Dispute arises over former veterans building

By BEAR MILLS Staff Writer

A dispute over the former American Legion Hall in downtown Pampa has re-opened old wounds between members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and former members of a defunct American Legion post.

The building, located at 121 W. Foster, was purchased in 1944 by prominent Pampans A.A. Schuneman, Floyd Imel, E.J. Dunigan Jr., Don E. Williams and J.W. Garmen.

Legal documents confirm the men purchased the building to hold in trust for use by Gray County veterans. However, funds for the building were placed in an account called the American Legion Building Fund, giving the Legion a leg up on the VFW in the running of the veter-

District American Legion officials say the Pampa post's charter was taken away during the 1980s, and their understanding is the building should now be under the control of the VFW.

"They (the American Legion post in Pampa) got into a jam three or four years ago and the district commander who was ahead of me pulled American Legion charter in Pampa their charter," said 18th District was revoked due to what J.P. officials contacted Jerry Sims of Pampa - no relation - the last commander of the post here, to determine why the group ceased to be active and why uncashed checks to the Legion were left sitting in the building for over a year.

Jerry Sims said he has no recollection of such a meeting.

'The only way I became aware they had canceled our charter was when I was contacted by the Miami (American Legion) post and asked if I wanted to join," Jerry Sims said. "The American Legion has been inactive in Pampa for many years, but I was probably the commander

Jerry Sims also said he didn't attend to the uncashed checks because then-Gray County Veteran Service Officer Warner Phillips had been paid a $90-a-month stipend to

"I didn't know anything about Legion would control the building any sack of checks," Sims said. "I'm sure that (mail) would have gone to (current) Gray County Veteran Service Officer John Tripplehorn, but I don't know."

A leaking roof has led to extensive damage of the old American Legion Building in downtown Pampa. A board controlling the building wants it either sold or demolished, but Veterans of Foreign Wars officials say a 1945 deed acknowledgement promises the building to them.

Don Emmons, former VFW post commander, said, "In 1986, Vernon Camp, my quartermaster, and I inquired about the building and why we couldn't meet there. I found out knew there was never that much it was a building for all veterans. Camp and Emmons said when they told Mr. Dunigan the building was in terrible shape due to a leaking roof and would require at least $40,000 in repairs, they were told the building fund trust had "a lot more than that in it."

"That's easy to say now that Mr. Dunigan is dead and we can't ask him," Jerry Sims responded. "But he wouldn't have said that because he

However, three different Gray posts with one or both organizations said they had always understood Emmons said he and Camp went profits from illegal gambling at the building during the late-'40s and 1950s had gone into the building

Rappin' Bear hits garbage lyrics

My name's Little Growl and I'm on the prowl/ a white rap singer who's paid to howl! I been watchin' some BET and that rap music started growin' on me/

'Cause if you ugly, can't get no women! rap music will get you in there swingin'/ Seems every song, yes every line! is about havin' sex and leavin' girls cryin'/ Of course those songs by Mr. Ice-TI are about killin' whites and that means me! Them other folks - Public Enemy - are so darned mad, even violently!/

They keep talkin' 'bout how to shirk the rules! while sellin' their souls to record company ghouls/ See, rap music ain't about nothin' but preachin' / get a point of view and start in teachin'! Vanilla Ice uses his rap to get broads/

Milli Vanilli has a rap for frauds/ MC Hammer has a rap to rag Jackson/ Me? You know my rap is faxin'/ Going over my lines today to see! if any no-talent boy can make MTV/ My hair is normal, only got one woman/ but I got a bad rap like Willie Loman/ I don't like gangs and I don't dig killin'/ If I don't wear a coat then I be chillin'/ One way or the other, you better knowl rap is the way a lot of kids gol But I got a bad feelin' about the future of biddies/

Them rap acts they need to take pity/ Sayin' sex and killin' and hatin' is fun! They give you two choices: big belly or a gun. For most of my life there've been two social themes every civilized person was supposed to learn: You treat people of other races as equals and you treat women with the same respect you treat men.

Therefore, I'm perplexed by a lot of the rap music product I'm seeing these days on Yo! MTV and BET.

How is it that people get in such a tizz over David Duke being a former Klansman but don't blink twice like it, too. when Public Enemy, Ice-T and a host of other black acts go on venomous tirades against white people?

In "Victim of the Ghetto" the College Boyz blame newer model comes along? the white establishment for problems in the black community. They sing their song while stealing hubcaps off a black preacher's car. Figure it out. Anyone who would dare call a fellow human a nig-makes fortunes stirring up people about how whitey has done them wrong. What's the difference between Nazi skinheads on the right and wanna-be Black Panthers on the left?

For over 30 years America has been chipping away at discrimination. Why would these acts attempt to derthals who would promote such stupidity. Then suprekindle the race wars with the messages of NWA (No Whites Allowed?) and Public Enemy?

puzzled by the messages they see pushed in hip-hop can only be dealt with in the music store check-out line

Stop the Violence Movement has issued "Self Destruction," a song condemning the teachings of acts like LL Cool J, whose "Mama Said Knock You Out" features graphic and glorified lyrical descriptions of drive-by shootings and gang murders. Sure, the video shows gruesome hits on the football field, but those images were only added by the record company after repeated complaints about the lyrics. The visual images may have been tamed, but the lyrics are still just as

On the positive side, DC Talk has shown with their song and video "Walls" that dissolving racism by whites toward blacks cannot be achieved by inciting blacks toward whites. Correct race relations are most certainly a two-way street.

On the issue of sex, LL Cool J and Naughty By Nature make the worst crimes of Clarence Thomas look like a Sunday School picnic compared to their lyrics on "Big Ol' Butt" and "O.P.P." (Other People's Privates).

2 Live Crew's name-calling of women is now legendary, but even as people express contempt for them, their popularity soars.

You want to raise the self-esteem of female teenagers in this nation? Get them away from hours of rap songs that call them every degrading name in the book and acts that expect them to not only take it, but

How can a woman dance along to song after song about using the female body for pleasure only until a

Even the beer drinking, belly rubbin' country songs of the 1960s are tame compared to a lot of today's hip hop. To rap's credit, The Chosen Generation shows the fallacy of such messages with songs like "Steppin' Into ger are absolutely repulsive to me. But so are those who the Light."

> But, in the final analysis, there are far more songs promoting racism and sexual mistreatment within the genre than tunes condemning such behavior.

> The only answer is for intelligent people to say "NO!" to the purchase of tapes recorded by Neanply would evaporate due to lack of demand.

Rap music isn't the problem. In fact, this 32-year-Fortunately, a few people in the rap business are also old white boy likes some raps quite a lot. The problem when we refuse to buy songs with garbage lyrics.

City Manager Glen Hackler said it would take a great deal of study of the issues before he could make any comment.

"Anytime there is real property involved there would have to be legal research done, including a title search" to make sure the building rightfully belongs to the trust controlled by Sims, Karbo and Davis, Hackler said. "If a party approached us, we would just have to talk to them about it."

Emmons and Camp say what Sims or Karbo want to do with the building is immaterial since the deed acknowledgment clearly indicates it should "always be held so long as this trust remains in effect for the use not be reached for comment. and benefit of veterans ...

Another issue raised by the trustee acknowledgement is that upon the death of the original five trustees, the new trustee board was to include at least one representative from the VFW.

Emmons and Camp said in 1988 they presented the trust with a notarized request from the Pampa VFW seeking to have a member placed on the board. No VFW member was ever allowed access, they said.

Jerry Sims denied he had ever seen such a request and Karbo said he was unaware of it. Davis could

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Congress locks up our open spaces

The House of Representatives has voted to padlock the Mojave Desert - and somehow this is supposed to preserve nearly one million acres of land for the benefit not just of ecology, but of humanity. Yet if humanity is kept out - barred by federal "No-go" signs, who's the better? Are we supposed to find soul-expanding serenity from the mere abstract contemplation of all that open space out there, far beyond our approach?

Under the California Desert Protection Act, only 300 miles of trails will remain accessible, compared to more than 7,000 lost. This kind of anti-human "environmentalism" bears about as much resemblance to the conservation ethic of Theodore Roosevelt as a buzzard does to an eagle. Not that TR's approach to preserving vast stretches of the wilds for the enjoyment of humanity wasn't without drawbacks. The original conservation movement saw federal and state proprietorship as a reliable means of safeguarding our natural heritage. The bungling management that comes when property is actually owned by no one (because it essentially is "owned" by everyone) ought to have disabused us of faith in the idea of the public domain.

There are perhaps many good reasons to limit the use of the land by those who would want to enjoy its beauty and isolated environs. Hotels and restaurants and gift shops are not necessarily beneficial for such land, and unrestricted use of all-terrain vehicles, motorcycles and four-wheel drive vehicles could lead to erosion that would spoil the beauty that many would seek there. And we've all seen too much of nature's beauty spots that are marred by the deposits of beer and soda cans, bottles, paper and other signs that humanity would leave behind to indicate they have been there. Still, government is not always the best manager of such land.

The encouraging example of many private conservation pretheir land with care, teaches the same lesson. Unfortunately, it is a lesson unacknowledged in Congress. Far from seeking to experiment with private ownership of imperiled natural wonders, Congress only seems to understand the doctrine of state ownership and the mantra of expand, expand, expand.

Three new national parks and 82 wilderness areas would be created under the Desert Protection Act. Recreationists would be elbowed out of the region, by and large, while owners of property within the targeted districts will find their flexibility essentially suspended. Taxpayers will pick up a whopping tab for acquiring huge parcels. And average Americans who love the desert will find themselves frozen out of vast stretches of it.

In short, it's the kind of lose-lose scenario that only a politician could love.

Congress mandates poverty

We're in a canoe. If I shoot a hole in my end of the canoe, what should be your response? A congressman might say, "Shoot a hole in your end,

Or how about this policy guideline for Americans? If the Japanese government denies its citizens economic freedom, our government should retaliate by denying us economic freedom. In their pure forms, both propositions are ludicrous, and no American would support them. But when they're dressed up a bit, we fall for them hook, line and Japan's farm interests successfully lobby for high tariffs on imported rice. As a result, millions face. of Japanese citizens are forced to pay over three times the world price for rice. Without tariff restrictions, Japanese citizens, through lower rice prices, would have a higher standard of living. The Japanese government impoverishes the bulk of its population for the benefit of relatively few rice growers. Plus, American rice producers have a kets, ultimately they are good in only one place -Japan's tariffs.

What should the American response be? Should Congress levy high tariffs on Japanese products to "punish" them by making Americans pay higher prices for some of the goods we consume? In other words, should Congress deny us economic freedom until Japan grants its citizens economic freedom? That is precisely what is meant by talk of "fair

"But, Williams," you say, "if we continue to allow all these Toyotas and Hondas into the country, there'll be no jobs left in Detroit!" Let's look at it. When you pay $15,000 for a Honda, what happens to the money? No matter how many times the dollars change hands in international financial marsomeone else may use the $15,000 to purchase lumber from Oregon, cotton from Alabama or sugar from Louisiana.

If we banned or restricted Honda imports, sure-reduced productivity. ly there would be more jobs in Detroit. However, Detroit beneficiaries of congressional tariffs on ing Congress on U.S. domestic policy.

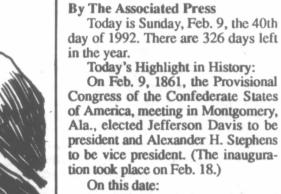

Honda imports would be highly visible and beholden to politicians. Those in the lumber, cotton and sugar industries would be the invisible victims of tariffs. They would never associate their unemployment with tariffs on Honda imports.

Politicians love this. They can rip off one group of citizens for the benefit of another and be blessed by the beneficiaries without being blamed by the victims.

If we really want to increase American competitiveness relative to Japan, let's send our congresspeople to Japan so they can do to the Japanese what they've done to us. For example, our Congress has legislated high tariffs on imported computer chips and the newest computer screens. This drives up costs and makes IBM less competitive in international markets. I bet all those soonto-be-laid-off IBM employees would never think to hold Congress partly to blame for their plight.

Sen. George Mitchell and Rep. Dan Rostenkowski might contribute by convincing the smaller market and earn less income because of the United States. For example, the Japanese or Japanese legislature to tax savings and raise their 5 percent capital gain tax to our 28 percent in the name of soaking the rich. That way Japan would have a lower rate of capital formation and hence

> And if that's not enough, Congress could export foreigners earning fewer dollars results in fewer our labor, environment and paperwork laws. In jobs in the lumber, cotton and sugar industries. The fact, I wouldn't be surprised to find Japanese advis-

In 1825, the House of Representatives elected John Quincy Adams president after no candidate received a majority of electoral votes.

In 1870, the U.S. Weather Bureau was established.

In 1942, 50 years ago, daylightsaving War Time went into effect in the United States, with clocks turned one hour forward. In 1942, the U.S. Joint Chiefs of

In 1943, the World War II battle of Guadalcanal in the southwest Pacific ended with a U.S. victory over Japanese forces.

Teeing off on unemployment

All you hundreds and thousands of people out of jobs can relax. Vice President Dan Quayle has discovered there is work to be had at a Burger King

The vice president was on his way to play golf in the Bob Hope tournament when he saw a sign in a Burger King window in Ontario, Calif., that said,

"Help Wanted." Quayle stopped his motorcade, went inside the Burger King and was told that jobs were available there for $4.25 an hour.

He was asked what advice he would offer the nation's unemployed. After discovering they needed help at the Buger King, he answered, "Don't I've sold the TV and the VCR, the dining room give up hope.'

The article regarding the incident went on: 'Quayle then headed for Palm Springs where he played golf with comedian Bob Hope, former President Ford and pro golfer John Daly. Let's see now: the vice president tells me not to give up hope even though I just lost my $50,000 a throw up, and my brother-in-law wants to come Calif. year job. I'm in my early 40s and I've got a wife and two children at home and one about to start

I can't afford a haircut or to fill the car with gas. We've cancelled our newspaper subscription and the entire family is using one toothbrush to save

If I have to eat one more frozen fish stick I'll live with us because he's out of work, too, and they foreclosed on his house.

We'll have to put my brother-in-law and his wife on cots in the den and his two kids will have my house, the bank and I are still sharing owner- to sleep on the floor. Everybody will be cut to one

Bu the vice president of the United States says I can go to work at Burger King in Ontario, Calif.,

But we live in North Carolina and I've already tried three local Buger Kings and two McDonald's and I even applied for a job driving a Rotorooter van, but they said they were cutting back because nobody was stopping up much of anything anymore, due to the economy.

They told me even if they needed help at the local Buger Kings and McDonald's, I would be too old and overqualified.

"You simply don't have enough acne to take burger orders," they said.

I asked if there might be any managerial positions open. "Are you kidding," I was told. "Our current manger is so young, his mother still dresses him before he comes to work each morning.' I wonder how much bus fare is to Ontario,

That much? If I had that kind of money, we could afford to turn on the furnace and shower in hot water more than once a week. I went down to the appliance store and watched

Vice President Quayle play golf in Palm Springs on television. After the round, Bob Hope said, "The vice president really knows how to hit a golf ball."

That's the only hope I've had in months.

Quayle: Point man for deregulation

Here it comes: The shadow of the hangman's

By the time Ronald Reagan left office, the strangling hold of federal regulations over the U.S. economy had been loosened. Since then, however, the number of proposed regulations has grown by one-fourth. There now are about 4,900 federal rules being written - rules that will dictate whether a homeowner can plant a garden in his yard or how a business can invest its profits.

And - shock! - the U.S. economy continues to sputter, as companies struggle to comply with all these regulations.

Consider: At the end of the Reagan administration, the estimated cost of environmental regulations was $102 billion a year. Since George Bush, the "environmental president," took office, those costs have risen to $123 billion, and are expected to reach $171 billion by the end of the

Ironically, the administration that has presided over this regulatory avalanche also established the Council on Competitiveness to review regulations issued by federal agencies. The mission of the council, headed by Vice Presdient Dan Quayle, is to ensure that new federal rules do not damage the competitiveness of U.S. businesses and destroy

But one wonders how the council's seven-person stafff could possibly review the thousands of regulations begin planned and penned by the more than 122,000 technocrats in the regulatory bureaucracy. Unfortunately, the council is able to examine only a handful - about 50 or 60 cases each

Despite this, Quayle has led his dedicated team to some important victories: The council has repressive new pollution rules under the Clean Air Hubbard and the council staff do their job.

Act, demanding a new look at the financial impact on industry and on jobs.

In what council director Allan Hubbard describes as perhaps its most significant accomplishment, the council recently prompted the Food and Drug Administration to propose shortening the approval process for pharmaceuticals to treat diseases such as AIDS and cystic fibrosis. If approved, the council's plan could save millions of lives and billions of dollars, Hubbard says.

The council's recent success explains why it has become a whipping boy for congressional liberals and special interest groups.

"The council is under attack ... for putting some common sense into regulations," Sen. Don Nickles, R-Okla., recently told The New York Times.

Liberals are condeming the council for being pro-business and anti-regulations. Well, now, this is precisely its intended role: To challenge unnecessary regulations that would hamstring businesses and job creation.

In a floundering economy, the work of the Council on Competitiveness couldn't be more necdelayed implementation of some of the more essary. So let the criticism flow, but let Quayle,

In regards to Beth Miller's Feb. 2 report of "Kingsmill water woes" and Bear Mills' report of 'who dunnit" on Jan. 23:

I, as a Kingsmill resident off and on since 1959, raised four children out here, one who died at 15 in 1977 after being sick only six weeks with "Burkitts lymphoma," very rare, not caused from smoking.

In 1970 we bought and improved a three-bedroom home, with living room, den, dining room, swimming pool, cellar and storage building, at great expense. And as a Gray County and school taxpayer, paid up to date, I might add, I would like to say that I worked real hard to get "good" water in Kingsmill after years of "bad" water, and I do resent "Anyone" ruining it for us.

I CHALLENGE "Anyone" who has "good" water to turn it off. Try living without it, and then judge us "suithappy" people out here. I don't think we are out of reason for expecting simply to get a drink out of our tap instead of a water can. Do you? Try doing it like we have to. Buy water and ice and go to your friends' or families' house everyday for a bath or a shower. Try it with three children in the winter like my daughter has to. It's not easy, and unless you try it, you can't judge us for wanting something that you take for granted, Can you, folks?

Also, if "Anyone" in Pampa wouldn't mind this, let them trade a place in Pampa with good water for mine in Kingsmill with bad water, of equal value. Mine was "good" water, before Celanese blew up in 1987; that was a "SHOCKER," too. Sure they repaired most of the damage. What choice did they have?

PEOPLE, WE HAVE RIGHTS, TOO. We help support Pampa's economy, too; we pay sales tax! property tax! tags and insurance! We buy the Pampa newspaper. We even buy your high-dollar gasoline. We live in Gray County, too – or is Gray County limited to Pampa people only? Think how you would feel in our place before you make your comments about Kingsmill people, and call me at 669-1950 if you want to hear more. Yes, we all have telephones, gas and lights out here, and we used to have running water.

I am "Roberts" now because I remarried after my husband died New Year's Eve in 1988 of acute myelomonocytic leukemia, caused from exposure to benzene; research said that, we didn't - and not from smoking, either. Another thought on cancer: The man who helped build my house in 1960 died in 1978 with throat cancer. Two men who lived in my house at different times in the '60s both died with cancer, one of lung cancer in 1988 and one with lymphoma and bone cancer in 1989. STRANGE?

So walk in my shoes and tell me you wouldn't suspect a chemical plant one-half mile or so from your home that has freely admitted to emitting cancer-causing chemicals through the years. Not just to Kingsmill residents.

People, read up on benzene; it's aromatic, too! It can travel 12 miles ANY direction in a normal wind! So think how much further it can go from the plant in our winds. Don't feel you are safe, because "No One" is safe from pollution, even Pampa residents.

You ask, "Why don't they just move?" Well, I had my house sold, but on the advice of their attorney and the judge who had to OK the sale, they decided they didn't want to live by a chemical plant, as the woman wanted to someday have children free of birth defects. So, at big expense to them, they defaulted on the sale. One real estate agent said, "Honey, people are afraid of your house with Celanese out there." No one else has been by in the time it was on the market.

This letter is long and probably will be cut a lot, because of such interesting happenings in New Jersey, West Virginia, Dallas or Houston; there won't be space for all of it, or it may not be printed at all.

BUT LOTS MORE CAN BE SAID ON THE KINGSMILL RESIDENT WATER WOES!

Thanks for listening. Ann Malone Roberts West of Pampa

Homosexuals need to read God's word

To the editor:

With reference to your article in The Pampa News on Jan. 30, under the heading, "Court considers state law against homosexual conduct," I would like to share some very interesting thoughts that come to mind.

The Sodomy Law is 113 years old, and it lay dormant (so to speak) until recently when a group of people began changing the law of nature, that Gold Almightly set in order, and have made a law unto themselves. One paragraph of the news article reads: "Pat Wiseman of Austin, an attorney representing five gay men and women who filed the lawsuit, said the sodomy law intrudes into a person's most private choice, and harms homosexuals by branding them as

Now listen to this paragraph:

"[Tom Doya], an Austin lawyer who is one of five litigants, said the sodomy law works against the public's welfare by driving some homosexuals underground and out of reach of AIDS awareness campaigns.'

Then he said, "I'm criminalized. And I'm a hardworking, tax-paying person who cares about being a decent human being.

Folks, should not this man have kept this information in the privacy of his bedroom instead of making it

If the homosexuals would keep their actions within the privacy of their own homes, then we would never know one thing about it, and the sodomy law would in no way affect them.

Just recently, on his 9 a.m. program, Phil Donahue had three men couples on TV. Two couples were married, and one couple was to be married.

God's word tells us in the sixth chapter of I Corinthians, the ninth and tenth verses: "Do you not know that the unrighteous will not inherit the Kingdom of God? Do not be deceived; neither the immoral, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor homosexuals, nor thieves, nor the greedy, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor robbers will inherit the Kingdom of God." (Revised Standard

It is sad, indeed, that some people are choosing this way of life, rather than the way God's word teaches us. When God's word says a homosexual cannot enter the kingdom of heaven, then there is only one other place

The Bible tells us (Romans 3:23) we all have sinned and came short of the glory of God. We have a choice; we can either remain in that condition or we can follow the instructions given to us, whereby we can become

In the eighth chapter of Mark, verse 36, the Bible tells us a man's soul is worth more than the whole world. Friends, we need to go all out to save that soul.

If just one of the aforementioned people who read these comments would refrain from this way of life and take necessary actions to become a Christian, it would be to God's glory.

With humility and sincerity, I have presented these thoughts.

Maybe sheriff can use 'fleet manager'

I enjoyed your article on our Sheriff's Department car fleet in Sunday's Pampa News.

In reflecting back on my many years as a "used iron" merchant, I am amused with the thought that the Gray County Sheriff's Department is a "used car dealer's dream." How nice it would have been to have had a client who pays cash, and demands high mileage, used-up police cars or taxis, of which there is an endless supply, and make such a frequent replacement. And maybe a concession on repairs, and real frequent paint and body work, too!

I fail to see the cost savings on fuel, but I will concede that most wore-out vehicles do save on fuel because they have more broke-down time.

Maybe the county commissioners can come up with additional savings in that department for, say, a "fleet manager" or "transportation consultant."

Year-round school a burden to families

I want to express my opinion against year-round schooling for our children in Pampa. I am a grandparent and a teacher of children.

Going to public school year round will greatly interfere with our church Vacation Bible Schools and all church and Christian camping programs. It would, of course, be an added burden to family planning for vacations.

We need the summer months for Christian activities and family relaxation and extra uninterrupted time together.

WTSU conducting survey of area wages and salaries

University's T. Boone Pickens College of Business, with $5,000 startup assistance from the Amarillo Economic Development Corporation (AEDC), is conducting a wage and salary survey that is expected to of money. The AEDC's financial provide information of significant value to current and prospective area employers.

Primary study facilitators, Dr. Richard W. Nicholson, associate professor of management, and Dr. Suresh Gopalan, assistant professor of management, mailed surveys to approximately 450 presidents and chief executive officers on Jan. 21. The mailing list included the Texas Panhandle's largest companies/organizations, both for- and not-forprofit, based on number of employ-

Results will be tabulated and compiled and will provide information on annual compensation by job for the total market. Frequency, average, median, standard deviation, lowest salary and highest salary will be published for each job classification as determined from the Standard Dictionary of Occupational Respondents will also receive statistical data comparing their company's annual compensation by job with the total market.

"A survey of this kind can be very valuable to present employers because it lets you know whether you are being competitive with your wages and salaries," Dr. John E. Dittrich, dean of the T. Boone Pickens College of Business, said. "It is important to know where you stand. If you don't pay enough, you lose people and have unhappy employees. If you pay too much, then you drive up costs and run the risk of going out of business. It allows you to determine if your employment practices are compatible with what your company wants to do strategically.'

According to Dittrich, results of the study will also prove of immense value to prospective area

The results of this survey will provide some real, hard facts of interest to prospective businesses," Dittrich said. "I think the AEDC will find the information very helpful and instrumental in their efforts to effectively market this area."

Hoechst Celanese launches ad campaign to improve recognition

BRIDGEWATER, N.J. - Who in the world is cult. Our salespeople found themselves spending more campaign features the partnership Hoechst Celanese insulating fiber called "Polarguard." this chemical giant still gets lost among its better known ucts." competitors: DOW and Dupont.

To change this public conception, management at Hoechst Celanese recently asked Washington D.C. Goldberg Marchesano Kohlman to create an aggressive image advertising campaign designed to replace the questions with the answers.

A diversified Fortune 500 chemical company, Hoechst Celanese was created in 1987 by the merger of American Hoechst and Celanese Corporation. The company had undertaken no corporate advertising since the merger, while its competitors spent heavily on image advertising. Combined with a name that is hard to pronounce and remember, Hoechst Celanese was suffering from an identity crisis.

"Awareness of the company among the general public was low, even in communities where we are a major employer," stated Horace Webb, Hoechst Celanese vice president of communications. "We found employee morale and pride affected by the lack of corporate identity, and employee recruitment efforts were more diffi-

Management at Hoechst Celanese decided that a corporate advertising campaign had the greatest potential to reach a wide variety of target audiences and achieve a number of corporate objectives.

"We conducted extensive research among company employees and customers to involve them in the process and give them ownership of the campaign. They unanimously told us that Hoechst Celanese' major strength (and the competition's major weakness) is responsible problem-solving partnerships with its customers.

While Hoechst Celanese is not well-known, many of its customers are. So we developed the campaign theme, 'The Name Behind the Names You Know,' designed to demonstrate the partnership Hoechst Celanese creates and to take advantage of the credibility and high awareness of customers like The North Face. Lee Jeans, and The Coca-Cola Company," G•M•K president, Carole Marchesano recalls.

'We were the first company Coca-Cola came to when they were looking for an environmentally friendly, recycled plastic bottle," says Webb. "Coca-Cola was very happy that we had the technology for recycled plastic bottles, the first approved by the FDA."

The newly developed recycled Coke bottle was the focus of the 30-second commercial, filmed on a pristine lake to illustrate the delicate environmental bal-

Mocha madness: for not-on-a-diet friends, melt 1/2 cup of semisweet chocolate chunks to line a chocolate cookie crust, then fill it with 1 1/2 pints coffee ice cream, slightly softened. Smooth top and refreeze before serving.

Salsa is super with fish or meat. Chopped red onion, jalapeno chili peppers and cilantro are basic. To that add tomatoes and red bell peppers, or pineapple or nectarines, or tomatillos and apple. It's fun to experiment with different flavors.

Coconut water, the liquid in coconuts, is almost fat-free and a tasty, safe drink especially if the coconut is freshly opened. Watch out for coconut milk and cream, which have high-saturated-fat coconut oil.

Do-it-yourself pizza is a snap when you start with ready-made bobolis, baked cheese pizza crusts. Top with more cheese, thin-sliced or chapped vegetables, sliced garlic and basil. Baked on preheated sheets 12 minutes at 500. Let stand 10 minutes, then cut.

Darrouzett, 87-48, Friday night in a District 10-1A boys' game.

Darrouzett, in its final year of high school competition because of low student enrollment, trailed by only four, 16-12, at the end of the first quarter. But Miami broke far out in front in the second quarter by 6-1 sophomore Andrew Neighbors, to take a 19-point lead (44-25) with 52 seconds left in the first half.

Neighbors, who tallied 17 firsthalf points, scored 19 points overall for game-scoring honors. Aaron McReynolds followed with 12 points, while Melvin Seymour, Matthew Neighbors and Brock Mayberry chipped in 10 each. Jason Stauff added 9 points.

Miami is now 11-15 for the season while Darrouzett drops to 2-18. "Darrouzett is in a bad situation, but they do a pretty good job. They played well the first quarter against us, but then our size started making a difference," said Miami coach Dwight Rice. "We were going in and getting the rebounds.'

Rice said Darrouzett high school students would either be going to Booker or Follett the next school year.

Peeking at Pampa BY Katle

Varied activities in several directions filled last week's calendar. Following are some of the bright moments.

A warm Pampa "Welcome!!!" to Nanette Moore, who arrived in Pampa earlier this week to become the executive vice-president of the Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce. She's outgoing, enthusiastic and ready to become an integral part of the community. Already there have been handshaking, meetings and greetings by the dozens. Jerry Sims, interim executive vicepresident, seems especially happy to have her here, so that he can go on with his business of being a full fledged retiree. Kind words of appreciation to Jerry for filling in for the last few months.

Debbie Musgrave organized a punch and cookies reception honoring three retiring LVNs of Coronado Hospital last Friday. Retirees are Penny Newman, Dell Turk and Mary Seedig. Each received a clock with an inscription of appreciation. Wonder if the alarms will ever be set? Happy retirement wishes, girls!

Little Ashtyn Shipley, daughter of D.L. and Kim, is one cute and personable baby, who is always dressed up in fluff and lace. Proud grandparents are Donnie and Pat Shipley and Carolyn Elliott. Extra proud great-grandparents are Armal and Bonnie Finney. A penny says Bonnie has already made at least one quilt for the little one.

Floyd and Maxine Watson are deep in a wall-moving type of remodeling of their already lovely home. They still have their good natures, too!

Dawna and Sid Mauldin recently purchased the country home of Dorothy and M.D. Snider. Dawna has been having a picnic adding her personal touches to the house. The Sniders are spending some time with their daughters, Diana and Sandra, in South Texas.

Bonita Brown and Rhonda Hendrix are two sisters who enjoy each other's company to the fullest. Come to think of it, they enjoy other people, too. Both are always pleasant and happy.

Kathy Hammer wears several one-of-a-kind garments decorated with old linens, pillowcases, doilies, dresser scarves and hankies, A favorite is a denim jumper with a bib from the delicate oldies. Most attractive!

White-collar women tickled pink with blue-collar mate

DEAR ABBY: I read with amusement the letter from "On the Fence in Waukegan, Ill.," the professional career woman who is dating a man who has only a high school education and works in a warehouse

She said, "He treats me like a queen, but I'm concerned that perhaps he is too simple for me and I might get bored."

Well, I have some advice for her: If he's as good to you as you say he is, and you love him — marry him.

I am a college professor who can lecture fluently in five languages, and I've been happily married for 10 years to a truck driver with an eighthgrade education.

Intelligence has nothing to do with the level of schooling; decency and caring have nothing to do with the kind of work a man does; and loyalty has nothing to do with the size of a paycheck.

Perhaps the old saying, "Opposites attract," is true. My husband has brought more joy into my life than I ever had when I was previously married to another educator. OPPOSITE BUT EQUAL

DEAR OPPOSITE: Meet another opposite-but-equal couple from a neighboring state:

IN OHIO

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago, I shocked my friends and family when I broke my engagement to a welleducated (Rhodes Scholar) millionaire business executive to marry a construction worker. Why? Because he's kind, honest and totally lovable.

My high-school dropout can fix the plumbing, tune up a car, build a house, and grow enough vegetables to feed an army. He can cook and clean like a pro, and comes home whistling every evening, without stopping at a bar. The stories he tells me about his day at the construction site are far more interesting than my day on Wall Street. This man won't grow soft and flabby sitting behind a desk all day, and he won't get a stressrelated illness, or have an affair with his secretary. And if we have children (I'm 38 and he's 36), he won't be

DEAR ABBY: I am a professional woman with a degree in journalism. I married a man seven years my junior, with an eighth-grade education. He's a gardener, watches sports on TV and reads TV Guide.

Can a relationship like this work? You bet! But only if both parties are mature adults who are sensitive to each other's needs. We have worked through worse problems than boredom, and are still in love

His children are grown; mine are still quite young. He's terrific with kids and mine adore him. I've dated professional men, but none ever gave me the up-there-in-theclouds, head-over-heels-in-love feeling I get when I'm with him. EL PASO (AP) - Keith Deputy rises early each morning, gauging his waking hour by the season and the weather. By the time the sun peeks over the Franklin Mountains to the east, he and his workers are aboard tractors ready to hit the cotton fields.

It's a lifestyle Deputy hoped he would pass on to his 2-year-old son. But with New Mexico racing to open its border with Mexico - expected by the end of this year - Deputy's farm and the semi-rural valley where he lives are destined to become major thoroughfares for international commerce.

"This area of New Mexico will prosper and will obviously grow very rapidly," New Mexico Gov. Bruce King said during a visit last month to the Santa Teresa border crossing, now under construction in southern New Mexico near El Paso.

But some residents of the Upper Valley of El Paso are criticizing officials in Texas, New Mexico and El Paso and the federal government for rushing ahead to open the port of entry when roads and other structures to sustain growth from the crossing aren't ready.

"We do not want the crossing, we never did," said Ron Stading, an attorney who heads the Upper Valley Neighborhood Association board. "It's really not beneficial to the Upper Valley and El Paso.

"As far as who is wanting it, it is the federal government and the state of New Mexico and we're forced to live with it the best we can.'

Stading said the association, which claims 1,200 members, has conceded it can't stop growth or free trade.

"It's a bureaucratic nightmare that we're forced to make the best of," Stading said. "We're forced to work around the mistakes and when we point out those mistakes, they say, 'Yes, we know.' And when we say, 'Why not do something?' they say, 'Because we're in a rush to open this up.' "

Development crept slowly for many years through this valley of large shade trees and cotton and chili fields. But the pace quickened when U.S. and Mexican officials got behind the Santa Teresa border crossing.

Last year officials from the New Mexico and Texas highway departments, both countries and area governments got together to start planning the crossing and studying infrastructure needs.

Residents say planning came too

"It's very frustrating to have a log of politicians patting themselves on the back that they got the crossing and now it's, 'Here citizens, you handle it," said Bernard Sargent, a valley resident and member of the association.

New Mexico's Legislature appropriated $6.1 million to build the crossing in August 1989. The Mexican government approved it in October 1990, ending 20 years of lobbying by private developer Charlie Crowder to open the port.

Crowder has sunk millions into buying up U.S. Bureau of Land Management property and developing it into an airport, country club, housing and other things and paving roadways linking his property to the crossing.

"I have no problem with progress, and the only thing I'm upset about is that if Charlie Crowder was going to build this border crossing, why wasn't somebody working on this previously, and now it's a rush, rush deal," Deputy said.

Wilson & Co. of Albuquerque, a ing all the federal guidelines for docu- conjunction with El Paso, petitioned How do you arrest someone out Texas and the valley tremendously. consulting firm, has been studying come up with the best plan for routing traffic from the crossing through the Upper Valley.

Dave Thompson, project manager, said the company believes converting a half-mile, two-lane road that crosses Interstate 10 to a six-lane limited-access divided highway is the best way to shuttle traffic between the Santa Teresa border crossing and Interstate 10.

Deputy's 100-acre farm, purchased by his grandfather in 1923, is squarely in the path of the proposed road.

"That road is going to cut my farm right in half," Deputy said. "Right now the road's supposed to go right beside my house, about 50 feet from the back door."

Thompson said Wilson & Co. looked at 14 alternatives and narrowed them to three. He said the $37 million expansion of the Artcraft road was the least expensive and would disturb fewer households.

"We did our darnedest to locate the road where we could impact the land as minimally as possible," Thompson said. "It just so happened we had to split Mr. Deputy's farm."

The expansion likely won't start until 1994. Officials have said finishing it could take between three to six years.

Once Wilson & Co. completes its study, the Texas Highway Commission must begin its environmental assessment and start public hearings. Finally, agreements for rights of way must be hammered out. And officials must come up with money to fund the highway and interim routes to be used until Artcraft is complete.

"The funding sources haven't been identified yet," said George Herrera, a New Mexico Highway and Transportation Department project manager. "We've included federal agencies in our studies. We're followmentation so when it comes to the end the Texas Department of Transportathere? Are the signs going to be an existing roads since last year to of the (Wilson & Co.) study, we'll be tion to eliminate the road from the adequate deterrent?" eligible for federal funds.'

The Upper Valley Neighborhood Association has been lobbying to keep traffic off what would likely be the most direct route from the crossing, Country Club Road. That farm-to-market road is lined with residences, some no more than five feet from the road. The neighborhood association, in

The department rejected the request, but ordered a load limit of 58,420 pounds gross vehicle weight.

Country singer Larry Boone to perform at City Limits

Country singer and songwriter Larry Boone, named as one of the top new country artists by Billboard and as CashBox magazine's breakout artist of the year in 1988, will be performing at the City Limits on Friday, Feb. 14, at 8:30 p.m.

Boone is one of the premier writer/artists to emerge from the neo-traditionalists now dominating the country charts. Writing uncommon songs for the common man, and singing them with a rich, textured baritone, he has carved a solid niche for himself in the George Jones/ Merle Haggard/Vern Gosdin branch of country music's family.

The Academy of Country Music nominated him for Top New Male Vocalist, and he was one of the Amusement and Music Operators Association's Rising Stars. In 1989 he was nominated as Favorite New Country Artist at the American Music Awards.

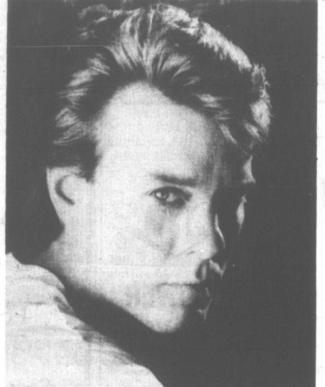

Now with Columbia Records, Boone's debut album with the company is One Way to Go, produced by Steve Buckingham and Marshall Morgan.

Writing seven of the 10 cuts comprising the album, Boone brings listeners a well-rounded selection revolving around human relationships, the good with the bad, the losses as well as the gains. The debut single from the album is "I Need a Miracle."

"Paul Nelson and I were kicking around ideas one day, and Danny Mayo stopped by. He said, 'What's the thing people do when they've tried everything else? They pray.' We decided it was an obvious concept, but one that hadn't really been explored before."

One of the best selections on the album was written with no thoughts of inclusion on a recording project. blocks," he says. The swinging, up-tempo "Rock on the Road" was really therapy, Boone says.

"In my case, the song deals with experiences in the music business, but it isn't necessarily an 'insider song'

These "Rocks on the Road," or as Boone also calls them, "life's little episodes," can be dealt with, though, whether with a tongue-in-cheek attitude such as in "Rock," or with the determination found in Boone's other material. because everyone has had situations that looked like As he writes, "You gotta pick yourself up, dust yourself great opportunities but turned out to be stumbling off/You might have to cry, but you don't have to crawl."

positions having been recorded by such artists as Lacy realize that more than athletics or anything else, God J. Dalton, John Conlee, Southern Pacific and Keith had given me musical talent." Whitley. Ronnie Milsap recorded Boone's "Roll the Dice," and he had a No. 1 hit when Kathy Mattea released "Burnin' Old Memories." He scored a Top 10 hit when Don Williams recorded "Old Coyote Town."

One Boone song, "Beyond the Blue Neon," became the title cut on a George Strait album, and his song "American Faces" was the only country song played during the 1988 Olympics coverage on television.

Though music was not an early career goal of Boone's, he came by the interest and talent naturally.

"Music was always a part of my life," he says. "My mother, Marie, played the guitar and taught me to play when I was very young. I came from a Southern Baptist background, where gospel music was prominent. My interest in country music was always strong. I'm originally from Cooper City, Florida – a citrus farming area - where country was the music people listened to."

But music was not the life Boone had in mind when he enrolled in college at Florida Atlantic University at Boca Raton, Fla. He started out as an athlete, with aspirations of either professional sports or sports writing. He had lettered in football, basketball and baseball in high school, being named All-Star in baseball. When Boone received an athletic scholarship, his future seemed set.

"I never gave music any serious thought as far as making a career out of it," he recalls. "It was more of a hobby, something I did for the enjoyment of it. I started are also available at Parkway Package Store, 1824 N. playing the honky-tonks and steakhouses at night to Hobart.

By the time he had graduated, Boone knew he wanted to be a songwriter. "I'd always loved creative writing," he says. "I loved writing of any sort, so the songwriting sort of evolved naturally.'

After graduation, he packed up his Volkswagen van and headed for Nashville, where he played for tips at the Country Music Wax Museum, worked at odd jobs and was a substitute teacher in Nashville's public school system. During that period, he continued learning about the craft of songwriting. He met and impressed Gene Ferguson, the man who was managing John Anderson and Charly McClain. Under Ferguson's guidance, Boone signed a label deal and released two critically acclaimed albums, Larry Boone, which contained "Don't Give Candy to a Stranger," and Swingin' Doors, which had "I Just Called to Say Goodbye Again.'

After a third album, Down That River Road, was lost in the shuffle of a label change, Boone signed with Columbia Records. The artist's Columbia signing brings him now to the fore, a new traditionalist before it was fashionable, and a writer/artist who has been standing in the wings of superstardom for some time. He's got One Way to Go now, and that way is center

Keep your thumbs in shape for these 'browseable books'

By RON BERTHEL Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - The question isn't whether you've read any good books lately - it's "Have you browsed any good books lately?"

Some books, it seems, are just made for browsing, for picking up when you don't feel like devoting your attention to a continuing narrative, or for those occasions - in the doctor's waiting room or while the baby is napping - when your reading might suddenly be interrupted.

Among recent books that receive a "thumbs up" for thumbing through are 1001 Things Everyone Should Know About Science (Doubleday) by James Trefil. There's no need to count them each of its 1,001 entries is numbered. You might browse from No. 487 ("Astrology has no scientific basis") to No. 46 ("Not all animals have their ears on their heads") and back to No. 947 ("Pluto is something of an oddball") - the Pluto here being the planet, not the Disney cartoon dog.

Readers who like to do their browsing in a somewhat orderly fashion will welcome the fact that the entries are arranged in categories, including Classical Biology, Evolution and Earth Science.

Thumbing through Idiom's Delight (Vintage) by Suzanne Brock is a good way to discover more about "Fascinating Phrases and Linguistic Eccentricities."

Although "It's a drop in the bucket" is good enough in English, Italians go a bit overboard by saying "E una goccia nel mare" - "It's a drop in the sea." You really "shoot the works" when you say it in Spanish: "Echar la casa por la ventana" means "to throw the house out the window." And, while Americans say "Don't waste your breath," in French the expression is "Epargne ta salive!" ("Save your saliva!") - a short phrase, but quite a mouthful nonetheless.

Fortunately, you won't find the story you are reading among those included in True and Tacky II: More Weird Stories From the World's Newswires (Topper) by Carolyn Naifeh and Monica Hoose. But you will find actual news stories about an experimental Volkswagen that parks itself, a man who had his hair cut into a replica of a Three Mile Island cooling tower, and a Manhattan gallery exhibit celebrating Chinese takeout food - complete with menus, fortune cookies and cardboard carry-out containers.

Another presidential campaign looms, and you might want to browse through The World Almanac of Presidential Campaigns (Pharos) by Eileen Shields-West 10 see how 1992's campaign compares to those of the past. Among the bits of knowledge attained through sampling this factfilled book are that in 1960, Richard Nixon became the first candidate to campaign in all 50 states, covering about 65,000 miles; FDR's dog Fala was among the symbols used in his re-election campaign of 1944; and in the campaign of 1788 - well, there was no campaign, as George Washington, president of the Constitutional Convention, was pressed into service as the nation's president in spite of his desire to retire on his

Argentine free market accelerates as labor unions lose more power

By ED McCULLOUGH Associated Press Writer

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) - Huge layoffs at Argentina's largest steel mill illustrate how much political clout labor has lost in a nation it once dominated.

The state-owned SOMISA plant, where losses soared to $1 million a day, dismissed 7,000 of its 12,000 workers last year and shut down one of its two blast furnaces.

Metalworkers Union members reacted in ways that used to bring relief. They held rallies, sit-ins and hunger strikes; lobbied sympathetic congressmen; appealed to the public; met with Cabinet ministers, and asked the Roman Catholic Church to mediate.

None of it helped. President Carlos Menem's government would not rescind the layoffs or reopen the second furnace. It wants to sell the complex in San Nicolas, a river port 125 miles north of Buenos Aires, by the end of this year.

"The union movement is even weaker today" than under the military governments of 1976-83. "which banned or co-opted it," said Senen Gonzalez, a labor analyst. "Unions used to symbolize resistance. Now, they are so afraid of the economy. Labor backed Menem for president, but real wages have trailed inflation since his election in 1989. He abolished tens of thousands of public jobs and rewrote labor laws to favor business. He has tried to stabilize the economy by wringing inflation out and revitalize it by reducing the state's role.

"Menem has destroyed the power of unions, and that is most important" to the success of his economic plan, said Juan Alemann, an economist and former Treasury sec-

The General Labor Confederation conducted 13 general strikes against Menem's predecessor, Raul Alfonsin. Its representatives in Congress blocked Alfonsin's efforts to sell the state airline and telephone company, reduce the public payroll and cut government subsidies.

Menem bypassed Congress, using a presidential decree to end subsidies that cost hundreds of millions of dollars a year. He dropped more than 100,000 public jobs, ignoring union protests.

February a bit bleak for exciting In agriculture produce specials at supermarkets

By EDITH CHENAULT Extension Service

St. Valentine's Day will be the highlight of marketing specials during the month of February, a month that does not usually create excitement at the supermarket.

Cold weather is at a peak, there is little variety in the produce coming to market, and meal planners will be stretched to vary what otherwise could be a bland menu, said Dr. Dick Edwards, economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The incoming produce probably won't set your salivary glands into a frenzy," Edwards said.

Damage caused by the whitefly seems to be concentrated in the Imperial Valley of Southern California and Arizona. Head lettuce will be affected, but most other winter vegetables grown in other regions of California, Texas and Florida have yet to be impacted by this pest, he said.

Fresh February produce will include asparagus, avocados, broccoli, brussels sprouts, cabbage, celery, carrots, cucumbers, spinach, green peas and cauliflower. Fall crops with good storage characteristics, such as as low as 39 cents per pound. Bone-in breast prices near will be featured.

Valentine specials will feature flowers. but now it seems that fresh flowers have surpassed that," he said.

flowers should be ordered early to ensure that requests are filled before the 14th, he said.

The best buy will be red roses, at prices around $15 to $18 per dozen, he said. Supermarkets, in keeping with their one-stop shopping status, also will have an ample supply of cards and candy for those wishing to go all out for their sweethearts, he said.

Domestically grown fruit that will be featured will both Florida and the California-Arizona region will be of beef and chicken stock also will be reduced, he said. in full swing, Edwards said.

The size of the crop is a bit larger than last year, so prices should be on par with those in 1991, with oranges selling for 59 cents per pound and grapefruit at 10 cents each," he said.

February also marks the peak volume of imported fruits, with the largest amount shipped from Chile. Promotion efforts will center on such soft fruit as peaches, grapes, plums and nectarines, Edwards said. Sales prices on peaches should be from 50 to 69 cents.

tomatoes, onions and squash from Mexico, and can-certain garments that were a bit looser before the taloupes, honey dew melons and pineapples from the Caribbean and Central America. Later in the month, fresh strawberries will be imported from Mexico, but prices will be more than $1 per pint, he said.

The news from the meat counter is somewhat better toes at two for $1.

- the drop in prices that occurred last fall should continue through February.

Beef specials for the month will focus on cuts used in soups, stews and casseroles, but the best buys will be on chuck roasts that will be priced at about $1.25 per pound. Shoulder roasts will be offered at prices ranging from $1.59 to $1.79 per pound.

Ground beef, packed in chubs, will still be priced at less than $1 per pound. Other featured cuts will be round and sirloin steaks, he said.

For those who enjoy premium beef and have the extra cash, top sirloin that can be cut into strip steaks will be offered for less than $3 per pound. But the entire cut of beef usually must be purchased, costing from $40

Pork prices also should remain at current low levels during the month. Pork chops, roasts, stuffed sausage, pan sausage and bacon will be the most frequently advertised specials, Edwards said.

After the marketing blitz on turkeys during November and December, there will be few poultry specials during February. Prices for whole broilers will still be apples, pears, sweet potatoes and white potatoes, also $1 per pound will be comon, as will the leg-thigh cut at 29 cents per pound in bulk packs of 10 pounds.

Specials in the seafood department will be sluggish. "In the past, candy was the big attraction as a gift, Medium-sized shrimp priced at $3.50 per pound will be one of the best buys. Another will be orange roughy at $4 per pound. Turbot could be featured at $2.99 per Most large food stores have a floral department, but pound, whole catfish at $1.99 per pound, and ocean perch at $1.49 per pound.

Grocery items for hot breakfasts and soups for cold weather menus will be discounted the most. Oatmeal and other hot cereals lead the discount list. Pancake and waffle mixes, as well as thouse that are frozen and ready-to-eat, also will be discounted.

Not only will canned soups and dry mixes be on sale, but any item that can be turned into soup, such as be grapefruit, oranges and tangerines. Production in canned and frozen vegetables, will be on special. Prices

> Coffee, which has been at reasonable prices for two years, will still be priced at $1.25 for 13-ounce containers. Hot chocolate also will be marked down.

> In the nonfoods section, the best buys will be on vitamins and diet aids. The cold and flu season always increases sales of vitamins, and merchandisers will encourage consumers to stock up at prices discounted up to 20 percent. A large coupon blitz will drop the prices even lower on some name brand items.

"Diet aid sales will be spurred by thoughts of spring Other imported products in the produce section are approaching and a feeling of discomfort as you button Christmas holidays," Edwards said.

President's Day promotions will include apple and cherry pie. Other promotions will include canned goods that are priced in multiples: for example, canned toma-

The excellent moisture conditions have a few farmers interested in planting a spring, small grain crop. This might be wheat, oats or

OATS: Cimmarron, Bob, Bronco, Ora, Nora, Norwin, H-833 and Checots are adapted to this area and can be planted in Febrary. True spring varieties such as Lodi, Lang and Burnett can be planted in later February and early March. These grain types make good hay as they grow tall and leafy at this latitude if moisture and fertility are adequate Walken oats can still be planted for late spring grazing, but is not recommended for hay or grain production. H-833 is a good irrigated variety but it is rather short and would not be good for dryland or for hay purposes.

For dryland production, seeding rate should be approximately 70 lbs/A. For irrigated production, at least 90 lbs/A should be planted.

BARLEY: Some producers find that barley is more efficient in using limited irrigation water than other feed grains.

February is too late to plant winter barleys such as Post and Schuyler as they do not head normally if there isn't sufficient cold temperatures for vernalization. Semi-winter varieties such as Tambar 401, Tam-Era, Rogers, Will and Tokak can be planted in Febrary with good success.

True spring varieties such as Lud, Otis and Steptoe can be plant-March. Generally, planting rates for dryland should be about 40 lbs/acre. For limited irrigation, droughts stress occurs.

WHEAT: Some interest has also been expressed for planting some wheat at this time. The most common question is whether to use a winter or spring wheat variety.

Winter wheats must have a period of chilling or vernalization before the plant is capable of producing a head. The temperature window in which wheat is vernalized is generally considered as those temperatures below 45 degrees F, but above the temperatures at which dormancy is initiated. Temparature at about 1.5 inches below the soil surface is more important than air temperatures.

The chilling requirement for winter wheat varies somewhat between varieties. Winter wheats with low chilling requirements generally require less than two weeks of vernalization, whereas winter

Spring wheats do not require a chilling period, but producers need to make sure elevators will accept a spring wheat variety.

If planting before Jan. 1, plant a winter wheat. As it gets later in the year, the spring wheats will have an advantage over the winter

Data from Bushland suggets that spring wheat variety yields will be significantly higher than winter wheats when planted in late February. However, when planting occurs in late January, the difference between spring and winter wheat variety yields is much smaller.

Expect heading to be 1-2 weeks later when planting in the spring compared to fall planting.

Attempts to save Waikiki Beach are bogging down in 'quicksand'

"Every time they've dumped sand, nature reclaims it and redistributes it," said George Downing, 61, a Waikiki surfer since 1938. "Nature takes the sand out to the reefs and fills in contours that make it a unique surfing area."

But the project's main catch is a 1928 agreement landowners divvied up beach access for its first big overhaul. The public got a 75-foot easement along the water, and the landowners got the rest for private use.

That means that if sand is trucked in to make a State and tourism officials want engineers to do 1.3-mile Waikiki strip an even 150 feet wide, as proposed, public money - a preliminary estimate is upward of $10 million - would be spent creating public and private beach.

"We're asking the hotel owners to put aside that earlier agreement," said Calvin Tsuda, deputy director of the state harbors division. "The beach is for the general public - all the more so if public funds are being used."

But by October, the Soviet Union had a foot in the grave and republics were bickering over the will. In a compromise with Kazakhstan, Russia agreed to send up an inexperienced Kazakh in place of Krikalev's successor.

The Kazakh came back with Artsebarsky, who was replaced by Alexander Volkov. And 34-year-old Krikalev got stuck with another term in the stars, and no clear word on his own future.

"I have a question," Krikalev said from space on Soviet television shortly afterward. "Is it true the Russians are going to sell the Mir space station ... along with us?'

Finally an answer came. Deputy flight director Viktor Blagov said that a replacement crew will go up on March 18. Krikalev, along with Volkov, will return on March 23 after spending 311 days in space, about two months shy of the 366day record set by his colleague Musa Manarov.

The cash-starved Soviets denied any intention of selling the Mir, a 6year-old craft about the size of a railroad car. But they began selling and stripping apart everything else.

Glavkosmos was broken up, and most of its facilities, including the control center at Star City, were taken by Russia. Kazakhstan got Baikonur, and individual space companies were left to fend for themselves.

Meanwhile, Krikalev's salary reportedly is only 500 rubles a month, compared with an average worker's wage of 960 rubles. The official Russian poverty line these days hovers at around 400-500 rubles a month.

By PAUL RAEBURN AP Science Editor

CHICAGO (AP) - A simple, inexpensive new test has led to the isolation of a powerful anti-cancer drug and a safe, natural pesticide from the paw paw tree, sometimes called the "Indiana banana," a researcher said.

The cancer drug, which has so far been tested only in animals, is 1 million times as potent as the widely used cancer drug Adriamycin, said Jerry L. McLaughlin of Purdue University.

The National Cancer Institute has expressed interest in the drug and has begun its own tests, McLaughlin said at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

The pesticide, a chemical cousin of the anti-cancer drug, could be used by greenhouses and truck farms and could be worth as much as $500 million a year, McLaughlin said.

The paw paw is a shrub-like tree with edible fruit shaped like bananas. It grows all over the eastern United States. The substances McLaughlin identified are found throughout the tree, but mostly in twigs and small

The key to the discovery of the two substances in the paw paw tree was a new screening test McLaughlin devised to rapidly identify potentially useful drugs and pesticides in plants.

The test is based on the fact that most drugs, given in high enough doses, will kill.

McLaughlin exposes tiny brine shrimp, raised in a laboratory aquarium, to plant extracts. If the shrimp die, the plants contain drugs. If the shrimp live, the plants don't, McLaughlin said.

In a second step, McLaughlin then takes potentially useful plant extracts and puts them on plant tumors growing in the laboratory. If the tumors die, the extracts are further tested for potential anti-cancer activity.

The tests are far cheaper and faster than testing drugs against human cancer cells or in mice, two other conventional ways of screening plants, McLaughlin said. It costs less than $10 to test a plant compound, he said.

Equipment to do the test costs $22, McLaughlin said, and $30 buys enough brine shrimp to last a year.

Jack Plimmer, a retired U.S. Department of Agriculture chemist who spent most of his career examining plants for drugs, said McLaughlin's method is highly effective and particularly useful for developing coun-

"It's one of the best I know about," Plimmer said. "The tests we had were cumbersome ... and it would take months to get results.'

McLaughlin said the anti-cancer drug from the paw paw acts on cancer cells in a new way, possibly opening the door to an entire new class of anti-cancer drugs.

"It pulls the plug on cell energy," he said. "Most cancer drugs don't work that way." Many conventional drugs interfere with cell growth by attacking the cancer cells' genetic material, he said.

Although the fruit is generally considered edible, McLaughlin said he decided to test the paw paw because of a childhood experience with its yellow fruit. "I ate four or five when I was a kid and threw up. I knew there was something biologically active in there."

The screening method helps researchers cope with a dizzying number of compounds in plants, he said.

Adolescent slump: Keeping the kids exercising through the teen years kids has exercise experts worried.

Youngsters who used to love community sports start Eventually, up to 90 percent of young players quit organized sports, Cooper said in his new book, Kid Fitness.

Just when pre-teens and teenagers can capitalize on their fast-growing bodies to get an enormous benefit from exercise, they stop, said the founder of the Cooper Instiphysical changes also may be a contributory reason for Physical Education, a teachers' group based in Reston, Va.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The problem of the quitter kids to drop out, Cooper said. "They are not picked to play because they are a couple of years behind."
