network audiences are shrinking from the raunchy programs, cable stations that are family-friendly — The Disney Channel, The Family Channel and Nickelodeon — have increased audience share 13 percent in the past five years.

The networks are feeling some backlash from sponsors also. Nervous sponsors back off, preventing rebroadcast of a thirtysomething episode. NBC agreed to broadcast one episode of Quantum Leap only if the syndicator agreed to reimburse the network for any advertising losses.

Bozell says, "Most network programs do not now reflect what most Americans want to see. They had better tune in to America before America tunes them out."

They are still getting a few "gapers" but not enough to justify their escalating advertising rates.

Economy raises Democrats' hopes

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

After eight months during which President Bush seemed to go from strength to strength and there appeared to be no hope of preventing his re-election, the nation's Democratic professionals are beginning to perk up a bit. It's not that they really believe they can beat him — not yet, anyway. But the possibility doesn't seem quite so remote as it did a few months ago.

First and foremost, there's the recession. It isn't particularly deep as recessions go: The unemployment rate, at 6.8 percent, is actually strikingly lower than it was (7.4 percent) when the last Democratic president, Jimmy Carter, left office in January 1981 — and nobody, certainly not the Democrats, was arguing that we were in a recession then.

But in these things it's the perception that matters, and with no war on and nothing much else to complain about, the liberal media have been free for several months to dwell on the supposedly desperate state of the economy. Having finally established that the numbers technically justified the term "recession," they have speculated gleefully that this one would turn out to be one of the W-shaped, or "double-dip," variety. Lately I have even noted one or two far-fetched attempts to label this a "depression," rather than a "recession."

When this sort of thing has been dinned into the public's ears for a while, it's easy to conduct a poll in which a majority of potential voters identify the state of the economy as "America's number one problem," and George Bush is given comparatively low markers for his handling of it.

From the standpoint of Bush and his re-election strategists, of course, things look rather different. If there must be a dip in the economy's performance, this is surely the time to have it. It is scarcely conceivable that conditions won't have changed beyond recognition, probably for the better, in the year that stretches between now and Election Day.

Still, the Democrats can hardly be blamed for thinking that the situation is perceptibly better, from their partisan standpoint, than it used to be. With the Cold War over, and the memory of America's victory in the Gulf receding day by day, a well-advertised recession is just what the Democrats' doctor ordered. Who says the American people may not decide, in 1992, that it's time to give the GOP a rest?

Moreover, such reflections undoubtedly go far to explain Mario Cuomo's quickening interest in the Democratic presidential nomination. A man with the New York governor's powers of analogy and grasp of history must have been struck by the lesson implicit in Harris Wofford's defeat of Richard Thornburgh for the Pennsylvania Senate seat that was up on Nov. 5. Like Thomas Dewey running against Harry Truman in 1948, Thornburgh sat motionless atop an all but insurmountable lead (at least according to the polls) and let it melt away. May Bush not do the same?

What's more, the Wofford-Thornburgh contest apparently launched a major issue, well suited for national exploitation by the Democrats. Wofford seized on national health insurance and made its advocacy his theme: "If every criminal is entitled to a lawyer, why isn't every citizen entitled to a doctor?" It's a beguiling argument, and there is nothing the Bush forces can do about it except come forward with a sensible proposal of their own. The contest over the Republican and Democratic answers to the problem of health care may well dominate the 1992 campaign.

Nominate Mario Cuomo for the presidency, and Nebraska Sen. Robert Kerrey (a holder of the Congressional Medal of Honor who lost his right leg below the knee in Vietnam) to battle Dan Quayle, and who will dare to say that the Democrats don't have a chance?

To the editor:

You run an extremely biased paper and I'd like to set a few facts straight.

Nov. 10, 1991, your article calls me a liar. The only allegation I ever denied was the delivery of morphine. I still deny it. By pleading "true" to the allegation, at the probation hearing (as part of a plea bargain), the indictment was dismissed. After all, who could have gotten a fair trial after all the bad press I received (May 29, Sept. 11, 12 and 13). More press than any other similar case. The other allegations were never denied, and they alone were enough to reduce my probation.

It should also be stated that the $21,192 that I still owe on my probation (of which I still had about 3 years left on) started out at about $35,000, including a $30 probation "fee." Also, on both probation cases there were others involved (three on one and four on the other). I was the only one prosecuted, left not only to pay for my crimes but the crimes of others, too. Do you call that justice?

It should also be pointed out that the indictments issued by the grand jury on Sept. 11, 1991, were from "charges" dating early in May 1991. How many times did the grand jury meet during that four-month period? How many times was this "evidence" presented before a jury accepted it?

Your May 29 article claims that "drug dogs" found marijuana at my residence. FALSE! When officers "raided" my residence, they didn't have dogs with them. What the police "found" was given to them by myself and my sister long before the dogs got there. The dogs found nothing because there was nothing to find.

Your Sept. 11 article implied that I'd been "trafficking" drugs between Pampa and Borger. I haven't been to Borger in several years.

Your Sept. 12 article berates Sheriff Free for releasing us (my wife and I) on a personal recognizance bond. I have a family to support. My wife is not a drug dealer or user. She doesn't drink. She's never even had a traffic ticket. She has to care for our 2 year old daughter. (We've been married for four years.) Mr. Free is only trying to do his job. As Sheriff Free stated in the article, "Why is this getting all the attention?" Because it is a highly political situation involving myself and others as well. Give the man a chance, it will all come clear soon enough.

Your Sept. 13 article is the most lopsided of all. You yourself, Larry Hollis, asked to hear our side of the story. You said you'd had numerous complaints similar to ours, but no one would come forward due to fear of retaliation by the legal system. With all of the misquotes and lopsided "facts," it is no wonder I'm really disappointed with the objectivity of your writers. I hope in the future your writers will be more careful in their articles to be fair to both sides of any future issues they write about.

I realize this letter is longer than you normally print, but if you wish to print the facts, then you should print them all, and verify them before you print them. There are many more facts about this situation I would like to bring to light, but that would take many more pages to write them, and not say more than the point I'm trying to make.

With all respect,
Damon L. Cox
Pampa

Editor's Note: The newspaper has never called you a liar; all we did was report what has been given to us by the police, the courts and yourself. As to "facts," you did tell us you had not delivered any morphine, but then you responded "true" in District Court to the allegation you had delivered morphine. Maybe you had good reasons, as you claim, to admit differently in court than you did to us; we don't know whether you delivered morphine or not, we've just reported the statements.

Much of the excessive press you claim has been given to your case arose from the fact that you sought it, approaching us both after the May incident and after the September incident. We did not seek you out and "ask" you to give us your side. I said I was willing to listen to your side, after you said you wanted to give it, and I and another reporter did so. But the stories, despite what you want to insinuate above, have reported both sides, including your own claims and statements as given to us. If there were any "misquotes," we didn't make them.

If by "objectivity" you mean that we're supposed to automatically accept everything you tell us at face value—as though you're the only one who tells the truth—and to color our reporting according to how you interpret the facts, then I can see why you might be disappointed.

I did not say we have had "numerous" complaints of situations to yours involving the police; I said we have had several. Some have decided not to go public because of fear of retaliation, or so they tell us, and perhaps with good reason. Others have backed off after we have checked their claims and found out they were not necessarily as they tried to tell us. As reporters, we do check out both sides, if both sides are willing and wanting to give information to us, but neither you nor anyone else—including the authorities—should ever assume that we will take everything given to us as the only true, actual version of the events. In most cases, the truth lies somewhere in between, as in whether you gave the marijuana to the police before the drug dogs arrived, or whether the police used the drug dogs to find it—we weren't there, so we don't know. Similarly, the same exists with whether you were "trafficking" drugs; the police say one thing, you say another. We've just reported both claims. In any case, it's not our decision; we give the information as given to us to the public, and then the public, the courts, the juries make their determinations.

As to the situation with Sheriff Free so conveniently changing your bond to a personal recognizance bond, there is some question as to whether the sheriff was trying to do "his job" or to take upon himself the authority given by the state to the justices to set the amounts and types of bonds. Apparently some of the justices saw the situation a little differently than did Sheriff Free. They were the ones who "berated" the sheriff for his actions, not us.

Our youth need better education

To the editor:

Hi, my name is Johnny Fuller. You may remember me from the skateboarding letter I wrote you about a year ago. I still skate, but there is something that I would like to say to Pampa in this letter. I may not be taken seriously and I may be laughed at, but it's a subject that I feel needs to be addressed.

The black man has come a long way in these past 430 years. We have seen the black man rise above slavery and become a free man. We have seen him rise from the janitor at the school to the principal. We have seen him come from the walking black man to the black man who drives a car. Yes, we have seen the black man become many things that he never would have dreamed of being a long time ago.

No one would think that a black man would become mayor of a city, or president of a company, nor having his own entrepreneurial business. You see, my brothers and sisters, the black man has overcome a lot of things as Martin Luther King said we would.

But the one thing that the black man will never forget are the days of prejudice and the days of slavery. Am I right? And that is one thing that we as a human being will not be able to erase from the past—racism. And I've got news for you—racism isn't completely gone yet. And I'm not sure it ever will be. Will it come back as strongly as it was? I can't tell you that, but if the black man chooses to take shorts, then we will be down forever.

The elderly blacks can tell you what they endured and what happened, but they can't tell you how it really felt, and if they could, you could never experience it firsthand like they did.

This letter isn't so much for the elderly blacks as it is for the youth. You see, the youth are the ones that we really need to educate well, besides ourselves, because everyone will agree that the children are the future: White, Black, Japanese, Hispanic, no matter what color you are. The point is, we need to educate them and ourselves too. The interracial relationships are great. But to the white American, I have one question: What would you do if your daughter or son said they were in love with a member of another race? Would you still love them and accept their decision, or would you kick them out?

Back to the black. The youth, as I said before, are the main ones we need to educate because they are the ones that hold the keys to the future, and we have the option to make that future gloomy or bright.

The black man is a very intelligent human being. If he applies himself and tries hard at what he wants to accomplish in life, he can be whatever he wants to be. Everyone knows that if you want to be a mechanic, you don't go to beauty school, you go to a trade school, right? I'm not a prophet and I'm not involved with Far-rahkan or anything like that, but I am a member of the black community that is concerned about its well-being.

So I've said what I wanted to say, and whenever you're sitting around and saying to yourself, "What have I got to thank God for?"—think about the days of old, go read a book about what happened and pray that those days don't come back.

Who is the loser? Not Damon Cox

To the editor:

Who is the loser? Not Mr. Damon Cox. It has always been my belief that a person couldn't receive probation for the same crime. It seems I was wrong, as in Mr. Cox's case. He was already on probation for a burglary in '83. In '84, one year later, he received probation for the same offense, receiving another 10-year probation sentence.

I am also sure he will lose a lot of sleep over paying his fines and court costs as he waits to rejoin us again or he makes his way to the swinging gates at Huntsville. I think the judge did him a favor, giving him all the good time instead of cutting it and no stacking his time.

I also think the county should take action like the city does—get warrants out and collect the fines and court costs. I am sure we have plenty of county roads that need cleaning up, if they don't make other agreements.

Breast implant ban would be a tragedy

To the editor:

I am writing to make readers aware of the tragedy that is about to happen to breast cancer patients and those of us who might someday be breast cancer patients—whom today includes one woman in nine.

Spurred by a few self-styled "consumer advocates," the U.S. Food and Drug Administration is apparently planning to ban the use of breast implants in the U.S. After January 1992, breast implants may no longer be available.

Thirty years ago, I had silicone breast implants—THE FIRST IN THE WORLD. The surgery did wonders to my deflated ego. I gained confidence in myself which enabled me to seek employment and become self-reliant enough to support my six children and provide a home for them. For 30 years I have had no problems relating to my breast implants and have had no regrets.

Every year, more than 35,000 women in the U.S. seek breast reconstruction after mastectomies using breast implants. If implants are banned, these women will mostly have nowhere to turn but the old-fashion prosthesis, or the perils of surgery in a foreign country. They will be denied the safe use of this proven medical device—and the restored bodily wholeness and well-being it provides.

All the scientific studies show that the implants are safe. I would hope by going public that more women who have had no problems would read this and be encouraged to write the FDA.

Let every woman make her own decision. But don't let the FDA choose for every woman. Breast cancer patients need to have this option. I appeal to my fellow readers to stop this ban, before the FDA denies a woman the right to make her own informed decision. Write today to:

Democrats want to stay elected

To the editor:

The Democrats again demonstrated they are more interested and concerned in staying elected than in the wishes of their constituents. Bill Sarpalio arranged to have his district gerrymandered to eliminate or at least reduce any probable opposition in the 1992 general election. He state, with tongue in cheek, I am sure, that Amarillo will be better off being a part of two districts than in being in only one congressional district. Even my good friend Foster Whaley made such a statement.

I feel sure, after looking at the map of the proposed congressional districts as passed by the Democratic-controlled Legislature, one has to wonder what kind of people these are. It is no wonder that the people hold our legislative arms of the government in so low esteem.

It is hoped that someone will come along and THWART this dumb legislative action.

Thank you, Cathy

To the editor:

I agree with the lady from White Deer about Cathy Land.

I have a great respect for Mrs. Land and her ability as a nurse and as a person. She has called me several times when a family member was in the emergency room if I was not there. She has come to my rescue at home when it was needed.

Thanks again, Cathy, for being you.

Rock singer Freddie Mercury dies after announcing he has AIDS

LONDON (AP)—Rock musician Freddie Mercury, whose dramatic vocals helped make Queen one of the top pop music groups of the 1970s, died Sunday night of pneumonia brought on by AIDS, his publicist said.

Only a day earlier, the 45-year-old Mercury had ended intense media speculation about his health by issuing a statement that he was stricken with the disease.

Mercury died peacefully at his home in Kensington, west London, said his spokeswoman, Roxy Meade. "His death was the result of broncho-pneumonia brought on by AIDS," said a statement from his publicity company.

In his disclosure Saturday, Mercury said: "I felt it correct to keep this information private to date in order to protect the privacy of those around me."

"However, the time has now come for my friends and fans around the world to know the truth and I hope that everyone will join with me, my doctors and all those worldwide in the fight against this terrible disease."

Born Frederick Bulsara in Zanzibar, the son of a government accountant, Mercury rose to fame as the bravura singer for Queen, whose elaborate and occasionally bombastic songs made the group one of the favorites of the 1970s.

Their hits included "Bohemian Rhapsody," "You're My Best Friend," "We Are the Champions/We Will Rock You," "Another One Bites the Dust" and "Crazy Little Thing Called Love," the latter two hitting the top spot on the pop singles charts. Mercury later released solo albums such as "The Great Pretender," which also sold well.

In recent years, he had lived a secluded life and resisted responding to persistent rumors that he had contracted AIDS.

After speculating for weeks that Mercury might have AIDS, British tabloids gave his confirmation big play. "Freddie: I've Got AIDS," News of the World screamed in 2-inch type.

Photos published Sunday show that the disease, which attacks the body's immune system, had left him looking frail and gaunt.

After Mercury's family returned to England, he attended Ealing College of Art, then joined Brian May, John Deacon and Roger Taylor to form Queen in 1971.

Their debut album was "Queen" in 1973, followed by "Queen II" a year later with the single "Seven Seas of Rhye," which made the British charts.

The "Sheer Heart Attack" album gave them a big hit with "Killer Queen," but it was "A Night at the Opera" which gave them a No. 1 with "Bohemian Rhapsody."

Mercury's flamboyance on stage was equalled off-stage, with after-show parties went on for days.

Nuclear plant vents radioactive gas

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP)—Workers at a nuclear plant released slightly radioactive gas into the air today so they could safely enter the containment building and investigate a spill of radioactive water, officials said.

The gas posed no threat to the public or workers, said Ken Clark, a spokesman for the Nuclear Regulatory Commission. He said the process, begun about 1 a.m., would continue for about a day.

The gases had accumulated when 50,000 gallons of radioactive water leaked inside the containment building at the Oconee nuclear plant early Saturday.

"They filter (the gas), measure it and monitor it to make sure they don't exceed the federal limits," Clark said. He said the NRC has a specialist at the plant to monitor the process.

The radiation is at a very low level and is no greater than what is released during the plant's normal operation, he said.

Plant spokeswoman Susie Adams said Duke Power Co. hoped to send technicians in this morning to investigate the leak.

On Saturday, the utility reported that radioactive steam gushed into the containment building of the 17-year-old Unit 3 reactor and cooled to water.

The plant remained on alert for more than 15 hours until the reactor was cooled to below 200 degrees. Alert status is the second highest of four NRC classifications for accidents.

Sandra Threatt, emergency planning coordinator for the state Department of Health and Environmental Control, said an inspection team that arrived soon after the spill found no unusual radiation levels.

Officials said they thought they had isolated the most likely cause of the leak.

"The suspicion is that the problem is with a line that's used to measure pressure in the system," said Duke Power spokesman Joe Maher.

Clark said the tainted water on the floor of the containment building would be purged of radioactivity and reused or disposed of.

The accident at the plant near Seneca, about 120 miles northwest of Columbia, did not interrupt electrical service.

OH, MY ACHING BACK

If you're like a lot of people, you may have occasional or persistent back pain and wonder what caused it. You try to think of some incident in which you may have strained your back, and come up with nothing. But there must be some reason why you have back pains. The truth is that even the simplest of incidents may be the cause, such as reaching high on a shelf to get something. Or stooping suddenly to pick up something that has fallen. Or maybe you need some tips on good posture.

Dr. Mark Ford

Dr. Louis Haydon

Whatever the cause, the problem may be that your spinal column is out of alignment... No pain-killing drug can cure the CAUSE. It can dull the pain for awhile and give you temporary relief. But if your back is out of alignment, the pain will probably not go away unless you get the treatment you need. No symptom can be more depressing than persistent back pain. Don't delay treatment when help is readily available.

Parents teach children compassion by giving food to less fortunate

By ALEX DOMINGUEZ
Associated Press Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — What began as a lesson for their children has grown into a weekly outing for a couple who travel from their suburban home each Sunday to hand out bag lunches to the poor.

"We didn't really do it for this," said Anthony Franquelli, pointing to the people in a downtown park he and his family had just given nearly 400 bag lunches. "We did it to teach our children compassion."

The lesson has lasted since April and fed hundreds of the city's poor.

The project, named Simple Sacrifice for the Homeless, began as a kitchen table discussion about what the family could do for those less fortunate.

"We came up with a couple of ideas, and I didn't want to visit nursing homes, so I suggested this," said Anthony Franquelli Jr., 11.

The parents — Franquelli is a 47-year-old manager in the printing department at the University of Maryland, and his wife is a 45-year-old homemaker — have profited from the lesson, too.

"The greatest thing we have learned is that it happens to all kinds of people," said Angie Franquelli. "There's one woman who has an apartment, but doesn't have enough money for food."

The family paid for the lunches, which cost about $1 each, until August, when they started giving out hundreds of sandwiches a week. They now accept donations.

"I'd just like to see more families do this. It's not scary, it's not all drunks and drug addicts like people think," Mrs. Franquelli said. "Most people are two paychecks from the street."

Mrs. Franquelli said her family spends an average $100 a week on the lunches, not including donations. Their son has donated money he raised selling lemonade. Daughter Jill, 13, contributes money earned baby-sitting.

"How would we eat if we did not have people like her?" Tony Clay said as he waited Mrs. Franquelli's visit. "Most people would be begging, stealing and panhandling."

Clay said he has a job but is homeless because he cannot afford the security deposit and other costs needed to rent an apartment.

"Someone here does care about us," he said.

Mrs. Franquelli said her family spends several hours on Saturday afternoons making the sandwiches and bags them on Sunday mornings before driving the 11 miles into Baltimore from their Severn home.

She said her family plans to continue the giveaways even though she has been diagnosed with a terminal liver disease that eventually will require a transplant.

"I would rather have my terminal illness rather than be on the street, if you could have a choice," Mrs. Franquelli said.

Her husband said his family's problems pale beside what he sees every weekend.

"There are people crawling up to us on crutches in the cold," he said. "I complain when I have to walk the dog in the cold."

Flood of Haitian refugees new headache for Bush

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The anguish of Haitians fleeing their homeland in unseaworthy boats has put an emotional face on the crisis in that troubled nation.

Haiti had receded into the background in the weeks since a coup toppled elected President Jean-Bertrand Aristide. But the drama of Haitian boat people is forcing the Bush administration to make life-or-death decisions.

Some of these decisions have touched a raw nerve in Congress, where members accused U.S. officials last week of being oblivious to the fate of would-be migrants who are black, no matter how desperate their plight.

The strange turn of events concerning the Western Hemisphere's poorest country is rooted in the decision by the United States and other hemispheric nations last month to impose economic sanctions against Haiti's coup makers. U.S. officials seemed confident then that the de facto government would not last long.

After all, Haiti's economy is highly dependent on imports and fragile in the best of times. Sanctions, officials believed, were just the right medicine to force the ouster of Haiti's new rulers and to reinstate Aristide.

But history suggests sanctions often cause hardship among the most vulnerable sectors of a population without having much impact on the country's leadership.

After 15 months of a worldwide embargo, Iraq's Saddam Hussein seems firmly entrenched. Two years ago, when it became apparent that sanctions were not working too well against Panama's Manuel Noriega, President Bush decided to send in the troops. And Fidel Castro still runs Cuba despite 31 years of a U.S. trade embargo.

The sanctions against Haiti have been in effect for only a few weeks, but the pattern is much the same as it has been elsewhere. The regime seems dug in while most Haitians have slipped into despair and hardship.

And as the full impact of the sanctions began to take effect, Haitians by the hundreds began to flee on unseaworthy boats toward the more congenial environment of South Florida. Few reached their destination.

Those who didn't drown en route were intercepted by Coast Guard cutters, creating an agonizing dilemma for the administration: where should desperate refugees be sent?

Initially, the problem seemed manageable, but things got out of hand when the number of refugees in Coast Guard custody off the Haitian coast leaped from 500 to about 1,800 in just a few days.

Legally, officials felt they could not admit the Haitians to the United States because almost all were regarded as economic, rather than political, refugees. Other Caribbean countries showed little interest in taking them in, so the administration decided last Monday to send them back to Haiti.

All this was too much for some members of Congress. "Any place but Haiti," thundered Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y. He like many others felt the administration should provide refuge for the Haitians in the United States until the political and economic situation returned to normal.

The administration argued that policy would only encourage more boat people, resulting in large numbers of deaths on the high seas. It also rejected congressional arguments that many of the repatriated Haitians could suffer political persecution back home.

Some lawmakers felt the administration's policy reflected racial bias. Robert Gelbard, a top State Department official, said the policy was aimed primarily at saving lives, but Rep. Major Owens, D-N.Y., said the administration's actions were the kind that ex-Ku Klux Klan leader David Duke might embrace.

Rangel wondered whether a different approach would have been found if the refugees were Irish.

Indeed, the administration has just concluded a no-questions-asked lottery under which 40,000 undocumented aliens are being given residence visas — and 16,000 of the winners, according to the rules, must be Irish. But it was Congress, not the administration, that set those rules. There was no provision for Haitians in the lottery.

The administration seemed more vulnerable on another point. It has protested loudly the forced repatriation of Vietnamese boat people from Hong Kong, describing the policy as "unacceptable" until conditions in Vietnam improve.

The policy toward Haitians also contrasts sharply with the welcome the United States gives to fleeing Cubans. But Gelbard noted that Cuba, unlike Haiti, metes out stiff jail terms for people who try to leave without authorization.

Owens, who has many Haitian emigres in his Brooklyn district, believes such statements miss the point. He contended the Haitians "are fleeing a reign of terror."

The furor died down last Tuesday when a federal judge in Miami ordered the repatriations to Haiti temporarily stopped. The administration will try to get the order reversed this week.

Study: Rats eating less live longer

By CHRIS TORCHIA
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Proponents of lower-calorie living have more support from the laboratory, this time from a study showing rats eating fewer calories live longer than expected, fueling theories that humans on similar diets could live past the 100-year mark.

Rats and mice on 60 percent of their usual calorie intake survived an average of one-third longer than freely feeding rodents, suffering fewer tumors and other diseases, the Tufts University study found.

"It's not just that it stops cancer or that it stops kidney disease," said Dr. Roderick T. Bronson, professor of pathology at Tufts School of Veterinary Medicine in Boston. "It affects animals at all levels and all tissues."

Bronson's study boosts the idea that caloric restriction, once its mechanisms are understood, will provide ways of slowing or halting diseases linked with human aging.

"It's the only manipulation we currently know that increases lifespan," said Dr. Richard L. Spott of the National Institute on Aging in Bethesda, Md., which sponsored the study.

The 1,100 rats and mice in the study, divided into those with restricted calories and those without, were fed a lab rodent chow of natural ingredients such as grain.

Half the rats and mice on low-calorie diets were still alive by time all the animals on unrestricted diets had died, according to the study.

For example, a rat that might live for two years died after 34 months on a restricted diet.

But Bronson warned it was too early for people to slash their calorie intake, because researchers don't know how the process works.

"We're all scared to death that the young people with anorexia nervosa, some of whom are dying, are going to jump on this and say, 'Whoopie, this is an excuse for what I'm doing,'" Bronson said. "We don't want people jumping on the bandwagon at this point."

Designing such a diet would require deep knowledge of nutrition, he said. The diets of the test animals on fewer calories were supplemented with vitamins.

Dr. Roy Walford, a research gerontologist and nutritionist at the UCLA School of Medicine since 1966, has espoused a theory that a low-calorie, high-nutrition diet can help people live 120 years.

"Caloric restriction has worked in every animal species all the way across the animal kingdom," Walford said. "It would be surprising if it didn't work in humans."

Walford, 67, is a member of the Biosphere, a sealed structure in Oracle, Ariz., containing 3,800 plant and animal species that seeks to replicate Earth's environment for two years.

One problem with applying caloric restriction to humans is the difficulty of experimenting with people, Bronson said.

"It's darn hard to do these experiments in very long-lived animals because the scientist doesn't live long enough to see the answer," he said. "It's been a real frustration."

But Ed Masoro, professor of physiology at the University of Texas at San Antonio, said Bronson's work was valid and fell into a popular line of research.

"This is a phenomenon being broadly studied," said Masoro, who has done similar studies. "It's a major thrust in aging research."

"Whether or not it has any immediate applicability to humans is really in the eyes of the viewer," he said.

In Bronson's study, 13 percent of 2-year-old female mice on fewer calories had tumors while 51 percent of those without restricted diets had tumors.

At 30 months, 17 percent of the caloric-restricted mice had tumors while all those with unlimited diets had one or more tumors.

One theory on why a lower calorie intake extends the lives of test animals is that it cuts the rate of cell turnover, making it hard for cancer to spread. Another is that it strengthens the immune system.

"At this point, it's pretty much trying to figure out what the heck's going on," Bronson said. "Until you understand the mechanism, you can't begin to make predictions about people."

Perishable turkey must be handled safely

SAFE TURKEY HANDLING TIPS FOR HOLIDAY MEALS

The turkey, the traditional holiday bird, is a tasty, healthy choice for holiday meals. Don't let the risk of foodborne illness from improperly handled turkey spoil the holiday fun.

Turkey is a highly perishable food and requires special handling in thawing, preparation, cooking and storage. Follow these tips on handling turkey safely:

•If shopping in advance is necessary, frozen turkey is the best bet. Look for one that is solidly frozen. Keep it frozen at zero degree or below until ready for thawing. Allow two to three days, depending on the size of the turkey, for thawing in the refrigerator.

•Fresh turkey is highly perishable and should be bought no more than a day or two before cooking. If shopping must be done in advance, a frozen turkey is a better choice.

•In determining what size turkey to buy, allow about one pound per person. This will provide generous servings with enough leftovers for other meals.

•Thawing a frozen turkey in the refrigerator is the preferred method for safety reasons, but you can also thaw it in cold water. The important thing is to keep the turkey cold while thawing to prevent bacterial growth. To thaw in the refrigerator, put the turkey in the original wrap on a tray or in a pan to catch dripping juices. An 8-12-pound turkey will take one to two days to thaw; a 16- to 20-pound turkey will take three to four days. For faster thawing, put the turkey package in a water-tight plastic bag and submerge in cold water. Change the water every 30 minutes to keep it cold. Depending on size, this can take from 4 to 12 hours. Do not thaw turkey on the counter. Bacteria can multiply rapidly at room temperature, and outer portions of the turkey may thaw and reach room temperatures before the inside is thawed. Small turkeys can be thawed in the microwave according to the manufacturer's manual instructions, but the turkey should be cooked immediately after thawing.

•Wash the turkey with water inside and out before cooking, removing neck and giblets from the cavity. To prevent spread of bacteria, wash hands, utensils and the sink after contact with the turkey.

•Turkeys stuffed with dressing present special problems because bacteria can easily multiply in the stuffing and cause food poisoning. Cooking stuffing separately is the safest method. But if a stuffed bird is the choice, take special precautions. Never stuff the bird ahead of time; stuff just prior to putting in the oven. Never stuff a bird that will be cooked in the microwave. It may not cook thoroughly.

•Cook turkeys to an internal temperature of 180 degrees to 185 degrees. A meat thermometer can be used to check for doneness. If the turkey is stuffed, check the stuffing for doneness. It should reach at least 165 degrees. When done, remove all stuffing from the bird immediately and put in a separate container. Harmful bacteria is more likely to grow in the stuffing if it sits in the bird after cooking.

•Never partially cook a turkey one day and then complete cooking later. Interrupted cooking increased the possibility of bacterial growth.

•Take care of cooked turkey and stuffing leftovers promptly and properly to prevent the risk of foodborne illness. These foods should not be left at room temperatures for more than two hours because the bacteria that cause illness multiply rapidly at these temperatures. Never store these foods in a warm oven or on the kitchen counter for the next meal. This will encourage bacterial growth. Divide large quantities of the leftover turkey and stuffing into smaller portions. Store in the refrigerator in several smaller, shallow containers. Leftover cooked poultry will keep in the refrigerator for three to four days. Stuffing and gravy should be used within a day or two. Bring leftover gravy to a rolling boil before serving. Freeze food for longer storage.

•Add if plans change—you bought as turkey and then didn't use it—remember that frozen turkey can be stored in a freezer at a temperature of zero for up to one year without much loss of quality.

For more information on safe handling of holiday foods, contact the home economics agent at the county office of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Also, the USDA Meat and Poultry hot line at 1-800-535-4555 handles consumer requests concerning meat and poultry. You may call the Hotline Monday-Friday in November from 9:00-5:00 EST, on Thanksgiving Day, November 28, 8:00-2:00 EST.

Bird lovers sing goodbye to ex-governor

DEAR ABBY: In a recent column in the Delaware News-Journal, you condemned the traditional Labor Day Pigeon Shoot in Heggies, Pa. I was pleased to learn that you were compassionate enough to have written to then-Gov. Dick Thornburgh in 1986, protesting that barbaric tradition, and you asked him to please put an end to it. You said he responded with a courteous letter defending the live pigeon-shoot as a time-honored tradition.

Well, Abby, last week, on Election Day, Dick Thornburgh suffered an unexpected defeat in his race for the U.S. Senate. In Philadelphia, the newspaper headlines read: "Wofford Stuns Thornburgh!"

In sustaining this totally unexpected defeat, Dick Thornburgh must have felt as stunned as those doomed pigeons of Heggies for whom he refused to take merciful action.

JANICE DILLON,
WILMINGTON, DEL.

DEAR JANICE: I have received a few letters asking if it was just a coincidence that the letter about Dick Thornburgh and the Labor Day Pigeon Shoot in Heggies appeared in my column just a few days before the Pennsylvania elections. I assure you, it was. I am not so egotistical to presume that my column was in any way responsible for Thornburgh's defeat. Suffice it to say, it didn't help him any. Read on:

Loss of sense of smell effects eating habits

By DR. MICHAEL FREEDMAN

According to a recent issue of the Mayo Clinic Health Letter, one of two people 65 to 80 years old has lost some sense of smell — and changes in smell affect changes in taste.

A person's sensory response to food is complex; in addition to smell and taste, your brain coordinates sensory signals for sight, temperature and texture, and interprets them as a single flavor. Yet when foods no longer taste

DEAR ABBY: Re Dick Thornburgh's letter to you describing the Heggies-Pigeon Shoot as "a time-honored tradition": May I remind him of a few other "time-honored traditions"?

- Public hangings
- Segregation
- Cockfights
- Bullfights
- The caste system
- Apartheid
- Binding the feet of female infants (in pre-revolutionary China) to impede their growth
- Leaving elderly people out on the ice to die

Some of these "traditions" needed a war to stop them. Others ended because they became illegal. I thank God we have people who see injustices for what they are, and have the courage to fight for change.

ROSALIE BEREZICK,
TRUCKSVILLE, PA.

DEAR ROSALIE: Thanks for writing. I am reminded of the immortal words attributed to Edmund Burke (1729-1797), the Irish-born British statesman: "The only thing necessary for the triumph of evil is for good men to do nothing."

DEAR ABBY: At least 40 years ago, our son who was in junior high needed a motto to use in an art project, so I gave him a Chinese proverb I found in Reader's Digest. I cut it out and put it into an antique frame, and it's been hanging on our wall ever since:

"If there is righteousness in the heart, there will be beauty in the character."

"If there be beauty in the character, there will be harmony in the home."

"If there is harmony in the home, there will be order in the nation."

"When there is order in the nation, there will be peace in the world."

E. COLBY

DEAR E. COLBY: Beautiful!

Cowboys shock 'Skins; Oilers blow chance to capture division crown

By The Associated Press

Suddenly, it became the worst time to be in first place in the NFL.

All six division leaders lost and every runnerup won Sunday, dropping a dash of uncertainty in the playoff race. Washington was the biggest victim — the Redskins still are the only team assured a spot in the postseason, but lost their hopes for an undefeated season.

Washington, New Orleans, Buffalo and Houston all blew chances to clinch division titles. Chicago's lead in the NFC Central dwindled to one game over Detroit, while Denver dropped into a tie for the AFC West lead with the Los Angeles Raiders. The Redskins and Saints each fell to teams that were 6-5; the other four leaders lost to sub-.500 clubs.

"This is a league of anything. Anything can happen on any given day. The talent is so even that it's a matter of who executes," Michael Irvin said after catching a touchdown pass as Dallas won in Washington 24-21.

Atlanta ended the day of upsets by winning at night in New Orleans, 23-20 in overtime. The Saints were trying to clinch their first-ever division title, but gave Atlanta a touchdown late in the fourth quarter that tied it.

Elsewhere, Pittsburgh shocked Houston 26-14, Miami stunned Chicago 16-13 in overtime, New England surprised Buffalo 16-13 and Seattle stung Denver 13-10.

Also, Cleveland tripped Kansas City 20-15, the New York Giants beat Tampa Bay 21-14, Detroit downed Minnesota 34-14, Green Bay stopped Indianapolis 14-10, the Los Angeles Raiders defeated Cincinnati 38-14, Philadelphia topped Phoenix 34-14 and the New York Jets beat San Diego 24-3.

San Francisco visits the Los Angeles Rams tonight.

Washington was trying to become the fourth team ever to start out 12-0. Instead, the Cowboys' defense, ranked 25th going into the game, limited the Redskins (11-1) to one touchdown and 199 yards until the final minute.

The only NFL team to go undefeated was the 1972 Miami Dolphins, who went 17-0 in winning the Super Bowl.

"Realistically, these things don't happen very often," Redskins linebacker Matt Millen said. "I don't want to take anything away from Miami, but they only had 14 games. Maybe if we had had 14 games, we might have approached this one differently."

"But we had five games left coming in and sometimes it's just hard to maintain it for five more games. There's only one successful team in the NFL every year. It's not how you start. It's how you finish."

NFL roundup

The Cowboys (7-5) got one touchdown pass from Troy Aikman. When he left the game with a sprained right knee in the third quarter, Steve Beuerlein relieved and threw for another score.

"We were not going to walk in timidly," Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson said. "Troy gave us the lead, and we were holding on by our fingernails to a great offensive team."

Falcons 23, Saints 20

Norm Johnson kicked a 50-yard field goal with 1:57 left in overtime as Atlanta rallied to win at the Superdome.

Michael Haynes caught an 80-yard touchdown pass from Chris Miller in the third quarter and an 18-yard pass to tie it at 20 with 1:53 left in the regulation. New Orleans (9-3) led 20-10 with 12:43 to go in regulation, but fumbled to set up the Falcons' tying score.

In overtime, Atlanta (7-5) was backed up at its own 2 before Haynes caught a 57-yard pass. Three plays later, Johnson won it.

Patriots 16, Bills 13

Jim Kelly threw four interceptions and was sacked four times at Foxboro Stadium as New England stopped a four-game losing streak.

For the fifth straight week, the Patriots (4-8) had a game decided in the final minute. But this time they held on to win after Kelly drove Buffalo (10-2) to the New England 35 in the closing seconds.

Hugh Millen scored a 2-yard sneak with 13:09 left, putting the Patriots ahead. That capped a 65-yard drive as they used a no-huddle offense, a move made popular by the Bills.

Steelers 26, Oilers 14

Houston again lost a big game at Three Rivers Stadium as Warren Moon threw a career-high five interceptions and lost a fumble. The Oilers (9-3) are 6-17 overall in Pittsburgh, including losses in a pair of AFC championship games.

The Steelers (5-7) beat a team with a winning record for the first time since Nov. 26, 1989, in Miami. Moon was 24-for-48 in the snow and wind.

Giants 21, Buccaneers 14

Phil Simms replaced Jeff Hostetler after an injury and rescued New York by throwing a 30-yard touchdown pass to Stephen Baker with 16 seconds left.

Hostetler left with a broken bone in his back, incurred when he was hit by Broderick Thomas while passing in the third quarter. It was not certain how long he will be out.

Simms, whose only previous action this season was mop-up duty in a loss, completed seven straight passes as the Giants went 90 yards in 85 seconds. New York (7-5) won its third straight game despite injuries that forced out Hostetler, Lawrence Taylor and two others. Tampa Bay (2-10) lost at home.

Lions 34, Vikings 14

Barry Sanders ran wild, setting team records by rushing for 220 yards and four touchdowns as Detroit won in Minnesota.

The Lions (8-4) are 8-0 in domed stadiums and are assured of their first non-losing season since 1983. The Vikings (6-7) need to win their last three games to have any chance at the playoffs.

The Broncos Greg Lewis (41) pushes off the Seahawks Cortez Kennedy (96) on a first-quarter play. Seattle edged Denver, 13-10.

Sanders had just 60 yards on nine carries in the first half, and carried just once on the Lions' first possession of the second half. He went on to break club marks of 198 yards by Bob Hoernschemeyer in 1950 and three TDs, held by several players. Dolphins 16, Bears 13.

Pete Stoyanovich kicked a 27-yard field goal on the first possession in overtime and Miami won at snowy Soldier Field.

The Dolphins (6-6) ended Chicago's five-game winning streak. The Bears (9-3) hurt themselves with a bad snap that led to a blocked punt in the last two minutes of regulation, setting up Dan Marino's gamely tying, 2-yard touchdown pass to Farrell Edmunds.

Raiders 38, Bengals 14

Tim Brown scored on a 75-yard punt return and Elvis Patterson scored on a 3-yard fumble return after Cincinnati botched a punt, helping Los Angeles win on the road.

Ronnie Lott had two of the three interceptions against rookie Don Hollas, who started his first NFL game in place of the injured Boomer Esiason. The Raiders (8-4) led 28-0 and Cincinnati (1-11) never had a chance.

Browns 20, Chiefs 15

Cleveland turned back visiting Kansas City by forcing five turnovers.

Six times the Chiefs got inside the Browns' 15, but they came away with only 13 points. Christian Okoye lost two fumbles inside the 5.

Leroy Hoard caught a 71-yard touchdown pass and scored on a 1-yard run as Cleveland (5-7) ended a three-game losing streak. The Chiefs (7-5) had two touchdowns wiped out by penalties.

Seahawks 13, Broncos 10

Dave Krieg tied Dan Fouts' all-time record for fumbles, but Seattle still overcame its mistakes to stop Denver. Krieg fumbled twice, giving him 106 in his career.

The Seahawks (6-6) led 13-0 at halftime, helped by Krieg's 4-yard touchdown pass to Jeff Chadwick. John Elway was 13 of 23 for 132 yards with two interceptions as the Broncos lost at the Kingdome.

Jets 24, Chargers 3

Blair Thomas broke a season-long slump by scoring his first two touchdowns of the season and leading New York past visiting San Diego.

Thomas scored from the 22 and the 1. He gained 76 yards on 15 carries as the Jets (7-5) surpassed their victory total of last season in Bruce Coslet's first year as coach. The Chargers (3-9) lost starting quarterback John Friesz with an ankle injury early in the game and his backup, Bob Gagliano, could not move them.

Packers 14, Colts 10

Quarterback Mike Tomczak dashed 48 yards on Green Bay's longest run of the season, setting up his own 2-yard touchdown sneak as the Packers won in Milwaukee.

Tomczak's TD put the Packers (3-9) ahead 14-3 midway in the third quarter. Indianapolis (1-11) scored once and got to the Green Bay 20 with 1:09 left in the game, but Jeff George was sacked and then threw incomplete.

Eagles 34, Cardinals 14

Linebacker Seth Joyner returned a fumble 34 yards for a touchdown, forced a fumble that Clyde Simmons recovered for a touchdown, and caused an interception that led to another score — all in the first quarter.

The Eagles (7-5) avenged a loss at home to the Cardinals (4-9) on Sept. 8. Jim McMahon completed only 10 of 25 passes for 162 yards, but threw for two touchdowns.

PHS eagers host Canyon

Both the Pampa High boys' and girls' basketball teams play Canyon Tuesday night on the homecourt.

The girls' game tips off at 6 p.m., followed by the boys' contest at 8 p.m.

The Harvesters are off to a 2-0 start, defeating Palo Duro, 93-72, and Tascosa, 75-56.

The Lady Harvesters lost to defending Class 5A state champion Tascosa, 62-55, in their season opener, but then rebounded with an 88-55 win over Altus, Okla. last Friday night.

In junior varsity boys' action last Friday night, Pampa defeated Tascosa, 63-57. Lamont Nickelberry led Pampa scorers with 15 points.

Pampa also defeated Tascosa in the sophomore game, 50-38. David Potter scored 20 points for Pampa.

Cotton Bowl dream comes true for Texas A&M

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — The Texas A&M football team visited the Cotton Bowl three weeks ago with hopes and wishes that have now been fulfilled.

A&M coach R. C. Slocum took his team to the stadium in Dallas so they could walk around the field and see how it would feel if they could get there on New Year's Day.

"Being in the stadium was great, then we even went by the Hyatt Regency to see where we would stay if we won the conference championship," said running back Keith McAfee. "Now, we'll be there. It's great."

Tenth-ranked A&M whipped

Southern Methodist 65-6 Saturday, but will wait until their Thanksgiving night game against Texas to officially accept the bid to play No. 3 Florida State in the Cotton Bowl game on Jan. 1.

In other Southwest Conference action Saturday, Arkansas shut out Rice 20-0, while Baylor beat Texas 21-11 and Texas Christian edged Houston 49-45.

A&M quarterback Bucky Richardson threw three touchdown passes in the first half against the Mustangs and sat out the second half. The Aggies are 9-1 overall and 7-0 in the Southwest Conference, while the Mustangs dropped to 1-9, 0-8.

"We weren't given a prayer of winning the conference," Richardson said. "Everybody said we were too young, we were rebuilding, the whole bit."

"It's nice to sit back and say they were wrong. You can't ever pick Texas A&M fourth. We've got too many good players."

A&M coach R. C. Slocum wouldn't let the Cotton Bowl give his team the official invitation until after the Texas game.

"We're going to wait until after the Texas game to accept the Cotton Bowl bid," said Slocum. "We don't want the Texas game to be anticlimactic."

No Cotton Bowl representative was present as the Aggies, who were picked fourth in the preseason, celebrated their title.

Slocum said "Bowls are a reward you have for an exceptional season, but our season isn't over yet. Waiting until after the Texas game is the proper sequence. I wouldn't feel right celebrating today with a game left to play."

"We don't want the Texas game to be anticlimactic. We still have some unfinished business."

Slocum said it was good to see his team "overachieve" to win the conference title.

"This team exceeded my expectations," he said.

"Not bad for a team picked to finish fourth," said defensive back Kevin Smith. "The Texas game will be like the Super Bowl for us. It made us sick to lose to them last year. Then we can really celebrate being in the Cotton Bowl."

The Aggies, winning their 16th SWC title, increased their overall record to 9-1. They can go through the conference undefeated for the first time since 1956 if they defeat Texas at Kyle Field.

"It feels good going back," said Richardson who was the MVP of the 1988 Cotton Bowl when A&M beat Notre Dame 35-10. "But we have to beat Texas."

It was the second worst defeat Texas A&M had inflicted on SMU in the 72-year history of football between the two schools.

"We took a beating, A&M is a great team," said SMU coach Tom Rossley. "We couldn't run or pass. We played hard and with a lot of heart, but A&M is just too strong and well coached."

Yugoslav teenager notches sixth win over Navratilova in eleven career meetings

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Monica Seles earned her second straight Virginia Slims Championships title, a record payoff and respect.

"She is such a great player, you have to have respect for that," Martina Navratilova said of the 17-year-old Yugoslav. "And she walks to a different drummer."

The drumming Sunday was done on the Madison Square Garden carpet where Seles sprayed winner after winner as Navratilova could only stand and watch. And when it was over, Seles had capped her remarkable year with a 6-4, 3-6, 7-5, 6-0 victory over Navratilova.

The victory in the season-ending event was worth $250,000 to Seles, who reached the final in all 16 tournaments she played this year, winning 10. She also kept Navratilova from winning a record 158th career title.

"It was a great match," Seles said. "Even til the last point, I was telling myself, 'You got to keep going because Martina came back a lot of times ...'"

Two hours and 10 minutes after taking the court, Seles had shown the crowd why she is No. 1 in the world. Navratilova didn't lose on this day; she was beaten by a better player.

"I played my best tennis that I was capable of today and it wasn't good enough," Navratilova said. "She played better."

Using her speed, quickness and laser-guided groundstrokes, Seles used every angle on the court, despite Navratilova's gallant bid at trying to keep pace. But it was Seles who turned up the tempo in the fourth set.

"I just wish I could have won," Navratilova said. "That would have been just a thrill of a lifetime for me to have won today. Just to be out there was a treat for me. And a privilege."

The crowd, solidly for the 35-year-old Navratilova throughout the week-long tournament, gave her a standing ovation when she accepted the runner-up trophy.

Seles received $800,000 for winning the tournament, boosting her earnings this year to $2,457,758, breaking the single-season record of $2,173,556 set by Navratilova in 1984.

In addition, Seles got a $500,000 bonus for finishing first in the year-long Virginia Slims bonus pool and $50,000 from an incentive pool.

Navratilova, who earned $120,000 for finishing second in this 16-player event, also collected $100,000 for finishing fourth in the bonus pool and $8,000 from the incentive pool. Add that to the $45,000 she earned by teaming with Pam Shriver to win the doubles title Saturday, and Navratilova's 1991 earnings total is $989,986.

With the points coming on winners, not unforced errors, the two held serve through the opening eight games of the match, Navratilova ending her first four service games with aces.

Then, in the ninth game, Navratilova serving, a telephone rang in the arena, breaking her concentration. Two points later, she stopped her service motion when someone yelled out, "Come on, Gabby," referring to Gabriela Sabatini. Then a young girl, standing in the stands at the end of the court, took a flash picture just as Navratilova started to serve.

It was too much for Navratilova, whose nerves have been questioned throughout her career. And it was the first service break of the match.

When Seles held in the next game at 15, including her first ace of the day, she had wrapped up the opening set.

But, strangely, losing the first set seemed to calm Navratilova. She began attacking more, especially on Seles' serve. And although she had to struggle on her own service games, three times holding from deuce, she provided the only service break of the second set, from deuce in the eighth game.

Pumped, Navratilova held at 15 to tie the match at one set apiece.

In the third set, the two took turns breaking each other in the eighth and ninth games. But when Navratilova held to pull even at 5-5, it was the last time she would hold service.

Seles broke her at 30 in the 12th game to win the third set, drilling a forehand service return down the line at set point. Then Seles, with almost everything she hit falling in, breezed through the final set.

"I missed a couple of volleys that I should have made," Navratilova said, "but she put so much pressure on you. Normally that wouldn't cost you a game, but with her it does."

"She hits such great shots. ... You can't relax for one second with her. She is very, very mentally tough."

In all, Navratilova served 11 aces. It wasn't anywhere near enough to overcome the 52 winners hit by Seles, seven more than Navratilova.

And the veteran made 17 more unforced errors than her teen-age opponent.

The victory was the sixth by Seles over Navratilova in 11 meetings, and the third in 1991.

Monica Seles celebrates her win over Martina Navratilova.

Drexler leads Trail Blazers past Spurs

By BOB BAUM
AP Sports Writer

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Clyde Drexler scored 48 points, matching the second-highest total of his career, as the Portland Trail Blazers overcame an otherwise cold-shooting performance to beat San Antonio 116-111 Sunday night.

Drexler, who fell two points short of his career high and three shy of the team record, had 29 at halftime and scored five during a 19-second span in the final quarter to lift the Blazers out of trouble.

David Robinson had 25 points, 20 rebounds and nine blocked shots for the Spurs, who never led in the game.

Drexler made 17 of 28 field goals and 11 of 13 free throws in posting the highest point total in the NBA this season. He also had three blocked shots, five steals and only one turnover.

No other Portland player shot better than 50 percent from the field as the Blazers won despite a 38 percent shooting.

Portland was ahead by 10 at halftime and had its biggest lead at 96-77 when Danny Ainge sank a 3-pointer to start the third period. But the Blazers didn't make a field goal for the next 5:22, and the Spurs went on a 14-1 run to close to 97-

91 with 6:20 to play. Porter sank a 22-footer, then Drexler took over again. He made an 18-footer, blocked a layup attempt by Tom Garrick and added a three-point play to make it 104-91 with 4:21 to play.

The Blazers grabbed an 11-2 lead and were up by as many as 16 in the first quarter, when Drexler scored 16.

A 17-4 San Antonio run pulled sliced the lead to 51-48 before Portland outscored the Spurs 12-5 the rest of the half for a 63-53 lead.

Drexler's only higher total was 50 points in a double-overtime victory over Sacramento on Jan. 6, 1989. He scored 48 16 days later against New York.

He has 39, 24, 31 and 48 points in the four games the Blazers have played over a six-day period.

His 48-point total tied for fourth on the all-time Blazer scoring list. Geoff Petrie holds the Blazers record of 51 set twice in 1973.

Drexler made nine of his first 11 shots, including three of three 3-pointers. His first-half total was one short of the Blazers' team record set by Petrie in 1974.

Terry Porter added 22 points and 10 assists for Portland. Sean Elliott scored 21 for San Antonio.

Clippers slip past SuperSonics

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ron Harper hit a desperation 3-pointer from the corner with 1.2 seconds left Sunday night, capping a 20-point effort and lifting the Los Angeles Clippers to an 89-86 victory over the Seattle SuperSonics.

Doc Rivers hit a key basket in the final minute and scored 17 points in his first start at point guard as the Clippers ended a six-game losing streak with their fifth straight triumph over Seattle at the Sports Arena.

Ricky Pierce led Seattle with 28 points, 12 of them in the fourth quarter, but it wasn't enough to extend the Sonics' four-game road winning streak.

Danny Manning stole the ball from Derrick McKey, leading to Rivers' 18-footer that tied the score 86-86 with 37 seconds left.

Seattle guard Gary Payton missed a 17-footer with 14 seconds left, and Loy Vaught rebounded for Los Angeles. Manning inbounded to Harper from midcourt with 11 seconds to go, and Harper momentarily lost possession at the baseline before hitting the game-winner over two defenders.

Trailing 79-70 with 7 1/2 minutes remaining, the Sonics rallied to lead 86-84 as Pierce keyed a 16-5 run with eight points. Michael Cage tipped in his own missed layup, giving Seattle a two-point edge.

The Sonics held the Clippers to 15 points in the third quarter, slicing a 10-point halftime deficit to 67-64. It was the Clippers' lowest-scoring quarter since a 14-point first period on opening night at Sacramento.

Clippers coach Mike Schuler, whose job is reported to be in jeopardy despite a 4-1 start and numerous injuries to key personnel, went with only seven players in the first half as James Edwards sat out with a bruised right thigh.

Rivers led the Clippers to a 52-42 half-time lead with 13 points — including a 3-point shot from the corner with seven-tenths of a second left for their biggest lead to that point.

Upstarts East Carolina, Tulsa playing like traditional powers

College football

By RICK WARNER
AP Football Writer

Nobody will ever confuse East Carolina and Tulsa with Miami and Florida State. These days, however, the two upstart college football programs are playing like traditional powers.

No. 12 East Carolina beat Cincinnati 30-19 Saturday in its school-record 10th straight victory, while No. 22 Tulsa topped Ohio University 45-13 for its fifth consecutive win.

Jeff Blake passed for two touchdowns and Jerry Dillon scored on a 20-yard interception return to clinch the victory for East Carolina (10-1).

"I really tip my hat to our defense in the second half, especially the fourth quarter," coach Bill Lewis said. "We made the big plays on defense when we had to."

T.J. Rubley threw for four touchdowns and became the 15th player in NCAA history to pass for 9,000 yards as Tulsa (8-2) routed Ohio.

"They were playing for their ranking today. That must have been why they had some of their first-teamers in there with 44 seconds left," Ohio coach Tom Lichtenberg said.

After finishing its regular season against SMU next week, Tulsa will play San Diego State in the Freedom Bowl on Dec. 30. East Carolina is also heading to a bowl, the Peach against North Carolina State on Jan. 1.

In other Top 25 games Saturday, it was No. 1 Miami 19, Boston College 14; No. 2 Washington 56, Washington State 21; No. 4 Michigan 31, No. 24 Ohio State 3; No. 7 Iowa 23, Minnesota 8; No. 9 Tennessee 16, Kentucky 7; No. 10 Texas A&M 65, Southern Methodist 6; No. 13 Clemson 41, South Carolina 24; No. 17 Stanford 38, No. 14 California 21; No. 15 Colorado 17, Iowa State 14; No. 16 Syracuse 16, West Virginia 10; No. 20 Virginia 38, Virginia Tech 0; No. 21 North Carolina State 20, Maryland 17; and No. 23 UCLA 24, Southern Cal 21.
