U.S. airlifts food, medical supplies to Soviets

U.S. Secretary of State James Baker III, right, speaks with Air Force Sgt. Jim Varlui, Colo., of the 22nd Airlift Squadron, on board of a C5 transport plane at Frankfurt's Rhein-Main Air Base Monday. The plane later took off for the former Soviet Union carrying tons of relief goods, to mark the official beginning of "Operation Provide Hope," an international relief effort.

MOSCOW (AP) — U.S. planes carrying tons of food and medical supplies arrived in the former Soviet Union today, beginning an aid effort that symbolizes the new relationship between former foes.

The aircraft brought the first shipments of a two-week U.S. program, "Operation Provide Hope," to help the struggling new nations make it through the rest of the winter. The flights are part of a broader international effort in which planes flew aid in today from Germany, France, Italy and Japan.

A green C-5 cargo plane with the Stars and Stripes on its tail arrived at Moscow's Sheremetyevo Airport. Forklifts began unloading crates of canned lasagna, apple pie filling and dehydrated beef, pork, fish, vegetables and other foodstuffs intended to provide 100,000 meals for the poor and elderly.

"It's a drop in the bucket (with what our needs are, but it's important," U.S. Ambassador Bob Strauss said.

It was among five military planes that left from Rhein-Main Air Base in Germany from the same runways that launched the 1948-49 Berlin airlift, which arose from a Soviet blockade of West Berlin and was among the most serious confrontations of the Cold War.

Seven smaller U.S. planes flew from Turkey to southern areas of the Commonwealth of Independent States.

"Our objective was not only to stem a rising tide of human misery, but to send a message of hope and support in hard times," Secretary of James A. Baker III said at an inaugural ceremony at Rhein-Main Air Base also attended by Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher of Germany.

Baker said the relief flights were carrying "a dramatic message of hope to the peoples of the new independent states. That message is simple: the Cold War is over, and it is time for all to join in building a new peace."

The aircraft that flew out of Rhein-Main Air Base were bound for five cities — including St. Petersburg in Russia and Ukraine's capital, Kiev — carrying about 250 tons of food and medical supplies.

Initially, 54 U.S. flights carrying 2,250 tons of food and medicine were planned — a tiny fraction of the need in the former Soviet republics. Richard Armitage, U.S. coordinator for the project, said today that 10 flights would be added to carry additional medical supplies.

The aid shows the increasingly important role the West is playing in affairs of the Commonwealth of Independent States, whose members are struggling to shift to free-market economies after seven decades of communism.

Western leaders worry that deteriorating conditions could breed unrest, and Russian President Boris N. Yeltsin has asked the West for immediate aid to prevent hungry and jobless citizens from revolting.

"In the long term, things can't go well in the West if things are going badly in the East," Genscher said.

Germany, the biggest aid donor, shipped about 440 tons of supplies to Moscow on planes of the German airline Lufthansa today.

The Western airlift is expected to be the single largest aid effort since the collapse of communism.

It recalls in some ways the three-year U.S. program begun in 1921 that sent about 700,000 tons of food and other supplies to the young Soviet Union to battle widespread famine.

Most of the U.S. shipments are food and antibiotics left over from the Persian Gulf War, although they also include some supplies from other nations.

The United States has so far pledged $5 billion to the former Soviet Union. The 12-nation European Community's aid package comes to about $80 billion, most of it pledged or provided by Germany.

Japan has pledged more than $3 billion in aid, despite a still unresolved dispute over four islands seized by the Soviets at the end of World War II. Japan sent 12 tons of food and medicine to the Far East city of Khabarovsk today.

The U.S. planes are to deliver aid to 11 of the 12 former Soviet republics. Only Georgia — which has not joined the commonwealth and has suffered serious political instability — is not included.

State Department teams have been sent to the commonwealth to ensure the cargo doesn't end up on the black market.

Moore brings experience, enthusiasm

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

Nanette O. Moore has brought 15 years of experience in chamber of commerce work and an enthusiasm along with it to her new position as manager of the Greater Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce.

Moore has been in Pampa less than a week, but already has glowing comments about the city and its people.

"I have been so impressed with the people. They are so nice," Moore said Friday afternoon. "It's so delightful to walk downtown and have people say 'hello.' I have been extremely impressed with how progressive Pampa is. I can feel and see the community spirit and support and the interest. I think that is so vital."

Moore also said she was thrilled with Pampa's downtown area. "I could not believe a small town still had such a viable downtown," she said.

She was interviewed in December by a Search Committee made up of the chamber's Executive Committee and other chamber directors. She said that at that interview, she felt comfortable and decided if the job was offered to her she would accept it.

Since her arrival in Pampa last Wednesday, she said she has seen the Pampa community welcome her with open arms.

"Everybody has been so helpful. I really feel at home. I think it's just a neat place. I like the size and the location. It's close enough to Amarillo to the airport and close to my son."

Her son, Patrick, and his wife reside in Lubbock with their three children. Moore said she also has family in Oklahoma and is closer to them now. One brother lives on a ranch in Oklahoma and her other brother is a coach in Garland.

Moore, born and raised in Holdenville, Okla., graduated from Hockaday School in Dallas and the University of Oklahoma with a bachelor's degree in education. She worked for the El Paso Chamber of Commerce in various roles for 15 years, resigning in 1990.

Of her start in chamber of commerce work, she said, "It just seemed like all the people that came, I was taking on tours and always touting the city (El Paso) and so finally I decided, well, maybe this is where I really need to be. I was excited about the community. That really is my strong point — getting involved in the community and trying to sell it to anybody and everybody and to make it a better place to live and raise children."

She was involved in numerous organizations outside the chamber while in El Paso. She started as a secretary at the chamber and went into membership after a year. She was in membership for eight years and then went into community development. She also served for 13 years as director of the Leadership El Paso program. In addition to her other responsibilities she was in charge of a men's group made up of about 50 men.

"All the women were jealous," she joked.

She was active with Beautify El Paso and is a former member of the advisory board of the Southwestern International Livestock Show and Rodeo Inc. She is a former member of the Executive Forum, a professional women's group.

She has completed a six-year course of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce's Institute for Organizational Management at Southern Methodist University at Dallas.

She was the Western Region membership chair for the National Association of Community Leadership Organizations and was a workshop leader at the 1987 national conference. She was a founding member of the annual Texas Leadership Conference and is a member of the Leadership El Paso Alumni Association.

In the almost two years that she has been out of chamber work, she said that the one thing she learned is that "chamber work is where I want to be."

"This is where all my experience is and where I really needed to be ... Once you've been involved with the chamber that is your vocation."

She said once she started her quest to get back into chamber work, she relocated to Dallas to be more centrally located. She said she learned of the Pampa job through the Texas Chamber of Commerce.

"My main interest was getting back to a small town," she said, and added that Pampa fit her goal. "I'm so excited. I think it's a wonderful opportunity and I feel like the people I've met and will be working with, not only will they be helping me, but I feel like I have a lot to offer."

She comes from a family who was in oil and agricultural and feels comfortable with this area.

In the upcoming weeks, she said she will be visiting with numerous people.

"I'm going to make a real concerted effort to personally go out and meet as many people as I can and I, in turn, hope they will be active in the chamber and be here so I'll have the opportunity to meet them. It's important to hear what is going on in the community when you are outside the building," she said.

"I've always been drawn to the chamber. It's so important to me to have people work in the community for the betterment for everyone."

Computer difficulties blamed for interruption in city's telephone system

Computer problems in a disc drive caused the telephone system in Pampa to go down for approximately 2 1/2 hours today, according to Gary Stevens of Southwestern Bell.

Stevens said Pampa and Amarillo technicians were working on the problem and originally estimated it would be noon before the problem was solved.

However, by 9:45 a.m. all phones in the city appeared to again be up and running, officials said.

During the telephone blackout, callers to the 9-1-1 emergency line in Pampa only got a busy signal.

Emergency Management Coordinator Ken Hall said he only knows of one call that could not be handled during the service outage.

"We had one person who came in to report an offense, but other than that we are not aware of any other calls that were missed," Hall said.

During the outage, emergency responders used local radio stations to ask citizens with an emergency to travel to their nearest fire station, City Hall, the Gray County Sheriff's Office or flag down any city or county vehicle to get help. They noted that all city vehicles are equipped with two-way radios that could be used to get emergency help.

No such needs were reported, however.

Officials with the city said 9-1-1 service was the first to be restored by Southwestern Bell and soon after most lines around Pampa were back on line.

Families mourn victims of Evansville, Ill., crash

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Nearly 3,000 mourners gathered at a service honoring five National Guardsmen who were among 16 people killed when a military transport plane slammed into a hotel and restaurant in Evansville, Ind.

"I prayed this day would never come, but unfortunately, it did. Now I can only pray it never happens again," said Master Sgt. Chuck Amsler, who cried as he passed around photos of the five at the service inside a hangar

City commissioners to meet in regular session on Tuesday

Pampa city commissioners will meet in regular session at 6 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 11, to consider seven action items.

These items include the proposed purchase of a bucket truck, placement of a yield sign at the intersection of Hamilton and 21st streets, fees and permit rates at Hidden Hills Golf Course, a rate increase request from AMT Ambulance, purchase of fertilizer, a matrix sign project and the calling of a May 2 city commission election.

Ward 2 and 4 commission seats are currently up for re-election. Those posts are now held by Jerry Wilson and Gary Sutherland, respectively. Neither man has announced if he will seek re-election.

Filing for the election begins 8 a.m. Monday, Feb. 17, and will run through Wednesday, March 18, at 5 p.m.

Prior to the regular meeting, commissioners will meet in a work session at 3:30 p.m. for a one-hour tour of the new Gray County Jail.

Commissioners will then return to the third floor City Hall conference room for discussion of the upcoming street improvements and discussion of a proposed weather radar system.

where they were based.

Honored on Sunday were Maj. Richard A. Strang, Capt. Warren J. Klingaman, 1st Lt. Vincent D. Yancar, Master Sgt. William G. Hawkins and Master Sgt. John M. Medley.

At a service in Evansville, about 600 mourners remembered John R. Stallings Jr., a vice president of a plumbing supply company, and an employee, Darrel Arnold, who were killed in Thursday's crash.

The Kentucky Air National Guard plane went down while practicing takeoffs and landings.

Of the 11 civilians killed, nine were in a fourth-floor meeting at the Drury Inn sponsored by the Stallings' company. The two others were employees of adjacent Jojo's restaurant.

An Air Force investigating board hopes a cockpit tape recording recovered Saturday will tell them why the Lockheed C-130 plunged from the sky.

At the Louisville service, Gov. Brecreton Jones called the National Guardsmen heroes.

"I want ... their families to know that the people of the commonwealth of Kentucky are very appreciative and grateful for what they have done," he said. "We will never forget them."

Prosecution expert: Dahmer not insane

By MICHELLE WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Jeffrey Dahmer suffered a mental disease when he killed and mutilated young males to fulfill his sexual desires, but he is not legally insane, a prosecution psychiatrist testified today.

Dr. Frederick Fosdal took the stand for questioning by defense attorney Gerald Boyle as the serial killer's insanity trial entered its third week.

Fosdal said Dahmer suffered a mental disease called paraphilia, which includes a wide range of sexual disorders. However, he said that despite Dahmer's mental illness, he knew right from wrong and could have controlled himself.

"This type of disorder in and by itself ... in my interpretation does not usually cause the degree of impairment" to make the individual unable to obey the law, Fosdal said.

Dahmer, a 31-year-old former chocolate factory worker, has pleaded guilty but insane to 15 slayings in Wisconsin.

To be found insane and sent to a mental institution instead of prison, he must convince the jury he suffered from a mental disease that made him unable to tell right from wrong or unable to prevent himself from doing wrong.

Fosdal testified earlier that Dahmer suffered from necrophilia "before, during and after" his slayings.

"It explains his behavior, but didn't cause him to break the law," Fosdal said Saturday. "He was able to refrain and had some control as to when he followed through on his sexual desires."

The defense says Dahmer suffers from necrophilia, a sexual attraction to corpses, and that it grew into a mental disease that drove him to kill.

All the defense experts agreed that Dahmer knew the slayings were wrong but said he was compelled to kill.

District Attorney E. Michael McCann has argued necrophilia is a personality disorder, not a mental disease under Wisconsin law, and that Dahmer simply gave in to impulses he could have controlled.

Alex Haley, author of 'Roots', dies at age 70

SEATTLE (AP) — Alex Haley, whose book "Roots: The Saga of an American Family" inspired people of all races to search for their ancestors, died early today at a hospital, an official said. He was 70.

Haley, whose other works included "The Autobiography of Malcolm X," died of a probable heart attack shortly after midnight at Swedish Hospital, said Don Marvin, investigator for the King County medical examiner.

The author was admitted to the hospital emergency room at about 11 p.m. Sunday, Marvin said.

Haley had been scheduled to speak at a banquet Tuesday at the Naval Submarine Base in Bangor, Wash.

He won the 1977 Pulitzer Prize for "Roots," a mix of painstakingly researched fact and imagined fictional detail tracing his ancestors back to the village in Gambia, West Africa, where they originated.

The 12-hour miniseries adapted from the book drew 130 million viewers, then the largest audience in television history.

Local candidates will be present Tuesday to visit with voters about their qualifications and ideas.

"We are hoping that people will come by and visit for a few minutes before going to the Pampa High School band spaghetti supper and the basketball games with Borger," Dougherty said.

Officials investigate cause of stable fire which killed 25 show horses

DE SOTO, Mo. (AP) — A fire at a stable killed 25 show horses, authorities said.

Ken Taylor, owner of the stable, suffered smoke inhalation in trying to save the horses Sunday and was in stable condition today, authorities said.

"We understood he tried to get them out and heat drove him back," fire Chief Don Null said.

Null said some of the horses were believed to be Tennessee walkers.

The cause of the fire was under investigation.

Former middle-class floods state welfare system

DALLAS (AP) — Linda Bryant never thought she would be in this position.

The 44-year-old Plano resident logged 22 years of steady work as an accounts receivable clerk, but she recently had to apply for food stamps.

"Believe me, I never thought I'd see the day when I would apply for help," Ms. Bryant said. "I don't like to be considered a welfare case by anyone. But if I have to, I have to."

Ms. Bryant is one of the many formerly middle-class Texans recently forced to apply for state welfare assistance.

The number of Dallas County Medicaid recipients increased more than 43 percent from 1990 to 1991. The number of parents receiving federal welfare assistance increased more than 20 percent. Twenty-eight percent more people are receiving food stamps.

In the suburbs, where population totals are smaller, the surge in welfare participation has been overwhelming.

In Denton County, food stamp rolls swelled 30.5 percent in 1991.

In Rockwall County, the number of families in the Aid to Families with Dependent Children program jumped 46 percent. In Collin County, Medicaid participation increased 50 percent.

"My caseload keeps going up and my budget keeps shrinking," said Linda Franco, an administrator in the North Texas regional office of the Texas Department of Human Services. "Every time we turn around, someone's getting laid off."

As of December, more than 2.4 million Texas families were getting food stamps, more than two million were on Medicaid and close to 700,000 were receiving cash from AFDC.

Caseworkers say they are interviewing applicants who have master's degrees and even doctorates.

"A lot of them are very defensive and they can be quite hostile at times," said Martha Black, who supervises a state welfare office in McKinney. "This is very uncomfortable for them. ... This is not something they want to go through."

Often, middle-class applicants go away angry when told they must lose some assets before receiving benefits. A car worth more than $6,500 is enough to disqualify an applicant, for example, and last week the parking lot at Dallas welfare offices contained Volvos and Jeep Cherokees.

As the welfare burden grows, one industry has seen ironic growth: The North Texas regional office of the Texas Department of Human Services created 975 jobs in 1991 and plans to open seven more offices in 1992 to deal with the crush of applicants.

Bivins receives Legislative Leadership Award

State Sen. Teel Bivins, right, accepts the Texas Chamber's Legislative Leadership Award from Vice President Art Roberts.

AUSTIN — State Sen. Teel Bivins, Amarillo's first-term lawmaker representing Senate District 31, has been presented with the Texas Chamber of Commerce's Legislative Leadership Award for 1991.

The award is presented for outstanding public service to a select group of key lawmakers who distinguished themselves during the regular and special sessions of the Texas Legislature during the past year.

Criteria used as the basis for selecting the recipients of the award include sponsorship of business-oriented legislation, leadership on key business issues and the member's overall voting record.

In announcing the award, Texas Chamber Chairman Don Carlton said, "Public policy decisions made by the Legislature have a dramatic impact on job creation and on the state's overall business climate. This year's award recipients understand this relationship and worked with the business community on such issues as controlling spending in the state budget, improving learning in our public schools and fixing a lawsuit system that is completely out of control."

In presenting Bivins with his award, Carlton said, "Senator Bivins has quietly emerged as a senator who can hold his own in any debate on any subject against any other Senate member."

"We're glad you're on the side of business, Teel. We especially appreciate your support and authorship of products liability reform legislation. We look forward to helping you win that battle in 1993."

The Texas Chamber of Commerce represents a network of more than 4,000 individual businesses and more than 350 local chambers of commerce with a combined membership of an additional 200,000 businesses.

Texas, Mexican governors open international conference

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards says as the United States and Mexico negotiate a free trade agreement, governments on both sides of the border must work to build crucial roads and bridges.

"It is our obligation to help create an environment in which business can and will succeed, and we must also ensure that the roads and the bridges required to move our goods are in place when they are needed," Richards said.

Mexican Gov. Socrates Rizzo Garcia of the state of Nuevo Leon and Gov. Americo Villarreal Guerra of the state of Tamaulipas joined Richards Sunday night for the opening of the conference that includes business, government and university leaders from both countries.

"For us to make the most of our opportunities, we've got to share our knowledge and we've got to share our talents and we've got to share our abilities," Richards said.

The governor said she and the Mexican state leaders had considered signing a "communiqué" agreeing to transportation improvements, but she said such an agreement should be left to federal officials.

Richards said in Texas, among the most critical road improvements in connection with international trade are on Mines Road near Laredo, which leads from the new Solidarity Bridge to Interstate 35, and U.S.

Highway 281 heading north from the Rio Grande Valley.

Richards also said a new international bridge is needed at El Paso and that she would like to see a toll road built from Laredo to Corpus Christi during her tenure as governor.

"That's a pretty full plate," she said, adding that other bridge construction proposals at McAllen and Harlingen also should be considered if federal dollars become available for those projects.

Pantex to hire 150 employees

AMARILLO (AP) — Recent military weapons cuts are speeding up business at the at the nation's disassembly plant for nuclear warheads.

Officials at the Pantex Plant say they're looking for 150 additional workers to help break down weapons.

Pantex is looking for production technicians, environmental safety and health engineers, electricians, sheet-metal workers and other craftsmen, said Clyde Alley, vice president for Mason & Hanger Silas-Mason Co., the primary contractor operating Pantex.

Some of the new employees will be workers laid off from U.S. Energy Department bomb plants, Alley said. One source of skilled labor would be the Rocky Flats Plant in Colorado, he said.

Energy Secretary James Watkins told Pantex employees last month that about 1,000 to 2,000 warheads will be dismantled at Pantex each year for the next five to seven years.

"I don't think we can talk about absolute numbers, but I think it's clear that the numbers of units we're going to dismantle are going up," Alley said. "We anticipate probably that they'll reach a plateau by next year and then probably level off at some number."

Amnesty International decries Garrett's scheduled execution

DALLAS (AP) — A national human rights group has asked the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles to rehear the case of a man condemned to die for raping and killing a nun in 1981.

In a news release issued Sunday, Amnesty International USA blasted the board's decision to proceed with Tuesday's scheduled execution of Johnny Garrett, 28.

Garrett's attorney, Warren Clark, contends Garrett was the victim of childhood sexual and physical abuse.

Petition seeks pardon for fugitive in Fritch

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Friends and family members of an escaped convict from Georgia who started anew in Texas about 10 years ago have been circulating petitions in an attempt to get the man a pardon.

James Robert Sanders, 43, had been serving a seven-year sentence on burglary and theft by taking when he escaped from the Jefferson County Correctional Institution in 1975.

About seven years later, Sanders arrived in Fritch, Texas, with a wife, Randy, and year-old daughter, Jamie.

He was arrested last week after an FBI agent in Amarillo, Texas, recognized him on a wanted poster.

"The man has been a model citizen," said Sue Middaugh, a neighbor in Fritch. "He's paid his taxes and he's not done anything wrong. He's real well-liked. He's just a family man."

The parole board considered such evidence during a clemency hearing Wednesday before recommending Garrett be executed.

"By anyone's standards, it is clear that the clemency process in the state of Texas needs serious review," said Jude Filler, Texas state anti-death penalty coordinator for Amnesty International. "The fact the board took such a short time to consider this complex case — the history of brutal child abuse and current mental incapacity of Johnny Garrett — indicates that Texas has a long way to go toward developing a genuine and fair clemency process."

Garrett was convicted of raping and murdering 76-year-old Sister Tadea Benz after breaking into a Roman Catholic convent in Amarillo in 1981.

He was an hour away from receiving a lethal injection last month when Gov. Ann Richards granted a 30-day reprieve, citing an appeal from Pope John Paul II.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Bush tax cut plan too little, too late

"I've known this economy is in a free fall." Much of the news media pounced on that statement by President Bush, made recently in New Hampshire, for being too pessimistic. The New York Times warned that Bush risked "adding needlessly to the economic fears of millions." Yet the media themselves have promoted every new piece of bad economic news, while generally failing to finger Bush's tax hikes as the major culprit in the recession.

So, is the economy in a "free fall"? We won't know until the recession hits bottom, which doesn't seem to have happened yet. And though pessimism can hurt the economy somewhat, the fundamentals also are bad. Just ask the 300,000 people who are losing their jobs every month.

The causes of our economic malaise are simple. Since Bush became president, he has boosted federal taxation from 18 percent of the economy to 20 percent, and increased federal spending from 23 percent to 25 percent. This economic shift of 2 percentage points amounts to $100 billion of our $5 trillion economy. The shift displaced 2 percent of our entire economy from the productive private sector. Ouch. That hurts.

By contrast, President Reagan did pretty much the opposite, cutting 2 percentage points off the levels of federal spending and taxing. The result: Reagan reversed the "malaise" inherited from President Carter and sparked an eight-year economic boom.

The way out of Bush's own malaise also is clear: Reverse the increases in spending and taxing. Unfortunately, if news reports are correct, Bush plans only a modest reduction in taxation and no reduction in the 25 percent of our economy government wastes. In his State of the Union address, Bush called for increasing the tax exemption for children by $500 and expanding tax credits for health care. Total tax cuts: $50 billion over 5 years. We'll take it. But in 1990 Bush signed into law a tax increase of $166 billion over 5 years. So his new tax cut proposal would solve only one-third of the problem.

And though Bush now is blaming the Democratic Congress for the 1990 tax increase, we should remember that his budget director, Richard Darman, made the deal with Congress during a secret meeting at Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland. Moreover, just by letting the Gramm-Rudman law (now defunct) take effect, by now Bush would have reduced the budget deficit to zero — without more taxes and without a recession. Since he had the votes in Congress to uphold Gramm-Rudman, all he had to do was take a Reaganque nap.

Bush's tax-cut proposal is too little, too late. He still can change his mind and triple the amount of his proposed tax cuts. Otherwise, at this time next year he might be relocating permanently to Kennebunkport, there to sift through the rubble of last year's hurricane and this year's election.

What to do with the nukes

The question is: What should we do with the nukes? My own answer, fashioned equally of unavoidable ignorance and strong conviction, is to scrap 99 percent of them.

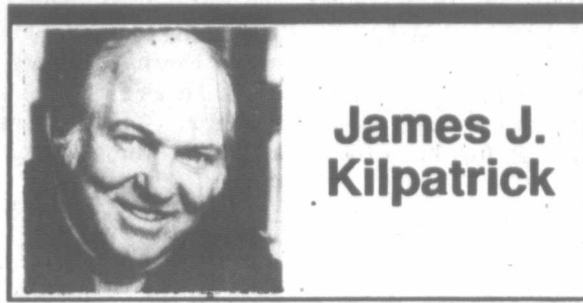

President Bush is prepared to go a long way in that direction. In the near future he proposes to eliminate the entire arsenal of 50 MX intercontinental missiles. A bit further along, he will eliminate 1,000 of the 1,500 nuclear warheads now positioned on Minuteman II missiles. He will cut back on B-2 bombers and reduce the number of missiles on strategic submarines.

What will that leave in our nuclear arsenal? An inquisitive reporter, asking specific questions about nuclear weapons, runs into a stone wall of secrecy. The figure that is widely reported is 11,500 weapons, counting everything from small tactical warheads to intercontinental ballistic missiles. The former Soviet Union is said to have about the same number.

The Washington Post reports that the reductions promised by the president will eliminate 1,500 land-based warheads and 1,400 sea-based warheads. These would be in addition to a cutback of 2,000 to 3,000 nuclear warheads pledged in the Strategic Arms Reduction Talks. This is surely a good start.

The president will have abundant support in his program. In an address at Harvard University on Jan. 23, Sen. Tom Harkin of Iowa proposed to reduce stockpiles to 1,000 strategic weapons apiece for the United States and the new Russian nation.

The U.S. Air Force in December created a bipartisan panel of defense experts to study a nuclear strategy for the future.

James J. Kilpatrick

Rep. Les Aspin of Wisconsin, the influential chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, will be publishing a report of "nuclear policy appropriate to the new era." He makes a sensible and urgent case for major reductions.

Other things are going on. Russian President Boris Yeltsin has pledged to "turn out intercontinental ballistic missiles away from all cities of the United States." Russian leaders, said Yeltsin, "no longer consider the United States our potential adversary." Surely we could take the reciprocal step of retargeting our missiles, too.

Where should these missiles be aimed? What enemies do we have that could be overcome only by nuclear warfare? How many nukes do we need? No responsible person in public life, to my knowledge, has proposed a complete dismantlement of our nuclear warheads. A sufficient arsenal must be maintained to preserve a credible deterrent against nuclear threats that may arise.

How much is enough? Suppose we put the matter in perspective. On Aug. 6, 1945, an Air Force bomber dropped "Little Boy" on Hiroshima. Relatively speaking, that first atomic bomb was indeed a little boy. It had a destructive force variously reported at only 13,000 to 18,000 tons of TNT.

Do we recall the awesome work by that little boy? In a fraction of a second the bomb killed 92,000 Japanese. It pulverized everything within a radius of one-half mile from the airburst. The fireball ignited fires a mile away. Within a few months, radiation fallout killed thousands more.

Three days after Hiroshima, on Aug. 9, the United States dropped "Fat Man" on Nagasaki. That bomb killed 40,000 more.

By 1952, nine years after the atomic attacks ended World War II, the United States had developed a hydrogen bomb with the destructive force of 12 MILLION tons of TNT. In 1961 the Soviet Union tested an ICBM with the impact of 58 MILLION tons.

Knowledgeable authorities have estimated that our nuclear arsenal, counting everything, now carries the destructive capacity of 4 BILLION tons of TNT. And Hiroshima, you will recall, was leveled by the Little Boy of 13,000 to 18,000 tons.

Let me ask reverently, soberly, what in God's name do the superpowers propose to do with this fearful stockpile? If any significant number of nuclear-armed missiles ever were exchanged, the destruction and loss of life would beggar comprehension. A few stunned stragglers might escape from subway shelters, but they would emerge into an unrecognizable world — a world without food, electricity, running water, transportation, medical care.

An opportunity is immediately at hand to halt this grotesque prospect of Armageddon. Let us seize the moment. I would retain a hundred warheads just in case. As for the rest? Scrap them.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today in History
Today is Monday, Feb. 10, the 41st day of 1992. There are 325 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
Fifty years ago, on Feb. 10, 1942, the former French liner Normandie capsized in New York Harbor a day after it caught fire while being refitted for the U.S. Navy.

On this date:
In 1840, Britain's Queen Victoria married Prince Albert of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha.

In 1846, members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, the Mormons, began an exodus to the west from Illinois.

In 1933, the first singing telegram was introduced by the Postal Telegram Company in New York.

In 1962, 30 years ago, the Soviet Union exchanged captured American U-2 pilot Francis Gary Powers for Rudolph Ivanovich Abel, a Soviet spy held by the United States.

In 1981, eight people were killed, 198 injured, when fire broke out at the Las Vegas Hilton hotel-casino. (A busboy was later found guilty of setting the fire.)

Another media circus on TV

Another media circus is on the TV schedule this week — as former heavyweight boxing champion Mike Tyson's trial in Indianapolis for rape continues.

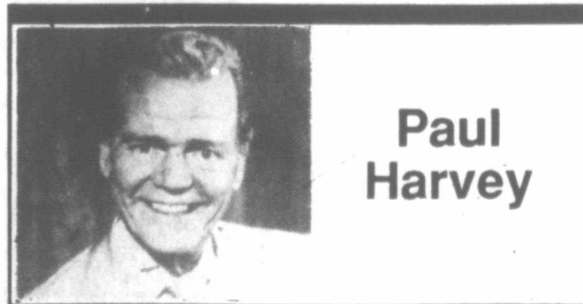

About 120 local, national and foreign media organizations have reporters there. There is room in the courtroom for only 25.

Indiana law permits no cameras in courtrooms, but the Indiana Supreme Court, in deference to media interest, has made an exception in this instance so that overflow reporters outside the courtroom can watch the proceedings on closed-circuit TV.

An 18-year-old Miss Black America contestant is charging Tyson with one count of rape, two counts of criminal deviate sexual assault and one count of confinement.

Those designations camouflage acts which, described in graphic detail, are likely to exceed in impropriety anything you heard during the Clarence Thomas hearings or the Willie Smith TV Show.

Meanwhile, TV talk shows, seeking to outdo one another in "sex appeal," are backing up our sewers.

Paul Harvey

The Wall Street Journal's editors are too pragmatic to be prudish, yet in December even those sophisticated observers reached to stomach-turning point and dared to suggest that it's time for a sexual counter-revolution: that it's time again to call "sin" by its right name.

Noteworthy to me were subsequent letters to the editors of the Journal that revealed considerable if not universal disgust with the way things have been going.

"When behavior we used to associate with decadent aristocrats, horny sailors, fraternity jocks, motorbike greasers and trappy women lacking in any self-esteem become the norm for society, something is fundamentally out of order."

Here's another: "Thanks for speaking out on sexual waywardness; our clergy certainly have not been doing their job."

What was called the "Sexual Revolution" of the 1960s may have been the most destructive event in America's history, leaving in its wake more casualties than all our wars.

One in four American women who gave birth to a child last year is not married. Seventeen percent of the babies having babies are white girls; double the percentage of 10 years ago.

And even the survivors of social disease are softening our nation's brains unto the next generation.

The sexual revolutionaries of the '60s convinced us that sex, to be made "wholesome," must be "out in the open."

Some talk show hosts still insist that "frank and open discussion" of all subjects is useful, that "the absolutes of yesteryear are out of date."

Any clergymen who have acquiesced must surely recognize by now that a lot of boys and girls whose lives have been wrecked might have been spared with the Old Reliable Roadmap.

Clinton controversy raises doubts

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

Gov. Clinton has probably handled the issue of his alleged extramarital affairs about as well as it can be handled. But he isn't out of the woods, and my guess is that he isn't going to get out of them.

As matters stood after the governor's brief interrogation on 60 Minutes, he had flatly denied having any extramarital affair whatever with Jennifer Flowers, and had refused to answer questions concerning other possible affairs, asserting that any such matters ought only to be discussed between spouses. He did acknowledge that his marriage had had its problems, but declined to be specific about them, asserting that anyone who had ever been married would know the sort of things he was talking about.

Gov. Clinton now seems determined to soldier on, without further comment, through the remaining weeks until the New Hampshire primary on Feb. 18. If he comes in first there, or even a close second, he probably intends to declare that the Democratic voters of New Hampshire have spoken for the American people on the matter, and that he will therefore "put it behind him" — i.e., refuse to discuss it further — for the rest of the campaign.

The above state of play, however, leaves Gov. Clinton deeply vulnerable to any evidence that may develop in support of Jennifer Flowers' allegations, as well as to the charges of any other women who speak up between now and November. The delegates to the Democratic Convention can hardly be criticized for bearing that in mind.

The presence of Mrs. Clinton at the governor's side during this whole ordeal is unquestionably a big plus for him, even if Hillary Clinton has simply decided that being First Lady, with a staff and office of her own in the White House East Wing, is worth overlooking her husband's delinquencies — such as Henri IV of France agreed to convert to Catholicism because "Paris is well worth a Mass." But Mrs. Clinton's forgiveness falls short of being conclusive because the issues raised by Clinton's alleged infidelities go far beyond his responsibility to his wife.

For one thing, if it transpires that he has been less than honest in what he has told the voters on this subject, that is a whole new dereliction — more serious (in the eyes of some) than adultery, and a betrayal of many more people than just his wife.

For another, does a man who has committed adultery (especially if he has committed it repeatedly) have flaws in his character that might impact unfavorably on his performance as the nation's chief executive?

Finally, there are unquestionably a good many voters in this country — probably a minority (one poll suggests only 14-percent) but certainly far from consequential — who take seriously God's commandment against adultery, and simply won't vote for anyone who they believe has committed it. Worse yet from Gov.

Clinton's standpoint, such people (among whom fundamentalist Protestants bulk large) are probably heavily concentrated in the southern states — i.e., precisely the states that the Republican Party can normally count on in presidential elections, and which Clinton was supposed to have a good chance of snatching from it.

In the circumstances, the dilemma of the media would be tragic if it weren't so funny. Here is a group of people whose own morals, to put it charitably, almost certainly couldn't survive comparison with those of politicians as a category (if only because politicians must be so careful), yet whom pure competitive journalistic necessity compels to probe and expose the sexual delinquencies of politicians. They hate themselves for doing it, and they positively despise the readers and viewers who insist that they do it, but they do it anyway — and they will keep on doing it.

Which is, of course, precisely Gov. Clinton's problem.

Design of child's room requires more than selection of color scheme

Planning a child's room sounds like an easy project. This is especially true of first-time parents who are dreaming about the perfect color scheme to compliment newly acquired baby furniture. Others realize a child's room will require as much forethought as the well-designed kitchen if the space is going to look good and yet be practical and functional for a number of years.

Today's children belong to a technologically sophisticated generation. Because no one has a crystal ball for the future, incorporating flexibility into a master plan will allow modifications to be made as individual tastes and interests grow.

These tips can help in designing rooms for children:

Space—consider what is essential. Standard furnishings include a bed, chest of drawers, bookcase and bulletin board. Next, consider how easily one can move through the space once the essentials are in place. Can the furniture and accesso-

Homemakers' News

ry items be arranged to maximize open floor area? Is there a private space to store possessions and a place to be alone? Children can satisfy their curiosity, broaden their interests and accomplishments, gain academic skills and form good study habits if they have an available space to call their own.

Floor—Children of all ages love being on the floor. It needs to be free from drafts, warm and adaptable enough for work and play. Select a floor covering based upon ease of maintenance, ability to muffle sounds, prevention of germ retention and reduction of slipping hazards. Vinyl or rubber mats similar to those found in offices make an excellent, safe and resilient floor surface for playing.

Storage—Where will clothes, toys and equipment of various kinds be stored? If children are to learn to be tidy, make it easy and fun to put items away. Chests of drawers work well for adults, but are not necessarily the answer for the younger set.

Children really love to see what they have and to be able to retrieve it instantly. A better solution for them might be storage bins, cubby holes, open shelves, hooks and baskets that are within their reach. Shelves that can be adjusted as the child grows are ideal. For creative storage options, scout office, kitchen, hospital and restaurant equipment supply stores. Feel free to mix and match to create witty, clever and colorful arrangements.

Furniture—Look critically at each piece of furniture under consideration in terms of its safety, function, versatility, durability and good design. Above all, children need sturdy merchandise that is easy to clean, smooth and splinter free and finished with a non-toxic paint or sealant. If possible, shop for furniture designed for school, industrial or contact settings. These items are designed to withstand a lot more use and great deal of abuse.

With the exception of cribs, car seats, high chairs and "first" table and chairs and special child-sized furniture, purchases should be kept to a minimum. Instead look for items that can easily make the transition as the child grows. For instance, an adult size twin bed and removable guardrails will accommodate a child right out of the crib through high school and will also provide an "extra bed" when company arrives. And by choosing a standard size, there will be plenty of bedding options.

Walls and Windows—Walls have the tremendous potential as areas of great visual interest. But before decorating, it may be wise to install a second layer of plasterboard over the existing wall for noise control. If this is not possible, panels covered with fabric can be placed on the wall to help absorb distracting noise.

Walls painted in neutral colors allow cut-outs, prints, paintings, toys, blackboards, tack boards and storage units themselves to become the focal point. Since younger children are incorrigible scribblers and chalkers, you might consider covering the lower portion of the wall in scrubable wallpaper that can be easily removed at a later date.

Window treatments are more an aesthetic judgement. They can be plain and functional or decorative and functional and should provide insulating properties which help prevent heat loss in winter and act as a heat reflector in the summer. Remember, any window treatment chosen needs to be out of reach of toddlers and crawlers.

There is no "best way" to design a child's room, but you can create a friendly, cozy and safe environment where children can enjoy sleeping, playing and learning.

Time can turn attraction to repulsion

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "On the Fence in Waukegan, Ill." — the professional woman who wonders if she should marry a man her age (29) who treats her like a queen, but she's not entirely comfortable with his level of education. (He works in a warehouse and has only a high school education, which is all he ever wanted.)

I will not attempt to predict success or failure in a marriage between these two, but I do see some potential for serious problems. If music, art and literature are important to her, the man with whom she plans to spend her life should share her appreciation for the arts. If not, it won't be long before being treated like a queen is not enough. A woman with several college degrees is not likely to find much mental stimulation in hearing about what went on at the warehouse. By the same token, any anecdotes about her day among her professional colleagues will probably elicit no more than a smile and a nod as he clicks the TV remote control

Dear Abby

DEAR ME-2: Read on for letters from others who also speak from experience:

DEAR ABBY: I have a few questions for "On the Fence" — the professional woman who is considering marriage to a blue-collar worker who loves sports, is attached to his buddies, and is not terribly ambitious.

Are you prepared to have your man feel out of place with your professional friends? (He will, you know.) And how comfortable will you be with his friends — especially their wives with whom you will be socializing?

Are you prepared to go alone to concerts and museums because he's not interested in "that kind of stuff"? Be careful, girl. Love is blind. I know. HANGING IN THERE

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Domestic demands could be a bit heavier than usual today. Unfortunately, even if you do everything you can, things won't work out without the cooperation of everyone. ARIES (March 21-April 19) You can weather out financial uncertainties today — if you manage your resources prudently. But if you start buying what you don't need, things could get out of control.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Use moderate methods and tactics today, because you might be inclined to be a shade too assertive. Harsh behavior could prove counterproductive.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Organize your time today, as well as delegate assignments you feel you'll be unable to handle. The more effective assistance you get, the better.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) In order to negotiate an effective agreement today, there must be parity with regard to everyone involved. If it's a good deal for you, but not for others, it won't stand the test of time.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) People you're involved with today might not perform up to your expectations. Therefore, do not delegate any assignments where they have the right to make financial commitments for you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be generous toward others today, but don't be overly extravagant or foolish. In order to make a good impression, you might give away more than you should.

Johnson is still "Magic" Baseball season is here

Ex-Lakers star named MVP of All-Star Game

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Magic Johnson raised his arms in triumph one more time and savored the moment, satisfied that his farewell All-Star performance was a huge success and answered any lingering questions about whether he can still play the game.

The NBA's career assists leader was the star of Sunday in what amounted to a giant going-away party for Johnson, who retired three months ago after testing positive for the virus that causes AIDS.

Julius Erving and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar both had farewell tours before leaving the league. Johnson, who hasn't ruled out the possibility of returning to the Los Angeles Lakers, didn't get one, but he's happy now that he at least got an opportunity to say goodbye on the court if he doesn't come back.

"If this is going to be it for me, I wanted to go this way," he said after bringing an Orlando Arena crowd of 14,272 to its feet with a stirring finish to a 25-point, nine-assist performance that helped the Western Conference to a 153-113 victory.

He hit a trio of 3-pointers in the final 2:42 and went one-on-one against long-time rivals Isiah Thomas and Michael Jordan for what could be the last time in a NBA game.

"I wanted to get Isiah one more time and wanted to get Michael one more time," said Johnson, who was voted the game's most valuable player.

"The only one I didn't get was Larry (Bird). But I'll see him on the blacktop."

Bird missed the game because of a back problem that's sidelined him the past month.

The afternoon began with the East All-Stars, led by Thomas, walking across the floor to exchange hugs and high-fives with a surprised Johnson. It ended with more of the same, and with commissioner David Stern presenting him with the MVP trophy.

Johnson, who runs four miles a day and had been playing pickup games for a month to get ready for his comeback, played 29 minutes — more than any player except Jordan (31) — and wasn't nearly as rusty as he thought he might be after such a long layoff.

He made 9 of 12 shots, was 4-for-4 from the foul line and finished with five rebounds, two steals and seven turnovers.

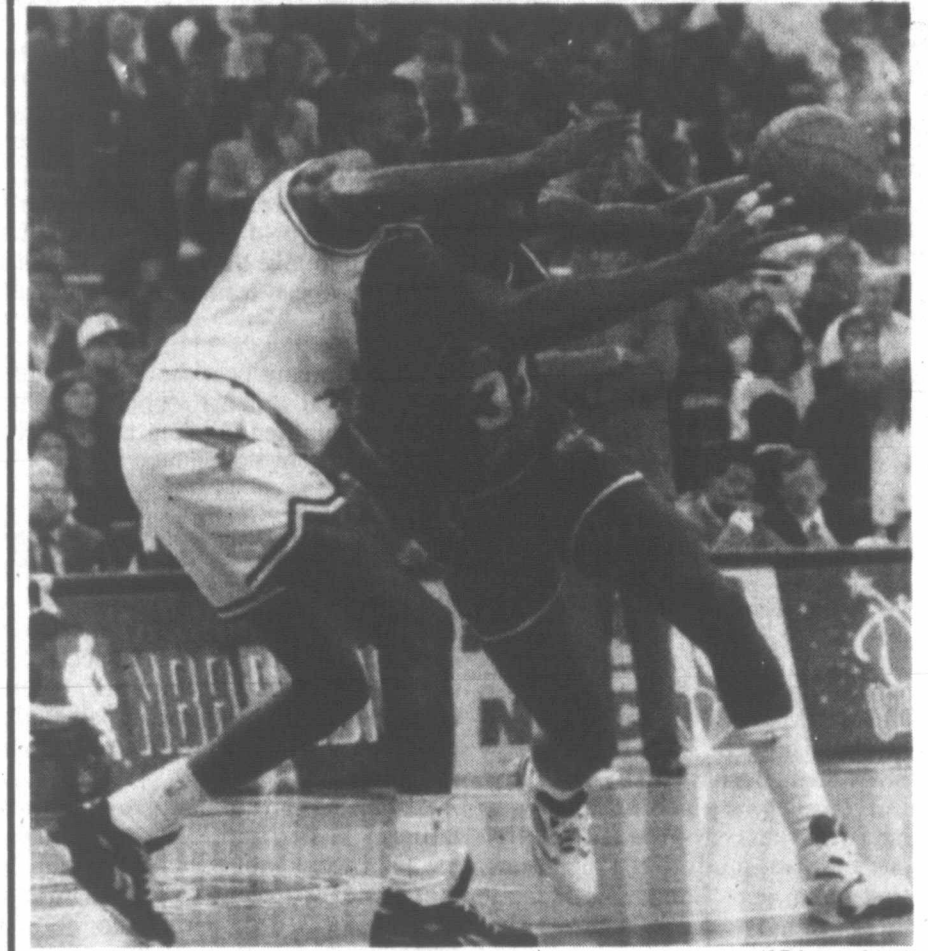

The performance overshadowed the contributions of Clyde Drexler, who had 22 points, nine rebounds and six assists in his first All-Star start. The Portland Trail Blazers guard appeared to be on his way to winning the MVP award when Johnson took over with three minutes left.

"The team kept telling me you've got it, you've got it," Drexler said. "I told them I didn't want it."

Proving he could still play was only part of the message Johnson hoped to convey. More importantly, he wanted to draw attention to AIDS and inspire others with the virus to continue to try to live normal lives.

"This game was to educate everybody, and I think we got that across, not just me but all the guys who played and coached," Johnson said.

"The message, first, is that people with the virus can live on, lead productive lives, run, jump, whatever. Second, don't worry because you can't get it from playing against someone, hugging 'em, kissing 'em, elbowing 'em, high-fiving, whatever.

Harvesters open against PD Dons

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Writer

Although it's officially still winter, baseball season has started at the high school level.

The Pampa Harvesters begin practice early last week and will open the season Feb. 25 against Palo Duro.

Pampa posted a 20-3 overall record last season in making the playoffs for the second straight year. The Harvesters were eliminated by Frenship in the bi-district round.

The Harvesters return four starters from last season's playoff team — senior third baseman Zach Thomas, senior shortstop-pitcher Tarin Peet, junior second baseman Brad Smillie and junior catcher Kurt West.

Thomas, a first-team, all-district pick a year ago, batted .333 and led the team in home runs with five. Peet batted .278 and logged a 6-1 mound record with a 1.93 earned run average.

Smillie carried a .315 batting average and scored 16 runs. West batted .385 last season and led the Harvesters in runs batted in with 40.

West, Smillie and Peet all earned second-team, all-district honors last year.

The Harvesters are looking to reload this season with some young, untested personnel.

"We must overcome early-season injuries and our young kids must mature quickly. We must avoid any more injuries," said PHS head coach Rod Porter.

Both Thomas and West are currently on the injured list with knee injuries, Porter said.

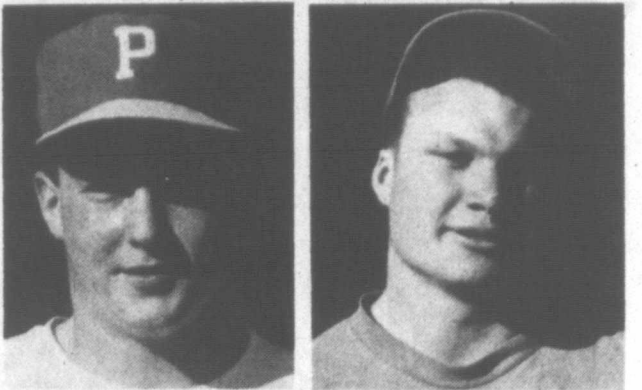

"Their status is unknown at this time," Porter said. "They're both going to miss the first few games and they could be out even longer."

Porter enters his fifth year as Harvester head coach and has an overall record of 69-23.

"We have a good nucleus to build with. I have great faith in the attitude of my kids about hard work," Porter said. "Most people look at us to have a rebuilding year as they have us fourth in district. But time will tell if the 'experts' are correct. I anticipate some good things to happen," Porter said.

Other senior players who Porter expects to contribute are Donnie Medley (outfield), Darren Jones (outfield), Erin Frye (outfield-pitcher), Brandon Walden (infielder-pitcher) and Brent Skaggs (first base-outfield).

Newcomers to watch are junior Chris Poole (first base-pitcher), sophomore Tony Cavalier (infielder),

Kurt West

Zach Thomas

Tarin Peet

freshman Matt Garvin (infielder-pitcher) and sophomore Greg Moore (outfield-pitcher).

Three pre-season scrimmages are scheduled with Tascosa (Feb. 11, 4 p.m. here), Plainview (Feb. 15, 12 noon there), Dalhart (Feb. 18, site, time to be announced), Andrews and Levelland (Feb. 22, at Levelland, time to be announced).

The Harvesters open defense of their district crown April 4 against Amarillo Caprock.

Stage set for closing arguments in Tyson rape trial

Miss Black America is called to testify for the prosecution

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Prosecutors played a tape of Mike Tyson's grand jury testimony to undermine the boxer's claim that he propositioned his 18-year-old accuser in unmistakably sexual terms.

The playing of the tape for the jury Sunday brought the prosecution's rebuttal case to a close and set the stage for closing arguments today.

In winding up the testimony portion of the trial, the prosecution also brought in Miss Black America and others to counter Tyson's claim that his accuser — a pageant contestant — lusted after his body and his money.

The boxer testified Friday that he told the woman, using a common vulgarity, that he wanted to have sex with her after they met at a July 18 pageant rehearsal. He said she replied, "Sure! Give me a call."

During cross-examination Saturday, prosecutor Greg Garrison asked the former world heavyweight champ why he told a different story in August to the grand jury that indicted him. Tyson said the graphic language made him uncomfortable and that a prosecutor who questioned him before the grand jury cut him off.

On the grand jury tape, Tyson is heard saying, "I told her, 'I want to be with you alone. I want you.'" "Did you say anything else?" a prosecutor asks on the tape.

"No, I had to leave," Tyson says.

Tyson, 25, is accused of raping the woman in his hotel room July 19. He could get up to 60 years in prison. The defense has argued she consented to sex, then turned on Tyson, hoping to win a conviction and get rich suing him.

On Sunday, Sharmell Sullivan, who won the pageant in which Tyson's accuser competed, told the jury she was standing near the woman but never heard her talk excitedly about Tyson's physique, as another contestant claimed.

Tanya St. Clair, testifying Saturday on Tyson's behalf, said that Tyson's accuser was "talking about his butt, saying, 'Ooooh, it's really something to hold onto,'" and speculating about the size of the fighter's genitals.

The defense called 24 witnesses over 4 1/2 days before resting its case Sunday. Tyson testified for 2 1/2 hours on Friday and Saturday.

Eleven pageant contestants testified for the defense. Many said that Tyson pawed and propositioned the beauty contestants — behavior that according to the defense shows Tyson made it clear he was out for sex.

PHS hosts Borger

The Pampa High cagers host Borger in District 1-4A action at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday night in McNeely Fieldhouse.

The Harvesters, — still the No. 1 ranked team in Class 4A — has a 25-2 record for the season and a perfect 7-0 mark in district after trouncing Randall, 111-59, last Friday night.

Borger is 13-14 for the season and 4-3 in district action.

The Lady Harvesters, 17-7 overall, 7-2 in district, close out the regular season. A win over Borger (21-1, 6-3) would give them a state playoff spot.

Longhorns guard against loss in SWC play

Texas, TCU tied for first

HOUSTON (AP) — The Texas Longhorns were on-guard for the Houston Cougars in Hofheinz Pavilion.

Texas' starting guards Terrence Rencher (21 points) and B.J. Tyler (11 points) led the Longhorns to an 87-72 victory Sunday that gave them a tie for the Southwest Conference lead with Texas Christian.

Houston, which had won seven straight home games, got very little from its starting guards. Derrick Daniels scored 9 points and David Diaz chipped in but a pair.

"I don't think there's anyone in the country with as quick guard play at Texas has," Houston coach Pat Foster said. "It's not that we had a bad effort, they just executed well."

In games Saturday night, Rice edged Baylor 72-65 at Waco; Texas Christian had an easy time with Texas A&M, 73-54, at College Station; and Southern Methodist nipped Texas Tech 51-47 at Dallas.

Sunday's victory gave Texas a 6-2 league mark, 14-9 overall. TCU is 17-5 and 6-2. Houston dropped to 16-5 and 5-3. Rice also is a game back at 5-3. The Owls are 15-7 overall.

In games this week, Rice faces Samford tonight at 7:30, and Texas A&M visits Southern Methodist Tuesday. On Wednesday night, Texas visits Texas Tech; TCU is at St. Louis; and Houston visits Baylor.

Texas center Albert Burditt agreed with Foster's assessment Sunday.

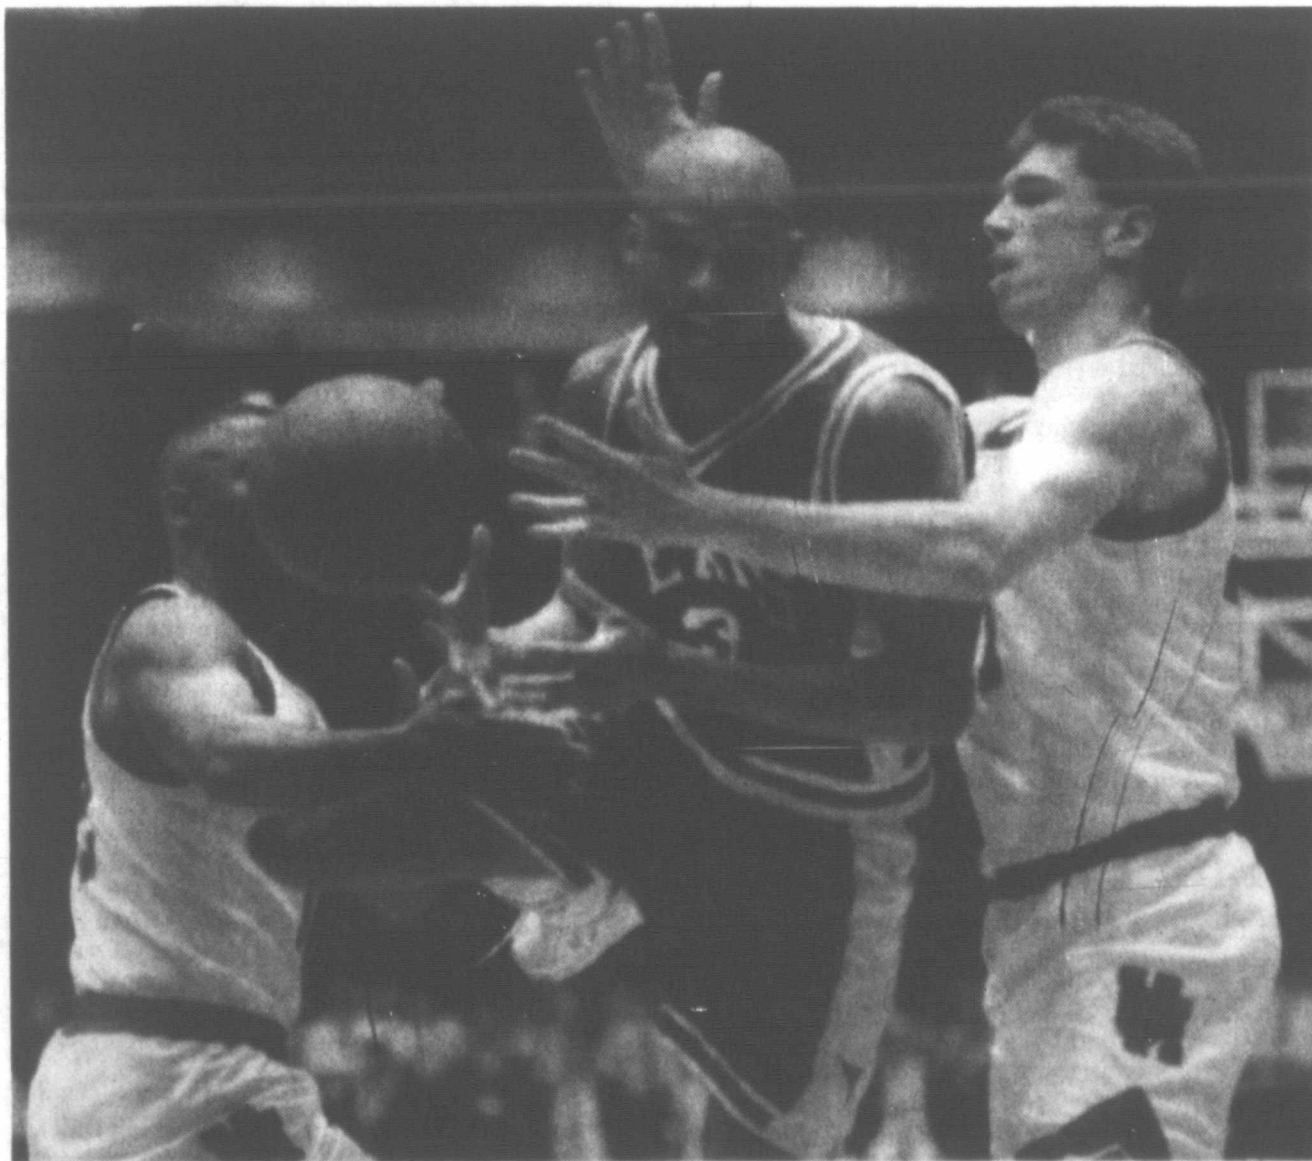

"Our guards were the difference," he said. "I don't think there is anyone in the country who can stay up with our guards."

The Horns used a variety of defenses to befuddle the Cougars.

"I thought we did a good job of attacking their matchup zone," Texas coach Tom Penders said. "When they went to a man-to-man, they couldn't match up well with us because we had four guards out there."

"We can't get too excited about this win, because the SWC race is wide open. Anybody can beat anybody," he said.

"Houston is a momentum type team, and whenever they made a run we answered with a steal or a basket. If you can beat a team like Houston, you can beat anybody."

Benford Williams of Texas (3) has the ball knocked loose as Tyrone Evans (left) and Roger Ferrandez of Houston apply defensive pressure. (AP Laserphoto)

American team wins hockey opener against scrappy Italy

By MIKE NADEL
AP Sports Writer

MERIBEL, France (AP) — It was supposed to be easy for the U.S. hockey team, just as it had been easy for every favorite except Canada in the first round of the Olympic tournament.

Before Sunday's 6-3 victory over the Italians, U.S. coach Dave Peterson said: "I'd be lying to you if I said I didn't think we should beat them." Afterwards, he said: "It looked like it was going to be easy when it was 2-0."

Know what? It wasn't easy. "All of a sudden ... they tied it up and then took the lead," Peterson said. "It got to be a real dogfight."

The scrappy Italians took a 3-2 lead after two periods and benefitted from a disallowed U.S. goal. But they couldn't hold on against a deeper, faster U.S. team that scored four third-period goals.

"Mentally, it's probably a pretty good confidence-builder," Peterson said.

Neither Sweden nor Finland needed confidence-builders Sunday, never trailing in one-sided victories.

World champion Sweden, which has won bronze medals in the last three Olympics but has never struck gold, defeated Poland 7-2. And Finland, which won silver in '88, its only Olympic hockey medal ever, beat Germany 5-1.

Saturday, the Unified Team (formerly the Soviet Union) and Czechoslovakia also won lopsided openers, meaning only Canada — a 3-2 victor over 11th-seeded France — and the United States struggled at all.

Today's schedule included the Unified Team vs. Norway, Czechoslovakia vs. France and Canada vs. Switzerland.

The U.S. team's next game, against Germany on Tuesday, is sandwiched between Finland vs. Poland and Sweden vs. Italy.

The United States has had little Olympic glory since 1980, managing only seventh-place finishes in 1984 and 1988. When the Americans fell behind 3-2 Sunday, you could almost hear the collective groan from U.S. fans.

"I wouldn't doubt it, I'll tell you that much," said defenseman Guy Gosselin, also a member of the 1988 squad. "But fortunately, we got it turned around and we got some steam going into the next game."

Eighth-seeded Italy, stocked with 16 North Americans, got standout goaltending from American-born David Delfino and goals from Canadian-born players Bruno Zarlillo, Bob Manno and Giuseppe Foglietta.

Winter Olympics

Midway through the second period, Marty MacInnis of the United States appeared to have scored. But referee Seppo Makela of Finland immediately waved off the goal and tapped his skate, indicating that he thought MacInnis intentionally kicked the puck into the net. Television replays indicated otherwise.

With the combination of the Italian goals and the U.S. non-goal, Italy coach Gene Ubriaco sensed that "we had them on the ropes."

But it wasn't that easy. In the third period, Tim Sweeney scored and assisted on goals by Clark Donatelli and C.J. Young, and Steve Heinze scored to snap a 3-3 tie.

Sweden flew into the 1988 Olympics as world champion, but was stunned in its second game — a 1-1 tie with lightly regarded Poland. The Poles had opened those Games with a 1-0 loss to Canada, meaning Polish goaltender Gabriel Samolej held two of the world's top teams to two goals in two games.

Samolej still is Poland's goalie and again he played superbly. But he was under constant fire by a Swedish club that had a 42-9 advantage in shots.

Featuring former NHL stars Loob, Mats Naslund and Borje Salming, Sweden was too much for 12th-seeded Poland.

Finland has been up and down ever since edging Sweden for the silver medal in 1988 by beating the Soviet Union in the tournament's final game. It was the Soviets' first Olympic loss since 1980 and highlighted what Finnish assistant coach Sakari Pietila called "the best year we've had."

The Finns were a disappointing fifth in last year's World Championships, but rebounded to take third — the best finish of any European team — in the Canada Cup.

West Germany beat the United States to make 1988's medal round. In its first game as a unified German team, it was outshot 33-16 by the Finns.

ALBERTVILLE, France (AP) — Only the team name has changed.

The grace and proficiency of the pairs skaters from the old Soviet Union showed why gold medals have been placed around the necks of Soviet pairs in every Olympic Games since 1964.

In their original programs Sunday night, the three pairs from the new Unified Team skated with polish and presence. Most importantly, they skated without the mistakes on side-by-side double jumps that plagued the rest of the field — and knocked the Americans out of medal contention.

Political turmoil and economic uncertainty were forgotten as Natalia Mishkutenok and Artur Dmitriev, the reigning world champions, spun in near-perfect unison, executed their powerful lift and exuded the emotion to match the music of "Don Quixote."

"It's their artistic ability, her flexibility, the communication between the two of them," said U.S. champion pairs skater Calla Urbanski of the Russian duo, who now lead the field. "They move so much as one. They really are superior in the sport."

They certainly were superior to Urbanski and partner Rocky Marval, whose flub of a side-by-side double axel eliminated them from medal contention. The other U.S. pair with an outside chance at a medal, Natasha Kuchiki and Todd Sand, had similar problems on the jump. Sand put his hand on the ice to steady his landing, costing them two-tenths of a point. They ranked sixth, while the team of Urbanski-Marval was seventh.

Another Unified Team pair, fellow Russians Elena Bechke and Denis Petrov, took over second place heading into Tuesday's freestyle program, which accounts for two-thirds of the total score. Behind them were Canadians Isabelle Brasseur and Lloyd Eisler. The third Unified Team pair, Evgenia Shishkova and Vadim Naumov, were fifth.

"We'll be ready for the long program and we'll skate better and hopefully move up," Urbanski said. "It's hard to come from nationals and 5.6s, 5.7s, 5.8s and drop to 4.9 and 5.0."

Both Urbanski and Marval have colds, and she said she was unable to get any medication that did not contain a banned substance until after opening ceremonies Saturday night.

"It was a rough day and a rough night last night," said Urbanski, at 31 the oldest American skater. "They ran out of medication. They can only carry so much."

The other two U.S. pairs got unlucky draws. Jenni Meno and Scott Wendland were the first to take the ice and skated a clean program marred only by slightly out-of-synch spins. They were followed by their training partners, Kuchiki and Sand.

"I don't know what the odds are against that," said John Nicks, who coaches both pairs.

Despite her fall, Brasseur and Eisler impressed the judges with a spectacular twist and sparkling footwork, lifting them above Czechoslovakian pair Radka Kovarikova and Rene Novotny, who were fourth.

"I can never condemn Isabelle for falling," Eisler said. "It could've been me and I would not want her to condemn me. Instead, I want to know, 'Was it something I did? How can I make Isabelle feel better and help us get our best result in two days?'"

The Canadians, who finished second at worlds the last two years, feel confident they can move up in the standings. One thing that sets them apart is their powerful style, which contrasts with the classical presentation of the Russians and Czechs.

"Our twist is the best in the world and some of our spins are very unique and as good as anyone has," Eisler said. "The rest of the program is very good and we have a lot of strong points."

But they are going up against a Russian foursome with discipline, skill and a reputation for excellence.

Tamara Moskvina, the heavyweight coach of Mishkutenok-Dmitriev, knows her skaters will perform as they and earlier generations of Soviets have been taught.

"I'm expecting more good skating," Moskvina said of Tuesday's free skate, "and a standing ovation."

Cook captures Hawaiian Open championship

By BEN DIPIETRO
Associated Press Writer

HONOLULU (AP) — John Cook is sitting on top of the golf world, and no one is more surprised by his standing than Cook himself.

Cook started the year with a win at the Bob Hope Classic, then followed that Sunday with a two-shot victory over Paul Azinger at the Hawaiian Open.

"If somebody would have said that I would start out by winning two of the first three tournaments, I would have said they needed to be tested," Cook said. "I'm very surprised by my success, but I've worked hard and dedicated myself to getting to this level."

The win is especially gratifying to Cook, who blew a six-shot lead in last year's final round to lose by four strokes to Lanny Wadkins. Cook said that loss matured him, and he used that experience to outplay Azinger on the back nine of the par-72, 6,975-yard Waialae Country Club course.

Cook and Azinger started the day tied at 16-under 200, and remained tied at 19-under heading onto the back nine. Azinger pulled ahead with an eagle on the par-5 13th, where Cook could muster only a birdie.

Cook tied Azinger at 21-under with a birdie on 14, and took the lead with a birdie on No. 15 after hitting his second shot to two feet right of the pin. Azinger was wide left on his 8-foot birdie attempt.

Cook sealed the victory with a birdie on No. 18, while Azinger settled for par.

Cook shot 7-under 65 for the day and finished at 23-under 265, tying the course record set by Hale Irwin in 1981. Jeff Maggert shot a 68 to finish third at 17-under, one shot ahead of Wayne Levi.

"I gave myself a lot of chances to win — I hit every green and reached all the par-5s in two. I didn't make any mistakes, and hit the ball right in the spots I wanted," Cook said.

The win was worth $216,000 and boosted Cook's 1992 earnings to $433,663. Azinger was two strokes behind and won $129,600.

Cook said his two wins are equally satisfying for different reasons.

"The Hope came at such a great time, with family and friends around and being at home, it was a great experience," said Cook, of Rancho Mirage, Calif. "The Hawaiian Open is a different kind of great experience, because I made up for the mistakes I made last year. You just dream about playing a round like that with a chance to win a tournament."

NFL combine wraps up today

By HANK LOWENKRON
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The last of 450 NFL hopefuls invited to be poked, prodded and tested complete the annual scouting combine today. The results will now be reviewed by the jury of 28 NFL teams in preparation for the April 26-27 draft.

Club representatives are cautious in discussing the prospects, fearful that their ideas will give some edge to their rivals.

"There's a lot of fine quality in this draft and there's plenty of depth," Dick Mansperger, director of college scouting for the Dallas Cowboys, said Sunday. "The underclassmen who came out have created a domino effect at nearly every position."

Mansperger and others agree that the best underclassmen will be swept up in the opening round.

"I'm not sure you'll see what happened two years ago when so many juniors were selected among the first 10. Because of positions and what various teams need, you'll probably see the underclassmen spread out in the first round," he said.

There's a consensus of opinion that defensive back is one of the deepest positions, with the names of Florida State's Terrell Buckley, Wisconsin's Tony Vincent and Ashley Ambrose of Mississippi Valley State mentioned prominently.

"There's a lot of good defensive backs available," Mansperger said. "Those are three fine players, but they're not the only ones."

"If you were going to pick a specific position where the greatest depth exists, it would be the secondary," said John Butler, director of player personnel for Buffalo, the AFC champion the past two years. "Vincent is almost the total package of what you want, plus his great return ability is just another plus."

"Ambrose is another player people are watching. He's a very interesting player."

Dale Carter of Tennessee and Dana Hall of Washington also give the position depth, Butler said.

"Buckley is certainly a likely early pick," Butler added. "There are good numbers and good players to fill spots clubs are seeking to improve in their secondary. ... Kevin Smith of Texas A&M, Rodney Smith of Notre Dame, Phillip Sparks of Arizona State, Tyrone Legette of Nebraska, Dion Lambert of UCLA. The number of NFL players at that position is definitely there."

Ambrose, a New Orleans high school product who passed up offers to attend a major college, has climbed up the list of top defensive backs rapidly. His biggest problem developing earlier was his mother.

"She would say I'm too small and she didn't want me to get hurt. But, you can't give it up if you love the game," said Ambrose, who got permission to start playing his junior year in high school.

"She'd let me play in the street before, but she didn't want me to have anything to do with organized football," he said.

Houston, Tulane and Penn were among the schools that recruited him while he was compiling a 3.8 average on a 4-point scale at Fortier High School. But, he decided Mississippi Valley State was the best place for him to get an education.

"I decided I wanted to go close to home, but wanted to get out of Louisiana. I wanted to get away from a big city, go somewhere that there wasn't anything to distract me from football and school," said Ambrose.

He got exactly that in Itta Bena, Miss., a community of 2,500 about 100 miles from Jackson.

"It's like being in jail. There's not much to do. Once in a while there's a dance. It's a good place to get your work in," he said. "I like to party, but if you want to do that, you usually go to Jackson."

Now, he says he's ready to return to big-city life in the NFL and looks forward to trying to defend against former Mississippi Valley star Jerry Rice of the San Francisco 49ers.

"I met him about two years ago and I told him then, 'I'm going to get a chance to cover you,'" Ambrose said. "I always thought I could play at a major school and that I was as good as anyone at my position."

Hamlin rallies for LPGA Inverrary victory

LAUDERHILL, Fla. (AP) — When LPGA Hall of Famer Pat Bradley hugged Shelley Hamlin on the 18th hole, it was more than just a tournament title she was thinking about.

Hamlin had just sank a 3-foot par to punctuate a four-stroke comeback and win her first tournament since 1978 when she won the Patty Berg Classic. Hamlin shot a 6-under-par 66 Sunday for a 10-under total of 206 in capturing the Phar-Mor at Inverrary.

"This victory means I was right to think I could win," said an ecstatic Hamlin.

But it wasn't the toughest comeback for the 42-year-old Phoenix resident. Last July, Hamlin was diagnosed with breast cancer and underwent a mastectomy.

"I wanted to win, but I was pulling for Shelley," said Bradley, who finished in fifth place, two strokes behind Hamlin. "I witnessed a great moment in the game."

When Bradley battled back from Graves Disease in 1988 and won her first tournament in two years in 1989, it was Hamlin greeting her in the press tent. This time it was Bradley returning the sentiment.

"For anyone to go through the ordeal she went through last year shows a tremendous amount of courage," said Bradley.

Hamlin made eight birdie putts, including the decisive 10-footer on No. 16 that broke a three-way deadlock with eventual second-place finishers JoAnne Carner and Brandie Burton.

Carner finished with a 71 and Burton a 69. Dana Loftland, also tied for second at 207 after a 71, shared the lead with Carner entering the final round.

Sixth-ranked Indiana beats Iowa to tie Ohio State for Big Ten lead

By The Associated Press

Bob Knight rarely lets his Indiana Hoosiers make the same mistake twice.

They didn't Sunday, beating Iowa 81-66 by holding a big lead instead of squandering one as they did a year ago against the Hawkeyes.

Damon Bailey scored 26 points and Calbert Cheaney added 17 and 13 rebounds and the sixth-ranked Hoosiers (17-3) moved into a tie for first in the Big Ten with Ohio State at 8-1.

Cheaney had 11 of his points in the second half, when Iowa cut a 17-point lead to five. Last year, the Hawkeyes overcame a 16-point deficit and won 80-79 in Bloomington.

In other games Sunday involving ranked teams, No. 7 Arizona beat California 80-68; No. 12 Missouri beat No. 21 Oklahoma 99-92; No. 15 Michigan beat Notre Dame 74-65; No. 17 UNLV topped Long Beach State, 96-77; and No. 24 Georgia Tech edged Maryland 67-65.

On Saturday, top-ranked Duke and No.

2 Oklahoma State rebounded from first losses, with Duke beating No. 22 LSU 77-67 and Oklahoma State running its home winning streak to 28 with 64-56 victory over No. 3 Kansas.

In other Top 25 games Saturday, it was No. 4 UCLA 82, Washington St. 61; Memphis State 92, No. 5 Arkansas 88; No. 8 Ohio State 71, Purdue 59; No. 9 North Carolina 80, Wake Forest 78; Seton Hall 81, No. 10 Connecticut 69; No. 11 Michigan State 79, Wisconsin 64; No. 14 Tulane 97, Virginia Commonwealth 80;

No. 16 Southern Cal 59, Washington 56; No. 18 Alabama 85, Tennessee 68; No. 19 Kentucky 85, Auburn 67; No. 20 North Carolina Charlotte 95, Davidson 85; No. 23 Florida State 102, Clemson 90 and No. 25 Texas-El Paso 73, Air Force 44.

No. 7 Arizona 80, California 68 Chris Mills and Sean Rooks each scored 23 points as No. 7 Arizona overcame a slow start to overpower California 80-68 in a Pacific-10 Conference game. The win was the seventh straight for the Wildcats.

Iraq condemns United Nations, tells Bush to focus on selling cars

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iraq stepped up its campaign against U.N. trade sanctions and took an angry swipe at President Bush, telling him to concentrate on "his new job as a car salesman" instead of interfering in Iraqi affairs.

The official Iraqi News Agency also accused U.N. weapons inspectors of trying to provoke a confrontation in a "deliberate attempt to harm Iraq."

The series of statements late Saturday and Sunday reflected mounting hostility in President Saddam Hussein's government over the trade sanctions and Western calls for his ouster.

The trade embargo, imposed after Iraq's invasion of Kuwait in August 1990, has been causing increasing hardship for Iraq's 17 million people. Saddam has recently been telling Iraqis the United States is trying to starve them.

INA quoted an unidentified spokesman for Iraq's Cultural and Information Ministry as advising "Bush to benefit from the experience and experiments of car salesmen in the United States in his attempt to tackle the ailing American economy, instead of falling under the illusion — he as well as his agents in the region — that they can interfere in Iraq's internal affairs."

The comment was an apparent allusion to Bush's recent visit to Japan to pressure the Japanese to buy more U.S. cars and auto parts.

The statement came a day after a U.S. government source in Washington, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Bush had authorized a covert program aimed at helping Iraqis throw out Saddam. CIA Director Robert Gates is visiting Middle East nations amid reports he came to discuss plans to topple Saddam.

The United States and Britain, two of the five permanent U.N. Security Council members, have said they want the trade sanctions to remain until Saddam is forced from power.

In another INA report, Iraq's foreign minister, Ahmed Hussein, condemned the Security Council's decision last week to maintain the sanctions on the grounds Iraq is not complying with provisions of the Gulf War cease-fire accord calling for the removal of its weapons of mass destruction.

Hussein denied Iraq has secret caches of weapons or is obstructing U.N. inspectors seeking to destroy Saddam's nuclear and chemical weapons programs.

Despite Iraq's denials it was working on atomic weapons, U.N.

officials say the inspection teams have uncovered evidence of an extensive program that had the Iraqis closer to developing warheads than had been thought in the West.

INA said late Saturday that U.N. nuclear inspectors tried to provoke a confrontation Friday by entering the Baghdad headquarters of the multinational Arab Scientific Research Council without permission.

The agency claimed the team hoped to goad Iraqi officials into a confrontation like that of September, when Iraqi troops surrounded a U.N. team for five days in a failed attempt to get back seized nuclear documents.

However, David Livingston, the Bahrain-based representative of the U.N. commission overseeing the destruction of Iraq's weapons, called it a minor incident. He said Iraqi officials only briefly prevented the inspectors from entering the offices. He said the team was not seeking nuclear documents and "only wanted to view the facility."

INA contended the offices of the 15-nation council were protected from inspections because of diplomatic immunity.

Livingston said that was debatable because nations must abide by the U.N. Charter, which gives inspectors authority to inspect Iraqi facilities.
