

Arkansas Governor and Democratic presidential candidate Bill Clinton looks back over his shoulder to find the outstretched hand of a supporter at a rally in Portsmouth, N.H., Sunday.

Clintons face nationwide audience in show of unity

Democrat Bill Clinton says he hopes a television appearance with his wife in which he acknowledged causing "pain in my marriage" will end speculation about infidelity and refocus his presidential campaign on the issues.

With his wife, Hillary, at his side, the Arkansas governor asked the American people Sunday night to judge his campaign on its merits instead of on rumors and allegations of infidelity in his past.

In a high-stakes interview on CBS's "60 Minutes," Clinton denied the allegations of Gennifer Flowers, a Little Rock woman who said in a paid tabloid interview that they had a 12-year affair.

But Clinton refused to answer repeated questions about whether he had been unfaithful to his wife.

"I'm not prepared tonight to say that any married couple should ever discuss that with anyone but themselves," he said.

With just three weeks left before the critical leadoff primary in New Hampshire, Clinton was hopeful the controversy was now behind him.

"It is for me," he said as he arrived home in Little Rock. "I'm done."

Clinton and his wife said they had struggled to keep their marriage and family together and did not believe their past difficulties should keep them from the White House.

When interviewer Steve Kroft described their relationship as an admirable "arrangement," the governor interjected and said:

"Hey, wait a minute ... You're looking at two people who love each other. This is not an arrangement or an understanding. This is a marriage. That's a very different thing."

Punching the air for emphasis, Mrs. Clinton added, "You know, I'm not sitting here like some little woman, standing by my man like Tammy Wynette. I'm sitting here because I love him, and I respect him and I honor what he's been through and what we've been through together. And you know, if that's not enough for people, then heck - don't vote for him."

The appearance was an extraordinary attempt to end questions about the rumors that have dogged the governor's campaign for two weeks. The appearance was designed to save his campaign from a sudden dose of uncertainty after a promising start.

In an interview with The Associated Press on Sunday, the Clintons said they hoped the public would understand.

"We just have to wait and see," Clinton said. "What I've done is take my case to the American people."

He told CBS, "The only way to put it behind us, I think, is for all of us to agree that this guy has told us about all we need to know. ... Let's go on and get back to the real problems of this country."

Clinton said he hoped to avoid any further discussion of his personal life.

"I cannot talk about this any more. The American people have to decide this," he told the AP. "If they decide that someone else would be a better president, then I will go back to my wonderful life."

Clinton questioned whether the rules of modern politics were such that "if people have problems in their marriage and there are things in their past which they don't want to discuss which are painful to them, they can't run."

"I have acknowledged wrongdoing. I have acknowledged causing pain in my marriage," Clinton told CBS, adding that he wasn't going to engage in a game of "gotcha" with the news media over alleged indiscretions.

In the AP interview, Clinton reasserted his commitment to his marriage and predicted voters would instead focus on the issues in the presidential campaign.

"In the course of this campaign, people in this country will see that Hillary and I love each other, we're committed to our child and to our family," Clinton said.

"We have something to offer the country, and if they think it is better than what anyone else is offering, I think they'll vote for me."

Meanwhile, a fired Arkansas state employee who had accused Clinton of marital infidelity issued a statement saying he would drop his wrongful dismissal lawsuit against the governor.

Larry Nichols had made the allegations of extramarital affairs in a press release accompanying his lawsuit. He apologized to the women he had named but did not specifically recant the allegations of extramarital affairs.

Timely application of pre-emergents varies

WEED CONTROL SEASON

We get calls about when is the best time to apply pre-emergent weed/grass control herbicides in lawns. Most of the herbicides only have a limited time that they stay active in the soil—generally around 2-3 months.

The timely application becomes important when you consider that most weed/grass seeds have certain germination requirements as far as temperature moisture and light conditions. Most seed will not start the germination process until all of these necessary conditions are met that the particular seed requires.

For example, crabgrass — it requires rather warm soil temperatures to break dormancy. These temperatures don't usually occur until late May or June. Therefore, if crabgrass was the only weed you were trying to control, an early May application would be soon enough. If you apply some of these herbicides early such as February or March, the herbicide will lie decomposing for a couple of months before the weed seeds ever start the germination process. In fact, the herbicide may have already lost its effectiveness before the time the seeds break dormancy and start germination.

For Horticulture

Joe Van Zandt

Timely applications of these pre-emergence herbicides is very important—read the labels and understand when the seeds you are wanting to control start their germination. Of course, weather conditions vary from year to year which makes chemical use a non-exact science and you need to leave a little room for natural variations.

CARE OF HOUSE PLANTS

Improper watering techniques are often the biggest problem factor in home plant failures. Over-watering during periods of low growth creates a major problem. This is especially true during winter months when plant growth is slow due to low light intensities. If the soil is kept saturated constantly, oxygen is unable to reach the plant. This results in loss of the small feeder roots and eventually death of the plant.

In watering house plants, apply just enough water so it runs through the potting soil into the pan. Always discard excess water in the pan to prevent soluble salts from accumulating in the soil.

Color and feel of the soil are the best indicators of moisture content. Plants in a cold room needs less water than those in warm, dry temperatures. Flowering plants and those with much foliage need more water than non-blooming plants or those with little foliage. Always use water that has been allowed to come to room temperature.

If you are concerned about growth of your houseplants, it may be due to low light intensity rather than from lack of water or fertilizer. Remember to not use tap water except from wells and never use water from home water softeners because of the high salt content. Rain water is best for house plant use.

Vet proposes new release of war time sex films

DEAR ABBY: Promiscuous sex seems to be a major topic these days. What should we do about it? How much should we tell our kids?

Many years ago, when I served in the U.S. Army Air Corps, we were brave young men—normal, healthy and innocent—and we were going off to war. The Air Corps, in its wisdom, showed us very graphic movies that explained what could happen to our bodies if we caught what they called in those days a "social disease."

Believe me, it wasn't very pretty. I saw big strapping men faint, and some became nauseated and ran from the room while viewing these movies. They were always shown on Friday afternoon, just before the men took off for a big weekend.

Let me hasten to say that the movies did not kill off our sexual desires. What they did was increase the demand for condoms, which were free for the asking at the checkout desk.

We all know that sex is here to stay. All healthy, normal people are interested in sex, and nothing is going to change that. Perhaps now is the time to start showing those movies again—only this time, they should be shown to the students in high schools. Let them see what can happen to them if they don't either abstain from sex or take proper precautions.

I am confident that, after seeing a few of those movies, most of them will.

DEAR GEORGE: Scare tactics are not the answer; education is. During World War II, a "social disease" (now called a "sexually transmitted disease") was curable with penicillin.

Now we must deal with AIDS, for which there is no known cure. While condoms offer some protection, their failure rate is estimated at anywhere from 11 percent to 19 percent—not very encouraging odds considering that the penalty for a defective condom could be an early grave.

So today, who among the sexually active is safe? Only those who are strictly monogamous with a partner who is also strictly monogamous—provided neither is HIV-positive.

DEAR ABBY: A reader signed "Guilty Conscience" sought advice on how to make restitution for a fraudulent insurance claim he had made many years ago. He feels guilty for having accepted a medical insurance payment he was not entitled to, and now he wants to make amends.

You may be interested to know that the very next day I received a letter of apology and a check from a former policyholder saying he had accepted a claim payment from us in 1974 after he had illegally disposed of his automobile. He said his check of restitution also marked his return to sobriety, as the eighth and ninth steps of Alcoholics Anonymous' recovery program require participants to list those they have harmed, and make amends where possible.

I've sent this person a letter expressing our thanks and our best wishes along with a promise to donate the money he sent to the Chicago Alcoholics Anonymous chapter.

Abby, examples of insurance fraud are found all too often these days. Fraud is a $16 billion problem for property and casualty insurers in this nation, and the more we can do to reduce the problems of fraud, the more control we can exercise on the insurance premiums we all pay.

But these are obviously more than stories about insurance fraud. They're triumphs of conscience and courage, and they should be celebrated.

Redskins bury Bills in Super Bowl XXVI

Redskins' tackle Joe Jacoby provides pass protection for quarterback Mark Rypien (22) in Sunday's Super Bowl XXVI against the Bills.

(AP Laserphoto)

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The no-names on Washington's defense were too much Sunday for Buffalo's no-huddle offense.

The Redskins won their third Super Bowl in 10 years, 37-24, putting the game away with 24 straight points after a scoreless first period in which they blew two touchdown chances. Mark Rypien, the game's MVP, completed 18 of 33 passes for 292 yards and two touchdowns as Washington ran the NFC's streak in the NFL's marquee game to eight straight.

But the win was as much the work of obscure defenders like Kurt Gouveia, Brad Edwards, Fred Stokes, Jason Buck, Alvoid Mays and Andre Collins as any of the team's stars.

"I think we're a very underrated unit," said defensive coordinator Richie Petitbon, who started four players Sunday who were claimed as Plan B free agents. "You'd kind of want to keep it that way until the season's over."

Edwards had two of the Redskins' four interceptions; Gouveia, with help from a Collins blitz, set up a score by picking off a Jim Kelly pass on the first play of the second half and Mays' sack, one of five for the 'Skins, forced a fumble that Stokes recovered. All this against a team that led the NFL in yards gained.

Kelly set a Super Bowl record by throwing 58 times, completing only 28 for 275 yards. Thurman Thomas, the NFL's MVP, did even less, gaining just 13 yards on 10 carries.

"We played a team that was better. They showed it," said Buffalo coach Marv Levy, whose Bills lost 20-19 to the New York Giants in the closest of the NFC's eight straight wins.

It wasn't all defense, of course.

The "Posse" — receivers Art Monk, Gary Clark and Ricky Sanders — led a 17-point explosion in 5 minutes, 45 seconds of the second quarter after a scoreless first period. That surge saw the Redskins use no-huddle offense themselves in a modified reprise of their record 35-point second quarter in their Super Bowl rout of Denver four years ago.

Monk had 7 catches for 113 yards and Clark 7 for 114 yards, including a 30-yard catch that made it 31-10 with 1:24 left in the third quarter after Buffalo had cut a 24-0 lead to 24-10.

Next to Gouveia's interception, that may have been the key play.

"We were setting that up all game," Rypien said. "We got the right coverage, Gary made the right cut and that was it."

"Ryp's one of the great quarterbacks as far as I'm concerned," said guard Russ Grimm, one of the six Redskins who have played with the team in four Super Bowls. "He does more than his share. He deserves MVP."

The defense?

It shut down Thomas, kept Buffalo out of its territory until 3:10 remained in the first half and generally allowed little until two late touchdowns by the Bills made the score more respectable than the game.

"Thurman Thomas is a great running back," said defensive end Charles Mann. "They just didn't use him. I think we got some scores and got up early and they got away from their game plan. I thought he'd carry 30 times."

So did Thomas.

"I felt I should have been used more in the first half. I don't know why we got away from the running game," said Thomas, who led a team that led the league in rushing yards but got just 43 on Sunday, only eight in the first half.

"You got to give credit to the Washington defense," he said. "Our no-huddle offense is a fast-paced offense but they stayed with it. At one point, I thought we had them on the ropes but their offense ran off a drive and gave them a rest."

Whatever, the defense contributed to three second-half scores. And, it helped give Washington coach Joe Gibbs his third Super Bowl win.

Courier topples Edberg to capture Australian Open tennis crown

By STEVE WILSTEIN
AP Tennis Writer

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Jim Courier, swinging a racket like a baseball slugger and sporting a cap to match, is on the verge of becoming the first American man ranked No. 1 since John McEnroe.

Only nine men have ascended to the top in the 20 years of ATP rankings, dominated for most of that period by Jimmy Connors, Bjorn Borg, McEnroe, Ivan Lendl and Stefan Edberg.

Courier is a different breed of player from all of them, with strokes that would look more natural on a baseball field than a tennis court. But through sheer hard work and indomitable spirit, he is about to take his place among the great players of the game.

Courier's 6-3, 3-6, 6-4, 6-2 victory over Stefan Edberg in the Australian Open final Sunday put the red-haired, 21-year-old from Dade City, Fla., in a position to take over Edberg's No. 1 spot in two weeks at the end of the next tournament in San Francisco.

Courier, ranked No. 25 at the start of last year, left Australia trailing Edberg by only 20 points in the ATP computer rankings — 3,671 to 3,651 — a difference he can easily overcome with early-round wins in San Francisco as Edberg sits out that event.

That would end a nearly seven-year drought at the top of the rankings for Americans since McEnroe reigned for nearly five years until mid-1985. Courier also would be the third youngest to become No. 1, trailing by a few months McEnroe in 1980 and Borg in 1977.

Courier lacks the touch and graceful movement of some of those who held No. 1, and he hasn't mastered the serve-and-volley game. Rather, he swings his short, punchy two-fisted backhand like a line-drive hitter in baseball, which he used to be when he had aspirations of a career on the field. And he serves with the same motion he used to pitch.

He acknowledges the roots of his tennis game came from baseball, and thinks he might have done well if he'd pursued it. He just wouldn't have done this well — winning championships so young and being the best in the world at 21. It is a mark of his determination that he's not even satisfied with being No. 1.

"The real mark of a top player is who can do it year in and year out," Courier said. "This year I'm off to a good start to back up my year that I had last year. I think that the true champions are ones who keep on doing it every year. That's what I want to do."

Courier, who became the first American man to win the Australian Open in 10 years and captured his second Grand Slam title in six months, celebrated by dashing out of the stadium and jumping into a river with his tennis shorts on.

"It was really dirty," a smiling Courier said of his dive with coach Brad Stine into the polluted Yarra River to fulfill a deal they made each other as they jogged past its banks each day of the tournament.

A year ago, Boris Becker marked his victory and rise to No. 1 by fleeing the stadium to run alone in the park and bellow at the sky. Courier was just as joyous, though less cautious. He'll be lucky to avoid the various infections that cause health officials here to warn people away from the river.

At least Courier waited to receive the trophy and $270,000 winner's check before taking off. Becker sped away as soon as his match ended.

Courier, overwhelmed by a near-perfect Edberg in the U.S. Open after beating him en route to the French Open crown, drove a final backhand return past him like a double down the line to win this time.

"It tastes just as sweet," Courier said as he compared the Australian title with the French. "It's a little bit different, because I've done it before, but it's no less significant."

Courier said he's not driven to be No. 1, though he clearly would enjoy the status.

"What I'm motivated to do is to play the best tennis that my game can allow me to play, and I think I'm becoming closer and closer to that," he said. "If the best I can do is to be No. 2 in the world, well, then that's not so bad."

"The more you worry about it, the bigger headache it is. Right now I'm just smelling the roses."

Courier slipped through the tournament with incredible ease, facing no seeded player until Edberg, and strolling into the final after a semifinal default by injured Richard Krajicek.

"I've been reading about how anonymous I am, but believe me, I win my matches," Courier said. "Maybe next year you guys will know who I am. I was distraught when I read the papers this morning. I thought I'd already lost the match."

Edberg, who missed the last two months of 1991 with wrist and knee injuries, played far below his form in the U.S. Open. Edgy and out of synch most of the match, he uncharacteristically complained about a couple of calls, as well as the softness of the balls. He said the balls were different from the ones used the rest of the tournament, and they took the power and kick out of his serves.

"I didn't have the timing today," Edberg said. "I didn't play the big points as he did. I tried to do different things, but it wouldn't work. I lost my concentration slightly a few times, and you are not supposed to do that."

Courier won this match from the baseline, just as Monica Seles won the women's singles Saturday, though Courier ventured in on short balls far more often to put winners away.

The layoff since Wednesday didn't hurt Courier's sharpness, as he feared. He held service throughout the first set, facing only two breakpoints, and broke Edberg to go ahead 4-2. Edberg contributed to his break with the first of his seven double-faults in the match at deuce, then lost the game when he netted a weak volley on a ripping backhand return by Courier.

Edberg evened the match in the second set, breaking Courier in the second game with a lovely lob that landed on the baseline. But such moments were rare for Edberg. Courier almost came back in that set, too, but a string on his racket popped on breakpoint with Edberg serving at 5-3.

"I knew that would happen," Courier shouted, looking up at Stine. Courier said he had a dream the night before that he was going to break a string on game point. He couldn't remember the rest of the dream or whether he even won the match, though he recalled in one part he was playing Lendl.

Courier dropped his service in the first game of the third set as Edberg pushed himself hard. Edberg kicked a ball off the court in anger after Courier fought back to deuce from love-40, but the Swede finally got the break — only his second of the match — when Courier's backhand drifted long and wide.

But Courier came right back, pushing Edberg to love-40, and grabbing the break on a forehand volley cross-court.

"That was a very big game," Courier said. "When I've played Stefan in the past, he's always been able to break me early in the sets he's won, then he just cruises through the set. He did it in the second set, and broke me in the third, and I was really upset. I wanted to get back to even terms. He played a little bit of a loose game, I suppose."

Bruins pass another test

By The Associated Press

You have to feel sorry for the UCLA Bruins.

No matter how great a start they get off to this season, they can't top the perfect years of the sport's greatest dynasty.

The current team, one of three unbeaten teams in Division I, can't seem to shake the "wait 'til" tag, as in: "They're undefeated but wait 'til (fill in the blank)."

The second-ranked Bruins passed another "wait 'til" test on Saturday with an 83-77 victory at No. 24 Stanford. Earlier tests passed were then-No. 2 Indiana in the Tipoff Classic and then-No. 6 Arizona and its 71-game home winning streak.

Before the current Bruins can join the previous four unbeaten teams in school history, we'll have to wait 'til they play Southern Cal, the second-place team in the Pac-10, on Wednesday; at Louisville next Sunday; at Louisville next Sunday; a home game with Stanford; a game at Notre Dame; and then wrap things up with home games against Duke and Arizona.

The Top O' Texas Bassmasters Club celebrated its 20th anniversary with a banquet Saturday night in the Coronado Inn's Biarritz Club. Selected as the Bassmasters top six individuals were (l-r) Gary Carter, Roy Alderson, Joe Millican, Mike Young, B.B. Reeves and Bob Bruce. They will be going to the state tournament April 3-4 on Lake Sam Rayburn. Other honors went to Bob Schiffman, Duck Award, and Gary Carter, Mr. Bass.

PHS teams visit Caprock for District 1-4A games

Both the Pampa High boys' and girls' basketball teams travel to Amarillo Tuesday night to take on Caprock in District 1-4A basketball action.

The Harvesters are 21-2 for the season and 3-0 in district play. The Lady Harvesters are 14-7 and 4-1.

Caprock boys are 10-13 and also 3-0 in the district race. Caprock girls are 5-15 and 2-3.

Both schools are coming off district victories last Friday night.

Cederick Wilborn poured in 31 points as the Harvesters routed Berger, 87-57. Jeff Young added 17 points and Randy Nichols had 10.

"I was real pleased with the way our kids played. We needed that win, like we need them all in district," said Pampa head coach Robert Hale. "We're playing relaxed and that makes a big difference."

Caprock scored 25 points in the third quarter enroute to a 75-53 win over Dumas.

"Caprock is tied with us for the lead, so that makes them a front-runner as far as winning the district championship," Hale said.

Hale said the Longhorns have a good-sized team to go with outstanding guard play.

"Caprock has got two big post kids and two real good guards. They've got a well-rounded team," Hale said. "They can score and they can play good defense."

The Lady Harvesters outlasted Berger in the girls' contest, 44-36, with Nikki Ryan leading the way with 15 points. Kristen Becker tallied 13 points and Amber Seaton added 10.

Caprock girls outlasted Dumas, 54-50, to win their last district outing.

Tuesday night's district double-header begins at 6:30 p.m. with the girls' game.

Olympic skiers in peak form for upcoming Winter Games

American skier Diann Roffe speeds to a fourth-place finish Sunday in the Women's World Cup Super-Giant slalom race in Morzine, France. Roffe's fourth-place was the best Super-Giant finish by a U.S. skier this season.

Heinzer, Seizinger dominate weekend's downhill events

By ROB GLOSTER
AP Sports Writer

MORZINE, France (AP) — The Winter Games are still two weeks away, but several skiers favored for Olympic gold already are in peak form.

In a sport that frequently produces surprise winners, four World Cup races in the Alps this weekend went according to form:

— Franz Heinzer continued his domination of the men's downhill, winning in Wengen, Switzerland.

— Alberto Tomba, who hopes to successfully defend two Olympic titles next month, won a slalom in Wengen.

— Katja Seizinger increased her lead in the women's downhill standings with a victory in Morzine.

— Deborah Compagnoni, the hottest women's skier since the start of the year, won a super-giant slalom in Morzine and two-time world champion Ulrike Maier was second.

Tomba, who won the slalom and giant slalom titles at the 1988 Calgary Olympics, said he is pleased with the similarities between this season and his last Olympic campaign.

"I have seven victories this season. Four years ago, before I went into the Olympics, I also had seven victories so I think that's a good omen," he said.

Heinzer, who captured the world downhill title last year and won Saturday's race in his homeland by a whopping 1.6 seconds, said he was not yet thinking about an Olympic medal.

"I don't want to put myself under pressure now by thinking about the Olympics," he said.

Seizinger, 19, led the first German sweep of a World Cup race by winning her second consecutive downhill — she also won two weeks earlier in Schruns, Austria.

Katrin Gutensohn was second and Michaela Gerg was third, completing the first sweep of a women's World Cup downhill since a Swiss trio placed 1-2-3 at Steamboat Springs, Colo., in 1989.

Compagnoni won her first World Cup race Sunday, but it came as little surprise since she had been second in three giant slaloms earlier this season. She defeated Maier, who won world titles in 1989 and 1991, by nearly half a second.

The victory by Compagnoni, who switched to longer skis for the first time in the race, was the first by an Italian woman in a World Cup race since 1986.

The top American performance this weekend was by Diann Roffe, who was fourth in the Super-G in Morzine — the best finish by a U.S. skier in that event this season.

Roffe, who won a world championship in giant slalom in 1985 and is skiing well this season after knee surgery, said she was surprised by the speed of the course in Sunday's race.

"It's only two weeks to the Olympics. It's coming down to a time when you can't hold back any more, you've got to put all your cards on the table," Roffe said. "I think I was pretty much at my limit — the course came at me so fast."

No American placed within the top 20 in either of the men's races this weekend. The best U.S. showing in the women's downhill was Hilary Lindh's 16th place.

Tyson begins fight of his life

By LISA LEVITT RYCKMAN
AP National Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Mike Tyson steps into the fight of his life Monday with the opening bell of his rape trial, facing the end of his freedom and career if the decision goes to a woman with a powerful accusation.

In one corner is the former world heavyweight champion. In the other, a teen-age Miss Black America contestant who says he attacked her during last year's pageant.

Marion Superior Court Judge Patricia Gifford is hearing the trial to determine Tyson's fate on charges of rape, criminal deviate conduct and criminal confinement. Conviction carries a possible maximum prison sentence of 63 years.

The trial has drawn news media from around the world, but as a national spectacle of sex and sleaze, it bears little resemblance to the recent William Kennedy Smith trial.

Mike Tyson, a brawler from the streets of Brooklyn is no blue-blooded prep. His accuser, a former Sunday school teacher, is no hard-partying single mom.

And Indianapolis, a quiet conservative Midwestern capitol, is no Palm Beach, Fla.

No cameras will be allowed in the 50-seat courtroom. It's against state law. But that shouldn't lessen the drama.

Each side is expected to call at least a dozen witnesses. Certain to testify is Tyson's accuser, a girl-next-door type described as "sweet" and "spunky" who tips the scales at less than 100 pounds.

The woman told police she and Tyson met at a pageant rehearsal, then she went with him to a nearby hotel, where he held her on the bed, fondled her, performed oral sex and raped her.

Tyson insists the woman consented. "The woman knows what happened. I know what happened. I'm innocent," he said after an initial court appearance.

No reporters will be allowed inside on Monday because all space is needed for prospective jurors. Gifford estimates it will take two days to seat a jury and four alternates from a pool of 112.

The judge, a savvy former prosecutor known for grace under pressure, has ordered the jurors sequestered for the duration of the trial, which she expects to last two weeks.

Opening statements could come as soon as Wednesday. At Tyson's table sits Washington attorney Vincent Fuller, renowned for his defense of would-be presidential assassin John Hinckley, who was found innocent by reason of insanity in the 1981 shooting of Ronald Reagan.

Fuller reportedly is receiving $5,000 a day, and is supposed to be worth it.

"If anybody can win this case, it's Fuller," said Plato Cacheris, a Washington attorney and longtime friend. "His magnificent victory on the Hinckley case just demonstrates his prowess."

At Fuller's side will be local attorney James Voyles Jr., known for his meticulous preparation and weakness for M&M's, which he often munches in court.

For the prosecution, the state has hired J. Gregory Garrison, a flamboyant courtroom veteran unimpressed by his opponents' celebrity.

Fuller and Tyson "put their pants on one leg at a time, the last time I checked," Garrison has said.

Speculation about courtroom strategies abound.

"If I were Tyson's attorney, my defense would be to show he was grabbing everyone in sight for two days," said Henry Karlson, a law professor at Indiana University-Purdue University Indianapolis. "I would put it on the record to show that everyone knew what he wanted."

Outside the Canterbury Hotel, where the alleged rape occurred, two dozen members of the Guardian Angels anti-crime group marched and chanted on Sunday, carrying signs that said "Do the Right Thing" and "Keep It Clean — Don't Get Mean."

"This will be a real uphill battle for women, because it involves one of the greatest sports figures of all time," said Lisa Sliwa, the Angels' national director. "Men I've talked to seem to feel it necessary to defend Tyson more urgently because he can box."

Klecker rallies to win women's marathon

HOUSTON (AP) — Francie Larriou Smith looked at Janis Klecker and said, "For Janis, running a marathon is like brushing your teeth."

Then, realizing that she had unwittingly made a play on words about Klecker's profession, Larriou Smith said, "Funny I should say that about a dentist."

Klecker probably wished she were a physician rather than a practicing dentist in Minnetonka, Minn., when her body and her psyche were battered during Sunday's U.S. Olympic women's marathon trials.

Klecker, 31, who estimates she has run between 35 and 40 marathons in 12 years, was running with the lead pack just past mile 15 when she — and some others — stopped at a water station.

Suddenly, Klecker was on the ground, her chance to make the three-woman team severely diminished.

"It just happened, I don't know how," the bemused Klecker said after making a miraculous recovery and rallying to win the race in a personal-best 2 hours, 30 minutes, 12 seconds.

"Our legs got tangled, and I wound up on the ground with a loud scream. The pack went by me, but Cathy (O'Brien) came back and picked me up."

The sportsmanlike O'Brien also then picked up the pace, eventually zipped past the leaders and, with less than a mile remaining in the 26-mile, 385-yard race, appeared headed for victory.

But her hamstrings tightened, she slowed considerably and the rejuvenated and reinvigorated Klecker swept past her in the final yards, winning by about 50 yards for her biggest triumph ever.

Good samaritan O'Brien, 24, the youngest woman in the 89-woman starting field — 67 of whom finished — was timed in 2:30:26 in making the team for the second straight time.

The irrepressible Larriou Smith, 39, finished third in 2:30:39, earning a record-tying fifth Olympic berth (three others were at 1,500 meters and one at 10,000 meters). The only other American to make five Olympic track and field teams was long jumper Willye White.

While Klecker, O'Brien and Larriou Smith all provided heartwarming stories, such was not the case for Lisa Weidenbach and Kim Jones.

Weidenbach, called "The Heart-break Kid" after her fourth-place finishes in the 1984 and 1988 marathon trials, again missed the team by one place. After being with the top three at 20 miles, she faded and finished fourth again, in 2:33:32.

Jones, fifth in the 1988 trials and the fastest qualifier for Sunday's race, was forced to drop out after 3.1 miles because of an injured left ankle.

Julia Emmons, chairman of the Women's Long Distance Running Committee of The Athletics Congress, the national governing body for the sport, called O'Brien's unusual gesture of assistance toward Klecker "symbolic of the team we are sending to Barcelona."

"Cathy stopped her own race to help an eventual teammate," Emmons said. "That's the type of sportsmanship, character and grace we have on the team."

"It happened so quickly," the surprised O'Brien said of the incident. "We were all going for a water stop, and I thought I would go down, too. It was an instant reaction."

"I grabbed her and said, 'Are you all right?'"

The shocked Klecker said she felt all right after the fall, although both her hands and a hip had struck the ground.

"I needed to gather myself up and get back into the race," she said. "I was not hurt, but I was shaken up."

After regrouping mentally and physically, Klecker showed that her experience, resiliency and familiarity with the Houston course, which she had run five previous times, were beneficial.

As excited as Klecker was when she crossed the finish line — "It was a dream come true," she said — was her father, Norman Horns.

"I knew she was strong the way she was training, but that was quite a finish," he said.

"Injuries held her back over the last few years. Why is she strong now? I can give you an analogy: Her physiology is like putting a 747 engine into a Volkswagen body. "Her cardiovascular capacity for years has been out of balance with her skeletal system. It's only in the last three or four years that she's been able to train without being injured."

Palmer stages dramatic charge to win Senior Skins Game

KOHALA COAST, Hawaii (AP) — For a while at least, 62-year-old Arnold Palmer again experienced some of the feeling of his glory years on the PGA tour.

"When I realized I was the overall winner, of course I was very happy," Palmer said Sunday after he staged a dramatic charge to win two holes worth seven skins and $205,000 in the Senior Skins Game.

"I've had a couple of years when things haven't gone very well for me, my game has not been good and I've had a lot of other things that haven't gone the way you would like them to go.

"I don't want to get a position where I was down all the time, and to feel the way I did after 15 (No. 15, where he won $105,000) is a wonderful feeling."

Palmer said he felt the same way recently when he shot a 66 in the Bob Hope Desert Classic, putting him in contention early.

"Playing in Palm Springs and how I felt when I was playing there, at one point in the round, I remembered how lucky I have been and how fortunate I've been to play. After No. 15 today, all that came back, just how lucky I am."

In the Senior Skins, after playing poorly and being shut out the first day, Palmer stormed back on Sunday to win his total for the tournament to $120,000.

Jack Nicklaus, the big winner last year with $310,000 and the big winner the first day of the 1992 tournament with $95,000, was shut out on the second day.

"When you shoot something like a 34 and don't win a skin ... you just watch two guys play as well as Arnold and Chi Chi did and feel you weren't even really in the game," Nicklaus said.

He added, "Chi Chi probably played the best over the two days, and Arnold played awfully well today; he kept right after it."

Lee Trevino, on medication for an ear infection, also came up empty on Sunday after winning $30,000 the first day.

"Jack and I got most of the skins yesterday and we just got wiped out today," Trevino said.

Both Palmer's big money-winning shots came on par-3, 202-yard holes at the Mauna Lani Resort course.

Palmer, who overnight seemed to straighten out problems with his irons that plagued him the first day, hit his tee shot to within 15 feet of the pin on No. 15 after the two previous holes were tied.

Trevino, who was just outside Palmer, missed his putt, then Palmer stroked the ball into the middle of the cup to earn $105,000.

Palmer's winning shot on the 12th hole was even more dramatic. Palmer hit long on the hole and wound up on the back fringe, with Nicklaus and Rodriguez both on the green.

Palmer's chip from 45 feet, however, twisted down and into the hole and Nicklaus and Rodriguez both missed their putts.

In the Senior Skins, each hole is a tournament within itself, with the prize money (the skin) carrying over if no player wins the hole outright. The prize money thus builds until one golfer does win a hole outright.

The $450,000 total purse was broken down to $15,000 for each of the first six holes, $25,000 each for the next six, then $35,000 each for the final six holes.

Calcavecchia strings together four birdies to win Phoenix Open

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Mark Calcavecchia sent a message to Curtis Strange and Greg Norman:

"OK, guys. I broke my streak. Now it's up to you."

Like Strange and Norman, Calcavecchia came into the 1992 pro golf tour with some things to prove and more than a few self-doubts.

None of those three won in 1991. Neither Calcavecchia nor Strange had won since 1989.

Calcavecchia's last victory came in the 1989 British Open. He'd plumbed the depths of his slump when he blew what appeared to be a certain victory in singles play in the 1991 Ryder Cup Matches.

"I was not a very happy person last year," he said.

But he changed all of that Sunday with a run-away, 5-stroke victory in the Phoenix Open, a triumph that was secured by a closing string of four consecutive birdies.

"It's been 2 1/2 years, and that's too long when you love to win as much as I do," Calcavecchia said after his nearflawless, 8-under-par 63 over the final 18 holes at the TPC at Scottsdale.

U.S. official: Former republics exceed expectations in disarming nuclear weapons

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

SHANNON, Ireland (AP) — The former Soviet republics are exceeding expectations in dismantling their battlefield nuclear weapons, a senior U.S. official said today as Secretary of State James A. Baker III flew to Moscow for a Middle East conference.

Some of the artillery shells, land mines, air-defense missiles and naval weapons have been gathered and stored within the republics while others are being shipped to Russia to be disarmed, the official said.

"We have some real responses to the concerns that we had," said the official, speaking to reporters aboard Baker's plane on the condition of anonymity. "They are making more rapid headway than would have been surmised."

He called the overall performance "very good news" but said there has been some lag on destroying the weapons after they are dismantled — a move that ensures the weapons never could be reassembled.

But the delay is caused by a lack of technology and not a shortage of goodwill, the official said.

As a result, the Bush administration will begin an exchange of technicians shortly, using a $400 million congressional appropriation, the official said.

American experts will go to Russia and other republics to give instruction in destroying nuclear weapons and the former republics will send technicians to the United States to learn techniques, he said.

Baker's plane stopped in Shannon, Ireland, today to refuel en route to Moscow, where he will attend a two-day Mideast conference designed to ease Arab-Israeli tensions by focusing on common regional problems.

But the nuclear topic was also on his mind as he prepared for a meeting this evening with Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev.

There are some 28,000 tactical or short-range nuclear weapons spread among virtually all the 12 former Soviet republics, including about 19,000 alone in Russia.

NATO officials have complained the weapons are hard to keep track of. If any fell into the hands of terrorists or rogue regimes the results could be catastrophic.

The concern has risen with the collapse of the Soviet Union and the uncertainty that followed.

Baker took up the issue with leaders of Russia, Ukraine, Belarus, Kazakhstan and Kirghizia during a visit to the five former republics last month.

Under Secretary of State Reginald Bartholomew followed with a delegation drawn from the Pentagon, CIA, National Security Council, the Energy Department and other U.S. government offices.

Last October, former Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev announced all nuclear weapons for artillery and land-based tactical weapons would be destroyed.

Also, the Soviet leader pledged to withdraw all naval short-range nuclear weapons and said some carried on airplanes would be destroyed.

Overall, about 15,000 weapons were bound for destruction. In November, Congress appropriated $400 million to assist the Soviets in getting the job done.

The official traveling with Baker said the former republics would be held to Gorbachev's pledges and to the various arms control agreements reached with the United States.

In fact, he told reporters aboard Baker's plane, "they actually have moved more rapidly on the question of assembly, storage and dismantling" of the tactical missiles.
