Attorney says Lynn Brown didn't threaten him

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

The local attorney who was allegedly the victim of threats by former Gray County Sheriff's Deputy Lynn Brown strongly denied Wednesday that Brown ever threatened him.

James M. "Rowdy" Bowers said Thursday, "Lynn didn't threaten me."

Sheriff Jim Free said Brown had made threats to Bowers in 1989 and that was one reason he was terminated from the sheriff's office on Monday afternoon.

Free also listed other reasons for the termination, which were insubordination and violation of departmental policies, including the use of take-home vehicles. He also listed an August 1990 incident of Brown discharging a firearm to break up a fight as a reason for the termination.

Brown, however, contends the sheriff fired him because he has filed as a Democratic candidate in the sheriff's race.

Brown is one of four people who will be on the Democratic primary ballot on March 10. Free and three others will face off in the Republican primary.

Bowers, a $100 contributor to Sheriff Free's re-election campaign, said he can recall a couple of incidents where Brown has not agreed with his handling of cases throughout the years, but that neither of those times was the attorney threatened.

He said the incident in which the sheriff claims Bowers was threatened occurred at the sentencing hearing of Brown's half-brother, Kenneth Adkism on Nov. 15, 1989. Bowers represented Adkism.

The attorney said, "His (Brown's) beef was, what have you done to defend him?"

Brown, too, recalls being upset with the defense attorney because he did not believe he had done everything possible to help his half-brother.

Adkism was sentenced to 20 years in the state penitentiary on a voluntary manslaughter conviction after pleading guilty to the stabbing death of his live-in.

Adkism testified he could recall little of the details of the incident, but did admit under questioning by the district attorney that he did stab Dollie Mae Jackson in the Oct. 16, 1989, incident.

"We haven't agreed on a lot of things," Brown said of Bowers, "but I've never threatened him."

Bowers said of Brown, "I know he highly dislikes me, but that's his opinion and he's entitled to it. But he never threatened me."

Brown said, "I don't dislike him, but I didn't like what he did (in his brother's case). But we went on and we still speak."

Sheriff Free this morning, however, said he spoke with Bowers following the incident in November 1989, and Bowers told him Brown had threatened him.

"After it happened, I asked Rowdy about it and he said it wasn't the first time he'd been threatened," Free said today.

Bowers, however, does not recall the sheriff ever speaking to him about the incident, nor does he recall any of the deputies ever questioning him.

"Nobody ever asked me about that. I didn't get threatened," Bowers said.

Brown said the sheriff sympathized with him back in November 1989 and let him go home to be with his family because he was upset. He said nothing was ever placed in his personnel file about any alleged threats.

Free says he sent Brown home until he could "calm down."

Kentucky National Guard plane crashes into Indiana restaurant

By BOB LEWIS
Associated Press Writer

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) - A military transport plane crashed into a restaurant and adjacent motel this morning, killing an undetermined number of people and spewing fuel that sent flames 50 to 60 feet into the air.

Capt. Phil Miller, a Kentucky National Guard spokesman, said five crew members were believed to have died in the crash of the C-130 military transport but the deaths had not been confirmed. They were members from the 123rd Tactical Air Lift Wing based in Louisville, Ky., he said.

Indiana State Police Sgt. J.R. Rhodes said fatalities had been confirmed but he didn't know how many. At least four people were injured.

Police and rescue workers were trying to evacuate at least two people believed trapped in the JoJo's restaurant. And state police said an Evansville firefighter called for body bags to be taken to the fourth floor of the adjacent Drury Inn motel.

The plane apparently was heading south on takeoff from Evansville Regional Airport when it went down, Rhodes said.

It crashed into the rear of the restaurant and the north side of the Drury Inn, spraying fire for hundreds of feet. A tower of black smoke was visible for miles.

"It came over the service station real low and real loud and shook the building real hard and broke some windows. Then it hit the restaurant and there was a thud," said a Drury Inn employee who declined to give his name.

"The wing was sticking out of the back of the JoJo's at first. But since then it must have melted down because we can't see it," he said.

The 24-hour restaurant is located on U.S. 41, about a mile from the airport.

"I thought it was an earthquake or something, said witness Tracy Lechner of Evansville. "Me and my buddy were eating at a back table and it sounded like a truck, but we said, 'That's too loud to be a truck.' Then you could hear the propellers and the whole roof just came in."

At least four people suffered second- and third-degree burns and were being treated at Welborn and Deaconness hospitals, officials said. At least two of the victims had been inside the restaurant when the plane crashed, a Welborn spokeswoman said.

Serio said two people were still trapped in the back of the restaurant at noon. They were among 15 to 20 who were in the building when the plane crashed, he said.

Said Debbie Brennan, manager of the Drury Inn: "We heard a boom and then there was a fireball. There are tons of people out here now. The building's on fire."

A cook, Michael Kelley, 26, of Evansville, said he was in the rear of the building when the walls caved in on him and fire erupted everywhere.

"There was a girl in the back. We were yelling for her. 'Lynette! Lynette! And she was yelling back, 'Yeah, Yeah, I'm here!' But we couldn't get to her. She's still in there," he said as he began weeping.

Buchanan opens campaign office in Texas

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

ARLINGTON - Pat Buchanan for President forces have opened a Texas Campaign office here and note that media forces are beginning to recognize the columnist-turned-candidate as a serious threat for the Republican nomination.

"Even the Bush people are getting more and more concerned as the days go by," said Buchanan spokesperson Marty Brangwynne.

"We have raised more money in the last week than Bush has. Things are heating up. We are getting a lot of attention in Dallas/Fort Worth, Houston, Austin, all over. Of course, in West Texas and far East Texas people love Pat Buchanan because of what he stands for.

However, the campaign spokesman also noted, "Realistically, Bush being a former congressman from here has an impact on things, but we have a very conservative state and a lot of conservatives are having a problem with the fact that George Bush has turned his back on the conservative movement."

Brangwynne said Buchanan's organization "stacks up rather favorably" against those of Bush and leading Democrat contender Bill Clinton.

"We have a lot of young people involved with lots of energy and enthusiasm," Brangwynne noted. "We feel there is an impact that can be made. If we didn't think Texas was important or that we couldn't win here, we wouldn't have set up an office."

Regarding widespread rumors that Buchanan's candidacy is merely an attempt by arch-conservatives to bring Bush "back into the fold," Brangwynne said, "Poppycock."

"I do not believe that for one moment," he stated. "We have far too many people in this country with conspiracy theories and that's just one of them. It is just another attempt to discredit Pat Buchanan's campaign. But the word is getting out and people are understanding the answers can't be found in 20 or 30 second sound bites. If you listen to what Pat Buchanan has to say, they find he can't be pigeon-holed. He is just a consistent conservative."

Brangwynne said Buchanan has tentatively scheduled a visit to the Alamo in early March to announce to Bush he is "not prepared to surrender Texas or the conservative cause" as supporters believe Bush has done.

House votes to probe into 1980 Reagan campaign over delay of freeing hostages

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Brushing aside charges of partisanship, the House formally authorized a probe into whether the 1980 Reagan-Bush campaign schemed with Iran to delay freedom for 52 American hostages.

The House voted 217-192 on Wednesday to proceed with the investigation, six months after it was requested by Democratic leaders.

While Republicans cried foul, Democrats said they only want to put to rest allegations that the 1980 Republican campaign got the hostages' release postponed to forestall the re-election of Jimmy Carter.

The vote fell mostly along party lines, with 34 Democrats - primarily southerners and conservatives - joining a solid bloc of Republicans in opposition.

The timing virtually ensured that the probe would extend well into this year's presidential election season. Republicans loudly denounced it as an attempt not to get at the truth, but at the president.

Rep. Bob Livingston, R-La., said Democrats were pursuing allegations made by "liars, felons, frauds and opportunists."

"I feel confident that in the end the American people will say to themselves, 'What in the heck was that all about?'" Livingston said during five hours of often vitriolic debate.

But Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., who will chair the investigating task force, said he believed a formal probe is the only way to reach some final resolution on the allegations, which have persisted for more than a decade.

"I do not see how you can get to the bottom of these matters unless you have a formal investigation by an official party with subpoena power, able to take statements under oath, and able to have secure access to information," said Hamilton, who also was chairman of the House panel that investigated the Iran-Contra arms and money affair.

Hamilton has hired as his chief counsel Lawrence E. Barcella, a former assistant U.S. attorney in Washington who earned fame by snaring renegade CIA agent Edwin Wilson.

Rep. Henry Hyde of Illinois, the chief Republican on the task force, has retained as chief minority counsel Richard Leon, who was an Iran-Contra investigator for the House.

Hyde said he would cooperate and seek a fair and balanced investigation, but he called the effort "an excursion into political paranoia."

"Many liberals have never gotten over the victory of Ronald Reagan," he said. Democrats believe "he couldn't have won but for foul play."

House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., denied any political motive. "I am not in the business of trying to use this for any partisan or electoral purpose," he told a reporter. He said he hoped the investigation would yield at least preliminary results by this summer, well before November's elections.

Democrats contend they are not out to get Reagan or Bush but simply want to clear the air of a rumor that, if true, would amount to treason.

They point to public statements by Bush, Reagan and Carter in favor of an investigation, as well as appeals by some of the 52 hostages.

The investigation takes its name from the 1980 Reagan campaign's fear that Carter would win release of the hostages through diplomacy on the eve of the election - an "October Surprise" that could also rescue his political fortunes.

The Congressional Budget Office has estimated the cost of the House investigation at $1.2 million to $2.5 million.

Yeltsin: Reform failure could revive dictatorship

PARIS (AP) - Russian President Boris Yeltsin said today that dictatorship could return to his country unless the international community helps ensure the success of political and economic reforms.
 "If Russia fails in its reforms, especially of the economy, a dictator will appear," Yeltsin said. "That's why the international community must contribute to a solution."
 Yeltsin spoke during a reception at City Hall in Paris midway through a three-day state visit to France.
 French officials, eager to demonstrate a willingness to provide support, said they planned to open a $277 million line of credit to finance Russian imports of French industrial goods and a similar amount to finance grain purchases.
 Premier Edith Cresson also said France would support Russia's request for membership in the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank.
 Yeltsin conferred with several French officials and politicians, including Foreign Minister Roland Dumas, Paris Mayor Jacques Chirac and former President Valery Giscard d'Estaing.

 Chirac and Giscard lead the two main conservative opposition parties.
 Yeltsin and Dumas devoted much of their talks to nuclear security, according to Dumas' spokesman, Daniel Bernard. He said Yeltsin pledged further disarmament initiatives and told Dumas that tactical nuclear weapons in other former Soviet republics would be on Russian soil before July.
 Yeltsin, in his comments at City Hall, said Russia was prepared to sharply cut its arsenal of nuclear warheads.
 On Wednesday, an official traveling with Yeltsin said Russia intends to sell or lease to foreigners half its oil production facilities and exploration rights.
 Vladislav Sorokin, chief of the Russian Foreign Ministry's economics department, said Russia is preparing laws to allow foreign firms to acquire large blocks of shares in soon-to-be privatized oil companies.

 The Soviet Union, the world's largest oil producer in the past decade, saw its output plummet last year as a result of political and economic upheaval. Foreign investment would be expected to boost output and drive prices lower on the world market.
 The privatization of the Russian oil industry should take three to five years, said Alexander Mariachine, president of the Neftgazstrobank, the Russian commercial bank charged with privatizing part of the petroleum industry.
 Societe Nationale Elf Aquitaine, the French state-controlled oil group, announced today the completion of an oil production-sharing agreement with Russia in the Saratov-Volgograd region.
 Elf will be sole operator on the site east of the Volga river between Saratov and Volgograd. Elf intends to invest several hundred million dollars, and production is expected to begin in 1995.

 "We are always open to suggestions that customers would like for us to carry."
 Caldwell explained, "They came in Jan. 6 to begin the work and we are already 99 percent through. Anthonys' commitment is to the average income customer and provide goods that they can afford. Anthonys is trying to help the family during these recessionary times."

Texas Tech has extensive JFK assassination files

LUBBOCK (AP) - One of the most complete collections of files on the assassination of President John F. Kennedy has been stored for years at Texas Tech University - and virtually untouched, a school official says.
 "It's no great secret," David Murrah said Wednesday, gesturing toward a dozen stacked cardboard boxes. "We've had some of this stuff since 1967, and no one has been to see it."
 Murrah, director of Tech's Southwest Collection, said the collection of 12,000 documents and photos includes photocopies of police reports, security information, autopsy reports and photographs of Kennedy and the alleged assassin Lee Harvey Oswald.

The files are available to the public, and Murrah expressed surprise that Kennedy researchers hadn't stumbled onto them. It's hooked up to about 6,000 libraries via computer.
 Tech photography professor Hershel L. Womack Jr. said Wednesday some of the documents aren't accessible at other places. Those include some unedited notes in the Warren Commission, he said.
 When Carr, 73, discovered the university had not publicized his files, he wrote to President Robert W. Lawless, reprimanding Tech.
 "I think it's become a pretty important issue because of the recent JFK movie and all the publicity revolving around it," Carr said Wednesday from Austin.
 The documents focus only on the investigation in Texas.
 "These were records I accumulated during my time as attorney general," Carr said. "Other than the file in Washington, this is the most complete file of all evidence compiled from the Texas angle."

 Following the assassination, President Lyndon Johnson asked that Carr conduct a Texas Court of Inquiry. He was assisted by Leon Jaworski, Watergate prosecutor from Houston, and Dean Robert Story, former dean of the Southern Methodist University Law School.
 Carr said he agreed with the commission's findings and said Oliver Stone's movie JFK disturbed him. The movie questions whether Oswald was the lone assassin.
 "I want to get out truth out, particularly because the younger generation has not had the opportunity to know what the facts are," he said. "To raise all of these false alarms to this generation - they never had the opportunity to read the Warren Commission report and know our angle of the investigations in the '60s - is a tragic misuse of a movie."
 "A lot people don't want to believe that Oswald shot the president, but it happened," Carr said.

 The Mobile Office will be traveling to each town in the district on a monthly basis. For more information, contact Bob Jackson, Community Representative, or Debbie Miller, district director, at (806) 371-8844.

Parole board denies request to commute death sentence for Johnny Frank Garrett

By MICHAEL GRACZYK
Associated Press Writer

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Attorneys for Johnny Frank Garrett have a last chance for an appeal before the U.S. Supreme Court after the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles refused to recommend a commutation of Garrett's death sentence, scheduled to be carried out next week.

The board Wednesday took just 25 minutes before making a near-unanimous recommendation that Gov. Ann Richards not halt the execution of Garrett, convicted of raping and killing a nun in Amarillo 10 years ago.

Garrett faces lethal injection before dawn next Tuesday.

The board considered two hours of testimony from six witnesses called by Garrett's attorney, Warren Clark, who tried to show Garrett was the victim of abuse and was mentally incompetent.

"Not every case deserves this hearing. I know that. This case is different. Johnny Frank Garrett is unique. His case is unique," Clark said.

But Potter County District Attorney Danny Hill used only about 15 minutes of his allotted two hours to tell the board that Garrett deserved to be put to death.

The board voted 17-0 with one abstention. None of the board members would comment after the decision on the advice of board Chairman Jack Kyle.

Garrett was convicted of raping and strangling 76-year-old Sister

Tadea Benz, a Franciscan nun, after breaking into the St. Francis Convent near his home in Amarillo on Halloween night in 1981. He was 17 at the time.

"I don't think you feel good about somebody being executed," Hill said, after the board announced its decision. "But you do feel that justice is served."

"My position is that he didn't have any mental defect except that he isn't normal. No normal person would commit that act. He attacked her with such violence. He bent the knife in her. The death penalty is proper in this case," Hill said.

Last month, Garrett came within an hour of being put to death when Richards stopped the execution, citing a clemency request from Pope John Paul II.

Garrett supporters had suggested the board recommend to Richards that the death sentence be commuted to life without parole.

Clark said he would now take the case to the U.S. Supreme Court, where the appeal was pending at the time Richards halted the scheduled lethal injection.

"That's our last appeal," he said. Asked how optimistic he was that Garrett could be saved, Clark replied, "I'm not."

Three psychiatrists and two Catholic priests, including the Bishop of Amarillo, along with one of Garrett's former teachers, testified before the board and more than 100 people who attended the packed hearing in the courtroom at the Criminal Justice Institute at Sam Houston State University.

In addition, one of the psychiatrists showed a 30-minute excerpt of a 3 1/2-hour taped interview made last month in which she said Garrett displayed examples of multiple personality syndrome.

On the tape, Garrett, who called himself Aaron, said that Garrett did not kill the nun but Aaron did.

"I think he's simply too crazy to kill," Clark said.

Clark said he wanted to bring Garrett, 28, before the board, but board officials worried about security in transferring the inmate the 15 miles from death row to the hearing site at Sam Houston University.

"They won't bring him," Clark said. "I wanted him here to just show them how crazy he is."

Dorothy Lewis, a New York University psychiatrist testifying for Garrett, described his wretched childhood, detailing beatings, sodomy, rape and forced participation in pornographic films.

"This is how you create a psychotic individual," Ms. Lewis said. "If any of this happened to us, we, too, would have acted exactly as he." "None of this stuff ever came up before," Hill argued. "As we got closer to his execution date, his condition got worse."

The intervention by Richards marked the first time in some two decades that a Texas governor stepped in to halt an execution. She is not allowed to issue another reprieve for Garrett.

The hearing in a death row case was the first for the Board of Pardons and Paroles in at least five years.

Board grants 4 percent hike in auto insurance rates for last-resort policies

AUSTIN (AP) — Insurance industry representatives criticized state officials for rejecting a 47 percent rate increase request, and instead adopting a 4 percent hike for the cost of last-resort automobile insurance policies.

The Insurance Board's 3-0 decision Wednesday will affect about 500,000 of Texas' 12 million motorists.

"We're disappointed," said Rick Gentry, spokesman for insurers who had said the hefty increase was needed to offset rising costs of auto repair, medical care and litigation.

"We felt like the board did not set a rate that will come anywhere near paying for the losses that we anticipate. Ultimately, the good drivers in this state may be required to subsidize the rates of high risk drivers," he said.

The decision affects people who receive coverage through the Texas Automobile Insurance Plan because they are denied coverage in the voluntary market.

The TAIP, often referred to as the Plan, provides state-required minimum limits of auto liability coverage. Premiums for the policies are about 22 percent higher than normal policies. Under the board's decision, that difference will be 27 percent effective June 1.

The Office of Public Insurance Counsel had wanted the rates frozen, but said it was pleased with the board's decision.

"Given the fact that the insurance industry provided only funny numbers that no one could deduce anything from, we think the board acted wisely and just called for a minimal increase," said Geoff Rips, a spokesman for the OPIC.

OPIC had said the Plan's rates shouldn't be increased because it was doing a booming business because of new state law tightening enforcement of state-required insurance.

Rips said OPIC plans to file recommendations to change the makeup of the Plan's board of directors.

That panel is currently made up of 10 insurance industry representatives. OPIC wants the board to be reduced to nine members, with the insurance industry, Insurance Board, and OPIC selecting three members each.

State asks U.S. Supreme Court to delay March 10 primaries

AUSTIN (AP) — The state has asked the U.S. Supreme Court to delay the March 10 primaries and replace a lower court's redistricting plan with one approved by the Legislature.

The Texas attorney general's office said Wednesday that a state Senate redistricting plan drafted by federal judges violates state rights.

The state also said it is tainted by allegations of improper contact between one judge and a Republican legislator who worked on the plan.

Permitting the Senate primaries to go forward under "growing indications of a corrupted judicial process, would constitute the gravest of offenses in the annals of voting rights law to the historic rights of the state to choose their own systems of governance," the state argued.

Last month, U.S. District Judges James Nowlin of Austin and Walter Smith Jr. of Waco imposed their own redistricting plan after rejecting the Legislature's map adopted in a special session.

That legislative plan already had gained U.S. Justice Department approval for preserving minority voting rights — a key hurdle in the process of drawing new boundaries for districts every 10 years.

Nowlin and Smith, both appointees of President Reagan, have been accused by Democrats of devising a partisan plan to put more Republicans in the 31-member Senate. Currently there are nine GOP senators.

The third panel member, Judge Will Garwood of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, voted against what has been called the "Nowlin plan," saying the judiciary should defer to state lawmakers in drawing district lines.

The accusations against Nowlin heated up after state Rep. George Pierce, R-San Antonio, said he worked on the court-ordered plan after Nowlin asked him to do so. But Pierce denied any wrongdoing, saying he made only minor adjustments in one state Senate district.

The attorney general's office, however, argued that it was improper for Nowlin to ask Pierce to work on the court-ordered plan and not tell others in the case. The situation presents "grave infirmities, both of a legal and an ethical nature going to the integrity of the judicial process," the state said.

Also, court records and documents indicate that federal law clerks used names such as "Nuclear Bomb," "Nuclear Bomb 2" and "Reformed Republican" to describe redistricting plans they were drawing.

Nowlin has refused to comment on the allegations.

The attorney general asked the nation's highest court to overturn the Nowlin plan, replace it with the one passed by the Legislature and delay either part or all of the March 10 primaries.

The state has also filed a similar appeal before the U.S. district court in Washington, D.C.

In that appeal the attorney general's office requested a Feb. 10 hearing and focuses on the state's pre-clearance by the Justice Department of the plan adopted by lawmakers.

Taxes, bad Mexican food cited in requests of 'wannabes' seeking residency in Texas

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Unpopular state income taxes and bad enchiladas are being cited by people from across the nation who want no-tax Texas citizenship.

Nearly 6,000 Texan "wannabes" dumped an avalanche of mail on the state comptroller's office Wednesday asking for George Bush-style residency in a state with no income tax.

"We've got mail stacked everywhere," said Andy Welch, spokesman for Comptroller John Sharp. "We've got five people sorting this stuff out. There's piles and piles of it."

Many of the coupons bore messages to Sharp, and Welch said there were two recurring themes.

"First, people say if it (Texas residency) is good enough for the president, it's good enough for them," Welch said. "Second — regardless of what state it is — they say they have lousy Mexican food."

The postal blizzard was triggered by cartoonist Garry

Trudeau, whose Doonesbury strip in Sunday newspapers included a coupon encouraging readers to be "just like the Prez" and avoid paying state income taxes where they really live by seeking Texas residency.

Bush, who claims Houston as his official residence, and works in Washington, D.C., and owns a house in Maine. Bush hasn't lived in Texas full time since going to Congress in 1966. When in Houston, the president stays at a hotel.

In Maine, a consumer group complained that Bush, whose vacation home is in Kennebunkport, should pay $165,000 in state income taxes it claims the Republican president owes that state.

Noting Texas' no-income-tax status, the Doonesbury coupon was addressed to Sharp.

Monday and Tuesday brought about 150 coupons, but on Wednesday mail carriers worked overtime. By afternoon, at least 2,000 inquiries had been received, with another 3,500 arriving today, Welch said.

"This has swamped the mail room," he said. "They're coming from all over, almost every state. It's quite a geography lesson."

Welch said Ohio had sent the most inquiries — more than 250 so far.

"Ohio is by far the biggie," Welch said, with California, Florida, New York and New Jersey also supplying many requests. Two senders wanted replies mailed to Kuwait and Japan.

Sharp, a Democrat, printed tongue-in-cheek certificates to return to those mailing him comic coupons.

Printed with political funds, Sharp's certificates grant unofficial Texas residency — "Good for state income tax purposes only. (And then only if you can get away with it)."

He also offers to supply voter registration cards and newspaper real estate sections "so that you may acquire a little piece of Heaven for yourself." As a last resort, he urges recipients to actually move to Texas, where he notes, "Anyone who says 'income tax' gets his mouth washed out with soap."

Mauro suggests recycling offers business chance

AUSTIN (AP) — Land Commissioner Garry Mauro says government and private business in Texas need to improve understanding of recycling and convince people to buy more products made from recycled materials.

Speaking to the first meeting of the Recycling Industry Advisory Committee on Wednesday, Mauro said, "Recycling is on the threshold of becoming a full-fledged industry here in Texas — a profitable, job-creating industry."

He said that since 1988, Texas has lost 30 percent of its landfill space. U.S. Environmental Protection Agency regulations will force closing of 100 more in the next year, he added.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Washington D.C. can be privatized

According to a report they filed with Money magazine, George and Barbara Bush made $452,732 in 1990, but paid only $3,596 in state taxes — or only 0.8 percent of income. The president paid 29.5 percent total for all taxes that year. By comparison, the magazine figured, a 37.7 percent tax was taken from the typical U.S. family earning $52,011.

How? Even though he has stayed in Texas only 14 days over the past three years — and has lived most of the past 25 years in Washington — he calls the Lone Star State home. And Texas has no income tax. By contrast, Money calculated, if Bush declared himself a resident of the District of Columbia, he would be assessed a 9.5 percent income tax, or $30,000. And if he called himself a resident of Kennebunkport, Maine, he would face an 8.5 percent state income tax rate, costing $29,000.

Should we be surprised at Bush's tax report? Not really. He's just following the advice of his tax adviser. Still, there's something fishy about the federal law that exempts from taxation Bush and the 61,000 U.S. congressmen, bureaucrats and other government apparatchiks, provided they declare another state as home. This law applies because, though Washington has been given a facade of "home rule," the U.S. Constitution still grants Congress complete authority over the city.

Because these officials live and work in the District of Columbia, they use its roads, libraries, etc. Now, somebody must pay for these services. Who pays? Other, non-exempt Washington residents do. So do U.S. taxpayers. Even if you never set foot in Washington, your federal tax dollars help support the city — and therefore make up for the money not paid by Bush, the congressmen and the federal bureaucrats. Indeed, earlier this year the District government found itself $100 million in the red, begged for a special appropriation from Congress and got it. That light feeling in your wallet tells you where the money came from.

Another factor: An incredible one in 10 Washington residents is employed by the city government. How can the city government get away with such waste? Because 61,000 of its major citizens are exempt from taxation. Such officials would be more scrupulous about city operations — and would, perhaps, organize tax-cut movements — if their own incomes were socked for this money.

What should be done? Well, why not make Washington the Capital City of Privatization? Congressmen could sponsor a law to repeal that 9 percent income tax entirely, exempting not only Bush and the 61,000 officials, but everyone who resides there. They should also sponsor laws to turn interstates and major streets into private roads. Privatize schools, libraries, swimming pools, ambulances — everything. Make Washington a model city for free markets.

Maybe Indians have a point

Tim Giago hoped the Washington Redskins would lose, and I was with him all the way.

My sentiments come from growing up in Texas as a Dallas Cowboys fan and spending four years surrounded by insufferable Skins backers (there is no other kind) during a period of exile to the City of Desolation. Giago, I feel certain, has never rooted for the Cowboys, and he's blessed to have 1,400 miles of real estate between him and the Potomac River.

A South Dakota Sioux who declared his preference in a guest column in Newsweek, Giago detests the Redskins because he thinks their name demeans American Indians. "Indians are people, not mascots," he complains. "If white and black America is so inconsiderate of its indigenous people that it can name a football team the Redskins and see nothing wrong in this, where has our educational system gone wrong?"

I fear that when he took sides in the Super Bowl, he may have forgotten that the original Buffalo Bill gained his fame partly by fighting Indians. In applauding protests in Minneapolis, he also may have overlooked potential allies in local Scandinavians who may resent the Vikings' portrayal of their ancestors as horn-wearing barbarians.

Forgive my making jokes here, but poking fun at Giago is easier than refuting him. Like most of the people who are dedicated to stamping out the use of Indian names by athletic teams, he is solemn, earnest and irritating. The only thing to be said for his position is that it's right.

Non-Indians have trouble understanding what all the fuss is about, since the ostensible purpose of team names is not to disparage but to honor. Football teams pick mascots with qualities useful on the gridiron, like strength, speed and daring — thus the

Stephen Chapman

Bears, Bengals, Falcons and Buccaneers.

When humans are used as mascots, the relevant humans generally pay no mind or treat it as a compliment. Texas ranch hands don't let the Cowboys' name hurt their feelings, priests don't protest the sacrifice of Saints doing violence to people on Sunday, and the United Steel Workers have yet to picket at Pittsburgh games. So how come the Indians take offense when none is needed?

Maybe because the qualities being "honored" by Indian names are not exactly the qualities Indians want to be cited for. The Atlanta Braves, Cleveland Indians, Kansas City Chiefs and Washington Redskins may mean no harm, but the effect of their team symbols is to stereotype American Indians as half-naked savages, cartoonish creatures out of a Hollywood western.

Indians ask how other races would feel if a team called itself the Caucasians or the Negroes, but the truth is other races wouldn't be angry so much as puzzled. That's because those names don't evoke any distinctive traits, admirable or not, because they cover such broad and diverse groups. You might as well call a team the People.

Indian names do evoke distinctive traits, which is exactly why Indians object. They don't like being reduced to primitive 19th century warriors, because it suggests that's all they can be — an implication that renders modern Indians invisible. Anyone whose only acquaintance with Indians comes from team mascots would think they still wear loincloths and headdresses, carry tomahawks and spend all their time harvesting scalps. The practice is a little like calling a team the Chicagoans and using a machine gun-toting mafioso as its symbol.

The Redskins name can't be excused as an intended compliment, since the term is a racial epithet, plain and simple. It brings to mind the Illinois high school that called its teams the Chinks. That name became too morifying to keep, but the people who run the Redskins have a greater tolerance for embarrassment.

Indians might not mind these names so much if they didn't already have so many things to mind. You don't have to view American history as 500 years of genocide, the way some adlebrained critics do, to acknowledge that Indians were treated horribly by the people who settled this country — and that they aren't doing well even today. So if they get touchy when people of other races appropriate their history and symbols, they have good reason.

Americans get tired of having to make changes to appease aggrieved minorities, but change is like medicine: Just because it's momentarily unpleasant doesn't mean it isn't good for you. If we could get used to the Los Angeles Raiders and the Phoenix Cardinals, we should be able to get used to calling the Washington Redskins something else. I could make a suggestion, but it would offend the hell out of Washingtonians.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, Feb. 6, the 37th day of 1992. There are 329 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: Forty years ago, on Feb. 6, 1952, Britain's King George VI died; he was succeeded to the throne by his daughter, Elizabeth II.

On this date: In 1756, America's third vice president, Aaron Burr, was born in Newark, New Jersey.

In 1778, the United States won official recognition from France as the two nations signed a pair of treaties in Paris.

In 1788, Massachusetts became the sixth state to ratify the U.S. Constitution.

In 1815, the state of New Jersey issued the first American railroad charter to John Stevens, who proposed a rail link between Trenton and New Brunswick. (The line, however, was never built.)

In 1895, baseball legend Babe Ruth was born in Baltimore.

In 1899, a peace treaty between the United States and Spain was ratified by the U.S. Senate.

Saddam still can be taken out

There ought to be a way to take Saddam Hussein out. Remember in Godfather II when Michael Corleone wanted to have that guy named Heime whacked?

One of his lieutenants says it's impossible. Too many FBI agents guarding him. "Nothing," says Michael Corleone, "is impossible."

Sure enough. They whacked Heime right there in the Miami airport. The guy who did the whacking got whacked himself, but Michael Corleone was right about the impossible bit.

You've got to figure if somebody took out Saddam, the war with Iraq could come to a quicker end and a lot of lives — Iraqis as well as America's allies and ours — would be saved.

Saddam Hussein is a bully. A torturer. A murderer. An egotistical maniac. Sort of a 12th-century Attila the Hun with missiles, tanks and bombs.

I certainly don't think God would think less of the person or persons who hit Saddam. I think God himself would say at a CNN briefing, "It's still 'Thou shall not kill,' but sometimes you've got to be a little flexible."

(I would make up some quotes for Allah, but I can't type in Arabic.)

Lewis Grizzard

So, how to get Saddam? I thought of a few scenarios:

• Scenario #1: His own people get him. His generals, maybe. Or all the people of Iraq who are tired of the war, tired of death, tired of eating sand. They revolt, track down Saddam and cut off his head.

There hasn't been a good beheading that I know of in years and years.

• Scenario #2: The Israelis get him. The Israelis have been uncharacteristically patient while Saddam has hurled missiles at them.

But when the Israelis finally get enough, they strike swiftly and terribly.

I can see a "Raid on Entebbe" sort of thing where a group of crack Israeli commandos find Saddam and make him swallow a grenade.

• Scenario #3: We get him. We've got bombs smarter than the average Iraqi soldier.

So why can't we figure out where Saddam is and blow the place up with him in it? Or better yet, go in and get him and bring him back to this country and put him in the same cell with Jim Bakker.

• Scenario #4: Muhammed Ali gets him. Muhammed went to see Saddam and the two men embraced.

Muhammed could go back over armed with plastic explosive under his coat. When he and Saddam embrace again, Muhammed pulls a string inside his coat and no more Saddam.

No more Muhammed Ali, either. I need to work a little more on this one.

• Scenario #5: His wife gets him. Mrs. Saddam finally gets enough of her husband's bad humor, ill manners and bullying tactics and poisons his soup.

He dies, she takes over the country and announces the immediate pull-out from Kuwait and wants Baghdad to have a franchise in the new World Football League.

Nothing is impossible.

Can the voters take back America?

By CHUCK STONE

You're probably mad as hell, and you claim you're not going to take it anymore. The question is, how mad? Mad enough to do something about it? Or just mad — period.

The late Rep. William L. Dawson, D-Ill., once told an audience angry at insults by an Eisenhower cabinet member, "Don't get mad. Get smart."

After John F. Kennedy was elected, the self-styled "Irish Mafia" in the White House impishly revised Dawson's wisdom to "Don't get mad. Get even."

Angry, disgusted and disillusioned Americans are fanning their long-smoldering resentment into prairie fires of change. The following may sound like a political redundancy, but Americans are using grass-roots democracy to make democracy work for them.

This catharsis happens cyclically in any democracy. The people rise up and drive the political money-changers out of the temples of their lives. But eventually, normality returns, and the politicians retake the power structure.

Still, the momentary elixir of power reminds the people that they are the ultimate custodians of government, even if they subsequently sink back into the quagmire of lethargy.

All over America, grass-roots revolts are flowering. By grass roots, I mean persons who heretofore have not actively tried to influence the decisions of government. Grass-roots democracy is also democracy's paradoxical confession of failure.

One movement that has captured a large segment of the public's fancy is THRO (Throw the rascals out). It began in Tampa, Fla., with retired financial planner John J. "Jack" Gargan. One day, he got so mad at the amoral excesses of the House and Senate, the uncontrollable budget deficit and the government's budget in the S&L and HUD rip-offs that he invested his entire savings of $45,000 in six newspaper ads, calling for a clean sweep of Congress.

Talk about a prairie fire being fanned into a bonfire of action. People responded to the Philadelphia-born Gargan's summons for action with $1.1 million in contributions. (Philadelphia seems to have a curious affinity for birthing revolts for representative government.)

Gargan's contributors want to effect change. Before, they have felt impotent. Now, at least they can now enjoy the comfort in the numbers of like-minded crusaders who also want to "throw the rascals out."

The movement has its counterparts in education, where people are using "school-based management" to take over the politics of running a school system. In Dade County, Fla., Prince William County, Va., and several North Carolina school districts, committees of parents, teachers and principals are making decisions about curriculum, school budgets and new hires.

School-based management or decentralized administration has been tried before, but it usually did not work. This time, the difference may be a wider base of energetic and involved parents responding to documented failures in school systems.

THRO has delicious therapeutic value. Just the notion that an active movement is attempting to replace all 435 members of the House and one-third of the Senate will intoxicate any powerless person.

But aborting the continuity of all political experience and erasing legislative memory in one fell swoop is as dumb as it is arrogant. All politicians are not rascals, any more than all specialists on the New York Stock Exchange are con artists.

Besides, throwing the political rascals out will achieve nothing if corporate rascals are still inside to savage the economy.

Some middle ground is necessary, such as mandating one-third of a legislative body to be replaced every four years. This would give the president a better chance to enact his — or her — legislative agenda.

Meanwhile, let's do the best we can with our limited resources. Let's throw the worst out this year. We'll get even with the others next time.

Bush says his plan gives everyone access to 'best health care'

By RITA BEAMISH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush pledged today to give all Americans access to "the world's best health care." He wants to help the uninsured buy health coverage by limiting spending growth on Medicaid and Medicare patients.

Bush today was formally unveiling his election-year health care package in Cleveland. It would provide $100 billion in vouchers and tax breaks to the poor and middle class over five years to buy medical insurance, according to administration and congressional sources.

Major details of the plan, such as how it will work and how it will be paid for, haven't been worked out yet.

Health and Human Services Secretary Louis W. Sullivan, briefing reporters today on the plan, said that instead of proposing a firm financing method, the administration is handing out a 38-page list of options, so Congress can choose. The administration hopes to bring most of this money out of Medicare and Medicaid by holding down future cost increases, according to a Sullivan aide and an OMB official who accompanied the secretary this morning.

Sullivan said the vouchers would be handed out through the states, presumably through the local unemployment offices, but that hasn't been finalized yet either.

While the administration is still working on the details, Sullivan said the goal is clear.

"What we want to do is have our citizens enter the health care system through the front door of a doctor's office or clinic rather than through the back door of a hospital emergency room," Sullivan said.

Highlights of the president's plan include:

— Provide vouchers or tax credits worth up to $1,250 a year for individuals, $2,500 for couples and up to $3,750 for families of three or more for the purchase of health care.

— Allow health care tax deductions for middle-income Americans — those with incomes up to $50,000 for individuals, $65,000 for couples and $80,000 for families of three or more.

— For self-employed persons, provide tax deductions equal to 100 percent of their monthly health-care premiums. An administration document obtained by The Associated Press estimates that 95 million Americans would use the vouchers, tax credits and tax deductions.

— Cap federal payments to states for the $59 billion Medicaid program. Increases over this year's amount would be tied to population growth, plus inflation, plus 6 percent next year. Further increases would be capped to inflation plus 5 percent in 1994, plus 4 percent in 1995, plus 3 percent in 1996 and plus 2 percent in 1997.

Sullivan said the plan will cost $35 billion a year when fully implemented and promote "universal access to health insurance for all of our citizens."

It would still be up to individuals to get their own insurance, Sullivan said. "Certainly this is voluntary and this is in the American spirit," he said.

But Sen. John D. Rockefeller, D-W.Va., said, "It just doesn't do the job" to provide universal coverage and hold down spiraling costs.

"What the president appears to be suggesting is to have seniors through Medicaid paying for the uninsured, which is an incredible irony," said Rockefeller.

"... It's robbing poor Peter to pay poor Paul."

Both Sullivan and Rockefeller appeared on ABC's Good Morning America.

Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., said the Bush proposals were good, but won't solve the cost questions. "This program is going to depend heavily upon individuals using the credits. Many of them won't, and they won't be covered," said Packwood, who predicted the health battle won't really be joined in Congress until after this year's elections.

Bush was traveling to Cleveland to announce his health care initiative in a speech to the Greater Cleveland Growth Association. He was then flying on to Las Vegas, Nev., and vote-rich California, where he will promote his health care package in San Diego.

The president wants to pay for the package partly by paring back expected growth in Medicaid health care subsidies for the poor and Medicare programs for the elderly and handicapped.

While changes in both Medicare and Medicaid remained in the plan, an administration official said, other ideas to help pay for it were downgraded from proposals to "examples" because of congressional opposition, an administration source said.

"My plan ensures that people can find health care, choose health care, afford health care and keep health care," Bush said in a speech Wednesday to the Small Business Legislative Council.

With 35 million Americans, or 13 percent of the population, lacking health insurance, Bush said his plan "gives everyone access to the world's best health care. And it doesn't exclude anybody."

Democrats and some health-industry officials claim

Bush's proposed tax credits vouchers will not provide the now uninsured with enough money to meet the cost of health insurance premiums.

And the proposed limits on Medicaid and Medicare spending growth "could be devastating," said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

Ron Pollack, executive director of Families USA, a private advocacy group for the poor, said Bush's plan would cause doctors and hospitals to shun Medicare and Medicaid patients and cause some increased costs to be shifted to other patients.

Several Democratic proposals would impose limits on all medical costs and guarantee coverage through so-called "pay or play" systems requiring employers to either provide health insurance or pay into a general system where their employees could receive coverage.

Among other things, Bush's plan would:

— Require higher Medicare premiums for the wealthy. Individuals earning more than $100,000 a year, and couples earning more than $125,000 annually would have to pay $95.40 per month for Medicare, triple the current $31.80, sources said.

— Provide for the publishing of a "blue book" similar to those used for auto sales to help guide consumers in deciding what are fair market prices for various medical procedures.

— Allow small businesses to pool purchases of health insurance plans for their employees.

— Require insurers to cover people with pre-existing diseases, although no mention is made of whether rates would be limited.

Venezuelans examine economic causes of coup attempt by rebel military force

By JOHN R. ENGEN
Associated Press Writer

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — A jittery Venezuela tried to return today to the task of pulling out of the economic crisis that helped spark this week's attempted coup, but the capital was anything but calm.

A gunbattle broke out Wednesday evening between police and national guardsmen in front of a police building, leaving one policeman wounded.

According to reports, police thought the guardsmen, clad in bullet-proof vests, were renegade troops and opened fire. The guardsmen responded in a frantic shootout that witnesses said lasted about 20 minutes.

Officials, trying to learn how deep anti-government feelings run within the military, further interrogated leaders of Tuesday's failed attempt to overthrow President Carlos Andres Perez.

The president said the coup leaders had planned to assassinate him. As many as 78 civilians and soldiers were reported killed in the struggle.

The rebels wanted higher pay for soldiers and blamed government corruption and mismanagement for double-digit inflation and unemployment.

An estimated 80 percent of the oil-rich country's 19 million people live in poverty while the government, hard-hit by falling world crude prices, carries out an austerity program that sparked violent rioting late last year.

Some reports said Hugo Chavez, one of the coup leaders, had committed suicide or died in custody. To squelch the rumors, officials presented him to photographers on Wednesday night.

No questions were permitted, but as he left the room, Chavez raised his fist defiantly, declaring: "I would never do it."

Venezuelans prepared to return business as usual today. Foreign exchange, halted for two days to avoid panic trading, was expected to resume, and the Caracas Stock Exchange was scheduled to reopen.

Officials expected the national currency, the bolivar, to drop in value on world markets in response to the political instability.

Wednesday night television programming was pre-empted to show moving footage of President Perez placing medals on the coffins of guards who died defending the presidential palace.

"This is a lesson we should never forget," Perez said. "Venezuelan soldiers will never again raise arms against other Venezuelan soldiers."

But while officials said they saw no further threat to the country's 34-year-old democratic system from the military, critics said the government needs to ease up on its hard-nosed economic reforms if it wants to survive.

"This crisis should not be considered over because the uprising has been crushed. To think that way would be an illusion," wrote Jose Vicente Rangel, a former presidential candidate, in El Diario de Caracas.

"We will be free of bureaucracy ... from corruption. We will bring in the best men with the best abilities to occupy public functions," he wrote.

Chavez and three other junior officers who led the coup planned to organize a "progressive" civilian-military junta to rid the country of corruption, it was disclosed Wednesday.

A radio statement Tuesday by the plotters also indicated resentment over plans to use officers in police actions to quell anti-government demonstrations. "Instead of practicing with our war arms, we were preparing with barricades to stop and kill students," it said.

The officers, calling on students, workers and "progressive priests" to support them, charged they were "being prepared for an internal war ... to make us policemen for public control."

The coup plotters clearly touched a sympathetic nerve in the Venezuelan public by raising the anti-corruption banner.

A typical expression of this sentiment came from Antonio Ruiz, a waiter: "I don't think they should have killed the president. But I wish they had toppled him because he and his people are getting rich as we get hungrier."

Pampa to host regional Special Olympic tournament

These athletes recently participated in the Regional Special Olympic Basketball Tournament in Amarillo.

Their division was titled "Lead-Up" in a new program to help train athletes in skills that will lead up to team play. Each athlete is heated against other athletes of the same age and ability.

Participants are awarded medals and/or ribbons for their achievements. They also have the opportunity to participate in the Area Basketball Tournament to be held in Pampa on Saturday, Feb. 8.

The Area Basketball Tournament is to take place in the Pampa Middle School with Lead-up athletes from Canyon, Amarillo and Borger participating, in addition to the Pampa teams.

The Pampa Hustlers are a traditional Special Olympic basketball team whose members are students at Pampa High School. They have played together as a team for eight years, bringing home trophies from tournaments all over the state. The trophy pictured was won at the Amarillo Regional Tournament.

The Patriots are a Junior Unified team with four Special Olympic athletes from Pampa Middle School and sports partners from Baker Elementary and Pampa Middle School. They won a first place trophy and two gold medals following the regional tournament in Amarillo. Baker Bouncers are also a Junior Unified team consisting of athletes from Baker, Lamar, Austin and Wheeler schools. They won a trophy also in the regional basketball tournament.

New auto ad features 'Miyazawa's remark'

TOKYO (AP) — Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa's assertion that the U.S. work ethic is on the decline may have ignited storms of protest in the United States, but in Japan it is being used to sell a new car.

In a full-page newspaper ad introduced today, the eye-catching words "Miyazawa Remark" appear in 4-inch type. But readers expecting another pronouncement on the reasons for America's economic woes will be disappointed.

That's because the person making the remarks in the Daihatsu Motor Co. ad is not the Japanese premier, but Japan's superstar actress Ric Miyazawa.

Gazing bewitchingly from the page, the 18-year-old actress, her curly black hair piled high atop her head, praises Opti, Daihatsu's latest minicar. "Opti is Japan, the pride of the world," reads the ad.

Miss Miyazawa created a sensation last year with a best-selling collection of photographs showing her in the nude.

Daihatsu's spokesman, Masafumi Tamai, maintains the ad's timing, within days of the brouhaha over the Japanese prime minister's remarks to Parliament on Monday, was merely a coincidence.

Speaking to legislators, Miyazawa said the U.S. work ethic is on the decline because Americans place too much emphasis on making money and too little on production. He later said he didn't mean to criticize U.S. workers.

Tamai said today that Daihatsu "had no political intention" in introducing the ad. "Prime Minister Miyazawa happened to make his remark at the right time," the spokesman said.

But he conceded that Daihatsu expected people to read a double meaning into the "Miyazawa Remark" headline, since much attention has been focused on the two famous Miyazawas, who are not related.

Tamai added that Daihatsu was concerned the ad might be misinterpreted. "We will be in trouble if people think a Japanese automaker came out with this ad perfectly timed," to the prime minister's comments, he said.

U.N. chief says Croats and Serbs are blocking peacekeeping force

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Blaming intransigence by Croats and Serbs, U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali says the world body is putting off deployment of a 10,000-strong peacekeeping force in Yugoslavia.

In a report Wednesday to the Security Council, Boutros-Ghali said the government of Croatia and local Serbian leaders in the secessionist republic "appear to have rejected key elements in the plan" for the peacekeeping force.

Lord Carrington, the European Community's chief negotiator on the Yugoslav civil war, arrived in Belgrade on Wednesday to try to break the deadlock over the deployment of peacekeepers.

Boutros-Ghali proposed enlarging the 50-man liaison team in Yugoslavia to 75 officers who will promote the current cease-fire and possibly pave the way for a major troop contingent.

But, he said, "it is clear that the circumstances do not permit me to recommend the deployment of a United Nations peacekeeping force at this time."

If the peacekeeping operation is to be launched, he said, the Croatian government and Milan Babic, leader of the Serbian enclave of Krajina, must accept it.

Lord Carrington, who heads the EC's peace conference on Yugoslavia, met in Belgrade with Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic.

Carrington arrived just hours after about 10,000 people rallied there to support Babic, the self-proclaimed premier of the Serb-held Krajina region of western Croatia.

Low light equals less water for house plants

CARE OF HOUSEPLANTS
Improper watering techniques are often the biggest problem factor in home plant failures.

Over-watering during periods of low growth creates a major problem.

This is especially true during winter months when plant growth is slow due to low light intensities. If the soil is kept saturated constantly, oxygen is unable to reach the plant. This results in loss of the small feeder roots and eventually death of the plant.

In watering house plants, apply just enough water so it runs through the potting soil into the pan. Always discard excess water in the pan to prevent soluble salts from accumulating in the soil.

Color and feel of the soil are the best indicators of moisture content. Plants in a cold room need less water than those in warm, dry temperatures. Flowering plants and those with much foliage need more water than non-blooming plants or those with little foliage. Always use water that has been allowed to come to room temperature.

If you are concerned about growth of your houseplant, it may be due to low light intensity rather than from lack of water or fertilizer.

Remember to not use tap water except from wells and never use water from home water softeners because of high salt content. Rain water is best for house plant use.

TREES CUT HEATING AND COOLING COSTS

We Americans have become so accustomed to solving our problems

For Horticulture

through technology that we often overlook simple, natural solutions. Now that technology is no longer keeping pace with the demand for energy, cost for heating and cooling is becoming a major concern. Perhaps homeowners should once again take a look at possible solutions offered by nature.

We could keep our homes cooler in the summer, warmer in the winter, with a lot less help from hardware. How? Often with common sense landscaping.

Typically, our homes get hottest late on a summer afternoon. The sun has been shining all day, heating up the home's exterior and the ground around it.

Solution? Deciduous shade trees planted to the west of the house. These trees will shade your west windows and the western side of the home. They will also shade the ground and keep it from heating up.

Planting trees can lower the temperature around the home as much as 15 degrees on a hot summer day. They will also cut down on dust and noise, making it more pleasant to open windows for natural cooling. During the winter, these trees will drop their leaves and allow the sun to shine through.

Winter's chilling winds and storms blow in out of the north and northwest. A thick planting of evergreens to the north and northwest can buffer these winds. In a Nebraska study, researchers found a wind-break of trees could reduce winter heating costs by as much as 30 percent.

Winters in most of Texas are comparatively mild, yet our summers are long and hot. Major landscape concerns should be concentrated on making the summer landscape more livable. The dormant winter season is the ideal time for selecting and planting trees. Small, fast growing trees such as red bud, Chinese tallow and river birch may be used in close areas near patios, drives and west walls and windows where immediate shade is desired. Large trees such as oak and pecan are slower growing and require time to form needed shade. The combination of large and small deciduous trees is the best landscape solution.

In Texas, most of the cooling summer breezes come from a southern direction. If you want to take the advantage of this cooling airflow, do not block its path.

Now, during the winter season, is the time to plan for and plant trees for summer shade and to consider natural cooling effects. Perhaps open windows and swings on screened porches shaded by Texas trees will once again become popular and comfortable in Texas.

Should physician give unsolicited advice?

DEAR ABBY: I am a young physician with a dilemma. Recently, I was seated behind a woman at a concert. I could not help but notice that she had a large and very possibly malignant lesion on the back of her neck. I felt it would be rude to call attention to the lesion while she was with her group of friends. Unfortunately, no further opportunity presented itself, and the woman left before I could speak to her alone.

Later, when speaking to a medical ethicist, I was told that my unsolicited medical opinion would have been inappropriate.

Abby, in a case like this, where a woman's life may have been at risk, I would like to know how you, and your readers — and perhaps other physicians — would have responded. AN ALBUQUERQUE M.D.

Dear Abby

guilty for having lied for him. How can I make the situation better?
DON'S MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Don't be so hard on yourself; you did what most mothers would have done — instinctively — to protect their children. However, had you let Don take his lumps from the police, it may have been a valuable learning experience.

Tell him that you will never lie to protect him again, and insist that he avoid hanging out with kids who have to run from the police.

CONFIDENTIAL TO A "LOVING MOTHER IN MONTGOMERY, ALA.": Obese people know they need to lose weight, and being constantly reminded of it will only make them feel guilty, which will cause them to eat, which will cause them to feel better. Lay off, Mom.

Everything you'll need to know about planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

DEAR M.D.: I respectfully disagree with your medical ethicist. I think you should have politely approached the woman, introduced yourself and asked (discreetly) for a private word with her, and then told her that you had observed "something" on the back of her neck that should be examined by her physician without delay.

You had nothing to lose but the opportunity to perform an act of immense kindness. Readers? Doctors?

DEAR ABBY: Several days ago, my 14-year-old son came running into the house, out of breath and looking scared.

I asked him what was wrong, and he said, "Oh, nothing." So I went back to preparing our dinner. (His father and I have been divorced for years, and I am Don's only authority figure.)

About half an hour later, there was a knock on my door, and when I opened it, there stood two policemen. They told me that some of the kids had been throwing rocks at passing cars, and a friend of Don's had been caught and gave the police the names of the kids who were with him. Then I did something I now regret. I told the police that Don had been home with me for several hours, and he could not possibly have been with those boys. Yes, I lied to the police to protect my son.

After the police left, Don confessed to me that he had been with the boys who threw the rocks, but he had not thrown any. That made me feel a little better, but I still feel terribly

High schoolers may compete in video contest

Texas high school students are being called up to focus on the dangers of drug and alcohol abuse. The Texas Young Lawyers Association is sponsoring a video contest in which students will produce a 30-second, public service announcement (PSA) centering on the theme "You Don't Have to Get High to Be High."

The contest is open to all students in the ninth through 12th grades. The announcements will be written, produced, directed and starred in by students.

The announcements will target middle and high school students to inform and warn them about the dangers of drug and alcohol abuse.

There will be categories for both English and Spanish speaking audiences. The winning PSAs will air on TV stations statewide.

The registration deadline for the contest is Feb. 14. Entries are due on April 1. For more information call Molly Buck Richard at (214) 740-8772.

Eck Spahich to speak to Philresters on Feb. 11

Eck Spahich will speak to the Philresters Club at 2 p.m., Tuesday, Feb. 11, in the auditorium of the Phillips Building. Spahich, a native of Croatia, will discuss the political situation there.

Spahich, who grew up in Communist Yugoslavia, has lived in Borger since returning from the Vietnam War. His relatives still live in Yugoslavia, according to information from the Philresters Club.

"We feel this is a timely program for our club due to current violent situation in Yugoslavia, which worsens with each passing day," said Damon Darley, program chairman.

Public Notice

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company recently filed an application with the Public Utility Commission of Texas (PUC) for approval to redefine the location of the demarcation point, or demarc. The demarc is where Southwestern Bell Telephone wiring connects with customer-maintained wiring.

This request will not increase customers' service rates. This request simply changes the point within the wiring where Southwestern Bell's maintenance responsibility ends and the customer's maintenance responsibility begins. As before, customers will be able to connect their own wiring directly to Southwestern Bell's network at points up to the new demarc.

Southwestern Bell is seeking approval of this new demarc location to bring its tariff into compliance with a Federal Communications Commission Order in CC Docket 88-57.

More information will be included in customers' bills beginning February 1, 1992. Persons who wish to comment on the application should notify the PUC by March 20, 1992. Shootin' the Breeze

By J. Alan Brzyz

Parlez-vous Francais?

In honor of the upcoming XVI Winter Olympics, I was going to write this week's column in French.

When I discovered many were asking "who took the 'T' out of Albertville," I decided against it.

I don't think there's a big market here for a sports column written in a foreign language and by the time I resurrected what little I learned in four years of studying the French language, the Games would be completed.

Perhaps the snow in the quiet little village of Albertville, which boasts a normal-times population roughly the same as Pampa, would be melted by the time I finished thumbing through my elusive French-to-English dictionary.

I sure would like to have blended in a little of that Je ne sais Quoi stuff.

I'll stick to my butchered English.

What a wonderful array of winter sports becomes available to us from Saturday to Feb. 28.

The sports competition is beyond compare and the cultural glimpses are sublime.

Do you remember skier Jean-Claude Killy capturing three Alpine gold medals in 1968 in Grenoble?

Judging by the apparently huge numbers of Pampa-area ski enthusiasts who regularly trek westward to the snow-capped mountains of New Mexico and Colorado, I would have guessed the skiing events are the most popular.

However, the grace and skill of figure skating appears to draw the most interest in this area. This is a result of my very unscientific and grossly inaccurate random-sampling poll.

Here are a few thoughts to gnaw on:

• In such a beautiful event as figure skating, why is one of the most difficult maneuvers called an "axel"?

The first thing that comes to mind is the greased shaft used to keep wheels from falling off motor vehicles. However, that's spelled a-x-l-e.

Axel Paulson invented the move in 1890. According to my research, it's a jump from the outside forward edge of one skate with 1 1/2 turns taken in the air and a return to the outer backward edge of the other skate.

• If CBS is plunking down $243 million for the rights to bring the winter extravaganza into our homes, why is a former baseball catcher - Tim McCarver - co-anchoring from the studios? Sure, he has done a credible job announcing baseball. But why the Olympic Games. Maybe he's the designated hitter.

Baseball catchers, by nature, can be counted among the most ungraceful creatures in sport. Hopefully, they'll keep him away from figure skating and McCarver's partner Paula Zahn can make the save.

I guess it could be worse. Good thing Howard Cosell retired.

BITS and SPURS ... Apparently a PHS basketball mom took offense when I inserted the nickname 'Green Team' instead of constantly repeating Harvesters. Verbal and written references to PHS athletic teams as the Green Team are everywhere and it's logical to assume it's an acceptable substitute moniker. For example, Hereford teams are known as the Whitefaces, the Herd and the Hostile Herd.

Looks like George Strait will make it to Amarillo by morning Friday and a bunch of his fans from this neck of the woods are eagerly anticipating his performance later that day. L.D. insists he's no relation.

Mike Tyson truly is in the fight of his life. From what I've seen of the prosecution's case, the boxer is headed for a fall.

How about all those college basketball upsets Wednesday night. "Awesome, baby," as obnoxious Dick Vitale would say.

PHS, Randall resume battle

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Writer

Both the Pampa High boys' and girls' basketball teams travel to Randall for District 1-4A matchups Friday night.

While the No. 1 state-ranked Harvesters are expected to claim win No. 25 compared to only two losses, the Lady Harvesters face a stern test against the powerful Randall girls, who boast a 25-2 record.

The Lady Harvesters, however, are making some upset plans after losing a close decision to Randall, 75-68, in the first meeting between the two schools on Jan. 21.

"We played a good game against them the first time out and we're going to change things around on them defensively in this game. We're going to continue going to our post people on offense and if Randall collapses on them, I'm telling our guards to shoot the ball," said Pampa head coach Albert Nichols.

The Lady Harvesters, who have now won their last four games, may pick up an edge against the fourth-ranked Lady Raiders. Nichols said Randall 3-point shooter Corey Norman is nursing an ankle injury and may be sidelined for the Friday showdown, which tips off at 6:30 p.m.

"That could affect them if she's not able to play. She scored 10 points against us in that first game," Nichols added.

With Amber Seaton and Nikki Ryan combining for 63 points, the Lady Harvesters blew past Hereford, 78-44, Tuesday night to keep a firm grip on second place with two games to go in the regular season.

Overall, the Lady Harvesters are 17-7 and have lost only once in eight district contests. Randall is the district leader with a perfect 8-0 mark, but a win Friday night for Pampa would result in the two teams being tied for first place. A Randall loss against Hereford and a Pampa win against Berger in the regular-season finale on Feb. 11 would give the Lady Harvesters the district title outright.

"Our girls are excited and looking forward to this game," Nichols said. "We've never had a girls' district championship team here and now they've got a chance to go out and get it."

Nichols said senior guard Christie Jones appears to be completely recovered from a pulled muscle that has limited her playing time. Bridgett Mathis, another senior guard, may be ready for the playoffs after undergoing knee surgery earlier in the season.

"Christie was able to play the whole game Tuesday night," Nichols said. "It's unusual for her not to get a takedown or take a charge, but she came through the game okay and is doing well now. Bridgett is expected to get a doctor's release soon and she may be able to play sparingly if we get into the playoffs."

The Harvester boys are coasting along with a 6-0 record in district and should make Randall their next victim. Pampa routed Randall, 94-69, in the first-round game, which has been Randall's only loss in district play.

"We've always had pretty good success at Randall," said Pampa head coach Robert Hale. In fact, we've won every game we've played there, but you can never tell what's in store for us. Each game has a new twist to it."

Pampa, ranked No. 1 in Class 4A since the beginning of the season, used a second-half press to demolish Hereford, 86-60, Tuesday night.

David Johnson, 6-3 senior, led the Harvester onslaught with 23 points, including seven 3-point goals. Cederick Wilbon and Jeff Young tossed in 21 points apiece.

"What we're trying to do right now is take one game at a time and just concentrate on being ready to play Randall," Hale said. "We don't want to be thinking ahead or thinking behind. And we don't ever want to make too much of our opponent. We want to be ready to play emotionally and physically and try to play as close to our type of game as we can."

Randall brings a 14-11, 5-1 record into the game, which begins at 8 p.m. in the Raiders' gym.

A&M tops SWC in recruiting

By MIKE DRAGO
Associated Press Writer

Texas A&M assembled a recruiting class that topped the Southwest Conference and ranked among the nation's best, but Baylor, Texas and Texas Tech weren't far behind in what appeared to be a record harvest.

Although several top Texas players defected, most of the richest schoolboy talent crop in years remained in the state.

The Aggies capitalized, capturing nearly a fifth of the players generally regarded as the top 100. That follows last year's haul that included Sam Adams, Wilbert Biggens and Rodney Thomas.

Such top players as Deer Park quarterback Corey Pullig, Dallas Carter defensive back Sherrod Wyatt and Beaumont West Brook lineman Calvin Collins all headed for College Station this year.

"We've got quality across the board," said Aggies coach R.C. Stocum. "We felt we got the guys we wanted. We beat out Miami and Notre Dame on players."

All of Texas A&M's recruits were from Texas.

"I get irritated when I hear the best athletes are in Florida," he said. "Why go anywhere else when you get the best Texas kids?"

Pullig, a 6-3, 205-pounder who passed for nearly 2,000 yards last season, leads the Aggies' list. Ervin Briley, a 6-3, 250-pound defensive lineman from Aldine, signed with A&M after giving an oral commitment to Oklahoma.

Other top A&M recruits were: Conroe McCullough receiver Kevin Beirne; Aldine defensive lineman Ervin Briley; San Antonio Clark offensive lineman Robert Danklefs; Irving Nimitz noseguard Desi DeLaTorre; Garland Lakeview linebacker Keith Mitchell; Arlington Lamar linebacker Jim Brady; and Beaumont Central running back Leeland McElroy.

After getting a late start, Texas coach John Mackovic also managed to put together an impressive class.

The Longhorns hit their top target, San Angelo Central quarterback Shea Morenz, who threw for 41 touchdowns and nearly 3,000 yards last season. Morenz made his decision after Ryan Fien, the best quarterback in California, decided to go UCLA.

"(Morenz) had a lot of touchdown passes, but what was impressive about him is he has the ability to escape the rush and make plays," Mackovic said. "We got quality, real quality."

Texas received commitments from speedy receivers Mike Adams of Arlington Sam Houston, Matt Davis of Fort Worth Brewer and Lovell Pinkney, a nationally top-ranked wide receiver from Washington, D.C.

The Longhorns also added beefy linemen such as Gladewater's Stoney Clark and Cypress Creek's Dan Neil and running backs Tremaine Brown of Amarillo Palo Duro and Anthony Holmes of San Antonio Marshall.

Baylor reeled in a solid mixture of high school and junior college talent. The class was led by option quarterback Eric Gray, who both ran and passed for more than 1,000 yards while steering Aldine to the 1990 state championship.

The Bears also received commitments from running backs Brandell Jackson of Brenham and Malcolm Hamilton of Odessa Permian as well as Class 3A player of the year Adrian Robinson of Edna.

Baylor also raided Oklahoma for quarterback Brian Newberry of Westmore and defensive lineman Darryl Gardener of Lawton. Both players were all-state last season.

Offensive linemen Chuck Pope and David Anderson, both of whom tip the scales at nearly 290 pounds, joined the Bears from junior colleges in Kansas.

"I'm really pleased," said Bears coach Grant Teaff. "It's one of those diverse years. We've got seven players who will give us quick help."

Texas Tech coach Spike Dykes said 1992 was his best recruiting year yet. The new Red Raiders include Odessa Permian linebacker Tony Daniels, Lewisville running back Andre Brown and Dallas Carter defenders Verone McKinley, Anthony Armour and Adrian Roland.

Pampa standout Zach Thomas also will join the Red Raiders.

"I feel we did better in Lubbock and West Texas than we've ever done before," Dykes said. "I'm pleased."

Houston released its signings nearly five hours after the other schools, but their list turned out to be worth the wait.

The Cougars netted Huntsville quarterback Chuck Clements, along with linebacker Delitho Bell of Tyler Chapel Hill, the Class 4A defensive player of the year.

Also among those going to Houston were: Deer Park receiver Randy Blair; Fort Bend Willowridge defensive lineman Otis Grant; David Roberts, a 250-pound offensive lineman from Austin Westlake; and McKinney defensive lineman Tim Winburn.

Southern Methodist University's most notable signings were Jack-sonville defensive end Darrel Amen and 290-pound offensive lineman Keith Chiles of Dallas Roosevelt. McKinney quarterback Max Knake, who threw for more than 2,200 yards last season, joined new coach Pat Sullivan at Texas Christian. The Horned Frogs also signed Arlington Sam Houston running back Jeff Godley and defensive end Chris Piland of Grapevine.

Rice signed a class of 19, including Jersey Village running back Emerson Allen.

Head football coaches were forced to wait by telephones and fax machines because of new NCAA rules stipulating that coaches can't see their recruits until 48 hours after they sign. The rule was supposed to ease the last-minute recruiting pressure on athletes.

Among the Texas players who left the state were defensive backs Alton Maiden of Dallas Carter and Bobby Taylor of Longview, who fell for Lou Holtz and Notre Dame.

Arlington Lamar running back Shawn Walters is off to Southern Cal, while Waco runner Jay Johnson is headed to Louisiana State.

Mission's Koy Detmer, brother of Heisman Trophy winner Ty Detmer, went to Colorado. Koy Detmer passed for 3,141 yards this year, making him the state's leading career passer with 8,221 yards.

Linebacker Jarrett Irons of Conroe McCullough went to Michigan and North Garland cornerback Jason Parker went to Tennessee.

Fire impacts plans in Tyson rape trial

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - Jurors in Mike Tyson's rape trial returned to court under tightened security today and were questioned about whether a fatal fire at their hotel left them too shaken or fearful to continue serving.

The boxer's trial was interrupted for a day Wednesday after the early-morning blaze forced the 15 sequestered jurors to leave their belongings and flee, many in their pajamas.

The fire at the Indianapolis Athletic Club killed two firefighters and a 71-year-old hotel guest and injured 12 people. None of the jurors was hurt.

Sheriff's deputies and bailiffs drove the jurors into an underground parking lot adjoining the City-County Building today and led them into a secured passageway. Jurors previously had been dropped off at a street-level public entrance.

Tyson entered the building as usual, walking past dozens of photographers, reporters and onlookers. "The jurors appeared to be in good spirits, under the circumstances," court spokesman Joseph Champion said Wednesday.

Mayor Stephen Goldsmith asked for a federal arson investigation, citing "the unusual coincidence of the proximity of the jury," and security was increased at the courthouse. But fire officials said they don't suspect arson.

This morning, Judge Patricia J. Gifford and lawyers for both sides questioned the jurors in private to determine whether they were so shaken by the fire, or worried that it was directed at them, that they no longer are able to serve.

The jurors had been sequestered to shield them from the public and press, and their isolation was maintained after the evacuation, court officials said.

Tyson, 25, is charged with raping an 18-year-old Miss Black America contestant in his hotel room July 19 and could get up to 60 years in prison. The former heavyweight champion has said the woman consented to sex.

Lt. Jerry Bivens, a Fire Department arson investigator, said faulty wiring near a refrigerator in a third-floor lounge may have caused the blaze.

"The fire does not look suspicious to us," he said.

Sheriff's deputies set up a metal detector at the courthouse for media and spectators and brought in a bomb-sniffing dog on loan from the police.

The Sheriff's Department gave no explanation, and Champion said the court had not requested the extra security, "nor have we received any threats."

"There were no bomb threats. We just wanted to make sure we maintained the integrity of the courtroom setting," Lt. Timothy Horty, police spokesman.

The judge also banned news cameras from the second floor, where the courtroom is situated, with the exception of three pool cameras.

Authorities said the blaze destroyed the third and fourth floors of the seven-story hotel. The jurors were staying on the sixth floor.

They were moved to another hotel, and additional deputies were assigned to guard them. The jurors were led out of the burning building — most of them with coats over pajamas — by two bailiffs and a sheriff's deputy.

O no! Unbeaten Duke, Oklahoma State KO'd

By CHRIS SHERIDAN
Associated Press Writer

Duke was defeated. Oklahoma State was overwhelmed. Arkansas lost, too.

It was a very bad night to be a very good team Wednesday as the No. 1, No. 2 and No. 5 teams in the Associated Press college basketball poll all lost.

The pretty good teams had a pretty bad night also, with No. 21 Oklahoma, No. 23 Florida State and No. 24 Georgia Tech falling.

With no more undefeated teams, there is bound to be an argument over who is now No. 1. But the bickering will have to be put off until at least Sunday — the top teams still have tough games to play over the weekend.

Kansas, ranked third, plays Oklahoma State, and Duke goes up against No. 22 LSU. The No. 4 team, UCLA, may have the best chance to sneak into the No. 1 position — they play a weak Washington team.

In the night that wasn't, No. 9 North Carolina upset No. 1 Duke 75-73, Nebraska knocked No. 2 Oklahoma State from the ranks of the unbeaten 85-69, Tennessee defeated No. 5 Arkansas 83-81, Colorado stopped No. 21 Oklahoma 70-68 in overtime, Maryland downed No. 23 Florida State 93-85 and Clemson crushed No. 24 Georgia Tech 95-78 in overtime.

College Basketball

In other games, No. 8 Ohio State beat Wisconsin 86-72, No. 12 Missouri topped Iowa State 81-71, No. 15 Michigan downed Northwestern 81-58, No. 18 Alabama beat Texas A&M 74-61, and No. 22 LSU beat Florida 70-50.

Duke was done in by a North Carolina team, ranked ninth, that didn't make a single field goal in the final 9 1/2 minutes. The Tar Heels' Derrick Phelps scored the final points of the game by hitting two free throws with 44.5 seconds remaining.

After Phelps broke a 73-all tie, the Blue Devils worked the ball to All-American center Christian Laettner, who missed an inside one-hander over Eric Montross with 24 seconds left.

Duke rebounded and tried once more, but Laettner missed and Phelps came away with the rebound, dribbling into the corner and preserving the victory.

"They did a very good job of not even letting me catch it," Laettner said of the night in general. Normally a 64 percent field goal shooter, Laettner hit only 4 of 11 shots.

The Tar Heels brought an end to Duke's 23-game winning streak — the nation's longest. North Carolina also snapped Duke's Atlantic Coast Conference regular-season winning streak at 11 games.

"We've had some strange ones with Duke here and some over there," North Carolina coach Dean Smith said. "But they're going to be there at the end. You know that."

Nebraska 85, No. 2 Oklahoma St. 69

In Lincoln, Nebraska, Cornhuskers point guard Jamar Johnson picked the perfect night for his best collegiate performance.

The sophomore, who sat out last season under the NCAA's Proposition 48 rule, scored a career-high 25 points and handled the ball against Oklahoma State's pressure defense to lead Nebraska to an upset of the previously unbeaten Cowboys.

"I thought he was brilliant, dominating. I think that's the kind of player Jamar is," Nebraska coach Danny Nee said. "I think he has the potential for this high level of play every night. And he did it against great players."

Johnson, who hit 7 of 8 free throws, led a Nebraska parade to the charity stripe where the Huskers hit 25 of 31 for the game, 21 of 25 in the second half.

The Huskers (15-4 overall, 3-3

Big Eight) opened an 18-11 lead with 11:30 remaining in the first half. The Cowboys (20-1, 4-1) repeatedly cut the lead to one or two points before Johnson hit a 3-point field goal with 2:38 remaining and the Huskers never looked back.

"It seemed like every time we made a little run, they'd hit a big shot. Johnson played really well. He hit some big shots. I think he had one of those nights where you say, 'Oh no, don't shoot. Good shot,'" said Cowboy coach Eddie Sutton.

Tennessee 83, No. 5 Arkansas 81

In Knoxville, Allan Houston scored the winning basket with 43 seconds left and blocked Todd Day's 3-point attempt with 10 seconds left.

Arkansas (17-4, 6-2 Southeastern) had one last chance to tie or win, rebounding the ball under its own basket with 16 seconds left. After Houston blocked Day's 3-point attempt to set off a mad scramble at half court, the Razorbacks' Robert Shepherd came up with the ball but missed a 12-footer and Day missed a tip attempt.

"We were able to retrieve the ball and we made a great pass to Shepherd. He missed a little chip shot, and it was kind of typical of our night," Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson said.

Tennessee (13-7, 5-3) grabbed the rebound with four-tenths of a second left and had its second upset of a Top 10 team in three weeks. The Vols also beat Kentucky in Knoxville and now have more victories than they managed all of last season.

No. 8 Ohio St. 86, Wisconsin 72

In Columbus, Ohio, Chris Jent scored a career-high 27 points and Jim Jackson had 26 as Ohio State (15-3, 7-1 Big Ten) came back from a seven-point second-half deficit. The victory moved the Buckeyes back into a tie for the top spot in the Big Ten with Indiana.

No. 12 Missouri 81, Iowa State 71

In Columbia, Mo., Jevon Crudup

scored 19 points and Melvin Booker added 17 as Missouri beat Iowa State (16-5, 2-3). The Tigers (15-3, 3-2) used an 18-4 run in the second half to seal the victory.

No. 15 Michigan 81, Northwestern 58

In Ann Arbor, Mich., the Wolverines (13-5, 5-4) extended their dominance over Northwestern (8-11, 1-8) to 15 consecutive games as Jalen Rose scored 12 of his 14 points early in the second half. The Wolverines struggled to lead 24-23 at halftime, but pulled away in the second half.

No. 18 Alabama 74, Texas A&M 61

In College Station, Texas, Latrell Sprewell scored 18 of his 24 points in the second half as Alabama (18-4) beat Texas A&M, handing the 3-14 Aggies their 10th straight loss.

Colorado 70, No. 21 Oklahoma 68, OT

In Boulder, Colo., Donnie Boyce made two free throws with 12 seconds remaining in overtime to seal Colorado's upset of Oklahoma (14-5, 2-4). The win snapped a 24-game Sooner winning streak over the Buffaloes (10-8, 1-4) dating to Jan. 13, 1982.

No. 22 LSU 70, Florida 50

In Gainesville, Fla., Shaquille O'Neal scored 23 points, grabbed 15 rebounds, blocked six shots and drew 14 fouls to lead LSU (14-4, 7-1) past Florida (10-9, 3-5) in a Southeastern Conference game.

Maryland 93, No. 23 Florida State 85

In Tallahassee, Fla., Walt Williams scored 38 points — his seventh straight Atlantic Coast Conference game with more than 30 — to lead Maryland (9-10, 2-7) to the upset win over Florida State (14-6, 6-4).

Clemson 95, No. 24 Georgia Tech 78

In Clemson, S.C., Clemson (12-6, 2-5 ACC), scoring every time they touched the ball in the extra period, came within one point of the national record for points scored in an overtime period in their victory over Georgia Tech (15-7, 3-5). The Tigers scored 24 points, one less than the national record of 25 last reached by Wisconsin-Green Bay in 1987-88.

Jordan-less Bulls deflated by Suns; Celtics ground Rockets

By The Associated Press

The Chicago Bulls minus Michael Jordan equalled another loss on a six-game road trip that may have ended their hopes of an unprecedented 70-win season.

All-Star Scottie Pippen had 26 points and 12 assists, Craig Hodges scored 21 points as a replacement for the suspended Jordan and Horace Grant had 19 points and 16 rebounds. But it wasn't enough to win on the road against Phoenix.

The Suns, matching a franchise record for consecutive victories at home with 19, got 26 points from Jeff Hornacek to beat the Bulls 126-114 Wednesday night.

"They've got some great players," Hornacek said. "Whenever you have a championship team, you may have one great player, but the rest of them must be able to play."

NBA Roundup

Jordan was suspended for one game for bumping a referee in a triple-overtime loss to Utah Monday night. Under league rules, he was not allowed at the arena, so he left Wednesday morning for the All-Star game at Orlando, Fla.

The loss was the fourth in a six-game road trip for the Bulls. When it started, they were 37-5.

"Scottie Pippen had a load on his hands," Chicago coach Phil Jackson said. "He was supposed to open the game up and give John Paxson and Craig Hodges the ball, but it wore him out considerably. We had poor defense, but we knew that would be a problem area without MJ, who is such a great defender."

Elsewhere in the NBA, it was Seattle 95, New Jersey 85; Cleveland 110, Philadelphia 108 in overtime; Miami 126, Golden State 124; Detroit 102, Milwaukee 94; Boston 98, Houston 85; Orlando 109, Minnesota 102; the Los Angeles Lakers 100, the Los Angeles Clippers 95; and Sacramento 100, Utah 98.

The Bulls, who trailed 60-44 in the first half, closed to 81-80 after five straight points by Pippen, but the Suns rebuilt the margin to 96-88 by the end of the quarter.

"We knew the Bulls would be pumped up. They're the world champions, and they certainly wanted to come out and prove that," Suns coach Cotton Fitzsimmons said.

Dan Majerle scored 23 points for the Suns, while Kevin Johnson had 16 points and a season-high 19 assists.

Kings 100, Jazz 98

Mitch Richmond scored 23 points and Lionel Simmons, who made only four of 14 shots for the game, hit a six-foot basket with 13.9 seconds left as Sacramento snapped Utah's four-game winning streak.

The Jazz, leading the Midwest Division but just 11-16 on the road, got 25 points and 11 rebounds from Karl Malone. John Stockton had 11 assists, giving him 6,918 for his career and moving him past Guy Rodgers into seventh place among the NBA's leaders.

A pair of free throws by Simmons with 1:21 left gave the Kings their first lead, 96-95.

Celtics 98, Rockets 85

At Boston, Reggie Lewis had 22 points and 11 rebounds and the Celtics celebrated the return of guard Dee Brown with a victory over Houston.

Trailing 47-43 at the half, Boston outscored the Rockets 27-14 in the third quarter, including an 8-0 streak that snapped a 56-56 tie.

Brown, out for the season with a knee injury, saw his first action when he replaced Lewis with 7:35 remaining in the half. He finished with seven points in 11 minutes, including a three-point play that completed the Celtics' big third quarter.

Hakeem Olajuwon had 24 points and 10 rebounds for the Rockets, while Otis Thorpe added 20 points and 12 rebounds. Robert Parish scored 21 points and Ed Pinckney grabbed 16 rebounds for the Celtics.

Heat 126, Warriors 124

Glen Rice scored 33 points, including a tie-breaking 3-pointer with 14.1 seconds left, helping Miami beat Golden State for the first time in nine meetings.

The Heat extended their franchise-record home winning streak to seven games and improved to 23-25, just one short of the team record for victories in one season.

Rony Seikaly and Willie Burton each had 28 points for Miami. Seikaly also had 16 rebounds.

Chris Mullin scored 26 points and Tim Hardaway had 22 points and 15 assists for the Warriors, who were tied 122-122 before Rice's 3-point-er.

Cavaliers 110, 76ers 108 (OT)

Larry Nance scored 26 points, including a short jumper with 0.7 seconds left in overtime, as Cleveland won at Philadelphia.

Lubbock Downs closer to post

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK (AP) — The owner of Lubbock Downs says the successes of horse tracks around the state and a new racing act reducing state taxes have inspired a fresh effort to bring horse racing to the Texas Plains.

Track owner Jean Arnett said Wednesday the state Legislature's decision last June to vote in a new racing act, which cuts the state's taxes from 5 percent to 1 percent on the first $100 million of handle, was a step in the right direction.

"The new law certainly presents a much brighter financial picture," said Mrs. Arnett, who hopes to have horses running as early as the spring of next year. "I think there will be a great deal more interest among lenders."

Mrs. Arnett has been trying for nearly three years to reopen Lubbock Downs, which ran sanctioned quarter horse races without betting before closing in July 1989.

But difficulties gathering financing and a hefty 5 percent state tax on winnings prompted Mrs. Arnett to surrender her pari-mutuel license for a Class 2 track in late 1990.

"It almost makes me sick to think of all we went through," Mrs. Arnett said. "We thought we were very close, but in the end, we couldn't meet enough deadlines."

Mrs. Arnett's license was reinstated Jan. 31 under a provision in the new racing act allowing any Class 2 track to have its license back if it had been revoked before Sept. 1, 1991, due to a lack of financing.

"All I am looking for right now is the financing that has been lacking," said Mrs. Arnett.

"The minute we find about $7 million, we are going to do it. We want to be an industry that all of West Texas can be proud of. And we have so many horsemen in this area that would like to stay home and run."

The new racing act also extends the number of racing days per year for a Class 2 track from 44 to 60 with an option to apply for more, Mrs. Arnett said.

"Eventually we would like to race 100 days," she said. Mrs. Arnett said success at other Texas tracks, including Bandera Downs near San Antonio and Trinity Meadows near Fort Worth, offers hope for those just starting up.

"I think the movement across the state says to the world, Texas is committed to this new industry," Mrs. Arnett said.

Mount Vernon officials announce plans to rebuild George Washington's farm

By CASSANDRA BURRELL
Associated Press Writer

MOUNT VERNON, Va. (AP) — He was first in war, first in peace, and even today should be first in the hearts of America's farmers.

Few people seem to know it, but George Washington was an innovator on the wheat field as well as the battlefield. He was not only the father of the country, but a founder of the means to reap its bounty.

And now the group that runs his fabled Mount Vernon estate is driving home that point.

Thanks to a private $1.75 million grant, the organization is reproducing one of the five farms Washington operated on the property 10 miles south of the capital city which bears his name. It will include a replica of his 16-sided barn, where Washington was among the first to process his crops indoors — to reduce waste.

Other Washington innovations: —He introduced mules to America, animals that all but replaced horses behind plows across the nation. He bred his first mule using a jackass sent to Mount Vernon by the King of Spain.

—While most plantation owners were depleting their soil by overplanting, Washington planted different crops in any particular field from season to season — a practice now known as rotating. He also experimented with fertilizers that ranged from tree mold to river mud, according to the association.

"We're hoping to expand people's understanding of George Washington" off the battlefield and outside government, said Ann Rauscher of the Mount Vernon Ladies' Association. "All most people know is that George Washington chopped down a cherry tree — and that old myth is not even true."

"Washington enjoyed farming thoroughly. I think it fascinated him," said James C. Rees, associate director of the association. "There wasn't a lot of science in the 18th century, so a lot of this was sophisticated guesswork," he said.

"Through this farm we can show how creative he was."

The four-acre exhibition will be constructed on a drained and filled swamp Washington once called a "hell hole," Rauscher said. It wasn't the site of major cultivation while Washington was alive, but the project is designed to be representative of the five farms that existed on the estate, which then spanned 8,000 acres.

Washington struggled to make his farms profitable, Rauscher said. The nation's first president was chronically cash poor and had to borrow the money to travel to New York for his inauguration, she noted.

"People say that Mount Vernon probably would have prospered more as a farm if he hadn't been away as much as he was," she said.

Costumed laborers will work in the fields at the new farm, growing corn, wheat and other crops Washington planted over a 45-year period. Visitors will be able to see how harvested crops were stored, cured, packaged and sold during Washington's time.

The association also plans to increase the number of cows, mules, sheep, horses and other farm animals on the site, and expand its collection of 18th-century tools. High school and college students will construct the 16-sided barn by hand with wood from trees harvested on the estate and handmade brick.

Money for the project is coming from a $1.75 million grant from the W.K. Kellogg Foundation of Battle Creek, Mich., Rauscher said. Target date for completion is 1996.

Nunn questions administration's reluctance to implement plan to destroy Soviet nuclear weapons

By DONNA CASSATA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., is questioning why the Bush administration has not decided how to spend $400 million earmarked to help destroy Soviet nuclear weapons nearly eight weeks after President Bush agreed to the aid.

"I'm not impatient for the expenditure; I'm impatient for the plan," Nunn said Wednesday.

Congress voted the money last November to help the newly independent states withdraw thousands of missiles under U.S.-Soviet treaties and unilateral pledges by former Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev. There are more than 17,000 long-range nuclear warheads in Russia, 4,300 in the Ukraine, 1,600 in Kazakhstan and 1,200 in Belarus.

Reginald Bartholomew, the undersecretary of state for international security affairs, told the panel that the newly independent states have embarked on a plan to dismantle their nuclear weapons.

As part of the strategic arms reduction treaty, all 176 land-based strategic ballistic missiles will be out of Ukraine by the end of 1994 and all 104 strategic missiles will be out of Kazakhstan by the end of a seven-year reduction period, Bartholomew said.

Belarus wants them withdrawn from its territory but has not yet worked out a timetable to do it, he said.

Elsewhere on Capitol Hill, Secretary of State James A. Baker III acknowledged that emergency food aid is not getting to the former Soviet republics fast enough. He blamed mechanical problems.

"We recognize there is a need to accelerate deliveries of food and medicine," Baker told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

When Bush announced the $165 million program to provide relief to the "hard-hit" former Soviet republics, his spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater, said "America's abundance" would help the people get through the winter.

Nearly halfway through the winter, however, there are reports that thousands of tons of nonfat dry milk and bulgur wheat are still awaiting shipment at ports in New Orleans and Houston.

Baker said nearly 19 million tons of grain have been dispatched, making the United States "far and away" the largest supplier of food to the people of the former Soviet Union.

On the issue of weapons, Bartholomew said that as part of the treaty to reduce strategic weapons, the former Soviets have taken 600 missiles off alert status and removed the missiles and warheads from launchers on 220 of them.

The State Department official promised Nunn the administration would have a plan on how to use the $400 million "in a matter of days."

"We are very conscious of the fact that we need to be able to demonstrate that it's a sensible expenditure of money," Bartholomew said.

Nunn and several lawmakers summed up the fears of many that the 2,000 scientists in the former Soviet Union would be lured away to work for rogue nations.

The aid package could be used to pay those scientists to work to dismantle the nuclear weapons.

Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., asked Bartholomew if his promise of a plan "soon," meant later this month.

"I expect so but I can't guarantee that," Bartholomew said.

Gunman dies after two-day barricade

ONTARIO, Calif. (AP) — A man who sprayed gunfire at police during a two-day standoff was found dead inside his home after it somehow caught fire as officers lobbed a barrage of tear gas canisters at the house, authorities said.

A burned body believed to be that of Steven William Maushake, 32, was found in the house about three hours after the fire started Wednesday night, said police Cpl. Manny Hernandez.

It wasn't known if the tear gas ignited the blaze or if Maushake was killed by the fire. He may have shot himself, Hernandez said. An autopsy was pending.

The standoff began Tuesday night when police surrounded the house and evacuated 20 others after Maushake reportedly shot at a passer-by.

Police said Maushake, armed with a rifle and two handguns, fired at them sporadically over the next 24 hours, at one point peppering a patrol car with bullets.
