Highly charged

The Harvester football team, bursting through a paper banner held by the Pampa cheerleaders, takes the Texas Tech Jones Stadium field with a passion at the start of the Class 4A state quarterfinal game Saturday night against Sweetwater. Though highly charged up with enthusiasm for the game, the Harvesters lost 19-12, ending their playoff season after the best season for the Harvesters in decades.

County commissioner helps preserve history of McClellan Creek battle site

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
News Editor

Most residents of Gray County may be unaware of the historical significance to the Red River Wars.

When driving down Texas 70 to Lake McClellan or from Lefors to McLean or Alanreed, they may notice the countryside - beautiful in its own way. But they probably don't take the time to consider how the land once was, traveled by great herds of buffalo, populated by antelope, deer and wild turkey.

The McClellan Creek area, where most of the military action between the United States Cavalry and the native Americans took place, was also an ideal place to settle. Food and land was bountiful. It was inevitable that conflict would arise between those who had always lived here and the white settlers who were coming to the area in greater and greater numbers.

Gerald Wright, Gray County commissioner - Precinct 3, decided that he would not let that history die. Wright, with the help of his friends Stan and Margie Anthony, set to work to preserve that particular era in the history of this county as accurately as possible.

His interest was first piqued during a Texas history class at Pampa Junior High when he first heard the story of the McClellan Creek battle. His teacher elaborated some on the story, he remembered, telling how two little girls had been kidnapped by the Indians and the cavalry saved them in a battle not far from Pampa.

Later Wright read articles about the incident, but he found that little true research had been done. He decided he wanted to find the actual site of the battlefield.

"I asked Stan and Margie to help," he said. "They were interested in local history and they were someone who were willing to put the effort and time into the search. They were dedicated and willing to spend the time to do it."

Their search began at Lovett Library; it continued on to West Texas State University, the University of Kansas and eventually included microfilm from the National Archives.

"We went back and got military reports of Lt. (Frank D.) Baldwin," Wright said. "We were also able to get a copy of Lt. Baldwin's diary from the University of Kansas."

With those records in hand, Wright and the Anthonys set out to find the actual site of the McClellan Creek battle.

"We wanted to find the site and see if there were any articles still there," Wright explained.

The search began in 1986. By 1988, the battle site had been located south of Pampa in the North McClellan Creek area. A more definite location is not possible to release at this time, since the battlefield is on private land and has not been opened to the public.

Wright said the landowner was helpful in allowing Wright and the Anthonys to look for the site and in allowing them to recover a number of artifacts from the area.

Finding the battlefield was something like finding a needle in a haystack. In 1952 during the 50th anniversary of Gray County, Addie German, the only surviving kidnap victim, who was well into her 80s, identified an area closer to Alanreed as the site of the battlefield.

Wright theorizes that the area she identified was definitely an old Indian campground where she may have stayed while in captivity. However, the place did not fit with the facts recorded and military maps of the battle site.

The three history sleuths continued their search, visiting place after place.

"It was really a challenge," Wright recalled. "We had to put all this information together. After 114 years, the country had changed so much. We had the early military maps of 1874, but we had to try to make sense of them in modern terms."

Wright and the Anthonys all say they will never forget the day they felt they had finally pinpointed the site of the battle.

"What decided us was when they came back in 1876, they said it was located by two buttes," Stan Anthony said. "Baldwin described them perfectly."

After locating the buttes, they drove to the area they felt was the battlefield site. It was approximately 10 miles from where Addie German had said the battlefield took place.

"We got out of the vehicle and within eight or 10 steps Margie found the first shell," Wright said. The shell was a 45-70, first issued by the U.S. Cavalry in 1873.

Pampa officials readying prison expansion proposal

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Pampa's Prison Expansion Steering Committee met last week and has begun a full-speed-ahead effort to bring more jobs to the city through the Texas Department of Criminal Justice.

Attorney Bill Waters of the Pampa Industrial Foundation said three members of that body will join three representatives each from the city, Gray County and the Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce in working on a new prison proposal.

Currently 109 cities across the state are expressing interest in state prisons. Panhandle cities in the running include Amarillo, Borger, Childress, Crosbyton, Dalhart, Shamrock and Plainview.

Lubbock, Lamesa, Odessa and other cities across West Texas will also be attempting to outbid one another for the new prison beds, which will bring millions of new dollars into the communities that are successful.

As in the past, Pampa leaders are remaining tight-lipped about details of the local proposal, not wanting to "give anything away to the competition."

Information from the TDCJ indicates it believes in the end only about 50 proposals from cities will actually be submitted, with others unable to acquire proper incentives and/or land to give the state in return for the prison jobs.

Waters noted the Pampa community well is "close to dry" and that it would be impossible to again have a citywide fund-raising effort such as in 1990.

However, there are some incentives the city has that it believes will offset a lack of cash, Waters said. Details were not divulged.

But in the past City Manager Glen Hackler has mentioned that there are already adequate utilities running to the site where a new prison would be placed alongside the Rufe Jordan Unit, which amounts to tens of thousands of dollars in costs.

Victor Raymond of IRI International and a member of the Industrial Foundation said there will be about 28,000 new prison beds in the state, with 20 percent going to cities that have prototype prisons, as Pampa currently has under construction.

"They are talking about 20 units," Waters explained. "The legislation is geared toward 1,000-bed unit expansions. I think the drug rehabilitation units are geared toward 500-bed units."

Waters also stated, "I think we can show them some incentives that will be, we believe, attractive. The last time we had massive mailings to the TDCJ board members, and I'm told that was quite impressive to them. We may do that type of thing again. We do have in mind to document for them the extreme euphoria that existed in Pampa when we found we were successful in (getting a prison in) 1990."

While a prison proposal is being compiled, the steering committee will also be seeking support from area cities, local civic organizations, Coronado Hospital and local health professionals, and State Sen. Teel Bivins and Rep. Warren Chisum.

The state is insisting all prison bids be submitted by Jan. 15, 1992. From then until Jan. 22, the TDCJ staff will review proposals.

On March 3 the TDCJ staff is scheduled to notify cities that made an initial short list of communities still under consideration.

That group of cities will then be pared down by the TDCJ board on March 19. Those cities will then make known on March 27 how the final cities to get prisons will be selected.

Waters and Raymond both expressed enthusiasm that Pampa could get an expanded prison system in Pampa.

"We feel very good about everything," Raymond said. "We will continue to work very hard on this and appreciate the support (of the community)."

Salvation Army leader to address luncheon

Lt. Col. Jack Waters, Texas divisional commander of the Salvation Army, will be guest speaker at the Greater Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce luncheon Tuesday in the M.K. Brown Room of the Pampa Community Building.

The luncheon, catered by Dyer's Bar-B-Que, will begin at 11:45 a.m. Reservations must be made at the chamber office, 669-3241, by 10 a.m. Tuesday.

The Pampa Salvation Army is sponsoring the monthly membership luncheon. Rex McAnelly and Moody Farms will be spotlighted during the luncheon for their community contributions.

Lt. Col. Waters is responsible for the Salvation Army's Texas mission and ministry of 48 corps, five area commands and 350 service units in Texas.

Waters and his wife, Magdalene, were appointed to Texas by way of Washington, D.C., where they served as divisional commander and director of women's services respectively of the National Capital and Virginia Division.

The Waters' Texas command is their fourth as divisional leaders since 1983. That year they moved to Georgia as divisional leaders for six years. This was followed by appointments as divisional leaders of the Alabama/Louisiana/Mississippi Division and most recently of the National Capital and Virginia Division.

Jack Waters of South Carolina and Magdalene Arrowood of Tennessee met at the Salvation Army's School for Officers' Training in 1951 and were married three years later.

After a succession of corps and divisional appointments for the next 22 years, Lt. Waters was assigned as territorial community relations and development secretary in 1976.

In 1980, he became assistant secretary for business administration for the territory, responsible for the Territorial Development Program, the largest capital development program ever undertaken in the history of the Salvation Army.

The Waters have one son, Keith, a professional fund raising consultant who is married and living in Maryland.

German family's journey to Colorado led to loss of daughters, Indian battle

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
News Editor

In 1870, John German and his family left Fannin County, Ga., en route to Colorado believing that Colorado was their "land of opportunity." German's health was failing since serving as a Confederate volunteer in the Civil War. He wanted to find the best place possible for his wife, son and six daughters.

The family had worked their way to Kansas by August of 1874 and had finally embarked on the final leg of their journey. German had been warned that Indians were in the area, but being a "sort of bull-headed fellow," according to Gerald Wright, local amateur historian, he chose to continue towards Colorado.

After four years on the trail and only a few days from their destination, the German family was attacked by a band of 19 Cheyenne Indians, including two squaws. It was Sept. 11.

German, who was leading his family and carrying a rifle, was the first to die - felled by a hatchet brandished by Buffalo Calf Woman. She had seen her entire family killed at Sand Creek 10 years before.

Her husband Medicine Water was leader of the Bowstring Society whose duty was to protect his band in an area that in their minds was a war zone, survivors of the German family later learned.

Liddia German, his wife; son Stephen and oldest daughter Jane were killed in the attack. 15-year-old Joanna was killed further down the trail. Julia, Addie, Catherine and Sophia were taken as captives.

After some time, the Indians apparently decided the youngest girls, Julia and Addie, ages 7 and 5 respectively, were too much trouble. Instead of killing them, they were left to fend for themselves on the plains near McClellan Creek. The elder sisters, Catherine and Sophia, were kept captive, one with Stone Calf's band and the other with Gray Beard's band.

For six weeks, the younger girls survived on berries and grass. They also scavenged an old military camp they found by the creek for food. Shortly before the McClellan Creek battle, the Indians came across the two girls, almost starved to death, and took them back into the band. Their reasoning may have been to use them to bargain with the soldiers more than as a humanitarian act.

Lt. Frank D. Baldwin was combating the McClellan Creek area looking for Indians. He commanded a company of 40 infantry, 36 cavalry, a mountain howitzer drawn by two mules, 12 scouts and 23 six-mule teams.

After leaving his camp along

McClellan Creek on Nov. 8, 1874, one of the scouts, William F. Schmalze, reported an Indian camp nearby.

Riding ahead, Lt. Baldwin spotted from 100 to 200 Indians and their families camped on a high vantage point ahead. It was Gray Beard.

Within a mile of the camp, Baldwin sent 10 cavalrymen ahead to begin a skirmish. After arriving to within 500 yards of the camp, the soldiers were formed into a line, infantry to the right and cavalry to the left.

The wagon train was arranged in four columns in the middle. And in the center in front of the wagon train was the howitzer.

The Indian warriors tried to occupy and hold the ravines to Baldwin's right. Lt. Baldwin felt it necessary to clear the ravines so the Indians would not be able to come up behind him and attack.

The howitzer was put into action to clear the ravines of the Indians, forcing them to retreat to the plains and try to charge the command head-on.

Gerald Wright, left, Stan Anthony, center, and Margie Anthony, right, stand on the spot where they believe Lt. Frank D. Baldwin's mountain howitzer was located at the McClellan Creek Battle. A number of items related to the howitzer were found on the site. On the horizon behind them, about 300 yards away, is where the Indian campground would have been located. A plays lake described in military records remains, located where a small tree grows on the horizon just left of Wright's shoulder.

McClellan

Soon they discovered canister balls from the mountain howitzer they knew the cavalry had used in the battle. More 45-70 shells were found, in addition to a hodge-podge of other shells that the searchers believe came from the Indians' guns. A hunting knife was found near a playa lake like what had been described in the military records.
Most of the articles were found lying on top of the ground, many of them uncovered by erosion or simply lying in the same place for 114 years. The trio, working after hours, braved coyotes, rattlesnakes, mosquitoes, thunderstorms and snow to recover the artifacts.
"I gave us a real relief knowing we had finally found it," Wright said. "I felt like if we didn't do it, it wouldn't get done. If we didn't do it, the artifacts would never have been recovered and the battlefield would never have been located."

In the midst of the search, Wright and the Anthonys began to feel as if they knew the participants in the drama.
"I feel like we know them after reading their diaries," Wright explained. "We also obtained personal letters from their wives that they had written while they were out here."
"I almost died reading Lt. Baldwin's letter to his wife about what the government was giving to the Indians. 'The Indians are as well-equipped as we are,' he said," Anthony said.
"I can't believe Baldwin is not more widely known," he added. "After this campaign he was with the group that chased Sitting Bull after the Battle of Little Big Horn. And he received the Medal of Honor for this battle."
"We're interested in the military and the Indian part of it, too. I don't try to take sides," Wright said. However, the military left far more retrievable artifacts than the Indians did, he explained.

After Wright and Anthonys felt they had found all the artifacts that were possible with their limited means, they gathered the artifacts, the research material and a map of the battlefield site for White Deer Land Museum so that future generations could learn more about the historic event.
Wright also shares his experiences with Texas history classes, hoping he can stimulate an interest, such as his was when he was in junior high.
He gives a brief background of what caused the Indian uprising and the Red River wars and then focuses on the McClellan Creek battle and the research he and the Anthony's have done. He shows them a small frame of artifacts from the battle site and shows the students photographs of Lt. Baldwin and others who were involved.
"When it's all said and done, I think we have a better picture of our local history," Wright said.

Battle

Again the howitzer was used to fire at the Indians, along with much small arms fire. The repeated, yet inaccurate fire from the soldiers and howitzer, which was placed at its limit of range, proved to be more than the Indians could take. They retreated to the plains after losing two warriors. Their maneuver was an effective way to allow the woman and children of the camp to scatter and escape.
In the rush to escape Baldwin's attack, the Cheyennes abandoned most of their supplies as well as tepees. As the infantry marched into and through the camp, the Indians twice tried to charge up to their camp, firing in particular at a pile of buffalo skins.

After searching the camp, the soldiers found the two youngest German sisters, half-starved and naked, but alive. It is said the company's doctor and other members were moved to tears at the sight of the poor children.
Lt. Baldwin sent the cavalry to pursue the Indians, but only once did the men get close enough to fire on them. One Indian was shot from his saddle as the cavalrymen fired upon them with pistols. The pursuit was abandoned after about 12 miles because of the cavalry horses' weakened condition.

Later that winter, the older girls were returned to the Indian Agency at Fort Sill, Okla., after the Indians had been starved and driven so hard by the U.S. Army that they had no other recourse than to return to the reservation.
All four of the German girls who survived the Indian attack later married and lived full lives. Lt. Baldwin received the Medal of Honor for his efforts to rescue Julie and Addie.

'Dallas Times Herald' publishes last edition today

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Times Herald closed today with the banner headline "Goodbye Dallas" in its final editions.
The newspaper's death after 112 years made Dallas the nation's largest city with one newspaper.
On Sunday, the parent company of The Dallas Morning News said it would pay $55 million for the principal assets of the Times Herald, ending a fierce rivalry.
The Times Herald's 900 full-time employees were laid off with two months' pay.
"I'm sad for myself, I'm sad for the newspaper," said staff writer Marty Sabota. "But mostly I'm sad for the people of Dallas who have lost the advantages and the benefits of a two-newspaper town."

Times Herald Publisher John Buzzetta said the closing was inevitable due to mounting debt costs and the poor economy.
"This recession has been especially difficult for media companies and particularly hard on the second newspaper company in a market," Buzzetta said.
The paper was burdened by the debt of two changes in ownership since 1986 and ended some recent months in the red, Times Herald Editor Roy Bode said.
"We weren't losers as journalists," Bode said. "We lost in the end to the market and the economy."
Buzzetta approached A.H. Belo Corp., owner of The Morning News, three times in the past year for assistance or to sell assets.

Pampa couple arrested on marijuana charges

A husband and wife were arrested by Pampa police Saturday night after a search of the couple's home turned up marijuana.
James Brian Everson, 26, and Yvonne Cheri Everson, 20, were arrested at 7:30 p.m. after police secured a search warrant and, using drug dogs Shadow and Houdini, found the narcotics hidden in the house.
A news release indicated the warrant was the result of an investigation by patrol division officers.
"These dogs were instrumental in locating various hiding places where narcotics were found," the press release stated.

The pair were charged with possession of marijuana under 4 ounces, a class A misdemeanor. Both had been released on bond.
In an unrelated incident, police are investigating various claims from Saturday night that a man was wielding a shotgun and knife in the street in front of 1041 Neel Rd.
Chief Jim Laramore said police had gotten a call that a man had a gun, but when three officers arrived at the scene all they found was a group of people arguing and telling contradictory stories.

The man who allegedly had the gun was not located, police said, and neither were any weapons.
A juvenile and a man identifying himself as Robert Chavarria of 410 S. Gray both filed reports with police seeking further investigation into the incident.

City Commission to meet Tuesday

Pampa's City Commission will meet in a brief regular session 6 p.m. Tuesday at City Hall.
The agenda includes cancellation of the next meeting, scheduled for Christmas Eve, Dec. 24, and consideration of a resolution supporting three economic development issues on a Jan. 18 city ballot.
A 4 p.m. work session open to the public will precede the regular meeting.
Items to be discussed at the work session include a community recycling center, a request by AMT Paramedic Service for a rate increase and a cable television update.

School trustees to consider grants, Lamar School plan

Trustees for the Pampa Independent School District will meet in regular session 6 p.m. Tuesday at Carver Center, 321 W. Albert.
Agenda items include approval of two grants from the Texas Education Administration totaling $75,836 for drug free schools and adult vocational education, discussion of extended student trips during the spring semester and a discussion of budget amendment procedures.
Also scheduled is a presentation by Lamar Elementary Principal Tim Powers on proposals that the school go to year-round classes, two-year teacher assignments with any given group of students and "adoption" of babies in the Lamar district by teachers who can offer parenting tips to mothers and fathers of children who will one day attend the school.

Powers and teachers on the campus have said each of the ideas have come from the faculty and have been approved by the entire school staff.
A parents meeting on the proposal to go to year-round classes is scheduled at Lamar's gym for Thursday, Jan. 16, 1992.

Dallas golf course employee arrested in slayings of four co-workers

DALLAS (AP) — A golf course employee has been arrested in the deaths of four workers at a city-owned golf pro shop, sources close to the investigation said.

The Dallas Morning News today quoted sources as saying the co-worker was booked into the Lew Sterrett Justice Center about midnight. Police planned to charge him in connection with the slayings of the men who were shot to death, the source said. Three of the victims were also beaten, officers said.

Further details, including the identity of the man arrested, were not immediately available.

A tennis pro shop employee discovered the bodies of Marlin Jones, 47; his brother, Evander Jones Jr., 49; and their cousin, Willie Turner, 43, in or just outside the pro shop at approximately 6:40 p.m. Saturday. Officials in the medical examiner's office said Sunday that all three were shot and then badly beaten on the head and shoulders.

New Soviet commonwealth may give role to Gorbachev

By THOMAS GINSBERG
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Boris N. Yeltsin today confronted Mikhail S. Gorbachev with the powerful new commonwealth of Russia, Ukraine and Byelorussia, and said there could be a role in the new political union for Gorbachev.

In addition, Kazakhstan President Nursultan Nazarbayev, who sat in on the Kremlin meeting, said he believed Gorbachev "still has not exhausted his possibilities" as a leader.

Gorbachev and Nazarbayev were briefed by Yeltsin, the Russian president, for 80 minutes today about the "commonwealth of independent states" formed Sunday by the three Slavic republics.

Nazarbayev, whose vast resource-rich republic was left out of the commonwealth, ruled out any potential union by the five predominantly Muslim Soviet republics — Kazakhstan, Turkmenia, Uzbekistan, Tadjikistan and Kirgizia — to counterbalance the Slavic commonwealth.

The declarations signed Sunday make no mention of any role for Gorbachev or any Soviet president. But both Nazarbayev and Gorbachev spokesman Andrei Grachev quoted Yeltsin as saying today that Gorbachev might continue to play a leadership role.

Grachev told Soviet journalists that Yeltsin raised the possibility of "having the post of president" among the commonwealth's leaders.

Nazarbayev said the weekend accord took him by surprise. Gorbachev had no advance knowledge, either, and was not even informed until after Yeltsin telephoned President Bush.

The Kazakhstan president said he still supported Gorbachev's Union Treaty — or something similar — but emphasized: "I am a pragmatist and a realist, and I will look at the situation."

Nazarbayev said he, Gorbachev and Yeltsin agreed the Slavic pact would be sent to the Soviet parliament for consideration alongside Gorbachev's plan. It was not immediately clear what, if any, authority the parliament would have to prevent a commonwealth from coming into existence.

Russia, Byelorussia and Ukraine comprise nearly three-fourths of the Soviet Union's population and possess most of its economic strength. They make up the country's traditional Slavic heartland.

The breakup of the Soviet Union has provoked worries about what will happen to its enormous nuclear arsenal. Russian officials today moved to assure Western nations that nuclear weapons would remain under central control.

"No distribution or division of nuclear arms, or loss of control of nuclear weapons will take place," said Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev. He said Yeltsin has consulted with Nazarbayev — whose republic has many long-range nuclear weapons — and that there was "no dissent" between the two men on nuclear issues.

The independent Interfax news agency said Yeltsin was authorized to speak at today's Kremlin meeting on behalf of the Ukrainian and Byelorussian leaders. Neither attended the session.

The presidents of Azerbaijan and Tadjikistan briefly attended today's meeting, the Tass news agency said. But a full meeting of the State Council, the body temporarily running the Soviet government, was canceled.

In forming the commonwealth — named Sodruzhestvo in Russian — Ukrainian President Leonid Kravchuk, Byelorussian leader Stanislav Shushkevich and Yeltsin said the Soviet Union had "ceased to exist."

But Gorbachev's deputy spokesman, Alexander Likhotan, told Israeli radio he did not think the agreement meant a certain end to Gorbachev's six years in power. "Yeltsin has come to Gorbachev, to the president now. That means he has to take into consideration the fact of the president being in power," Likhotan said.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

Health care needs free market plan

As Russia struggles to restore capitalism, apparatchiks still assault capitalists as "hooligans" or "wreckers." In the United States our officials use more sophisticated terms. Sen. David Pryor of Arkansas recently attacked what he called U.S. drug companies' "excessive and unconscionable profits." He has introduced legislation to create price "guidelines." As economist Alan Reynolds observed in the Nov. 11 Forbes: "In reality these guidelines would be price controls."

The U.S. drug industry is the world's largest and most innovative. It continues to discover new drugs to battle heart disease, cancer, AIDS and other illnesses. Why would anyone want to introduce Soviet-style price controls? Sen. Pryor is upset because, as his report stated, in 1990 the average Fortune 500 industry saw a profit margin of 4.6 percent, but the "average profitability of the top 10 drug companies more than tripled that amount: 15.5 percent."

This is a flim-flam worthy of the pre-glasnost Soviet statistical bureau. For one thing, profit is not as good a measure of a company's progress as its return on equity — the amount earned on a company's common stock investment. It's not surprising that the top 10 companies in the drug industry — or any industry — have decent returns on equity. Good research and management push the best to the top. Sen. Pryor's analysis failed to look at the next largest 21 companies, 10 of which lost money in 1991. Centocor, the eighteenth biggest drug company, suffered a 62.3 percent drop in equity; Cetus, twenty-eighth biggest, an 85.9 percent drop; Xoma, thirtieth biggest, an 89.6 percent drop.

The best companies profit; others lose. That's capitalism. Sen. Pryor's study notes that, since 1980, drug prices have risen at triple the rate of inflation. However, research and development costs have risen even faster. It now costs $231 million, on average, to develop a new drug. Food and Drug Administration approval takes an incredible 12 years.

Also, today's drugs simply are more efficacious than those introduced in the past. What would you rather have, yesterday's cheaper, less efficacious drugs — or today's more expensive life-savers? Drug costs have risen less quickly than overall medical costs. Drug spending per capita is still below most industrial countries, including Japan, France, Italy, England and Canada.

The senator's report unfavorably compares U.S. drug prices to those in Canada. Then why are thousands of Canadian patients fleeing their socialized medical system for America's system? And the U.S. spends less per capita on drugs than Canada, and less on drugs as a percentage of total health costs.

If Sen. Pryor truly wanted to cut costs, he would assault the FDA's sclerotic, life-taking approval process. Or he could introducing market-driven (not socialist) health-care reforms. Texas' senators should oppose Sen. Pryor's poisonous drug bill.

On the State of New Columbia

WASHINGTON — Let us have a tender moment of nostalgia, if you please. Here we are in the midst of the 102nd Congress, and here is the senior senator from Massachusetts. The gentleman is introducing his same old bill to provide statehood for the District of Columbia.

And here is the aging pundit, getting more senior all the time, writing his same old column of opposition. We grow old together, the senator and I. Twenty years slip by, but the French are right. The more things change, the more they stay the same.

This time around, Senator Kennedy has his same old buddies, good Democrats one and all — Simon of Illinois, Cranston of California, Metzbaum of Ohio, Harkin of Iowa. Paul Wellstone, the flaming young professor from Minnesota, has signed on for the buggy ride. Here we go again.

Kennedy & Co. have but one argument to support their bill (S.2023). The argument has some merit. Residents of the district pay the same federal taxes that others pay. They are equally subject to military service. They are bound, as others are, by every law in the United States Code. But!

But they have no voice in passing these laws. Voters in D.C. may vote for president; they may vote for their own city council; they may vote for a delegate in the House who may vote in committee but not on the floor. They may vote, in sum, for everything but senators and representatives.

This terribly aggrieves Sen. Kennedy, especially when he reflects, as he constantly reflects, that if the voters of D.C. were permitted to elect senators and representatives, they would elect Democratic senators and Democratic representatives. They would elect Democrats into the next millennium and probably into eternity. He finds the prospect pleasing.

Let us put the distasteful factor of politics to one side. The senator and his colleagues are above politics in this matter. They are standing on principle, a novelty, and will not be budged.

Those of us on the other side are equally principled, sad to say, and equally set in our ways. Besides, we have the best of the really relevant arguments. For beginners: The District of Columbia is a city, period. That is all it is. The district has none of the attributes we associate with statehood — farms, factories, fisheries, manufacturers, wide-open spaces.

Kennedy's bill would carve out a federal enclave running from Kennedy Center on the Potomac to the Library of Congress on Capitol Hill. The foreign embassies that line Massachusetts Avenue no longer would be situated in capital of the United States. They would be in limbo, somewhere in the State of New Columbia.

Within this federal enclave a few residents would remain. What would the senator do about them? In principle, and the senator is surely a man of principle, these persons still would suffer the unfairness that results from having no senator to call their own.

What would the senator do about the 23rd Amendment? The amendment is a great inconvenience. So long as it remains in the Constitution, it guarantees that voters in the "district constituting the seat of government of the United States" — that would be the Kennedy enclave — shall have at least three electoral votes for president. Is it right that 25 stand-pat refugees within the enclave should have three electoral votes?

Another inconvenience stands in the way. The Constitution vests in Congress the power "to exercise exclusive legislation in all cases whatsoever" within the district that is out seat of government. Will Congress subject the government to laws enacted by the State of New Columbia? It seems both unlikely and unworkable.

There is an answer to the problem perceived by the gentleman from Massachusetts. It lies in preserving the present 69 square miles of the district as the seat of government. Over this district Congress would continue to exercise exclusive legislative power in all cases whatsoever, but title to the 69 square miles would be ceded back to Maryland whence it came.

For political purposes, residents no longer would be the orphaned voters of D.C. They would be full-fledged citizens of the sovereign state of Maryland, entitled to vote for Maryland's governor and members of Congress.

Maryland would gain a seat in the House, plus all the crime and social squalor with which Washington, D.C., is so widely acclaimed. Strike that last sentence!

Let the same old debate begin anew.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, Dec. 9, the 343rd day of 1991. There are 22 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On Dec. 9, 1907, Christmas seals went on sale for the first time, in the Wilmington, Del., post office. The proceeds went to fight tuberculosis.

On this date:
In 1608, English poet John Milton was born in London.

In 1854, Alfred, Lord Tennyson's poem, "The Charge of the Light Brigade," was published in England.

In 1884, Levant M. Richardson of Chicago received a patent for the ball-bearing roller skate.

In 1940, British troops opened their first major offensive in North Africa during World War II.

In 1941, 50 years ago, China declared war on Japan, Germany and Italy.

In 1958, Robert H.W. Welch Jr. and 11 other men met in Indianapolis to form the anti-Communist John Birch Society.

Too many immigrants arrive

Watch the back door. Immigrants are entering the United States through the front door a million a year. Three times that many are entering illegally through the back door!

I am hearing from frustrated officers of our nation's Department of Immigration and Naturalization of corruption within the INS and a conspiracy of silence to cover it up.

Our nation is trying to absorb millions of illegal immigrants while increasing numbers of Americans are unemployed.

Our nation is suffering an overwhelming negative economic, ecological and social impact. The latter results from the acknowledged fact that many illegals are dealing drugs.

Agents in the front lines see our nation's failure to enforce the Immigration Nationality Act as an open invitation to an influx of the least desirable illegals, many of who are criminal aliens, convicted felons in their homeland.

Further encouraging the invasion are the generous health, education and welfare services that are claimed by illegals — and for which you pay.

Paul Harvey

Nationwide, 70 percent of refugees are on welfare.

Our nation is not enforcing employer sanctions, is not providing forgery-proof documents to distinguish legal immigrants from the fraudulent.

If our nation were invaded even by a handful of hostile outsiders with guns, we'd man the ramparts and drive them back into the sea.

Instead 3 million outsiders — many of them hostile and armed with fake documents — are intruding on our country every year.

Illegals are a major reason California faces a $12.6 billion shortfall in this year's budget.

The United States Border Patrol is deplorably under-funded by Congress. At any given time there are more police patrolling Capitol Hill in Washington, D.C., than there are along our entire 2,600-mile border with Mexico.

The relatively few illegals we catch and return to Mexico have only to try again the next day.

Or they may stay in the United States and get a lawyer who for a fee will soon provide them with a change of status.

And our INS actually issues work permits to these illegals so they can pay their lawyers while the courts are deciding.

The INS last year issued 251,000 such permits. Those workers are displacing American workers.

And this helps to explain how total employment has remained the same in the United States this past year, while unemployment has been increasing.

The United States is now receiving for permanent resettlement more immigrants and refugees than all the rest of the world combined.

And the first thing outsiders learn about American laws is that you don't have to obey them.

How Americans won World War II

By BEN WATTENBURG

KYOTO, Japan — Fifty years ago, on Dec. 7, 1941, Japanese planes pierced the dawn to attack America at Pearl Harbor. That set into motion events that ultimately made America what, in U.N.-speak, is called the "S.S.S." (Sole Surviving Superpower).

But nothing stands still. Now revisionists ask: Could it be that Japan really won World War II? After all, haven't the Japanese been buying up America, decimating the American automobile industry, running massive trade surpluses while America runs massive trade deficits? So, who won?

America did. Trust me; after five days in Japan I am surely one of the world's greatest experts.

Join me at a banquet in a private dining room of a fine restaurant in this beautiful and historic city. Thirty of us are sitting on low, legless chairs, the guests of a Japanese industrialist, a fellow participant in a conference that is exploring the Japanese-American relationship.

The food is magnificent. It turns out that the Kobe steak goes at about $200 per copy; the cost of the evening runs about $1,000 per person.

Kneeling beside us are geishas, and maikos — the young geisha apprentices studying the ancient arts of dance, ritual and conversation. They are dressed in brocaded kimonos, made up in stylized white-face, with elaborate upswept hairdos. Soon, they take to a stage to perform ceremonial dances.

They return. The restrained conversation resumes. Then our elegant maiko is asked: Does she go to the movies?

A broad smile pierces the white makeup. She goes. She likes RoboCop, Terminator II and, most of all, Pretty Woman. She is fascinated by its star, Richard Gere, whose pretty face adorns the kiosks of Tokyo, plugging couture goods.

Japan may, in certain regards, have the world's most successful economy. It is a lovely place. But in a way different from other nations, Japan is also a cultural colony of the American mind, albeit an ambivalent one. That's not what is supposed to happen to victors.

It's not just that the Japanese watch American movies (Europeans watch more). Or that so many advertisements in Japan use American faces. Or that the disk jockeys often chatter in English (there are plenty of Japanese rock groups, singing in Japanese). Or that 60 Minutes and 20/20 often appear on Japanese television (Japan has a vigorous domestic television business, and may be the world's leader in animation).

Nor is it that a social revolution in post-war Japan was called "My-home-ism" (as in "my home sweet home"). The suburban model for that was, brace yourself, the comic strip Blondie.

It isn't even that much of the Japanese domestic agenda for change is rooted in American concepts of individualism. Japan wants to lighten up. The Japanese want to change their education system away from the robot-memory standard, moving toward the open dialogue of an American classroom (while avoiding America's educational mistakes). Japanese women are on the path to fuller equality.

At root, the Japanese still measure themselves by the standard of their World War II adversaries. Japan is the Woody Allen/Rodney Dangerfield of nations. There is an ongoing identity crisis, remarkably public.

Japanese elites ask: What does the world think of us? What should we do, now that we are rich? Why do foreigners pick on us? Why don't we get respect? And, oh yes, who are we, anyway?

The questions are asked generally, but they are directed to America, where the Japanese fixation remains, long after Pearl Harbor. Many Japanese, egged on by their press, believe that "Japan-bashing" is America's favorite sport, going beyond trade disputes and into racial realms. The reciprocation is called "kenbei," a nasty form of America-bashing among some of the elites, who say America is failing.

We shall see about that. It's been said before, many times, and yet Uncle Sam ended up as the S.S.S. For now, in any event, the yardstick in Japan still remains America, the nation that won the war, changed the world and Japan.

Making the most of your real Christmas tree

I mentioned last week that I had seen a few shrubs in a home landscape that had received some tip damage apparently from our hard October freeze.

By now, I have had several "dead" shrubs brought to my attention. They are fairly common to see if you drive by some neighborhoods slowly. Presently leaves have been killed on some plants but the stems on some still appear to be green and alive. This area of the stems and limbs remaining alive and being able to regrow next spring just remains to be seen. Only time will tell us for sure how much damage has been done, and if these plants will survive next summer's hot, dry spell.

MAKE THE MOST OF YOUR REAL CHRISTMAS TREE

When families shop for a "real" Christmas tree, some simple steps can make for easier selection of a fresh, natural tree.

Some considerations include:

*Determine where in your home to display the tree. This will help determine the height needed and whether all four sides must be suitable for display.

*Freshness is important when selecting your tree. Hold a branch about six inches from the tip between thumb and forefinger, and pull your hand towards you as the branch slips through your fingers. Needles should adhere to the branch and not fall off in your hand.

*Lift the tree a couple of inches off the ground, then bring it down abruptly on the stump end. Dry green needles should not fall off in substantial numbers, but loss of some brown needles is normal.

*The tree should have a fragrance and good green color.

A Christmas tree is like a bouquet of roses, and you should care for it in your home as carefully as you would a cut flower. Here are some suggestions to keep it fresh, beautiful, fragrant and safe throughout the season.

For Horticulture
Joe Van Zandt

*If you buy your tree several days before it is to be set up and decorated, store it in a garage or on a cool porch where it is protected from the sun and wind until ready to decorate.

*If the tree is to be stored several days, make a straight cut across the base of the trunk about an inch from the end so that the tree can take up water. Store the tree upright with the bottom of the trunk in water.

*When the tree is moved to the house for decorating, make a fresh, straight cut across the stem about an inch above the original cut. Use a tree stand that holds plenty of water.

*Trees are thirsty. Depending on size, they may "drink" two pints to a gallon of water per day, so provide fresh water as needed.

*Place the tree away from heat sources, such as fireplaces, radiators and TV sets. Turn off the tree lights when you leave your home and before you retire at night.

*Do not use combustible decorations, and check all electric lights, cords and connections before you begin decorating. Do not use lights with worn or frayed cords.

A Christmas tree's usefulness can continue after the holiday season. The boughs can be removed and used for mulch. The tree also can be set upright in the yard as a bird feeder with food attached. If you have a fireplace, the needles add a pleasant aroma to the house as the tree is burned as wood.

Darlene Holmes and Blanche Jenkins were the winning combination in Shepard's Crook Nursing Agency elder health care photography contest.

Winning photographs being displayed at Lovett Library

Photographs from the first elder health care photo contest are now on display at Lovett Memorial Library, in the main library area.

Contest winners are - first - Darlene Holmes, who photographed Blanche Jenkins, a resident of Coronado Nursing Center; second - Bonnie Simpson, who photographed the late C.E. Simpson and Clint Ingram; third - Bonnie Simpson, a photographed entitled "Joe". First place paid $75; second place, $50 and third place $25.

The photo contest is in celebration of elder citizens and National Home Health Care Week. Another photo contest is scheduled for Valentine's Day. Photos are sought of individuals over 80 which exemplify the dignity and character of life.

Square House Museum offers World War II exhibit in December

Two changing exhibits will be opening at the Square House Museum in Panhandle on Dec. 7.

From the permanent collection will showcase objects in the collections of the Square House Museum which have not been exhibited recently or, in some cases, ever before. The exhibit will change every few months, and each exhibit will have a theme tying the objects together.

The first selection of items includes items of U.S. military clothing in service just prior to World War II. Titled, "December 6, 1941: On the Eve of War," the focal point of the case is a cavalry uniform. Of the many changes in the military resulting from WWII, one of the most profound occurred in the cavalry. A selection of army and navy headgear are also included in the case.

Selected recent acquisitions will exhibit items which have been donated to the Square House Museum within the last year.

Both exhibits are located in the Freedom Hall gallery. The museum is open Monday through Saturday, 8:30 a.m. - 5:30 p.m. and on Sunday, 1 - 5:30 p.m.

OH, MY ACHING BACK

If you're like a lot of people, you may have occasional or persistent back pain and wonder what caused it. You try to think of some incident in which you may have strained your back, and come up with nothing. But there must be some reason why you have back pains. The truth is that even the simplest of incidents may be the cause, such as reaching high on a shelf to get something. Or stooping suddenly to pick up something that has fallen. Or maybe you need some tips on good posture.

Whatever the cause, the problem may be that your spinal column is out of alignment. No pain-killing drug can cure the CAUSE. It can dull the pain for awhile and give you temporary relief. But if your back is out of alignment, the pain will probably not go away unless you get the treatment you need. No symptom can be more depressing than persistent back pain. Don't delay treatment when help is readily available.

Snake's 'intelligence' has little to do with smarts

DEARABBY: "Karen," whose letter said snakes make loving pets, must have a very unusual snake. She said she has a 6 1/2-foot boa constrictor that she used to take everywhere. It is very intelligent, she claims — it kisses her on command, and once it even chased away a prowler it heard coming through the sliding glass door.

Abby, snakes are not very intelligent — they have very small brains and cannot hear. They have no ears, but they feel "vibrations." Also, her snake is not "kissing" her — it is smelling her. A snake's sense of smell is its best weapon when in danger.

I also have a pet snake. His name is Leonard. He's a bull snake and I have had him since I was 11 years old. (I am now 38.) Leonard does not know his name, although I speak to him often. From what I have learned about snakes, Leonard has lived a very long time for a bull snake, and he is probably nearing the end of his life.

Although it may seem silly to be sentimental over a reptile, after having him around for 27 years, I will cry when he dies. — MICHELE DUNNING, ST. PAUL, MINN.

DEAR MICHELE: For more about snakes, read on:

DEAR ABBY: I fear your correspondent Karen has a very fertile imagination concerning the "intelligence" of snakes.

When I was a kid back in the old country — Hungary — I also had a

Dear Abby

pet snake, which I carried around inside my shirt to pull out when I met a girl I knew would scream when she saw it. (Most girls react with horror at the sight of a snake.)

Abby, I know something about snakes, and I can tell you that you can't teach a snake anything — much less have it respond to a request for a kiss. Snakes are far from intelligent. They have only "reptilian brains," barely adequate to respond to anything beyond their instinct to survive.

As for a snake going after a burglar who was attempting to enter through a sliding door — snakes cannot hear. They feel only vibrations, and they pick up smells with their tongues.

Furthermore, the only snake that appears to enjoy (or even tolerate) handling is the indigo snake — found in the southern part of the United States — and the poor critters are hunted to near extinction for this very reason.

ERWIN FUCHS, SEATTLE

DEAR ABBY: Your answer to

Karen, who wrote about her love of snakes, was not completely accurate. You said snakes make good pets because they're quiet, you don't have to walk them and you don't have to worry about anybody stealing them.

Wrong! About three years ago, my father's 6-foot-long boa constrictor was stolen — cage and all. But the thieves did not take the TV, stereo or the microwave. It just goes to show you that some people put a lot more value on snakes than you think.

The Oilers' Richard Johnson (23) and Bo Orlando (26) break up a pass intended for the Steelers' Louis Lipps (83) in the fourth quarter Sunday.

Oilers clinch first AFC Central Division crown

Pinkett helps put spark back into running game

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers found some third time charm Sunday.

After failing two weeks in a row to wrap up their first AFC Central Division title, Allen Pinkett breathed life into the running game with touchdown runs of 7 and 11 yards, leading the Oilers to a 31-6 victory to finally grab the division crown.

Losses to Pittsburgh (26-14) and Philadelphia (13-6) the past two weeks, kept the Oilers from clinching the title.

The Oilers (10-4) tied for the best record in the AFC Central Division in 1980 and 1990, but lost out in the tie-breaking process. The Oilers won four division titles in the American Football League in 1960, 1961, 1962 and 1967.

Oilers linebacker Al Smith provided late-game excitement with a 70-yard fumble return for a touchdown with 10:29 elapsed in the fourth quarter. Linebacker Lamar Lathon forced Pittsburgh quarterback Neil O'Donnell's fumble, setting up the return.

Pittsburgh dropped to a 5-9 record.

Houston carved out a 10-3 halftime lead on a 7-yard run by Pinkett with 12:42 elapsed in the first quarter and Al Del Greco's 24-yard field goal with 14:09 elapsed in the second quarter.

Pinkett gained 98 yards on 16 carries.

Pinkett's first quarter touchdown marked the first time the Oilers had scored in the opening period since they beat Cincinnati 35-3 on Oct. 27.

After Del Greco's kick, the Steelers drove through Houston's prevent defense for 41 yards to the Houston 36 where Gary Anderson booted a 54-yard field goal as time expired in the half.

Bo Orlando's third interception in as many games started a 96-yard Houston drive in the third quarter. Pinkett got the drive started with a 32-yard run on the first play, leading to a 16-yard touchdown pass from Warren Moon to Haywood Jeffires.

Moon completed three straight passes in the drive before hitting Jeffires in the end zone for the score with 6:21 elapsed in the period.

Anderson's second field goal, a 36-yarder with 13:00 elapsed in the third quarter, gave the Steelers kicker 1,000 career points, the 19th player in NFL history to reach at least 1,000 points.

Houston's defense forced Pittsburgh to settle for Anderson's field goal when Ray Childress sacked Neil O'Donnell for a 9-yard loss on third down. Childress had three second-half sacks.

He sacked O'Donnell in the fourth quarter, forcing a fumble that was recovered by Lee Williams at the Steelers 40.

The Oilers sacked O'Donnell seven times for 41 yards in losses.

After a slow start, Moon finished strong, completing 23 of 36 passes for 254 yards. Jeffires, the NFL's leading receiver, caught 6 passes for 77 yards and Drew Hill caught 3 passes for 97 yards.

O'Donnell connected on 46 of 30 passes for 188 yards.

Houston, which has lost 11 turnovers in the past 20 games, started the game by driving from their own 20 to the Steelers eight, where Pinkett fumbled after a 3-yard gain and Thomas Everett recovered at Houston's 8-yard line.

Cowboys lasso Saints, 23-14

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys and the New Orleans Saints are both 9-5 with two games to go in the NFL's regular season.

But Dallas' 23-14 win over the Saints Sunday left the two teams looking at the season from totally different perspectives — the Cowboys as high as any team can be; the Saints as low.

"We're playing with great confidence right now," said Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson, whose Cowboys, 1-15 just two years ago, won their third straight, guaranteed their first winning season since 1985 and moved a step closer to their first playoff berth since that season. And Michael Irvin, who set a single-season receiving record for the Cowboys, even uttered the magic words — "Super Bowl."

The Saints, meanwhile, are going in the opposite direction, losing for the fourth straight time after starting the season 9-1 and are now tied for first with Atlanta for first in the NFC West, a division they had two shots at clinching. For the third straight week, they lost when a win would have guaranteed a playoff spot.

Moreover, once again they entered the fourth quarter ahead and lost. They've now been outscored 51-7 in the final period of their four straight losses.

"The noose is tightening," said linebacker Pat Swilling.

The fates of the two teams were no better symbolized than by one series after Ken Willis' third field goal of the game, a 40-yarder, had put Dallas ahead 16-14 2:34 into the fourth quarter.

On the next series, Fred McAfee, the Saints' rookie running back, broke loose for 34 yards to the Cowboys' 39. Two runs netted two yards and then coach Jim Mora elected to go for a first down on fourth down rather than try to have Morten Andersen, who has kicked a 60-yard field goal this season, try a 54-yard field goal that could put the Saints ahead.

Steve Walsh's pass was deflected by Bill Bates and the next time New Orleans got the ball back, they were down by nine points and there was just 1:54 left.

The Cowboys drove 63 yards for a touchdown, 54 yards on the ground against what has been the league's second-best defense all season. Emmitt Smith, who finished with 112 yards in 27 carries for the Cowboys, had 50 of his yards on that drive and Tommie Agee capped it with a 4-yard TD run.

"I just felt we had a better shot at making the first down than having Morten make a 54-yard field goal," said Mora, who also passed up a 55-yarder in overtime against Atlanta two weeks ago, a game New Orleans eventually lost.

What hurt even more was the failure of the defense to hold the Cowboys after Walsh's fourth-down pass went away. The Saints, who were without Vince Buck and Reggie Jones and lost Toi Cook with a broken arm during the game, had just one true cornerback and had to play safety Gene Atkins there.

"The injuries hurt, but that's no excuse," Mora said.

Indeed, Smith became the first player in 19 games to rush for 100 yards against one of the game's best front sevens. "Any time someone makes 100 yards on you, it hurts," said Swilling.

But that wasn't the whole story.

Irvin had six catches for 101 yards, giving him 79 receptions for the season, three better than Herschel Walker's team record. It's a symbolic record — the trade of Walker to Minnesota for a dozen players and draft choices has allowed Johnson to rebuild the Cowboys as quickly as he has.

Stretching out

Pampa fullback Zach Thomas (32) stretches out for the last few yards of a 12-yard gallop nine minutes into the first quarter of the Class 4A quarterfinals Saturday night in Lubbock. Sweetwater's Randall Lepard (11) makes the tackle, but Steve Bredemeyer (76) makes the grab. Sweetwater ended Pampa's playoff run with a 19-12 victory.

Angels make biggest noise at baseball's winter meetings

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The California Angels made the big noise at the winter meetings Sunday, getting Von Hayes in a trade from Philadelphia a few hours after general manager Whitey Herzog launched a face-to-face tirade at Danny Tartabull's agent.

The Angels, who traded Devon White to Toronto in the opening deal of last year's meetings, again made the first move. They sent two top minor-leaguers, pitcher Kyle Abbott and outfielder Ruben Amaro Jr., to Philadelphia for Hayes.

Shortly before midnight, San Diego and Cincinnati finally completed a trade that had been in the works for weeks, with the Reds sending pitcher Randy Myers to the Padres for all-purpose player Bip Roberts and a player to be named later.

Hayes, 34, had been on the trading block for several seasons. He played only 77 games last year because of a broken right arm sustained when he was hit a pitch from Tom Browning, and batted just .225 with 21 RBIs.

"Hayes has not hit a home run since September 1990. Despite that, the Angels hope he can fill some of the power void left by Dave Winfield, who was let go after hitting a team-leading 28 homers.

"We were 13th in the league in runs scored and 13th in on-base percentage," Herzog said. "We know he's coming off a bad year. But he can help us in those areas."

Herzog said Hayes will take Winfield's spot in right field, for now. The Angels are struggling to re-sign free agent first baseman Wally Joyner, and Herzog said Hayes could play there if necessary. Joyner's representative, meanwhile, met with Kansas City in the afternoon.

"We're not finished. We expect to do a lot of things this week," Herzog said.

But signing Tartabull, the premier free agent remaining, may not be one of them — at least as far as Herzog is concerned.

Herzog is still smarting over his dealings with Dennis Gilbert, the agent who represents Bobby Bonilla and Tartabull. The Angels wanted Bonilla, but Herzog felt Gilbert used him in order to raise the $29 million offer that Bonilla accepted last week from the New York Mets.

So Herzog, as blunt a baseball man as there is, told Gilbert so: He cursed the agent in the Fontainebleau Hotel lobby in a brief, but loud, outburst.

It should be pointed out that Herzog and Gilbert go way back. Gilbert played for the Mets' minor league team in Visalia in 1969, when Herzog was the Mets' farm director.

"We know each other well," Gilbert said.

Later, Herzog's voice was lower, but his message was the same: Tartabull, who had been high on the Angels' wish list, wasn't hot anymore.

"If he changed agents, I might be interested," Herzog said. "I'm never going to make an offer to any of Dennis Gilbert's players."

"I didn't like what happened in the Bonilla situation," he said. "I was a little upset at that."

Gilbert, who also represents Jose Canseco, Bret Saberhagen and other top players, said the whole thing was a misunderstanding.

"I adore Whitey Herzog. I really do," Gilbert said. "If he thinks I used him, then there's some miscommunication. I didn't do that."

Either way, Gilbert and an Angels' official — not Herzog — were to meet late Sunday night, just to get back on friendly terms. And, with the Angels needing another hitter, Herzog left open the possibility that he might have Gilbert present an offer to the Angels about Tartabull, instead of the other way around.

Herzog's trade livened a day otherwise rife with rumors. At least the Reds and Padres were able to get their business finished.

Myers, 29, lost his job as Cincinnati's stopper to Rob Dibble, the reliever with whom he shared the MVP award of the NL playoffs in 1990. Myers, a lefty, was 6-13 with six saves and a 3.55 ERA in a season in which he made 12 starts.

"I think he was used to being the king of the hill and last year the roles reversed and it got to him mentally," Padres general manager Joe McIlvaine said.

McIlvaine said Myers will be restored to his role as a stopper, a move that will leave Padres lefty Craig Lefferts in limbo.

Roberts, 28, fills Cincinnati's need for a leadoff hitter who can play left field.

Roberts batted .281 with 32 RBIs and 26 stolen bases. He hit above .300 in his previous two seasons.

Roberts was told last week by his agent that he had been traded to Cincinnati. Only, it wasn't official.

"The deal took a lot of time simply because we did a lot of work on it," McIlvaine said. "We even had a third team involved at one point."

The trade was the Reds' third deal in the off-season. They previously sent Eric Davis to Los Angeles for pitchers Tim Lincecum and John Wetteland, and got pitcher Greg Swindell from Cleveland for pitchers Jack Armstrong and Scott Scudler.

In other moves that might or might not be pending, the Boston Red Sox were said to be shopping Mike Greenwell, the Seattle Mariners were listening to offers for Erik Hanson and Harold Reynolds and the Mets were figuring out what to do with Kevin McReynolds and Dave Magadan.

Also, the Chicago White Sox were discussing a deal to send Sammy Sosa to Houston, the New York Yankees were pursuing free agent Steve Buechele and San Francisco was after free agent Bob Walk.

While other general managers talked, Herzog acted. This is his first winter with the Angels, and he wasted no time in stamping his familiar trade trademark on the meetings.

In Hayes, the Angels got a player who has hit .270 with 139 home runs and 667 RBIs in a 10-year career. For all that, though, he's never quite lived up to all the billing he got when the Phillies traded Julio Franco and four others to Cleveland to get him after the 1982 season.

Hayes has never made an All-Star team, despite a few good seasons. His best year was 1986, when he hit .305 with 46 doubles, 19 home runs and 98 RBIs.

"We still think Von Hayes has two or three good years left," Phillies general manager Lee Thomas said. "We're a little leary of doing this, but we just felt he had to get some new pastures."

The Angels added Hayes' left-handed bat — and also his hefty salary. He made $2.2 million last season and is heading into the final year of his contract.

Lakers' defense handcuffs Mavericks

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — A.C. Green and Byron Scott led a balanced offense with 16 points each and the Los Angeles Lakers' defense held Dallas to a club record-low 28-point first half Sunday night en route to a 103-88 victory.

The Lakers, 7-0 at the Forum since Magic Johnson announced his retirement on Nov. 7, have won 12 of their last 15 to tie Golden State for first place in the Pacific Division. Johnson has accompanied his former teammates on the bench for their last five home victories.

Dallas lost its fourth straight game. Derek Harper, the Mavericks' leading scorer with 20 points, had 11 points in the third quarter and led an 18-10 rally that deflated the Lakers' 22-point cushion to 64-50 with 4:53 left in the period. But the Mavericks got no closer until the final two minutes. Los Angeles answered Dallas' threat with nine straight points — including four long jumpers. Sam Perkins finished with 14 points and 11 rebounds.

Without injured reserve guard Fat Lever, one-third of the NBA's highest-scoring backcourt trio with Harper and Rolando Blackman, the Mavericks missed 28 of 41 shots in the first half and trailed by 22 points. Lever missed his second straight game with a bruised left knee.

The 28 points represented the second-lowest total the Lakers have ever allowed in a half, two more than they surrendered

Malone leads Bucks past Spurs, 102-83

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Frank Hamblen wore the look of a relieved man. It took three games to get his first NBA coaching victory with the Milwaukee Bucks and now he could savor the moment.

"This feels a lot better. It will be a lot of fun going to practice," Hamblen said after the Bucks beat the San Antonio Spurs 102-83 Sunday night behind a season-high 19 steals and the play of veteran center Moses Malone.

"I think they wanted to get it for me and I appreciate it," said Hamblen, a long-time NBA assistant who replaced Del Harris on Dec. 4.

And beating the Spurs was especially pleasing because Hamblen was once an assistant under Spurs coach Larry Brown in Denver.

"It was a special win for me because it was the first one and because I coached with Larry Brown for years. I think he's one of the best coaches in the game. Just going against him ..."

In Sunday's only other game, the Los Angeles Lakers dumped Dallas 103-88.

The 36-year-old Malone had 21 points and 14 rebounds, outplaying Spurs center

David Robinson, who is 10 years younger. Robinson finished with 19 points, 9 rebounds and 6 steals.

"It doesn't make any difference who I play against. I just come to play every night," Malone said. "This is a great feeling for the coach. Now we just have to keep on playing."

Dale Ellis added 17 points and ex-Spur Alvin Robertson triggered a third-quarter surge as the Bucks sent the Spurs to their fourth straight loss.

"We just lost our confidence," said San Antonio forward Sean Elliott, who had 18 points. "We wanted to play tough defense and we went down and missed too many shots. We need to find a way to pick it up," he said.

The Bucks enjoyed a 31-13 advantage at the free-throw line where Malone hit 13 of 14.

"I thought we were the most aggressive team and that's why we got to the line," Hamblen said.

Robertson made three steals, had four points and two assists to spur a 14-4 third-quarter run as Milwaukee opened up a 66-53 lead with 5:56 to go in the period.

Robertson finished with five steals. San Antonio chopped the margin to seven but a 3-pointer by Jeff Grayer helped the Bucks build the lead back to 74-62 entering the final quarter.

Danny Schayes then had eight points and Ellis added six in a 14-5 spurt to begin the fourth quarter and Milwaukee had an 88-67 lead with seven minutes left.

The Bucks played without starting guard Jay Humphries, who will undergo tests today to determine the cause of neck problems that are sending pain down his arm.

San Antonio was without former Buck Terry Cummings, who is on the injured list with a fractured rib. Antoine Carr played on a sore ankle.

"They got every loose ball," Brown said. "We're short-handed but that's no excuse. We're going through a bad period. We gave the game away. It was a discouraging loss."

Brown didn't really want to talk about Hamblen's first victory at his expense, but relented.

"He's a terrific guy. I'm glad to see them move up a guy who's been in the league," he said.

Arkansas takes plunge in basketball poll

By HARRY KING
AP Sports Writer

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Nolan Richardson tried to tell 'em. Few would listen.

When the preseason poll came out, Arkansas was No. 3. Richardson, the Razorback coach, said thanks, but the ranking was based more on potential than reality. His team, he said, will be much better in January, February, even March.

Then Indiana lost and Arkansas was No. 2. Since then, the Razorbacks have lost to Michigan State in Hawaii and Missouri in Fayetteville and plummeted in the poll.

Now those who wouldn't listen to Richardson want to know why.

Richardson tried to tell 'em. He pointed out that Todd Day, who averaged almost 21 points per game last year, was on disciplinary suspension for the first semester. He also had a half-dozen other players suspended for a game or two and said it would take a while to get in sync.

"Because of the suspensions, we'll be patching a team together until January," he said before the season began.

"We're still searching," Richardson said Saturday night after an 11-point loss to Missouri. "In time we will have a good basketball team but we're not there yet."

"We're not the type of team we want to be. We'll struggle a little for a while. We're still searching for chemistry."

Arkansas started the season with a high ranking because Day, Lee Mayberry and Oliver Miller were returning from a 34-4 team that was one game from the Final Four. But Day is in coat and tie and Miller is still fighting a weight problem.

And, Richardson may be missing Arlyn Bowers and Ron Huery more than even he thought. Those two seniors were a big part of last year's chemistry — Bowers, a tenacious, hard-nosed guard and Huery, arguably the best sixth man in the country.

Robert Shepherd, who is starting in Bowers' spot, made three of 13 against Missouri. A half-dozen players off the bench contributed a total of 16 points — half of those by Warren Linn.

Mayberry scored 19 against Missouri, but played 34 minutes and looked tired toward the end.

"We need to get some help for Lee," Richardson said. "When we get Todd back, it should make a big difference for Lee."

Anthony Peeler, who led Missouri with 32 points, agreed.

"They miss him a lot in the 3-point range and making things happen," Peeler said. "They don't have the player who can dribble to the middle like Todd Day and make things happen and come off to Oliver and toss it down there. They are going to be a different ballclub when he comes back."

Vikings win 26-24 squeaker over Buccaneers

By FRED GOODALL
AP Sports Writer

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — It took the Tampa Bay Buccaneers to make Herschel Walker look like his old self again Sunday night.

Walker sprinted 71 yards for a touchdown on the last play of the first quarter and Fuad Revez kicked four field goals — two of them 50-yards — as the Minnesota Vikings kept alive their slim playoff hopes with a 26-24 victory over the Buccaneers.

"I'm not even thinking about the playoffs," quarterback Rich Gannon said, mindful that the Vikings have to win remaining games against the Rams and Packers and get a lot of help from other teams to qualify for a wild-card berth.

"We've just got to win — that's all. We've got two games left and we want to hopefully win both of them and see what happens," he added. "That's really not in our control. All we can do is finish strong and hopefully something good will happen."

Minnesota improved to 7-7 in its first game since coach Jerry Burns announced he will retire at the end of the season. Tampa Bay fell to 2-12 despite rallying from a 17-point deficit to make the Vikings scramble in the closing minutes.

"We've been down this road before," said Tampa Bay coach Richard Williamson.

"We talked all week about believing in ourselves and playing with respect, and I think we did just that," Williamson added.

Walker had a season-high 126 yards on 16 carries, while Terry Allen picked up 64 yards on 12 attempts.

They're not as bad as their record.

The first half didn't do much to prove their point, although Vinny Testaverde did lead an 80-yard scoring drive in the final two minutes that changed the momentum after Minnesota built a 20-3 lead on Walker's touchdown, Gannon's 5-yard TD pass to Mike Jones and Revez's field goals of 50 and 40 yards.

The Bucs quarterback completed seven of eight passes in the march and Tampa Bay actually scored three times before the points were allowed.

An illegal substitution penalty on Tampa Bay's Charles McRae, a tackle who lined up as a tight end without reporting to the referee, wiped out an apparent touchdown run by Testaverde. Then, instant replay reversed what officials on the field had ruled a 12-yard TD reception by Gary Anderson.

Harvesters capture Hays City Shootout

By TOM GARDNER
Associated Press Writer

HAYS, Kan. — Pampa breezed by Manhattan, Kan., 76-54, Saturday night to win the Hays City Shootout.

The Harvesters stretched their unbeaten record to 8-0 with the victory.

"Our boys did a good job," said Pampa assistant coach Mark Elms. "Manhattan has one of the biggest schools in the state of Kansas and we rose to the challenge."

The Harvesters led by 5 (34-29) at halftime and extend that margin to 16 (55-39) after three quarters.

Jeff Young was Pampa's top scorer with 21 points, followed by Cedrick Wilbon with 16, David Johnson, 14; Randy Nichols, 12; Paul Brown, 7; Ryan Irwin, 2; Dwight Nickelberry, 2 and Brent Skaggs, 2.

Jason Barth scored 18 points to lead Manhattan.

Wilbon and Young were both named to the all-tournament team while Johnson made the all-academic team.

Pampa's Lady Harvesters also won the Hays City Shootout in the girls' division, defeating Manhattan, 58-34, in the finals Saturday night.

Nikki Ryan was named the tournament's most inspirational player while both Ryan and Amber Seaton were named to the all-tournament team. Kristen Becker was named to the all-academic team.

Both Pampa teams are entered in the Sweet 16 Invitational Thursday through Friday in Edmond, Okla.

The Harvesters meet Oklahoma City Douglast at 5 p.m. Thursday in first-round action. The Lady Harvesters open against Edmond, Okla.

Foreman ready to take on all comers

By TOM GARDNER
Associated Press Writer

RENO, Nev. (AP) — George Foreman's choice of opponents is like his diet. He'll take on anybody.

It will keep him in shape for one more shot at the heavyweight title and it will take care of any potential contenders who might get in his way.

"There's no doubt I'll get my title shot," Foreman said Saturday after disposing of Jimmy Ellis midway through the third round. "I'll close the door for the other guys who may be going for it."

Foreman, 42, outgunned his younger and less experienced opponent and nearly put his 27-year-old foe away before referee Richard Steele stopped the bout at 1:33 of the third round.

The two met in the main event of a card that also saw Rafael Pineda of Colombia take the vacant International Boxing Federation junior welterweight title from Roger Mayweather with a crunching left hook in the ninth round that left Mayweather on the canvas for more than two minutes.

"I threw the punch with my heart and soul," Pineda said.

Pineda, 27-1 with 25 knockouts, assumed the title vacated when Julio Cesar Chavez moved up from the 140-pound ranks. Pineda was ranked No. 1 by the IBF.

No. 2-ranked Mayweather's backpedaling for eight rounds brought boos from the crowd, and single-punch exchanges drew a warning to both fighters from referee Mills Lane in the ninth to start mixing it up. Pineda's lunging left a minute later dropped the Las Vegas fighter, 40-7.

It was the first outing for Foreman, 70-3 with 66 knockouts, since he lost a 12-round decision to Evander Holyfield for the heavyweight title in April.

Since he's not the champion, Foreman said before the fight he's not restricted to fighting contenders and can take on anybody he wants to while he prepares for another title bid.

Foreman, of Marshall, Texas, will turn 43 on Jan. 10.

He won the heavyweight championship from Joe Frazier in 1973 and lost it 21 months later to Muhammad Ali. He left the ring in 1977 for the ministry and returned 10 years later.

He had won 24 fights in his comeback, all but one by knockout, before his close loss to Holyfield.

Ellis, 16-1-1, of Redondo Beach, Calif., was staggered early in the second of 10 scheduled rounds and Steele appeared to be on the verge of stopping the fight then, with Ellis hanging onto Foreman following a pounding of rights and lefts to the head and body.

Ellis got in a few licks of his own early in the third round before the battering resumed and Steele stepped between the fighters.

"The guy's got a chin like a piece of stone," Foreman said. "He went longer with me than the great Joe Frazier."

Foreman was almost twice as busy as his jabs snapped between Ellis' gloves.

Foreman threw 173 punches and landed 122, compared to 91 punches thrown by Ellis and 26 that connected.

In other preliminary bouts, Kennedy McKinney of Las Vegas took a split decision from Max Gomez of Denver. McKinney improved to 19-0-1 in the junior featherweight ranks while Gomez dropped to 9-2.

Jimmy Ellis' brother Sean of Redondo Beach, Calif., knocked out Jeffrey Rice of Oklahoma City 1:33 into their scheduled four-round fight to remain unbeaten in three cruiserweight fights. Rice fell to 2-4-1.

Kenny Keene of Boise, Idaho, bloodied Miguel Reyes of Los Angeles for three rounds before referee Vic Drakulich stopped the fight at 2:41 of the fourth in a fight scheduled for six. It was the first loss for Reyes in 10 fights. Keene remained unbeaten in 11 fights with nine knockouts.

Junior welterweight Vincent Phillips of Las Vegas, 22-0 with 15 knockouts, stopped Jesus Rojas of Los Angeles, 24-7, with three knockdowns in the sixth of their scheduled eight-rounder. A battered Mayweather was at ringside to cheer on Phillips in the night's final bout.

Langer breaks record in winning Million Dollar Challenge

By TOM COHEN
Associated Press Writer

SUN CITY, South Africa (AP) — It was the best of times for Bernhard Langer, the worst for Ian Woosnam and David Frost.

Langer completed a record-breaking performance Sunday to win the Million Dollar Golf Challenge at 16-under-par, five strokes ahead of American Mark Calcavecchia.

He also was a whopping 28 shots in front of Frost, the two-time defending champion who limped in at 12-over 300, 16 strokes higher than his winning total a year earlier.

The 34-year-old Langer set three tournament records and tied two others en route to grabbing golf's richest top prize — $1 million.

Langer's total of 272 broke the old record of 274. His 54-hole total of 200 also was a record and came in his record sixth appearance in the tournament.

He joined Seve Ballesteros and Frost as the only two-time winners. Langer's second-round 65 also tied the tournament mark for lowest round on the 7,729-yard Gary Player Country Club course.

After the first round, Langer predicted that 10- to 14-under would win. He beat that total, and needed to because Calcavecchia, who began the day 10 strokes back, fired six birdies with one bogey to make it close.

Langer said his big lead at the start of play Sunday left him undecided on how to approach the round.

"I looked at the pins and said, 'Well, I'd better be aggressive,'" said Langer, who also won the tournament in 1985.

Aggressive he was. For the second straight day, he blasted a long second shot to the island green of the par-5 ninth hole to set up a birdie.

"I just kept hanging in there, making some birdies and the occasional bogey," Langer said of his even-par final round that followed a 68, 65 and 67.

"I surprised myself a little bit" in the tournament, he said. "It was pretty amazing golf."

Calcavecchia pulled within four shots of the lead with a birdie on No. 16. A bogey on the 18th, which he double-bogeyed Saturday, gave him a 67 and 277 total.

"If someone told me I'd come here and shoot 11 under par, I'd have laughed," he said. "On top of that, to lose by five or six, I would have really laughed."

AIDS activist Bergalis dies; received virus from dentist

FORT PIERCE, Fla. (AP) — Kimberly Bergalis, who caused a national stir when she stepped forward to say she had contracted AIDS from her dentist, died at home with her family.

Her father said her death means "the virus, politicians and public health officials can't do her any more harm."

Though visibly in pain, Miss Bergalis went before television cameras in October to argue for mandatory testing of health care workers and patients before invasive procedures, a position opposed by AIDS activists, the American Medical Association and the American Dental Association.

"I did not do anything wrong, yet I am being made to suffer like this," she told Congress.

Miss Bergalis died at her family's home in Fort Pierce, a coastal town 100 miles north of Miami. She was 23.

Her parents, George and Anna, said she had no longer been able to eat or speak and was having trouble breathing. As they put her to bed Saturday night, they told her that perhaps it was time to stop fighting.

"My wife said, 'We want you to go to sleep, get a peaceful rest and think about whether you want to face all this suffering and torment again tomorrow,'" Bergalis said.

"I think she had been ready to die for quite some time, but she was worried about whether her mom and sisters and I were ready to accept it," he added.

Miss Bergalis shocked the nation in September 1990 when she came forward to say she was "patient A," the first known U.S. case of a patient who contracted AIDS during a medical procedure. She became the focus of a national crusade for mandatory testing of health professionals.

"The world has lost a great deal, but the world will never, ever forget how brave and how caring and how determined that lady was," said Barbara Webb, a retired English teacher who is among four others also infected by the late Dr. David Acer.

"Her courageous spirit and her determination to help others avoid her own fate touched Florida and the nation," Gov. Lawton Chiles said Sunday.

Miss Bergalis was born Jan. 19, 1968, in Tamaqua, Pa., and moved to Florida with her family in 1978.

She graduated with a business degree from the University of Florida and was pursuing post-graduate study in actuary science when she got sick in late 1989.

Doctors initially rejected the idea that Acer had infected patients, but in January the U.S. Centers for Disease Control determined that Bergalis' particular strain of HIV, the virus that causes AIDS, almost identically matched Acer's.

Acer, who learned he had full-blown AIDS in September 1987, pulled two of Miss Bergalis' teeth that December and treated about 2,000 others before he died. He died in September 1990.

It hasn't been determined exactly how the virus traveled from his body to the patients.

Miss Bergalis had fought the progress of the disease with drugs, but declined further treatment after a painful blood transfusion in April failed to improve her health.

The effort backfired. The "Bergalis Bill," sponsored by Rep. William Dannemeyer, R-Calif., never made it out of committee, and Miss Bergalis was accused of fanning hysteria over the disease.

Still she continued her crusade.

"Do I blame myself? I sure don't. I never used IV drugs, never slept with anyone, and never had a blood transfusion," Miss Bergalis wrote in a letter to a state health official on April 6.

Miss Bergalis is survived by her father and mother; sisters, Allison, 20, and Sondra, 11; and her grandparents, Bernard and Helen Bergalis of Tamaqua, Pa.

Visitation was scheduled for today at the St. Anastasia Catholic Church in Fort Pierce. A funeral Mass and burial were scheduled for Thursday in Tamaqua, Pa.
