City crews begin flagging streets marked for repairs

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

City of Pampa Street Department employees, with the assistance of other city employees, have begun flagging streets around the city that would be repaired, improved or paved if a Jan. 18 $4 million street bond issue passes.

The bond issue will not raise property taxes, City Manager Glen Hackler has explained, because of another issue on the ballot that would increase the sales tax by a half-cent.

That second issue would also decrease current property taxes by 7 cents, from 66 to 59 cents per $100 valuation, in addition to heading off any increase due to the street bonds, officials have explained.

City Engineer Richard Morris said, "The little flags you see (on traffic signs) are showing the routes that will be on the bond issue. What we are trying to do is let people be aware of the areas that will be improved in case there are any questions."

Those streets include all or part of Browning, Francis, Kingsmill, Foster, Ballard, Duncan, Sumner, Harvester, Starkweather, Frost, Kentucky, 23rd, Tyng, Cuyler, Russell, Brunow, Davis, Denver, Doyle, Finley, Henry, Malone, Murphy, Rider, Scott and Wilcox.

Improvements could include rebuilding damaged streets or strip paving dirt streets, Morris said. "When you travel to Abilene or Houston and people hear you are from Pampa, eventually they will say something about, 'Oh yeah, that's the city with those terrible streets; worst streets I've ever driven on,'" Morris stated.

City commissioners have said after decades of citizens complaining about the atrocious condition of local thoroughfares, the Jan. 18 election will finally give people the chance to do something about them without a property tax increase.

"We want to give people the chance to see which streets are involved and give them the chance to ask us any questions they have," Morris said.

He emphasized that no brick streets will be touched in the improvement project.

"We are definitely not going to do anything to the brick streets because of their historical value," Morris said.

Any civic or church group interested in having a speaker from the city come to explain the city's plans or field questions can contact City Hall at 669-5700, Morris explained.

"We want to meet with anyone interested in knowing more about the project," Morris said.

In addition, maps are available at City Hall that show exactly which blocks are involved in the plan.

Texas Water Development Board awards CRMWA grant for supply planning study

AUSTIN - The Texas Water Development Board recently awarded a $68,650 grant to the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority for a regional water supply planning study.

The planning area includes the cities of Amarillo, Borger, Brownfield, Lamesa, Levelland, Lubbock, O'Donnell, Pampa, Plainview, Slaton and Tahoka.

The one-year study will evaluate the feasibility of alternative water supplies in the area north of the Canadian River to supplement the water supply from Lake Meredith. The study will also evaluate methods of improving the water quality of Lake Meredith, the major water supply source for the area.

The Authority and its 11 member cities in the area will participate in the study. The Authority will provide matching funds for the study.

Gorbachev urges legislature to give commonwealth power

By ALAN COOPERMAN
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) - Mikhail S. Gorbachev, bowing to harsh political reality, today urged the national Supreme Soviet legislature to hold a final session to transfer power to Boris Yeltsin's new commonwealth, a report said.

Meanwhile, reflecting a widening split in the top Russian leadership, Yeltsin's vice president made a stinging attack on his boss, charging in a newspaper article published today that the Russian government is a rudderless, disorganized "hotbed of intrigue."

The attack by the Russian vice president, Alexander Rutskoi, threatened the stability of Yeltsin's own government as he tries to found a new Commonwealth of Independent States to replace the Soviet Union.

The developments came as Secretary of State James A. Baker III toured republics seeking assurances that the 27,000 Soviet nuclear warheads will remain under tight control and not be sold or transferred to other countries. Today the chairman of Byelorussia's parliament said his republic, one of four in the crumbling Soviet Union with nuclear weapons on its soil, would become a nuclear-free zone.

The Tass news agency said Gorbachev called for the national Supreme Soviet legislature to hold a final session to "announce a transfer of power to the new inter-state structure." It said Gorbachev's call came in a letter to leaders of the republics that plan to join the new commonwealth.

Legislatures of the three founding republics - Russia, Ukraine and Byelorussia - have already approved the commonwealth pact.

The six republics expected to join the commonwealth Saturday are Kazakhstan, Uzbekistan, Turkmenistan, Tadzhikistan, Kirgizia and Armenia. Moldavia and Azerbaijan also have expressed strong interest in joining, while Georgia is still considering its position.

Despite Gorbachev's call for a final session, however, the national legislature has had a difficult time even finding a quorum, now that Russia, Byelorussia and Ukraine have recalled deputies and given them mere observer status.

The call for a final session was more of a symbolic gesture than a practical one, since Yeltsin and Gorbachev agreed Tuesday to dissolve the Soviet Union by year's end, according to Soviet media. It was decided that Soviet central government ministries and departments will either be dismantled or given to Russia.

It reportedly was agreed that the Kremlin - the ancient fortress in the heart of Moscow - would be transferred to Russian jurisdiction, as would the Soviet State Bank.

Even the Soviet flag is to go, the reports said. Yeltsin said in an interview published in Tuesday's editions of the Italian newspaper La Repubblica that "There will be no more red flag."

Gorbachev had bitterly opposed the new commonwealth, warning repeatedly - and as recently as Tuesday - that the breakup of the union would lead to catastrophe, violence and even possible "dictatorship."

But his aides said Tuesday that the 60-year-old president would accept the new commonwealth once the parliaments of the participating republics ratify it, and will then decide his own role.

The agreement between Gorbachev and Yeltsin left open the question of whether Gorbachev would resign when the Soviet Union is liquidated or remain in some capacity with the new commonwealth, although he has declined any "ceremonial" post.

The United States, for its part, has been concentrating on forging new links with the new commonwealth and its individual states.

Baker flew today to Minsk, the Byelorussian capital, where Byelorussian leader Stanislav Shushkevich pledged today that his republic would be free of nuclear weapons.

That followed a promise a day earlier from Kazakh President Nursultan Nazarbayev that the four republics where strategic weapons are based would sign an agreement to provide centralized control of the nuclear arsenal. Those republics are Russia, Kazakhstan, Ukraine and Byelorussia.

After visiting Byelorussia, Baker flew on to Ukraine.

Yeltsin's vice president, Rutskoi, stepped up his criticism of the Russian president's radical economic reform program. He told Nezavisimaya Gazeta, or the Independent Newspaper, that he has not been able to talk frankly with Yeltsin for six months.

The vice president, a former army colonel, is an Afghanistan war hero with wide support in the military and among former members of the now-banned Communist Party. Rutskoi he said he has no plans to resign as vice president despite his differences with Yeltsin.

Yeltsin has promised that the new commonwealth will provide true independence for the 12 republics of the former Soviet Union and will turn around the economy after one more rough year.

Humanitarian aid already is arriving to help the disintegrating superpower get through the winter. In part of the relief effort being organized to help Soviets get through the winter, cargo planes flew into Moscow with about $10 million of American medicine and equipment for children's hospitals.

In Brussels, Belgium, meanwhile, officials said today that Baker would likely propose using the NATO alliance to help channel humanitarian aid to the Soviet Union. The officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Baker was expected to make the appeal at a meeting Thursday of foreign ministers of the 16-nation North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

The rapid-fire changes in Moscow were causing confusion over who speaks for the former Soviet Union. NATO officials said previously that Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze had been invited to the meeting of the North Atlantic Cooperation Council, a new forum for NATO's former adversaries in Eastern Europe, which holds its first meeting Friday.

But today a Soviet official in Brussels, who also spoke anonymously, confirmed that Shevardnadze would not attend. He said the Soviet ambassador to Belgium, Nikolai Afanassievsky, would probably represent the nation.

The Soviet flag towers above the Kremlin in Moscow today. A spokesman for Russian President Boris Yeltsin said the Soviet Red Flag probably will be lowered for the last time on New Year's Eve as the Russian government takes over control of the Kremlin grounds.

City recycling center to have grand opening

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

Grand opening of the Recycling Buy-Back Center is set for noon Thursday at 707 Municipal Drive in Hobart Street Park.

The center will accept donations of glass, tin cans and plastics (with recycle symbols 1 and 2) and will take donations or will purchase aluminum cans.

The idea is a joint venture of the city of Pampa and Clean Pampa Inc.

Rick Stone, city of Pampa sanitation director, who has overseen the city's end of the project, said Tuesday that last minute details on the two-building center will be completed this morning. A tour for local and area dignitaries was scheduled this morning with a reception following at the Pampa Community Building.

Linda Wyatt with the Texas Department of Health in Lubbock was scheduled to be guest speaker at the ceremony this morning. Other officials with the Department of Health were also scheduled to be on hand, as well as members of the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission, city and area officials, and people in the recycling business.

The recycling center will be open from noon to 5 p.m. on Thursdays and from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Fridays and Saturdays. Organizers ask that residents only present recyclable items when the facility is open and staffed.

Greg Dankworth, owner of Scrap Processing in Amarillo, will take all of the recyclable material collected at the Pampa facility and get it back into the recycling mainstream. Dankworth is also providing the can crusher and some bins.

The local Wal-Mart agreed to move its recyclable bin to the new location where it will have better supervision since the location will be manned for 2 1/2 days a week.

The center is the only location in Pampa that accepts glass, plastic and tin cans. Stone said the idea of the recycling center is to provide a courtesy to the residents.

"We're not here to hurt anybody or put anybody out of business. This is not a money maker for the city," Stone said. "It's a courtesy thing and we're trying to promote recycling because there are rules and regulations coming down on the recycling act."

By 1994, cities in Texas are supposed to be recycling at least 40 percent of their solid waste. Stone said this facility will help encourage residents to get an early start on the recycling regulations.

Pamela Locke, executive coordinator of Clean Pampa Inc., said earlier, "Our interest is landfill avoidance, therefore conserving as much land as we can and getting recycled commodities back into the mainstream."

Stone said the cost to the city and Clean Pampa to establish the center was minimal. The little blue building at the site was formerly the landfill office and was moved by the sanitation department when a new building was constructed for office space at the landfill.

The other building, a 10x20 facility, at the site was built by the sanitation department after it was designed by Clean Pampa board member John Thacker. Stone said costs associated with that building was also minimal.

Stone was instrumental in the city's negotiations with Scrap Processing to help the city and Clean Pampa establish the recycling buy-back facility.

Scrap Processing has a contract at the city of Pampa landfill to haul off white goods (refrigerators, washers, dryers, etc.), and in the six months that Stone has been with the city, he said 250 tons of white goods have been hauled from the landfill.

Other recycling efforts at the city's landfill include using a chipper to chip all the tree trimmings and the possibility of a grant being awarded to help with a large composting operation. The city has also established a used oil repository for residents to place used oil for recycling. The repository is located across from the new recycling center near the city service center.

Organizers of the Recycling Buy-Back Center said one goal would be to create enough usage of the facility to have it staffed five days a week.

It's not a cricket - it's a Sonic Pigeon Blaster!

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Look, atop City Hall! It's a 30-foot tall cricket! It's the world's largest parakeet! It's a UFO emitting signals back to its own planet!

Nope. Actually the chirping sound that business people and shoppers in downtown are hearing periodically throughout the day and night is what some city employees are laughingly calling a Sonic Pigeon Blaster.

Pampa Community Services Director Bill Hildebrandt said the city had been getting complaints that people entering City Hall were occasionally getting unwelcome surprises from the sky, courtesy of hundreds of pigeons who called the building home.

"Approximately two weeks ago the city installed a noise generator on top of City Hall for the sole purpose of unsettling the pigeons that were tending to roost on the sides of the building and occasionally disrupt traffic because of people getting their clothing stained," Hildebrandt said.

Maintenance Director Robert Herring said when he first installed the noise maker, it only operated during the day.

"That didn't do any good," Herring said. "They'd get down and dance in front of it. Now that it's operating 24 hours a day, it seems to be working."

Evidence of its effectiveness is the regularity with which large flocks of pigeons have been seen circling downtown over the past several days looking for somewhere else to park.

"We didn't want to hurt them," Hildebrandt said. "We just didn't want them dropping on people. My casual observations are that this has been pretty effective."

While the machine has kept the pigeon count at City Hall down, it has kept curiosity high from people hearing the sound and wondering what it was.

Several merchants and people contacting The Pampa News have offered their tongue-in-cheek guesses over the last several days, with suggestions ranging from a giant cricket to UFOs.

"If we work this giant cricket thing right, we could end up on the cover of Weekly World News or the National Enquirer," a caller suggested. "We could all be famous."

Unfortunately, only cities that shoot or poison their pigeons tend to get nationwide press, and then generally from animal rights groups.

A kinder, gentler town like Pampa will just have to settle for knowing its pigeons can sleep in peace ... anywhere but at City Hall.

Brochure offers tips for holiday trash uses

One of the least merry of all Christmas events each year is disposal of huge amounts of trash. Gift wrapping, party decorations and used Christmas trees piled at the curb create enormous problems for some cities with already glutted solid waste dumps.

However, the Texas Department of Health (TDH) offers a free brochure listing environmentally sound alternatives to some trash-producing traditions.

Distributed by the TDH Bureau of Solid Waste Management, which regulates solid waste disposal in Texas, Tips for a Happy Eco-Holiday is available from the TDH Solid Waste Information Clearinghouse at 1-800-458-9796.

T.A. Outlaw, chief of the bureau, said the brochure encourages Texans to choose "environmentally friendly" substitutes for waste-producing packaging and decoration. For example, decorative bags can replace wrapping paper and be reused from year to year.

Outlaw said that the brochure includes ideas for selecting Christmas trees, indoor and outdoor decoration, "environmentally sensitive" gifts and advice on recycling after the holidays are over.

"Some of the tips, such as the suggestion to make Christmas tree garlands out of popcorn (which later can

Study: Many without health insurance

WASHINGTON (AP) - More than 1 million people were added to the rolls of the uninsured between 1989 and 1990, leaving a record 34.7 million Americans without health insurance, a private analysis of new Census Bureau data said today.

The number of uninsured would have been even larger if not for a Medicaid expansion required by Congress in 1990 that put 3.1 million more Americans in the health care program for the poor, the report said.

The analysis was conducted by the Public Citizen Health Research Group, Physicians for a National Health Program and the Center for National Health Program Studies at Harvard University. All three support a national health insurance program to provide medical coverage to all Americans.

"The increase in 1990 is particularly worrisome since it largely

State board issues storm policy rules

AUSTIN (AP) - The State Board of Insurance has issued rules requiring the Texas hurricane pool to notify its policyholders of their right to have their claims settled promptly.

Each policy from the Texas Catastrophe Property Insurance Association, also known as the "Catpool," must outline the policyholder's rights.

Within 15 days after receiving written notice of a claim, insurance companies and the Catpool must acknowledge receipt of the claim; begin investigating the claim; and notify the policyholder of any additional information needed to process the claim.

Once all the required information has been received, the insurer has 15 days to notify the policyholder of the status of the claim. At that time, the insurer must either approve the claim payment or deny the claim and give reasons for the denial.

predates the current recession, and was cushioned by a massive expansion of Medicaid coverage, which is a one-time phenomenon," their report said.

It projected that the number of uninsured would reach 40 million in 1991.

The report analyzed data that the three groups obtained under the Freedom of Information Act from the Census Bureau. The authors looked at data from the Current Population Survey conducted in March 1990 and March 1991. This survey is conducted annually by the bureau and represents about 60,000 households representative of the non-institutionalized population.

The survey provides information on health insurance, including an estimate of people who are uninsured during the year. If two people are uninsured for six months each, the survey counts them as one uninsured person.

Of the 1.3 million people added to the pool of uninsured between 1989 and 1990, the report said, nearly one-third had family incomes of more than $50,000 and almost three-quarters had family incomes of more than $25,000. Fewer than 9 percent lived below the federal poverty line.

The analysis found that lack of health insurance was a problem in all parts of the country in 1990.

At the top of the list with the worst record was New Mexico, 22.2 percent uninsured, followed by Texas, 21.1 percent; Mississippi, 19.9 percent; Louisiana, 19.7 percent; the District of Columbia, 19.2 percent; and California, 19.1 percent.

North Dakota had the lowest rate of uninsured residents, 6.3 percent, followed by Wisconsin, 6.7 percent; Connecticut, 6.9 percent; Hawaii, 7.3 percent; and Iowa, 8.1 percent.

The analysts also looked at 15 professions and their rates of uninsured. It found that the real estate field has the highest rate, 20 percent, in 1990, and that the clergy was not far behind, with 16 percent lacking medical coverage.

Legislators and judges were the only professional groups where everyone was insured, according to the report.

Greenspan says recovery has faltered, holds out promise of rate cuts

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan said today the U.S. recovery has faltered and he held out the promise that the central bank was prepared to cut interest rates further if needed to revive the sick economy.

In his most pessimistic comments to date, Greenspan said that a huge overhang of consumer and business debt and a financially strained banking system were hindering efforts to get out of the recession.

But he cautioned Congress against rushing to enact any quick fixes that would inflate the budget deficit.

"The upturn in business activity that began earlier this year clearly has faltered," Greenspan said in testimony before the House Ways and Means Committee.

"It is apparent that the economy is struggling and that there have been some strong forces working against moderate cyclical revival," he said.

Since the recession began in July 1990, the Federal Reserve has moved 14 times to cut short-term interest rates and Greenspan told Congress today that the central bank was prepared to do more if the economy remained weak.

"Obviously, we are looking at the situation very closely and should further action be required (to lower interest rates), you can expect us to do so," Greenspan said in response to a question from Ways and Means Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill.

With the economy doing so badly, many analysts believe that the Fed will embark on another round of rate cuts within the next two weeks.

Greenspan gave a lukewarm response when asked his opinion about a proposal the Bush administration is considering to grant every American taxpayer a one-time rebate of up to $300 in 1992 as a way of spurring consumer spending.

The Fed chairman said that a variety of proposals along that line appeared to be more of an effort to redistribute incomes rather than stimulate the economy.

Greenspan said "it would be inappropriate for me to comment" on such a proposal, but when asked later whether he considered it sound policy to increase the federal budget deficit by $30 billion next year, the price tag put on the rebate proposal, Greenspan answered with a short, "No."

At the White House, spokeswoman Judy Smith said today: "We don't rule anything in. We don't rule anything out. We're considering all options." The White House has repeated that line for weeks when asked about specific economic proposals.

Greenspan blamed the economy's present problems on the huge buildup of debt in the 1980s both by consumers and corporate America. He said that the fledgling recovery that began in the spring lost steam during the summer as both businesses and consumers, worried about the future, decided to use their incomes to reduce old debts rather than spending the money on cars and other investments.

"The bottom line of this brief account is that the national balance sheet has been severely stretched," Greenspan said. "These events do not necessarily mean that a prolonged period of economic weakness is inevitable, but they do mean that policy makers must consider these unusual forces when shaping their response to the current situation."

Greenspan was testifying at the end of a series of hearings held by the Ways and Means Committee on responses Congress should make on spending and taxes to help a sick economy.

He gave a limited endorsement to tax cuts to help individuals and corporations reduce their debt burdens, but he said that Congress would be wrong to grant any package of tax cuts that worsened the federal budget deficit, already forecast to hit a record $362 billion this year.

"Congress should approach with great caution any proposal that would expand the structural budget deficit," Greenspan said.

As he has in the past, Greenspan did endorse a reduction in the capital gains tax as a way to promote investment, something that is also favored by President Bush but has been blocked in Congress by Democrats who charge it is a give-away to the rich.

In any event, Greenspan urged Congress to focus on tax changes that would help America's long-term productivity rather than concentrate on short-term efforts to jump-start the economy.

"Firm reliance on policies directed toward longer-term stability and incentives are likely to do as much, or more, for short-term economic expansion as a 'quick fix,'" Greenspan said.

The White House on Tuesday blamed economic anxiety for a plunge in Bush's approval rating to 47 percent, the lowest of his presidency, according to a new ABC News-Washington Post poll.

While Bush and others in the administration have for months insisted that the economy is no longer in a downturn, the White House retreated from that position Tuesday. "For all practical purposes, the recession continues," said presidential spokesman Martin Fitzwater.

A congressional source said today that the administration was considering tax rebates of between $200 and $300. The proposed rebates, which would cost between $30 billion and $40 billion, were viewed as a means of encouraging consumers to help spend the nation out of the recession, the source said.

Conservatives immediately blasted the proposal. "It's Jimmy Carteresque," Housing Secretary Jack Kemp told The Washington Post. A rebate "will do nothing to attack the real problems of the economy."

Kerrey downplays alleged child labor law violations

By SCOTT ROTHSCHILD
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — In a campaign swing through Texas, Democratic presidential hopeful Bob Kerrey sought to tout his plans to create jobs and affordable health care.

But the U.S. senator from Nebraska spent much of Tuesday explaining his role as part-owner of a restaurant chain charged with more than 100 violations of child labor laws.

"It's the sort of thing that businesses go through from time to time, and as long as you adjust and make sure the corrections are made, it's no problem," Kerrey said prior to a fundraiser at a private club in Austin.

Kerrey accepted part of the blame for the 116 alleged violations cited by the Labor Department as part of a four-state sweep in the Midwest, but said the incident would not hurt his presidential bid.

"Indeed my partner is the one directly responsible for what went on, but indirectly I feel some responsibility, and am certainly involved in the business in that I do own stock," he said after a daylong campaign swing through South Texas.

Most of the violations involved 14- and 15-year-olds working illegal late-night shifts or excessive work weeks, the Labor Department said.

There also were four instances of teenagers using dangerous equipment such as power-driven meat slicers and dough machines. In addition, one youngster was working as a cook, which is considered a hazardous occupation.

The business, founded by Kerrey and his brother-in-law and business partner, Dean Rasmussen, in 1972, includes restaurants operating under the names "Grandmother's" and "Don & Millie's."

Joe Gunn, president of the Texas AFL-CIO, attended the fund raiser, wearing a Kerrey button, although he said he has not endorsed a candidate.

Gunn said that if the violations only involved teenagers working late on Friday night, "it will be a flash in the pan."

"If it's a real safety issue of children being exposed to dangers, I think it will be a real problem. But I'm told by his staff that it's not that serious," Gunn said.

Rasmussen said Kerrey, who serves as chairman of the board, "has absolutely no involvement in the day-to-day operations of the business."

"It was an oversight on my part and an error on my part," Rasmussen said. "Clearly the blame starts and stops with me as president of the company."

Kerrey is paid $5,000 a year as a director and owns 35 percent of the restaurant stock, valued at over $1 million, according to his financial disclosure statements.

Kerrey said he supports government laws protecting children in the workplace, but added, "these are pretty fine rules, and when you don't have a legal force, and an accounting force to watch all of them it's going to happen from time to time. You're going to find yourself out of compliance with the details."

Kerrey said he has voted for increases in the minimum wage, and parental leave "both of which cut against my own economic interests."

Rasmussen, who is married to Kerrey's sister, said he plans to appeal the proposed $64,000 fine from the Labor Department's Wage and Hour Division. He said many of the violations resulted from misunderstandings with regard to working school children on Friday nights, which he did not consider to be a school night.

Under federal labor laws, 14- and 15-year-olds are not allowed to work more than 18 hours a week during the school year or after 7 p.m., regardless of whether it's a week night or on a weekend. During school vacation, they may work up to eight hours a day and 40 hours a week, but no later than 9 p.m.

Rasmussen said the chain had laid off 15-20 workers ages 14 and 15. The chain also will no longer hire anyone younger than 16, he said.

Texas Supreme Court throws out Senate redistricting plan

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Dan Morales says he's hopeful that Senate primary elections won't be delayed, even though the Texas Supreme Court threw out a Senate redistricting map he agreed to with Hispanic plaintiffs in a lawsuit.

"I still think that there is opportunity for the state to act swiftly in such a way that the March primaries can continue on schedule," Morales said.

Tuesday's opinion by Justice Nathan Hecht, a Republican, said that State District Judge Mario Ramirez of Edinburg abused his discretion in approving the Senate settlement map.

Five of the nine justices voted against the plan, including four Republicans and one Democrat. Four justices, all Democrats, dissented.

"Only after giving full and careful consideration to the interests affected by its ruling and the effect upon the election process, and after affording the Legislature sufficient opportunity to correct the constitutional infirmities in apportionment legislation, may the district court order its own apportionment plan," Hecht wrote.

Hecht was joined in his opinion by Chief Justice Tom Phillips and Justice Eugene Cook. Justice Raul Gonzalez, a Democrat, and Justice John Cornyn, a Republican, wrote concurring opinions outlining their reasons for invalidating the plan.

Hecht said Tuesday's ruling clears the way for a district court trial on the original Senate redistricting plan, which was approved by lawmakers and challenged by the Hispanic plaintiffs.

He said that Ramirez erred in ordering a new plan without a determination that the original Senate plan was invalid. In the settlement agreement the state reserved its contention that the law was valid, Hecht said.

Ramirez must provide a "reasonable opportunity" for interested parties to participate in such a trial, Hecht said.

Ramirez also must try to ascertain whether Gov. Ann Richards will call the Legislature into special session to consider redistricting, and if not, whether "further deference" to allow the Legislature to act is warranted, Hecht said.

Carpenter sentenced to life in prison in slaying and mutilation of prostitute

DALLAS (AP) — A 58-year-old carpenter has been sentenced to life in prison in the slaying and mutilation of a prostitute, but police say they will continue efforts to link him to other murders.

Jurors deliberated five hours over two days before convicting Charles Albright Tuesday of murder in connection to the death of 41-year-old Shirley Williams last March 19.

Albright, who had been emotionless through most of the trial, slumped forward slightly and stared at the floor as the verdict was read.

Life in prison was the maximum sentence, since prosecutors did not ask for the death penalty. Albright also was fined $10,000. Albright must serve at least 15 years before being eligible for parole.

Ms. Williams was shot in the back of the head, her eyes cut out and her body dumped in southern Dallas County.

Prosecutors said no decision had been reached about whether to charge Albright in similar slayings of two other Dallas prostitutes.

Mary Lou Praz, 35, slain Dec. 13, 1990, and Susan Beth Peterson, 27, found dead Feb. 10, were shot in the head and their eyeballs removed in a similar fashion.

Despite the conviction, police continue the Albright investigation.

"No one believes this guy just woke up one morning and started killing prostitutes and cutting their eyes out," one high-level police source told The Dallas Morning News.

"Maybe now that they convicted him (Albright), he'll talk," said one detective.

Much of the prosecution's case rested on circumstantial evidence and testimony from prostitutes who said Albright had dated them and was prone to violence.

Prosecutors used autopsy photos of Ms. Williams and Ms. Peterson, their eyelids pried open to reveal empty sockets, to portray Albright as a frustrated surgeon.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Freedom voters dismay Gorbachev

It should be no surprise that the people of the Ukraine have voted for independence from the former Soviet Union. The old union did all it could to destroy their national identity.

Mikhail Gorbachev, fighting to control what remains of central Soviet authority, wanted Ukrainian leaders to sign a treaty of economic and military cooperation with eight other republics. If we can judge from the voting numbers, Ukrainians overwhelmingly reject association with the Kremlin — 92 percent of those voting endorsed independence.

The Ukraine's yearning for independence should be no surprise. Since the time the Ukraine was incorporated into the Soviet Union in 1921, its people have endured deprivation, oppression and death at the hands of the communist central government.

Once considered the "breadbasket of Europe," the Ukraine's rich agricultural resources have been squandered by communist central planners. When its farmers resisted Stalin's forced collectivization in the early 1930s, the Soviet government confiscated their food and let millions of Ukrainians starve. It was no wonder that many Ukrainians greeted the troops of Nazi German as liberators during World War II.

Even after Stalin's death, the Soviet Union continued to persecute the Ukraine, albeit in more subtle ways than mass purges and starvation. The Ukrainian Catholic Church remained illegal until only recently, and any displays of Ukrainian antinationalism were officially discouraged. Ukrainians can also blame the Chernobyl nuclear disaster on the same incompetence and secrecy that has marked all their dealings with the central government.

After seven decades of abuse, who can blame the Ukrainians for wanting to break free of Moscow's influence? The Ukrainians are like a kidnapping victim who has been tortured and starved for years. Now that the bolts for the victim sees an opportunity for freedom and bolts for the door, Soviet President Gorbachev seems to wonder, "Was it something I said?"

Instead, the Ukrainians were more willing to accept a loser federation as proposed by Russian President Boris Yeltsin, who seems to have learned more about the aspirations of freedom for the former Soviet republics than Gorbachev ever learned. As such, the Ukraine is willing to work with others in the establishment of a commonwealth, maintaining their independence in the framework of a loose union working for the mutual benefit of all instead of the declarations and glory of the Kremlin.

And Gorbachev? Like a petulant boy who has not been given his way, all he can do is talk about resigning as president of the Soviet Union, which he seems not to realize no longer even exists. He must be dismayed to discover that few in his homeland really care anymore what he does.

What do "medical care," "taxes," "the economy," "term limits," "quotas" and "voter alienation" have in common? According to interpretations of the recent scattered elections, this: That an allegedly alienated body called "the middle class" is concerned about all of them.

And so, sages are entitled to say, "The swing issue in 1992 will be the middle class." Of course it is, it always is. And the questions about the middle class are always about the same: Are they making progress, and are they making progress fast enough?

In theory it can be measured by money, but the straight money argument has become confuddled. Realists, like me (called "optimists" by pessimists), will tell you that the middle class has been doing better over recent decades, and will show solid income data to prove it. Other statistical sharpshooters will tell you otherwise, and will show lower income data.

Luckily, there is another way to look at it. If we can't agree on how much money is coming in, let's take a look at how much money is going out. Let's look at what people are buying. After all, if folks are able to buy more, they're probably doing better. And vice versa.

This happens to be exactly the right moment to go through that exercise. The world's best book has just been published: The Statistical Abstract of the United States, with 1,490 tables. It tells lots about what Americans have been buying. Thus:

The number of passenger cars went up by 62 percent from 1970 to 1989 (to 122 million) while the population was growing by 21 percent. The number of motorcycles also went up 62 percent, to 4.6 million.

The median size of a new home went up by 38 percent, to 1,905 square feet (1970-90). The home ownership rate went up by 1.7 percent from 1970 and down by 0.06 percent since 1980. At 64 percent, it's near, but not quite at, an all-time high.

The number of air conditioners purchased in 1985 was 3 million; in 1989 it was 5 million. Almost 70 percent of Americans now have air conditioning.

Americans don't only buy cars and houses. They pay dearly to buy college educations, and these days they buy it for their daughters as well as for their sons. There were 3 million American females in college in 1970, and 7.2 million in 1989.

The number of color television sets sold per year went up 55 percent from 1980 to 1989 — to 6.5 million.

The number of recreational boats owned went from 8.8 million in 1970, to 11.8 million in 1980, to 15.6 million in 1989. Major-league baseball attendance went up by 27 percent from 1980 to 1989 — to 56 million. The number of hunting and fishing licenses went up by 25 percent from 1970-88, to 66 million.

In just the five years from 1984-89 the number of Americans traveling to foreign countries went up 27 percent, to 15 million per year, excluding Canada and Mexico. The number of "pleasure trips" (100 miles or more) climbed to 34 percent from 1980 to 1989, to 457 million.

Alas, as reported, the cost of health care has gone way up. Of course, the rate of doctors per person went up by 50 percent (1970-87); the rate of doctor and dentist visits per person went way up; the cancer survival rate increased; 1.3 million Americans are walking around with implanted artificial hip and knee joints; and, perhaps related to medical expenditures, there has been a stunning increase in life expectancy.

The number of people covered by private pension plans has gone up by 72 percent since 1975, to 77 million, although employer contributions to the plans are not counted as personal income, thus artificially depressing income statistics.

So then. We spend more. We earn more. We're doing better. Not every person, not everywhere, not every moment — only generally, as a middle-class nation.

We also complain a lot. That's all right. As much as I hate to admit it, it may even be that complaining can be part of the process of progress.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, Dec. 18, the 352nd day of 1991. There are 13 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Dec. 18, 1940, Adolf Hitler signed a secret directive ordering preparations for a Nazi invasion of the Soviet Union. (Operation Barbarossa, as it became known, was launched the following June.)

On this date:

In 1737, the most renowned violin-maker in history, Antonio Stradivari, died in Cremona, Italy.

In 1787, New Jersey became the third state to ratify the U.S. Constitution.

In 1813, the British took Fort Niagara in the War of 1812.

In 1865, the 13th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, abolishing slavery, was declared in effect.

In 1890, Edwin Howard Armstrong, the inventor of wide-band FM radio broadcasting, was born in New York.

In 1915, President Wilson, widowed the year before, married Edith Bolling Galt at her home in Washington.

Yes, it exists — Needle Phobia

I was in Atlanta to address the Southern Medical Association. The SMA is an extraordinary professional organization.

National Doctor's Day, proclaimed this year, was godmothered by the SMA Auxiliary, but the SMA itself, in its 85-year history, has espoused no "causes," has had no political agenda, does no lobbying.

Mostly family doctors, these 60,000 mostly mind their own business. They keep themselves updated on the latest therapies and procedures, especially those peculiar to the South. Indeed, the sole thrust of this organization is to encourage continuing education in the art and science of medicine.

The 500 professional papers presented to the 1991 assembly provided a feast for this insatiably curious observer.

Example: Needle Phobia.

Men are reluctant to admit that they may faint at the sight of blood, though golfer Jack Nicklaus devotedly attended the birth of each of his children — and fainted every time. Princess Diana has an intolerance of injections; also, heavyweight boxer Sonny Liston disliked shots.

Every football team has at least one macho muscle man who is terrified of needles.

There is now a name for it: "Needle Phobia."

Paul Harvey

Dr. James G. Hamilton, a general practitioner, and Dr. Everett Ellinwood, professor of psychiatry at Duke University, believe that as many as 25 million Americans avoid medical and dental treatment because of Needle Phobia.

Worldwide, perhaps 500 million suffer Needle Phobia, making this one of the most common medical conditions.

Needle phobics, when stuck with a needle to get an injection or have blood drawn, experience shock, palpitations, weakness; sometimes faint and have convulsions. At least half a dozen have died.

The anxiety results in a neurovascular reflex over which the victim has no control. He may feel he is smothering or choking.

The newest studies at Duke indicated quite convincingly that it is an inherited condition.

Because needle phobics tend to avoid medical treatment, this is the first many physicians and dental doctors have heard about the condition.

In fact, one of the discoverers of Needle Phobia, Dr. Hamilton, is also a victim of this condition and co-authored the first medical case report on his own condition. Hamilton is an emergency department doctor and family physician with extensive experience treating surgical wounds in others, suturing lacerations, drawing blood — yet, he has a lifelong involuntary fear of receiving any injection.

He, too, has a family history of Needle Phobia.

There is nothing "imaginary" about the physiological response. When the patient is forced to endure a needle puncture, his heart rate and blood pressure plunge.

Drs. Hamilton and Ellinwood theorize that the phobia may date back to our earliest ancestors' efforts to avoid punctures by tree limbs, shrubs and weapons. Historically, most violent deaths have been the result of stabbing, cutting or piercing with spears, knives, swords or arrows.

When a physician encounters Needle Phobia, he can substitute oral medicine or, when needles must be used, it helps first to apply ice to the site of the injection and advise the patient "not to watch."

Celebrating our year-end holidays

By CHUCK STONE

'Tis the season that we gather together to ask the Lord's blessings — and in seven weeks from late November to early January, all Americans, with some variations on an ethnic theme, will have gathered six times to pour their joy of living into humanity's crucible.

Each year, I try to honor those six-fold joys with an affectionate homage to the "American Festival of Holidays." Beginning with Thanksgiving, this festive moment in time is followed by Hanukkah, Christmas, Kwanza, New Year's and the Festival of Three Kings (Los Tres Reyes Magos).

Of the six holidays, New Year's Eve enjoys the greatest universality among Americans — and the world. They others are ennobled by our different splendors.

Until recently, I have been intellectually crippled by an insensitivity I thought had long-since been routed from my system. If Thanksgiving was a national holiday, I figured, then all Americans must celebrate its genesis.

All, that is, except Native Americans. In the last few months, especially, we were shoved to a new threshold of consciousness. Native Americans made it obvious that they are not ecstatic about sports fans executing (the verb is deliberate) the tomahawk chop and masquerading as Indian warriors.

Recently, Nanepashemet, a member of the Wampanoag tribe in Massachusetts, wrote an eloquent statement in The Boston Globe about his tribe's history and demythologized Thanksgiving as "a big myth, a modern national myth far removed from the history of that moment and not even a continuation of what the Pilgrims had done."

But we can still celebrate Thanksgiving — even with all the imperfections of our historical antecedents — to remind ourselves each year of our nationhood's legacy.

That legacy is enhanced by the other five holidays during this festive interlude. I doubt if many Americans who are not Jewish, black or Puerto Rican have an informed understanding of why those three groups respectively celebrate Hanukkah, Kwanza or Los Tres Reyes Magos.

In today's swirling debate about multiculturalism, bigoted defenders of a horse-and-buggy status quo strongly resist any effort to expand our nation's felicitous diversity. But pluralism built this nation. And only pluralism will insure its survival.

So, as you enjoy — as much as George Bush's recession will let you enjoy — these next few weeks, it's a good opportunity to take a fresh look at the genesis of these different holidays in America:

• Hanukkah (Which began Dec. 2): A Jewish commemoration of the Maccabean victory in 165 B.C. over the Syrian tyrant Antiochus IV. Under siege in a temple, the Jews lit the holy lamps, which burnt miraculously for eight days (which is why there are often eight candles in the menorah).

• Christmas (Dec. 25): One of Christianity's two most sacred holidays. It celebrates the birth of Jewish child, Jesus.

• Kwanza (Dec. 26): Swahili for "first fruits" (a phrase in the Bible), Kwanza is a seven-day holiday celebrated by African-Americans. Each of the seven days begins with the lighting of a candle to commemorate a different principle: ujima (unity); kujichagulia (self-determination); ujima (collective work and responsibility); ujamaa (cooperative economics); nia (purpose); kuumba (creativity); and imani (faith).

• New Year's Day (Jan. 1): After all these years, I'm not sure whether this day is a welcoming of a new year, a recovery from the night before or a mere couch-potato football fest.

• Los Tres Reyes Magos (Jan. 6): Celebrated by Puerto Ricans and many Latinos, this is a Christmas Epiphany when the three wise men (always interracial depicted) paid homage to the newborn babe in a manger.

Whatever you celebrate, it's a lovely time to pause and pay homage to the goodness of this country.

How to make a Merry Christmas By Lane and Miller

Newspaper: MHMR uses troubled nursing homes

AUSTIN (AP) — For the past two years, the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation has discharged mentally ill state hospital patients to some nursing homes that have been sued by the attorney general's office for being substandard, a newspaper reported.

One of those homes, Shady Meadows Care Center in Seagoville, was ordered closed Monday by state health inspectors.

The Seagoville facility also was sued by the state for what Attorney General Dan Morales said was "calous disregard for the health and safety of these helpless senior citizens."

Records obtained from the MHMR Department last week by the Austin American-Statesman under the Open Records Act indicated that three of every eight nursing homes in Texas have a history of violating health and safety rules.

At Shady Meadows, inspectors found residents saturated in urine and feces, residents with untreated wounds and bedsores, and patients drugged or restrained for discipline or staff convenience.

Records show that patients from Terrell State Hospital have been sent there, the newspaper reported Tuesday. All 92 patients are to be moved to other homes in 10 days, said Ron Dusek, spokesman for the attorney general.

The home is owned by Carter Nursing Home Corp.

Robbi Stewart, administrator of the home, said Monday she could not comment on the allegations until she found out more about them.

Shady Meadows is one of 188 nursing homes to which state hospital patients have been discharged since Sept. 1, 1989.

About 250 patients from state hospitals are discharged to nursing homes every year. MHMR patients are sent to nursing homes when they no longer need in-patient psychiatric care and a nursing home is judged to be their most appropriate home.

The newspaper said the records it obtained show that 69 nursing homes have been cited by the state Department of Health for repeated safety violations.

MHMR officials said they were unaware of the history of violations at the nursing homes they use. They said they relied on the state Health Department to regulate nursing homes.

MHMR rules, however, require workers to visit a nursing home and check its most recent health inspection report before sending a state hospital patient there, the newspaper reported.

The rules also require workers to visit patients discharged to a nursing home.

"I don't know if there is a good answer on this," said Don Gilbert, acting deputy MHMR commissioner for mental health. "I'm concerned that people may have been referred from our hospitals to nursing homes that may be considered substandard."

Texans writing smaller checks this Christmas season

HOUSTON (AP) — Texans have been writing smaller checks this holiday season, although Christmas shoppers are using their checkbooks more to pay for purchases, a check authorization company reports.

For the shopping period between Nov. 15 and Dec. 14, the average check in Texas was down 2 percent from last year to $109.30, said Ken Wait, vice chairman and co-founder of TeleCheck Southwest, a check authorization guarantee company that follows the Christmas, Easter and back-to-school shopping seasons.

However, the state was up 1.9 percent in total dollars written in checks from last year and overall check usage increased 3.9 percent, Wait said today. The company does not report actual total dollars written in checks.

TeleCheck surveyed about 1,800 retail merchants in Houston, about 1,200 in the Dallas-Fort Worth area and about 650 in the San Antonio-Austin area.

Wait said the Dallas-Fort Worth area lagged the state's other largest metropolitan areas, down .9 percent in total sales. The average check size was down 4.3 percent to $120.61, but check usage was up 3.5 percent, Wait said.

"I think there is concern in Dallas," he said. "There's just not enough people out there who have the confidence to go out and buy."

Mideast talks to recess tonight; progress limited, officials claim

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — There is little evidence that the first five days of Arab-Israeli peace talks narrowed differences on either procedure or substance.

The Israeli team has announced plans to return home tonight, and there is no agreement as yet as to when and where the next round of talks will be held.

Israel has insisted the talks move to the Middle East, although Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's spokesman, Ehud Gol, said in Jerusalem today that "it's a possibility" the next round could convene again in Washington in January.

Gol also said the current round could last into Thursday if there were signs of progress today.

In an atmosphere plagued by mistrust built up over decades, Israeli negotiators have been holding separate talks with Syrian and Lebanese teams and with a joint Palestinian-Jordanian delegation.

On the latter discussions, President Bush implored negotiators to resolve their differences over procedure so they could talk about the fate of Israeli-held territories on the West Bank and Gaza Strip and other divisive issues.

The Palestinians, eager to be accorded the status of an independent entity, want to meet with the Israelis alone but Israel has insisted the Palestinians be a part of the Jordanian delegation.

The one thing the parties agreed on after more than five hours of talks Tuesday was that the procedural hurdles remain.

Meeting with reporters Tuesday night after yet another fruitless round of talks, Israeli spokesman Elyakim Rubinstein counseled patience.

"We believe we are having good conversations with our friends in the Palestinian-Jordanian (delegation) even in this situation now. We believe we can do better," Rubinstein said. As a gesture to the Arab media present, he offered some remarks in Arabic.

Israel has suggested that the deadlock be broken by beginning within the framework of a joint Palestinian-Jordanian delegation, breaking up into separate tracks and then reconvening as a joint forum under a preset timetable.

Bush on Tuesday told visiting Israeli Foreign Minister David Levy he would be very disappointed if the delegations went home empty-handed.

The Israelis have said they are prepared to stay until late in the evening tonight before returning home to see if progress is possible. Diplomats noted that deadlines sometimes have a way of injecting a sense of urgency into a negotiating process.

Of the three sets of talks, perhaps the difficult has been the one with Syria.

"No progress at all yet," Syrian delegate Bushra Kanafani said Tuesday.

The two sides have become bogged down on the question of sequence. The Syrians are demanding the unconditional return of the Golan Heights, captured by Israel in 1967, while Israel wants the initial phase of the talks to focus on security guarantees.

It is "very clear that the Israeli dictionary does not have the word 'withdrawal,'" Ms. Kanafani said.

The Israelis, meanwhile, complained about Syria's vote against Monday's U.N. General Assembly repeal of a 1975 resolution equating Zionism with racism. They contended the move was proof that Syria still doesn't recognize the right of Jews to live in Israel.

The Israeli-Lebanese talks focused on the continuing Syrian presence in Lebanon. They took place not long after Israeli warplanes struck a suspected Palestinian guerrilla base in southeast Lebanon on Tuesday, leaving a reported six people wounded.

Israeli delegate Uri Lubrani defended the action. "We are daily confronted with acts of violence from Lebanon, and we have at times to retaliate," he said.

South Korea says it's now nuclear free

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — President Roh Tae-woo declared in a nationwide broadcast today that South Korea is nuclear-free, an announcement aimed at increasing pressure on North Korea to abandon nuclear arms development.

His televised speech signaled that all U.S. nuclear weapons have been removed from South Korea, an important step in the campaign to persuade Communist North Korea to agree to nuclear non-proliferation.

"At this moment, not a single nuclear weapon exists in our country," Roh said. He said a pledge made Nov. 8 not to produce, possess or deploy nuclear weapons has been realized and he challenged North Korea to do the same.

Roh urged the north to unconditionally accept international inspections of its secretive nuclear facilities and to dismantle nuclear reprocessing and uranium enrichment facilities.

His speech came five days after the two Koreas signed a historic accord calling for peaceful coexistence after 46 years of division.

The agreement laid a framework for reconciliation but did not deal with nuclear issues, which has threatened immediate ratification by South Korea's parliament.

"The two Koreas have produced a charter of peace that will end a dark period in their history," Roh said. "Yet we cannot successfully build peace and national reconciliation without first resolving the nuclear question."

There was no immediate reaction from North Korea, which has denied its nuclear program is weapons-oriented although intelligence reports indicate the north is close to building its first atomic bomb.

The average North Korean could not have seen the Roh speech because televisions in the tightly controlled country are set to a single channel.

In a commentary in the government Rodong Sinnum newspaper today, North Korea said it would not sign an agreement on nuclear safeguards until it could "fully confirm" that the United States had withdrawn its nuclear weapons from the southern half of the peninsula.

Roh said the south hopes to reach an agreement with the north by year's end to realize total denuclearization of the Korean peninsula, divided by the world's most heavily guarded border.

Seoul and Washington have said the issue has reached a critical stage and that the north must sign safeguards before the February meeting of the International Atomic Energy Agency.

If the north stalls, U.S. officials say the matter will be taken to the U.N. Security Council. They say intelligence reports indicate the north may reach capability to produce nuclear arms by 1993.

The two Koreas have agreed to meet at the border village of Panmunjom on Dec. 26 to discuss North Korean nuclear arms development and a joint pledge for a nuclear-free Korea.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said last month postponed a second stage of U.S. troop cuts in South Korea until the north's nuclear threat was eliminated. Washington still plans to trim the force to 36,000 by the end of 1992.

Rep. Stephen Solarz, chairman of the subcommittee on Asian and Pacific Affairs, met with North Korean leader Kim Il Sung in Pyongyang, the north's official media reported.

Decorating homes for the holiday still requires using safe handling

Decorating is half the fun of the holidays. But those festive items that brighten your home and office can darken your holiday cheer if they aren't handled safely.

If you're using a fresh-cut Christmas tree, Texas Safety Association reminds you to keep it fresh by adding water every day. Over 600 fires are started by Christmas trees each year.

Keep your tree away from fireplaces and space heaters and use electric lightes, not candles. Use care in picking the tree, too. If the tips of the branches won't bend without breaking, the tree is already too dry.

Artificial trees should be labeled flame-retardant. Never put electric lights on a metal tree.

Inspect strands of lights for fraying, bare wires, loose connections and broken sockets. Make sure that they carry the Underwriters Laboratories (UL) symbol, and that outdoor lights are labeled for outdoor use. Unplug lights when you leave the house or go to bed.

Tinsel, garlands and evergreen wreaths shouldn't be hung too close to heat sources. Be especially careful with candles. Keep them out of a child's reach, and always extinguish them when leaving the room.

Holly berries and mistletoe are poisonous. Poinsettias are not, but eating the leaves can lead to an upset stomach. Man-made decorations may contain toxic materials, too. Teach children that decorations are for fun, not food.

Avoid hanging breakable ornaments near the bottom of the tree, where children and pets can reach them.

If you use a fireplace for holiday warmth, keep a screen in front of it to keep flying sparks off carpets and furniture. And don't burn gift wrappings — they may contain dyes that will give off toxic fumes. Put the wraps in the trash can instead, or recycle them next year!

Texas Safety Association is a not-for-profit educational organization and a chapter of the National Safety Council, working to prevent accidents at home, on the job and on the highway.

Newspaper: GM to close two plants

By FREDERICK STANDISH
AP Auto Writer

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. will close two plants employing 6,400 hourly workers in Texas and Ohio and lay off up to 15,000 white-collar employees next year to offset record losses, a newspaper reported today.

Union contracts ensure that the blue-collar workers will keep getting nearly all their pay, at least until their contract expires in 1993.

GM will shut plants in Arlington, Texas, and Moraine, Ohio, the Detroit Free Press reported, citing sources it did not identify. Each plant employs 3,200 hourly workers.

A union official in Arlington who spoke on condition of anonymity told The Associated Press today that the plant closing had been confirmed by union officials in Detroit.

Workers coming off the overnight shift reacted with fear and disbelief.

"We're just holding our breath. We don't know what's going to happen," said George Grishman, 64, who has worked at the Arlington plant for seven years. "You just have to look for another job. It reaches down to every nook and cranny in your life."

A security guard at the Arlington plant said he didn't believe the reports.

"Nothing's going to happen. I know it's not," he said, asking his name not be used.

The automaker also plans to close a plant in Oshawa, Ontario, after 1994, The Detroit News reported today. That plant employs 3,800 hourly workers.

GM's North American operations are losing about $15 million a day — $5 billion to $6 billion a year — and pressure has been building to cut costs and reduce factory capacity.

GM Chairman Robert Stempel planned a satellite broadcast to employees today and a news conference to announce the cuts, ending weeks of speculation.

Company spokesman John F. Mueller refused to comment early today.

United Auto Workers president Owen Bieber said Tuesday that GM had not discussed its restructuring plan with him. A call to a UAW spokesman's home was not returned early today, and a call to UAW headquarters in Detroit went unanswered.

In early trading today, GM stock was down 12 1/2 cents a share to $27.75 on the New York Stock Exchange. A week before, it hit a four-year low of $27.62 1/2.

GM stock on Tuesday closed down 62 1/2 cents to $27.87 1/2 on the New York Stock Exchange. A week before, it hit a four-year low at $27.62 1/2 a share.

GM, the world's largest automaker, has more than 300,000 active hourly workers and about 94,000 salaried employees in the United States.

A UAW contract negotiated last fall requires that laid off workers get payments supplementing unemployment checks to bring their benefits to 95 percent of their normal take-home pay. After 36 weeks, the workers must be rehired or put in a special job pool at full pay. The contract expires in 1993.

However, between 10,000 and 15,000 white-collar jobs throughout GM — which lack pay guarantees — also will be eliminated, the Free Press said.

Those layoffs would be in addition to the 15,000 white-collar jobs GM already said it would eliminate through retirement and attrition by 1994.

The Free Press, citing what it described as "executives and analysts in and outside GM," said the white-collar positions would be cut mainly through layoffs.

Analyst Jean-Claude Gruet of UBS Securities in New York, told the newspaper that cutting white-collar workers would help appease the UAW.

"The UAW may be willing to meet GM halfway. But they're not going to give an inch unless GM greatly reduces its white-collar labor force," Gruet said.

James Williams, 49, has been a GM autoworker for 25 years, the past seven in Arlington. He's faced layoffs 15 times.

"I've done this before. When I was in California they gave us three days. They told us on Monday and closed it on Wednesday," Williams said. "It's no big deal for me. It's more like seasonal work."

The Buick Roadmaster, Chevrolet Caprice and Cadillac Brougham are made at the Arlington plant in suburban Dallas. At Moraine, a suburb of Dayton in southern Ohio, workers assemble the GMC Sonoma and Yukon, and Chevrolet's S-10, S-Blazer and Typhoon.

Former Mayor Koch collapses at health club

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Mayor Edward I. Koch collapsed at a health club in midtown Manhattan, police said.

The former mayor, 67, did not feel well after exercising at the Sports Training Institute and then fell to the ground unconscious in the lobby of the building on 49th Street, said Police Department spokesman Officer Ralph St. Just.

Koch, who suffered a minor stroke in 1987, collapsed at 7:58 a.m. and was unconscious for about two minutes. He was taken by emergency medical service workers to Columbia Presbyterian Hospital for treatment, St. Just said.

Mayor David Dinkins, Koch's successor, headed to the hospital. His office said Koch was in stable condition, but the hospital said it was not releasing a condition until doctors had a complete look at the former mayor. Ambulance workers said Koch was in good spirits during the trip to the hospital.

Koch was mayor from 1978 to 1990. He won a national reputation with his combative style, forcing fellow Democrat Jimmy Carter to accept what amounted to a public rebuke over his Middle East policy and calling Ronald Reagan a wimp in the war on drugs.

Fighting flares again in Yugoslavia

By SLOBODAN LEKIC
Associated Press Writer

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Fighting flared again in Yugoslavia today, and the European Community began talks with rival leaders to explain its decision to recognize republics that want independence, a move that enraged Serbia.

A U.N. team charged with preparing the way for the possible deployment of peacekeepers in the war-torn Balkan federation was en route to Belgrade.

Croats and Serbs have been fighting for six months over Croatia's determination to leave the federation. Thousands of people have been killed, and Serb-led forces have captured more than a third of Croatia's territory, much of it inhabited by the republic's Serb minority.

The EC said Tuesday it will recognize on Jan. 15 the sovereignty of any of Yugoslavia's six republics guaranteeing the human rights of its ethnic minorities.

Croatia and Slovenia, the two republics that declared independence on June 25, welcomed the move.

Serbia, however, condemned it as effectively dismembering Yugoslavia. "The EC move crases Yugoslavia from the map of the world," said Deputy Foreign Minister Dobrosav Veizovic.

In an apparent attempt to reassure Serbia, Lord Carrington, the EC's chief envoy to Yugoslavia, scheduled a meeting in Belgrade with Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic.

Carrington first met in Graz, Austria, with President Franjo Tudjman of Croatia, Milosevic's bitter rival. Carrington also planned to confer with Slovenian President Milan Kucan in Graz before flying to Belgrade.

The 21-member U.N. team, headed by veteran U.S. diplomat Herbert Okun, was headed for Belgrade today. The group will advise U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar on whether to deploy up to 10,000 lightly armed peacekeeping troops in Yugoslavia. Perez de Cuellar has repeatedly said that a cease-fire must take hold before the United Nations will send troops.

But no truce has lasted more than a few days in the war pitting Croatian forces against the Serb-led army and Serb irregulars. Although both sides agreed to a U.N.-mediated truce late last month, fighting has continued.

Clashes intensified today after an early morning lull.

Defense officials in Sisak, 30 miles southeast of Zagreb, reported that the town was targeted by heavy artillery fire. The eastern Croatian stronghold of Osijek and several nearby towns also were being hit by artillery barrages.

Officials in Karlovac, 30 miles southwest of the Croatian capital, said Mekusje and Generalaki Stol, two towns to the southwest, were under artillery attack.

Sporadic gunfire was heard in Gospic, 90 miles southwest of Zagreb, and in Dubrovnik, the medieval Adriatic city threatened by navy gunboats and army artillery.

The EC decision on independence, made after Germany lobbied hard for it, came despite warnings from the United Nations and several countries that it could spread the war beyond Croatia.

Serbia has maintained that Yugoslavia must continue to exist.

If the nation disintegrates, Serbia has suggested a new Yugoslavia that would in practice be made up of present-day Serbia and large chunks of Croatia, Bosnia-Herzegovina and Macedonia populated by more than 1 million ethnic Serbs.

The Serb-led Yugoslav army says it became involved in the war only to protect Croatia's 600,000 ethnic Serbs, who say they fear persecution in an independent Croatia. Croatia says Serbia is trying to make a land grab.

State plans to release longest-held juvenile amid promises of revenge

BOSTON (AP) — The longest-held juvenile offender in state history may be free soon. But a friend of the 5-year-old boy Matthew Rosenberg sexually assaulted and drowned says she'll kill him as soon as he gets out.

In order to keep Rosenberg in custody, state officials must show that the 22-year-old remains as dangerously mentally ill today as he was in 1983, when the body of neighbor Kenny Claudio was found in a trash bag in Rosenberg's home.

Rosenberg, then 14, confessed to the sex slaying.

His detention has been extended three times. The deadline for the state to request another extension from the court is the close of business today.

But this time, Edward J. Loughran, commissioner of the state Department of Youth Services, said he has no grounds to keep Rosenberg beyond his 23rd birthday, on March 17.

"It's the evaluation of the program he's in and of an independent psychologist that there is no presence of mental illness," Loughran said Tuesday. "That's the only grounds on which I can hold him."

Marilyn Abramofsky, a friend of the victim's family, insisted that Rosenberg isn't rehabilitated, and she has repeatedly threatened to kill him if he is released.

"Matthew Rosenberg is a danger to everybody. I am only a danger to Matthew Rosenberg," Abramofsky said Tuesday. "He's not cured. Does another 5-year-old have to die? These are children we're talking about. Dead children."

The case has generated calls for changes in the state's juvenile justice system, with Gov. William Weld urging the Legislature to mandate adult trials for young people charged with violent crimes. That would expose them to longer sentences.

Weld asked Loughran to reconsider the case. But Robert Cordy, Weld's chief legal counsel, said Tuesday the law seems to leave little alternative.

When the crime was committed, state law required that juvenile offenders be released at age 18 unless the state proved they were dangerously mentally ill. The law was amended last year to extend jurisdiction to age 21.

In 1989, four mental health experts said Rosenberg was a manic-depressive pedophile who could kill another youngster if freed.

But last week, a psychologist evaluated Rosenberg and found him neither dangerous nor mentally ill.

Rosenberg is the longest-held and oldest prisoner in the department's history. His lawyer, Matthew Feinberg, said it's time he was let go.

Authorities won't disclose where he is held except to say it is an out-of-state facility for adult sex offenders. He receives group and private therapy.

Feinberg refused to disclose Rosenberg's whereabouts or plans because of Abramofsky's threats. He said she should be prosecuted for making them.

Kenny's mother, Merrill Lee, lives in Boston. She refused to be interviewed. His father, Frank Claudio, lives in New York City but could not be located for comment.

A gift-wrapped cake for the dessert buffet is new and different flavor

By NANCY BYAL, Food Editor
Better Homes and Gardens
Magazine
For AP Special Features

This show-stopper will be the star of your dessert buffet, yet it's really just a simple white cake dressed up for a night on the town. On party day, fill your made-ahead cake with a tangy mango buttercream, then pipe some on top and around the sides. The buttercream holds purchased pirote cookies in place, along with a splashy ribbon tied around for extra pizzazz.

For the buttercream, look for cans of sweetened mango puree in specialty shops that carry Indian or Asian groceries. Or, use fresh ripe mangoes. Buttercream made with fresh fruit will taste slightly less sweet than that made with canned puree.

Mango Buttercream Cake
1 1/2 cups canned sweetened

mango puree
1 cup sugar
6 beaten egg yolks, at room temperature
3 tablespoons orange liqueur or apricot brandy
2 cups unsalted butter, softened
Two 9-inch or 10-inch layers white cake, cooled
Pirote cookies (36 to 50 cookies, depending on size of cake)
Mandarin orange segments (optional)
Chopped pistachio nuts (optional)

For mango buttercream, in a large heavy saucepan gently simmer mango puree over medium-low heat until puree is reduced to 1 cup, stirring frequently to prevent scorching. Remove from heat.
Stir sugar into mango puree. Cook and stir over medium heat until bubbly. Remove from heat. Gradually stir about 1 cup of the hot mixture into beaten egg yolks. Return all of the egg yolk mixture to the saucepan. Bring to a gentle boil; reduce heat. Cook and stir for 2 minutes more. Remove from heat. Stir in liqueur or brandy.

Pour mango mixture into a bowl; cool to room temperature. (To cool quickly, place the bowl in a larger bowl of ice water; stir occasionally.) Meanwhile, in a large mixing bowl beat butter with an electric mixer on medium speed until fluffy. Pour cooled mango mixture into beaten butter. Beat until combined. Remove 3/4 cup of the buttercream.

Using a serrated cake knife, split each cake layer in half horizontally. Place 1 cake layer half on a plate. Frost with about 1/2 cup of the buttercream. Repeat with 2 more cake layer halves and 1 cup more of the mango buttercream. Top with the last cake layer half. Spread remaining buttercream on top and sides of the cake layers.

Lightly press cookies vertically around the sides of the cake into buttercream. The cookie ends should be even with the bottom of the cake. The tops of the cookies should extend beyond height of cake. Tie cookies with a long fancy ribbon to secure.

Spoon reserved 3/4 cup buttercream into a pastry bag fitted with a large star tip. Pipe buttercream into small mounds on top of the cake. Chill cake or serve immediately. Before serving, arrange mandarin orange segments in the center of the cake; sprinkle nuts in center and around edge of cake, if desired. Makes 12 servings.

Note: For fresh mangoes, peel 3 to 4 ripe mangoes. (A mango is ripe when it gives off a fruity aroma.) Cut around the seed to remove; peel and chop fruit. In a covered blender container or food processor bowl puree the mangoes, one-third at a time, until smooth. There should be 1 1/2 cups pureed fruit. Continue as directed, cooking to reduce to 1 cup.

Cheesecakes make a play for appetizer tray

By The Associated Press

Like crepes, not all cheesecakes are for dessert. Here are two attractive cheesecakes for holiday entertaining: Savory Saga Blue Cheesecake and Savory Seafood Cheesecake, delicious appetizers that can be served with crackers or sliced vegetables.

Be sure to allow the Savory Seafood Cheesecake to remain in the oven for 30 minutes after baking; this will avoid cracking. Then chill well, and garnish with lemon slices and dill sprigs, if desired.

Savory Saga Blue Cheesecake
12 ounces chilled Classic Saga cheese, including rind

Two 8-ounce packages Neufchatel-style light cream cheese
2 cups (1 pound) non-fat or low-fat cottage cheese
1 tablespoon Italian dried herbs
1 1/2 teaspoons freshly ground pepper
2 cups (5 to 8) scallions (green onions), including green tops, thinly sliced
4 to 6 grape leaves, drained and patted dry (optional)

Using the back of wooden spoon, mix the Saga cheese, 1 1/2 packages of the light cream cheese, the cottage cheese, dried herbs, pepper and onions. Reserve one-half package of the light cream cheese for another use. Allow to stand 30 minutes. Line a 7-inch springform pan, if desired, with overlapping grape leaves, extending leaves up the sides of the pan.

Spoon mixture over leaves, smoothing surface. Fold grape leaves over the top. If not using leaves, spray the 7-inch springform pan with non-stick cooking spray; spoon mixture into the pan; smooth surface.

Bake in a 325-degree F oven for 25 to 30 minutes or until slightly puffed. Cool and chill until firm, 3 hours or overnight. Run a knife around the edge of the cheesecake before removing sides of springform pan. If grape leaves are used, turn cheesecake out onto a serving plate, toweling off any excess moisture, or serve on a springform base. Serve with crispbread or rolls.

Note: If using fresh grape leaves, blanch to soften first. Jarred grape leaves are available in many supermarkets.

Savory Seafood Cheesecake
1/2 cup finely crushed thin

wheat crackers
2 tablespoons butter, melted
1 small onion, halved
Two 8-ounce packages cream cheese, softened
Two 6 1/2-ounce cans minced clams, shrimp or crabmeat, drained
2 eggs
1/2 cup dairy-sour cream
1/2 cup shredded Cheddar cheese
1 tablespoon dried dillweed, crushed
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon hot pepper sauce
Preheat oven to 300 degrees F.

In a small bowl combine cracker crumbs and butter; set aside. Butter a 1 1/2-quart dish or oven-proof mixing bowl; line the bottom with a circle of waxed paper; butter waxed paper; set aside. In a food processor fitted with a metal wing blade finely chop onion. Add cream cheese, clams, eggs, sour cream, Cheddar cheese, dill, salt and hot pepper sauce; process until smooth, about 45 seconds. Pour into prepared dish; sprinkle with reserved crumbs. Place dish in a roasting pan. Transfer to oven; fill roasting pan with boiling water to a depth of 2 inches.

Bake in a 300-degree F oven until a knife inserted in cheesecake 1 inch from center comes out clean, about 1 hour. Turn off oven; let cheesecake remain in oven for 30 minutes.

Cool on a wire rack to room temperature, about 1 hour. Cover and refrigerate until cold, about 4 hours or overnight. To unmold, run a metal spatula or long knife along edge of pan; invert onto a serving plate; remove waxed paper. Garnish with lemon slices and dill sprigs, if desired. Serve with crisp crackers, chilled cucumber, carrot or sweet red pepper slices.

Makes one 6-inch cheesecake.

Carving the holiday roast in five easy steps

By The Associated Press

Here's the way to carve a beef rib roast, in five easy steps:

1. Place the roast, rib side down, on a carving board. Using a knife and fork, remove the backbone by cutting along the edge of the bone.

2. If necessary, remove a wedge-shaped slice from the large end of the roast so the meat will set firmly on the carving board. Insert the fork below the top rib and carve across the "face" of the roast toward the rib bone.

3. Cut along the rib bone with the tip of the knife to release the slice of meat.

4. Slide knife back under the slice of meat, steady it with the fork and lift the slice to a serving dish.

5. Remove the rib bone by cutting along the bottom edge of the bone. Put aside and continue carving.

The Beef Industry Council says carving will be easier if you use a sharp knife and allow the roast to stand about 15 to 20 minutes after it comes from the oven.

Rider family settles in Pampa, opens stable and builds home

James C. "Jim" Rider of Parker County and Issadore (I-sa-dore) Frances Crawford of Palo Pinto County were married in 1888. About the time their son, Larry, was born in 1880, Rider bought a ranch near present Lefors and stocked it with cattle.

He lived in a dugout until a house, consisting of a central hall with two rooms on each side, could be built. When the house was finally finished in 1893, Rider sent for his wife and son. He met them at Clarendon and they rode in a hack to their new home.

Their nearest neighbors were the Henry Thuts who lived in the only house near the newly built courthouse at Lefors. Postmaster Henry Thut had the Lefors post office, established October 12, 1892, in his home.

When Larry attended the Lefors school, begin in 1886, he rode a little pony across the North Fork of Red River. He looked forward to the springtime when the rains made the river rise and he could spend the night with the Thut boys—George, Henry, Jr., and Charles.

Anna Kathleen Rider, born in 1901, was named for Mrs. Henry (Anna) Thut, Sr., who assisted at Kathleen's birth.

In 1903, the Rider family moved to Pampa to live in a new four-room house built by J.L. "Jim" Stroope at 303 East Foster. That year Rider opened a livery stable business between 100 South Gillespie and 101 South Ballard (location of present White House Lumber Company). Sometime later Rider left Pampa and died at Big Lake, TX.

Mrs. Rider kept boarders and taught piano at home and in the school for about twenty years. She took a correspondence course in music and also studied with Mr. Cranker, a piano teacher who rode the train from Canadian to give lessons in Pampa. Mrs. Rider died in 1941 at Lubbock.

Larry Rider and Jeff Lard (brother of Elsie Hall) made a white deer for the town of White Deer. The deer had to be replaced because of vandalism, but the original stand is still located at the intersection of Main and Third Streets in White Deer. Later Larry, a game warden, and his wife, Grace, lived at Jayton, TX.

M.K. Brown was very fond of "de-ah little Kathleen." She graduated from Pampa High School in 1921, the year the first volume of The Harvest was published. This statement appears below her senior class picture: "Least but not last," and this refers to size only. Kathleen was easily voted the most popular girl in school—an honor she well deserves."

Kathleen married J.B. Logan and moved to Lubbock where she was still living in 1985. J.B.'s brother, Howard Logan, married Ruby Henry, daughter of W.B. Henry, and they also moved to Lubbock.

Cutting cable sets family free to enjoy one another

DEAR ABBY: Something wonderful has happened to my family, and I want to share it with you and your readers.

I have had cable TV in my home for five years. I have four children—all in grade school—and there was a constant battle about which TV channel to watch, as we had only one set, which was in the living room. The kids would sit there after school changing the channel every two minutes and not watching anything special.

I finally got sick of the squabbling and called the cable company and told them I wanted no more cable TV in my house. The kids were upset with me, but after a couple of days, they didn't miss it at all. Now for the good part:

It's been a year since I returned my cable box, and the children's grades have improved dramatically. They are now reading in their spare time instead of watching the boob tube, and my husband has started to talk to me!

We still enjoy TV, but now we rent tapes of the movies we want to see instead of watching whatever is available on TV.

I wish someone had written a letter like this one for me to see. I hope this helps someone else.

Love you, Abby. Please never retire!
BEV IN WORCESTER, MASS.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR BEV: I hope your letter inspires others to follow your sensible example. And who said anything about retiring? I promise to stay at this typewriter as long as my fingers, and mind, can do the job.

What teen-agers need to know about sex, drugs, AIDS, and getting along with their peers and parents is now in Abby's updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Although you might be inclined to believe otherwise, someone you'll have important dealings with today is likely to be more considerate and tolerant than you'll be. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A matter that is materially meaningful to you might be resolved to your advantage today. However, you may still feel you didn't get everything to which you're entitled.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) If you do not modify views you feel strongly about just to please others, friends will respect you more today. Be your own person and let the chips fall where they may.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Do not broadcast your intentions in advance today, especially in matters that directly affect your career. What you say could be used to your competitor's advantage.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you are in the company of friends who have a disagreement today, be on guard. Try to steer a middle course so that you can arbitrate the matter rather than antagonize it.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your financial trends are favorable today, provided you are prudent in the management of your resources. You do not have too wide a safety margin, so don't let things get out of hand.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Try not to come up with reasons why something can't be done today. Instead, focus on positive elements regarding ways to accomplish your purpose.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) This can be a productive day for you, provided you can separate the wheat from the chaff. Devote your time to what is absolutely necessary.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Even in group endeavors today, make an effort to single out individuals who are worthy of your personal attention. Hard feelings could result if all are treated the same.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Conditions in general are reasonably favorable today, but things aren't likely to be handed to you on a silver platter. Rewards must be won by your own merit.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If you're methodical and practical today, possibilities for fulfilling your aims will be substantially enhanced. If you're not, things that could have been done won't be.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) In order to be successful today, you must know how to make proper value judgments. It won't be to your advantage to waste a lot of time on things that will yield sparse rewards.
