Edwin Wong needles people to good health

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS
Lifestyles Editor

A slim, bespectacled man practices an ancient medical art in a sparsely furnished office. Kindness and courtesy mark his demeanor and his eyes twinkle with pleasure when he speaks about his work.

Although he is new to Pampa and relatively new to this country, Edwin Wong's field of expertise is over 2,000 years old. Wong practices acupuncture, one of many forms of medical treatment Americans describe as "alternative medicine."

Wong grew up in a Christian family and, as a child studied Russian because he lived in a communist country.

Few of his counterparts, said Wong in a Friday interview, had the opportunity to study English. He lived through the upheaval and torment of the Cultural Revolution which deeply affected his family.

Eight years ago, he and his wife, Shaugna, and daughter Ellen came to Amarillo. He said they joined brothers and sisters who have made a good life in the United States. Ellen, 19, attends Amarillo College. She wants to be an optometrist.

English comes hard for Wong, as it does for many immigrants. He taught English to himself at home in China, and still spends free time studying the language.

"English is hard to Chinese people," he said.

Wong, a native of the People's Republic of China, was trained in Western and Eastern medical methods at Nanking Medical College. His two years of acupuncture training was in addition to five years of training in Western methods. He said he studied acupuncture because it is traditional Chinese medicine. There, he said, every medical doctor needs to know it.

Wong said acupuncture probably started quite accidentally when someone was stabbed by a sharp instrument like a knife or arrow, and discovered some other ache disappeared after the wound healed. In China, he said, physicians practice a combination of Western and Eastern medicine.

"With modern medicine we are helping many people, but for some people it is not enough. By combining Western and Eastern medicine for some trouble, we get better results," Wong said.

According to the World Health Organization, acupuncture is used to treat 47 different diseases, particularly chronic pain and illnesses related to muscles, joints and nerves. In China, Wong said, acupuncture is used more extensively.

Smoking is particularly responsive to acupuncture.

"Smoking is a habit," said Wong. "They want to quit, but can't. I adjust the nervous system so they don't want to smoke. I put the needle in certain acupoints and it changes cigarette taste. It tastes bad."

Treatment for overweight conditions is not consistently successful, he explained. Treatment for smoking cessation yields more successful results.

Chinese medical theory defines good health as the proper flowing of "chi."

The chi, or life force is not visible, nor is it electrical or chemical, according to Wong. In theory, disease or pain is the result of blockage of chi at one or more acupoints. By inserting needles into various acupoints on the body, the acupuncturist dissipates or replenishes the undersupply of chi to restore its normal flow.

Wong said paths or meridians correspond to major organs of the body. Health can be restored to that organ through acupuncture at correct acupoints.

While it is not clearly understood why acupuncture can be effective, Wong said it may have something to do with increased levels of endorphins, or natural painkillers produced in the body.

Needles used in the treatment are thin and disposable, in order to minimize pain and create no opportunity for infection.

Wong sees his native country as just a tiny bit more open to the rest of the world than in the past, but he calls Texas home and says he's here to stay.

House sergeant at arms shot

WASHINGTON (AP) - The sergeant at arms for the House of Representatives, who was shot in the face during a robbery, was listed in stable condition early today after undergoing surgery.

Sergeant at Arms Jack Russ was approached by one or two men, robbed and shot just after 10 p.m. Sunday in a park near the Capitol where he was walking his dog, said U.S. Capitol police officer Dan Nichols.

Russ walked four blocks to find a Capitol police officer and was taken to D.C. General Hospital, where he underwent surgery, officials said.

William Primus, a hospital spokesman, said Russ was in stable condition. He said his injuries were not life-threatening.

The two-block-long park was cordoned off by authorities as Capitol and District of Columbia police searched the crime scene for clues. The robbery occurred in an area that is routinely patrolled by officers.

Russ has been sergeant at arms for the House for nine years.

Canadian bank to celebrate centennial birthday Saturday

CANADIAN - First National Bank of Canada plans to observe its 100th anniversary Saturday.

To celebrate the centennial birthday of the bank, officials plan an open house from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., March 12 and 13. A free hamburger feed is set for 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. on March 13.

Early records show that First National Bank of Canada's history began on March 7, 1892 with the establishment of the Canadian Valley Bank in a frame building on what is now Third and Main streets.

Officers of that first banking concern were Robert Moody, president; D.J. Young, cashier; and T.E. Moody, assistant cashier. Opening capital for the bank was $20,000. One of the trustees was a Mr. Finch of the townsite development company, Lord, Finch and Nelson. By March 1903, the bank's capital had been raised to $50,000 with a surplus and undivided profit of $30,000.

The Canadian Valley Bank received its charter on June 9, 1903, as a national bank and has continued as the First National Bank of Canadian throughout the years at the same location at Second and Main Street.

Founder and president of First National Bank was Robert Moody, vice president was Thomas Moody and cashier was D.J. Young. Prominent among early directors of the bank was H.E. Hoover, who later served as the bank's president.

The Canadian State Bank (also known as the Isaacs-Brainard Bank) was opened in November 1906. This bank was later purchased and absorbed by First National Bank in 1937.

Meanwhile, Southwest National Bank, established by J.E. Johnson in 1921, was also quite successful. On April 19, 1939, the two banks merged, retaining the name of First National Bank.

Since the consolidation of interests in 1939, First National Bank has grown to $56 million in resources, according to the last statement of condition.

H.S. Wilbur Sr., first president of First National Bank, assumed the post when the bank merged with Southwest National. He held the position until his retirement in 1967, having spent 56 years in the banking business. His son-in-law, Russell Carver, served as vice president from 1946 until 1952 when he bought Hereford State Bank and moved to Hereford. Wilbur's eldest son, Harry S. Wilbur Jr., succeeded him as bank president, a post he held until his death in 1971.

Earl Lee Wilbur, the younger son, served as president from April until October 15, 1971 during a time of reorganization. Don Schaefer was named president at that time, serving in that capacity until Jan. 1, 1985. A second reorganization occurred at that time and Earl Wilbur was again named as the bank's president.

Earl Wilbur remained as president until his retirement in March 1990. George Briant, his son-in-law, currently serves as the bank's president. He is married to D'Ruth Wilbur Briant, granddaughter of H.S. Wilbur Sr. and daughter of Earl Wilbur.

The Briant's oldest daughter, Tracy, continued in the family business by working part time in the bank's accounts department last summer. She is the fourth generation to be involved in the institution.

First National Bank expanded into that area in 1975, adding several offices, a board room and coffee shop. Shortly afterward, the bank acquired property literally "up the street" from the bank, and rented the property to a grocery store and later to a shoe store.

In early 1983, the second wall was opened and the third level of the bank begun. A complete remodeling of the bank followed, with many changes made in the bank building, including installation of a new vault door. The newest addition to the bank included the office of the president, credit office, a new board room, and a larger coffee shop. These changes were completed in 1983.

The year 1990 brought another benchmark in the bank's history when First Canadian Bancorp Inc., owner of First National Bank, purchased First National Bank in Higgins, and merged it into First National Bank of Canadian. The Higgins bank continues to operate and serve the Higgins community as a branch office.

Tsongas endures attacks in debate

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) - Bill Clinton today cast Paul Tsongas' pro-business views as a failed "1980s-style approach" while Tsongas defended his ideas as a sound path to economic growth.

Tsongas, the former Massachusetts senator, endured the most hits in a weekend debate triple-header, his rivals painting him as a thinly veiled Republican supporter of business at the expense of the middle class.

Clinton, campaigning today in New Carrollton, Md., continued to train his fire on Tsongas, saying the nation "tried his approach in the '80s and it failed us."

"His is the 1980s-style approach vs. a new approach for the 1990s," Clinton said.

Tsongas, in weekend campaign debates, rejoined that his ideas were best for the economy and would attract Republicans to vote Democratic in the fall.

"There are lots of Republicans out there who will come to us if we give them a home," he said.

When Tsongas got a break, the debate focus shifted to Clinton, reflecting their leads in a jumbled Democratic contest that should begin to gel after Tuesday.

The debates were a gateway to primaries in Georgia, Colorado, Maryland and Utah, and in caucuses in Washington, Minnesota, Idaho and American Samoa. Those contests, in turn, prelude the 11 contests on Super Tuesday and a smattering of contests in between.

Tsongas appears poised to emerge from this Tuesday's contests with the most wins, and Clinton is the favorite on Southern-dominated Super Tuesday. If the campaign unfolds that way, the mid-March primaries in the industrial Midwest would be pivotal.

In the third leg of the debate series Sunday, the Democrats dropped their intraparty warfare on several occasions to aim at President Bush, concurring that on social, environmental and economic policy, any of them was preferable to the president.

After spending much of the weekend together - debating Saturday night in Colorado, noon Sunday in Atlanta and Sunday night in Maryland - three of Tuesday's biggest battlegrounds, the candidates were going their separate ways today for a final flurry of campaigning.

Tsongas was spending the entire day in Maryland, where he's counting on a victory to prove his New Hampshire win no regional fluke. He leads Clinton in late polls, as he does in Colorado.

Clinton had morning events in Maryland before heading to Georgia, where he leads. Iowa Sen. Tom Harkin planned events in South Carolina with Jesse Jackson, and California Gov. Jerry Brown headed from Maryland to Georgia, then Colorado, Nebraska Sen. Bob Kerrey stumped in California, Washington and Idaho.

The two front-runners dominated most debate clashes, including an acerbic exchange in Colorado Friday night over Tsongas' support of nuclear power. They were at it again on Sunday, but the flurries were far less personal.

Buchanan's ads stir controversy

WASHINGTON (AP) - Bush strategists said today that Patrick Buchanan's pornography ads are mistaking in Bible Belt Georgia, but the challenger hopes a strong showing there could cause the president's re-election campaign to collapse like a house of cards.

"Many people in the South were disgusted by the smutty content of the Buchanan ads and just felt he crossed the line and showed the kind of themes that he appeals to," said Bush press secretary Marlin Fitzwater.

While there is no way to quantify a backlash, he said, there was a big increase in volunteers after the ads began running in Georgia "and that usually means ... there were people who wanted to work against what he's trying to do."

David Beckwith, press secretary for Vice President Quayle said "People tell us those ads weren't credible because nobody believes the president is a pornographer."

President Bush was turning his attention today to two other states that vote Tuesday - Maryland and Colorado. Aides said he was expected to give satellite television interviews from the White House to stations in both markets.

Buchanan was in Savannah, Ga., this morning, where he said, "George Bush's campaign is hollow. He has no ideas."

Interviewed on "CBS This Morning," Buchanan said the Bush campaign has "reverted pretty much to attacking me personally. I think one more New Hampshire-type victory down here in Georgia, and the whole thing could collapse like a house of cards. Now, that's not our expectation, but it is our hope."

Bush and Buchanan both spent most of the weekend stumping through Georgia as their trulent ads filled the local airwaves.

Bush swamped Buchanan, 745-92, in a straw poll of delegates to the California Republican Party convention outside San Francisco on Sunday. But the lopsided 89 percent vote of confidence came only after Bush backers dropped an attempt to secure a formal endorsement before the June 2 primary.

Bush, at a riverfront rally in Savannah before at least 10,000 supporters, attacked Buchanan indirectly for opposing the war against Iraq. "There were those who did not support us then, and there are those who second guess us now, but not the good people of Georgia," said the president.

Bush surrogates have been less reticent about criticizing Buchanan by name.

Former Bush drug czar William Bennett, on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley," said Buchanan "certainly flirts with ... fascism." Bush Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater said Saturday, "Buchanan appeals to the instincts of hate and divisiveness."

Lake McClellan cleanup draws many volunteers

A large crowd of volunteers turned out Saturday afternoon for Lake McClellan Cleanup Day, according to Gerald Wright, president of the Lake McClellan Improvement, Inc., the non-profit organization formed to make short- and long-term improvements at the lake.

Wright said 148 volunteers took part in the afternoon cleanup day, collecting 225 bags of refuse.

"It is a clear indication by the number of persons who attended that there is a great deal of interest in Lake McClellan and there is strong interest that our commitment to improve the facility be carried out," Wright said.

As far as the current status of the overall projects is concerned, the U.S. Forest Service, which owns the lake, has released its long-range plans for the lake, Wright said.

Wright said partial dredging of the lake could begin this summer or in the fall. Recreational vehicle hookups are set to be installed soon as is work on a family center.

The next meeting of the Lake McClellan Improvement, Inc., board of directors is scheduled for 7 p.m. March 19 at the Gray County Courthouse in Pampa.

The public is invited and encouraged to attend and take part in the meetings.

U.S. manufacturing economy strengthens sharply in February

NEW YORK (AP) — The U.S. manufacturing economy strengthened sharply in February with a powerful influx of new orders, a group of industrial purchasing executives said today in a widely followed survey.

The National Association of Purchasing Management's monthly index jumped to 52.4 percent from 47.4 percent a month earlier.

The survey provided fresh evidence that the economy is again picking up steam after a prolonged slump. It coincided with the government release of other data that showed more economic vitality, including higher consumer spending and construction spending.

The increase in the association's monthly index marked the first gain in that indicator — and the manufacturing economy — since November and also reflected the strongest advance in the overall economy since October.

The index is compiled from a survey of purchasing executives at more than 300 manufacturing companies and is considered one of the most sensitive barometers of the economy's direction.

When the index is above 50 percent, it indicates the manufacturing economy is growing. Above 44.5 percent, it indicates growth in the overall economy.

The purchasing managers said orders for new business, which fuel growth in manufacturing activity, surged higher last month. The trade group's new orders index shot up to 57.5 percent from 50.3 percent in January.

The increase in orders is expected to lead to further growth in the coming months.

Production levels also rose sharply in February, with the purchasing managers' separate production index climbing to 58.6 percent from 50.6 percent.

The purchasing managers reported that employment levels continued to drop at their firms, but at a slower rate. Employment is considered a lagging indicator — it does not tend to improve until well after new orders and production have picked up.

The government releases its February employment report on Friday.

In other positive economic reports today, the government said consumer spending and construction spending increased in January, and the nation's trade deficit shrank sharply last year.

GM employee worries about future

YPSILANTI, Mich. (AP) — For three decades, Chuck Hurry has helped build cars at General Motors' Willow Run plant. Along the way, he thought he was building a secure future.

Instead, the months ahead are filled with uncertainty. When GM closes the plant by the summer of 1993, he will lose the $36,000-a-year job that pays the mortgage and buys the groceries for his family of four.

"If I have to get another job, it'll be pretty hard at my age," Hurry, 51, said at a bar as his 4 1/2-year-old son, Joshua, toyed with a miniature shuffleboard.

"Just to clothe and feed Josh probably costs me $3,000 to $4,000, and he wears a lot of secondhand clothes and hand-me-downs. You know what they say: 'If you work for GM, GM will give you a good living — but GM will never make you rich.'"

Life's basic needs now preoccupy Hurry and many of Willow Run's 4,100 other employees.

The world's largest automaker announced Feb. 24 that the factory is among 21 plants to be closed by 1995 in an effort to put GM back in the black. The ax didn't fall without warning.

In December, GM Chairman Robert Stempel said either the Ypsilanti plant or one in Arlington, Texas, that also makes big cars would be closed. Arlington was spared.

Although GM said it wouldn't be influenced by concessions from either factory, that didn't stop officials in both states from trying. In the end, Arlington workers credited their willingness to add a third shift.

At Willow Run, where union officials had said they would consider concessions only if GM proposed them, some workers now blame their own leaders.

Hurry joined GM in 1959 as a $2.39-an-hour door installer and today works as a quality assurance foreman. He was laid off twice before, in 1962 and in 1965.

The sting of sudden joblessness taught him the need to maintain a cushion of cash. But his modest savings were depleted by a hospitalization for pneumonia in January.

Hurry had left GM for several years in the mid-1970s to play semi-professional golf. Because of his age, a return to the links is no longer an option. He can only hope for a transfer to another plant, an early-retirement offer or a return to production at Willow Run.

The United Auto Workers contract guarantees Hurry 95 percent of his $17.27 hourly base pay if he's laid off. But it is unclear what happens when the contract expires at the end of 1993.

Willow Run workers were stunned that GM chose to keep the distant Arlington plant open rather than sparing employees in the automaker's home state. After the company's announcement last week, some reported to UAW Local 1776 rather than to work. Their cars jammed a lot marked with a sign that admonished: "Park Your Foreign-Made Cars Elsewhere, Not Here."

Others gathered at the Orange Lantern bar, Hurry's favorite pub for an after-work beer.

"Drinking their heartsaches away, that's what they're doing," said tavern owner Dick Eberts. "Some of the girls were crying. It's starting to sink in more now."

Hurry punched the clock as usual. He said he doubts that production at the 46-year-old plant will end.

"I don't like to see everyone get so upset. It's not necessary," he said. "Somebody will manufacture an automobile at that location. The plant has way too much potential. It can build anything."

It can build anything.

Sexual misconduct charges halt re-election bid Senator refuses to resign

By TIM KLASS
Associated Press Writer

SEATTLE (AP) — U.S. Sen. Brock Adams dropped his bid for a second term but rejected a suggestion from his own party that he resign after eight women quoted anonymously in a newspaper accused him of sexual misconduct.

"I care for people and I have never harmed anyone. But I find now that it is not worth it to continue this campaign," the 65-year-old liberal Democrat said Sunday. He hugged his wife of 40 years, Betty, after the announcement.

"This is the saddest day of my life," he said.

The Seattle Times earlier Sunday reported claims by eight women who said Adams subjected them to unwanted kissing and fondling, sometimes repeatedly, at various times over the past two decades. Most of the women had worked as an aide or secretary for Adams, or knew the senator through ties with the Democratic Party, the newspaper said.

One woman, described as a Democratic activist, said that in the early 1970s Adams drugged and raped her, leaving $200 as he left.

None of the women ever took her allegations to police.

Because of an earlier sexual misconduct allegation, the former congressman and U.S. transportation secretary already was considered vulnerable.

Before Adams' announcement, state Democratic Party Chairwoman Karen Marchioro said deciding not to seek re-election was the least Adams could do. His resignation "has to be considered now," she said.

"This is a very, very serious hit on a person who was not in that strong a position anyway," she said.

But Adams insisted he will serve out his term. "I've got a responsibility to the people in this state, and nobody can step in and take that over in a short period of time," he said.

The Times said reporters began hearing accusations of sexual misconduct against Adams in the 3 1/2 years since Kari Tupper, a former congressional aide and family friend, claimed he drugged her and molested her at his Washington, D.C., home in 1987.

No charges were ever filed, and the U.S. attorney in the capital said the allegation was without merit. Adams insisted the accusations were an attempt to extort money from him.

The Times said it went public with the other allegations after seven of the eight women signed statements attesting to the truth of their stories and the eighth agreed to do so, too.

Adams said the news reports were "created out of whole cloth by people who hate me, and I don't know why they do." He said he didn't know who had made the allegations and he refused to speculate.

He accused the Times of "the worst kind of journalism ... anonymous vilification."

Michael R. Fancher, Times executive editor, responded, "I think that it's disappointing that he didn't address any of the specifics."

The prospects for prosecution if the women came forward were not immediately clear. The statute of limitations may have expired in at least some instances, and some of the alleged offenses might not have been crimes at the time.

Before joining the Senate, Adams served 12 years in Congress and was chairman of the House Budget Committee. A Ralph Nader report called him a frustrated white knight who "is not afraid to fight for his beliefs."

President Carter named him transportation secretary in 1977, but Adams was forced to resign 2 1/2 years later after resisting the administration's deregulation efforts. He defeated Republican Sen. Slade Gorton in 1986.

On Sunday, Adams said he still had things to accomplish, such as removing a salmon-blocking dam on the Elwha River, assuring mass-transit money for the Seattle area, protecting old forests and providing continued money for cleanup of the Hanford nuclear weapons complex.

His wife and daughter offered unqualified support.

"I have been married to Brock for 40 years, and the picture you have in this article is not my husband," Mrs. Adams said. "If you talk with other women who have worked for Brock, they will tell you the same thing."

Gov. Booth Gardner, a Democrat who reportedly is interested in the Senate seat, said Adams' decision was "the right thing for his family and the people in the state."

"It's a very sad day in Washington politics," said state Sen. Patty Murray, the only Democrat now campaigning for Adams' seat. Former U.S. Rep. Mike Lowry had also said he would challenge Adams in the primary Sept. 22.

U.S. Rep. Rod Chandler, who had been considered the leading Republican contender for Adams' seat, said, "I think I might even claim the front-runner status in the entire race now."

Dallas-based airline soars while others are grounded

DALLAS (AP) — While other airlines, weighed with bankruptcy, struggle to get off the ground, Dallas-based Southwest is planning an expansion where the sky's the limit.

"Frankly, we're confronted with a plethora of opportunities and a tremendous amount of solicitations from cities for service," said Southwest Chairman Herbert Kelleher.

Some of those opportunities include expanding Southwest from its Pacific foothold to the East Coast.

Key to that expansion was the shutdown of Midway Airlines in November, which allowed Southwest to increase its service from four to eight gates and add routes out of Chicago's Midway Airport.

Kelleher said it is likely Southwest will avoid major airports such as New York's JFK and Washington National as it moves eastward. Airports with heavy traffic would result in Southwest's jets spending too much time on the ground.

In addition, flight delays at some airports and restrictions on the number of takeoff and landing slots would interfere with the carrier's operations.

"If we moved east, it would be to some point that was less congested, easier to operate into and out of," he said. "We haven't made any determination in that respect."

Kelleher said Southwest will consider its eastward expansion over the next two to three years.

Another instance where Southwest stands to gain from another carrier's misfortune is USAir's withdrawal from several California cities. The move last May has made room for Southwest to become the biggest carrier in five California airports, including San Diego and Oakland.

When America West Airlines Inc. filed bankruptcy last June, it cut some service in Phoenix, where it's the No. 1 carrier. That allowed Southwest, the No. 2 carrier in Phoenix, to increase its share from 21.6 to 25.6 percent.

Kelleher said the airline will be cautious this year as it explores opportunities and will plan carefully in these weak economic times.

"One of the constraints of course is the condition of the economy," he said. "That's still unresolved in our estimation. We also want to keep our balance sheet strong, as we always do."

This year, Southwest plans to increase its fleet 30 percent more than it was two years ago. Thirteen new Boeing 737s will increase the number of jets to 138.

"We're not euphoric about 1992, but we are anticipating that there will be a gradual improvement throughout the year," he said. "We are anticipating that in terms of profitability, 1992 will be superior to 1991."

Gadhafi says no to extradition of Flight 103 bombing suspects

ROME (AP) — Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi said today he has no authority to extradite two Libyans charged by the United States and Britain in the bombing of Pan Am Flight 103.

In a speech broadcast by Libyan television, Gadhafi said the Libyan people and the country's laws would not allow him to turn over the two men, despite the threat of U.N. sanctions.

Gadhafi made no mention of an offer by Libya's foreign minister, Ibrahim Bishari, on Sunday to hand over the suspects to a neutral country for trial.

Gadhafi has denied the two men are Libyan intelligence agents and says they would not get a fair trial in the United States or Britain.

The two men have denied involvement in the bombing of a New York-bound Pan Am jumbo jet over Lockerbie, Scotland, in 1988 that killed 270 people.

Last month, the U.N. Security Council backed the U.S. and British demands that the two men be handed over for trial. The council told Libya it could face trade sanctions or worse if it defied the resolution.

The Security Council also demanded Libya turn over four other Libyans accused by France of bombing a French UTA airliner over Niger in 1989, killing 170 people.

Gadhafi said the U.N. secretary-general, Boutros Boutros-Ghali, had sent him a message on the demand that the Flight 103 suspects be extradited.

"I have no authority and I am not a president ... I cannot impose my views on others," he said in a speech to Libya's Peoples Congress, monitored in London.

Gadhafi holds no title other than "leader of the revolution," with power, in theory, in the hands of the elected Peoples Congress. In fact, the congress carries out his wishes.

On Sunday, Bishari raised the option of a neutral country trial while in Cairo, Egypt.

"Libya is ready to hand over the two suspects for trial in front of a neutral court in any neutral country and hopes that the U.N. Security Council will not make any resolutions against Libya," he said.

He did not mention what countries Libya proposed to handle the case.

Previously, Libya had said the two suspects — Abdel Basset Ali al-Megrahi and Lamen Khalifa Fhimah — could be tried in a Libyan court or before an international tribunal such as the World Court at The Hague, Netherlands.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

High-octane 'shot' would give a boost

How can we revive and bolster the U.S. auto industry? The Orange County (Calif.) Register, the flagship of Freedom Newspapers, Inc., talked about the problem with Allan D. Gilmour, executive vice president of Ford Motor Company and president of the Ford Automotive Group. Gilmour favored some protectionism, though he didn't call it that, in particular insisting that U.S. trade be "balanced" with Japan. We disagreed.

But the OCR, as we do, agreed with him that the U.S. industry needs relief from the heavy hand of government. Here is a summary of suggestions. These are the OCR's (and our) ideas, not his. This is our 10-point program to rev up the industry:

1. Ford, General Motors, and Chrysler should aggressively demand that government take its hands off the U.S. car companies and allow Detroit to build the best cars in the world, bar none. They should announce that the real enemy of American consumers and workers is not Tokyo, but Washington, D.C.
 2. The companies should renounce all protectionism, including "dumping," "balance of trade," and other bogus ideas. They should say, "we don't need such crutches," and insist that the government remove the "voluntary" (i.e., mandatory) quotas first placed on Japanese car imports in 1981. Do the Japanese act unfairly in some areas? Then they are just hurting their own people. U.S. auto companies should counter Japanese protectionism by working to remove existing U.S. protectionism, such as that on steel and microchips, thus reducing production costs.
 3. The companies should use their influence to forge a coalition of Republicans, conservative Democrats, and industrial-area labor Democrats, to dismantle regulations hurting our industries.
 4. The 28 percent capital-gains tax should be repealed. Let's "beat" Japan, which has only a 5 percent tax, by cutting ours to zero.
 5. Since Japan's cost of government, proportionally, is much smaller than ours (taking 33 percent of their economy, compared to the 45 percent U.S. government pilfer from ours), we should match them by slashing 12 percentage points from our total cost of government.
 6. The 1990 Clean Air Act, which is costing U.S. industry $50 billion per year, with no measurable improvement to the environment, should be repealed.
 7. The Corporate Average Fuel Economy edicts, which put an anti-Detroit "gas guzzler" tax on big cars, should be repealed.
 8. The Department of Transportation should be abolished.
 9. The federal highway system should be privatized, solving the "pothole" problem; private companies could maintain the highways by charging tolls.
 10. A private solution to the health-care-costs problem should be instituted, relying on market incentives, not socialized medicine.
- This 10-point system would pour high-octane fuel into our auto industry, and into the economy as a whole. Right now we're driving an economic Yugo. This program would put us behind the wheel of a Mustang.

Farewell to Frohnmayer

With the departure of John Frohnmayer as chairman of the National Endowment for the Arts, a splendid opportunity is at hand to review this embattled agency and to make needed changes. The opportunity must not be lost.

Frohnmayer had two problems: He took on an impossible job and he performed it ineptly. He managed equally to outrage the "art community," whatever that is, and to insult the taxpaying public.

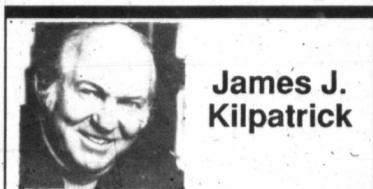

In an ideal world, Congress would vote to abolish the NEA altogether. Absent the General Welfare Clause, there is not a scintilla of constitutional justification for the agency's existence.

To ask for abolition is unrealistic. The NEA contributes substantially to symphony orchestras across the nation. It supports well-established theater companies and museums. These organizations have boards of directors and the directors have political clout. Constitutional principles be damned; the directors need the money.

Less drastic reforms are attainable. It is time to turn off the faucet for individual grants. These have created the greatest controversy; they serve the fewest people; they are constitutionally indefensible.

Suspend the constitutional objections for a moment. The NEA and its companion agency, the National Endowment for the Humanities, operate under a system that is grossly unfair. No fixed, definable standards govern the awards. The system is entirely subjective.

This is not true of other federal programs. Commodity loans are based upon bushels of corn. Food stamps, Pell grants and student loans depend upon measurable income. Veterans get hospital benefits as a matter of right. The children of families under a certain income get subsidized school lunches. In each instance the criteria are objectively measurable. All eligible applicants are treated alike.

Not at the NEA. Consider the grants that are given annually in the form of "fellowships for museum professionals." A woman in Richmond, Va., got $7,000 to complete a manuscript on Tuscan painting. A woman in Hartford, Conn., got $15,000 to support travel in Italy for a book on Domenico Ghirlandaio. A woman in St. Paul got $8,000 to travel to Stockholm to study textile conservation. Only 11 such grants were given. We may fairly assume that a hundred museum professionals applied, and we may further assume that every one of them would have dearly loved to spend a year in Italy.

In the same fashion, a favored few writers, dancers, photographers, folk artists and musicians get funds. All others are turned away. If the NEA were a private foundation, no one reasonably could object, but when millions of dollars in tax funds are given away on whim, or caprice, or "professional aesthetic judgment," I for one object loudly.

The so-called "performance artists" have caused the greatest trouble. In a courteous letter accepting Frohnmayer's resignation, even George Bush was prompted to say that "some of the art funded by the NEA does not have my enthusiastic approval." Bush abhors unpleasantness. If he had wanted to score points, he could have cited specific grants for "art" that patently merits not one cent of the taxpayers' money.

Those of us in the media never have been able adequately to describe some of this stuff. No TV station will put "homosexual art" on the screen; no family newspaper will quote some of the scripts and stories. The New York Times, reporting Frohnmayer's farewell, spoke of a grant for poetry that "makes a sexual reference to Jesus." This "reference" was to oral sex.

In addition to abolishing the individual grants, Congress should review the standard of "patent indecency" that both House and Senate separately have approved. Some artists, but not all artists, will howl at the idea, but let them howl. If they ask, What is indecent? the answer is to ask, What is art? Let the complainants spurn the taxpayers' aid and compete for support in the private sector.

As a third step, the whole process of "peer review" must be revised. In theory the system operates without cronyism or special interest. In the real world, it is a different matter.

I wish devoutly that the government would get entirely out of the business of approving art and artists. This has been the Soviet way. Anyone who has attended an exhibition of Soviet painting must groan at the weight of the state's heavy hand. Bush was right to get rid of Frohnmayer, but the dismissal scarcely matters. It is the program itself that is wrong.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, March 2, the 62nd day of 1992. There are 304 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On March 2, 1939, Roman Catholic Cardinal Eugenio Pacelli was elected Pope. He took the name Pius XII.

On this date:

In 1793, the first president of the Republic of Texas, Sam Houston, was born near Lexington, Va.

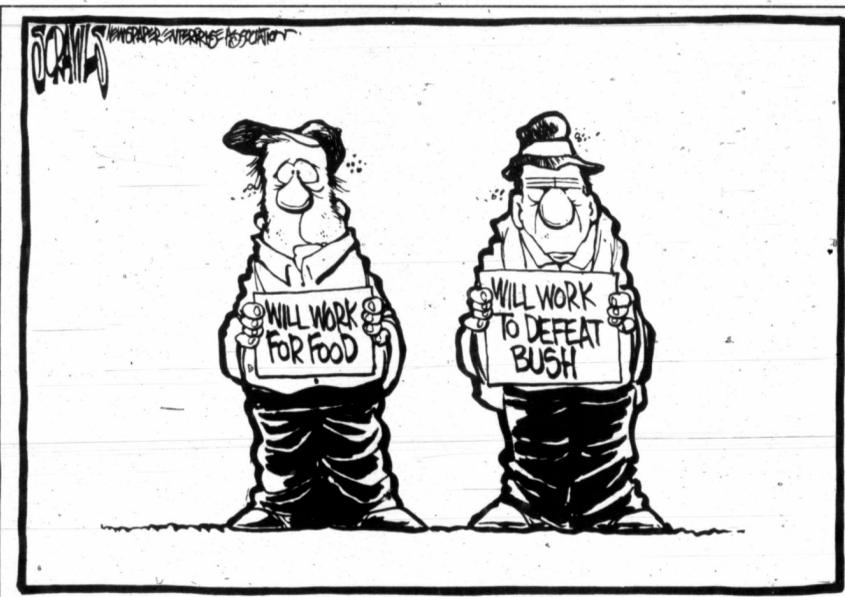

In 1836, Texas declared its independence from Mexico.

In 1899, Congress established Mount Rainier National Park.

In 1917, 75 years ago, Puerto Ricans were granted U.S. citizenship.

In 1933, the motion picture "King Kong," starring Fay Wray, premiered at New York's Radio City Music Hall and the RKO Roxy.

In 1949, an American B-50 Superfortress, the Lucky Lady 2, landed at Fort Worth, Texas, after completing the first non-stop flight around the world.

The joy of motivated learning

Japan has produced a highly efficient work force, sensational productivity, enormous wealth.

Do we want to do it the way they did? In Japan, students through the eighth grade are in school up to 10 hours a day and 243 days each year.

As academic success reflects on family, many are also required to accept additional hours of tutoring.

One test is then given to determine eligibility for further education or career preparation.

Some who fail the test, having disgraced their families, choose suicide.

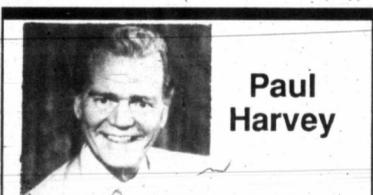

The typical Japanese worker is expected similarly to endure whatever is asked of him. A workday will average 12 to 14 hours and for many of these hours the workers receive no pay.

He "donates" that time to the company. To complain is to be dismissed and blacklisted, preventing further employment.

In short, the Japanese systems works — but neither students nor workers are happy.

Americans prefer "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

Is our objective reasonably attainable? American educators Eleanor Clancey and Richard Diggs believe it is. They have written a booklet titled: "Pretty Good Ain't Good Enough."

Paul Harvey

Their premise is that our country does not have to be cruel to compete; that we can improve if we will teach our students how to prepare for and find jobs where they will be happily employed.

"Our nation's productivity could easily double if 70 percent of our workers enjoyed going to work each day," the educators write.

Now, how do we accomplish that?

Motivating factors the authors identify are "romance, recognition and money" — in that order.

Any student can be motivated to stay in school if his classes include something that turns him on: reading, religion, writing, gambling, traveling, sports.

An educator, just by the use of students' names or tone of voice, can build young egos, can make a student feel like somebody special.

As kids flock to a neighborhood hangout "where everybody knows my name," they will attend class if they get that daily dose of recognition.

Money.

A sign in the typing room should read: "Type 55 words a minute, expect a starting wage of $12,500. Sixty-five words a minute, $14,000"—and so on up to "Type 100 words a minute and you can negotiate your own salary because everybody will want your services."

Similarly, in economics class it could be learned that instead of paying $100 for the gym shoes advertised on TV, spend $20 for shoes just as good at a discount store and invest the other $80. And a $2,000 investment at age 14 becomes half a billion by age 65.

Similarly, the ideal job can offer romance, recognition and money.

My condensation of this volume sounds simplistic.

But I finished the booklet encouraged that at least two educators are convinced that American students and American workers will be all that they can be if only they will respond to their priorities.

Third power rallies in South Africa

By William A. Rusher

When I heard that Mangosuthu Buthelezi, political leader of the Zulu nation, was to speak to the World Affairs Council of Northern California here in San Francisco, I hurriedly reserved a seat. I had no idea he was even in the country—our liberal media almost never mention him. That might spoil the impression they have so carefully cultivated, that the white government of Prime Minister de Klerk and the communist-riddled black terrorist movement called the African National Congress, headed by Nelson Mandela, are the only two political forces in South Africa that matter.

But I had interviewed Buthelezi for the first time 20 years ago, and I had visited him in Ulundi, the capital of KwaZulu, in 1987, and I knew, and have often said in this column, that no future for South Africa, whether for good or ill, can be conceived without conceding a major role to Buthelezi and his people.

Buthelezi is a bit heavier now, in middle age, but his voice and bearing were as young and vigorous as ever, and his message was crystal-clear:

"The African National Congress is demanding a Constituent Assembly before June this year. It is retaining its private army, Umkhonto we Sizwe, intact, and it is still secreting caches of arms around the country because it wants to sabre-rattle to get its own way.

"The IFP (Inkatha Freedom Party, which Buthelezi heads) says an adamant No to a Constituent Assembly before June this year. ... The ground is not equally level for all political parties when it comes down to political campaigning. There are areas which are dominated by the ANC where no other political party dare attempt to hold a meeting."

Nor is Buthelezi overly impressed with the Conference for a Democratic South Africa (CODESA for short), which is currently meeting to discuss negotiations and (quite improperly) to engage in them:

"CODESA is composed of 20 political parties, but excludes the Conservative Party and white parties and trade unions to the right of it. It also excludes the Pan-African Congress, AZAPO, and other political organizations on the left. It is just not sufficiently representative of the total political spectrum in South Africa. ..."

"Quite frankly, there are times when it is so clearly evident that the ANC and the government are conniving behind the scenes and attempting to use CODESA to rubber-stamp the decisions they make in private and in secret, that I fear for the future."

What if, nevertheless, de Klerk simply sells out to the ANC? One got a grim glimpse of the possibilities in Buthelezi's reference to the tragic experience of neighboring Angola:

"Dr. Savimbi was assured that an Interim Government after the withdrawal of Portugal from Angola would give all political parties fair recognition and opportunity to participate in the new democracy. He found that he was duped, and the (communist) political power-play that followed resulted in a divided Angola being the tragic aftermath of violence." It took a 15-year civil war and 500,000 casualties to unite the country again.

Do de Klerk and Mandela really think they can hustle South Africa into the hands of the ANC over the opposition of 6 million Zulus, not to mention millions of other South Africans both white and black?

Not if Buthelezi can help it: "We want a true multi-party democracy and, colloquially put, we are going to hang in there to ensure that South Africans do have a multiplicity of choices."

Doubters should read again "The Washing of the Spears" and the many other histories that deprive the warlike qualities of the Zulu nation. With Moscow no longer able to back him up militarily, Nelson Mandela may find South Africa a tougher nut to crack than he imagines.

Fall freeze ravaged ornamentals

The Halloween freeze of '91 caused considerable damage to ornamentals in West Texas. The reddish-brown discoloration of pine needles was the most noticeable. Very warm weather right before the freeze and fertilization of lawns after early September had some ornamentals in a very tender state. Plants growing rapidly in the fall have cells that are like a car radiator with no antifreeze. Plants that have been allowed to slow down growth, by withholding fertilizer and backing off on the amount of water applied, will build up materials in their cells that keep the cell from freezing like antifreeze in a radiator. Homeowners should wait to prune until budbreak in the spring. At that time, dead limbs will be obvious and healthy material will not be removed by mistake. Many pine trees look terrible at this time, and will probably lose the damaged needles prematurely this summer, most have green growing tips and will put out new growth in the spring.

For Horticulture

mat at the end of the branch. This dense growth is shallowly attached and subject to easy breakage by wind storms.

This new mass of growth also puts a strain on a tree's root-system since food reserves have to go to support it. Thus the tree's root system is weakened and overall vigor is reduced, making the tree more susceptible to attack from insects, diseases and other environmental conditions. Sun scald can also be a problem.

Topping also reduces a tree's life expectancy and therefore affects its value in the landscape. Knowledgeable appraisers will severely reduce the value of a topped or dehorned tree.

Good pruning practices will retain a tree's natural form and enable it to be a much greater asset to the landowner. Considering how long it takes a tree to reach full size, proper pruning and care should be a top priority for the homeowner.

PRUNING WOODY ORNAMENTALS

Now is the time to determine if woody ornamentals need pruning, but don't just prune automatically or because you need the exercise. If you can't justify the removal of each limb or branch, put up your clippers and go spade the garden instead.

Some of the right reasons for pruning include removing dead or winter-killed growth or balancing the top with the root system when setting out new plants. Diseased or insect-injured wood, as well as storm or accident-damaged limbs, should be removed as soon as possible.

Older shrubs can be rejuvenated by removing the older branches at the base. Pruning can also help develop a desired shape or size as well as aid in producing better flowers and fruit.

Severe pruning should be avoided if possible. It is better to prune lightly and more often to prevent sunscald to the sensitive inner branches. Never leave stubs that invite the entry of insects and disease.

Plants which bloom in early spring with the appearance of new leaves should be pruned after they flower. Those that bloom later in the spring or summer should be pruned during the dormant season. Always use sharp tools to make pruning less burdensome. For additional pruning information, ask your County Extension Office for a copy of B-1347, "Pruning and Training Landscape Plants".

WHY PRUNE FRUIT TREES?

Why prune at all? First of all, pruning promotes large, well-flavored fruit. A plant cannot produce the quality of fruit desired when it's allowed to mature the quantity of fruit which it is capable of maturing. Pruning removes some of the fruit buds which would mature fruit. By growing fewer fruit, the tree can use all available nutrients for those few fruit, thus, producing a large, juicy product. The fruit grower must decide whether he wants many small fruit or an adequate number of high-quality fruit because a plant only has a certain production capacity.

Another valuable advantage of pruning is to establish a proper frame work. A strong framework will support more fruit. This prevents tree breakage when fruit matures. Even distribution also enhances even ripening of fruit throughout the tree. Preventing tree breakage results in longer life and a more attractive landscape plant.

Where possible, pruning should be delayed until just before the bud breaks in the spring. At this time, pruning has the fewest bad effects and the most benefits. For this reason, put off the urge to start cutting until the last possible minute.

Readers sentence women who sit at bars

DEAR ABBY: Your reasons why a woman would sit at a bar stool instead of a table show that you have not gone out much as a single woman or you would know why women prefer the bar stool over a table.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

As a professional career woman, I can tell you that most women prefer to sit at the bar because it's easier to control "unwanted advances."

A table affords too much opportunity for someone to wander over and sit down (uninvited), making it difficult to extricate yourself from what could be the embarrassment of asking him to leave.

Whereas, while sitting at the bar, you can swivel away, placing your back to the uninvited person, and thus avoid conversation. The bartender is a single woman's best protector. If she gives a few eye signals to the bartender, he will politely tell the offending person, "Please don't bother the lady."

A WOMAN'S VIEWPOINT

DEAR VIEWPOINT: Read on for another point of view:

DEAR ABBY: I take issue with your response to the Chicago man whose wife preferred sitting at the bar alone — or with her lady friends — rather than at a table.

A lady sitting at a bar projects a different image than one sitting at a table. It is understood that no invitation is required for any individual to occupy the adjacent seat at a bar. When a woman is seated at a table, a stranger will not join her without an invitation.

Abby, tell that man his original "vibes" were correct. If his wife goes to bars alone and does not want to be bothered, she should sit at a table.

MRS. R.S. LICHTENBERG, POULSBO, WASH.

DEAR ABBY: I am a single woman and I like to sit at the bar because I love to dance. If I were to come into a bar and sit at a table, people may think I am waiting for someone, and nobody will ask me to dance. I would rather let them think I was a pickup because, after talking to me, they would find out differently.

As for a married woman sitting with her girlfriend at a bar — that is something else. Why would a happily married woman want to go to a bar without her husband? Either she wants to make him jealous, she's looking for someone else, or she already has someone.

I know. I was a bartender for 15 years.

LOTS OF HANKY-PANKY IN TEXAS

DEAR LOTS: Let's hear it from a woman bartender from Bellevue, Wash.:

DEAR ABBY: Having been a happily married woman bartender with two children, I beg to differ with "J. in Chicago," who says a woman who sits at the bar, unescorted, is usually looking for company.

When I go out without my husband, I always sit at the bar because I know I'll be bothered less by unwelcome company because of the bartender's presence. A bartender serves as a buffer or protector for women who have stopped at a bar for nothing more than a quiet place to "people watch" or who just want to relax and visit with a friend. DINA

Nutrition not reflected by abundance of food

The most abundant and varied food supply in the world is found in the United States. We would then expect Americans to have varied diets. This is not necessarily the case, however!

According to a recent USDA survey, most Americans seem to know that variety is important in a healthy diet. In the surveys on consumer knowledge and attitudes about diet and health, about 90 percent thought variety was important, and 70% thought their diets were about right in variety.

Actually, American diets lack the variety they need to supply recommended amounts of several nutrients. Based on the recent nationwide survey of what Americans eat; many women's diets did not meet the 1989 Recommended Dietary Allowance (RDA) for calcium, iron, zinc, magnesium, and vitamin B₆. In fact, less than 20 percent of women 20 to 50 years of age had enough calcium to meet the RDA. Only about 15 percent met the RDA for iron!

Nutritionists have suggested a

Homemakers' News

varied diet for decades, but it isn't always clear what "variety" means.

The Dietary guidelines for Americans published by the Department of Agriculture and the Department of Health and Human Services. Seven dietary guidelines are targeted. "Eat a variety of foods," is the first guideline. This guideline explains that more than 40 different nutrients are needed for good health. A variety of foods, not a few highly fortified foods or supplements is the suggested way to get these nutrients. No single food can supply all of these nutrients in amounts needed.

The Dietary Guideline addressing variety summarizes what's needed daily from 5 major food groups: vegetables 1-3 to 5 servings; fruits - 2 to 4 servings; breads, cereals, rice and pasta - 6 to 11 servings; milk, yogurt, and cheese - 2 to 3 servings; and meat, poultry, fish, beans, eggs and nuts - 2 to 3 servings.

The number of servings you need depends on your age, body size, and activity level. Almost everyone should have at least the lower number of servings suggested from each group to get recommended amounts of nutrients. Follow the other guidelines when selecting a varied diet, making choices for a diet low in fat, saturated fatty acids and cholesterol, and moderate in sugars, salt, and if used at all, alcohol.

If you select a wide variety of foods daily, then there is no reason to take vitamin, mineral, or other nutritional supplements. By making healthy food choices based on food needs of individual family members and exercising daily, individuals can improve their lifestyles. In other words, variety and moderation are essential keys to healthful living.

Harvesters take on big Brownwood in Class 4A regional semifinal clash

Game tips off Tuesday night in Wichita Falls

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Writer

Top-ranked Pampa just kept getting stronger every quarter against Sweetwater in the Class 4A area playoff round Saturday night.

The area championship, which was Pampa's 13th consecutive win, was played before an estimated 2,800 fans in Plainview's Hutcherson Center.

The Harvesters advance to the regional semifinals, taking on Brownwood (18-11) at 8 p.m. Tuesday night at Midwestern State University in Wichita Falls.

Starting with David Johnson's outside 3-pointer in the opening minute, Pampa led the entire game in the 70-57 win against Sweetwater.

Despite an 11-point lead with 1:08 left in the first half, the Harvesters didn't start putting Sweetwater deep in the hole until the third quarter.

There was some concern for the Harvesters when Johnson, who hurried four 3-pointers in the game, drew his third foul with 5:09 left in the second quarter and was benched for the remainder of the half. However, reserve Brent Skaggs and center Jeff Young promptly took up the slack. Skaggs hit a 10-foot jumper and Young hit three straight foul shots to put Pampa up by 30-19.

Charles Smith, Sweetwater's 6-7 pivot, tossed in a short jumper to cut Pampa's lead to single-digits, 30-21, at intermission.

The Harvesters scored early and often in the third quarter and Sweetwater trailed by 18 (41-23) three minutes into the second half.

Leading by 13 (51-38) after three quarters, the Harvesters scored with machine-like precision in the final period, outpointing the Mustangs, 39-19.

Pampa, behind Young's 24 points, lifted its record to 31-2 for the season. Johnson followed Young in the scoring attack with 16 points, followed by Dwight Nickelberry with 14. Cederick Wilbon had 8 and Randy Nichols and Brent Skaggs added 4 points each.

Sweetwater bows out with a 25-7 record.

"That game against Sweetwater was a lot more physical than it looked like," said Pampa head coach Robert Hale. "We're a little sore, but physically we're probably in better shape than we've ever have been. We're going to be fine tomorrow once we get over our stiffness and a few skinned knees."

Brownwood, which finished runnerup to Fort Worth Everman in the district standings, has a king-size lineup.

Brian Huntsinger, at 6-8, and John Gilger, at 6-7, man the middle for the Lions, whose starting five averages from 10 to 15 points per game.

"They're not just big, they're huge," added Hale. "It's going to be like David versus Goliath."

Huntsinger averages 15.5 points and 11 rebounds per game to lead the Lions in both categories.

Brownwood has a Pampa connection in 6-0 starting point guard Zane Cole, who averages 12 points per game. Cole, a senior, is a first cousin of Pampa all-state linebacker Zach Thomas and Lady Harvesters' basketball player Katrina Thomas.

"We had a great crowd at Plainview and I know we'll have a bunch cheering for us at Wichita Falls," Hale said. "That drive isn't as long as people think it is. It's about a 3 1/2-hour drive or about 15 minutes longer than to Lubbock."

The winner of the Pampa-Brownwood contest will be just one game away from the state tournament, which will be played in Austin.

Miami takes on McLean in Class 1A area round

Miami tangles with McLean at 7 p.m. Tuesday night in Pampa's McNeeley Fieldhouse in the Class 1A boys' area round of the playoffs.

Miami, now 15-16, advanced to the area playoffs by downing Channing, 77-65, Tuesday night in the bi-district round at Sunnett.

Melvin Seymour led the way for the Warriors with 20 points.

Matthew Neighbors followed with 18 points. Andrew Neighbors had 16 points and Aaron McReynolds 14 for the Warriors.

Hugo Davila led Channing in scoring with 15 points.

Briscoe takes on Hartley in a Class 1A area boys' game at 7 p.m. Tuesday night in the Borger High School gym.

Fourth-quarter spree lifts Duke past UCLA

Blue Devils keep Number 1 spot

By JIM O'CONNELL
AP Basketball Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Top-ranked Duke outscored fourth-ranked UCLA 14-4 over the game's final three minutes Sunday to win the much-anticipated, less-than-expected showdown 75-65.

The Blue Devils (23-2) have been No. 1 throughout the season and will hold that spot by sending the Bruins (21-4) to their third straight loss.

Christian Laettner, who led all scorers with 29 points, made two free throws with 3:06 to play to bring Duke into the game's final tie, 61-61.

That was it for the Bruins as they managed to make two of seven shots while committing three turnovers in the final three minutes.

Laettner broke that last tie with a 3-pointer with 2:32 left. Antonio Lang scored on a long layup after a UCLA turnover to make it a five-point lead for the defending national champions.

Don MacLean brought UCLA within three with 1:56 left on a driving jumper, but Duke scored the next six points for a 72-63 lead with 57 seconds to play.

The game was the most anticipated of the season as UCLA had never been below its current ranking during the regular season and had been No. 2 for most of the year.

Brian Davis added 19 points for Duke, while Bobby Hurley, playing just his second game since returning from a broken foot, had 11 including two big 3-pointers in the final seven minutes.

Tracy Murray led UCLA with 22 points, while MacLean had 20.

The first half was one of survival for both teams as Duke finished with better shooting percentage, 33.3 (7-for-21). The Bruins managed to make just 11 of 41 attempts (26.8 percent) and the only reason they had a 29-24 halftime lead was that the Blue Devils committed 14 turnovers in the opening 20 minutes, one less than they average for a game all season.

Both teams played impressive defense, something UCLA has not been known for, but the Bruins stayed with the Blue Devils for 37 minutes.

Maryland hands Tar Heels fourth consecutive setback

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — How many times does a team lose when an opposition guard gets the game-winning basket on his second attempt at a tip-in?

Probably only a bit more frequently than North Carolina loses four games in a row.

Walt Williams' tip-in with 1:3 seconds left Sunday gave Maryland an 82-80 victory over No. 10 North Carolina, sending the Tar Heels to their longest losing streak since 1965.

Maryland led 51-29 at halftime before North Carolina (18-7, 8-6 ACC) rallied. The Tar Heels took their first lead at 80-79 on a three-point play by Hubert Davis with 18.5 seconds to go.

Evers Burns then missed a short jumper for Maryland, and the 6-foot-8 Williams tipped up the rebound. Williams got his hand on the ball again and converted his second tip-in attempt for the victory.

"Evers went up for a shot and it went a little long," Williams said.

"I just went in there and took the ball and just tried to go in there and score. I think I went up a little bit too quick, so as soon as I hit the floor I went right back up and tapped it back in."

That made it 81-80, and after a North Carolina turnover, Williams made a final free throw with 0.1 seconds left to cap a 28-point performance. Seconds later, hundreds of fans stormed onto the court to celebrate the victory.

"It's a great day for Maryland basketball and a great day for me, personally," Terrapins coach Gary Williams said. "When you work on a program, obviously you take a look at the Carolina program to see how they got it done."

Services scheduled for softball pioneer

JACKSONVILLE, Texas (AP) — Services for softball pioneer W.W. "Bill" Kethan are scheduled for Tuesday.

Kethan died Sunday of cancer.

Until his retirement in 1987, Kethan was among the leaders for four decades in the Amateur Softball Association, the national governing body of softball in the United States, and the International Softball Federation.

From 1948-87, Kethan served as Texas ASA commissioner. From 1964-65, he was president of the ASA and one of the driving forces in its relocation from Newark, N.J., to Oklahoma City, Okla. and the building of the National Softball Hall of Fame there.

Former all-stars continue spring training comebacks

By The Associated Press

Teddy Higuera is giving the Milwaukee Brewers some good signs this spring and Carney Lansford is giving it one more try with the Oakland Athletics.

On a day in which Kirk Gibson returned to Kansas City's camp and Roger Clemens again was absent from Boston's, a pair of past All-Stars continued their comebacks from injuries Sunday.

Higuera, limited to seven games last year, pitched from the mound for the first time since undergoing rotator cuff surgery in August. The left-hander threw 50 pitches at the Brewers' camp in Chandler, Ariz.

"He came down and gave me the thumbs up," Brewers manager Phil Garner reported. "He was beaming from ear to ear, so it must have been good. I'm happy for him because he has worked so hard. I've been very impressed."

The Brewers are not expecting Higuera to be ready by opening day. Still, the former 20-game winner is said to be ahead of schedule on his rehabilitation and Milwaukee hopes he'll be able to pitch early in the season.

A few miles away in Scottsdale, Ariz., Lansford said he feels fine after missing all but five games last season.

Lansford's left knee was mangled in a snowmobile accident on New Year's Eve 1990, and the third baseman underwent reconstructive surgery. He tried to come back too soon last July and went 1-for-16.

The Athletics tried to replace Lansford's spot with several players, and none of them worked out too well. Not much went right for Oakland last season as it struggled to an 84-78 record and a fourth-place finish after three straight American League West championships.

"Actually, had the team done well last year I might have retired," Lansford, 35, said.

"Everybody is back and it's something like a last shot for us," he said, aware that the team will change after this season because it has so many free-agents.

Lansford said his knee injury is healed and that it should not hinder him.

"I go through the stations here and it seems like I was never hurt," he said. "The knee feels like a normal knee. If I get off to a slow start or something, it's not going to be due to the knee."

Gibson, hobbled by injuries in the past, is healthy this spring. But after the Royals told him he will be a backup this season, he skipped Saturday's workout in Haines City, Fla.

Gibson came back to practice Sunday, not that he's any happier with his role.

"It doesn't matter," he said. "It's not a big deal really. There's nothing to say about it."

Royals manager Hal McRae said he could see why the intense Gibson walked out for a day.

"I think he did a super-wise thing if he wasn't ready to work. Maybe that's the best thing to do, not show up," McRae said. "I'll try to give him a little space, let him work things out and hopefully he will in a short span of time. I understand that."

The Boston Red Sox, meanwhile, continued to have fun at Clemens' expense. The three-time Cy Young winner is working out at home in Houston, and says he will join the Red Sox in Winter Haven, Fla., by Wednesday's mandatory reporting date.

On Saturday, Clemens' teammates rolled out a makeshift red carpet leading to his clubhouse stall. On Sunday players added a milk carton with a baseball card of Clemens attached, and the caption: "Have you seen this pitcher?"

A helium balloon was hung that carried the message, "Welcome back. We missed you."

And there was a case of sunflower seeds.

Clemens had said in an interview last week that he was working out and that if he were at camp he would just be standing around spitting out sunflower seeds.

Rangers' Ryan returns for 26th season

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. (AP) — Nolan Ryan is back for his 26th major league season, and even getting started wasn't easy.

Ryan, 45, endured fouled transportation connections at a Florida airport and snarled freeway traffic to arrive at the Rangers spring training camp Sunday evening. He immediately went out and threw for 17 minutes.

The need to throw after a hard day of travel reminded Ryan of the high price of playing at his age.

"It's more of a challenge, because I think you know it could be your last (season)," Ryan said.

"It takes more to compete, so I think you get more satisfaction out of it."

Ryan, tied for 13th on the career victory list at 314, will earn $4.2 million this season. The Rangers have an option for 1993 but will let Ryan decide if he wants to return.

Last year, Ryan gave no indication he was near retirement. He went 12-6 with a 2.91 ERA and held opponents to a major league-low .172 average, third-lowest in history.

"You're looking at a guy who's getting older but not necessarily getting any worse," Texas manager

Bobby Valentine said.

This season presents a new demand for Ryan. Texas is scheduled to play 34 games in the first 35 days and 62 games in the first 66 games. That means the Rangers will start the season with a five-man rotation with few possibilities of finding the extra rest that has helped Ryan.

In his three years with Texas, Ryan is 16-13 with a 3.78 ERA when starting on four days rest and 23-7 with a 2.54 ERA when starting on five or more days rest.

Couples captures LA Open in playoff round

By KEN PETERS
AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fred Couples rolled in a 10-foot birdie putt on the second playoff hole Sunday to beat Davis Love III and win the Los Angeles Open for the second time in three years.

Couples' winning putt, coming after he hit a 6-iron on the par-3 hole within good birdie range, ended a six-hole stretch where he and Love matched stroke for stroke.

Tied since the 14th hole, they both parred down the stretch to finish regulation at 15-under-par 269. Couples had a closing 70 and Love shot a 69.

Love also used a 6-iron on the 180-yard No. 14, the second playoff hole, hitting his tee shot onto the fringe some 30 feet from the hole. He gave the putt a good roll and it just missed, with the ball rimming the cup and sliding out.

Both had birdied the first playoff hole at Riviera Country Club, with Couples sinking a 6-foot putt and Love knocking in a 2-footer.

Couples won the LA Open in 1990, finishing three strokes in front of Gil Morgan.

Jay Haas and Yoshinori Kaneko of Tokyo finished in a third-place tie at 14-under. Both began the round at 8-under 205 and fired closing 65s.

Rocco Mediate shot a 71 to finish fourth at 13-under, and Sandy Lyle had a 72 to wind up another shot back, at 272.

Couples and Love made routine pars on the final regulation hole, both lagging up from beyond 30 feet and making their short putts.

After beginning the round one shot ahead of Love, Tom Sieckmann and Sandy Lyle, Couples lost the lead immediately.

He sent his first shot of the day out of bounds on the left. Hitting three, he drove the ball into the trees on the right side of the fairway. He had to split two trees with his recovery shot and left it far short of the green. He then chipped to within 8 feet of the hole and two-putted to drop to 12-under for the tournament.

He came back with a birdie on No. 2, then finally regained the lead with a birdie on No. 13. Love then birdied the next hole to draw into a tie.

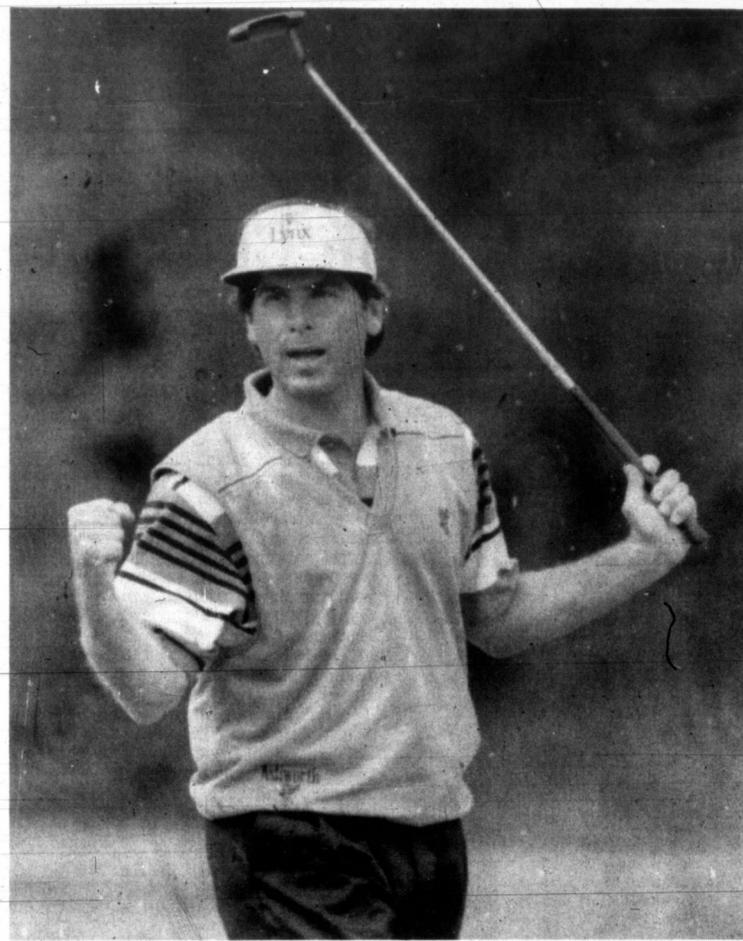

Love had threatened to turn the tournament into a one-man show during the third round, as he went to 17-under when he birdied No. 11.

He dropped back just as quickly as his four-shot lead dwindled to one with a triple-bogey 7 on No. 12. He bogeyed one more hole down the stretch, finishing with a 70, and Couples moved ahead with a 64.

John Daly staged a charge Sunday, but it was too little, too late, as his 66 left him five strokes behind.

The victory was the first of the year for Couples, who now has won seven times since joining the tour in 1981. He finished third on the money list last year with $791,749 in earnings.

The win in the LA Open, sponsored by Nissan, was worth $180,000.

Coe claims first LPGA victory

WALEA, Hawaii (AP) — Dawn Coe now knows what it feels like to be a winner.

"It feels awesome. Great," Coe said Saturday after winning the $500,000 Women's Kemper Open, her first tournament victory since joining the LPGA Tour in 1984. "It's what I've worked for nine years. Now I know how everyone else feels."

Coe carded a 4-under-par 68 to finish at 13-under 275, one stroke better than Dottie Mohrrie. Missie Berteotti was third, another stroke back.

"It's been a lot of hard work. A lot of hard work," Coe said of her years on the tour. "They kept saying the hardest one to win was the first one and it wasn't easy by any means."

Elliott runs away from rest of field in winning Goodwrench 500

By MIKE HARRIS
AP Motorsports Writer

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (AP) — The bright red Budweiser Ford was as clean and unmarked in Victory Circle as if it had just come out of a garage.

That was proof enough of Bill Elliott's big edge in winning Sunday's Goodwrench 500 at North Carolina Motor Speedway.

It was a two-man battle until just past the halfway mark, with Daytona 500 winner Davey Allison, in another Thunderbird, taking turns in the lead with Elliott.

Then the banging and bumping that had brought out seven caution flags in the first 282 laps of the 492-lap race ended, giving Elliott 210 laps of uninterrupted green-flag racing and a runaway victory.

"Davey would be good for 40 or 50 laps (after pit stops), then I'd get a good run on him and I'd be able to open up a lead," Elliott said. "I knew if the caution flag didn't come out there at the end, we'd be in good shape."

He pulled away steadily and won by 12.75 seconds, almost a half-lap on the one-mile oval.

That gave Elliott his 35th career victory in his 350th Winston Cup start and ended a dry spell that had lasted since he won the Pepsi 400 last July at Daytona.

But this victory was special for another reason — it was his first for Junior Johnson, the former Hall of Fame driver who has been given 132 victories and six series titles by an array of great drivers since he became a team owner.

"I told Bill at Talladega (the) first of last year that if he'd come over with us, we'd make sure he had the equipment and stuff. All he'd have to do was drive it. We'd take care of the rest of it. He's done his job and we're going to keep on trying to do ours," Johnson said.

That sounded like heaven to Elliott, who was in charge of just about everything — running the team, helping with the mechanical work, setting up the chassis and driving — while competing for the family-run Melling Racing team for the last decade.

"I think when everybody heard about us doing this (at crew chief) Tim (Brewer) and I wouldn't work together, but it's amazed me the amount of support I've gotten from everybody up there at Junior's," Elliott said. "We worked hard all winter long trying to get this all worked out. Then, we went to Daytona and ran well (before crashing at mid-race)."

Elliott said, "I didn't know Tim Brewer very well, but when we finally had a chance to sit down and talk, I realized he's just as concerned about getting things done right as I am."

"I kind of know how to get a car around a race track and Tim's worked with enough good drivers to know something about the chassis. He's got a lot of good experience. I think our goals are the same — to win races. He can understand a lot more when I come in and say something, and I think that's going to benefit both of us. Before, I had to do it myself or maybe go in a direction I was a little unsure of. I think we're going to complement each other."

"Maybe this (win) is beginner's luck," Elliott added with a smile. "But I don't think so. I think this is the start of something good."

Brewer, who has had 49 winners as a crew chief, said, "Bill Elliott, he's the best. ... It was a great day for us. Everybody's worked their tails off and we've got the best of everything right now — best sponsors, best crew, best owner, best driver."

Allison, who still leads the Winston Cup point standings, noted that Elliott is now just 88 points behind in seventh despite crashing out of the opener at Daytona.

"We hung in there even though we weren't tough enough to do much with Bill," Allison said. "They're going to be tough all year. I'm just glad we got the jump on 'em in points right now."

Elliott led 260 laps, including the final 213, on the way to a race record average of 126.125 mph, breaking the mark of 124.083 set last March by Kyle Petty and barely missing the track record of 127.292, by Allison last October.

Allison led 190 of the first 279 trips around the Rockingham oval.

Harry Gant finished third, the only other driver on the lead lap. Michael Waltrip was fourth, followed by Ken Schrader.

There were a total of 27 laps of caution, but no serious accidents and no injuries reported.

Kyle Petty, who had won this race twice in a row and was starting from the pole for the third straight time, failed in his effort to win the race and the $190,000 Unocal 76 Challenge bonus. He led the first 10 laps, but never got back to the top, slipping steadily back into the pack before being lapped by Elliott on lap 251. He wound up falling out late in the race with a broken camshaft that left him 29th in the 40-car field.

"We just missed on the setup," Petty said. "At least by the end of the day the seven things we had going wrong we finally worked down to one."

The Unocal bonus builds at $7,600 per event and goes to a driver winning both the pole and the race. It will be $197,600 next Sunday at Richmond, Va.

Dale Earnhardt, the two-time defending Winston Cup champion, also ran among the leaders before being slowed by a brake problem that eventually brought him into the pits for a long stop on lap 130. He lost 10 laps and wound up finishing 24th.

Bird's return gives Celtics a boost against Mavericks

By DAVE O'HARA
AP Sports Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Fifteen seconds after the opening tap, Larry Bird threw up an 18-foot shot that didn't even hit the rim, and thought, "Oh, God, here we go."

After that shot, his first in an NBA game since last Dec. 30, though, Bird admitted that "it got pretty smooth."

That's an understatement. In a spectacular return from a two-month layoff caused by an inflamed nerve in his lower back, Bird just missed his first triple-double of the season Sunday night in sparking the Boston Celtics to a 101-91 victory over the Dallas Mavericks.

The 35-year-old superstar played 34 minutes, including the entire third period, scoring 26 points, grabbing 13 rebounds and handing out 9 assists. He hit on 9 of 16 field goal attempts, including 1-for-4 from 3-point range, and was 7-for-7 from the free throw line.

He also chipped in with two steals and one blocked shot.

NBA Basketball

"I felt all right, it was good to get back," Bird said. "I just came to play. I didn't expect anything special. When you sit out that long you're going to be a little rusty. I had a lot of time to practice in the last couple of weeks, but you never know until you get out there."

"Bird and turnovers beat us," Dallas coach Richie Adubato said. "We had a chance, but Bird was sensational. Unfortunately for us, he came back tonight."

"We came in here geared for Larry, but apparently it doesn't matter how you gear for Larry," said center Donald Hodge, who led Dallas with 19 points.

"Once I got going and got into the flow I felt that I hadn't even been out," Bird said. "I felt I could go up and down the court with the guys. I was bumping and banging and got some rebounds and from then on I thought I could do just about anything."

Bird acknowledged that his back condition "might get irritated again, it might," but said "really that's all behind us now. All I can do is look forward."

He said that although he isn't in the greatest game condition because of the layoff, "I'm in good enough shape to compete."

Bird scored 7 points and had 7 rebounds and 5 assists in the third period when the Celtics broke away from a 59-59 tie with a 19-9 run to take a 78-68 lead into the final period. That enabled them to hike their lifetime home record against the Mavericks to 12-0.

Asked about the playing time, Bird said "the coach will dictate how many minutes I play," adding that, "I'm here to play 48."

Manning, Harper spark Clippers past Magic

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Danny Manning scored 25 points and Ron Harper 24, and the Los Angeles Clippers held Orlando to one basket in the final 4:57 of a 101-96 victory Sunday night.

The Magic led 91-89 after Anthony Bowie's layup with 4:57 to play, but they didn't score from the field again until Bowie hit a 3-pointer with 4.7 seconds remaining. Between those two baskets, Orlando missed six consecutive shots.

There were six ties in the fourth period, the last at 93-93 with 3:05 left. Manning and Harper hit consecutive baskets for a four-point lead before the Clippers hit four of six free throws in the last 36 seconds to seal the outcome.

The Clippers improved to 29-28 — their best record after 57 games since the franchise moved to the West Coast from Buffalo 15 seasons ago. Los Angeles is 7-3 since Larry Brown was hired Feb. 6 to replace Mike Schuler.

Terry Catledge led Orlando with 18 points and 10 rebounds. The Clippers trailed 31-30 early in the second quarter before a 17-6 run gave them a 47-37 lead.

The Magic rallied in the final minute of the third period and the opening 90 seconds of the fourth quarter.

Catledge had a three-point play, a pair of free throws and a follow shot at the buzzer to close out the third period, pulling Orlando to 79-75, then Otis Smith hit a layup and Catledge added two more free throws to tie the game 79-79 with 11:10 to play.

Pickup truck goes to co-founder's son in Iditarod marathon sled race

By JOHN ENDERS
Associated Press Writer

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — A son of the man known as the "Father of the Iditarod" led the marathon sled dog race at the fifth checkpoint Sunday. His prize for winning the 149-mile leg: a $25,000 pickup truck.

Raymie Redington, whose father co-founded the race, reached Skwentna 14 minutes ahead of his nearest opponent in the 1,159-mile trek that left Anchorage on Saturday for Nome.

Joe Redington, 75, was running his 18th Iditarod and reached the village of 114 residents in 34th place. He helped establish the race in 1973.

Lavon Barve, a 10-time Iditarod veteran, was second. DeeDee Jonrowe pulled in 23 minutes behind the leader. Fourth-time winner Susan Butcher arrived about one hour later.

Defending champion Rick Swenson, the only musher to win the Iditarod five times, arrived in Skwentna in fifth place. His ex-wife, Kathy Swenson, received many of the couple's best racing dogs in a divorce settlement last year. She wasn't among the 27 mushers who reached Skwentna by Sunday afternoon.

Coming out of the previous checkpoint, Swenson had been 23rd and his ex-wife was 18th.

Seventy-six mushers and more than 1,200 dogs are competing in the 20th running of the contest billed as the "Last Great Race on Earth." The winner receives $50,000 out of a total purse of $375,000.

The next checkpoint was at Finger Lake, population 2. Sponsors offer prizes to mushers in the lead at various stops along the race route.

The Iditarod started in more than a foot of new snow, and snow furries continued through the weekend. Race leaders usually finish in 11 to 14 days.

The race commemorates the 1925 sled-dog relay of lifesaving diphtheria serum to Nome during an epidemic.

Texas two wins away from SWC title

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

The Texas Longhorns are just two victories away from something they haven't accomplished in 18 years.

If coach Tom Penders' fast-improving team can defeat the Rice Owls on Autry Court, called the "Jungle Gym," on Thursday night (8:30 o'clock) in a nationally televised (ESPN) matchup and defeat Texas A&M next Sunday at home in an ABC regionally televised 2:45 p.m. game, then the 'Horns will have won their first outright league title since 1974.

Texas had to share the Southwest Conference championship in 1986, 1978 and 1979.

Then, if the Longhorns are looking for other horizons to conquer, they can set their sights on a first SWC Post-Season Classic championship. Texas hasn't won one in the 16 year history of the tournament.

The SWC, fighting for national recognition, has become the first conference with three teams owning 20-victory seasons.

Texas, Houston, and Texas Christian have reached the 20-victory plateau.

Texas (20-9) blasted Baylor 97-67 on Saturday while Houston (20-5) struggled at home to subdue Texas A&M 79-69 and Texas Christian (21-7) rallied from a 14-point deficit to defeat Rice 64-59. In a non-conference game, Texas Tech lost in double overtime 96-90 to Northern Illinois.

Texas leads the SWC race with a 10-2 mark followed by Houston and TCU at 9-3. Rice is out of contention at 6-6.

The Texas victory was revenge for an 84-68 loss to Baylor at the Ferrell Center on Jan. 27.

"The epitaph for this game was written the day after our last game," said Penders. "This was a real payback win. Our kids wanted to prove that we could play defense and weren't a schoolyard team. If they had pulled their starters out we would have pulled ours out but they didn't. Baylor is still the best losing team in the country based on talent."

Gunrunners target school kids in New York City

NEW YORK (AP) — If you're 16 and want a gun — for protection, for respect, for revenge — there has never been a time and place more accommodating than New York City today.

You can lift one from your father's drawer, borrow one from a friend or buy one for less than $100 at the bodega down the street, out of a car trunk or from Johnny up in 2B.

Gunrunners have given the city with the nation's toughest gun law the nation's biggest pile of illegal firearms, law enforcement authorities say. And kids are taking advantage of the wide selection and reasonable prices.

The latest reminder came last week, when two students at a Brooklyn high school were shot to death by a schoolmate. The suspect told police he had borrowed a .38-caliber gun from a friend. Police traced the gun and found it had been stolen from the car of a security guard in New Jersey more than two years ago.

Metal detectors have been used once a week at about 20 city schools. Mayor David Dinkins on Sunday announced a $28 million program to use metal detectors daily at five of the most violent schools starting today. The practice will be extended to 35 more of the city's 120 public high schools over the next year and a half.

Police patrols in and around those schools also will be increased, and security coordinators will be appointed.

Most of the illegal guns in New York are purchased at stores in four states with lax gun sales laws — Virginia, Florida, Ohio and Texas — and smuggled into the state.

New York City regulations forbid citizens from buying a handgun without first obtaining a police permit that requires a showing of need. For example, a pharmacist might be granted a permit because he transports medicine.

A state law requires a minimum sentence of a year behind bars for any gun possession violation. But because of loopholes, violators rarely go to jail.

There's no Mr. Big among the gunrunners, just a lot of small entrepreneurs who buy the guns themselves with false ID or hire "straw buyers," according to law enforcement authorities. The guns sell on New York streets for about twice the manufacturer's suggested retail price.

Although guns are not sold as openly as drugs, almost everyone in the city's poorest, most violent neighborhoods knows someone with a gun for sale, or someone who knows someone. Teen-age buyers are simply one part of the market.

"There's no Fagin out there selling specifically to kids," said John O'Brien of the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

No need. Anyone can get a used .25-caliber semiautomatic for around $100, and a good .9mm pistol for between $600 and $800, authorities said.

The hottest gun among the young is the easy-to-conceal Raven .25-caliber semiautomatic, which retails for about $45 and costs around $200 on the street.

That might seem like a lot to poor teen-agers. But there's always a way to get some money.

"A kid can sell drugs for an evening," said Jeremy Travis, a New York police deputy commissioner.

And the gunslingers keep getting younger. In 1985, Family Court had 118 cases of children under 16 charged with possession of a loaded firearm; last year there were more than 750 such cases.

"It's the fastest rising offense in the system," said Peter Reinharz, a lawyer for the city. "It's out of control."

No one knows how many illegal guns are in the city, but police have estimated 2 million.
